ATTEMPTS at aerial navigation continue to be made, and though final success cannot yet be predicted of any existing machine, the results must be considered on the whole as encouraging, and calculated to stimulate further endeavour.

The probabilities of the future are discussed in a very able interesting article in a recent number of the Nineteenth Century, written by Professor Simon Newcomb, the President of the Astronomical and Astrophysical Society of America. He starts by admitting the plausibility of the widespread impression that "aerial flight is so soon to play an important part as an agency of commerce." The difficulties now being encountered seem precisely parallel to those which marked the early history of the steam engine, the telegraph, and the telephone.

Professor Newcomb at the very opening of what he says, points out that he is not discussing whether aerial navigation is practicable (that has already been settled in the affirmative), but whether it is possible for it "to serve some practical purpose in the world's work." Is there any real expectation that the aeroplane or the airship will be able "to compete with the steamship, the railway, or the mail coach in the carriage of passengers or mails?" And here it is of the first importance to recognise that, without placing any limit to the ingenuity of inventors, they are all of them "accepting physical principles and the facts of engineering as they now stand."

If, for instance, the gravity of matter could be annulled, anything might be possible; but, as Professor Newcomb points out, inventors all build on the foundation of the present state of science, and on that forecasts may properly be founded. He proceeds to discuss the two forms of navigating the air—the flyer (or aeroplane) and the airship. We saw the other day the confident prophesy that the time is not far distant when it will be as customary to keep a flyer as an automobile or bicycle. Well, even if that be so, there are grave and apparently insuperable difficulties in the way of the commercial use of the flyer. To enlarge it means an increase of superficial extent which would lead to an "unmanageable area of supporting surface." The airship has two distinct advantages over the flyer —her buoyant power being proportional to her cubic contents, she can be enlarged in length, breadth, and thickness; she can possibly stop for repairs. But, even so, can any possible airship be as effective as a railway train?

Professor Newcomb compares an express train and an aerial vehicle running and flying between London and Edinburgh. "In the case of the train, the wheels of the engine are made effective by the reaction of the solid ground. In the airship, the reaction is only that of the air, a condition which necessitates propelling surfaces of a superficial extent greater in proportion." The airship will accordingly have to consume several times as much coal as the engine of the flying Scotchman if she is to carry the same burden. Here is a summary of the conclusions arrived at:—

Let us stop a moment to see the framework of reasoning on which our conditions are based. We have not taken either the airship or the flyer of to-day as the measure of what is possible in the future. We have not dwelt upon the great ratio of failure to success or of labour cost to results in the trials hitherto made. The vehicle we have had in mind, and of which we have shown the shortcomings, is an ideal one to be realised, if possible, in the future—a vehicle in which every part shall be so nicely adjusted that the maximum of efficiency shall be reached with the least possible weight, and the best devices used to diminish friction and insure the application of all the power available in the fuel to the purposes of driving. We have allowed no practical question of construction to interfere with success. We have shown what would be the more than colossal dimensions of an airship that could successfully compete with the ocean steamship of to-day, without inquiring into the practicability of building her or the problem of managing her in an ocean storm. May we not say, as the outcome of these reflections, that the efforts of aerial navigation now being made are simply most ingenious attempts to substitute, as a support of moving bodies, the thin air for the solid ground. And is it not evident, on careful consideration, that the ground affords a much better base than air ever can? Resting upon it we feel safe and know where we are. In the air, we are carried about by every wind that blows. Any use that we can make of the air for the purpose of transportation, even when our machinery attains ideal perfection, will be uncertain, dangerous, expensive, and inefficient, as compared with transportation on the earth and ocean. The glamour which surrounds the idea of flying through the air is the result of ancestral notions, implanted in the minds of our race before steam transportations had attained its present development. Exceptional cases there may be in which the airship will serve a purpose, but they are few and unimportant. One such case it is pointed out, might well be to carry a human being to the North Pole.

Though they seem to us profoundly interesting, we do not pronounce as to the soundness of these conclusions. Hitherto the problem has always been treated too much as a question of the ingenuity of the inventor. If some fresh principle can be discovered (e.g., as to gravity) the whole problem would, as has already been pointed out, be entirely altered. It will be interesting to see whether the optimists as to flight will be able to displace Professon Newcomb's argument.

Sporting & Athletic Notes.

We had two days' racing last week which brings matters to an end in Calcutta for a fortnight when we start a series of four or five more extras according to the prospects. Wednesday's racing was at Tollygunge, but there were only two steeplechases on the card, and on each of them that horrid trappy little water jump was very nearly responsible for an accident. In the pony chase Bandy Leg dropped his hind legs into it and would not gallop a yard afterwards and in the horse chase Spinnet did the same thing, only rather worse and he twisted his fetlock. He must have been a good plucked one to go on as he did and run third after it, but the accident naturally took all the steam out of his gallop and he is laid up, probably for a fortnight. As long as this jump is left as at present—water 13 feet 6 inches wide with a bush fence on the take off side 2 feet high—these accidents, of which there have been so many in the last couple of seasons, Bridegroom, Dea, Kipling, Spinnet, Bandy Leg among others, are likely to continue. The idea of having this little fence is that the horses may see the water, but as a matter of fact half of them do not see it; they gallop through the bit of bush as if it were not there and land fore feet on the bank, hind feet in the water. If there were a four-foot hedge in front the animals would take off sufficiently far away and jump big enough to clear the whole properly and until this is done the authorities are likely to continue to have the ruin of many a good horse laid at their door.

The racing on Wednesday is now ancient history and calls for little comment. Reha with a nice light weight made the pace very hot in the Pony Hunters' Steeplechase which quite disposed of the chances of the favourite Loch Lily, who could only finish third.

Kingpin was a hot favourite for the horse chase, but Dangar jumped much better for Butlin than he has for anyone else who has ridden him and had no difficulty in winning by three lengths. Butlin, who has not ridden for some time, received a round of applause as he returned to the paddock, as though the public lost their money they were all glad to see this good old sportsman back in the saddle and on a winner.

Lady Teazle, Devil's Limit and Morsel were all very well backed for the five-furlong race and a good struggle between the three resulted in a win for Morsel, with Devil's Limit and Lady Teazle second and third. Creel was favourite for the five furlongs and brought the money home all right, but not so easily as was expected, as Black Paint, the outsider, ran her very close and some think that if Creel had not bumped the other in the straight he might have won. The collision was entirely due to Black Paint, who is very green and ran all over the place, so no objection was laid. The favourite, Belle Cole, won the Russa Plate very easily.

On Saturday there were seven races on the flat. Numerous scratchings reduced fields to pretty poor dimensions and in only two events was there one, two, three betting. The first race was a considerable upset, but in each of the others the public fancy got home and there was a majority of happy faces going back from the course.

The Ganges Plate opened proceedings, Mr. Galstaun and his great following backed Lefterin as if the numbers were up. Harene was whispered as an absolute certainty on her track gallop and was largely supported by her stable and the "talent," while a lot of people went for Bijli, who had run a great gallop with Lady Avon and certainly had a good chance with 6st. 4lb. This wide betting made the race very interesting, but it was spoilt by Harene being left at the post. Then Bijli's jockey instead of going right out as fast as he could and taking advantage of his light weight, waited in front and busied himself looking at the other horses instead of attending to his riding and the consequence was that he was caught at the distance and did not even get his place. Lefterin, the only other favourite left in it at all, was beaten by the top-weight Mauvette, who was lying with Bijli all the way and won in good style by three lengths. She stood at 20 to 1 for some time and was 10 to 1 at the finish!

There was a very pretty race for the Ochterlony Plate (round the course) between Morino and Craigendorrie, but the former found the weight (10 stone) just too much and was a beaten horse at the finish. Yankee Boy, Moira, Belle Cole and Runaway Girl were all well backed for the Turf Plate. Moira whipped round when the gate went up and was never in the race and Runaway Girl won very easily from Belle Cole at the finish. Capsicum, a great big 'bus horse sort of animal, proved himself better than he looks and won the Kedleston Plate (I) in good style from Marcelle, the second favourite—the winner carrying most money. The Minto Plate was reduced to three, Melbourne, Retort, and Winkfield's Melody, the pace was very slow for the first half mile, but then all three got abreast and galloping fast the rest of the way Melbourne won a most exciting race, only half a length separating each first and second and second and third.

Mr. Galstaun's stable backed Singleton for a ton of money for the Kedleston Plate (II) and made him favourite. Scott's stable went for Lady Teazle and brought her up second in the betting, but the outside public for the most part went for Jack Sheppard and he proved an easy winner.

The last race of the day was the Selling Handicap and for this Andros was made a very hot favourite. He is a big lazy horse and takes a lot of riding but though slow on his legs Barrett got him going about the five furlongs and keeping on at him brought him home an easy winner by two and a half lengths.

The lease expires this year of the famous Grand National Course at Aintree near Liverpool, and this is the last year in which the premier English Steeplechase will run over the historic course. The old Race Course at Shrewsbury, and some adjacent fields have been bought and next year the Grand National will be run at Shrewsbury.

A very critical stage has been reached in the horse supply of England. A totally insufficient supply is available for the Territorial Army, and of the 3,000 horses which the War Office purchase annually an increasing number must come from abroad. Farmers are ceasing to breed horses. The absolute number of capable horses steadily decreases, and the supply of money for purchasing horses is below the limits of safety.

All this was recognised in the scheme of co-operation arrived at a year or more ago between the War Office and the Board of Agriculture and the Treasury. By that arrangement the Board of Agriculture were to organise the horse-breeding industry among farmers, and it was generally understood that their plan of campaign was to have been perfected many months ago. The leading horse societies were promised information, and their arrangements have been hampered by the continued postponement of any official action.

But in spite of promises for immediate action nothing has been done officially, though much progress has been made with the ingenious scheme backed by the masters of fox-hounds. Masters in every county of England, except Cornwall and Devon, have now promised to organise the farmers within their hunt without charge, and already on an informal census they can register 3,000 suitable mares. We have in this informal association of M.F.H.'s, which has become almost complete in the last few months, an incomparable group of organising centres, and the scheme is generally approved.

But in the meanwhile nothing is done. The Treasury's sympathetic offer of £30,000 for the support of any satisfactory scheme will have lapsed, the horse societies are in a state of irritation at the delay, the Army Remount Department is being starved for money to purchase horses, and the supply of English horses suitable for military purposes is in a progressive decline.

In America there is no diminution of the running craze, and in all big cities to-day "Marathon" events are considered of first importance and smart runners of greater worth than boss politicians. As to the "Marathons" there has been a day of national victory in New York for Americans, Italians, and Red Indians, and on the 9th January, at the famous Madison Square Garden track, England was fittingly honoured by the phenomenal speed of Alfred Shrubb, whose like has never been seen before.

Shrubb retained his title as the greatest distance runner of the age in the twelve-mile race, beating with supreme ease three of the fastest men in America in truly sensational style. Each relay ran but four miles, and each had been selected with the greatest care. By a series of the most remarkable sprints ever seen in a long-distance race he disposed of Frank Kanaly, of Cambridge, Massachusetts; Tom Williams, of Somerville, Massachusetts; and Fred Simpson, an Ojibway Indian, of Hiawatha, Canada. He travelled the distance in 1hr. 5mins. 57secs. This was more than five minutes faster than the time made by Dorando in his race against Hayes.

He is a human marvel, and it is a pity that he has decided to expatriate himself in order to take up a lucrative position at Harvard University as running instructor. Five thousand people cheered themselves hoarse. Never before had the majority of them witnessed such turns of speed as were displayed by the Englishman. He reeled off many a 100 yards in less than 12secs.

Like a pair of sprinters in a hundred yards dash Shrubb and Kanaly jumped from their marks as the gun fired. Around the first turn they continued their spurt, then Shrubb fell in behind Kanaly and ran on his heels until the next turn was reached. At that point Shrubb began another spurt. With every bound he moved away from his opponent, and he continued his sprint for the full lap, at the end of which he was a hundred yards in front. Then he followed with a series of sprints, each one carrying him far ahead. He covered the first half mile in 2mins. 17 4/5secs. and the mile in 4mins. 53 1/5secs.

Before the first mile and a half had been covered Shrubb had gained a lap on his opponent. Not satisfied with this lead, the Englishman's slim legs continued to leap over the track with the power of a pair of piston-rods. By the time the second mile was recorded he was on Kanaly's heels for another lap; the time at the end of the second mile was 10mins. 36secs.

Still the little Englishman continued to sprint, with the result that when the Indian relieved Kanaly he was three laps in front. The first four miles of the relay were negotiated in 21mins. 30secs. Simpson, the Indian, is a big, powerful fellow, and his stride greatly resembles that of Longboat. As he started on his journey the crowd gave another roar of cheers. He sprinted after Shrubb, but as he sprinted so did the Englishman. During this relay Shrubb was apparently content with the lead he already had, and made no further effort to gain more. The eight miles were run by Shrubb in 43mins. 15secs.

As the Indian ended his fourth mile Tom Williams came out. He dashed away and amid a tremendous roar from the mob gained nearly half a lap on Shrubb; but this gain was maintained for only a short time, for the Englishman soon began to do some more sprinting, and was again at his side. For another mile Shrubb romped along leisurely, then gave some more sprints, and finally a grand burst which sent him over the finish mark nearly four laps in front.

The recent raising of the amateur question at home has opened up issues which may materially influence the future of British sport. It is to be devoutly hoped that matters will be straightened out in the near future. The action of the Scottish Rugby Uniin Committee in refusing to play the annual match with England has brought up—none too soon—the whole problem of the future of sport in Great Britain. Scotland says to England, "We will not play with you; you are not clean, you have dabbled with the forbidden thing, professionalism." That is an intolerable situation, but it was bound to come sooner or later under England's present system or, rather, want of system. Every branch of sport has its different definition of an amateur, and its different code of laws as to what an amateur may or may not do. In cricket the amateur and professional play together in perfect comradeship; in Rugby football they may not even play in the same game. In rowing the definition of an amateur is so strict that no one disqualified can slip through; in half a dozen other sports the meshes of the net are very wide indeed. There is no standard, no order, no attempt at co-ordination: the whole thing is wrong.

The increased necessity of providing opportunities for games in the wage-earning classes has led to the degradation of amateurism as a direct consequence of the evilly managed professionalism of thirty years ago.

When professionalism died, no outlet was left where men could obtain their sport or games, except by playing under an amateur qualification, unless they were willing to accept their living and training expenses from a business manager in exchange for the right of "running straight."

The recognition of this fact induced the authorities at the head of amateur sport to enlarge the boundaries of amateurism, and to admit eventually many men who thirty years ago would have been found in the ranks of the professionals. It is certain that unfortunate incidents will continue to arise in British sport until the impossibility of the present position is frankly recognised and steps are taken to remove it.

The first thing to recognise is that in the present state of society five good sportsmen out of six are not in a position to remain amateurs past that point when their sport unduly encroaches upon their time.

It is all very well to say, "Let them at that point give up their sport." What will the public say to that? That is not the way out of it. The way out of it is to recognise that a man who earns his living by sport is just as good a sportsman as his amateur comrade, and that he has a right to play with and against him at any and all sports and games, as he enjoys at present at cricket, racing, golf, and others. Is any golfer the worse for entering the open championship, where he meets all the professionals? Is any cricketer the worse because he forms one of a team half paid and half not? The real evil is that created by the present lack of system, the evil of half a dozen definitions, and half a dozen ways of getting round them all.

Some extraordinary scoring has been recorded in the recent cricket match between New South Wales and Victoria at Sydney. In their first innings New South Wales put up 815 runs, Noble contributing 213, Bardsley 192, and Gregory 179.

Victoria replied with 468, of which Ransford made 182 and McAlister 108. Following on, Victoria made 487 in the second innings, Armstrong being responsible for 171 of this total and Ransford for 110.

New South Wales in the second innings made 141 for four wickets, Noble scoring 69, not out.

The scores made in the match, totalling 1,911, constitute a record aggregate in first-class cricket.

The previous highest record aggregate was made in the match at Sydney in February 1898 between Mr. Stoddart's England XI and New South Wales when 1,739 were scored. The two next best were also recorded at Sydney. In December 1907 the match between New South Wales and South Australia produced 1,716 runs and in March 1899 in the match between the Australian XI and the Rest of Australia 1,553 runs were scored.

This is not the first time New South Wales has recorded a score of over 800 in first class cricket. At Sydney in January 1901 they made 918 in one innings against South Australia, this being the highest total ever obtained in a first-class match. Five players exceeded the century in this match S.E. Gregory 168, M.A. Noble 153, L.O.S. Poidevin 140, not out, R. A. Duff 119, and F. A. Iredale 118. Again, playing against South Australia at Adelaide in December 1899, they made 807, Noble scoring 300, Gregory 176 and V. Trumper 165. At Melbourne in December 1905 against Victoria New South Wales made 805, Noble contributing 281 and Mackay 194.

The annual general meeting of the Calcutta Hockey League was held in the Y.M.C.A. hall on the 27th ultimo, Mr. E. Studd of the C.F.C. presiding. The following representatives of League Clubs were also present:—

Messrs. T. H. Richardson (C.E. College), P. R. Cadell (Customs), P. C. Margrett (Rangers), H. MacGee (Dalhousie), A. B. Rosser (St. Xavier's), D. L. Walker (Caledonia), B. Bower (Customs), A. McNelly (Medical College), N. R. Bhattacharjee (Rovers), and a few others.

After the annual report for 1908 had been read and passed it was resolved that the Calcutta Hockey League competition be made over to the Bengal Hockey Association with a recommendation that the rules of the competition be unaltered for this year as far as possible.

The boxing match between Frank Thorn, feather-weight champion of Australia, and the German light-weight Rudolph Unholz, who has good performances in opposition to the present light-weight champion of the world ("Battling" Nelson), and the ex-top-notcher, Joe Gans, to his credit, attracted ten or twelve thousand people to the Sydney Stadium on the 30th December and proved a veritable treat. Unholz made a rushing fight of it, and found Thorn ready always and the local lad carried war into the enemy's camp with a will when opportunity offered, indeed, he was just as ready as the visitor every time. From first to last there was not a quiet moment, and every man looking on voted the battle a great one. Thorn won on points.

The rugby football match between England and France at Leicester on the 30th ultimo resulted in a win for the representatives of the Rose by 22 points to nil.

The annual general meeting of the Calcutta Rowing Club will be held at the Strand Road Boat House, on Friday, the 5th instant, at 6-15 P.M.

As a result of the complaint made against W. Bailey, the jockey, for his riding in the Victoria Handicap at the Rangoon Races on the 5th December last, the Stewards of the Calcutta Turf Club have withdrawn his license and warned him off the Calcutta course and other places where the Calcutta rules are in force.

The Poona Boxing Tournament, open to all officers, N. C. O.'s and men of the Regular Army, Royal Navy, Marines, Naval Reserve, and Volunteer Corps in India, will take place on and from the 22nd March.

The Sialkot Polo Tournament ended on the 25th ultimo in a win for the 10 Hussars "A" who beat the 6th Cavalry Right by 7 goals to nil in the final game.

The Kadir Cup meet will open near Sherpur on the 22nd March.

In a letter to the St. Andrews Golf Club, of New York, Mr. Taft assert that there is nothing more democratic than golf. It appears that his fondness of the game has led some people to say that he has aristocratic tendencies, which is, of course, a very dreadful accusation to make against the President-elect. Mr. Taft believes that "there is nothing which furnishes a greater test of character and self-restraint, nothing which puts one more on an equality with one's fellows—or, I may say, puts one lower than one's fellows—than the game of golf." He adds that if there is a game which will instil in one's heart a more intense feeling of self-abasement and humiliation than the game of golf, he would like to know what it is.

We would draw the attention of our doggy readers to the advertisement appearing further on re the sale of that good bull terrier "Wally." He was placed second in the Novice Class at the Calcutta Show last week, and should prove valuable as a stud dog as he comes of splendid stock, his pedigree including no less than six champion strains, and is going really cheap.

The Secunderabad All-India Boxing tournament begins on the 22nd instant, entries closing on the 10th and 17th instant. The tournament is under

London Week by Week.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

FRIDAY, 15th January 1909.

I WONDER if the news of the "Mystery of the Missing Lady" has been telegraphed to India: it has been the one topic of the past week throughout England, it has even driven the great Bottomley case out of the contents bills! A young woman with a wonderful faculty for getting houses, motor-cars and other costly things on credit got into such a financial mess that she tried the time-honoured trick of disappearing under circumstances calculated to lead her creditors to the conviction that she had left this wicked world and her debts behind her. Having despatched her valuables to various parts of the country, she drove out in a motor-car—obtained on credit—let it run over a Cliff in Wales, bungled the job badly, and has since been the most talked of young woman in the United Kingdom. Probably, her entire circle of relations, friends, acquaintances and creditors, up to this point, did not reach three figures—it is in evidence that she was illiterate and of obscure origin—yet the disappearance of a duchess, a shining light in society, art or literature, could not have caused greater excitement. Pages have been devoted to her morning and evening; her photographs, pictures of her house, her dogs, her mother, her chauffeur and what not have flooded the illustrated papers; details of her sordid doings have been purveyed ad nauseam; Fleet Street was blocked on Monday afternoon for four hours when it was known that her sister had entered a lawyers' office opposite the Law Courts! Up to the time of posting this letter she had not turned up—is she dead or alive, that is the question all England seems to be asking every hour. It is astonishing. Her demise could not possibly affect more than a few dozen people; her re-appearance would probably not benefit her creditors, seeing she is insolvent; it can surely be of no possible public interest. Yet England is vastly perturbed and inquisitive about her. The person of average intelligence could have none but a passing interest in the matter one would think; but, presuming that the papers understand the requirements of their readers, one is forced to the sorrowful conclusion that Carlyle's estimate of the English was not so very wide of the mark.

SOME of your Calcutta readers and a good many people in Bombay will be interested to hear something about the further adventures of a sporting gent once rather well known in both cities I believe. Without comment, I make the following extract from an evening paper:—

"Mrs. May Littleton McCausland was this afternoon granted a divorce from her husband, Ernest McCausland, stated to be the son of a general officer.

"Mr. H. Murphy, counsel for Mrs. McCausland, said that his client was formerly a Miss Symon. Her father occupied a position in the Indian Civil Service.

"The marriage took place in 1898, Mr. McCausland then being engaged as assistant manager of an insurance business in India. He afterwards got into trouble and left that country.

"After living with his parents at Teddington for a time he returned to India, and again got into trouble.

"Going to South Africa he obtained a lieutenant's commission in the Duke of Edinburgh's Rifles.

"His wife went out to join him, only to ascertain that her husband was in prison waiting his trial on a charge of forgery, for which he was afterwards convicted.

"Mrs. McCausland being penniless had to put her child in a home and act as matron at one of the relief camps.

"Evidence was given that Mr. McCausland had brought another woman to England with him from South Africa after he was released from prison and a decree nisi was pronounced."

MR. REGINALD WYNDHAM BRUCE had possibly several friends in India what time he was with his regiment, the K.O.S.B's. They are now in a position to offer him their congratulations on his marriage with Miss Addie Lewis, the charming young musical comedy actress, otherwise known as the "Sandow Girl." They were married at Eastbourne, on the 9th instant, the only people present being the bride's sister and the driver of the taxicab in which they drove to the church.

LILY DUCHESS OF MARLBOROUGH, who has died to-day at her Surrey home, made three marriages, each with a remarkable man. As a young girl she became the bride of Louis Hammersley, a New York millionaire. After the divorce of the late Duke of Marlborough, a man who wasted abilities which should have given him a career equal to that of his younger brother, she became an English duchess. For a third husband she chose that first-class fighting man, hard rider, ideal Military Secretary and fine sportsman, "Bill" Beresford, who will never be forgotten in India.

THE mention of his name suggests Viceroys and apropos I may here note a piece of hard luck which has just befallen Lord Minto's predecessor. A large piece of Indian silver weighing 3,000 ounces, which was being shaped into a gigantic wine-cooler for Lord Curzon in commemoration of his services as Viceroy, has been stolen from the premises of Messrs. Starkie, Gardner and Co., metal workers, of South Lambeth. It must have been the work of a clever gang, for a "piece of silver" weighing nearly 200lbs. is not easily shifted.

The wine-cooler, which was to be a copy of one made in the time of Charles II., was to be fashioned out of various articles of silver, including trowels and caskets, which were presented to the late Viceroy at various ceremonials in India. His lordship received a large number of these silver articles, and as some of them were not important works of art he thought a selection would be sufficient to remind him of those events, and that the remainder might very well be made into a large piece of plate, which would collectively commemorate his Viceroyalty. He decided upon a representation of the large Charles II. wine-cooler, now in the possession of the Duke of Rutland, at Belvoir Castle. There are fine specimens of similar articles at Welbeck, and at the Marquis of Exeter's residence at Burghley House, Stamford. Lord Curzon has seen these, and had selected the one at Belvoir Castle, and commissioned Mr. Gardner to reproduce it, the only alteration being that tigers' heads and claws and the Curzon arms were to be substituted for the peacocks.

THE dulness of the week has been slightly relieved by the sayings of Professor Sir Hubert von Herkomer, who is annoyed with the British public which continues to pay big prices for old masters and declines to part with even small sums for new ones. It goes without saying that the British public is totally unjustified in spending its money on articles it wants to possess and in refusing to purchase what it does not particularly desire. But the poor old British public is always in the wrong. Possibly the professor might be able to persuade Parliament to pass an Act compelling every householder to have portraits of himself and his family and to commission a landscape artist to make a picture of his back garden. As a study in still life, his Sunday dinner might serve and his interview with his creditors might supply an appropriate subject for the genre painter.

MR. FRED TERRY and Miss Julia Neilson have scored a distinct success in the romantic melodrama, "Henry of Navarre," written by Mr. William Devereux, and put on for the first time at the New Theatre last Friday. True it is that history has been sacrificed, while it is all most unreal, the characters unreasonable, the incident naive, yet the subject has been treated in the way the public like and as it is played in the manner popularised by the two artistes in their successes of recent years, it is cheered to the echo and seems assured of a good run. It must be confessed that Henry of Navarre does not do anything very wonderful, judged from the usual standard of romantic heroes. He does not use his sword once, and he would have been cold meat within twenty-four hours of his arrival at the Court of King Charles IX. of France had it not been for the surprising friendship shown for him by a grim-visaged astrologer called Ruggieri. Ruggieri spends most of his time in providing Queen Catherine with poisons to do away with Henry, and then in giving away the secret to Henry. A wonderful ring, with a stone which is normally red, but turns green when poison is near, saves Henry's life at the last moment, and another timely tip by Ruggieri saves him from a pretty little plot hatched by Catherine to suffocate him with some poisonous smoke.

Henry has a very merry time of it; but what he is chiefly worried about is his bride, Marguerite, King Charles' sister, who had been used as a bait to lure him to Paris. Is she in the plot against him, or an innocent dupe? That is the question that worries him. The evidence is against her, but she proves her faith by saving his life, and so true love triumphs in the end.

Mr. Fred Terry, as Henry, has to behave as a strong, brave man given to passing himself off as a chuckle-headed boor in order to deceive his enemies. To this end he introduces a farcical comedy laugh at the most inopportune moments. Miss Julia Neilson is a beautiful Marguerite de Valois, and plays with more restraint than usual; and particularly good work is done by Mr. Horace Hodges as Ruggieri; and Mr. Malcolm Cherry as King Charles.

ANOTHER success for that prolific playwright, Mr. Somerset Maugham! His "Penelope" was received at the Comedy Theatre on Saturday with every mark of approbation by a packed house of first nighters. There are only ten people, all told, in the play, the chief ones being: Penelope; her husband, a Dr. O'Farrell, practising in John Street, Mayfair; her father; her mother; her uncle; a solicitor; and an attractive lady, by name Mrs. Fergusson, to whom the doctor has been showing much more attention than Penelope liked. Penelope's nature was so affectionate that she thought—simple little woman—that her husband could not have too much attention. The doctor thought otherwise. He did not want kisses every time he was about to go out, nor every time he came in. So he began to tire of Penelope, and to show attention to the fascinating Mrs. Fergusson, and Penelope found it out and was jealous. She would have a divorce. Her relatives discuss the situation and a scheme for bringing the Doctor to his bearings is adopted. How the scheme was worked out by ingeniously conceived incidents and witty dialogue that made the audience roar everyone familiar with Mr. Maugham's style can guess. Miss Marie Tempest, as Penelope, and Mr. W. Graham Browne as the Doctor acted delightfully; Mr. Eric Lewis was simply irresistible as the uncle; the father and mother were played by Mr. Alfred Bishop and Miss Kate Bishop and they were responsible for some of the most amusing comedy in the piece. Congratulations are due to Miss Norma Whalley on her presentation of the character of the lady who fascinated.

ALTHOUGH it is only a few months since the run of "Diana of Dobson's" was brought to an end at the Kingsway, it is safe to say that the piece had not exhausted its popularity at the time of its withdrawal. Last Monday night's revival went far to prove this, for every scene had snap, and every act was received with enthusiasm.

And there is no doubt that the opening scene, where the tired shop girls are undressing for bed, with its originality, its daring, its faithfulness of character-drawing, its realistic presentation of a particular phase of life and its humour, has a freshness and an appeal such as no other opening act has approached for a long time. Indeed, the most astonishing merit of the play is the skill with which the authoress has combined romance with realism without introducing the slightest jarring note. Thus, while the story is by way of being a fancy there is purpose behind the play; it rings true to life, it is human and real.

Miss Lena Ashwell resumed her original character of Diana and again showed the worry and bitterness of the high-spirited young woman so

SATURDAY next brings the opening of the English opera at Covent Garden, when the first of the three cycles of "The Ring," to be given under the direction of Dr. Richter, will begin with "The Rhinegold." As there will be no performances of "The Ring," nor of German opera during the "grand" season, the forthcoming production of the cycle and of "The Mastersingers" has unusual interest and importance, and all pains have been taken by the management to put it on the highest level, rehearsals having been constantly in progress for two months past. Special care has been taken in the selection of the chorus, among whom, it is stated, will be found several familiar concert singers, who have wisely pocketed their dignity in order to gain valuable stage experience. In this connection it is stated that some time ago the opera management approached one or two of the big schools of music with a view to enlisting pupils for the chorus and orchestra, and that their overtures were coldly received by the professors—which is passing strange in view of the old complaint that there are no openings for the operatic pupils of those institutions.

OVER ten thousand people were present in the Albert Hall yesterday afternoon, and hundreds more were turned away unable to find room. The occasion was the first London appearance of the Viennese tenor, Signor Tamini. Few new singers have appeared here under better auspices, and although obviously nervous at first and plainly unaccustomed to the notoriously bad acoustics of the hall he eventually woke his audience into a high state of enthusiasm, was recalled again and again to the platform, and granted a number of encores. His first song was the familiar "Vesti la Guibba," from "Pagliacci," which was sung with a vocal power and a dramatic force that at once showed him an operatic artist of great attainments; but it was after the beautiful "Lenzlied," from "Die Walküre," that he had his greatest triumph.

His vocal methods will no doubt find many critics, for occasionally he exhibits a certain amount of roughness; but it must be borne in mind that he is not yet thirty, and only began to sing three years ago. However, the London public has hailed him with unanimous acclaim, and he will almost certainly be heard here in grand opera in the near future.

THE LAND SHELLS OF INDIA.*

ABOUT, we believe, the close of the Mutiny three energetic Indian naturalists—the two Blanfords, both of whom have now joined the majority, and Colonel Godwin-Austen—began to collect the land shells of British India, and to take up seriously, as opportunity permitted, their scientific study. As time went on, each of these gentlemen brought together very valuable collections, two of which have already found a permanent home in the Natural History Branch of the British Museum. Experience soon, however, revealed the fact that the true relationships of these molluscs were not to be discovered by an examination of the shell alone; kindred forms having in some cases very diverse types of shell, while those which present no mere relationship may have shells more or less merely alike. The true key to the affinity of the various groups is revealed by the anatomy of the soft parts, or as it is commonly called, the animal.

Accordingly while the two Blanfords devoted themselves mainly to collecting and studying the shells (which up to a certain point are of great importance for systematic purposes), Colonel Godwin-Austen directed his attention specially to collecting entire specimens of snails and slugs and preserving them in spirit, so that their anatomy could subsequently be studied in detail at Home.

After the death of his brother Henry, Dr. W. T. Blanford, with the assistance of the collection made by the former, set himself seriously to work out the shells of the Indian land snails from the systematic point of view, while Colonel Godwin-Austen continued to devote his attention to the anatomical side of the subject. Blanford himself intended apparently to write the whole of the land shell portion of the Fauna of British India, embodying therein the results of Godwin-Austen's anatomical labours. Death, however, brought his work to an abrupt close before it had advanced very far.

Fortunately, Colonel Godwin-Austen is still among us; and he promptly put his unrivalled knowledge and experience of this difficult subject at the disposal of the Editor of the Fauna. The result is the volume now before us, which comprises all the finished MS. left by Blanford, together with a most valuable treatise on the anatomy of the land-snail by the author whose name stands second on the title page.

As indicated in the title, the volume, which is a comparatively thin one, comprises only two of the families of land-shells, and these by no means the most generally interesting, as the large bulimi and helices do not belong to the groups in question. The volume is in fact of importance and interest rather to the professed naturalist than to his amateur namesake. It serves, however, to show what great changes have been made in the classification of the land-snails since the publication of Woodward's well-known "Recent and Fossil Shells."

In that work the carnivorous slug, scientifically known as Testacella, which carries a rudimentary external shell on the hind part of the body, is classed with the typical vegetarian shell-less slugs in the family Limacidæ. It is now on the other hand made the type of a family by itself in which are classed the curiously toothed snail-like Indian and African shells known as Streptaxis; these latter being included in the abovenamed general work in the family Helicidæ with our ordinary garden and woodland snails.

To discuss further abstruse zoological questions of this nature in a journal like the Indian Field would, however, be obviously out of place; and the remainder of this short notice may accordingly be restricted to a few points of more general interest.

In his introduction to the volume Colonel Godwin-Austen takes occasion to point out how extremely imperfect our knowledge—both anatomical and distributional—of Indian land-molluscs still remains. In the case of a large percentage of species the animal is still unkown; while in other instances the localities of the type specimens have been lost, so that we do not even know the proper homes of a certain number of species. The latter defect can only be remedied, unless accidentally, by systematic local collecting de novo all over India and Burma. To residents in those countries with a taste for natural history, who find time hang somewhat heavily on their hands, snail collecting may accordingly be recommended as a pastime, which if carefully conducted would confer a real benefit on zoological science.

How the work is to be completed is not stated in the volume before us. Of course Colonel Godwin-Austen is the one man fully qualified for the task; but then he is rapidly advancing in years, and may feel that his powers are unequal to the strain involved in such serious labour, or may consider himself entitled to pass his remaining years in well-earned leisure. All this will, however, doubtless be arranged in a satisfactory manner by Colonel Bingham, the present editor of the Fauna; and all that remains to us is therefore to offer to Colonel Godwin-Austen our sincere congratulations on the able and efficient manner in which he has carried out this portion of a very difficult task. To write on such a subject in a popular manner is of course an absolute impossibility; but in the introduction the Colonel has succeeded in putting before his readers the leading facts in molluscan anatomy in such a way that they ought to be easily understood by every person of ordinary intelligence.

SHOOTING IN COORG.

BLACK POWDER RIFLES IN HEAVY JUNGLE.

THE day after the death of the big tusker, the bullock carts were loaded up and we moved to another forest bungalow. As usual the rain fell in torrents, in fact during the whole of the month which we spent in these jungles, it only forgot to rain on five days. The path through the forest, at best but a rough track, was now reduced to a quagmire, and it took the carts 8½ hours to cover the twelve miles to our new camp.

About midday khubber was brought of elephants about four miles away, but although R. went off after them immediately and came upon their fresh tracks, he did not find the herd until several days later.

I now confined myself to trying to bag a good bison. Neither of us had so far had any success in this direction, and, as it turned out in the end, we both had to relinquish our shooting trip without a pair of bison horns between us. However, we made up for this deficiency in the following year, when we were fortunate enough to find ourselves shooting together once more in a far away corner of the Peninsular, where bison jostled each other in the open as thick as the deer in Windsor Park.

In spite of having heard several sportsmen express opinions to the contrary, there is no doubt that for the tyro at any rate, who has only had a passing glimpse of a few bison, it is, in heavy jungle, very difficult for him to distinguish between a bull and a cow. In light forest, or on fairly open hillsides, by using an ordinary amount of care, mistakes are easy enough to avoid.

These forests during the monsoon are so thick that it was impossible to see even an animal the size of a bison at any but the closest range, and then probably the only thing that would reveal the beast's presence would be the flick of an ear or the whisk of its tail, the remainder of its huge body being screened by the undergrowth.

Often had I approached within a few yards of a herd of bison and only been made aware of their proximity by the noise of their feeding as they cropped the grass or young bamboo shoots.

The undergrowth and tangled creepers were frequently ten feet or more in height, thick clusters of bamboo dotted about here and there, whilst the light of the sun would be shut out from above, except for a few stray gleams and patches which had managed to force their way through the large shiny leaves of the teak trees overhead.

So that, after all, in these dark and gloomy forests, possibly either in the hazy dusk of the early dawn or late in the afternoon when the sun would be low on the horizon, it was not too easy to distinguish at a glance between the deep chestnut hide of an old cow and the somewhat darker colour of a bull.

There were a few clearings, it is true, but they were very few and far between. Another difficulty, besides the continuous rain, with which we had to contend, was the apparent entire absence of a breath of wind, which made it extremely hard to be certain if one was approaching one's game from the right direction or not. The only plan was to light a cigar or cigarette when one appeared to be nearing one's quarry and to be continually watching the smoke. Some people imagine that the smell of the smoke is likely to betray one's presence; I think this is quite a fallacy; for if one is in a position for the animal to smell the smoke, he will quite as quickly scent a human being, who is not smoking; the smell of the man, smoke or no smoke, conveying to him a sufficient sense of danger.

I learnt a good idea for testing the wind in damp jungle, when it is impossible to find a bit of dry dust or grass for the purpose, from a planter sportsmen in the south of India. He had provided his shikari with a little muslin bag of dust or powdered chalk, so that all the man had to do was to take it out of his pocket and shake it every now and again.

I must regretfully admit that the first bison I ever slew was an unfortunate cow, who, nevertheless, in spite of her sex, gave me a very anxious moment or two, and nearly brought me to an untimely and undignified ending. Inglorious indeed to have been crumpled up by a cow bison!

And this is how it happened. Accompanied by two trackers, I was returning somewhat late in the afternoon along a narrow jungle path. Suddenly one of the trackers stopped short and pointed into the jungle on our left. There sure enough was the head of a bison, with nose up looking straight at us and sniffing the air. Only a small bit of the horns, the nose and eyes were visible about twenty yards from us. I asked the man if it was a bull or a cow, kombu (bull) he said at once. So quickly raising the ·577 to the shoulder, I fired just below the point of the nose. The next thing I remember was an enormous lowered head suddenly appearing through the smoke, which enveloped us like a fog, and only about five yards away. There was just time to dodge a little to one side, but the animal came no further, and turning off to the flank fell with a crash a few yards further on. A few gurgling sounds and all was silence. Approaching with great caution, to my infinite disgust I found I had slain a cow. The bullet had hit her high up in the chest and penetrated the windpipe, a rush of blood into this had probably stayed her charge just in the nick of time.

For the future, I determined, if ever shooting in similar heavy, or damp and breathless jungle to discard black powder rifles and confine myself to cordite. It was not good enough, being unable to see the result of one's shot, being veiled in a curtain of smoke for several seconds afterwards. A nasty "turn-up" I had with a wounded bull some days later confirmed me in this resolution.

A cold drizzling rain was falling as, in company with a couple of trackers, I left camp early one morning in search of fresh bison tracks. We soon came upon quite recent tracks, and by 11 o'clock found ourselves in close proximity to the herd. A few minutes later I espied a bison's head looking at us through a thick bamboo clump. On this occasion the horns were quite visible, and their massive proportions signified that without doubt they belonged to a bull, and an old one too. In another second there would have been the usual snort, a crash, and he would have disappeared; so quickly aiming at where I imagined his chest to be, I fired. As on every previous occasion a heavy curtain of smoke concealed the result of the shot. The track was immediately taken up and showed a few drops of blood at each step. Scarcely a quarter of a mile had been covered before he appeared again in a tiny clearing. One tracker, who was in front, failed to see him and went blindly forward, with the result, that just as I had drawn a bead on his shoulder, he started off again into dense jungle, and my bullet hit him too far back. On renewing the chase, the now light frothy nature of the blood on his trail showed that the last bullet had perforated the lungs, and that it could only be a matter of time before he would succumb. The jungle became more and more impenetrable as we proceeded and in some places one's sight was limited to a range of about five yards only. Following a wounded bison through such dense undergrowth was extremely dangerous and nervous work. The greatest caution was necessary, and the strain of continually being on the qui vive intense. Every now and then I sent one of the trackers up a tree to see if he could obtain a view of the beast ahead. Some of the thickest patches were skirted and the track taken up on the far side. Needless to say progress at this rate was very slow and it was not till nearly three hours later that we again came up with him. As I had expected he had turned on his tracks and was waiting for us. Several times whilst following the trail, the tracks had shown were he had previously performed the same manœuvre, but had moved on before we arrived. I could just see his head through an opening in the foliage; and fortunately, owing to our careful approach, I saw him before he was aware of our presence. He was only about fifteen yards away. There was a good stout teak tree about ten yards to our right, but from there he was invisible, so taking a shot at his head from my original position, I beat a hasty retreat behind the shelter of the big tree, behind which the trackers had already esconced themselves. It was impossible to see the result of the shot, and for the next few moments all was breathless silence. The smoke had scarcely cleared and I was slipping in a fresh cartridge when we heard the jungle crackling on our right front. The oldest tracker, who had previously told me he was unable to climb, was now half way up a neighbouring tree. The other kabara faithfully kept close behind me with the second rifle. The beast was slowly stalking round to our rear in order to get our wind. Nothing could be seen, and his whereabouts were only made known by the breaking of bamboo and twigs as he forced his way through the jungle. As he moved to the rear so we moved to the front, thus keeping the tree between ourselves and our invisible foe. The situation was somewhat uncanny! As soon as he got to windward, the crackling of the underwood came nearer and nearer, and at last his wicked old head appeared about ten yards distant, in what a few seconds before had been our rear. This was quite close enough to be pleasant, and the ·577 was again brought into action and a hasty snapshot taken at his head. Crouching behind our tree we had not long to await the result. There was a crashing of jungle, and through the smoke the huge form flung itself past us like a runaway engine. He almost grazed the tree as he went by and I could have touched him by putting out my hand as he passed. The whole thing had happened so quickly, and was so hidden in the smoke that I had no opportunity of letting off the second barrel. If I had been using a cordite rifle I could probably have given him the left barrel, either as he was charging or after he had passed by.

Hearing choking noises in the jungle on our rear we made certain that this charge had been his last effort. In this we were mistaken; for on following him up, we found the imprint of his horns in the soft clay, where he had fallen on his head, but no bison. The rain which had been falling all day now fell in torrents, but we continued the pursuit for another mile and a half. At frequent intervals were pools of blood where the animal had laid down, and we passed another spot where he had fallen on his head. It was now past 4 o'clock in the afternoon, and not knowing how far we were from camp, and the kabaras being extremely doubtful about the way back, I decided to leave the chase till the morrow, when I expected to find the beast dead not far away.

The whole place was a sea of jungle, not a path or even an elephant track in any direction. At half-past seven it was pitch dark, and we were still cutting our way through the undergrowth and stumbling over through the matted creepers. The kabaras then owned that they had not the slightest idea in which direction we were going or ought to go. Until then I had always been led to believe that these jungle people never lost their way, otherwise I should, during our devious wanderings during the day, have taken the precaution to blaze trees in order to find our route back. Now there was nothing for it but to spend the night where we were. I had had nothing to eat except a few biscuits and a bit of chocolate since 7 o'clock in the morning. It was one of the most miserable nights it has ever fallen to my lot to experience. The rain fell in a steady downpour all night and I had to stand leaning against a tree as it was too wet to sit down, there being several inches of water on the ground. If we could only have lit a fire it would have been some consolation, but my matches were too wet to ignite. The kabaras who can make fire in the most extraordinary manner by rubbing a couple of sticks together, did their best, but were eventually defeated by the rain. The way they make fire is as follows:—Two sticks of some dry wood are taken, one more or less flat and another more or less round. The former has a small cup-shaped hole cut in it with a V shaped slit on one side, the latter is sharpended to a blunt point. The flat stick is then placed horizontally on a knife, stone or similar hard substance and held there between the operator's feet. The pointed stick is inserted into the cup-shaped hollow and twisted rapidly between the palms of the two hands. As soon as one man becomes tired, another immediately seizes the upright stick and continues the rapid twirling motion. In favourable circumstance smoke will begin to appear in three or four minutes. As soon as this happens, tinder, in the form of some dried feathery plant, is placed below the cup in the horizontal stick, at the bottom of the V shaped slit. These junglemen always carry a tiny bag of this tinder about with them. On continuing to rapidly twirl the pointed stick a few sparks of charred wood dust fall down the V shaped slit out of the cup on to the tinder. Being carefully blown a flame at length appears and fed with dried leaves and tiny sticks until a fire is produced.

For three and a half hours we all three toiled at these sticks, and wonderful to relate, in spite of everything being sodden with wet actually several times got as far as the flame stage; but there being nothing sufficiently dry on which to feed the flame it always became extinguished by the rain in a few minutes, and our prolonged efforts were thus made abortive.

However, I succeeded in lighting a cigarette of which I had a dozen, and by lighting a fresh one from the stump of the old one manged to keep off the mosquitoes, which swarmed around us in a ravenous horde, until the supply became exhausted.

The remainder of the night I was almost devoured alive by these pests. Next morning to my disgust we found that if we had only struggled on during the previous night another half mile we should have struck a cart track which would have taken us to the forest bungalow in three miles.

After a large dose of neat whisky, a hot bath and a substantial meal, followed by many grains of quinine, the whole of the next day was spent looking for the spot where we had last left the tracks of the wounded bison.

But during the darkness we must have wandered in circles, for the trackers had absolutely lost their bearings and were unable to take me to the place.

The following day, W—— a planter turned up at the bungalow and he kindly accompained me himself and brought his two trained shikaris who took up the trail from the beginning.

We tracked as far as where the animal had been wounded the second time, for, in spite of the incessant rain, there were still small patches of blood visible on the undersurface of the leaves. But, here, just as my hopes had revived of recovering the beast after all, an unexpected difficulty stopped our further progress. A large herd of about thirty bison had fed all over the ground, and wandering about in all directions, they had made such a maze of tracks that it was impossible to follow those of our quarry. This was a most disheartening ending to what had been a not altogether uneventful bison hunt.

However, it taught me a lesson, and that was, as I mentioned before, to give up the use of black powder rifles in heavy jungle for the future.

W——'s trackers, jungle men trained by himself, were two of the best I have ever seen working. It was an education to watch the way they stuck to the two days' old trail in spite of the heavy rain by which it was almost obliterated. There is no doubt that the best shikaris or trackers are those who have been employed more or less permanently and trained by some keen and experienced sportsman. The untrained jungle man is all right up to a certain point; the instinct of tracking is a second nature to him, but the power of deduction is lacking, like a pack of hounds would be without a master.

The previous evening W—— had dined with R——and myself and proved a cheery companion, full of anecdotes concerning his favourite sport.

One of these is worthy of quoting. It was when he was planting in Ceylon that a globe-trotter, who had been given a permit to shoot an elephant, was sent to him with a letter of introduction asking for his assistance in the matter. Mr. G. T. arrived armed with a brandnew Purdey 8 bore and evinced the greatest keenness to slay such a mighty beast if he could be only shown one. W—— enquired if he had ever done any big game shooting before. Mr. G. T. had to own that up till then rabbits had been the summit of his ambition. "Everyone has to make a beginning," said W——; so after carefully explaining to the gentleman the position of an elephant's brain, they started forth in search of one. Now, as everyone knows, a tusker elephant in Ceylon is extremely rare, nearly all the bulls being tuskless. In a very short time, however, W—— found Mr G. T. an elephant, and what was more, a good tusker. The elephant was still some way off and quite unconscious of their presence. W—— pointed him out and explained that they would now have to approach very carefully, and try to get within twenty yards or so for the shot. For a few moments the rabbit-slayer gazed at the beast in speechless terror, then pushing Mr. Purdey's best 8 bore into W——'s hands, said "No! no! you shoot him," and beat a hasty retreat in the opposite direction.

W——ran after the retreating sportsman, and tried to impress upon him that he had come all that way on purpose to shoot an elephant, but no! the only reply was You shoot him!" as he hastened his steps back to camp.

W——after considering the matter for some time, thought the opportunity was too good to be lost, and so taking the reluctant sportsman at his word proceeded to shoot the animal himself. After a certain amount of manœuvring, he succeeded in getting within about twenty yards of the terror-inspiring beast and gave him the front head shot. This time it was W——who got a shock; for as the smoke of the rifle gradually cleared away, the beast slowly sank two or three feet into the ground, and there remained standing up in the same position as before he had fired. W——then gave him the left barrel, but he never budged an inch, and remained in exactly the same position, calm and apparently undefeated. There was something weired and uncanny about it! Perhaps G. T. by some subtle instinct had seen that this was no ordinary elephant; and "it certainly wasn't, to behave in such an extraordinary manner" thought W——.

However, not to be beaten, he thought he would try a flank attack, and then the mystery was solved. The animal had been killed stone dead by the first shot, and standing wedged in between a couple of trees, had been unable to roll over, but had simply sunk down on his knees. Now, thought W——"I will have a bit of fun with the reluctant one." So, cutting off the beast's tail, which he hid in a bush close by, he went back to camp where he found his protege. After a deal of persuasion and a promise that he need not approach closer than a hundred yards for his shot, W——induced the unwilling sportsman to return; pointing out that if he did so immediately the elephant would still be in the same spot. A fact that, under the circumstances, was likely to be true! It was a good two miles from camp, but at last W——managed to drag the gentleman back within sight of the elephant and told him to shoot at it. The 8 bore went off aimed anywhere but at the elephant, but no matter! "You've got him" shouted W——and the now smiling and triumphant sportsman was lead up to examine the prize of his prowess. And it was not until W—— had produced its tail from the bush beneath which it was secreted and recommended Mr. G. T. to confine himself to rabbit shooting in future that he realised he had been made a fool of.

No doubt this would-be slayer of big game is now content to be the terror of the hedge-row and rabbit warren to the detriment of poor bunny!

On the same morning that we were compelled to give up reluctantly the pursuit of my wounded bison, W——left us and went in search of a rogue elephant which was supposed to be somewhere in the vicinity. We heard later that it escaped him by crossing a flooded river, probably by now our friend has laid the rogue low! But a few more days now remained to us. During one of these R——found three small tiger cubs in a disused elephant pit, but did not succeed in bagging the mother of the triplets. Every day fresh tracks of elephant, bison, tiger, leopard and sambhur were met with, but the beasts themselves wandered in safety through the dense impenetrable jungle which protected them.

R——stayed for a few days after I had relinquished the hopeless pursuit, but his persistency was rewarded with no success.

These forests being only opened to shooting during the rainy season and for a short time afterwards when the jungle is at its thickest its game is well protected.

And although on this account, shooting in such a country is terribly hard and disheartening work, it is as well that there should be still some places where game can wander in comparative safety from the rifle of the ubiquitous sportsman. Long may the Coorg forests remain the happy breeding grounds of elephants, bison, and its other wild denizens!

SMALL GAME SHOOTING AT LONG RANGE WITH THE RIFLE.

THE capabilities of the mid-range medium powered small bore are well understood in America, but rifles of this class have never received in England the attention which they merit. It is true that at Bisley, in competitions of the Martin Smith class, the ·25-20-86 has been regarded of late years with increasing favour, but extremely few sportsmen at Home have even now grasped the fact that weapons taking this, or somewhat similar ammunition, have a useful rôle for hunting certain British small game. A friend, who is a fine and very enthusiastic rifle shot, has done very well this autumn, with a ·25-20-86 on wild fowl. In open weather, when the shot gun was quite at a discount, he succeeded in bagging brent geese, mallard, wigeon, curlew, and plover. Some of the geese, he killed at astonishing distances: on one occasion he was so lucky as to bag two geese with the small bullet, by carefully selecting two birds which were exactly covering one another. The local wildfowlers, who had been quite unable to bring any geese at all to bag with their heavy shot-guns, were amazed and somewhat disgusted at his success.

In England, the man who essays to shoot wild fowl with a rifle is regarded with considerable hostility by his confrères of the gun. There is little real cause for this prejudice, for the rifle with its light report and single projectile, certainly disturbs the foreshore far less than the heavy shoulder gun, with its loud boom, and storm of heavy shot.

In India, the sportsman need not be afraid of hurting anyone's susceptibilities, if he fancied laying aside his shot-gun for a while, and taking to the rifle instead. In India, too, there are many kinds of small game which are almost unapproachable within shot-gun range, so that a change of weapons will enable the hunter to bag creatures which he would otherwise fail to come to terms with. Let me give an instance of a few of them. In the United Provinces one often during the rains comes across the lesser bustard: these birds generally keep 100 to 150 yards off, at which range they afford an excellent mark for an accurate rifle. In many jheels, one may easily get within 100 yards of different kinds of geese; here too a rifle is the only weapon which is of use. The kootun is another bird which can seldom be approached within shot-gun distance. The old cock jungle-fowl of the Neilgherry sholas afford fine stalking in the early mornings and evenings, along the edges of coverts too large to beat. Fine sport too may be had in Northern India, hunting the glens and ravines for wild peafowl; and the old cocks as they sit calling on knolls and bluffs, close to thickets of impenetrable thorn, are only to be bagged with a rifle, for their sight is far too keen for the sportsman to be able to get to close quarters.

As somewhat of a rifle crank, I have ever delighted in casting my own bullets and making up my own ammunition; but I fully realize that the average Anglo-Indian will not be bothered with such matters. One has to be somewhat enthusiastic to sit over a charcoal brazier in the hot weather, melting lead and tin, for two or three hours at a stretch. The average man likes to buy his cartridges ready made, and nowadays there is plenty of American ammunition, suitable for small game shooting, to be had from gun dealers in India.

The ·25-20-86 high velocity ammunition, for the ·25-20 Winchester Repeater, is well fitted for a number of purposes. It gives a muzzle velocity of 1650f.s., and is powerful enough to kill a chink, or black-buck, if required. The ·25-20-86 single shot loaded with black powder, is extraordinarily accurate, but has a somewhat higher curve. That favourite the ·32-40 is a most dependable rifle of perfect accuracy. Equally suitable are the ·25-21-86, ·25-25-86, and ·28-30-120 Stevens straight case single shot rifles.

Of course, when extreme accuracy of aim at small objects at long range, is in the sportsman's mind, he will not be satisfied with open sights. A peep wind-gauge backsight, combined with a fine pinhead foresight, would be fitted; sights similar in fact to the peep sights used at Bisley in many well-known competitions.

One might with advantage go even further, and have a telescope fitted to the rifle. Many American sportsmen use telescopic sights for shooting small game.

The wind-gauge to backsights is very necessary, as when taking a long shot at a small mark, if there is any cross wind it must be allowed for, otherwise a miss is certain. One has to work out a scale of wind allowances to fit the ammunition used: the ·25-20 requires just about double the amount wanted with the ·303.

At 200 yards with the ·28-30, I have on one or two occasions had to give as much as 18 or 20 inches wind allowance, in order to hit a black buck in the required spot.

The ·25 rifles do not damage game much when non-expanding bullets are used, even though the striking velocity may be considerable. A ·25-20-86, for instance, does not unduly mangle a duck, even when the bird is only 70 to 80 yards off.

There is no further need to send trophies to Europe to be prepared, as the work turned out by this firm is equal to that of any similar business in England or elsewhere, and the rates are very much cheaper.

LUCKNOW EXTRA MEETING, 1909.

Saturday, the 30th January, 1909.

THE racing to-day was by common consent a most satisfactory prelude to the Spring Meeting. The return of the cold weather, following on the recent hailstorm, made the afternoon an altogether delightful one for racing and the climate of Lucknow must have appealed particularly to visitors from Calcutta, of whom there were not a few present, including Sir Francis Maclean, Miss Collin, the Maharaja of Cooch Behar and the Maharaj Kumar. His Honour and Lady Hewett, and Miss Hewett, accompanied by Major Gordon, also attended the meeting, and the gathering was of a more than average description.

There was a card of six events, and with in some cases moderate fields, but on the whole the racing was excellent and provided sensational issues.

The two jump events with which the programme opened furnished exciting finishes and were devoid of accident. Devon ran in the last event and succeeded in beating his field with the greatest of ease, though, of course, he was matched against poor quality. The issues were so open that the public was a good deal at sea, and as practically no odds were offered there was not much money on the various events.

The Staff and Departments and the King's Own Regiment were "At Home" in lavishly decorated tents, while the 8th Rajputs played an interesting selection of music.

THE HORSE HURDLES.—Rs. 200 to the winner, Rs. 75 to the second, and Rs. 25 to the third. A high-weight handicap hurdle race for horses. 1½ miles over 6 flights of hurdles.

St. Michael was quickest away and took a long lead of his field, with Whisper, Lord Boyne and Daroji behind. At the eight furlongs, Whisper and Lord Boyne gained on the leader and afterwards displaced him. LUCKNOW SPRING MEETING, 1909.

STEWARDS:

COL. P. K. L. BEAVER.
A. L. SAUNDERS, ESQ., I.C.S.
MAJ. EVELYN WOOD, D.S.O., The Royal Dragoons.
MAJ. F. C. STRATTON, A.V. Corps.

Judge:—MR. A. G. H. MACPHERSON.
Handicapper:—MR. R. S. KINDERSLEY.
Honorary Surgeon:—CAPT. F. J. C. HEFFERMAN.
Honorary Veterinary Surgeon:—MR. W. H. WALKER, A.V.C.
Clerk of the Scales:—MR. E. S. DEANE.
Starter:—CAPT. F. BURCH, Royal Dragoons.
Secretary:—MR. E. S. DEANE.

First Day, Monday, 1st February 1909.

THE opening day of the Spring Meeting was on the usual high scale one has learnt to associate with this annual fixture, but unfortunately the attendance—though larger than at the Extra Meeting—was not as big as the excellent character of the sport warranted. Sir Francis and Lady Maclean were again present, also Sir John and Lady Hewett and Miss Hewett and numerous prominent civilian and military officers.

Fields were larger than on Saturday, finishes more exciting and there was again the same clockwork regularity in the running of the various events. The Stewards were fortunate in having secured the services of Mr. A. G. H. Macpherson, the well-known official of the Calcutta Turf Club, as Judge. Probably through an oversight some of the events were not timed. Lucknow badly wants a second stand in keeping with the dignity of the new grand stand.

The opening event of the card was a dead certainty for Mr. Griffith's Cocky, who won hands down. Major Tudor rode a well-judged race on April Fool in the Lucknow Military Handicap Chase, but all the other events fell to professional riders. Northmore annexed two races in capital style, and in the five-furlong race Amphibia, ridden by the light weight, A. Ferguson, beat her field in hollow fashion. Favourites came in all along, and the public should have won on the day, in spite of the disposition shown in many instances to back outsiders.

The Royal Dragoons and the King's Own Regiment were "at home" in picturesquely decorated tents in which the trophies of the regiments were on view. The King's Own Band played during the races.

The sport on Cup Day promises to be of the best.

THE MAIDEN PLATE.—Rs. 200 to the winner, Rs. 100 to the second, and Rs. 50 to the third. A handicap for maiden C.-B. ponies 14-2 and under and other maiden ponies 14-1 and under. 1,000 yards.

BETTING: 12 to 1 on Cocky, 5 to 1 each agst. Little Davey and Ormolu.

Ormolu showed first but after a few strides was caught up by Cocky, then the two ran nearly level until the three hundred yards when Cocky drew away and won pulling up by six lengths; twenty lengths divided second and third. Time—60secs.

THE LUCKNOW MILITARY HANDICAP CHASE.—Rs. 1,500 to the winner, Rs. 300 to the second, and Rs. 200 to the third. A high-weight handicap steeplechase for horses, which are bonâ fide property of Officers in H. M.'s Army on full pay. To be ridden by Officers in the Army on full pay. About 2¼ miles.

Idle, April Fool and Hereward ran in the order named for some distance, then the first two drew out and running side by side negotiated the last jump together. Then April Fool, who had been lying low, put on a spurt and came away, winning on the post by half a length; a distance between second and third.

THE CLOSED PONY CHASE.—Rs. 700 to the winner, Rs. 200 to the second, and Rs 100 to the third. A high-weight handicap steeplechase for ponies 14-2 and under, vide Special Closed Conditions. R. C. about 2 miles.

HOW GREAT MEN RECOUP THEIR ENERGIES.

SOME STRIKING TESTIMONY.

Eminent men are the authoritative exponents of a nation's thought. Their views, given with the sense of responsibility which rests upon those who mould public opinion, must command the most earnest attention. When the subject for consideration is the creation and preservation of those physical and mental attributes which so largely enter into the sum total of human success, then, surely, the opinions of those who have risen to the proud position of leaders of men will be all-convincing.

The unanimity with which the most distinguished personages proclaim Sanatogen to be the ideal tonic food remedy, affords striking evidence of the high esteem in which Sanatogen is held as a restorative and a tonic.

Sanatogen is proclaimed as being the most powerful restorative known for renewing and sustaining the vigour of health. When run down and in conditions of lassitude, nervousness, metal inertness, as well as debility, and all the ills foreshadowed by that danger signal depression, Sanatogen is unrivalled. It speedily and permanently restores that buoyancy and elasticity which are the very essence of well-being.

Sir Gilbert Parker, equally famous as a gifted author and an intrepid traveller, is full of enthusiastic praise:

"20, Carlton House Terrace.

"I have used Sanatogen with extraordinary benefit. It is to my mind a true food tonic, feeding the nerves, increasing the energy, and giving fresh vigour to the overworked body and mind."

Gilbert Parker

Sir John Hare gives us a peep into the means employed to sustain the wonderful vitality which is one of his distinguishing characteristics:

"Upper Berkeley Street.

"I have found Sanatogen a most valuable tonic and stimulant during a period when I had to work very hard under conditions of great weakness and ill-health."

John Hare

Lord Sutherland Gower, the creator of the ...le Shakespearian memorial at Stratford-Avon, says of Sanatogen:

"Hammerfield, Penshurst, Kent.

"I feel it only due to the benefit conferred on my general health by Sanatogen to write to inform those interested in that wonderful medicine that in a couple of months' time it has cured me of all gouty trouble. Sanatogen has done me far more good than all the waters of Bath and Harrogate."

Ronald Sutherland Gower

The Venerable Archdeacon Sinclair expresses his opinion as follows:

"The Chapter House,
St. Paul's Cathedral,
London, E.C.

"Sanatogen appears to be an admirable food for invalids and those who suffer from indigestion."

William Sinclair

Madame Sarah Grand, the gifted authoress of "The Heavenly Twins," says she has found in Sanatogen renewed vigour of body and brain.

"Grove Hill.

"Sanatogen has done everything for me which it is said to be able to do for cases of nervous debility and exhaustion. I began to take it after nearly four years enforced idleness from extreme debility, and felt the benefit almost immediately. And now, after taking it steadily three times a day for twelve weeks, I find myself able to enjoy both work and play again, and also able to do as much of both as I ever did."

Sarah Grand

Conclusive proof is forthcoming also in the testimony of over 9,000 physicians as to the superlative merits of Sanatogen as the ideal tonic food remedy.

Amongst the many who have written in praise of Sanatogen, Dr. Andrew Wilson expresses golden opinions in that striking publication, "The Art of Living," a copy of which will be sent gratis and post free on forwarding name and address to Messrs. Smith, Stanistreet and Co., Calcutta, mentioning the Indian Field.

Sanatogen is sold by all chemists, etc., throughout India.

THE TURF.

PLUMPTON.

It was claimed by a distinguished physician that the climate of Ditchling was equal to the Riviera, and a bit further eastward the same charm envelopes Plumpton and Lewes, and a misanthrope would be converted to cheerfulness by a visit to the pretty little course on the Station field where Princess Dagmar distinguished herself prior to her Waterloo Cup victory. The wind was veering through the west with the sun, and blowing with a keenness that suggested frost to follow such a glorious day as the previous night's thunderstorms had presupposed impossible. The further one got from town on Friday, the better the weather, and, recruited from the seaboard, the attendance was a rattling good one. The going was excellent, fields ruled well, and racing was of a spirited character Results:—

Saturday was an ideal afternoon, the sun shining brightly and the cold north wind that was in such unwelcome evidence on Friday having dropped, the mere fact of being out of doors was a pleasure. HAYDOCK PARK.

Competitors turned up in good force at Haydock Park on Friday, but the wagering in most of the events did not take a particularly wide range, and backers, as is usual at this venue, succeeded in more than holding their own. The weather proved fine, but the track was exceedingly treacherous, and in the ankle-deep going Noctuiform fractured his fetlock when taking part in the Ashton Maiden Hurdle Race, and had to be destroyed—an inglorious end to the career of one of the most notorious equine welshers ever seen in this country. Noctuiform had shown himself to be such a fine "lepper" at home that Mr. Whitaker, his trainer, believed that the course of jumping had eradicated his wayward habits; and he actually had visions of taking the Grand Auteuil Hurdle Race with the son of Multiform. His dramatic demise is a great loss to Captain Fenwick, who some little time ago gave a monkey for him, and irrespective of his abilities as a hurdle racer, his racing credentials in New Zealand made him of certain value for stud purposes. Visitors to Lord Newton's racing estate on Saturday experienced many samples of the most disagreeable weather. Fog and a dismal thin rain pervaded the atmosphere to the general discomfiture. In truth, the skies were so dark as we left the city of Manchester as to cause some doubts as to the practicability of racing. However, the light improved in the environment of the race track, and sport was proceeded with in the ordinary course, although but a scant view of the racing could be had beyond the last obstacle. The tone of the sport left something to be desired from a market as well as a competitive point of view, and perchance the heavy state of the course had something to do with this. Results:—

BIRMINGHAM.

THE conditions were pleasantly bright for the opening stage of the fixture at Bromford Bridge on Monday. The attendance was about up to the average for the time of year, but although runners were plentiful, nothing occurred to rouse enthusiasm above the normal; while backers about held their own in their dealings with the ring. The course was in splendid order, so that there can be no excuse for beaten horses on that score. Results:—

Crisp, sunny, and invigorating was the early morning air on Tuesday, and though a mixture of sleet and hail commenced to descend a few minutes before the resumption of racing, the downfall was of very short duration. Nevertheless, the atmosphere was of a keenness highly suggestive of snow. The racing in character was very much after Monday's pattern, though several close and well-drawn-out finishes lent quite an attractive fillip to the day's sport. There were four more spills than on the opening afternoon, when falls were singularly few and far between. Results:—

WINDSOR.

A THICK fog was not confined to London on Wednesday morning, as it extended well down the line, while the damp, chilly air did not promise a pleasant prospect for visitors to the Royal Borough. Hence, the specials from Waterloo were not heavily laden, and on reaching Windsor a soaking drizzle enhanced the discomforts of the situation. Of the first race but little could be seen, but with rain to the rescue, the air cleared unexpectedly, and an afternoon of light and shade followed. The ground was soft, but, thanks to its thick carpet, the going was good, yet falls were pretty frequent, but fortunately with little damage to man or horse. Results:—

A south-west wind—keen enough in all conscience—precluded any possibility of Wednesday's mist or rain, and keeping the skies clear gave sunshine a chance. It had rained heavily overnight, and though the wind-swept paths were cleaner, the grasslands were saturated, and the way the horses cut lumps out of the turf told of the heaviness of the going. By both services of trains, the passenger list showed an increase, and considering the season of the year, the executive have no cause to grumble at the agglomeration of the two days, while their patrons cannot complain of the sport. Even with a walk-over in the principal race, fields showed a capital average, and proceedings were brisk throughout ; though surprises were witnessed in each of the hurdle races in the programme, so that backers had the worst of the afternoon. FOOTBALL.
ASSOCIATION RULES.

THE LEAGUES.—While the break in the season caused by the commencement of the great competition for the Association Cup finds Northampton well ahead in the Southern League and West Bromwich Albion in a position at the top of the second division of the League that promises promotion, the most important of these tournaments that run from the beginning of September to the end of April furnishes a most even struggle between Everton and Newcastle United. Of these two clubs Everton had the more arduous task on Saturday, having to face at Deepdale the team that in September had beaten them at Goodison Park. By winning four and drawing two games in succession, Preston North End had steadily risen, and their latest achievement gives them the satisfaction of having obtained three points in the two engagements with the side which for so long have deserved recognition as the strongest in the country. Newcastle United had to fight much more keenly for victory than their score of 3 to 1 over Woolwich Arsenal suggests ; but after T. T. Fitchie had obtained the first goal, the Newcastle men gradually asserted themselves. By a decidedly superior goal average Everton keep their place, and, as Sheffield Wednesday and Manchester United lost, their declining record need not cause their supporters serious apprehension. The Wednesday suffered their reverse at Trent Bridge, and it is noteworthy that Notts County have not lost a match at home since the last Saturday in October. An even better performance than this was the triumph of the Forest over Aston Villa at Birmingham. Despite this fine win Nottingham Forest are very badly off, immediately below the two London clubs, of which Chelsea had a narrow escape, fog necessitating the abandonment of play at Burv when the score stood at 4 to 1 in favour of the home team.

In the Second Division of the League the four leading clubs all had to play away from home, and only one—Tottenham Hotspur—succeeded in averting defeat. Tottenham went to Barnsley and drew, each side scoring a goal, but West Bromwich Albion were beaten by Fulham, Bolton Wanderers by Gainsborough Trinity, and Derby County by Clapton Orient. The overthrow of the Albion was, of course, the event of the afternoon. The West Bromwich players had not lost a match since 17th October, when they went down before Clapton Orient at Homerton, and as leaders of the competition they were thought to be capable of holding their own with Fulham. Strengthened in defence by the acquisition of their old player, James Sharp, the Scottish international, the West London club proved much too good for the Albion, and had the forwards only played as well as the rest of the team, they must have run up a big score. In gaining a point at Barnsley, Tottenham Hotspur did not alter their position, but they are now much better off than before, and with two matches in hand are only two points below Bolton Wanderers, Clapton Orient showed their best form against Derby County, playing in a style that suggests that their record is misleading as far as the capabilities of the side are concerned. Fast and clever the forwards completely outplayed the Derby County defence and only the fine goalkeeping of Maskery saved Derby County from a much heavier defeat.

Consistent excellence has given Northampton their splendid lead of four points with a game in hand in the Southern League. Engaging in eight matches since 21st November, they have scored 15 out of a possible 16 points, and their latest success over Bristol Rovers—one of their few challenges for the championship—was gained by three goals, the average they have scored in this recent series of fixtures. Their all-round strength at the present time affords a striking contrast to the uncertainty of Southampton, who, after keeping well in front during the completion of half their programme have become quite demoralised. Crystal Palace are doing no better, and for the present Northampton stand quite by themselves. The deterioration in form of several of the most prominent Southern Clubs does not promise well for their success in the first round of the Association Cup, which takes place next Saturday.

NEWCASTLE UNITED vs. ARSENAL.—Fully 30,000 people assembled at St. James's Park, Newcastle, to see the game between the United and Woolwich Arsenal. Fine weather favoured the match, but the ground was very soft and heavy. The first minute's play saw the Arsenal gain a surprising goal, the Newcastle defence breaking down badly, with the result that Fitchie easily scored. After this reverse the home team set up a vigorous attack, but MacDonald saved a fine shot by Shepherd. Fitchie put the ball into the net after this, but was ruled offside, and at half-time the Arsenal still led by 1 goal to 0. The second half of the game was carried on at a great pace, the Newcastle forwards being seen to fine advantage. After less than five minutes' play a penalty kick was given against the Arsenal and with this Veitch equalised. A little later Anderson put the home team ahead, and before the end Shepherd gained a third goal. Woolwich Arsenal hardly ever looked like saving the game. Newcastle United, 3; Woolwich Arsenal, 1.

BURY vs. CHELSEA.—Owing to fog play was abandoned at Bury early in the second half in the match with Chelsea, which accordingly had to be postponed. Eleven minutes after the start Bury were three goals in front, Hibbert opening the scoring and McIntosh getting through twice within about four minutes. After about twenty minutes' play Bridgman scored for the visitors, and subsequently the exchanges were more even. Bridgman put in a good shot which Raeside saved, and the interval was reached with Bury leading by three goals to one. The teams crossed over without rest, and as the fog became denser the teams were drawn off. Ten minutes later play was resumed, and Duffy scored, but immediately afterwards the game had to be given up with Bury leading by four goals to one.

THE GAME IN SCOTLAND.

SURPRISES continue to mark the Scottish League competition, and the fight for the championship promises to be a keen one. As a result of Saturday's games Dundee once more go to the top of the table, but they have played two matches more than Rangers and four more than Celtic, while Clyde, should they keep up their present form, have a great chance of also getting ahead of them.

Saturday's surprises were the crushing defeat of Rangers by Dundee, Greenock Morton's victory over St. Mirren at Paisley, and Celtic's dropping of a point to Hearts at Parkhead. Considering the weather, gates all over were only fair, the best being £370 at Dundee and £275 at Celtic Park, while the poorest was at the Port, Glasgow-Falkirk game—£50.

Rangers gave a poor exhibition at Dundee, the local men being superior to them at every point of the game, Hunter, Dundee's centre, gave his goal-record a good as he had three of the four points. In every department Rangers had either one or two players, who played badly, and in view of their heavy wage bill the team is coming under severe criticism.

Celtic's draw with Hearts is by no means flattering to the Glasgow club, but the Hearts rose well to the occasion and led most of the game. As usual, Bobby Walker was the "star" of the Edinburgh team. Celtic had a new goalkeeper in Oliver, a reserve from Greenock Morton, and he did well, but otherwise the play of the home men was disappointing, and changes are expected within the next few days, including a forward from another First Division Scottish club.

Clyde within the past four weeks have beaten Queen's Park, Celtic, Aberdeen, and Falkirk, and on Saturday Airdrieonians was added to the list. The Bridgeton club have already more points than they ever had for a full season's work. Kirwan, the old Tottenham Hotspur player, had a big say in Saturday's victory, scoring two well-taken goals.

Queen's Park lost a point to Hamilton Academicals through weak finishing, though the play of their left wing —McColl and Paul—for prettiness left little to be desired. St. Mirren began against Morton, as if the points were already theirs, and wakened up too late, the Greenock backs in the last twenty minutes putting up a brilliant defence. Aberdeen's play against Partick Thistle merited more than one goal, while Falkirk gave further proof of having fallen off considerably by going down to Port Glasgow Athletic. Ground advantages were mainly responsible for the victories of 3rd Lanark and Hibernians against Motherwell and Kilmarnock respectively.

RUGBY RULES.

THE two matches in the Rugby County Championship competition played last Saturday had somewhat unlooked for results, Gloucestershire gaining a surprising victory over Cornwall, the champions, and Durham, who for so many years have been the leaders in the Northern Division, going down before Cumberland. The reverse sustained by Cornwall was quite unexpected, as they had previously beaten Somerset and Devon, and the effect of the defeat is a tie for first place in the South-Western Division between Cornwall, Devon, and Gloucestershire, all three of whom have won two matches and lost one. Gloucestershire thoroughly deserved their success, the fifteen playing in splendid style at all points. As regards the Northern Division, Cumberland, who beat Durham by the narrow margin of one point—a dropped goal to a try—hold the best record, having won three games and lost one. Cumberland have now only to meet Yorkshire, who themselves have lost but one match, and that to Durham.

GLOUCESTERSHIRE vs. CORNWALL.—Gloucestershire gained a fine and well-deserved victory over Cornwall, at Stroud, on Saturday, by 1 goal, 3 tries to 2 tries. Gloucestershire were without Hudson and Neale, who have been on the sick list for a long time ; there were also changes in the Cornish team, Solomon, Wilson, and Thomas dropping out, so that in the respect of representation the rival sides were on level terms. This was the first county match played at Stroud, and great interest was taken in it, so much depending upon the result. When the visitors kicked off there were about 4,000 spectators present, and considerable enthusiasm was shown. At the outset the visitors placed

A south-west wind—keen enough in all conscience—precluded any possibility of Wednesday's mist or rain, and keeping the skies clear gave sunshine a chance. It had rained heavily overnight, and though the wind-swept paths were cleaner, the grasslands were saturated, and the way the horses cut lumps out of the turf told of the heaviness of the going. By both services of trains, the passenger list showed an increase, and considering the season of the year, the executive have no cause to grumble at the agglomeration of the two days, while their patrons cannot complain of the sport. Even with a walk-over in the principal race, fields showed a capital average, and proceedings were brisk throughout ; though surprises were witnessed in each of the hurdle races in the programme, so that backers had the worst of the afternoon. FOOTBALL.
ASSOCIATION RULES.

THE LEAGUES.—While the break in the season caused by the commencement of the great competition for the Association Cup finds Northampton well ahead in the Southern League and West Bromwich Albion in a position at the top of the second division of the League that promises promotion, the most important of these tournaments that run from the beginning of September to the end of April furnishes a most even struggle between Everton and Newcastle United. Of these two clubs Everton had the more arduous task on Saturday, having to face at Deepdale the team that in September had beaten them at Goodison Park. By winning four and drawing two games in succession, Preston North End had steadily risen, and their latest achievement gives them the satisfaction of having obtained three points in the two engagements with the side which for so long have deserved recognition as the strongest in the country. Newcastle United had to fight much more keenly for victory than their score of 3 to 1 over Woolwich Arsenal suggests ; but after T. T. Fitchie had obtained the first goal, the Newcastle men gradually asserted themselves. By a decidedly superior goal average Everton keep their place, and, as Sheffield Wednesday and Manchester United lost, their declining record need not cause their supporters serious apprehension. The Wednesday suffered their reverse at Trent Bridge, and it is noteworthy that Notts County have not lost a match at home since the last Saturday in October. An even better performance than this was the triumph of the Forest over Aston Villa at Birmingham. Despite this fine win Nottingham Forest are very badly off, immediately below the two London clubs, of which Chelsea had a narrow escape, fog necessitating the abandonment of play at Burv, when the score stood at 4 to 1 in favour of the home team.

In the Second Division of the League the four leading clubs all had to play away from home, and only, one—Tottenham Hotspur—succeeded in averting defeat Tottenham went to Barnsley and drew, each side scoring a goal, but West Bromwich Albion were beaten by Fulham, Bolton Wanderers by Gainsborough Trinity, and Derby County by Clapton Orient. THE GAME IN SCOTLAND.

SURPRISES continue to mark the Scottish League competition, and the fight for the championship promises to be a keen one. As a result of Saturday's games Dundee once more go to the top of the table, but they have played two matches more than Rangers and four more than Celtic, while Clyde, should they keep up their present form, have a great chance of also getting ahead of them.

Saturday's surprises were the crushing defeat of Rangers by Dundee, Greenock Morton's victory over St. Mirren at Paisley, and Celtic's dropping of a point to Hearts at Parkhead. Considering the weather, gates all over were only fair, the best being £370 at Dundee and £275 at Celtic Park, while the poorest was at the Port, Glasgow-Falkirk game—£50.

Rangers gave a poor exhibition at Dundee, the local men being superior to them at every point of the game, Hunter, Dundee's centre, gave his goal-record a good as he had three of the four points. In every department Rangers had either one or two players, who played badly, and in view of their heavy wage bill the team is coming under severe criticism.

Celtic's draw with Hearts is by no means flattering to the Glasgow club, but the Hearts rose well to the occasion and led most of the game. As usual, Bobby Walker was the "star" of the Edinburgh team. Celtic had a new goalkeeper in Oliver, a reserve from Greenock Morton, and he did well, but otherwise the play of the home men was disappointing, and changes are expected within the next few days, including a forward from another First Division Scottish club.

Clyde within the past four weeks have beaten Queen's Park, Celtic, Aberdeen, and Falkirk, and on Saturday Airdrieonians was added to the list. The Bridgeton club have already more points than they ever had for a full season's work. Kirwan, the old Tottenham Hotspur player, had a big say in Saturday's victory, scoring two well-taken goals.

Queen's Park lost a point to Hamilton Academicals through weak finishing, though the play of their left wing —McColl and Paul—for prettiness left little to be desired. St. Mirren began against Morton, as if the points were already theirs, and wakened up too late, the Greenock backs in the last twenty minutes putting up a brilliant defence. Aberdeen's play against Partick Thistle merited more than one goal, while Falkirk gave further proof of having fallen off considerably by going down to Port Glasgow Athletic. Ground advantages were mainly responsible for the victories of 3rd Lanark and Hibernians against Motherwell and Kilmarnock respectively.

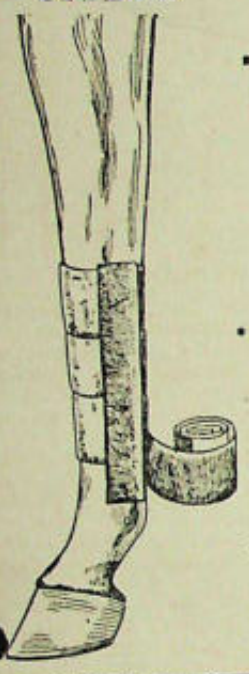
RUGBY RULES.

THE two matches in the Rugby County Championship competition played last Saturday had somewhat unlooked for results, Gloucestershire gaining a surprising victory over Cornwall, the champions, and Durham, who for so many years have been the leaders in the Northern Division, going down before Cumberland. The reverse sustained by Cornwall was quite unexpected, as they had previously beaten Somerset and Devon, and the effect of the defeat is a tie for first place in the South-Western Division between Cornwall, Devon, and Gloucestershire, all three of whom have won two matches and lost one. Gloucestershire thoroughly deserved their success, the fifteen playing in splendid style at all points. As regards the Northern Division, Cumberland, who beat Durham by the narrow margin of one point—a dropped goal to a try—hold the best record, having won three games and lost one. Cumberland have now only to meet Yorkshire, who themselves have lost but one match, and that to Durham.

GLOUCESTERSHIRE vs. CORNWALL.—Gloucestershire gained a fine and well-deserved victory over Cornwall, at Stroud, on Saturday, by 1 goal, 3 tries to 2 tries. Gloucestershire were without Hudson and Neale, who have been on the sick list for a long time; there were also changes in the Cornish team, Solomon, Wilson, and Thomas dropping out, so that in the respect of representation the rival sides were on level terms. This was the first county match played at Stroud, and great interest was taken in it, so much depending upon the result. When the visitors kicked off there were about 4,000 spectators present, and considerable enthusiasm was shown. At the outset the visitors placed

WINCHESTER

.405 Caliber, Big Bore High Power Rifles.



It's safer, when you are going after big game, to use a rifle whose power to kill you can always depend on.* The Winchester .405 caliber Model 1895 rifle is at all ranges the most powerful made, a statement borne out by the following comparison: The remaining energy at 200 yards of a bullet shot by the .405 is greater than the muzzle energy of a bullet shot from the .45-70-405, which for many years was considered the most powerful rifle for big game hunting. The .405 is designed to use the Winchester .405 caliber cartridge, whose high velocity and 300-grain mushrooming bullet makes it particularly effective against all kinds of big game. Winchester rifles, with Winchester cartridges, each made for the other, are invaluable to all successful hunters.

themselves in a good position by following well up, but Gloucester set up a good defence, and in turn soon took up the attack, the front rank rushing the game right down to the Cornish "25," Ere long play was transferred to midfield, and then Kingston, one of the home quartette, made a good run, only being stopped when near the Cornish end. The home county kept up the pressure, but Jackett defended finely with some well-judged kicks to touch. The visitors were at this stage being severely taxed, and Hayward, the clever Cheltenham three-quarter, was nearly over on a couple of occasions, the first time unluckily losing the ball, when practically over the Westerners' line. The Cornishmen were, however, the first to score, Davey getting over with an easy unconverted try for them. During the remainder of the first half Gloucestershire had the best of the play, and directly after Davey's score, Kingston, with a fairly easy try, placed the teams on level terms. Interval score:—Gloucestershire, 1 try (3 points); Cornwall, 1 try (3 points).

Upon resuming, after a temporary attack by the home team, Cornwall drove their opponents into a bad position, but play was soon sent to the other end of the ground, and from this stage onwards Gloucestershire were almost constantly on the attack. At last their efforts were rewarded. Berry crossing with a well-deserved try, the place kick failing. Afterwards play was very exciting, and fought out a great pace. Ere the end came Barrett crossed with an unimproved try for the visitors, while Gloucestershire scored twice through Holbrook and Stinchcombe, Moore converting one. Thus Gloucestershire gained a well-deserved victory. They played without Kingston during most of the second half. Result:—Gloucestershire, 1 goal, 3 tries, (14 points); Cornwall, 2 tries (6 points).

CUMBERLAND vs. DURHAM.—Played at Carlisle, on heavy ground, following a thaw. The first incident of note was a fine run by Chapman, who reached the Cumberland "25" before being upset. A dribble by the Cumberland forwards, with Ewbank at their head, recovered a lot of the lost ground, and Percy Thompson ran to within a few yards of the Durham line before being pulled up by Ellwood. Watson stopped a fine rush of the Cumberland forwards, and Moore just failed to break through the Durham defence, and with the visitors penalised, Holliday placed nicely, the ball just going outside the Durham upright. Following another burst by Thompson on the Cumberland left wing, the ball was passed by Oglethorpe to Moore, who dropped a beautiful goal for Cumberland with only about fifteen minutes gone. After a magnificent bout of passing, in which all but one of the Durham three-quarters had a hand, the ball went to Watson, who dashed over the Cumberland line and completed a very fine try, which Taylor failed to convert. Inspired by this success, Durham menaced the Cumberland line again, but it was not long before the Cumbrian forwards, by dashing play, put the visitors again on the defensive. Rickard saved a dangerous-looking rush of Cumberland forwards, in which Blacklock was injured. He was carried off the field, but returned again with a bandaged knee. But for a painful slowness near the Durham line Cumberland should have scored again, and Durham were also dangerous on one occasion before the interval, which found Cumberland still leading by 4 points to 3.

With the breeze at their backs the Dunelmians soon made their presence felt after change of ends. For a good portion of the second half, it was almost a continued attack by Durham, but break through they could not. Once Cumberland looked very like adding to their points when Oglethorpe got away and gave to Ewbank, who got right out by himself. The speedy Chapman, however, just managed to touch his foot from behind, and thereby unset his balance, until which time he looked a certain scorer. For a time Cumberland swarmed along the Durham line, but before the whistle blew they were in trouble again. Several times the Durham attack seemed certain to succeed, but just as surely was it baulked, and Cumberland defending with great gameness, contrived to keep their lead till the final whistle blew. Result:—Cumberland, 1 dropped goal (4 points); Durham, 1 try (3 points).

AUSTRALIANS vs. ENGLAND.—The Australians defeated England at the Rectory Field on Saturday by 3 tries to 1. The game attracted much notice, and created sufficient interest to draw a crowd of about sixteen thousand persons to Blackheath. The weather conditions were perfect. The turf was in splendid order, and there was the athlete's nip in the air to make the players keen and lively. The light was good and the wind very slight. Towards the end of the game it got up behind the Wallabies, just when England could have done without it, but that made no difference to the result.

At the start England played with their backs to the pavilion, and the game had only been just over a minute in progress a Wallaby forward, kicking hard towards the English left wing, enabled Mobbs to field the ball and get well into his stride before being engaged by Russell. Mobbs ran round this player and handed him off powerfully. On being engaged by Hickey the Northampton man in-passed to Tarr, who ran up to Carmichael and re-passed to Mobbs, who scored the most brilliant combined try to the record of an English representative team of recent years, Cooper's attempt to convert with a dry ball and no wind to interfere with his effort was a poor one. Still, England had secured the treasured "first blood" in international fray, and the team was obviously on good terms with itself.

All went well for England during the next quarter of an hour. The pack did its work well and got its fair share of the ball. Ashcroft combined well with Williamson, and the outlook was very promising. Suddenly, all this was changed, and the single fault of one man plainly enough made all the difference.

Lyon, the full back, had been standing rather deep, and had twice "waited for the bounce," but managed to get out of the difficulty created by himself. The Wallabies, whose ordinary attacks were countered all along the line by as sound defence as any English team has ever put up, were not slow to perceive that there was another way over the line. They plied Lyon with high punts, and from one of these, that player again "waiting for the bounce," came the visitors' first score.

Lyon, who on this occasion was twenty yards too far back, rushed in, the ball bounced over his head, and he slipped in turning for it. Even then he nearly retrieved his mistake, but Richards was "up," and kicked beyond him. Row following up, kicked over the line, and then Tarr in getting back to save also slipped, and Row touched down for the easiest of tries. The score was gained by good following up, aided by Lyon's fatal mistake, but it was one that on the general run of the play cannot be regarded as other than lucky, full of the element of chance. Carmichael's shot at goal was worse than Cooper's.

The game had now been going twenty-one minutes, when Cooper dropped out. The next item was a break away by Assinder, who gathered at a line-out. This was followed by a grand bit of work by Bennetts, who followed his own kick and "spoiled" Carmichael, only to see the attack break down by the crass stupidity of a forward who in an open field kicked straight and hard to the only remaining Wallaby back, Prentice. This was the last serious attack by England during the first half.

The Australians now began to get the ball in the scrums, and they set up an attack which, but for great defensive work by Mobbs, who went across twice to save two otherwise certain tries by Dix, must have been crowned with success. At this juncture, although the English pack was being beaten for first "shove," and consequently the ball, the heaviest forward on the field, Cooper, was taken out as an extra "three," where, as need hardly be added, he was quite useless. He was planted on the left of the line, and the Wallabies attacked strongly five times in succession on the English right. This was only to be expected of them. The interval arrived with the scores level—a state of affairs that was justified by the run of the last twenty minutes of the half.

The match was restarted with fog threatening at 3-20 P.M., and soon afterwards a breeze began to spring up. Bennetts was very badly fouled when not in possession, and for the rest of the game some of the Wallabies went in a good deal for the obstructionist tactics. Without a doubt these had something to do with the result, and it is merely barking matters not to mention that the glaring off-side work of one or two of their forwards quite effectually "spoiled" Williamson, who was, to the winners, the most dangerous man in the losing team.

For some time the play degenerated greatly, and at no period during the second half was it so good as it had been during the first. The Wallabies attacked most of the time, Prentice and McCabe doing several brilliant things, but the defence was always good enough, and Russell was completely mastered by Mobbs. At last came what was generally regarded as the winning try, and that was when Russell punted high, followed up and scored as the result of three English backs going for the catch instead of leaving it to one man. A bad mess was made of this, and the losers thoroughly deserved to have the score made against them, albeit no marked superiority in play was shown in the getting of the try. Carmichael failed at goal.

Cooper's drop out was a poor one, and the visitors were enabled to keep position. Prentice was hurt and left the field for one minute, and then Dix, who ought to have been penalised for lying on the ball long enough to enable several to come to his aid, was hurt, but soon resumed play. Finally Williamson was laid out, and had to be helped off the field, and during the last minute Russell scored on the right as the result of a characteristic bit of handling by the Wallaby backs. The ball was fisted by Richards at a line out to McKivatt, and from him went right along the line for Russell to score in the corner. At this time Ashcroft was working the scrum, Mobbs was stand-off and Cooper left wing (opposite to Russell). Carmichael again missed goal, after which the game ended.

AUSTRALIANS vs. BRISTOL AND CLIFTON.—At Bristol yesterday before about 5,000 spectators. There was a strong wind blowing. Play in the first half was, on the whole, remarkably even, but the visitors were not fully extended. The first ten minutes of the game rarely found the ball twenty yards from the half-line, and the first exciting incident provided the homesters with a great disappointment. The visitors were attempting a passing bout when the ball dropped, and Holbrook, snatching up smartly, dashed to Dix. He then passed to Victor Eberle, who beat the full-back in run, and planted the ball between the posts. The referee, however, signalled for a scrum, the ball having been knocked on just as the movement commenced. Both teams showed some weakness in fielding the ball. Another even spell ensued until McKivatt picked up neatly, from a scrum, and sent right along the line. A lot of ground was gained by the movement, and the home team were just easing the pressure when McCabe picked up and gave smartly to Barnett. The latter gained more ground, and sent Gavin in. Row failed to convert.

The Australians were again kept well at bay after this, and half-time was approaching when the score was nearly equalised by Holbrook, after some good work by F. A. Gardiner. Norman Moore next tried a place kick, but Middleton charged the ball down. Half-time score:—Australians, 1 try; Bristol and Clifton, 0.

The second half also opened evenly. Russell was the first to gain any distinct advantage, and the Australians were nearly over in the next minute. The Colonials subsequently put in some brilliant handling, Parkinson nearly scored, E. Eberle tackling him at the last minute. A few minutes later McKivatt got away from a scrum, and scored, no goal resulting. The Bristol pack played a forceful game, and after a great struggle the ball, was taken over the line, Spoors scoring a try, which was unconverted. The Australians, after this made several rushes on the home quarters, McCabe eventually going over, for Hickey to convert. The Australians had the upper hand during the rest of the game, but the locals played pluckily, giving a very creditable display. Result:—Australians, 1 goal, 2 tries (11 points); Bristol and Clifton, 1 try (3 points).

CROSS-COUNTRY.

BLACKHEATH H. vs. UNITED HOSPITALS H. AND H.—The annual inter-team match between the Blackheath Harriers and the United Hospitals Hare and Hounds was decided over an eight and a half miles course from Blackheath on Saturday and resulted in a victory for the Blackheath H. by 21 points, the points were supplied by the first five of each club. Southwell and Glaeser (of the winning club) were never troubled after the first mile, and practically won at their leisure. Mr. W. Rowland (president), Mr. F. Denman, and Mr. C. W. Starnes were the judges, and Mr. H. W. G. Haslegrave (honorary secretary) was starter and time-keeper. Placings and times:—

Blackheath, H.:—1, 2, 4, 5, 6—Total points, 18.
United Hospitals H. and H.:—3, 7, 8, 10, 11—Total, 39.

The men kept fairly well together for the first half-mile, when Southwell, Glaeser and Levinson got away, and at one mile were leading Baxter, Fry and Robbins by thirty yards. Entering on the plough, Southwell opened up a lead of fifty yards, and from here the runners were singled out, with Southwell leading, followed by Glaeser, Fry, Baxter, Hough and Norman. Except that the distances separating the men were increased, the positions were unaltered to the finish.

MARATHON RACE AT CAMBRIDGE.—The Cambridge Town and County Cross-Country Union promoted a twenty miles "Marathon" road race from Chesterton to Stretham, and back on the 14th instant. The event which was decided under favourable conditions, attracted fourteen competitors. The result was a win for H. Harding, of the Linton Granta H., who completed the distance in 2hrs. 7mins. 35secs. He beat his fellow clubman, E. A. Mallows, by half a mile for first place. Appended are the names and times of the first six men:—

	Name and Club.	h.	m.	s.
1	H. Harding (Linton Granta) ...	2	7	35
2	E. A. Mallows (Linton Granta) ...	2	11	15
3	H. Furbank (Albert Institute) ...	2	18	45
4	G. F. Page (Linton Granta) ...	2	21	22
5	W. Bell	2	21	47
6	P. G. Childerley	2	25	37

All of these competitors were awarded silver medals for completing the distances within two and a half hours. The first prize was valued eight guineas, the second prize three guineas, and third two guineas.

ROWING.

THE 'VARSITY BOAT RACE.—As customary, the Light Blues opened up work in connection with the inter-'Varsity struggle on the initial day of the term, and the president, Mr. Stuart, had an eight afloat on Friday. Four Blues are available—Stuart, Fairbairn, Williams, and Kitching. With such a large number of promising oarsmen to choose from, it is somewhat surprising that Kitching should be asked to come into residence after concluding his University career. At present the eight is only provisional. The promising Etonian freshman, Arbuthnot, occupies the stroke thwart, while Fairbairn and Williams, the Blues, figure at two and five respectively. The Cantabs will not have the services of R. Boyle as coxswain, and the lines are being held by Compston. The 'Varsity race is expected to take place on 3rd April, and naturally the work of the crew at present is of a light character. The order of rowing on Saturday was:—T. D. Richardson, Trinity Hall (bow); G. E. Fairbairn, Jesus; G. L. Thomson, Trinity Hall; W. A. C. Perry, First Trinity; E. J. Williams, Third Trinity; J. B. Rosher, First Trinity; E. S. Hornidge, Trinity Hall; R. W. M. Arbuthnot, Third Trinity (stroke); J. D. Compston, Trinity Hall (cox).

HOCKEY.

SOUTH, 3; WEST, 1.—This trial match at Oxford on Saturday was spoilt by the rough and uneven state of the ground. Basil Hatch came into the West side, vice Wheatley. The Southerners won a rather poor match by 3 goals (all hit by Shoveller) to 1 (Slack). Only the good work by Ray in goal prevented the West from sustaining a more decisive defeat. H. Benson, the Gloucestershire secretary, had his eye badly cut as the result of a hard hit into touch.

NORTHUMBERLAND, 4; CHESHIRE, 5.—A curious game was witnessed at Heaton, Newcastle-on-Tyne, on Saturday, between Northumberland and Cheshire. The match resulted in a win for the latter by 5 goals to 4 and all five of their goals, four in the first half and one early in the second moiety, were scored before the home team obtained a single goal. Then, however, the Northumberland forwards played up, and scored four goals.

ESSEX, 10; SUFFOLK, 0.—Suffolk sustained a very decisive defeat on Saturday, when they met Essex at Chelmsford, and lost by 10 goals to nil. The Essex halves gave the Suffolk forwards very little opportunity to become at all dangerous, but the Suffolk defence could not break up the Essex attacks. At half-time the home team were seven goals up, and three more points in the second half gave them a double-figure win.

WRESTLING.

J. LEMM vs. G. C. O'KELLY.—Music-hall wrestling dies hard in spite of all that some of the wrestlers themselves have done to kill it. It was somewhat surprising therefore to find a full house at the Oxford on Thursday to see the bout between John Lemm, the Swiss, and G. C. O'Kelly, the Hull fireman, who it will be remembered won the Olympic wrestling championship.

It was a fast and spirited encounter while it lasted. Lemm was the better man at all points. He lost the first fall by accidentally slipping on the mat, which was not so good as it might have been. In the second and third bouts he made O'Kelly look like a novice, for he got inside the Irishman's defence without much trouble. The cross-buttock with which he "felled" his man in the third and final bout was a particularly smart bit of work, and served to show that the Swiss knows the game very well indeed. It is distinctly a feather in his cap to have beaten a man so much his superior in height and weight.

The match was for £100 and other considerations, the man gaining two out of three pin-falls to be declared the winner.

The men are entirely dissimilar in physique. Lemm is not unlike Sandow in point of size and muscular development. O'Kelly, although powerfully, is rather awkwardly, built. He brought a large number of his supporters with him from Hull, where he is a fireman in the local police force.

O'Kelly had an advantage of nearly a stone and a half in weight and quite ten inches in height.

After a few minutes' sparring Lemm got his opponent down with a quick leg hold, and for a time he gave the Irishman no peace.

The latter, however, wriggled out of his difficulties very well, and, getting first a neck-hold and then a half-Nelson, pinned his man fairly to the mat in 3mins. 17secs. This was quick work, but it was not too clever, for the Swiss ought never to have allowed himself to get into the difficult situation that brought about his downfall.

After a short rest the men resumed operations. O'Kelly was now brimming over with confidence, as becomes a victorious Irishman; some of his remarks to his trainers were distinctly funny.

Lemm got behind his man after a short spar, but the Irishman broke clear from a crotch hold, only to be brought down again by the neck—a very severe tumble. Lemm now stood his man on his head several times, but O'Kelly "bridged" well and broke free.

The Swiss was in a desperate humour, however, and working mostly with leg holds he at the end of 5mins. 42secs., wrestling got on a half-Nelson and pressed his man to the mat, thus making the falls one each.

In gaining this fall Lemm had shown such superior strength and ability that it was hard to understand how he had lost the first bout.

When the first fall was gained the betting was 2 to 1 on O'Kelly; when the second was over there were no offers to wager.

The men took the mat for the final bout at 3-27. O'Kelly was now a somewhat subdued figure, and he acted purely on the defensive for some little time. It was all over in 2mins. 73 5secs., however. The Swiss dashed at his man, threw him cross buttock, and fixing the half-Nelson with ease, got the third fall and the match.

Paperchasing.

VII.

The seventh paperchase was held on Saturday last instead of Friday, so as to give those who had been out steeplechasing on Wednesday a chance, but except Trilby we did not notice any of these out and it was a bit unfortunate that the chase came the morning after the fancy dress dance at Government House. The attendance, however, was pretty good and those who went round were rewarded by a very sporting course full of interesting turns, twists, and surprises with downs and ups of a truly astonishing character. The start was on the west of the Garia Hat Road, about a furlong beyond Jodhpore Thana, and the finish was at the other side of the road opposite the start. The intervening circuit was about 4½ miles with 14 made jumps, and raised roads and bunds "no end." Captain Holden on Lord Harry went to the front as usual closely attended by Mr. Halliday on Black Fish, Lord Francis Scott on Fermoy, Captain Gibbs on Trilby, Miss Hasluck on Schoolboy, Mr. Ballantyne on Fairy and Mrs. Myers on Napier. Black Fish came down at the first mud wall and gave her rider a nasty fall, but went on and continued the chase on her own, eventually finishing second. Mr. Halliday seemed badly hurt at first, but was pretty soon up again and we were glad to see him at the races in the afternoon albeit walking with a limp. The others went on together a good way ahead of the rest of the field and when they came into sight at the last mud wall, Lord Harry had the chase in hand, Trilby and Fairy next up. Then the last-named, who had been jumping none too well, blundered and came down, and for the first time in twenty-two chases on the mare Mr. Ballantyne was unplaced. In the pony chase, Mr. Reynolds, when leading the field took a dive off Gem, who jumped the rest of the course perfectly and finished second without her rider, thus emulating Black Fish's performance in the horse chase. Pathfinder in spite of a refusal won pretty easily. The ladies were all in great form and are no doubt getting ready for their cup competition which is fixed for 10th February.

THE 15TH HUSSARS' CUP.

Five teams have entered for the 15th Hussars' Cup Polo Tournament, the opening game in which was played on the Mahomed Bagh ground, Lucknow, on the 30th January. The entries are the Rifle Brigade (the holders of the Cup), the 17th Lancers and the Royal Dragoons, the 15th Hussars and the Duke of Wellington's Regiment.

The opening game was between the Rifle Brigade and the 17th Lancers. It was a magnificent contest and resulted in the defeat of the Rifle Brigade by 8 goals to 3.

First Chukker.—Play was confined to midfield for some time, then towards the close the Rifles' back missed the ball near the flags, and the Lancers hit through. Score: 17th Lancers, 1 goal.

Second Chukker.—The Rifle Brigade were on the offensive almost throughout and had several ineffective shots at the flags.

Third Chukker.—The Rifle Brigade were still pressing. Then the Lancers got on and hit 2 goals. Score: 17th Lancers, 3 goals; Rifle Brigade, nil.

Fourth Chukker.—The Lancers again worked the ball to their opponents' end, and two more goals were registered in their favour before the close of the chukker. Score: 17th Lancers, 5 goals; Rifle Brigade, nil.

Fifth Chukker.—There was even play for a brief period, followed by up and down play in which both sides attacked, but without result. A foul was given against the Rifles.

Sixth Chukker.—The free hit by the Lancers was beautifully intercepted, but the Lancers returned the ball and put it through. The Lancers then scored two additional goals, though the Riflemen made a strong defence. Score: 17th Lancers, 8 goals; Rifle Brigade, nil.

Seventh Chukker.—The Lancers pressed hotly, then the Rifle Brigade secured mastery of the situation and Captain Bassett hit a goal amidst much applause. Score: 17th Lancers, 8 goals, Rifle Brigade, 1 goal.

Eighth Chukker.—Play continued in the Lancers' ground and the Rifle Brigade scored twice through the instrumentality of Captain Harrison. The 17th Lancers defeated the Rifle Brigade by 8 goals to 3 Teams:—

Calcutta vs. Ballygunge.—There must surely be "something rotten in the state of Denmark" when our leading Cricket Club can only raise eight men for an important two-day match on two public holidays! Yet, this is what actually happened on Tuesday and Wednesday in last week, when they were down to play their old rivals, the Ballygunge C.C., on the latter's ground; the eighth man was only "caught" on the morning of the match, and even then the ground boys did not put in appearance until late in the afternoon, when all interest in the game had evaporated. No doubt there must be some explanation of this extraordinary state of affairs, but it was none the less distinctly rough on those eight keen men, who turned out to do duty for the Club, some two or three of them at considerable personal inconvenience.

Originally, in addition to the meeting of the first teams at Ballygunge, it was arranged for, "The Rest" of each Club to meet in the Eden Gardens, but Ballygunge found some days before hand that they could not raise more than one eleven, and accordingly scratched; as things turned out, it was quite as well they did!

The match itself was too one sided to call for much comment, Ballygunge winning by no less than an innings and 115 runs, the game being won by shortly after 3 o'clock on the second day. The home team won the toss, and as the visitors had only seven men on the ground, they were put in to bat, Guise and Turnbull being the first pair. A bad start was made, as with only 5 on the board, the latter was easily caught by Yeoman off Gould, but Huddleston and Guise made things look rather better, both batsmen scoring freely. At 53, the latter left for a careful 26, and then a series of disasters overtook the visiting side, Huddleston and Quin both having to leave without any further addition to the total the former being nicely taken in the slips, and the latter being given out caught at the wicket off a ball he certainly did not touch. Drew and Stevens, however, made a useful stand, and between them put on 56 for the 5th wicket, and the former and Hannaford, 25 for the 6th, but with the score at 143, Drew, who had been batting well, was caught in the long field, and the last three men being conspicuous by their absence, the innings closed for 143.

Ballygunge opened with Stafford and McIntyre, and the two put up 116 before the former was caught off Drew for a stylish 55; he was missed once, but his display was otherwise an excellent one. Shallow followed, and at once commenced to score freely all round the wicket, but at 153, he lost McIntyre, caught and bowled by Huddleston off a high full toss for a useful 53. Frost, the next man in, put together 25, stumps being drawn for the day when Horncastle was not out 19, and Shallow not out 103.

On resuming on Wednesday, Calcutta had the services of both their ground bowlers, and scoring was somewhat slower in consequence; Horncastle only added 4 to his overnight score, but Shallow went on until, when he had 134 to his credit, he was caught in the slips. His innings was a very fine exhibition, and was only marred by one chance, a "c and b" to Turnbull, when in the seventies, but was otherwise without a mistake.

The rest of the team then went in to hit, but their intentions were better than their performances, and the innings, which at one time bade fair to result in a large total, closed for 346; Turnbull, thanks mainly to getting 4 wickets cheaply on the morning of the second day, came out with by far the best analysis, 5 for 52; the figures of the remaining bowlers were not so flattering.

Calcutta followed on, but did much worse than at the first attempt, as batting eleven men, they could only scrape together 88, all told, of which Quin's share was 38, more than half the runs made from the bat. Horncastle met with unexpected success with the ball, his "donkey drops" accounting for the downfall of 3 men in the course of a couple of overs, for 8 runs; good enough. The bulk of the work, however, fell on Gould, who secured 5 for 35, quite excellent figures.

BALLYGUNGE vs. CUSTOMS.—An interesting game was the result of the meeting of these two Clubs at Ballygunge on the 31st ultimo, the match eventually ending in an even draw. The visitors had first use of a perfect wicket, and thanks to excellent innings by C. M. Barlow (64), P. R. Cadell (45), and Quiterio (80), they knocked up the biggest score that has been made against Ballygunge for the last two seasons, 293 all out.

The home team were left with barely two hours to get the runs, and even this period was unfortunately curtailed; a sharp shower necessitated a stop for about ten minutes on one occasion, and stumps had eventually to be drawn 20 minutes before the agreed upon time, the light being very bad indeed.

B. A. White (42), R. L. McIntyre (48), H. F. Yeoman (34 not out) and M. Dowson (34 not out), all contributed towards the total of 174 for 4 wickets, Ballygunge being thus 119 runs behind with 6 wickets to fall.

The Horse.

BRITISH HORSES.

A DECLINING INDUSTRY.

THE several discussions of the past year, both in and out of Parliament, have all tended to show that England has been losing ground in regard to the actual numbers of horses bred, and the Board of Trade returns fully substantiate such views. There are conclusive proofs that in times of peace as many horses are not wanted as was the case even five years ago, because traffic has been so much taken up by the motor. The street companies want fewer for the 'bus, cab, and tram work, and private carriages have lessened in numbers since the advent of the fashionable car. But, as a remarkable sign that horse-breeding is declining, there are the unquestionable facts that it is more difficult to find good horses than in any previous period, and even the foreign agents, in their researches for the animals they require, have had so many futile visits to English and Irish fairs that new fields altogether have been suggested for their transactions, such as Hungary, Normandy, Belgium, and Holland. Twenty years ago, a new country, or a land of new inspirations, like Japan, would have relied entirely on England for her horse supplies of breeding stock, but now three or four European countries are ransacked for the same. it looks, therefore, as if the export trade is going, except for the very choicest of goods, and it is only the Turf, stimulated as it has been by its enormous stakes of £10,000, and the increase of horse shows and their interests, that have kept up the market for the comparatively small demand for the highest quality. This is the danger that has to be faced in the future. There will be plenty of racehorses to meet the requirements of the racecourse, and patronage will be given to all the breeds from the shire to the Shetland pony, to keep up standards of quality, but the outside public will not breed them, or, in fact, any horses at all, and so the country may become terribly short of supplies for war, or, even in a few years' time, for general utility purposes.

Of late years there have been a few purchases, mostly by foreigners, of horses for veritable fortunes. It was hardly thought that the 12,000 guineas paid for Blair Athol, in 1871, would have been easily exceeded, and astonishment was great when, five years afterwards, the late Duke of Westminster paid 14,000 guineas for Doncaster. Such amounts, however, look quite small after the 37,500 guineas that was given for Flying Fox at the Kingsclere sale, and sums of 30,000 guineas for both Diamond Jubilee and Cyllene. The last-named came under the transactions of 1907, although the noble animal was not sent to his new home across the Atlantic until last summer. He was accompanied by the highest priced one of this year, namely, Mr. Hall Walker's Polar Star, the winner of the Jubilee at Kempton, the Manchester Cup, and other great races. His price was said to have been 19,000 guineas. Others have been sold for substantial prices, but they have not quite run into the ten thousands, and if more mares and yearlings have changed hands during the year than hitherto, they have not made as big figures as formerly. There have been greater amounts given, for instance, to obtain the gems of Sledmere and Cottenham, as represented by the sales of Childwick and Lord Bobs in their respective years, but still neither Sir Tatton Sykes nor Mr. Simons Harrison had much to complain about in the general results. The absolutely highest-priced yearling for the season was Sir Tatton Sykes's colt by Persimmon out of Simplify, sold on the Doncaster Thursday, for 2,500 guineas.

At Newmarket, again, there was nothing like such figures as those paid for Sceptre and Duke of Westminster; and those that realised above a thousand were decidedly few. Whether prodigious prices are always healthy signs of Turf prosperity, or for the good of the country may be questions of doubt, as more causes are given for disappointment when a dozen yearlings, costing perhaps £30,000, never win between them £500.

The season of 1908 has not been favourable to the purchasers of high-priced yearlings, as nearly all the great races have fallen to those who breed their own racehorses, and other events, such as the Cesarewitch and Cambridgeshire, were won by those which originally cost but a few hundreds. However, the fascination of breeding blood stock seems greater than ever, and it is to be regretted that breeders of moderate pretensions have been damaged considerably by the influx of foreign stock into the country completely overcrowding the market. There have been over 200 American yearlings passing through the sale-rings during the season, very naturally causing a regular glut, and small breeders could find but meagre chances to sell at all or under any circumstances at remunerative prices. This is not in favour of the Britisher, and it has strengthened the not uncommon view that there are too many at the game of breeding blood stock.

As usual, the foreigners have been the best customers for brood mares, and this has been seen up to the very end of the year, as at the Newmarket December sales, Baron Springer gave 2,800 guineas for Lilla, a St. Simon mare, in foal to Gallinule.

There were fewer stallions exhibited at the Royal Commission show at the Agricultural Hall in March than in any previous year since 1902. This may have been owing in some measure to chance, but still it does not suggest any progress in the movement, and the reports from the provinces were full of grave fears that the numbers of thoroughbred horses throughout the country would have very bad seasons, as the farmers and others, who had hitherto made it a custom to breed horses, had been showing a more general determination to do so no longer. It will be seen in the future whether these alarms have been correct; but it is still a belief that fewer foals will be seen next year than in any preceding year for the last half-century.

A comparison of the export and import trades may not be at all satisfactory, as although the imports are much fewer, certainly some of the best of the breeding stock has been taken away. And then the exports have been more than doubled in the last twelve years, reaching as they do in 1908 to over 60,000 horses, principally through the disgraceful addition to the trade of over 2,000 horses to Holland and 30,000 to Belgium, at prices of less than £10 each, worn-out animals to be tortured in transit, and on landing to supply the lowest grades of the people with food. Thus the nation so boastful in the past of their love of horses dispose of their old favourites at the smallest degree of gain. This may take away some of the glamour from the pleasures of horse-breeding, and it behoves the Government to improve matters in regard to the lowest horse trade the world has known, to encourage the occupiers of land to keep their mares for breeding, and likewise to follow in the steps of the Roval Commission in the bestowal of premiums for hunting sires to, at the very least, five times as many as the limited means of the present authority can allow. A number of stallions travelling about a country is always an inducement to farmers to follow in the steps of their ancestors, but when the numbers are few, and they are scarcely ever seen about, people forget that horse-breeding is worth attending to at all.

In some counties societies have been formed recently to counteract such deplorable conditions notably in Devonshire, where the Devon County Association have been doing good work in registering sound stallions of the thoroughbred hackney and shire breeds, until there are now more than sixty available, and said to be appreciated by those who would not have gone into breeding again unless such horses had been brought to their particular notice.

As can be gathered from the above remarks, prices have not ruled high throughout the whole year. The 1901 guineas given for Polar Star was very exceptional, the highest-priced yearling being under 3,000, with the same remark applicable to the most expensively purchased brood mare. The highest price for a Shire was for the yearling colt King Cole, bred by Lord Rothschild, and sold at his lordship's sale for 900 guineas, to Lord Winterstoke. He was by Birdsall Menestrel, and the fifteen entries at the Tring sale by this sire obtained the high average of £352. There have been several fairly good sales of Shires during the year, and at Mr. Clement Keevil's dispersal sale an older stallion made 800 guineas.

A Clydesdale foal, winner at both Edinburgh and the Royal, by Ovama, out of the Hiawatha mare, Minniewawa, was sold for £530; but although Clydesdales have been in demand for abroad, and many exported, the prices have not been at anything like the above figure. The same can be said also of the Suffolks. They have been sought after for America and most Continental countries, and many have been purchased, but at figures mostly under £100. About the best sale of the season was at the International Show at Olympia, when the four gelding ponies, Mel Valley Wonder, Wonderful, Wondrous, and Wonder Lad, realised as a team £5,000. Several good prices have been realised for Welsh ponies. A Welsh pony brood mare, named Julia Snorer, was sold for £225, but among the Shetlands the great price of 120 guineas for a stallion sold in 1907, was not obtained, 45 guineas being the maximum for one of this fashionable little breed during the past year.

Shows.

CALCUTTA KENNEL CLUB THIRD CHAMPIONSHIP SHOW.

The third show of the above series was held on the 29th and 30th January last. In all the annals of Dog Shows in India never has a show in its ground arrangements been better done. The exhibition was held in the Rink and no site could have been more judiciously chosen; the position was central and convenient: there was ample space under cover; the benching left nothing to be desired the judging rings were spacious and accessible; the ring stewards were commendably efficient, the catalogue was of the best; the honorary secretaries were indefatigable and courteous in their duties; there was no fuss nor confusion in fact in all such essentials, the show bore the smack of a well managed English exhibition, rather than of the usual rumble, tumble Indian Gymkhana venture, and was a pleasure to behold. The Show started under bad auspices, it was stated that although it was desired there was no one to run it and the Calcutta Kennel Club which only exists for the purpose of its annual show was tottering to its foundations. The results showed that the anticipations were groundless for we had efficient honorary secretaries and good ground management. As to the judging, the general opinion seems to be that it was fair, though some of the awards did not meet with the views of experts outside the ring. Mr. Hood Wright is a good judge of big dogs, and we think he would have been more at home among the Great Danes, Rampores and other hounds than among the terriers. We venture to suggest that in shows to come there should be more judges, and that these very necessary officials be secured before any other details are thought of. The class judging was not completed during the first day, but otherwise there was no sort of hitch in the effectual performance of the programme. The prizes were given away by Lady Adamson at the close of the second day's judging.

The Naturalist.

ANIMAL COLOURATION.

THE theory that the great majority of animals—both those which hunt and those which are hunted, are so coloured as to be barely visible amid their natural surroundings, is one that commands almost universal acceptance among zoologists. I was brought up on the hypothesis and gave it practically unqualified acceptance until I began to study nature firsthand instead of from books. Since that time, I have been confronted with so many birds and beasts that are not protectively coloured that I am beginning to regard protective colouration as a kind of zoological phantasy..

Biologists of the present day seem unable to refrain from riding their pet theories to death. There is more than a germ of truth in the theory of natural selection; the hypothesis undoubtedly accounts for many of the phenomena observed in the organic world. But, to declare, as many zoologists do, that it is all-sufficient, that by it, unaided, organic evolution can be explained is puerile in the extreme. Similarly, there is a foundation of thruth in the theory of protective colouration. This being so, naturalists allow themselves to be carried away by the idea, and see protective colouring in places where it does not exist. This applies to the allied hypothesis of mimicry. It is still more true of the theory of obliterative colouration which has been recently set forth by Mr. A. H. Thayer—an American artist. That gentleman has demonstrated that an animal of which the lower parts are lighter in colour than the upper parts, as, for example, the black buck and the Chinkara, is less conspicuous in its natural surroundings that it would be if it were a uniform brown all over, for the dark upper parts and the whitish lower parts tend to counteract the effects of light and shade.

This is an important discovery, since very many animals are coloured in this manner. It lends powerful aid to the theory of protective colouration. But Mr. Thayer is not content with this discovery. He founds upon it a new theory, which he carries to an absurd length. This is the theory of obliterative colouring. Mr Thayer thinks that he has discovered two great principles which run through the whole of the animal world. The first of these, he styles the principle of the gradation of the shades of colour, "the principle of counteracted light and shade, with its corollary laws, by which almost alone the long-recognised protective colouration of animals is achieved. This gradation of the shades of colour from dark on the animal's upper side to light on its lower is the main essential step towards making animals inconspicuous under the descending light of the sky." According to Mr. Thayer, animals are not protectively coloured to look like clods and stumps, or like their surrounding objects; they are simply obliteratively coloured, coated as it were with invisible paint. "Whales, lions, wolves, deer, hares, mice, partridges, quails, sandpipers, larks, sparrows, frogs, snakes, fishes, lizards, crabs, grasshoppers, slugs, caterpillars—all these animals and many thousand more crawl and crouch, and swim about their business, hunting and eluding, under cover of this strange obliterative mask, the smooth and perfect balance between shades of colour and degrees of illumination."

But nature does not stop here. Mr. Thayer professes to have discovered a second mighty principle, namely, that most of the colouration, which have always been called conspicuous, are purely and potently concealing.

"Nature having visually unsubstantialised the bodies of animals, so that if seen at all, they look flat and ghostly, having converted them from solid and shaded bodies into flat cards and canvasses, completes the illusion of obliteration by painting on them pictures of the background, veritable pictures of the more or less distant landscape. Such in effect are the elaborate markings of field and forest birds."

Let us now briefly examine these principles.

We may grant that the gradation of colour observed in many creatures renders them less conspicuous in their natural surroundings than they would be were they of a uniform colour. We may further grant that it is possible to almost obliterate a statue in a diffused light by putting white paint on the surfaces in darkest shadow and dark paint on the most brightly-lighted parts, all in due proportion; that pigment can be so arranged on a solid object as exactly to nullify and obliterate the unequal distribution of light on that object. This is very far from proving that nature acts thus on animals in their normal surroundings. On the contrary, birds and beasts, far from being obliteratively coloured, are frequently very conspicuous. In the course of a walk in the country one sees without any effort hundreds of birds, beasts and insects.

Mr. Thayer answers this objection by asserting that "the artist is the only true specialist in the matter of visual appearances, per se—the question of how things look."

This means that the millions of men and women who are not artists do not know what the common objects of every day life look like! We see in the compound some rich brown birds with dark head and yellow beak and legs and call them mynas, imagining that they are conspicuous objects. This is because we are not artists: if we were, we should not be able to see the myna because the bird is obliteratively coloured. When we say that wild animals look solid to us and not like flat pieces of cardboard, Mr. Thayer replies: "No, they do not, that is where you make the mistake, they look flat; it is only because you imagine that they are solid that you think they appear solid!"

Let us, for the sake of argument grant all this. It then remains for Mr. Thayer to prove that all wild animals are artists, or, at any rate, that they do not see as we poor mortals do, but as the artist does. If he succeeds in proving this, he, then, has to explain how it is that birds of prey manage to find the wherewithal to satisfy their hunger. So much for Mr. Thayer's first principle. We have now to consider his second epoch-making discovery—that the animals which we in our ignorance believe to be conspicuous are nothing of the kind when seen in their natural surroundings. "Whence," asks Thayer, "came that old erroneous assumption that bright-coloured creatures and those with bold, sharp patterns are, of course, conspicuous in their own homes?" According to him the only way to render a tropical creature inconspicuous amid "its brilliant and minutely patchy background," is for it to be coloured "brightly and patchily in the highest degree."

"Brilliantly changeable or metallic colours" he continues, "are usually supposed to make the birds that wear them conspicuous, but nothing could be further from the truth. Iridescence is, indeed, one of the strongest factors of concealment. The quick-silver-like intershifting of many lights and colours, which the slightest motion generates on an iridescent surface, like the back of a bird or the wing of a butterfly, destroys the visibility of that back or wing as such and causes it to blend inextricably with the gleaming and scintillating labyrinthine-shadowed world of wing—swayed leaves and flowers." This is simply high-sounding nonsense. To us non-artistic mortals the beautiful little purple sunbird looks exceedingly conspicuous as it flits, butterfly-like, from flower to flower, robbing each of its hidden stores of honey. As to "veritable pictures of more or less distant landscape" being painted on the plumage of showy-looking birds, we may ask what kind of landscape is painted on the common Indian crow. This is a legitimate question, because the crow is subject to attacks by the larger raptorial birds, as, for example, Bonelli's eagle, and so seems to require obliterative colouring to the same extent as any other bird. Moreover, Mr. Thayer insists that obliterative colouring is a universal attribute of animal life. Even if a bird is difficult to distinguish when hopping about among the foliage, we are not necessarily justified in setting that bird down as an example of obliterative colouring. As Mr. Beddard has pointed out, sixpenny pieces are not protectively coloured, nevertheless it is often not easy to find one of these coins that has been dropped on the carpet. The eye fails to distinguish the sixpence amid the complicated pattern woven into the carpet.

It may be asked, why deign to take notice of so outrageous a theory? The reply is that the theory is worthy of notice because it contains a modicum of truth. Like those of protective colouration and mimicry it is outrageous when carried to an extreme length.

Very brightly coloured creatures are not necessarily conspicuous in their natural surroundings. Some showily-plumaged birds blend wonderfully with their environment. Not a few creatures are clothed in such a way that their colouring largely counteracts the effects of light and shade; such may be truly said to be examples of obliterative colouration. Others harmonise so well with their surrounding as to leave little doubt that they are protectively coloured. Again, others mimic such inanimate objects as twigs and leaves closely and thereby possibly deceive their foes sometimes. Any characteristic which tends to make an organism inconspicuous is probably of benefit to that organism and is likely to be perpetuated and perfected by natural selection.

On the other hand, it is necessary to bear in mind that few, if any, birds rely exclusively on protective colouration as a means of defence. When we learn more about the effect of external conditions—sunlight, heat, damp and the like—on animal colouring, it is not improbable that we shall find that these external influences tend to cause creatures to assume the hue of their environment.

We all know how transparent jelly-fish, medusae, and other pelagic organisms are. This water-like appearance cannot be a case of protective or obliterative colouring because there are embedded in the transparent tissue of all these creatures, and often highly coloured organs, which render them inconspicuous.

It is, further, interesting to notice that some creatures which assimilate most closely in colouring to their surroundings are precisely those which stand least in need of protective colouring. The sandgrouse and the houbara afford striking examples of these. They are almost invisible in their sandy habitat, but they are so swift on the wing as to be immune from the attacks of raptorial birds.

The fact that many birds are sexually dimorphic shows how little the fowls of the air need protective colouring. The white cock paradise flycatcher (Terpsiphone paradisii) shares equally with the more sombre chestnut coloured hen, the duties of incubation, and they build an open nest so that the sitting bird is well exposed to the view of all passers by. The easiest way of finding the nest of this species is to look out for the long white streamers of the sitting cock.

In Australia a pure white goshawk flourishes along side of the common grey species; both feed upon the same kind of prey. It is absurd to contend that each of these dissimilar birds is obliteratively coloured.

The colour of an animal depends upon a large number of factors. In many cases it appears to be correlated with strength and vitality. Thus, as Mr. Frank Finn has pointed out, gamecocks, which are artificially selected for their combativeness, are very rarely speckled; speckled plumage being in some way inimical to the fighting quality.

In numerous instance sexual selection comes into play.

The benefit derived from an inconspicuous hue is doubtless a factor in the colouring of many species, and sometimes a very important factor. These and many other forces play upon the plastic organism and the resultant of these contending forces is the appearance which the animal actually presents. To single out one of these forces, ignoring all the rest, and to try to maintain that upon this alone depends the colouring of all living creatures is a most unscientific proceeding and one likely to bring zoology into disrepute among those who are not content to have their thinking done for them.

The Theatre.

THE LONDON COMEDY COMPANY.

THE London Comedy Company brought their season to a close on Monday night, having by special arrangement taken the new Empire Theatre for their grand farewell performance. The huge crowd which filled our largest play house made eloquent testimony to the popularity of Mr. Ward, Miss Palotta, and their fellow artistes with the Calcutta public. Every seat was taken, many extra chairs were provided and numbers of people stood throughout the performance, while the audience was most enthusiastic throughout. "The New Clown," which has been the favourite play during their stay, was staged for the last time and most of the musical numbers which had been popular during the season were interpolated. The company were seen at their best, the house rocked with irrepressible laughter, while the reception accorded to the extra turns was of the heartiest and the fall of the curtain at the close of the long performance was the signal for a burst of enthusiasm such as has been seldom witnessed in a Calcutta theatre. The curtain rose again on the entire company and in response to repeated calls for a speech, Mr. Ward came forward. He thanked the public for their generous patronage during his stay and paid a warm tribute to the members of his company for the magnificent manner in which he had been supported by them.

Mr. Ward's decision to exploit the East on his way to Australia was indeed a stroke of luck for Calcutta. He brought a first class combination—all star artistes in their way, whose versatility has been displayed time and again. They were equally at home in light farcical comedy, emotional drama or vaudeville and it is long since such an all-round good Company has visited 'the Ditch." They carry with them the good wishes of Calcutta play-goers, who hope for a return visit when the Australian tour is concluded.

THE RUGBY FOOTBALL CRISIS.

THE refusal of the Scottish Football Union to play England in the Rugby International match which was to take place on 20th March, and which naturally caused a great sensation in the British rugby football circles is not the first time that the Scots have played a disturbing part in the rugby world, but there can be no doubt that it is regarded as very serious.

As might be expected, it is the bogey of professionalism which has caused all the bother. The Scottish Union has ever been a stickler for the purity, from an amateur point of view, of those clubs and players connected with the game. When the New Zealanders visited England they upheld their principles, even to the extent of giving the "All Blacks" the whole of the gate proceeds taken at the International between New Zealand and Scotland at Inverleith.

Colonial tours and Colonial players are not very accessible to the Scottish authorities, and the Australians, whose tour in England has almost ended, are in a measure the cause of the whole trouble. The Scottish committee have only now learned that the members of the New Zealand team which visited England in 1905, received an allowance of a guinea per week per man in addition to full expenses, and that the Australian players received a like allowance. These constitute, in the opinion of the Scottish committee, professionalism.

The attitude of the Scottish Union is explained by the following letter which its secretary forwarded to the various clubs under its control. The letter says:—

"I am instructed by my committee to inform you that they much regret to intimate to the English Union that Scotland cannot fulfil its fixture with England on 20th March next. The immediate cause of this serious decision is that my committee have only now learned in response to their request of 12th October 1907, for the accounts of the New Zealand which visited this country in 1905, that each member of that team, in addition to being allowed every possible expense, received an 'allowance' of a guinea per week for himself. At the same time they have learned that the players of the Australian team received a like 'allowance.'

"These 'allowances' being cash payments which the players can either spend or save, my committee are unhesitatingly and unanimously of opinion that they are contrary to the principles of Amateur Rugby football, and in short amount to professionalism."

The English Union have written to the Scottish Union under date 21st December 1908, stating that these 'allowances' have been made with the approval of the English committee."

The secretary, Mr. Smith, refers to the visit of the New Zealand team in the season 1905-06, and states that £1,710-2-5 was handed over to these.

When the question of sending a British team to New Zealand in 1908 was raised, the Scottish Union refused to allow any of its members to join, though a Scottish player was invited. The accounts of the tour show that £1,000 had been expended in "daily allowance" made to the players. The letter continues:—"In our opinion, players are entitled to receive generous treatment in the way of travelling and hotel expenses more especially in the case of an extended tour, but your committee never can act in sympathy with anybody which approves of actual cash payments to players by way of 'daily allowance' or otherwise. Only after the gravest considerations did your committee take the serious step of declining to fulfil our fixture with England."

Mr. Smith says in conclusion that his committee wish to express their opinion that extended tours, where a proportion of the gate is played for, import an element into the game which is decidedly harmful, and is foreign to its best traditions.

The commmittee think that the financial aspect has of late entered too largely into the consideration of recent tours, with the lamentable result that the friendly relationship between the two oldest Rugby Football Unions in the World have been abruptly terminated.

The attitude of the Scottish Union is thus clearly and unmistakeably outlined. After the match between England and Wales had been decided an effort was made by the Emergency Committee of the English Union to patch up the difference, but according to the latest mail advices they had not made much headway in this respect, but that they show signs of having had enough of this matter of expenses is demonstrated by their determination to submit the matter to the consideration of a special meeting of the International Board. Whether Scotland will acquiesce in discussing the question before that congress remains to be seen. The possibilities are that they will do so on one condition—that England will for the future disapprove of the "payments" to players, for of a surety Scotland will never approve of them.

It is believed that Scotland will not stick out for submitting the matter to a meeting of the International Board for there is no doubt that even in England there is objection to these "payments" and there is every probability of them carrying their point. They have acted fairly and squarely in the matter, whereas on the other side there has been merely a tendency to wriggle out of the corner into which the Scots were fixing them. Let there be a calm discussion of the matter by the four countries; a little give as well as take by England and by Scotland. And let there above all things be a guarantee that the International engagements will not be interferred with as a consequence of this business, unless, of course, one of the countries fails to accept the views of the other delegates in meeting assembled. That country can then make the best of its position.

But we are convinced that an International Congress can settle this bother, and that in the future there will be no "payments" of pocket money to players on tour. These can be obviated; there is no necessity for them if the men are the guests of the Union responsible for their reception.

One thing is certain and that is that a more serious matter than "payments" is likely to come before the next meeting of the International Board. The alterations of the rules of the game suggested by the New Zealand Rugby Union, and said to have been approved by Mr. G. Harnett, will have to be discussed. These are so antagonistic to the spirit of the game as understood in England that two of the countries are certain to object to them, and if they be not approved, then Hey for the independance of New Zealand and professionalism! This is coming in the Dominion, for there has been writing on the wall. Australia has been asked to support New Zealand, so that the Colonial problem is only being introduced. What it will be like when it has developed goodness knows. The Scottish Union are awake to the situation and prepared for great happenings. Are the other Unions so prepared?

AUTOMOBILES AND HUNTING.

The question of the moment with hunting folk in England, is that of the Automobile. A year or two ago, the number which attended the meets were comparatively insignificant, but of late it has increased by leaps and bounds, and now about half the people who hunt use motor-cars, while scores of people who do not hunt—in the ordinary sense of the term—drive in their cars to the meets, and then attempt to see as much of the sport as possible. The upshot is that masters of hounds all over the country are taking action in the matter; the two latest being Lord FitzHardinge and Mr. Selby Lowndes (of the Whaddon Chase).

Members of the various hunts will, of course, do as they are told in other words, they will send their autos home after they have left them, but the trouble is that the roads are free to everyone, and that some of the offending motors are those of non-hunting folk. Mr. Lowndes puts the matter very emphatically, stating that "on no consideration whatever" will he have motors following hounds about the roads from one covert to another; heading foxes, starting second horses, and rendering those sportsmen, who from infirmity or other causes, are compelled to follow hounds in horse drawn vehicles uncomfortable and unsafe.

What Mr. Lowndes says is perfectly true. The automobile is right enough when driven at a reasonable pace, on a high road, but it is out of place when following hounds. It is not only that the motor if seen will head a fox, but the noise and smell will frighten him long before he sees the actual car, and will very likely cause him to turn back into hounds' mouths. But there is an even stronger reason for the suppression of motors as followers of hounds than the fact that they head foxes, and that is, that farmers generally have the greatest objection to them. In the summer all the crops, which are near to a main road are more or less injured by the dust, and in the winter the country roads are cut up by the hounds-following car. Worst of all from the farmer's point of view, the rates have gone up considerably owing to the increased cost of maintenance of roads, and as the farmer pays heavy rates, and the automobilist does not directly contribute to the upkeep of the roads he injures, the former has a distinct grievance. In these days it is, of course, out of the question to ask hunting folk not to attend meets in motor-cars, but it is only fair that the wishes of masters of hounds should be respected as to what may be done after the meet, and if the master objects to the cars going on it is quite certain that he has ample reason for doing so.

So far hunting in the old country to judge by the mail advices to hand has not been productive of very great sport. Followers of one or two of the better known packs, however, have experienced some long and exhilarating runs, one of the best of which lasted two hours and a quarter without a check and finished with an exciting kill. This merry spin fell to the lot of a select field while following Sir William Cooke's hounds, and it was a case of "bellows to mend" with a vengeance at the conclusion for Sir William Cooke's country, which lies in a very sporting part of Yorkshire is a stiff one and includes a great variety of country. There is vale land, on the northern banks of the Yorkshire Derwent, where formidable drains have to be jumped, a lighter upland district, mostly grass, and a great deal of moorland beyond. There are, too, certain very big woodlands, Raincliffe, Forge Valley, and Hackness to wit, and in this part of the country very steep hills have to be climbed. Sir William Cooke's country is, in all probability, a part of one of the oldest hunts in the Kingdom, for it is one of several hunts which once formed the country of the second Duke of Buckingham, who lived the greater part of his life in the North Riding, and spent much of his time in hunting.

That he hunted buck more often than fox is exceedingly likely, but, anyhow, his hunting operations extended over what are now known as the Sinnington, Sir William Cooke's and the Bilsdale countries, and it is quite possible that the Farmdale and Goathland counties were also included in his district. In 1695 the Duncombe family purchased the Helmsley estate—the present Lord Helmsley, is one of the joint masters of the Sinnington—and carried on the hunt, and, shortly afterwards, though the exact date is not known, a hunt club was established, one of the rules of which was that every member of the hunt not up at the kill was fined five shillings. During the eighteenth century the Sinnington and Sir William Cooke countries were—as far as can be gathered—united, but just 100 years ago, Mr. R. Johnson Hill of Thornton near Pickering formed a new pack to hunt the country between Pickering and the Derwent, going east as far as Scarborough.

Mr. Hill was in office nearly fifty years and was succeeded by his son Mr. John Hill, who retired in 1862, selling his hounds to the Duke of Grafton. This Mr. Hill bred a famous pack whose blood is greatly valued to the present day, and his son, Mr. Robin Hill, hunted the hounds during the recent mastership of Sir Everard Cayley. Between the Hill and Cayley masterships—a period of nearly forty years—Mr. Harcourt Johnstone, now Lord Derwent and his son Captain Francis Johnstone, hunted the country in turns. After Sir Everard Cayley, Mr. Penn Sherbrooke was master for two seasons and thus, whereas the Hills and the Johnstones were masters for ninety-two years there have been four fresh masters since 1900. Sir William Cooke is a great kennel man, and has been a fairly big buyer of high priced lots at recent Rugby sales. He had the Beaufort draft, too, the year before last, but was unlucky with these particular hounds. He carries the horn himself as he did in the Ledbury country.

A certain humourist, who is, as a rule, extremely averse to social functions, was induced to attend a "literary" dinner given in honour of a novelist. He had been told off to take into dinner the sister of the host, an excellet woman, though anything but "literary." The conversation touching upon the beauties of Chaucer, about whom a certain set was then cultivating a fad, a spirited discussion ensued, during which the bewildered sister caught from time to time only the name "Chaucer." At last she whispered to the humourist. "Who is this Mr. Chaucer they're talking about so much? Is he very popular in Society?" "Madam," solemnly responded the other, "that man did something that for ever shuts him out of Society." "Heavens?" exclaimed the worthy dame," and what was that? "He died a few hundred years ago."

Sporting & Athletic Notes.

News of the Civil Service Cup is filtering through from Lucknow, and one learns that the country-bred Bob Major, who had no business in a race of that class at all, was largely responsible for the result. The brute trod on Bonita II. at the gate, taking a large piece out of her leg and barged into both her and Devon, causing the latter to get away none too well and absolutely stopping the former, so that Bonita got some 15 lengths the worst of the start and her chances of a place had gone from the time the barrier went up. Manley has been blamed for getting a bad start on Devon, and it is well to make public the fact that the country-bred was solely responsible for this. At the finish The Point seemed to win very easily, and they say that the further he went the better he seemed to like it.

Mr. T. S. Smith, the popular pilot, has purchased Morino. We hear that the price paid was Rs. 4,000, at which she should be a profitable buy. Pineal, that well-known steeplechase pony, is to be sold by auction at Cook's to-day.

The entries for the Sixth Extra are good numerically. Curzon Plate 30, Outram Plate 27, Cone Plate 7, Bengal Plate 25, Lansdowne Plate 14, but on examination it is found that 29 of these are duplicate entries, making a nett entry of 74 in the five races. Further, the terms of the races have permitted animals of such widely differing calibre to be entered in the various events that it will be impossible to handicap them so as to bring them together at racing weights, and many scratchings may be looked for on that score, so that altogether we do not look forward to very big fields on Saturday, though the racing need not be any the worse for that.

There was a very interesting sporting course out in the Jodhpore country on Friday last and a very good crowd turned out to gallop round it. Competition for places was keener than ever and the pace was so hot that poor old Fairy was for once right out of it, and even Lord Harry, who is showing signs of his hard season's work on the hard bumpy going, could only get fourth. The judges could not separate Fermoy and Trilby in the Horse Chase and gave the result as a dead heat. As Fairy was unplaced the Average Cup is now practically a certainty for Lord Harry.

There was another very fine finish in the Pony Chase, which, however, was marred by an unfortunate accident. Marconi was first over the last hurdle, then came Emerald, Ungava and Meprise, all close together, the latter travelling very fast and looking certain to be second at least. As they landed over the jump Ungava, who seemed to go where she pleased, swerved and cannoned right into Meprise knocking her over. Mr. Ballantyne was rendered unconscious for some minutes but was soon up again none the worse except for a bad shaking and the cruelly bad luck which deprived him of all chance of the Average Cup.

The following is the order:—Horses: Lord Francis Scott on Fermoy and Captain Gibbs on Trilby dead heat for 1st place; Captain Stewart on Merman, 3; Captain Holden on Lord Harry, 4; Mr. Perkins on Dalgai, 5; Mr. Morris on Blue Bell II., 6, folllowed by Mr. Symons on Rusticate, Messrs. Damiano, Winkworth, Ballantyne, Corbett, Hill, Stokes, etc.

Ponies: Mr. Charrington on Marconi, 1; Mr. Tanner on Emerald, 2; Mr. Muir on Ungava, 3; Captain Holden on Pathfinder II., 4; Mr. Cowper on Envious, 5; Mr. Tegart on Sheila, 6, followed by Messrs. Radmore, Deakin, Steven, Macrae, Hutchison and Corbett.

Very special interest attached to the Ladies' Paperchase Cup this season as competition among the ladies has been so keen, and it was known that a large and well mounted field would be going out. Of the thirteen entries Mrs. Dangar, who unfortunately had not fully recovered the effects of her accident out pigsticking, was the only non-starter, and twelve gallant horsewomen lined up to take the word "go" from Lord Minto, who despatched the field on this great occasion. The start was by the "Grand Stand" over a hurdle and the course came back over the bund country round by the Tollygunge Lane and finished over the ladies' wall and a hurdle just the other side of the Grand Stand from the start. They were all well away, Mrs. Paris getting just a bit the best of it, but as they came to the hurdle Miss Harence shot ahead with a lead of a couple of lengths and they went into the jungle with that lady still leading. Miss Binning's mount refused the first hurdle and took no further part in the chase. The field next came into sight at the famous Grille, with Mrs. Paris leading about six lengths ahead of Mrs. Morgan and Mrs. Keighley, the rest well up. Pardon made a blunder at the first wall of the three and gave Miss Hayward a fall, luckily without doing any damage, but the horse went on and gave a lot of trouble to the other riders, eventually causing Mrs. Morgan to lose her chance of the chase. Coming to the ladies' wall Mrs. Morgan was ahead going easily while Mrs. Paris with her whip out on Ermine fought hard to keep near her. Then Pardon caused Trilby to baulk at the wall and Mrs. Morgan lost her stirrup; failing to get it again, she pulled up at the turn for home in sight of the winning post, and Mrs. Paris going on by herself won easily. It was very bad luck for Mrs. Morgan to get beaten by an accident so near home and everyone was sorry for her. Mrs. Paris' victory was immensely popular, however, as she has also had her full share of bad luck in this race in her time and she has tried so long to pull it off and always ridden so hard and with such a sporting spirit that all the world was greatly pleased to see her effort crowned with success at last. The following was the final order:—Mrs. Paris on Ermine, 1; Mrs. Keighley on Fermoy, 2; Mrs. Dods on Dainty, 3; Mrs. Walker on Sylvester, 4; Miss Collin on Kildare, 5; Miss Hasluck on Schoolboy, 6; followed by Miss Macrae on Honesty, Miss Harence on Sweetheart, Mrs. Stokes on St. Odille, Mrs. Morgan on Trilby (pulled up), Miss Hayward on Pardon (fell), Miss Binning on Black Douglas (refused).

The A.-D.-C.'s to the Viceroy were "at home" and gave a sumptuous chhota haziri in a big shamiana near the winning post.

The following are the important remaining fixtures of the Calcutta Paperchase season:—Pony Cup on Wednesday, 24th February; Paperchase Cup and Heavy Weight Cup on Saturday, the 6th March, with the Annual Dinner the same evening.

The Civil Service week at Lucknow this year has been a huge success. Four days of good racing were provided, while the Horse and Dog Shows, the polo tournament and the All-India Boxing Tournament have been among the most enjoyable of the sporting fixtures during the annual carnival. Full details will be found further on. Each has had its distinctive feature. The Horse Show attracted good entries this year, and the army competitors carried all before them, Captain Barrett and Major-General Sclater being most successful. The prize for the best horse in the Show was won by Major-General Sclater's Baron. The Dog Show was the first held in Lucknow, and though it did not meet with the support which was anticipated the executive must be congratulated on a good show, and it is hoped that next year their efforts will meet with greater success. It was expected that several of the dogs exhibited at Calcutta the previous week would be benched but only a few came up to Lucknow and the Maharajah of Jhind with his strong kennel practically swept the board. Of the special prizes presented by the N. I. K. A. the Maharajah won that for the best terrier in the Show. Lieutenant-Colonel Dawson's Clumber Spaniel, Rock Count, was the best sporting dog, and Mr. Clifford Batten's Great Dane Kadir Sanp the best non-sporting dog. The Boxing tournament drew large gatherings of interested spectators every evening and the fighting was perhaps the best seen in Lucknow of late years. The heavy weight contests provided some exciting bouts, the best being that between Sergeant Sutch of the Royal Dragoons and Corporal "Gypsy" Smith of the Lincolns, who has a big reputation. Sutch gave a splendid exhibition and was only beaten by a small margin of points after an extra round. The redoubtable "Gypsy" met his Waterloo in the final when Private Clohessy of the Munster Fusiliers knocked him about badly and the fight was stopped, the verdict going to Clohessy.

The Polo Tournament was won by the 15th Hussars, who beat the 17th Lancers by 9 goals to 2 after a closer game than the score would lead one to believe.

The Jorhat Races are to be held on the 9th, 11th and 13th of March. An excellent programme has been arranged and it is confidently expected that the meet will be a bumper one. Brown, the jockey, who rode with no little success at Tezpur and Dibrugarh, has temporarily settled at the latter place and is training Vanity Fair II., the champion pony of Assam, Opinion, who ran so well at Dibrugarh, Nettle Wing, and Gold Dust for Jorhat. Brown himself has taken Grey Lady (formerly owned by Captain Holden) on racing terms for the meet. Mr. "Charley" Holder will have a very strong hand with Glenlea, Repute, Magazine and the evergreen Topsy III. He is also looking after Ivy II., who is now the property of his brother, Mr. Ernest Holder. Eileen Alannah, Mr. P. L. Faulkner's little mare, will probably be sent too. Rumour hath it that the Hon'ble Mr. Henderson has two really good Irish ponies which will take some beating.

The Novice and Rajah Venugopaul Polo tournaments fixed to begin on the 6th and 13th instant, respectively, have been postponed owing to insufficient entries.

An interesting Polo tournament was recently played at Mhow. Seven teams had entered for the tourney. In the first round the 39th Central India Horse beat the Mhow Gymkhana by 6 goals to love: the Inniskilling Dragoons "B" team beat the Indore Gymkhana "B" team by 4 goals to 2, and the Indore Gymkhana "A" team beat the Inniskilling Dragoons "C" team by 4 goals to 2. The semi-finals were played off on the 28th ultimo when the Central India Horse had an easy victory over the Inniskilling Dragoons "B" and Indore went down before the Inniskillings "A" team by 9 goals to 2. A magnificent game was witnessed in the final between "A" team and the 39th Central India Horse on the 30th ultimo. The close of the last chukker found the score 4 all, but play was continued and the Inniskillings scored the winning goal.

The Q. O. Corps of Guides have inaugurated a polo tournament to be held annually at Mardan and have put up a hundred-guinea Challenge Cup for competition. This with a view to encouraging polo among young players and the tournament is only open to teams of subalterns from any corps belonging to the first or second divisions or to regiments of the old Frontier Force. Any two Indian regiments thus qualified as well as batteries of a brigade of artillery may combine to form a team. This year the tournament begins on the 8th March, entries closing on the 15th instant.

We regret to report the death at Quetta on the 4th instant of Captain L. G. M. Harcourt of the Supply and Transport Corps. Captain Harcourt had been ill but a short while and death was due to exhaustion following on malarial fever and jaundice. He was Honorary Secretary to the Quetta Hunt Club and was very popular in the station.

Our Umballa correspondent writes: We are experiencing bright and cold weather; no rain has fallen which is unusual during the Bengal Cavalry week, and there has been rather too much wind and dust to make either polo or tent-pegging very pleasant. There were three falls during the first day's play, but I am glad to say no harm was done to either riders or ponies. The Umballa polo grounds seems to be the favourite resort of all the pi dogs in the place, and while polo is going on one is apt to think a dog show is in progress at the same time, then in addition to the pi dogs you find Great Danes and all manner of dog-flesh, and some day there will be an accident; in the meantime a man with a gun is badly needed. There are good entries for the races and 20 teams in for the Tent-pegging. Thirteen teams have entered for the polo; details of play in the first round will be found further on.

Reuter wires the defeat of Alfred Shrubb by Longboat in a Marathon Race at New York last week. After his excellent performance in the twelve-mile race at Madison Square Garden on the 9th January, when he beat three of America's speediest men, Shrubb was confidently expected to beat Longboat. But from the scanty details to hand we see that after being eight laps ahead at the twenty-first lap the Britisher became distressed and walked while Longboat sprinting drew level at the twenty-fifth lap and subsequently won, Shrubb collapsing. We await further details with interest.

It is rumoured that Shrubb is matched to run Albert Aldridge in London in the spring. Aldridge, it will be remembered, captured all the big amateur prizes and long distance championships in 1905 while Shrubb was in New Zealand.

We have to thank Messrs. Traill and Co. for a copy of the neat calendar for 1909 issued by the Ellams Duplicator Co. Messrs Traill and Co. are controlling agents in India and hold enormous stocks of all the goods of this firm who are world-famous for the manufacture of Duplicators—both rotary and flat—carbons, ribbons, stencil papers and inks for all machines. These are used by H. M. Government, municipalities, district boards and commercial houses all over India.

The final game in the Lansdowne Hockey tournament at Rawalpindi resulted in a win for "E" Company the Royal Munster Fusiliers. They defeated the Band, Royal Sussex Regiment by 2 goals to 1, the winning point being scored during extra time.

The N.-W. Railway Football tournament was concluded at Lahore on the 4th instant when the Black Watch defeated the South Lancashire Regiment, Right half Battalion by 1 goal to nil in the final.

An extraordinary incident occurred on the 16th January in the course of a Northern Union League match at Huddersfield, between the home team and York. During the second half of the game a blizzard, accompanied by thunder and lightning, came on, and after it had been in progress some time, Moore, the York full back, had to go off the field, one of his arms having become frozen owing to the intense cold!

It is really rather surprising how much you can do and yet remain a golfing amateur, remarks Mr. Horace, Hutchinson. You can do more within the law than the custom of the game allows. For instance, it is only in "open competition" that you must not, on pain of losing amateur rank (if that be worth having), receive a money prize. In custom we go through all sorts of forms and ceremonies rather than receive a money prize, even in restricted competitions. The nearest approach to the receipt of the actual money which custom sanctions is the permission given to the winner of the prize to "buy himself something" and produce the receipted bill, in exchange for which the secretary will give him a cheque. Are these gnats that we strain at, or veritable malarial mosquitoes; and, in either case, are we swallowing camels? Perhaps we are, but even if such criticism as this be taken to imply that the present amateur definition is not without possible flaws, that is not to say that we should of necessity do much better if we tried amendment. I do not see why we should expect counsels of perfection from our golf committees any more than from our Parliaments and our Cabinets. Apropos this taking of money prizes, the story may bear repetition of the gallant old baronet—deceased, alas!—who once won 5s. as half of the third sweepstakes on a monthly medal day at Wimbledon. Never having won anything before he asked the leave of the committee to add some more money to it and buy himself a memento, which leave being graciously accorded, he presently purchased himself a golden eagle writing stand for £100, adding £99 15s. to the original prize, and showed it off to all comers as "my golf prize." Of course, they gaped in open-eyed admiration, saying "My word, you must be a player!" Yet no man ever accused this good sportsman of being a professional golfer—not even those who had never seen him play.

THE International Football match between Wales and Scotland at Edinburgh on Saturday last ended in the defeat of Scotland by 5 points to 3. Wales have now won 11 times, Scotland 13, while the game in 1885 was a pointless draw.

THE first round of the Bengal-Punjab Football Tournament has resulted as follows:—

12th Royal Lancers beat the Black Watch 2-1, after drawn game.

King Shropshire L.I. beat Royal Irish Regiment, 4-1.

Lancashire Fusiliers beat Cameronians 2-1.

Royal Warwickshire Regiment beat Seaforth Highlanders, 1-0.

North Staffordshire Regiment beat Gloucestershire Regiment, 2-0.

Royal Berkshire Regiment beat "T" Battery, R.H.A., 1-0.

The Connaught Rangers beat King's Dragoon Guards, 2-1.

17th Lancers a bye.

The eight winning teams will compete at Umballa, 1st to 6th March.

THE dates for the coming Test matches between England and Australia, and the grounds, have now been finally settled, as follows:—

1st Test: Thursday, 27th May (Birmingham).
2nd Test: Monday, 14th June (Lords).
3rd Test: Thursday, 1st July (Leeds).
4th Test: Monday, 26th July (Manchester).
5th Test: Monday, 9th August (The Oval).

Three days only will be allowed for each match: in the event, however, of an equal number of victories, the last match will be played to a finish.

HIS EXCELLENCY LORD KITCHENER leaves Calcutta to-morrow for Naraingunge viâ the Sunderbans. He is to be the guest of the Kumar Bahadur of Bhowal on a shoot in the Bhowal jungles near Kashipur.

THE Royal Scots Regimental Boxing Tournament recently concluded at Colaba attracted a large number of spectators, naval, military and civilian on each evening. The Hon. A. Hill Trevor officiated as referee and Messrs. Mellor and La Touche were judges. Some good bouts were witnessed, the results of the final being as follows:—Middle Weights: Pte. Wallace (54) beat Bandsman Eagles. Light Weights: Pte. Wallace (54) beat Pte. Boyes. Bantam Weights; Pte. Wallace (73) beat Pte. Rainbird. Feather Weights: Bandsman Evans beat Pte. McVey. Boys: Boy Pickersgill beat Boy Gorman. A couple of special contests on the last night excited considerable interest. In the first A. B. Lewis of H. M. S. Hyacinth beat Sergt. Piper Duff of the Royal Scots and in the other Stoker Higgs met A. B. Mileham, both of the Hyacinth. This was a spirited affair with a good deal of hard nitting, Mileham giving in after three rounds. Brigadier-General Greenfield, commanding the Bombay Brigade, gave away the prizes at the conclusion of the tournament.

A TELEGRAM to the Evening Standard, dated San Francisco, 20th January, says:—

James J. Jeffries, the undefeated retired heavy weight champion pugilist of the world, who is now living at Los Angeles, California, has been bombarded with requests from all parts of the world to fight Jack Johnson, in order to restore the heavyweight championship to the white race.

"Big Jim" has issued the following statement:

"Just a few words in connection with the demands that I should attempt to retake the title that Tommy Burns yielded up to Jack Johnson, the negro heavyweight.

"I do not intend to fight again. I have burned up many dollars in telegraph tolls during the past few weeks, telling different people in all parts of the country that I did not intend to re-enter the ring. The public seem inclined to doubt my sincerity. It seems as if every man was saying, 'Quit your joking, Jeff. When are you going to whip this negro and win back the title?'

"They seem to take it for granted that all I have to do is to get my hair cut, jump the rope about two weeks, put on a pair of boxing gloves, and go and maul the life out of Johnson. They never stop to think that I have been out of the game for over four years, during which time a gymnasium has had the least of my attention.

"I never will fight again. If a promoter were to offer me £10,000 for my end—win, lose, or draw—I would say no. I have enjoyed my ring career, and it has been finished. I am now enjoying a title that no boxer ever held before, and possibly never will hold after me. I have my home, my wife, my business, my health, and my friends. I am not rich, but I have all the money I need, and will never want for anything.

"If it were more money I was after I would not have to fight for it. I have rejected a fortune in theatrical offers during the year 1908.

"Another thing, I do not believe that the public wants to see me come out of retirement. I believe that they would rather point to me as I am—the retired and undefeated champion. I did not give the title to Jack Root, Marvin Hart, or anybody else. When I retired I took the title with me.

"As to the well-meaning people who believe I could go back into the ring in a few days and whip Jack Johnson, I may say I am not the Jim Jeffries of four years ago.

"I have smoked every day, and have kept late hours. My place of business closes at one o'clock in the morning and many times I am the last man to leave the establishment (a café). At the very least I would require six months, possibly a year, to get into any kind of condition.

"I whipped every heavy-weight in my day, and the majority of them I beat twice for good measure. I am a contented man, and I want to be left alone."

THE Punjab Lawn Tennis Tournament began on the 8th instant, when some good games were witnessed. Four ties were decided in the Men's Singles, the best being that between Captain W. H. Davies and J. C. S. Rendall, ending in a win for the latter; the scores were 6—5, 5—6, 2—6, 6—4, 6—4. Miss Deane and Mrs. Leslie Jones won their games in the Ladies' Singles and will meet in the final.

THE Calcutta Hockey League Tournament will commence on the 22nd instant and the following committee have been appointed by the B.H.A. to supervise the tournament:—Messrs. E. Studd, F. H. Reynolds, T. H. Richardson, A. B. Rosser, S. N. Bose, A. P. Candler (ex-officio), and N. R. Bhattacharjee (ex-officio).

The entries for the competition are as follows:—

A Division.—1 Sibpur, 2 Customs, 3 C.F.C., 4 St. Xavier's, 5 Dalhousie, 6 Rangers, 7 Rovers, 8 E. I. R., 9 B.-N. R., 10 10th Jats, 11 Medicals, 12 Mohan Bagan, 13 Y.M.C.A., and 14 Caledonia.

B Division.—Medicals (B), Oriental Sporting, Mahomedan Sporting, Free School (O.B.), La Martinière, Sporting Union, Town Club, Y. M. C. A. (Am.) and City Athletic.

THE Lansdowne cricket Shield for competition among local schools has this year been won by St. Xavier's College. They defeated the Medical College in the final by an innings and 101 runs and thus stopped the long run of victories of the Medicos who have won the shield for eight successive years.

AT the Annual General Meeting of the Calcutta Rowing Club last Friday Mr. H. Claughton was elected captain for the coming season, with Messrs. Cameron, Tassie, Hales and Williams as committee. Mr. H. B. Ridley continues in the office of Honorary Secretary and Messrs. F. G. Dumayne and C. W. N. Graham were re-elected President and Vice President respectively.

THE Golf competition, for the Dean Cup, will take place at Peshawar during the week commencing the 22nd instant. It will be open to all amateurs residing in the Frontier Province.

MESSRS COOPER AND CO., Chemists and Mineral Water Manufacturers of this city, have sent us a neat desk calendar for 1909, which is unique in its arrangement as the figures appear only once, the week days being shown in columns below.

OUR Poona correspondent writes: Some progress was made with the Alderson Hockey Tournament at Poona last week.

First the holders of the Divisional Tournament Cup, the 66th Punjabis continued in winning vein and beat the 123rd Rifles by 2 goals to 1. In the other the 3rd Sappers and Miners just got home by a goal to nil from the 79th Carnatics.

OUR Bombay correspondent writes:—The last extra before the Big Meet was quite a festive affair with most of the pick of the jockeys present as well as up-country trainers, including Jack and Tom Scott, Ferguson, Firth, etc. Racing was also good with some close finishes. Quite a pretentious affair is being put up in the corner between the three furlongs and distance which presumably will act as a watch tower for Stewards, reached by a spiral staircase.

As might have been expected, the opening race, a half mile Selling Plate for new Arabs, was the poorest race of the day. Hachal was a hot favourite from First Class and Tunhazar, and won as he liked from the other two in that order, though the latter eased and was passed by Milbis; three lengths, four lengths shows what a finish it was.

CONTINUING with new ones, the Extra Plate was divided and provided a great finish. First Thuvil and Royal Standard commanded the market with Bailey and King Henry next. King Henry was first away, allowed Brukat, Middleman and Gulshafel to pass him but came into the lead again entering the straight. The favourites came at him later but he stayed on and Thuvil, whom Mr. M. G. bought this week, had again to put up with a second. In the other, confidence once more was shown in Tunis with Oomerkha[illegible] and perhaps the owner will now be satisfied that past disappointments have been due to the pony more than the jocks. Goldman was second fancy and looked a winner after following Thousand. The latter, however, stayed better this time, though had Goldman's rider not behaved as though he was trying to keep his seat on a circus donkey there can be no doubt to whom the race would have gone.

THE Consolation Plate for Horses had seven runners with The Rooster backed to twos on from Lady Metal and Pincher at fours and sixes. It was a splendid race, Paul Pry, watch this one, leading ahead from Lady Metal with The Rooster half a length off. The leader was passed by the other two at the bend and then the favourite went away. Opposite the stand Southall was seen putting in a great run on Pincher but Rickaby just managed to keep The Rooster in front, those who had bought money feeling none too comfortable.

SIXTEEN started for the Bandra Plate, a very open betting race with Reefat, Orby, Farick and Fitz the order. Muzloom, Holker and Diamond King led out but gave way to Virtuous Bay, Orby and Farick and the latter two promised to have the race between them. Orby took the lead and the rails at the bend, but here Reefat too was lucky to find an opening and came away almost as he liked, Hoodaib finishing a strong second. Reefat's late run last week behind Brutus prepared one for this and he would now be backed to beat the latter at those weights.

THAT there is no such thing as a "cert" on a race course was exemplified in the Andheri Plate when Dhafer looked as big a moral as could be found. There was nothing, however, to make the running and he having to make his own was the main cause of breaking his sequence of wins. Darianoor must be a rare sticker as, though under the whip at the bend, he came on to beat the favourite and stay out Moscow's run.

LASTLY the February Plate with only two, but the finest race of the day. Ashanti Gold was made favourite and drawing inside berth hung on about a head behind Hunting Horn. The latter went away by half a length later, but at the bend the favourite just passed him and looked a winner. Down the straight they were locked together and Hunting Horn getting his head in front at the stand won a grand race for himself and Evans, whose judgment was perfect with Bray, also making no mistake.

ALEC TAYLOR, who comes here with the reputation of North of England Champion, opened his Bombay season on Monday, giving away the usual 200 in 300 to Messrs. Young, Avery and Carnall. He was absolutely off his game, being both nervous and out of practice, so much so that at the conclusion he apologised to those present and offered them a free pass for his next exhibition.

THIS took place on Wednesday, again at Pyrke's, when he gave Mr. Avery 400 in 750. Even now he was by no means in form, though averaging 15 and making breaks of 40, 37, 54, 50, 34, 60 and 47, winning by 62. The amateur averaging 5·6 made 20, 17, 16, 14, 13, 12 and 10.

ONE does not feel incline to say much till Taylor is himself, beyond that he shows a mastery of the top table [illegible] me and a liking for "nurseries." His failure at [illegible] azard play was responsible for no big breaks.

London Week by Week.

FRIDAY, 22nd January 1909.

WINTRY weather has again displaced the nice Spring days in which we had been taking a fearful joy lately. Once more the blizzard has appeared and at the beginning of the week whole districts of the U. K. were lying under snow—feet deep in some places, according to reports. These uncomfortable happenings were spread over a range of country from Dorset to the Western Highlands and in the latter place the visitation was particularly severe. Again we read of snow-bound trains, passengers hungry, sleepless and semi-frozen and very angry; of storms inland and at sea; of British steamers wrecked in the heavy gales which have prevailed all round the coast; of a fish famine; of divers perilous adventures; of loss of life. An extraordinary incident occurred at Huddersfield where a footballer had his arms frozen while playing full back! In Ireland a moving bog overwhelmed many houses and killed hundreds of herds of cattle and flocks of sheep, while thirty-six hours rain up in the north of England caused floods which did terrible damage, whole towns being under water and an entire countryside being washed out.

London's share in the general discomfort was a big drop in temperature and for the third time since the beginning of the year a vicious thunderstorm with lightning which did damage—notably to the trees in an old churchyard not a hundred yards from where I write.

THAT unfortunate and universally respected nobleman, Lord Amherst, of Hackney, died in London last Saturday, after a few hours' illness. His name has been much before the public of late years in consequence of certain distressing circumstances, arising from the defalcations of a City solicitor, in which his lordship was involved to an enormous extent personally, and also in his capacity as a trustee. In consequence of these misappropriations Lord Amherst was compelled recently to sell by auction what was probably the finest library of early printed books and MSS. in the kingdom. The prices realised were magnificent, but perhaps he never recovered from the shock of losing objects which had become part and parcel of his daily existence. All who knew him will testify to his many admirable qualities. He was one of the best types of British country gentlemen, hospitable, adored by his tenants, who looked upon him as a warm friend, generous, and a real lover of learning and the fine arts. Our public life is the poorer by the loss of such a man, but at least he carries with him to the grave the esteem and regard of his countrymen. The fear will be present in many minds that the anxieties connected with this melancholy affair hastened the end of a noble life.

THE greatest name on the rolls of the Benchers of Gray's Inn is to be honoured with a statue. The model of Mr. Pomeroy's work shows us a seated figure of Bacon, in the ruff and hat of the elaborate fashion of his day, gazing at an open book on his knee; this, when finished, will stand on the turf of South Square, opposite the Benchers' entrance to the Hall. The site is well chosen, the dignified but irregular quadrangle makes the most fitting background that could be desired. There are too obvious arguments for placing the statue elsewhere—in the gardens, for instance, which were Bacon's creation and peculiar care, or in Gray's Inn Square, looking upon the house which covers the site of his chambers. But everyone knows that a lonely statue in a large garden is apt to suggest that its sculptor was looking for a place where his work would be in nobody's way, and in the large quadrangle with its unbroken lines of wall and window a statue would be crushed into insignificance.

LAST Saturday the centenary of the death of Sir John Moore at Corunna, was celebrated by a short memorial service at St. Paul's, conducted by Canon Newbolt and Canon Clarke. The permanent memorial to the great soldier is in the south transept and a large Union Jack formed a canopy over the sculpture, around which a number of wreaths were placed. A large floral tribute, composed of lilac, roses, and lilies of the valley intertwined with the regimental colours, bore the inscription, "To the memory of Sir John Moore, from the Officers of the 52nd Light Infantry, to the hero of Corunna, 16th January 1809-1909."

Amongst the laurel wreaths were those bearing the inscriptions, "Lieutenant-Colonel St. George Burton, and the other Officers of the 42nd Royal Highlanders, the Black Watch, to the hero of Corunna, 16th January;" "Warrant Officers and Sergeants of the 42nd Royal Highlanders;" "Officers of the 52nd Light Infantry;" "from Sir Frederick Young, in pious memory of the great military hero on the occasion of the celebration of the centenary of his death by the League of Young Britons, founded by Mrs. Henry Samuel." A Union Jack composed of violets, white chrysanthemums, and other flowers, was placed on the commemoration tomb by Mrs. Henry Samuel, who was present with her family.

THE rinking craze has sprung up again this season; many thousands of Londoners in their leisure hours have given themselves up almost entirely to the fascinating pastime of roller staking and Olympia, the "Rinkeries" and other resorts are densely crowded morning, noon and night. The wheel has London in its whirl and no one is in the movement who cannot outline eights on the outside edge: floors are being laid down north, south, east and west and skating Carnivals are announced everywhere. I suppose the eternal feminine is really at the root of the popularity of this revival: it knocks mixed bathing or waltzing into a cocked hat, there is a pleasure in teaching the prettiest girl of one's acquaintance how to rink, and in "silling out" there is all the fun without any of the disconcerting moments of discovery. At least so they tell me.

THE hundred and fiftieth birthday of the British Museum was lately celebrated with something approaching mild enthusiasm. The fiftieth anniversary of the foundation of the National Gallery occurred last Saturday and, barring a passing reference in The Times to the fact that we were the richer for another jubilee, few people seem to have taken any interest in the matter. The Times reminds us that the history of the National Portrait Gallery has been even less creditable to the nation's administrators than that of the older institution in Bloomsbury, where private generosity in the past has thrust inestimable treasures upon an unwilling Government. Most old Londoners will remember how the national portraits were meanly housed in the sheds that remained over from the Exhibition of 1862. When at last the long-threatened fire broke out, the authorities bundled the whole collection out of the way to Bethnal Green, hoping, no doubt, that no more would be heard of it.

Then came the private benefactor, Mr. Alexander, who gave £80,000 for a new building in a central place. It is to the shame of the Office of Works that Mr. Alexander's money was spent without any expression of gratitude for his generosity. The Prime Minister of the day must share the blame. Mr. Alexander asked for neither advertisement nor title, but it is understood that he quietly expressed a wish for a letter under the Queen's hand, as a receipt from the nation. He died without the matter having been considered worthy of bringing to the Sovereign's attention. Legend has it that the Tadpoles of the Office of Works thought him the same person as Sir Henry Tate.

INDIAN motorists may be interested to learn of the creation of a new College Chair. England, sometimes accused of lagging behind in the commercial race of the nations, is the first of the European countries to establish a professorship of motor-car engineering! The Merchant Venturers' Technical College, Bristol, claims the distinction of this progressive step, and to the chair of automobilism which it has founded it has elected Mr. William Morgan, B. Sc., of Coventry.

Some rather interesting statements relating to walking have recently been published. Giving evidence before the Royal Commission on Ancient Monuments, Mr. George Evans, a Welsh antiquary, said that he had walked 17,000 miles to satisfy his craving for the sight of historical monuments. It is a pity that Mr. Evans should have brought this creditable record into print. Such statements do but rouse the competitive spirit. To-day his poor figures are smothered by the achievements of a Major Walls, known to Fleet Street as an assessor of income-tax, and another and a more determined stroller in his vacation time. Between 1871 and 1907 he has walked, during his summer holidays alone, 27,500 miles. Last year, being sixty-five years of age, he added 780 miles to his figures, carrying bedding and provisions for the road in his knapsack. This seems good enough. I wonder how it would compare with some of the walking done in India by those religious mendicants who foot it from far down South to say Gowmukh, from the uttermost confines of the North-West Provinces to Juggernath or Madura—and do it on a scale of rations in relation to foot tons of energy expended, as a shovelful of coal might be to a 100 pound head of steam. I remember, many years ago, two faithful old punkah coolies, who ate my salt for several seasons. They used to walk down to Calcutta from beyond Delhi, arriving piceless, gaunt and goggle-eyed; at the end of six months grown sleek and affluent, they used to walk back—doing both weary tramps on a few pice worth of parched grain and a bunch or two of plantains so to speak. One cannot fail to marvel at the wonderful walking powers of natives if one stops for a moment to consider. The average European in Calcutta starts a hard day's snipe shooting with a substantial breakfast, a snack and a drink, may be, after a couple of hours on the jheel, then a good tiffin, and, at the end of the day a wash, clean linen, a few drinks and perhaps just another snack ere he trains home. His shikari and coolies, weighted with guns, cartridge bags, etc., have begun the day with a few pulls at the hookah, if they are lucky they may find a village near enough to the tiffin pitch to allow of an annas' worth of sweetmeats or a fistful of parched rice, another hasty smoke when the saheb is resting—and refreshing—in the afternoon, then home to platters of curry and rice, very often after over eighteen miles walking. And I know of no harder foot work than can be found on a Bengal snipe-jheel in September. Say, my old comrades of the paddy fields and smiters of the merry longbill, is the picture overdrawn?

Good news for the faculty! The Medical School of the London Hospital has recently been the recipient of a benefaction the provisions of which are in many respects unprecedented in this country. A sum of £20,000 has been placed in the hands of its trustees, who undertake to invest the money to the best advantage, and to pay the income yearly into the hands of three administrators selected by the donor. They are to spend it in the advancement of medical research, and the promotion of higher education in medicine. The administrators are the chairman, Mr. Sydney Holland, and two members of the acting staff of the hospital. It has been decided to spend this money on increasing the facilities for research, and not on the routine teaching of candidates for examination. The benefits derived from the gift will not be confined to students educated at the London Hospital, but will be open to qualified medical men from any part of the British Empire who are willing to give up their time to advancing medical knowledge within the walls of the London Hospital or College. It is undoubtedly true that young men, capable of doing good scientific and research work are often forced too soon into the routine of practice or teaching by the necessity of having to earn their livelihood. This fund will enable its administrators to free a certain number of carefully-selected men from this pecuniary anxiety, and thus enable them to apply themselves with whole-hearted devotion to any branch of research they may select. Even a small band of enthusiastic workers not only advances knowledge, but creates an atmosphere which favours fertility of thought and freshness of idea. The donor of this munificent gift wishes to remain anonymous.

There is a happy significance conveyed by the fact that the Grand Opera Syndicate have this year extended the English season beyond the lines experimented upon twelve months ago. In 1908 "The Ring" alone was given; but this time the season is to last a month, and not only will there be three cycles of "The Ring of the Niblung," but performances of "The Mastersingers," "Faust," and "Madame Butterfly." On Saturday night the season opened with a performance of "The Rhinegold," and it opened auspiciously. There was a house which in numbers, fashion, and enthusiasm was suggestive of the Grand Season, and the company were qualified to give a noteworthy rendering of Wagner's music. With Dr. Hans Richter again musical director, it goes without saying that the orchestra had been perfectly rehearsed, and it was the orchestra that contributed chiefly to the evening's delight.

Most of the chief parts are in the same hands as a year ago. Mr. Clarence Whitehill's performance as Wotan is too well known to call for extensive criticism, and it is only necessary to say that he was at his best. Mr. Walter Hyde, last year's Froh, appeared on Saturday as Loge, and sang with delightful finish and freshness; Mr. Thomas Meux was Alberich, Mr. Hans Bechstein was the Mime, Mr. Robert Radford Fasolt, Mr. Francis Harford Fafner, Miss Caroline Hatchard Wellgunde, and Mme. Edna Thornton Flosshilde. Each of these appeared in the same part last year, and each repeated the former success. Of the new-comers Mme. Gleeson-White was a forceful Fricka, and Miss Edith Evans was a pleasing Freia. The mounting was noticeable for the splendour of spectacle that has of late seasons distinguished Covent Garden, and the chorus sang with particular smoothness.

The series of Gilbert and Sullivan revivals at the Savoy continues to bring joy to Savoyards, ancient and modern, who greet each old favourite with a whole-hearted enthusiasm as remarkable as it is refreshing. "The Gondoliers" staged last Saturday was played to a crammed house, most of the best known numbers were encored to the echo, the artistes (both of the old brigade and the new) were greeted with affectionate warmth and at the end the man in charge of the curtain must have had a weary time.

For the most part the revival differed little from that of nearly two years ago; but a notable change was the appearance for the first time in his career of Mr. Rutland Barrington as Don Alhambra. In the brave days of old Mr. Barrington adorned the part of Giuseppe; but, as he explained to an interviewer the other day, the change is due to a change of figure—increasing weight has come with the increasing years. However, Mr. Barrington showed himself very much at home in his new part, playing with characteristic drollery. The new Giuseppe is Mr. Henry Lytton, who was in his finest form, while Mr. C. H. Workman won his accustomed triumph as the Duke of Plaza-Toro, and Miss Jessie Rose, Miss Elsie Spain, and Miss Louie Rene gave particularly good performances.

Mr. Rutland Barrington has lately been busy elsewhere than on the boards of the Savoy; he has been giving humorous expression to his views on encores. In the course of a lecture to the O. P. Club at the Criterion Restaurant the other night he said:—"My personal feeling is that an encore is a compliment to the artist, as well as the expression of a desire to have a repetition of something that has pleased, and I am by no means averse to getting encores. So much so that with very slight encouragement I would read the whole of this paper again." He had made enquiries and he found opinion pretty evenly divided as to the advantages and disadvantages of the encore. He did not consult his confreres in the matter, of course. They all detested encores—and were bitterly disappointed when they did not get them. (Laughter.)

The old meaning of "encore" was "Sing it again," but nowadays it meant usually "Sing something else—(hear, hear), the same tune if you like, but another verse." (Hear, hear and laughter.) This probably arose from the habit of modern lyric writers, who invariably had more to say than could be put into two or three verses, and left the audience to suppose that verses increased in interest as they increased in number. He was told by the first lady he consulted in regard to his lecture that she disapproved of encores because they must be such a tax on the artist. If that was so, the tax was met with a resignation denoting great nobility of character. They were often told with respect to encores that the audience would have their money's worth. But that was a misleading statement. The audience only paid to hear the thing once. (Hear, hear.) So they must look elsewhere for explanation of encores or discard the expression as ambiguous.

Who shall take the encores? Did it lie in the province of the musical conductor, who was formerly called the conductor, or in that of the artist. His view was that in the case of a solo the artist should decide—(cheers)—in the case of a concerted piece the matter should be left to the discretion of the conductor.

Not the least part of Mr. Barrington's paper was the good-humoured protest he made against the struggle which the artist of to-day has to get over the orchestra. Audience and artists alike, he said, shared the grievance of the strenuousness of the modern orchestral accompaniment. (Cheers.) The thing amounted really to a battle in which the overwhelming odds against him must end in the defeat of the singer. (Laughter.) Many composers recognised this danger, and it was strongly evidenced in the fact that the late Sir Arthur Sullivan took advantage of every opportunity to write unaccompanied quartettes, quintettes, and choruses—numbers which were among the most popular in the operas. (Cheers.) "The orchestra," concluded Mr. Barrington, cheerily, "has its chance in the overture and entr'actes—(laughter)—and, in my opinion, it ought at all times to be a lifebuoy of support for the singer, and not the foaming wave of melody beneath whose resistless force he or she must inevitably drown."

I quote these remarks of Mr. Barrington's in the belief that they will provoke reflections among members of the Simla and Calcutta A. D. S. and the many hill station amateurs, who read The Indian Field. I know the subject of encores may be variously regarded by the Anglo-Indian amateur accordingly as he or she may be playing or singing in the exhilarating heights of Simla or Mussoorie or attempting to do either in Calcutta on a sweltering night in the rains.

Very serious drama has displaced farce at the Vaudeville Theatre. Mr. Rudolf Bessier's three-act play with a purpose—"Olive Latimer's Husband"—treats of the tragedy of the worldly marriage, but though it has decided literary and artistic merit it has some glaring faults, chief among which is its utter unreality, it is also weak and often fails to get a real dramatic grip of things. Olive Latimer has abided by her parents' wishes and married a rich man whom she does not love. She has "gone wrong" with her husband's oldest friend, and Latimer has discovered her sin. As he lies dangerously ill with typhoid fever she refrains from awakening a sleeping nurse in order that he may be prevented from recovering. Latimer, perceiving her purpose, writes a letter to his wife's lover, Sir Charles Weyburn, by this exertion making his death inevitable. His wife believes this letter to be framed to keep herself and Sir Charles for ever apart, and she does her best to keep him from reading it; but when at last the letter is read it proves to be one of forgiveness, Latimer blaming himself for all the unhappiness and unfaithfulness that the marriage has produced, and in the end Olive is left, awake at last, to her dead husband's worth, declaring that she will remain true to him.

Now, Olive Latimer's husband never appears in the play. He is only heard of. And because such hearsay makes him out to be a remarkably fine fellow, and the junior of his wife's lover, the point of the play as a tilt against "marriages arranged" is greatly weakened. Had he been old and hard the attitude of Olive would have been more sympathetic.

But it is the parents who rob the piece of its serious interest. There are times when the play suggests perfectly the required atmosphere of shipwrecked lives and impending catastrophe. There are times when it is real and engrossing. And it is just when the audience is coming under the spell of the tragedy of the life of Olive Latimer that her parents enter to spoil it all. For they are quite impossible for reality. They are blocks of ice. Their daughters despise them. Their younger daughter, still unspoiled by the world, even goes to the length of calling her father a cad. And yet we are asked to believe that these same daughters are being influenced by these same parents into marriages they do not wish to contract. It is impossible.

Mrs. Patrick Campbell, as Olive, acts with charm, and her personality goes far, she is emotional, tragic and often rises to a high standard of histrionic imagery, but the part lacks vitality somehow. Mr. Lyn Harding played the part of the friend with power, Miss Wiehe was natural, Mr. Hearn, as the doctor, was excellent. Many will, of course, go to see our great tragic actress, but most of them will come away disappointed and certainly unconvinced.

The Agapemone—that cesspool over which the profane and blasphemous Smyth Pigott, sailor, salvationist and priest, has presided over long—is in a fair way to being closed let us hope. That bestial person has been proved guilty of the grossest immoralities by the Consistory Court, convened by the Bishop of Bath and Wells, and as further steps are to be immediately taken, one looks forward to the end of The Abode of Love at no distant date. The name of Pigott recalls a particularly unsavoury case, which happened in Calcutta nearly a quarter of a century ago—the Pigott-Hastie case—and the Agapemone will probably remind many people in your town of certain doings down Garden Reach way connected with another eccentric and much condemned padre whose name I cannot remember at the moment.

AN UNFINISHED TRAIL.

There followed the snow, coming quickly in that wintry year. October had gone, clearing the bush of its last withered foliage; and in that first week of November the storm fell along the woods. We hurried. "Snow come now," said Chabot, the Algonquin, looking up to the sky; but the warning seemed superfluous. There was the raw wind stirring among the tops, the forest sighing with its whispers. "Snow come to-night," grunted Chabot, a hand raised to try the passing gust; "sartin get um big snow, find moose, pretty quick."

Here was the Beauchene. Ranging up from the crook of the Ottawa, it stretched before us, a wide and deep ragged waste of blow-down and brule. There, in some time gone past, the hurricane played havoc with its trees, and after the wind came fire. Desolation cloaks the Beauchene like a garment; but the moose are there—and who follow the moose cannot pick and choose. So Chabot and I tempted it.

As we pitched down the last of the ridges, the snow began, the flakes flecking the brown leaves underfoot, and stinging our faces as if with points of steel. There was the open burnt-ground stretched to the north, a waste of yellow and black strewn with its underlying trap of charred timbers, and here and there a rock lifting its whitened, fire-blanched head above the thickets of second growth. We looked across its interval and saw a pond hole, a basin in the angle of the hills; then came a drowning scurry of flakes whirling across the open; the landscape crowded in, fading grayly; and we walked down the last slope with the storm filling all the world about with its dull white mantling of snow.

It was good, this first heavy storm of the year; it would drive the moose to hunt a winter's yarding place. We should catch them on the move; and on that first clear snow, the rest seemed easy. We camped; and at dawn arose; and there, through all the bush, lay a soft glimmering mantle of white. Beneath it lay the soddened leaves, soft and noiseless, ankle-deep, so that one walked on it cat-like, its cushioned depth killing every sound.

Going swiftly at first, Chabot and I climbed to the ridges, for there we should find the moose. Only a little wind stirred among the trees, and facing the light air we pushed along, step by step, hunting deeper into the pervasive stillness of the winter-wrapt bush, and climbing higher as we went. It was the Algonquin that first found sign. "Look!" whispered Chabot, and pointed down the slope; "moose go by, not so long. One, two, four moose."

The tracks were fresh, the edges of the slots still unfrozen, so lately had the band gone by. In the lead went the herd cow, the season's calf at her heels, and a yearling following in their trail. Off at one side, a wider, deeper track told where the bull had lolled along, his long, dragging footprint showing a leisurely gait. It was a bull big enough, in a way, but with horns scarcely worth the having, though Chabot had other views.

"Sartin that big bull," declared the Algonquin, his eyes gleaming; but I shook my head at him. "Plenty meat," muttered Chabot, fingering at his gun-lock eagerly.

But here was the place where the bull had gone between two trees—trees set narrowly together. So small was the spread of horns that they had touched on one side only. "Too small, Chabot," I told him, and pointed to the trees.

"Sartin that big moose!" he grumbled; "you see um track!" Chabot hunted meat, not horns. So, perforce, I hunted the bull a while, if only to stop the Algonquin's tongue.

Pushing to leeward, we swung a circle, and drifted in to the track again. Once again we looped the trail, and then coming to the edge of the ridge, peered over the crest. "Look, Chabot!"

There in a cup-like hollow stood the four moose, black hulks against the whitened background. They were standing in a ruck of fallen timber, the yearling plainly visible, the cow showing a hind-quarter from behind a blow-down's roots, and the calf hovering by her side. A fourth black shape behind a wall of branches spoke for the herd bull, but head and antlers were hidden. Horns? And what cared Chabot for horns? I saw him raise his smooth-bore trade-gun, and I reached out a hand and stopped him. "No—look!" I whispered; and with my free hand snapped a twig.

At the sound, the bull revealed himself. We saw his head rise from the thicket and turn toward us, staring fixedly, and his flaccid nostrils curled as they tried the sleeping air. It was as one would suppose, a bull only fair in bulk, and with small and spindling antlers.

I backed Chabot off the ridge, and we left the family party, but slightly disturbed. But I am not sure that Chabot's hands weren't itching at the thought of so much good meat left standing in the bush. I know he scowled sullenly; and, if alone, Chabot, no doubt, would have made a very pretty killing.

We left the ridge and hunted elsewhere. I say we hunted—yes, and faithfully, too; only it was barren of any result. Together we swung in a wide circle through the tree-land, and three other trails we found. Yet none was worth the chase; it was to be a big bull or nothing; but as the day fell it was hard work keeping my Algonquin friend in any passive state of mind. Chabot yearned for the slaughter; in that, for him, lay all the passion of the chase, and when dusk waned and warned us to turn our faces campward, Chabot's mutterings grew loud and painfully morose. Yet the day passed without a killing, for there stuck in my mind the vision of a moose I once had seen in these same woods—a big moose—a moose of head and antlers.

"Hoh!" hissed Chabot, gripping me fiercely by the arm. There stood my moose—mine, or one as big, a colossus with yellow, spreading antlers stretching arms' reach across—a moose—my moose!—staring directly at us through the dusk of the waning day.

Crash! At the leap of the great bull swinging into flight, all the forest silence passed, gone in the smashing of twigs, the clatter of antlers ringing the smashing of twigs, the clatter of antlers ringing on the trees, the rending of the bush as he tore his way to cover. Simultaneously the roar of Chabot's smooth bore thundered in my ear, rocking my head with the shock of it. But as I fished about in the gloom with the fore-sight, the undergrowth swept together like a hanging. He was gone! Beyond, the woods resounded with the leaping tumult of the escape, grew fainter—died away. Silence fell about us in the dusk.

Lost! We had missed him! I saw Chabot, leaping from side to side, run like a trail hound on the track. But there was little use of that. We'd missed him clean enough; Chabot would find no tell-tale blood along the snow.

"Camp now," said Chabot, returning sulkily. In silence we took up the homeward way, and in silence Chabot set the camp fire, put on the kettle to boil, and fell moodily to slicing bacon. But, of a sudden, Chabot looked up, his eyes glittering hotly. "By dam!" he cried, and waved his knife in the air; "sartin that big moose. Huh! Moose lost now."

Lost? Well, not so sure of that. "Look, Chabot," said I, when the Algonquin had tucked away the meal, and sat squatting with his pipe beside the fire. "Look, Chabot—can you march two—three—perhaps four days. Would you, Chabot?"

Chabot grunted again. "You follow um that moose?" he mumbled, grinning. "Sartin that dam bad walk in Beauchene."

I nodded. It would be a slim chance, but one worth the taking. Should snow cover the track before we overtook him, all our trouble would be in vain. Or if he took to the brule, we might never catch up, crawling, creeping, scratching our way over the fallen timber he could take in his stride. Yet on clear ground with no fresh fall of snow, it would be—well, what?

"Is it a march then, Chabot?"—and for my answer, I saw Chabot's eyes glisten in the firelight.

At the first crack of dawn we settled on the trail. It was light marching order—blankets, an axe, the kettle and a handful of tea, a bag of pemmican, a strip of bacon; all the remainder of the camp stuff we left there in the bush. "Two day, three day, mebbe five day," counted Chabot, "then moose get mad. Sartin moose turn round to fight. Dunno."

At the south lay the brule, and for the south the big bull headed.

"Huh!" growled Chabot; "dam moose go for burnt ground! It seemed so, but as we came down out of the trees, the brule before us, the track swerved abruptly to the east again, straggled back to the woods, and, once more taking to the ridges, followed an easy trail.

Our bull, we saw, was one that must pick his way. A smaller moose, routed up as we had driven this big one, would have carried a straight line through every kind of country, shacking the matted tangles of the thicket as briskly as he rambled along the hardwood slopes. But a moose with a spread as wide as this must travel on the high ground where the trees were open and there was room to swing his horns. His first rush out of cover when we jumped him had been at a lurching gallop; presently it steadied into a long and reaching trot. Mile and mile he went away; and it was a long distance then, we found, before he dropped his stride to a walk. Even then, we saw the speed in that sloping gait, and the more I pondered on the distance that must lie between us, the less chance I saw of ever getting up to him, or even shortening his lead.

But the race is not always to the swift. We held to the trail with dogged patience, hour after hour doing our two miles or better, or it may have been even more. A midday kettle was boiled over a hasty fire, for the moose was still far ahead. After that it was on again, hitting that even, dogged pace.

I have said that the chase led through open going, and truly it did—open going for the moose. But the windfalls the bull stepped over in his stride must be crawled over by us on hands and knees, and there were places where the wind had tossed the trees about like jackstraws, pitfalls between them all. It was climb, climb, climb—slide, scramble and climb; yet by dusk of the first day, we knew we had made good time of it. His track was shortening; he had dropped his gait to a walk, and at nightfall when we halted, the bull had begun to swerve from side to side as if hunting a place to browse.

We camped—the sky for our roof. Water was handy, so Chabot made no fire, for fear of alarming the quarry. Snow was in our food, our clothes, our bedding—snow everywhere. For that night, a wind such as the upper Ottawa likes to breed roared down from the north, icy cold, and set the forest a-wild with its uproar. Overhead the stars gleamed down through the tops, as bright and hard and as cruel as gems. But thus it is in the forest on a winter's night, either the stillest, most quiet, soundless of all places when the wind sleeps, or, when it blows, all filled with roaring noises. And that night I realized I had never before been really cold. Dawn came at last, and we gladly took up the trail anew. Through all the morning hours we followed swiftly; then, at noon, we found at last where he had stopped.

"Hoh!" grunted Chabot, in elation. He held up the twig from which the tip had been bitten. "Moose feed now. Bimeby, sartin moose lie down!"

But it was not until the third day that we came up to him. Once more the wind had failed. The dark forest lay around us, a land of big trees spotted with little fir thickets and a few white birches standing in between. A broad slope stretched away before us, cut by little gullies, and there on the shoulder of a long, rolling ridge we found the sign that warned us. Chabot, the Indian's dogged persistency changed to sudden eagerness, the swift lust to kill, would have plunged ahead at full speed. But it seemed better to me to hunt slower. We turned aside to leeward, then, and swung up to him on a wide circle—a circle coming home to itself without crossing the tracks beyond. "Moose in there!" Chabot whispered, his face transfigured, and pointed to the hollow below. Shedding our packs, we slipped into the thicket, the Algonquin at my heels.

He stood behind a fir blow-down, this moose of mine, and what really happened neither I nor Chabot ever clearly knew. The cover was scant and low, it seemed unlikely that so frail a barrier should hide him, and we gave it no more than a passing glance. But all the long while we painfully crept on down the slope, he was standing there, watching us as we came. Crash! The first lunge carried him into the open. At the second jump he was gone. We heard the dry wood crackling as he forged away, the rattle of his horns against the trees. Then silence, and after that, a long way off, a twig cracked. Gone! Chabot swore. "By dam!" he cursed, and added a few more gutturals in the Algonquin.

So we chased. Once more we shouldered pack and gun, and all that day we followed, plunging obstinately, sweating copiously at the trail, at night camping and freezing, and at dawn, resuming the weary march. Now he swung back, as if returning to the country he had left. He knew, it seemed, that we were at his heels. "Look, Chabot!" There in the snow was the print of where he had turned to look back. Chabot muttered something beneath his breath. There was no elation in his face or voice. Once again, the dogged stubbornness of race and kind and training stood in front. Two silent figures, we raced along.

The track grew fresher; we were closing up. It was as ordered now; tracked hunted, driven, the great bull would go so far and no farther. Then somehow that lust to kill waned within my breast. It may have been the long pursuit, its weariness, the nights half drowsed away in their extreme discomfort, despite my fatigue. I felt, somehow, a growing pity for that great helpless thing, matchless in its bigness and strength, enraged yet fearful, its wrath nerving it to turn and put the issue to battle, yet ever weakening at the test. Only the memory of that broad trophy kept me going—that or the vision of Chabot, patient, tireless, determined, his dark eyes burning hollowly in his head, the blood thirst urging on and on, and the primal instinct of his kind weakened by no touch of remorse or pity or the frailty of a higher conscience.

Chabot hurried; I lagged, weary to my heart's core. Overhead, a dim curtain of leaden gray swam across the sky. Chabot hurried faster, his eyes fixed and staring. The chase was nearly done. There was no compassion, I say, no growing regret for the killing; night was coming and the Indian broke into a hurrying trot; I stumbled after. There was no cat-like going now, no stealth. We plunged along, knowing he would stand waiting till he saw us. Rage and fear wrought within him their contending passions, rage its courage—terror, its despair. The time was coming now when rage and fear would bring their weariness; he would stand a little longer at the last, and then the end would come. So the bullet would reach him, the long, relentless pursuit meet its end. He would be ours, at last, yet who would not feel the regret of a thing like that? To kill on the impulse; to shoot at the game jumped quickly—that is one thing. But to slay like this! To kill by endurance, by stubborn, patient, never-failing will! Chabot began to creep now. There should be no failure after this. A spit of snow struck down from the hillside. We knew its warning. We must do the killing now.

Boom! roared the Indian's smoothbore, filling all the forest's closes with the rolling echoes of its charge. But the bullet, as before, went wild; indeed, they were a wretched combination, Chabot lind with blood lust, and his rickety trade gun.

Then came the snow, a blinding pall of whirling, scurrying flakes—snow and the gloom of night. Together they fell like a dropped curtain, and the forest was drowned within that gloom. "Shoot!" shrilled the Indian, and pointed to a dark blur which momentarily appeared against the snow. But I did not shoot.

So we saw him last. A moment's glimpse—only that—a glimpse of the tall bulk, standing with head dropped low to the challenge, and the yellow horns tossed from side to side. There he was—at bay—waiting!—matchless, resolute at last, supreme! So I see him still, there alone among the frost-covered trees.

Then darkness, a drowning gloom, and the snow sifting with a whisper through the tops.

DEAR SIRS,—I have delayed my thanks as I wished to test the effects of Blair's Pills by a sufficient interval of time.

For ten years I had suffered acutely from Gout, and life had lost its attraction, owing to the uncertainty of health and the sudden visitation of the enemy, which prostrated me for months or weeks, according to the virulence of the attacks.

Blair's Pills have rendered me immense service, as I no longer fear an attack of Gout.

NEW ·465 BORE VELOPEX SYSTEM

EXPRESS "INDIA" RIFLE.

MESSRS. HOLLAND & HOLLAND beg to introduce to the notice of Sportsmen their New ·465 Bore "India" Model Rifle. This weapon has been specially designed to replace the ·450 bore, the importation of which into India having been prohibited. The New Rifle retains all the features of their well-known ·450 and has the same balance, handiness, and lightness of recoil, with the advantage of increased velocity resulting from the use of their New Patent Velopex Cartridge.

Record Target made before the Editor of "The Field."

AUTHENTICATED DIAGRAM. See "THE FIELD," 19th January 1907.

Extract from "THE FIELD" Newspaper,

19th January, 1907.

As sporting rifle Makers Messrs. Holland and Holland attach very great importance to achieving a high standard of accuracy in target results. A notice in this journal of a new rifle and cartridge has, by long custom included shooting results at 100 yards, firing from the table rest, and year by year for a long time past the closeness of grouping has shown a marked tendency towards improvement.

"The group illustrated was made with the 365-grain bullet as fired from the ·465 cartridge. It was produced at the very first attempt, and it constitutes what seems likely to stand for some time to come as a record amongst properly authenticated targets. The centres of the whole seven shots lie within a space practically 1 in. square (actually 1·00 in. by 1·05 in.), and the reader may satisfy himself from the reproduction of part of the actual target that all the shots would have hit a postage stamp. It is interesting to know that the sights used were of the open variety, and that orthoptic spectacles were not employed.

GREATEST ACCURACY and HIGHEST VELOCITY yet obtained (2,282 feet per second).

PRICES*:—DOUBLE BARRELLED RIFLE, best quality and finish, Royal Hammerless. 70 Guineas. B. Grade, 55 Guineas.

The above business has been started to fill a long-felt want and to give sportsmen an opportunity of having their trophies artistically mounted with anatomical correctness.

There is no further need to send trophies to Europe to be prepared, as the work turned out by this firm is equal to that of any similar business in England or elsewhere, and the rates are very much cheaper.

The mounting of birds and animals and the modelling of heads is entirely done by European workmanship and not by European supervision only, as is the case with other firms of this nature in India.

LUCKNOW SPRING MEETING, 1909.

COL. P. K. L. BEAVER.
A. L. SAUNDERS, ESQ., I.C.S.
MAJOR EVELYN WOOD, D.S.O., The Royal Dragoons.
MAJOR F. C. STRATTON, A.V. Corps.

Second Day, Wednesday, 3rd February.

IT has become the fashion to describe each succeeding Cup Day as a record in point of numbers, but it may be said without undue exaggeration that the gathering on Wednesday exceeded anything which has been seen since the inauguration of the Civil Service Cup in the early eighties. From another aspect the day was also a record, since it was the first time the Cup has been annexed by an Oudh stable.

The Civil Service, the Army and every section of the European and Indian community were representated and among those present were the Lieutenant-Governor and Lady Hewett and Miss Hewett.

The fields were not large, but all the horses with one exception went to the post. Ten ponies were listed for the Cup race which was known to be a very open event. Nevertheless Mr. Faunthorpe's Devon sustained h's place as favourite. Apart from Devon, Bonita II. and Eileen were most heavily backed. There was also a lot of money on The Point and the others were backed in proportion, the only two exceptions being Bob Major and Matin Bell.

It is seldom that the favourite has ever won the Cup race, and this year the winner turned up in Thakur Sripal Singh's The Point. The Thakur has been prominently connected with the Turf for the past eighteen years, and this is the sixth occasion on which he has entered ponies for the Cup. This year's winner, curiously enough, finished third in the Cup race last year, but owing it was said to a mistake in the placing, third place was eventually given by the Stewards to Matin Bell.

The Point's racing career in India dates from October 1907, when he ran third in the Garrison Stakes at Darjeeling. He was bought by his present owner twelve months ago and has since been trained at his stables in Lucknow by W. E. Thomas, who deserves every credit for the remarkable success achieved. The Point won the Maiden Plate at the last Autumn Meeting here and won three races at the Calcutta Second Meeting, including the Pony Scurry, in which he beat Devon.

Thakur Sripal Singh came in specially from Kasmanda, Sitapur District, to see the race run, and returned to his capital the same night in connection with his son's wedding festivities. Needless to say he was heartily congratulated on his triumph.

The stewards and the various officials, including Mr. E. S. Deane, the Secretary, deserve every praise for the highly successful character of the afternoon's racing.

The Indian Civil Service, the Royal Dragoons, the R.A.M.C., and the 8th Rajputs were "At Home" on the occasion, and the Royal Dragoon's band was in attendance.

THE PONY HURDLES.—Rs. 700 to the winner, Rs. 200 to the second, and Rs. 100 to the third. A high-weight handicap hurdle race for ponies 14-2 and under. About 2 miles over 8 flights.

Fabiana broke down at the three furlongs and had to be pulled up, and First Bell came into third place. Third Day, Friday, the 5th February.

THERE was not much incident to speak of in the racing today which brought the Spring Meeting to a successful close. It was, however, characterised by extremely close finishes, two dead-heats for third place being recorded during the afternoon. With two exceptions, the favourites won, Little Dolly came to grief at the fourth jump in the Open Ponychase, her jockey escaping with a sprained wrist. The Goomti Plate was won in good style by Devon, his field including nearly all Cup horses, and in this event an objection was raised by Circus Girl's trainer to the effect that she had been bumped by First Bell and Matin Bell. This was subsequently over-ruled.

The professional tout has made his appearance in Lucknow, and at least one individual of this type was present in the first enclosure to-day.

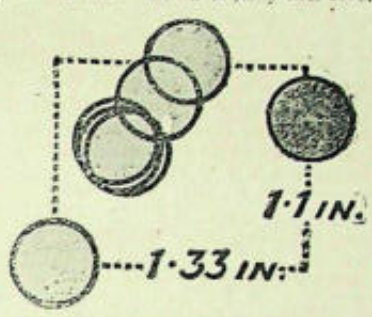
LANG

NEW ·470 BORE.

Expressly designed to replace the prohibited ·450 Bore



VELOCITY 2,250ft. sec.

This cartridges originally designed did not, in our opinion, come up to a sufficiently high standard, and in consequence our expert visited Messrs. Kynoch's Works, and in conjunction with their experts conducted a series of experiments extending over three weeks, ultimately designing the bullets now in use for this popular rifle.

LANG'S therefore confidently claim that in collaboration with Messrs. Kynoch they were the first to introduce the ·470, and as evidence submit the following extract from the Field, and illustration of the actual diagram made before the editor of that journal.

"FIELD," 23rd March 1907: ". . . . A very valuable advance has been achieved, and Messrs. Lang are to be congratulated on their enterprise in so promptly bringing forward a rifle and cartridges complying with the two most pressing demands in sporting rifles, viz., a weapon to take the place of the prohibited ·450, and a cartridge which shows an advance in flatness of trajectory, with a diminution of recoil and pressure."

THE BEST DIAGRAM made before the Editor of the "Field" with a Rifle of this bore.

7 Shots at 100 yards with Lang's ·470 Sporting Rifle.

TROPICAL DEBILITY.
HOW TO FIGHT IT.

Of all the evils which the inhabitant of the torrid zone is called upon to endure, the greatest are, perhaps, the deadly debility and nervous depression which are the forerunners of the more serious ills so rife in warmer latitudes. Physical fitness should be the constant watchword; healthy nerve force must be the subject of the most earnest consideration. Happiness, nay life itself, hangs in the balance.

When exhausted Nature fails readily to respond to the extraordinary demands made upon the system by the exigencies of climate, Science once more comes forward with precisely the needed remedy. Sanatogen, the tonic food, is the means discovered whereby impaired vitality may be safely and rapidly restored.

Sanatogen has a singular effectiveness. It is not as a tonic only that it stands unrivalled; it is, besides, a perfect food, extremely rich in just those properties necessary to the perfect nourishment of the depleted system. The basis of Sanatogen is the casein or "curd," the nitrogenous principle of milk. Nitrogenous foods are our bodybuilding ones. They are demanded constantly by the body for the formation, and for the repair of its tissues. United with the casein, we find glycero-phosphoric acid, which is an all-important constituent of the brain and nervous system. This is the reason then, why Sanatogen has obtained its high reputation. It repairs the wear and tear of the most vital parts of our frames, and above all it gives to brain and nerve their essential food in precisely the form in which they are capable of readily receiving and assimilating it.

Doctors in India have not been slow to see the wonderful advantages in the use of Sanatogen among their patients, and a great many of them have written setting out the success that has attended the use of this preparation. They have used it with the greatest success in Malaria, Dysentery, Enteric Fever, cases of Plague and Cholera, as well as amongst those who are suffering from ailments due to disordered liver, spleen or digestive system. One or two of their opinions are worth considering.

Thus Dr. H. H. W. HART, Hapur Remount Depot, Babugarh, United Provinces, India, writes:—

"I have much pleasure in certifying to the value of Sanatogen in cases of Malaria, Enteric Fever, Dysentery, and other exhausting diseases. I have used it regularly now in my practice for the past two years, and in no single instance have I been disappointed with its results. I can honestly affirm that many of my worst cases owed their recovery to Sanatogen. I could quote numerous cases where the administration of Sanatogen was followed by immediate and marked amelioration of the symptoms. I cannot speak too highly of its value, and I certainly consider it the best of artificial foods."

Whilst Dr. C. R. NAYLOR, Bangalore, South India, writes:—

"It was through my influence that your excellent medium of nutrition—Sanatogen—was introduced into South India, and I have reason to be proud of my success in doing so, for I consider that I have thereby conferred a benefit upon suffering humanity. I have found it unequalled by any other food when the internal arrangements of the body (whether in children or adults) are in want of a stimulating nutrient. When milk, diluted to any degree, cannot be digested, Sanatogen will be greedily assimilated. In many almost hopeless cases of plague, where heart failure has been threatening, I have found Sanatogen helpful in getting the patient to turn the critical corner, and it has admirably aided my treatment of this fell disease. I have no hesitation in stating that by the discovery of Sanatogen you have added a most powerful weapon to those already in the possession of every physician."

And Dr. R. F. BOWERS, Bhaptiahi, P.O., Bengal and N.-W. Railway, N. Bhagulpore, India, writes:—

"I was able to try Sanatogen in a patient who had passed through the acute stage of Asiatic Cholera (in a severe form) but was utterly prostrated. That woman, I consider, owes her life to Sanatogen."

A physician has written a remarkable treatise entitled "How to Keep Well in India," a copy of which will be forwarded, post free, to all who apply to Messrs. Smith, Stanistreet and Co., Calcutta, mentioning the Indian Field.

Sanatogen can be obtained from Messrs. Smith, Stanistreet and Co., Calcutta, and of all chemists, etc., in India.

THE GREAT EASTERN REMEDY.

The PLAGUE of INDIA is SKIN AFFECTIONS, such as Herpes, Scabies, Eczema, Scurvy, Rupia, Pustular Eruptions, Acne, Ringworm, Lichen, Scaldhead, Scaly Eruptions, Lepra, Elephantiasis, Freckles, Syphilitic Eruptions, &c., Boils, Blanes, Pimples, Blotches, Foul Ulcers, Indolent Tumours, Cancerous Tumours, &c., &c.; for these Dr. E. J. LAZARUS'S ESSENCE OF NEEM is the remedy.

The Baids and Hakeems of Hindustan have employed the MELIA AZADIRACHTA for very many centuries in the above diseases, and astonished the world by the wonderful cures they effected, but it was left for Dr. E. J. LAZARUS to make a preparation containing all the valuable therapeutic properties of the tree, in a PLEASANT, POTABLE and EFFICACIOUS FORM. We have a host of unscrupulous imitators [as indubitable proof of the value and efficacy of the above preparations] against whom we beg to caution our friends.

In bottles Rs. 2 each.

WHAT PEOPLE SAY OF IT.

From PANDIT KOILAS NATH SUKUL, Physician to H. H. Maharaja of Bulrampore:—"Anything that can be said in praise of your newly-invented 'Essence of Neem' is insufficient to describe its merit as a Purifier of Human Blood. I have much pleasure to let you know, that within the short space of the past six months I have given it ten different trials in some of the most obstinate skin diseases, three of which were advanced cases of Indian Leprosy, and your Essence has in all of them effected most admirable cures, the like of which I have never noticed during my practice of last twelve months."

From MRS. A. R. B., Allahabad:—"Please send me by return post six bottles more of your invaluable 'Essence of Neem'; it is doing me more good than all the Doctors have done for me."

From MR. B. L. D. A.:—"I am happy to say that the 'Neem' is doing a great deal of good to the patient and I think he will ask me to write in a day or two for some more."

WILKINSON'S SAFETY RAZOR.

A Safety Razor which all users pronounce perfect.

The high reputation enjoyed by the Wilkinson Sword Company is sufficient guarantee that the quality of this shaver is of the highest grade

It differs from other shavers, because instead of the old-fashioned fence or comb protecting the face from the cutting edge, and which has always been the great objection to Safety Razors, a deep cut helical rolller has been substituted As this rolls, the lather and hair pass between the projecting screw threads, and all parts of the cutting edge are brought into action. This gives even wear along the whole cutting edge and feeds the lather on to it.

THE TURF.

HURST PARK.

IF such weather as Friday smiled on the Hurst Park Meeting were perennial, the Riviera would claim few visitors. The wind had left its Windsor "nip" behind, not a cloud blurred the Italian blue expanse of sky from horizon to zenith, and the temperature, if not as mild as May, was delightful. A brisker air of business brought extra grist to the Waterloo mill to flutter the passengers' way bill, and allowing for the release of the two previous days' competition per the Great Western, the increase was marked. The meeting is very handy to town, and as usual the road division came down in force, and the executive can be congratulated on a capital all-round attendance, which well filled the enclosures. Better going could not have been desired, the sun and wind quickly drying up the raindrops on the thickly-grassed course, and, as usual, in quality and quantity fields panned out well. Results :—

The breeze was fresh, and the sun made full play from a cloudless sky on Saturday, but there was a stern reminder of the season of frost and snow in the wind that fortunately for comfort blew from the back of the stands at Molesey Hurst, and made it very cold in the open. For January, however, the weather was as perfect as possible, and the bright morning brought another good muster to this popular venue to fill the stands and furnish a strong brigade of Saturday half-holiday-makers, skirmishing from fence to fence and enjoying all the fun. Thanks to the drying wind, the course, which naturally was a bit on the heavy side, was improving each hour, and the executive are to be commended on the capital condition they always keep it in ; but although framed on liberal lines, the programme did not pan out so successfully as the executive had a right to except. WOLVERHAMPTON.

The Wolverhampton executive on several occasions have been rather slighted by the clerk of the weather, and, like Windsor and Hurst Park, had to make up the shortcomings incurred by the blizzard of three weeks ago. On Saturday evening frost had the country in its iron grip, but when the London train reached the dirty station approach in good time, a sea of black mud suggested the advantages and advisability of a cruise upon wheels to the park. Monday is a halcyon time in the Black Country, the inhabitants thereof holding the same tenets as the Sheffield Blades anent the sacredness of the day to pleasure ; and a very strong attendance testified to the love of the national sport that permeates the district. The fair sex was well represented in an excellent company occupying the club enclosure, and the further stands were comfortably filled. A drying wind was doing good service, but the sun that glinted at intervals had not had a long enough chance, and the going was very holding. Results :—

The Black Country fairly belied its name on Tuesday, for such brilliant sunshine as would have been welcomed by any of the seaside and inland watering places, made even grimy Wolverhampton look clean and bright. Although the course was still heavy, it gradually improved as the afternoon wore on under the combined influences of wind and sun ; and the executive are to be congratulated on providing a couple of day exciting sport, as fields again ruled strong, and finishes were for the most part exciting. MANCHESTER.

Ill-fortune seems to dog the Manchester executive, whose New Year meeting was cut up by adverse weather, and last Wednesday morning fog crept up and wrapped the city in a dirty mantle. It was all the more aggravating as in the country sunshine was sparkling on the effects of a white frost, and in the early morning on the outskirts prospects were fair; but things got worse as the day wore on. Many people had assembled before one o'clock, but the weather-wise, judging by experience that the mist is always at its thickest at Castle Irwell, held aloof, and the executive very sensibly did not accept any entrance money. Now and again the fog spasmodically lifted, but the wall grew denser on the course, and the half-hour by which the racing was put back in a hope against hope, only showed matters worse. Shortly, after one o'clock, the Stewards accepted the inevitable, and while the second day's programme had to be abandoned, the first day's was postponed for twenty-four hours.

The conditions were even worse yesterday. The fog was of such unmitigated density, that the executive had no other alternative, but to abandon the meeting.

FOOTBALL.
ASSOCIATION RULES.

NOTES OF THE DAY.—No football competition arouses such general and sustained interest as that for the Association Cup. In the first stage, which took place on Saturday, places so far removed as Carlisle, Newcastle, and Sunderland in the North and Exeter, Brighton, and Portsmouth in the South had teams contesting; and the other clubs concerned represented most of the chief centres of industry in England, with Wrexham as the sole representatives of Wales. Scotland no longer has any clubs affiliated to the Football Association, as was the case some twenty years ago, when Queen's Park, Glasgow, twice failed before Blackburn Rovers in the final tie, and there is no record of an Irish team showing up prominently, if, indeed, one ever entered for the "Cup." So this great event in its second and important part is practically confined to English clubs, and, with an occasional exception to the professionals. One may deplore the absence of the leading amateur elevens, but many seasons have pased since their days of general equality with the professionals; and custom makes for the acceptance of the contest as a struggle between the clubs of the First and Second Divisions of the Football League and of the Southern League. Of the few teams outside these organisations engaged yesterday not one pulled through, but three will participate during the week in the replays, of which a dozen are necessary, ten games having ended with the scores level, while at Bradford and Grimsby snow caused an abandonment before the expiration of full time.

Perhaps more than the outcome of the majority of the ties the chief feature of the first round was the inclement weather that had the effect of reducing the crowds below those of an ordinary Saturday. In the South there was little need for complaint, but reports from the North speak of blizzards, snow, and thunderstorms. Under the circumstances form proved remarkably reliable, scarcely a surprise occurring, though some of the results testify to performances of exceptional merit by visiting clubs. Chief among these may be mentioned the success of Tottenham Hotspur at Manchester and the decisive victory of Portsmouth at Birmingham. Five other clubs won away from home—Millwall, Sunderland, Burnley, Glossop and Blackburn Rovers—while in thirteen instances victory went to clubs enjoying the advantage of playing on their own ground. Of the teams, who induced their opponents to forego this right given them by the draw, Fulham and Bury won easily; Bradford City had not scored against Workington when the referee considered the conditions unfit for play to proceed. Two ties took place on neutral grounds, and it may be regarded as a somewhat curious coincidence that each was drawn, Croydon Common holding their own with Woolwich Arsenal at the Crystal Palace, and not a goal being scored at Stamford Bridge, where Reading and Norwich City met. In this matter of undecided matches, it is worthy of note that Southern clubs participated in nine of the ten that finished with the scores even after an hour and a half's play.

On the whole, Southern clubs—so unfortunate in the draw—fared extremely well. As already mentioned, Tottenham Hotspur, Portsmouth, and Millwall won away from home; Fulham, Brentford, and Plymouth Argyle did no more than expected in overcoming Carlisle United, Gainsborough Trinity, and Swindon. For the time being these represent the South in the second round, the draw for which will be made to-morrow, but it is not too much to anticipate victory for Woolwich Arsenal, Chelsea, and Exeter in the replays. Bristol Rovers did badly in losing at home by 4 goals to 1 to Burnley; but Crystal Palace pleased their supporters by holding their own with the cup holders at Wolverhampton. On the other hand, Northampton—leaders in the Southern League, and so brilliantly consistent of late—could not overcome Derby County. They, like the Crystal Palace may get through during the week, and as Southern clubs are opposed in three of the replays the district will have strong representation in the second round.

Of the most famous Northern clubs Newcastle United, Sheffield Wednesday, Everton, Liverpool, and Bury took advantage of having weak opponents to win comfortably, but Manchester United only just got the better of the Albion team from Brighton in a match which seemed to have brought trouble to one of the most popular and capable of professionals. Preston North End's success over Middlesbrough is welcome; but another favourite club in Aston Villa succumbed, the Forest beating them at Nottingham, while Blackburn Rovers had the satisfaction of overcoming Notts County at Trent Bridge. Taken all round, the results give promise of exceptionally hard and even matches in the ensuing rounds, with the certainty of ever increasing excitement, until the tournament reaches its climax in the chief event of the football year—the Final Tie at the Crystal Palace.

THE ASSOCIATION CUP.

MANCHESTER CITY vs. HOTSPUR.—One of the most attractive fixtures in the Cup competition was provided at Manchester in the meeting of Tottenham Hotspur with the City, the visitors—the only Southern club to have won the coveted trophy—having shown excellent form in their first year in the Second League. Unhappily the weather was not all that could have been wished, and the stormy conditions prevailing no doubt considerably reduced the attendance, but there were probably 20,000 people on the ground by the time the teams took the field. The turf was in a shocking state, the going being very treacherous. Several changes were made in the Manchester team, Thornley and Blair being absentees, but Tottenham turned out as selected. Winning the toss the Hotspur had a brisk wind in their favour and shortly after the start Walton finished up a good run by shooting near the corner of the Manchester goal. After thirteen minutes a centre by Stewart enabled Holford to open the scoring for the City with a low shot. Midway through the first half the same player, taking an admirable pass from Conlin, increased the lead of the home side. Then Minter scored Tottenham's first goal owing to Kelso getting in the goalkeeper's way, and Steel equalised easily, Tottenham again profiting by a blunder on the part of the City's defence. At the interval the scores were 2 goals each. Seven minutes after the restart Morris, from a penalty, placed Tottenham ahead, and Walton, by good work, shortly afterwards gave them a clear lead of 2 goals. Play was then vigorously contested. Manchester playing with great determination. At length Holford reduced the margin of goals against the home side, but try as they might, the City could not get on even terms. Tottenham Hotspur, 4; Manchester City, 3.

RANGERS vs. WEST HAM.—Before a crowd of 17,000 spectators, West Ham United drew their cup tie with Queen's Park Rangers at Park Royal, the end arriving without either side scoring a goal. This result was somewhat fortunate for the visitors from East London; they were greatly indebted to a fine display of goalkeeping by Kitchen, who defied all the best efforts on the part of the Rangers' forwards and many seemingly impossible situations. The Rangers were at full strength, but West Ham lacked the services of Gault (right back) and Percy (centre half) their places being taken by Shreeve and Chalkley. The changes in the West Ham ranks did not make for strength, and the Rangers were the superior side through the greater part of the game. West Ham made a good fight at the start, but the greater cleverness of the home forwards, backed by a stronger line of halves, soon gave the Rangers an advantage. On one occasion Kitchen recovered himself well when Barnes looked to have got the ball past him. He made other fine saves, and near half-time the Rangers' goalkeeper had to keep out fast shots from Shea, Miller and Blackburn. It was after the interval that the Rangers' superiority was most pronounced, but Kitchen continued to keep goal in brilliant style, and, finely supported by Taylor, at back, he frustrated all the efforts of the Queen's Park forwards. On one occasion Rogers raced the ball across on open goal, but he failed to reach it, and when McDonald shot in Kitchen had returned to his charge and cleared magnificently. Near the close Rogers, the Rangers' best forward, left the field injured, and when time was called not a goal had been scored. The gate receipts were £483.

NEWCASTLE UNITED vs. CLAPTON ORIENT.—At Newcastle before 15,000 people. In the first few minutes the home goal had a narrow escape, Shepherd nearly turning the ball into the net from a corner-kick. Settling down, however, the United fully held their own. As the result of many attacks on the Orient goal, Wilson, with a nice shot, scored for the United after the game had been in progress twenty minutes. Clapton Orient replied with vigour and the game was fought out with fine determination on both sides. By skilful long passing, however, Newcastle regained the upper hand, the visitors' half-backs being frequently out-manœuvred. Altogether the United, considering the greasy ground and heavy ball, played splendidly. When half an hour's play had taken place, Wilson again beat the Clapton Orient goalkeeper. At the interval, Newcastle United led by two goals to none. Two minutes after resuming Wilson gained a third goal for Newcastle and others were put on by Anderson and Shepherd. Newcastle United, 5; Clapton Orient, 0.

HULL CITY vs. CHELSEA.—Played at Hull in fine weather and before 18,000 people. Both sides were strongly represented. With the wind behind them Chelsea were soon attacking, and two good shots were sent in, but they both went wide. Some clever play by Temple and Robinson enabled Hull City to reach their opponents' goal and for some minutes Whitley was kept busy. During the first quarter of an hour neither side could claim any advantage, the play, fast and interesting, being very even. Gordon Wright and Browell dribbled well for the City, but the Chelsea backs cleared. Chelsea then got away and Hilsdon made a splendid effort to score, but his shot struck the crossbar. Hull City were soon at the other end again, and two fine centres by Stanley Smith tested Whitley severely. Hull were then awarded a penalty, but Jack Smith, who took the kick, failed. After this lucky escape Chelsea attacked, but they were easily driven back. The closing stages of the first half were played in a snowstorm. At the interval nothing had been scored. The conditions far from improved after the interval, the second half being fought out in a gale of wind. Chelsea attacked with determination, but met with a stubborn defence. After ten minutes play, however, Hilsdon, after pretty work by the Chelsea forwards, beat the Hull goalkeeper with a fine shot. The First League side, however, did not hold this lead long, for from a free kick, taken by Wright, Temple equalised five minutes later. The last half hour of the game was keenly contested, but the defence prevailed. Hull City, 1; Chelsea, 1.

EXPERIENCE TEACHES!

HOW TO DO IT.

IT IS SURPRISING how many people there are who, while taking the greatest pains to keep their bodies clean, yet neglect the most important part—their mouth and teeth, which have such important functions to perform, the chief of which is the proper mastication of the food, on which the conduct of the digestive organs so largely depends. If, therefore, the teeth are not kept clean and free from decay, the food which should go to nourish and strengthen the body cannot be digested as it should be.

It is perfect nonsense to suppose that the mouth is sufficiently attended to when the surfaces of the teeth have been scoured white with a tooth-soap or paste. The oral cavity is a hothouse for millions of germs and bacteria and these must be daily destroyed or their development arrested if the general health, and more particularly the digestive processes, are not to suffer detriment. This, however, is possible only when the mouth and teeth are consistently cleansed and rinsed every day with Odol, the new liquid dentifrice. Odol is the first and only preparation for cleansing the mouth and teeth which exercise its antiseptic and refreshing powers not only some hours afterwards.

To use Odol is extremely simple. Pour a few drops of Odol into a tumbler of water (see Fig. 1), stir with the toothbrush, rinse the mouth thoroughly, clean the teeth in the ordinary way and conclude by gargling with the mixture (see Fig. 2.)

It is a matter of the utmost importance that the Odol mixture should be kept in the mouth for some moments, a precaution smokers especially should not neglect, for nothing refreshes the mouth so much as Odol, which leaves a delightful impression of coolness and sense of delicate fragrance behind it. Of all Chemists.

WEST BROMWICH ALBION vs. BOLTON WANDERERS.—At West Bromwich before 10,000 people. Snow fell shortly before the kick-off, rendering the turf slippery and treacherous. Five minutes before the interval the Wanderers broke away, and, receiving when in a good position, Hughes kicked through. The Albion were unable to respond, and thus at half time Bolton Wanderers led by 1 goal to 0. Quite a change came over the game in the second half, the Albion showing splendid form and outplaying their rivals at all points. Garratty equalised, and after Harris had scored from a penalty Buck put on a third goal for the home side. Bolton were unable to respond and West Bromwich Albion ran out easy winners. West Bromwich Albion, 3; Bolton Wanderers, 1.

THE GAME IN SCOTLAND.

Snow throughout Scotland on Saturday prevented a start in six of the nine First Division League games, and the matches played attracted very few spectators, the best gate being £136 at Dundee, where the local club played Partick Thistle. At all three places where the matches were played—Dundee, Tynecastle, and Port Glasgow—the grounds were in a fearful condition, and in each instance play was never of a high standard.

In the first half, against Dundee, Partick Thistle gave a surprising display, but the second half told a different tale, and although Partick got through twice, Dundee won easily.

Thirty pounds represented the gate at the Port Glasgow and Airdrieonian match, where play, if never scientific, was always forceful. Airdrieonians were lucky to get full points, as on the play Port Glasgow were easily value for one.

Before a £50 gate Hearts proved worthy winners over Motherwell, the Tynecastle front rank, particularly Cole at outside left, showing good head work, and their victory was thoroughly merited.

The following Scottish League games were postponed on account of the snow:—Hamilton Academicals vs. Celtic, Queen's Park vs. Morton, Falkirk vs. Kilmarnock, Clyde vs. 3rd Lanark, Rangers vs. Hibernians, and St. Mirren vs. Aberdeen.

Clyde and 3rd Lanark have arranged to play their League game at Shawfield Park on Wednesday next, and considering how slow Scottish clubs are in attempting to encourage mid-week football, their enterprise is worthy of support.

CAMBRIDGE U. vs. MR. WREFORD BROWN'S XI.—A really fine game was witnessed at Queen's Club on Wednesday, when a very strong eleven, captained by C. Wreford Brown, met Cambridge, who were making their first appearance after the vacation. By defeating the 'Varsity by 4 goals to 1 goal the scratch team accomplished a first-rate performance, which was in no small measure due to the brilliant form shown by B. S. Foster at centre forward, who made a welcome reappearance and scored three goals. S. S. Harris and C. D. MacIver, the two inside forwards, were in capital form, and made several beautiful openings, while C. Wreford Brown fed his forwards admirably.

Cambridge, who had shown such admirable form last term, were rather disappointing, especially forward, indulging far too much in their short passing game, which was very cleverly checked by C. C. Page, whose defence at full-back was first rate. C. C. Brisley had several openings, but his shooting lacked accuracy, and the 'Varsity only scored in the last minute through V. Edwards, who received a neat centre from W. B. Harris, which beat Milestone. The last-named's work in goal was neat and reliable. At half-back H. W. Prest and E. H. Cuthbertson were both excellent, the former in opening up the game for his wing forwards and the latter owing to his admirable defence.

B. S. Foster exhibited wonderful form, his neatness of foot-work and accurate shooting with either foot were both excellent, and it is a pity that owing to his theatrical engagements he is unable to appear on Saturdays. With so many Malvernians in form it looks as though the Dunn Cup may go to Malvern this year for the first time.

RUGBY RULES.

ENGLAND vs. WALES.—The record between the fifteens of England and Wales now stands at:—Matches played, 26; Wales, 13; England, 11; drawn, 2.

Before dealing with the most recent addition to that record, a brief delve into history is appropriate. Prior to Saturday's game, England had won four times in Wales, at Swansea in 1883, 1885 and 1895, and at Newport in 1891. Her severest defeat had been sustained at Cardiff in 1905, when the Welshmen crossed her line seven times, a record nearly equalled by the Welsh team of 1907 at Swansea, when again without reply her line was crossed six times. As England had never won at Cardiff, and as since 1889, Wales had only once been beaten at Cardiff, viz., by a single Irish try in 1899, the outlook for yesterday's game was, from an English point of view, decidedly gloomy. But it was never so bad as to in the least degree justify the lachrymose, almost maudlin forecasts of the majority of writers on the Rugby game in the papers.

And so the team proved to the hilt on Cardiff Arms Park, where it may safely be written down that winning the toss won the match for Wales. Or, alternately, that the injury to Williamson almost certainly robbed England of victory. Not that Wedge was beaten at half by Owen. Far from it, But Wedge gave his three-quarters no fair chance of scoring by reason of the slowness of his passing to Davey to initiate the attacks.

Not to put the cart before the horse, Wales won the toss and naturally played with the wind, which was quite strong enough to neutralise practically all the punting into touch by the English backs. The ground was very heavy indeed, and this, again, was in Wales' favour, as Welshmen are by common consent without superiors when the ball is heavy and wet. It seemed to me that the authorities had erred greatly on the side of caution in keeping the straw on too long during the daytime, thus preventing the surface from being dealt with in the natural way by the wind and sun.

It was at once seen that the English pack were getting the ball in nearly every scrum, for Wedge was repeatedly in possession. The English threes were soon set off, but Assinder on two occasions, preferred to attack by the short punt instead of passing. Whether he was right or wrong does not much signify. From one such punt the ball was blown back over Bennetts' head on the English right. J. P. Jones dashed in gathered, and running obliquely to the right, passed to Owen, who fed Trew, who, on facing Jackett, gave to Hopkins to score in the corner as pretty and as typical a Welsh try as you could wish to see. From the moment Jones gathered the ball the try was assured bar accidents. Bancroft could make nothing of the kick at goal.

England attacked at once from the drop out, but several defence punts into touch when that was the only course to pursue actually lost ground, while on three occasions when Wedge had started the threes with a very slow pass the three-quarters were so well marked by the Welshmen as to lose ground each time. Three time Jackett got out of difficulties which had looked like Welsh tries, but on not one of these occasions was the position due to superiority on the Welsh side, but directly to avoidable mistakes by Wedge and Assinder. The last-named went in much too much for kicking when not near enough to touch to be sure of finding it. He does not possess the art of playing well against a wind. Wedge on one of these occasions flung the ball to his full-back, who misfielded, and only just averted a Welsh score.

The second Welsh try was rendered possible by a clever bit of judgment on the part of Trew. Perceiving the English right too far forward, he shortpunted over, and between Assinder and Bennetts. J. P. Jones was through in a twinkling to handle and pass to Williams, who, feinting to swerve, completely beat Jackett, to score a capital try about twenty yards from the left-hand post, whence Bancroft converted. For a short time after this second score the English team had all the appearance of cracking up, but before half-time they came again splendidly, and Bancroft had to go down to it more than once. But there was no more scoring, and Wales won by 1 goal and 1 try to nothing.

The second half was one long attack on the Welsh lines by England, who lacked finish, or must have won the game. The forwards got the ball in four out of every five scrums, but Wedge's slowness paralysed the backs, and invariably gave the defence time to rob England of the advantage gained by the brilliant heeling of her forwards. The Welsh backs always had time to see exactly where the attack must develop and thus attack after attack was doomed to failure.

Though, this slowness apart, Wedge was playing well, it was exasperating to see the fine work of the forwards, who had completely mastered the Welsh eight in the tight, thus rendered abortive. Every now and then an attack looked like being crowned with success, but it was not to be.

On the other hand, the Welsh forwards on one occasion caused Jackett to touch down in defence—Bancroft having had to kick dead once—after a very clever bit of work by the Welsh halves, who in dribbling crosskicked towards the left-hand corner, after first drawing the defence the opposite way. It was just before this that Assinder and Bennets got moving on the right for the final pass to Bennetts to be forward when that player at top speed had only Bancroft to beat and twenty yards to go. Again, after Jackett had touched down, Trew made his only mistake. In some loose play, he punted across in the open straight to Mobbs, who caught the ball, and, cleverly evading Hopkins, ran up the left side of the ground, much as he had at Blackheath, with Tarr in attendance. It was the same position over again as when England scored against the Australians, but Tarr, in his eagerness, got in front of Mobbs, whose in-pass, on being engaged by Jones, was necessarily forward. Nothing could have saved the Welsh line this time, but mishandling or the actual mistake which did do so. The end came with the game at half way.

COUNTY CHAMPIONSHIP.

Yorkshire vs. Cheshire.—There was a thunderstorm at Castleford just before play began and the ground was in a sloppy state. The home team began strongly and Hutchinson soon gave them the lead with a try, which Pickering converted. Continuing to do most of the pressing Yorkshire scored again through Atkinson, and Pickering kicked another goal. Cheshire improved and Fisher crossed the home line, Kendall kicking a goal, so that at half-time, Yorkshire led by 10 points to 5. The second half was played under wretched conditions, a strong wind driving snow and hail across the ground. Yorkshire still held the upper hand. From a penalty Pickering kicked a goal, and later on Brown crossed the line, but lost the ball. Cheshire could not score again and Yorkshire won by 13 points to 5. Yorkshire, 3 goals (1 penalty); Cheshire, 1 goal.

Gloucestershire vs. Devon.—This match decided at Gloucester yesterday, before 4,000 spectators. Neither side was at full strength, there being several changes from the originally selected teams. Devon, however, were the greatest sufferers, and had four good players away. Under the circumstances the game was a very fine one, and the result was very uncertain until within a few minutes of the finish.

The opening half was keenly contested, but nothing very exciting occurred. Both sides, strove hard to score, and both went near doing so. Towards the close of the first half Butcher shot beautifully for Devon from a free kick, and only missed the crossbar by a matter of feet, and soon afterwards Smith made a great, but unsuccessful struggle to get over for Gloucester. Half-time arrived with a blank scoresheet.

After the interval both sides played good football, but Gloucester were the first to score. They had been placed in a very bad position, and were almost on their own line, with Devon severely pressing them, when Gent got the ball away beautifully from a scrum, and some fine passing followed, which placed Gloucestershire in a good position. Smith and Holbrook with good interpassing still further improved matters, and Berry placed the finishing touch by forcing himself over, Welshman converting. From the restart Devon retaliated, their forwards carrying all before them, and going right down the field and up to and over Gloucester's line. Charig was credited with the try, and Butcher, by adding the extra points, placed the teams on level terms. Shortly, afterwards, each side added three extra points within a few minutes of each other, Welshman landing a penalty goal, while Mann, with a good try for Devon, again made the scores level. It was now within ten minutes of the close, and a draw seemed likely, but Gloucestershire were not to be denied, and playing magnificent football, scored twice in quick succession by Eberle and Smith, the last being obtained on the call of time. Welshman converted one, and a grand game ended with the result:—Gloucestershire, 2 goals, 1 penalty goal, and 1 try (16 points); Devon, 1 goal and 1 try (8 points).

Plymouth vs. Australians.—The Australians brought their English tour to a close on Saturday with a match against Plymouth. The game was an additional one and was played in recognition of the warm welcome accorded to the Australians, when they landed at the port in September last, and of the kindness shown by the local officials to two injured Australian players while under treatment for several weeks in a local hospital. Bright sunshine prevailed and the attendance reached 8,000. The Australians were without several prominent players, including Carmichael, Russell, Dr. Moran, and Bede Smith, but they were fully represented forward and at half. Plymouth started the game, playing up the slope, and a poor return by Hickey let them into the visitors' quarters. McKivett relieved with a capital pass to McCabe and a cross-kick by Butcher enabled Plymouth to attack, but McCabe, and Parkinson made a brilliant passing-run in reply, which was only stopped by a great tackle on the part of Hosking. The game was mostly in favour of the visitors, but Plymouth were the first to score. Dean hooked the ball away from Woods, and Conybeare, footing on, enabled Peters to score; but Butcher failed at an easy place. Plymouth continued to attack and might have scored if Moore had been content to make a mark in front of the posts instead of trying to run. Before the interval Parkinson and McCabe scored tries for the Wallabies, who led at the interval by six points to three. At the opening of the second half Plymouth threatened danger, but the Wallaby forwards almost invariably secured the ball and the backs got up strong attacks, which were, however, frustrated by Dean and Hosking. Parkinson and McCabe, however, got through, and from a penalty against McKiver, for impeding Nesbit, Butcher placed a goal for Plymouth. In the last minute McCabe scored again for the Australians, who won by 15 points to 6. Australians, 5 tries; Plymouth, 1 penalty goal, 1 try.

Cities vs. Rest of Scotland.—The last of the Scottish trial matches prior to the selection of the team against Wales was played at Inverleith. Following heavy snow there was on Saturday an intermittent fall of sleet, with the result that on the removal of the straw covering the pitch was sodden. So heavy was the going that the game as a trial lost all value. The Cities kicked off. Several changes had taken place in the original teams, but none of them were very notable. Good forward work by the Rest led to the Cities being put almost immediately on the defence. The Rest third line made a nice movement, but Angus tackled in excellent style, and with a clever drop found touch near the centre. From the throw-in the Watsonian got possession, and dodging away he enabled the Cities forwards to get fairly on the move, Mackenzie finally securing a try. The kick was a long one, and with the wet, heavy ball Angus failed to get the length. The drop out did not give the Rest any advantage, and the Cities were soon pressing hard. Martin had a great chance out, he knocked on. A kick right down by Sloan gave Watson a chance, but he failed to gather the ball. The game was in Cities' quarters for a long time, but it was of a most uninteresting and scrappy nature. Half-time:—Cities, 1 try (3 points); Rest of Scotland, nothing.

Play was resumed on more interesting lines, M'Callum had a big punt, and following this up, Martin had a clear field, but the Oxonian seemed to hesitate a little, and finally lost the touch behind. The game was close on Rest quarters, and Tennent shortly scored a rather soft try behind the posts. Angus very easily improved on the place. From the centre kick McIntyre was conspicuous, and Gowlland, backing him up, scored a try rather unexpectedly. J. S. Wilson took the kick and failed. From the drop out the Cities' forwards dashed away in quite dazzling style, and Martin was fortunate in scoring at the corner. It was a very long kick which M'Callum was called upon to take and he failed to get the distance. Moodie was injured, and for some time stood out. The Cities were having the best of matters, and a score was not long delayed, the Cities three-quarters getting nicely away, and finally Pearson passed to Gordon, who had an easy run in. M'Callum made a good attempt, but the wind just carried the ball outside the post. Towards the close the Rest forwards had rather the best of a series of scrums, but the Cities were the superior lot in a very poor match. Result:—Cities, 1 goal, 5 tries (14 points); Rest of Scotland 1 try (3 points.

London Irish vs. Beckenham.—The Irish have rarely been seen to such advantage as on Saturday, at Perry Hill, Catford, when, after a brilliant display, they won by a heavy margin. The feature of the game was the brilliant work of Fairclough and Milligan, the left three-quarters, the latter's brilliant elusive spurts on the wing being responsible for three of the tries. The brisk following up of the home forwards was also a prominent factor in the success of the side. Owing to the weakness of the halves, the Beckenham backs were rarely in possession, and the brothers Stagg at forward were the only members of the losing side to shine. Milligan dropped a good goal and scored two tries, one of which Sherwin converted, and Evans also crossed over previous to the interval. Later Milligan met with another success, and Pantlin ran in a good position, but in each case from an easy angle the kick at goal was unsuccessful. Result:—London Irish, 2 goals (1 penalty) and 4 tries (21 points); Beckenham, 0.

BILLIARDS.

The London Tournament.—The twelfth heat in Messrs. Burroughes and Watts' American Tournament between E. Diggle (rec. 1,000) and J. Harris (rec. 3,000) was restricted to only one day, (Monday), for on Tuesday Diggle was taken ill, and it was not until Thursday that a decision was arrived at regarding the heat. For on that day Diggle, although able to appear at Soho-square, was still unable to play. In consequence the heat was awarded to Harris, who therefore gains his first victory in the tournament.

J. Harris vs. W. H. Sparrow.—In place of the tournament heat, these professionals contested a game of 2,000 up. Harris, who conceded 500 points start, proved successful by 470 points. On Saturday, he made breaks of 61, 109, 67 (twice), 113, and 85; while Sparrow, who is the markers' champion, he having won the championship three years in succession, was responsible for 63, 40, 48 and 40. Final scores:—

Harris	2,000
Sparrow	1,530

M. Inman vs. A. E. Williams.—At Messrs. Thurston's Grand Hall, Leicester-square on Saturday night the match of 18,000 up, Williams receiving 2,000 start, for £100 a side, ended in an easy victory for the Billiard Association champion by 1,409. During the day Inman's chief compilations were:—205, 127, 113, 86, 380, (last 165 off the red ball alone), and 149; and Williams:—63, (twice, 55, 57, 76, 65, 39, and 106 Result:—

Inman	18,000
Williams	16,591

H. W. Stevenson vs. T. Reece.—At Liverpool last week Stevenson (scratch) easily beat Reece (rec. 1,600) in the provincial tournament of 10,000 up by 1,786 points. During the day Stevenson made breaks of 153, 141, 116, 289, 165, and 140, and Reece one of 114. Scores:—

Stevenson	10,000

POLO.

American Players for London.—It has been known for some time that several American players were likely to take part in London polo next season, and it was thought not improbable that a challenge would be issued to England to play for the America Challenge Cup, which was presented by the Westchester County Club in 1886. The last occasion, America challenged was in 1902, when England won all three matches England remain, therefore, the holders of the cup, It may be now authoritatively stated that there will be no such international match this year, but that the American players are coming to England for the sole purpose of enjoying a season in London Polo.

They will play under the name of their famous club, Meadowbrook, which is the principal polo club in the United States. Six matches have been arranged for Hurlingham, eight for Ranelagh, and the same number for Roehampton. The Meadowbrook players will be led by Mr. Harry Payne Whitney, who, like his late father, is also interested in a practical way in the Turf. Mr. Whitney will play at No. 3, and will be assisted by the brothers, Messrs "Larry" and M. Waterbury. The former is the better known, though both represented America against England in 1902, Mr. L. Waterbury taking part in all three matches. He will be the back of the team, while his brother will play at No. 1. The No. 2 will be Mr. D. Milburn, who has the reputation in America of being a very fine player.

ROWING.

UNIVERSITY CREW'S PRACTICE.

Cambridge.—The Light Blue crew reached a more serious stage yesterday, when Mr. F. J. Escombe relieved the President, (Mr. D. C. R. Stuart) of the duties of coach. Mr. Stuart, with his life-long connection with rowing, has proved himself no mean coach, and he is to be followed by Mr. Escombe, who, although still a young man, is one of the leading coaches of the day. His assiduity and unlimited zeal over detail have contributed to a great extent to the success of the Light Blues during the last few years, and the Cambridge authorities are naturally very delighted to find that his recent indisposition will not prevent him from laying the foundations of the 1909 crew.

With Mr. Escombe's arrival the practice assumed a more serious aspect. Previously the crew had been paddling at 20 and 21 a minute, but yesterday they paddled at 24, and once or twice equalled 30 when rowing for a few strokes. Mr. Escombe did not arrive in the University town until midday, but by two o'clock the crew was afloat with an unchanged order, About twenty minutes later the pedestrians and cyclists began to arrive to witness the work, but by that time the crew were well on their way to Clayhithe. They were absent for an hour and three-quarters, covering about eleven miles in that time. For the greater part they paddled in fairly lengthy stages, interspersed by sharp bursts of rowing of about ten strokes. The men appeared to take things rather more seriously, and most of them were "baked" when they disembarked at the Goldie Boathouse. Mr. Escombe was accompanied by Mr. Stuart, who, with Mr. Williams, may be expected in the boat any day now. Order of rowing and latest weights:—

Oxford—Colder weather prevailed yesterday, and, with the wind veering round, in an easterly direction, there was a limited attendance at the riverside. The crew did their work between locks, and made a couple of journeys, rowing the home course through on each occasion. For the main part Bourne restricted them to a stroke of 24 per minute, but after passing Saunders Bridge on the second journey he quickened up, and they had a sharp burst to Randals Bridge.

Alterations were made in the order, as with Fleming going out of the boat, Barker resumed possession of No. 3 thwart, and A. C. Gladstone (Christ Church) was tried at No. 2. The coaching was undertaken by Mr. F. C. Holland, who was accompanied by the president on horseback. Names and weights.—

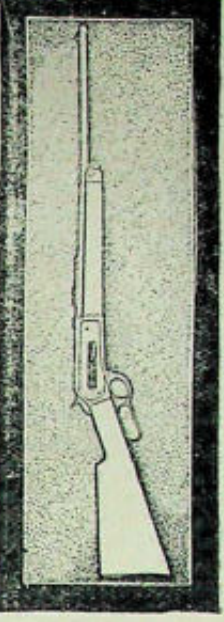
BOXING.

Revision of Championship-Weights.—The disputed question as to the weights for which the title of champion may rightfully be claimed seems at last nigh a settlement.

A few days ago several well-known members of the boxing world met and discussed the matter, and, though nothing definite has been agreed upon as yet, it is considered highly probable that the National Sporting Club will take official action in the matter before many weeks have passed.

The club's position as undisputed headquarters of boxing affairs gives it one especial right to order and control a matter as important as this. Up to the present time any



WINCHESTER .33 CALIBER

A New Large Caliber High Power Rifle.

Big game hunters who have advocated a large caliber high power rifle will find in the Winchester .33 caliber a gun that will meet their requirements. The popular and reliable Model 1886 rifle has been adapted to handle this new cartridge, which is large enough and powerful enough to kill any big game known. The Winchester .33 caliber belongs to the high power smokeless powder class of cartridges, having high velocity and flat trajectory, and it develops great striking energy and penetrating power. The .33 caliber bullet weighs 200 grains. Soft pointed bullets used in this cartridge have special upsetting or mushrooming qualities, owing to their high velocity. This makes the Winchester .33 caliber a particularly desirable cartridge for big game shooting, as mushrooming bullets of this size have terrific killing power.

professional boxer with an eye to the main chance, who wishes to increase in the eyes of the public his market value has called himself a champion. Having been beaten, let us say, by a middle-weight, he dockets himself as the champion of England at 11st. 2½lbs. It is hardly an exaggeration to say that there are men "on the list," ready with the smallest encouragement to represent themselves as champions for every pound in the scale.

At the informal meeting referred to above it was suggested that there should be eight weights, and even this is a generous proposal. They were as follows:—

	st.	lb.
Bantams	8	0
Light-feathers	8	6
Feathers	9	0
Lights	9	9
Welters	10	7
Middles	11	7
Light-heavies	12	7
Heavies	any weight.

The difference is greater between the heavier weights than between the lighter ones owing to the fact that small men cannot afford to give away weight in the same proportion as big men.

The expressions "light-feather" and "light-heavy" are, however, highly unsatisfactory, and it is hoped that two good names will be found to carry their meaning, just as "welter-weight" suggests over light and under middle.

If the National Sporting Club make a rule with regard to the championship weights, the rest of the world is likely to follow suit, Americans having as much reason to desire a settlement as we.

Hunting.

THE BOMBAY HUNT

All seemed to be agreed upon the fact that on last Bye-day, we had the biggest number out and the best run of the season with the Bombay Hounds. It was more than cool and quite damp under foot as we hacked from the Club across the melon ground to the rendezvous at Sahar Hill. Early as possible, hounds were put into the covert at the base of the hill fringing the famous Bomanwadi Valley and announced a find at once.

A pleasant gallop down the valley in Andheri direction proceeded, after a pause at the same enclosure as encountered on Thursday, but the jack then doubled straight back, past Bomanwadi Valley to Kurla. Good going enabled us to keep up, fast as hounds were travelling, and the varmint finding it too hot was put an end to.

It having been a sharp and short run, we had another try at Sahar, which proved successful. The winding nullah, Bapnala, was the only thing to interrupt a long gallop over the Andheri Road as far as the Backwater. Tearing along its banks the pack takes Jack Symons Hill and descends into open country known as Marole Valley. He did not, as is usual, make a set for the hills, but continued in the plains of Goregaum and entered the thick woods that sometimes offer protection to his kind. Though it was getting warm, hounds nevertheless would not be shaken off and cut right through into the open country the other side. But a few keen riders followed and had the satisfaction of seeing this game jack rolled over in full view.

Tuesday's extra morning's sport was again enjoyable, though, after a run of close on an hour, the jack this time saved his brush. We met at Chuckla after hacking across the fields from the Club, and hounds were taken over the lane into the Mango Tope. It seems probable the jack who broke away was the same that has given us a long run on previous occasions. Instead, of making towards Goregaum he turned into the Groves, and after twisting about again reached the Tope. Through this he led us on to a portion of ground hemmed in by barbed wire, and thence on to the railway line, a mile or so from Andheri. With the unfortunate incident of a couple of years ago in our minds, we were glad to see hounds cross safely whilst ourselves going by the level crossing. Scent becoming catchy, hounds held on to the line as far as a biggish hill, but there had to give up the chase.

Thursday's attendance was a very fair one and a good scenting morning resulted in two good runs. Meeting at the Kennels, we moved off early to the adjoining wood for a jack to go away almost instantly. We were able to let our mounts' heads go on the way to Sahar over grass fields and crossing the unwelcome nullah, we pass Marole. Eventually we reach the village itself with hounds hot on the chase and they bring their quarry down, before he has time to think of hiding, just outside the huts.

With the sun as yet no making itself felt too much, we move off to the Sahar covert and here again are lucky. Leading us to Chuckla, hounds take us through the lane and into the Mango Tope, through which they cut at a great pace. Coming out the other side, they make straight over Sunday Hill, and carry on into Marole Valley. As usual, the big hill has to be climbed and the twisting of the jack means a momentary halt by the caves before descending into the Goregaum district. The line then lay in Vehar direction, scent getting poorer till near the lake it is deemed advisable to draw hounds off. This run had been an exceptionally long one of an hour and twenty minutes.

NATIVE CAVALRY TOURNAMENT.

THE tournament opened at Umballa on the 5th February when the firstround was played off Details of the five games are appended:—

14TH JAT LANCERS vs. 36TH JACOB'S HORSE.

First Chukker.—The 36th kept the ball in the 14th's territory, the whole time and looked like scoring several times; eventually Davidson got a free shot and scored. Score: 36th, 1 goal; 14th, nil.

Second Chukker.—The 36th again pressed and after an excellent combined run Davidson again put the ball through. Score: 36th, 2 goals; 14th, nil.

Third Chukker.—After some fast play Sutherland got away and finished up a good run by scoring for the 14th. Score: 36th, 2 goals; 14th, 1 goal.

Fourth Chukker.—Play was very even, both sides working hard. Farquhar made a good run but his pony came down in front of the 14th's goal. Score: 36th, 2 goals; 14th, 1 goal.

Fifth Chukker.—Fast up and down play slightly in favour of the 14th, off side being given against them at end of the chukker. Score: 36th, 2 goals; 14th, 1 goal.

Sixth Chukker.—The 14th pressed the 36th very hard, but although several of their shots went very close they failed to equalise and the 36th won by 2 to 1.

The wind and dust interfered a good deal with the game. Davidson played a very sound game for the winners.

10TH HODSON'S HORSE vs. 26TH LIGHT CAVALRY.

First Chukker.—A fast evenly contested chukker with no score, both sides playing well. Score nil.

Second Chukker.—The 10th played with great dash and the ball was kept moving in the 26th's half of the ground. Score nil.

Third Chukker.—The 10th continued to hold the 26th and Beresford hit an excellent goal. Soon afterwards the 26th nearly scored, but Goldie just saved in time. The remainder of the chukker was in favour of the 26th. Score: 10th, 1 goal; 26th, nil.

Fourth Chukker.—Very hard fast play followed and Popham equalised with a long shot. Score: 1 goal all.

Fifth Chukker.—Very even play until Popham got through and Moir scored for the 26th. After this the 26th kept the ball near the 10th goal. Score: 26th, 2 goals; 10th, 1 goal.

Sixth Chukker.—Both sides fought hard, but there was no further score and the 26th came out winners by 2 to 1. The play on both sides was of a very high order. The 26th had an advantage in ponies and the 10th were further handicapped by Goldie suffering from a riding strain.

30TH C. I. H. vs. GUIDES.

First Chukker.—On the ball being thrown in, fast up and down play ensued slightly in favour of the C. I. H. who worked the ball down gradually towards the Guides' flags. Todd getting possession scored for the C. I. H. with a grand long shot. From the hit in the ball was neatly passed by Ebrahim and Colonel Watson getting on took it right down to the Guides' flags, where it went wide. Carey shortly after returned the compliment but failed to score. Score: C. I. H., 1 goal; Guides, nil.

Second Chukker.—After a good run by Colonel Watson the ball just went wide, but getting possession again from a back-hander from Ebrahim, he centred the ball nicely with two long shots and looked like scoring, but was cleverly stopped by Blois Johnson. Todd then came with a rush and worked the ball up in front of the flags, where from a scrimmage it was put through. Score: C. I, H., 2 goals; Guides nil.

Third Chukker.—Ebrahim did a lot of work in this chukker and was ably supported by Eckford. With nice clean shots he placed the ball for Watson, who scored. Play was then confined to the centre of the ground, but the C. I. H. coming a bit to much up it to the game were slipped by Davis and Ogilvie and the former maintaining a two lengths lead put the ball through. After a bit of up and down play the ball got dangerously near the C.I.H. flags and Davis with a smart shot under his pony's neck nearly scored. Guides had the best of this chukker. Score: C.I.H., 3 goals; Guides, 1 goal.

Fourth Chukker.—Saw a lot of galloping up and down the ground, Eckford and Blois Johnson both hitting long back handers: a foul was given against C.I.H. for off side who hit out from between the flags and running the length of the ground it went out behind. Davies broke his curb chain during this chukker and went for a trip in the country.

Fifth Chukker.—From the throw in the ball was carried behind the C.I.H. goal line and on being hit out play was confined to the C.I.H. territory, where after a scrimmage in front of goal a pony kicked it through. Score: C.I.H., 3 goals; Guides, 2 goals.

Sixth Chukker.—Both backs cleverly stopped several rushes and the ball was carried up and down, both teams being all out. A fine run by Carey for the Guides and Watson and Ebrahim for the C.I.H. ensued. Todd nicely taking a pass from Watson scored another goal for the C.I.H. on time. Score: C.I.H. 4 goals; Guides, 2 goals.

This was the best game of the afternoon, hard galloping and long hitting being the order of the day. Both teams' ponies were much admired.

17TH CAVALRY vs. 32ND LANCERS.

First Chukker.—Play started even till the 32nd scored, then the 17th passed but failed to get through the defence. Score: 31st, 1 goal; 17th, nil.

Second Chukker.—The 32nd had a run to the 17th goal and continued to press till the end of the chukker. Score: 32nd, 1 goal; 17th, nil.

Third Chukker.—The 32nd continued to have the best of it, Cassels bringing off a very fine long shot at goal. Score: 32nd, 2 goals; 17th, nil.

Fourth Chukker.—An uneventful chukker in favour of the 32nd. Score: 32nd, 2 goals; 17th nil.

Fifth Chukker.—Play started very stickily till the 32nd met a hit out and put the ball through. Yeats Brown afterwards scored the first goal for the 17th. Score: 32nd, 3 goals; 17th, 1 goal.

Sixth Chukker.—The 32nd had two or three shots and scored. Even play followed, the 17th hitting a goal on the call of time, 32nd thus winning by 4 to 2 fairly easily.

31ST (D.C.O.) LANCERS vs. 4TH CAVALRY.

First Chukker.—Was uneventful, play being confined to the centre of the ground, neither side getting anywhere near scoring.

Second Chukker.—From the throw in the 31st attacked and pinned the 4th Cavalry, an off side against the 4th was not given, Anderson by a nice shot scoring a goal. Score: 31st, 1 goal; 4th nil.

Third Chukker.—In this chukker the 4th turned the tables. Williams scored the first goal for the 4th by a very long shot: the ball from the hit out was returned to the 31st's flags and having been twice missed by the 4th forwards, Johnson got a goal from a backhander. The ball was again rushed to the 31st's flags and Wilson scored. After play in mid ground Johnston had a long shot at goal which hit a pony and fluked through. Score: 31st, 1 goal; 4th, 1 goals.

Fourth Chukker.—Up and down play with no score followed and just at the end of the chukker off side was given against 31st.

Fifth Chukker.—31st hit out from between their flags and with a fine combined run and clever passing looked like scoring and Johnson was forced to hit behind. The penalty hit just went wide, play in fourth ground continued, the 31st having by far the best of the game. Ellwood at last got an opening and scored. On the hit out the ball was again carried into 4th ground and 31st looked like getting another goal but Johnston just saved in time.

Sixth Chukker.—At the beginning of the chukker the ball was near the 31st's flags, but carrying it back and attacking vigorously the 4th were hard put to it to save on several occasions and eventually Elwood again scored. A good run of the 31st was spoilt by a broken stick and Dodd after some fast up and down play nearly scored for the 31st just on time. Score: 4th, 4 goals; 31st, 3 goals.

The 31st deserved better luck, they are a young team and played well together; with perhaps a few more first-class ponies they should give a much better account of themselves next year. Each of their players played well and they had the best of the game with the exception of one chukker.

THE 15TH HUSSARS' CUP.

Semi-final.

THE semi-final in the above tournament was played on the Mahomed Bagh ground, Lucknow, on the 2nd instant. The West Ridings scratched at the eleventh hour, owing to their ponies having fallen sick, and there was thus only one game, 17th Lancers vs. Royal Dragoons, though the programme was subsequently filled up by a practice match between the 15th Hussars and the Rifle Brigade. The last-named match was very one-sided, the Hussars winning by nine goals to love.

17TH LANCERS vs. ROYAL DRAGOONS.

First Chukker.—The Lancers attacked twice, and their third shot at goal proved successful. They scored again before the close of the chukker. Score: Lancers, 2 goals; Royal Dragoons, nil.

Second Chukker.—The Royals pressed, then the Lancers got on and scored. Score: Lancers, 3 goals; Royals, nil.

Third Chukker.—The Royals were on the offensive, but their indifferent mounts largely prevented them from completing their attacks. The Lancers hit a goal just before the close. Score: Lancers, 4 goals; Royals, nil.

CRICKET AT PATIALA.

LAHORE C.C. vs. PATIALA.—The above match played at Patiala on the 30th and 31st January, was won by the home team by an innings and 35 runs. Patiala going in first made a capital start, Mistri and Tarrant scoring 105 by fast and good cricket. At the latter part of the game Jaginder Singh and Gokal Chand got runs at a terrific pace. the others helped and the total reached 304. Great regret was felt at Mistri not completing his century as he played a faultless innings of 89. Only Noor Ilahi and Salamat Rai could succeed in making big scores for Lahore. Massie created sensation for a time by hitting freely to the boundaries, but his life was cut short by Gur Baksh Singh, who held him nicely at long off. The rest could do little with the bowling of Tarrant, who captured 8 for 48, and their score stopped at 144. Following on they got only 125, Jagjit Singh and Salamat Rai being the chief contributors. Massie lifted one clean over the boundary for 6, but was soon bowled by Jati Ram, who proved as destructive in the second innings as Tarrant in the first. The bowling honours for the Labore Club rested with Manohar Lal, who took 7 wickets for 71 runs. Jaginder Singh distinguished himself by his brilliant fielding for Patiala. Score:—

FIRST LUCKNOW CHAMPIONSHIP DOG SHOW.

THE above Show, the first of its kind in Lucknow, took place in the grounds of the Mahomed Bagh Club on the 4th and 5th instant. There were 320 entries from all parts of India, and as regards the Fox Terrier class the exhibits are said to have been among the finest in India.

Unfortunately the Show, owing to the numerous engagements during the Civil Service week, met with but poor support from the public, and in future, if similar shows are again held here a more convenient date will be fixed.

As regards the internal arrangements, they were excellent and reflected great credit on the Honorary Secretary, Mr. R. Goodall, who has worked very hard in the interests of the Show.

The Maharaja of Jind, with his English bred dogs, annexed virtually all the principal prizes, including that for the best terrier in the Show.

The prizes were presented on the afternoon of the 5th by Mrs. Sclater, the wife of General Sclater. The Band of the Railway Volunteers was in attendance.

DEER FARMING IN THE UNITED STATES.

FOR some years past the breeding of Arctic foxes for commercial purposes in Sitka and several of the other Alaskan islands has been successfully practised under the auspices of the American Government, while attempts have likewise been made to rear the much more valuable silver-fox. In view of the rapid diminution in the numbers of the wild herds of wapiti, moose, and white-tailed deer throughout the Continent, the U. S. Government Agricultural Department is now seriously considering the feasibility of establishing deer farms in suitable situations, where these animals may be bred in a more a less completely domesticated condition both as a source of meat-supply, and for the purpose of re-stocking the lands from which they have been exterminated. With a view apparently of testing the feeling of the public on the matter, the Department has issued one of its Farmer's Bulletins containing all the available information on the subject, together with suggestions as to the best means of carrying out the experiment, if approved. As the matter is one which ought also to be of interest in this country, we reproduce the purport of the report.

Before the experiment is carried to any length, it will be necessary to modify the existing game laws, which at present prohibit the sale of venison except under very special and restricted conditions. If this were done it is stated that there would be a very large demand indeed for venison in the cities of the United States, where such meat appears to be more esteemed as an article of diet than either beef or mutton. In addition to the venison, the hides and antlers would form an important asset; and it is confidently predicted that if conducted on proper lines, the experiment ought to prove a financial success, and afford an important opening for the profitable employment of capital.

It is also pointed out that deer could be established in many large tracts of country which are absolutely useless for any other purpose, and thus render profitable what are now more or less completely waste lands. Nor is this all, for it is urged that deer are really very valuable foresters, keeping down superfluous undergrowth, and thus aiding the growth of the timber trees. These two statements may be commended to the best attention of those who have control of large tracts of waste land and forest in this country. In America there would be the further advantage that herds of semi-domesticated wapiti would afford great protection to flocks of goats and sheep (with which they would associate on amicable terms) by protecting them from the ravages of wolves and coyotes, to which they are deadly foes. If the experiment were carried out on the lines proposed, it is estimated that in place of being unattainable by 99 per cent., of the population, venison would become as cheap as beef and mutton in all parts of the States.

As regards the prospects of success, it is pointed out that the wapiti and the white-tail are the species most easily bred; the moose being more difficult to deal with. The practicability of establishing such farms in the case of the wapiti is amply demonstrated by the success of the "maralniks" in the Altai, where one of the Asiatic races of the very same species is reared in large numbers for the sake of the revenue yielded by the export of the antlers in the velvet to China, where they are highly esteemed as an aphrodisiac. Moreover, both wapiti and white-tailed deer are already bred in considerable numbers in numerous parks in various parts of the United States, thereby conclusively proving that there are no insuperable difficulties connected with the matter. It is considered, however, to be desirable that attempts should be made to domesticate the herds to a much greater degree than has hitherto been done in the case of any species except the reindeer. Dangerous stags could then be rendered harmless by castration.

The urgent need—altogether apart from considerations of profit—of making at an early date a strenuous effort to increase the number of wapiti in the United States is made evident by a somewhat alarming statement as to the present condition of the existing herds.

At the present time these deer have had their range so restricted that they occur only in a few scattered localities outside the Yellowstone Park and the mountainous country immediately surrounding the same, where large herds still remain. Smaller herds still remain in Colorado, Western Montana, Idaho, Eastern Oregon, Manitoba, British Columbia and the coast ranges of Washington, Oregon, and, North-Western California, while a band of the small Californian race survives in the San Joaquin valley. The herds which spend the summer in the Yellowstone and wander in winter southward and eastward in Wyoming are stated to be the only large ones left in the country, and are estimated to number 30,000 head. Although protected in their summer haunts and partially safeguarded from destruction in winter by the Wyoming Government they have the danger constantly hanging over their heads that they may perish from lack of food during a succession of unusually severe winters. Private breeders have established the important fact that wapiti readily adapt themselves to almost any kind of environment; and even within the comparatively narrow limits of the ordinary Zoological park flourish so well that the herds require periodical thinning. Mr. G. W. Russ, for instance, possesses a herd of over 30 wapiti in Arkansas, which are kept on land covered with forest and underwood in the Ozark mountains, where they enjoy an ample range and improve the forest by clearing out part of the thicket. This gentleman, who had an offer from St. Lewis of 40 cents per lb. for dressed venison, which he was obliged to refuse on account of the restrictions imposed by the game-laws, is of opinion that wapiti breeding could be easily made a very remunerative undertaking.

In view of its wide range, the white-tailed deer would appear adapted for breeding in nearly all parts of the United States. Testimony as to its hardiness and prolific nature in parks and preserves is, however, not so unanimous as in the case of the wapiti, although the general experience of breeders is to the effect that, given suitable range, abundance of good water and reasonable care in winter, this species might be reared as profitably for stocking preserves or for supplying venison as any other kind of live-stock. Not only do these deer thrive on land unsuited for either cattle or horses but, like wapiti, they may be raised with great advantage in brushy or timbered pastures fully stocked with cattle or horses, as under such circumstances the deer will subsist almost exclusively by browsing.

As regards what has already been accomplished in the way of breeding white-tail, Mr. T. Blagden, of Washington, after a quarter of a century's experience is confident that the business could be made to pay. In his own herds the ill-effects of in-breeding have been discounted by the introduction of fresh buck; and his stock is now vigorous and of the large bodily size of the Adirondack and other northern strains. Consequently, the bucks are in demand for breeding-purposes and realise $50 per head while the does realise 75. Another breeder in Iowa, states that till two years ago he sold his surplus stock for park purposes, but now disposes of it for venison, obtaining from $20 to $30 per head for well fattened animals.

In his recent tour of the Dominion, Sir Joseph Ward, Premier of New Zealand, had an interview with Rua a Maori, witch doctor, of whom an amusing story is told. He once claimed that he could walk on the water and went to the beech with a number of natives who were anxious that he should perform the feat. He got out of an awkward fix very well. "Do you truly believe that I can walk on water?" he asked his expectant followers. "Yes," they cried with one voice. "Then there is no need for me to do it," remarked the chief and cooly walked away.

Sporting & Athletic Notes.

After a two weeks' interval racing began again in Calcutta with the Sixth Extra on Saturday. The programme provided did not hold forth promise of any very exciting sport, but things did not pan out so badly and there was a very fair day's racing on the whole. The dearth of light jockeys rather upset the handicaps and Harene, who ran twice declared 31lb. in one race and 14lb. in the other! The attendance was not bad for the time of year.

The 14-1 pony race, never much of a success, only drew four starters and Wal, the favourite, was able to win in a walk from Tod. Eventide would probably have been second, but when her little jockey raised his whip at the bend she tried to get out and swerved right across the course finishing on the outside rails.

Eleven started for the Bengal Plate, Palindrome and Singleton much backed and with a lot of money on Haloya for a place. The race was a good one to watch, as Singleton and Patimdrome were out by themselves fighting neck and neck all the way down the straight and the former just got the better of it on the post by a short head. Haloya failed to get his place, as he seemed to find the weight too much for him when it came to galloping at the finish and was somewhere about fifth or sixth.

In the Curzon Plate the books opened out Andros at 2 to 1 on, but the horse hurt himself in the race and could only finish third. He pulled up very lame indeed and could hardly be got off the course. With the favourite hurt Captain Carrington had no serious opposition and he ran in an easy winner by two and a half lengths.

Mount Dane, who was looking in magnificent condition but a bit on the big side, was at once made favourite for the Lansdowne Plate. Galley Slave served best in the handicap, but with an inexperienced native boy up no one thought him worth backing and he started at tens and twelves. Blitzen, who was at a long price at one time, had a lot of money put on him and closed at threes.

In the race Galley Slave's jockey disappointed expectations by riding with considerable judgment. He occupied a good position throughout the race and then after Mount Dane caught him in the straight came again and won very easily by two lengths. Blitzen could only get third. We were glad to see Mr. Dudley in silk again in this race after three years' absence from active participation in Calcutta racing. He had a nice mount on Dirty Boy, who came up strongly at the finish and was placed fourth.

Crossbred and Mercedes were favourites for the Curzon Plate, but the former apparently found the weight too much and could not get there at all and Mercedes was beaten by Sue, who was well backed by her stable.

Golden Morn and Palindrome were equally well backed for the Outram Plate and then a sudden rush on Little Meg brought her next in the betting. Golden Morn, however, proved a great disappointment and could only run fourth and Palindrome beat Little Meg with considerable ease, and even if she had carried her proper weight instead of declaring 8lb. she probably would never have caught the winner, though it would have been a very close thing. Harene, who declared a stone, finished third.

A number of prominent local sportsmen are leaving for Home shortly. Mr. R. Boteler, the stipendiary steward of the C. T. C., goes at the end of the month, Mr. R. G. Bates is off as soon as the racing is over: Mr. and Mrs. Paris left Calcutta last week and Captain E. Gibbs was among those who went away by the last mail. Captain Holden is also going on leave this year.

The prospects for the Seventh Extra on Saturday are excellent. The programme is interesting including a hurdle race, an R.C. event, a half mile race, a big pony race, a five furlong selling handicap and a six furlong handicap. The hurdle race for hunters has attracted 15 entrants of whom probably eight will go and the numbers in the others are Selling Handicap 21, Serpentine Plate (6 furlongs) 27, Valentine Plate (R.C. 15, Mayo Plate (ponies) 23, Esplanade Plate (1 miles) 17. Of these 118 entries in six races, 20 are duplicates, but as one or two of them may start twice we get a net average of about 16 per race, which is very good indeed, and we are likely to see good fields and open racing. Several new comers are entered and it looks as if the supply of horses will be good enough to give us racing well into March. Indeed we hear that an Eleventh Extra on 20th March is already practically decided upon and that sporting event the Balaclava Stakes is down for that day. Apropos the Light Horse Paperchase is to be run on 12th March.

Only four of the hunters were out schooling on Tuesday afternoon and we understand that from sickness and other causes the field will probably be reduced to very meagre dimensions. Pardon (Butlin) and Prince Moorfield (Mr. Levetus) went a mile over 5 flights. Pardon fenced well but dieed away to nothing even though the pace was not very strong and Prince Moorfield dwelt a great deal at his jumps. Then Maisonette (McNeilage) and Benalbi (Mr. Charrington) schooled fairly fast over 4 hurdles. Benalbi is a very big dark brown horse of a very good type. He fences well and moves easily with a very long stride which makes him look to be moving more slowly than he really is.

The Native Cavalry Polo Tournament was concluded at Umballa on the 13th instant when the 39th Central India Horse beat the 18th Lancers by 6 goals to 5 in the final. It was a fine display of polo and a keenly contested game. The score being 5 all at the end of the sixth chukker, the game was continued with widened goals and the Central India Horse scored the winning point. Details in our Polo columns.

The Native Cavalry Tent-pegging competitions were held at Umballa on the 10th instant. There was a large assembly of spectators and the 8th Cavalry were "at home." The following regiments competed: The 5th, 6th, 8th, 16th, 17th, 21st, 23rd, 25th, 28th, 36th, 38th and Guides Cavalry; the 7th, 10th, 11th, 15th, 18th and 31st Lancers. The winners were the 23rd Cavalry with 79 points, the 32nd and 5th coming next with 68 each. In tent-pegging by sections the 17th Cavalry won with 27 points; the 8th, 21st and Guides tieing for second place with 26 points. The officers' competition was won by the 31st Lancers with 32 points.

The annual meeting of the Indian Polo Association was held at the 8th Cavalry Mess House at Umballa on the 11th instant, Colonel Rivett Carnac presiding. Lieutenant-Colonel Lecky, the Honorary Secretary, presented the accounts. There was a general feeling that the sum of Rs. 3,692-12 paid to Colonel Mayne, C. B., as Official Measurer was an unauthorised expenditure and should come out of the pockets of the members of last year's committee, who alone are responsible. The meeting, however, could not agree to this and the accounts were passed. The election of President was next considered and it was decided to ask General Jocelyn Wodehouse to accept the office. Colonel Lecky having expressed his desire to resign the Honorary Secretaryship it was proposed by Major Chaplin, that, subject to his consenting, Major Becher, 8th Cavalry, be elected to succeed Colonel Lecky. The motion was carried with applause. Colonel Rivett Carnac placed on record the long and valued service rendered to the Association by the retiring Secretary and the public feeling of regret at his resignation.

The rest of the agenda was then dealt with. Lieutenant-Colonel Vaughan's proposal regarding the new constitution of the I. P. A. Committee was agreed to by all present but not passed, as Colonel Vaughan wished to add to it by saying that the Members' Committee should take the place of the General Meeting, and as this had not been circulated it could not actually be passed but would be brought up again next year.

Colonel Vaughan's proposal that life certificates be given to ponies of certain ages and heights was thrown out unanimously as quite impracticable and certain to increase the price of Native Cavalry remounts in Calcutta and Bombay if adopted. The only class to be now bought cheaply are the young Native Cavalry ponies and these are only cheap because they may grow over-height: if once life certificates are granted to them their price will increase enormously.

Mr. R. W. Manderson's proposals regarding penalty 8A and the translation of Polo rules into the vernaculars were not carried, being considered unnecessary. Colonel Edwards' proposal re I. P. A. Meetings to be held alternately at Umballa and Secunderabad or Poona was evenly voted for, but this now depends on Colonel Vaughan's proposal noted above, in which case a general meeting of representative members could be arranged for at such place as suits themselves. Colonel Edwards' proposals that no Official Measurer be appointed and that the form list be abolished were carried. With reference to life certificates for six-year-old ponies it was decided that the present rule remain unaltered, and the proposal regarding the rejection of racing certificates was not carried.

With reference to the definitions of a first-class Tournament Colonel Edwards' proposal was carried.

Colonel Lecky said that about Rs. 2,500 would be available for disbursement by the 31st March.

A London correspondent writes:—One of the curiosities of the day is the practical absence of betting on the Derby. There may soon be some quotation but backers do not seem keen. They had a "quietener" last year over Signorinetta, and they have not yet forgotten their 1907 experiences with Slieve Gallion, to say nothing of Lally-and company in 1906. These are not happenings that can be dismissed from the mind as easily as a candle is blown out. They "bite." Further, the winter prices are not commensurate with the risks involved, and I can speak of many a lover of a Derby bet having decided that a wager on the day of the race will be good enough for him.

A disturbing quantity in this year's Derby is the presence of the American colt Sir Martin, now trained by Joseph Cannon. If he is as good as represented he might easily beat even Bayardo. Newmarket opinion appears very favourable to the son of Ogden and Lady Sterling, and though no American-reared horse has won the Derby since Iroquois (1881), that is no argument against Sir Martin. With an "unknown" of his stamp in the race, backers wisely give the Derby "a miss," the more particularly as the pair cannot meet in the Two Thousand Guineas. Bayardo is in the Newmarket race, but Sir Martin is not.

That Bayardo should beat the English division seems very clear. He did everything asked him last year, and though the hypercritical took exception to the style in which he won the Middle Park Plate—some even declaring him to be "played out," and sympathising with Maher engaging himself for the colt's classic engagements this coming season—they quickly revised their opinions after the Dewhurst Plate, a race the son of Bay Ronald won hard held. The Middle Park Plate form of the Manton colt came in for adverse criticism because he ran with his mouth open. Well, Flying Fox used to run with his tongue lolling out. That, however, did not prevent him winning the Two Thousand, the Derby, and the St. Leger.

The Lancet, that most ingenious of medical papers, which is for ever finding out reasons why we should not do some particular thing, but should do something else instead, has just been pointing out that golf, regarded as a mental relief and physical recreation, may ruffle rather than soothe the feelings.

Of course, if one plays golf well, and if one always beats the other man, it is all very well; but suppose that a man who is by nature ambitious and persevering takes up the "royal and antient game" and turns out a rank duffer at it, what then? Flying from business cares and worries, the sufferer seeks relief upon the links, but at the first tee, after missing the ball altogether half-a-dozen times, he removes a portion of the surface of the links, smashes his club, and moves the obstinate ball several inches.

What a moment is this for a really sensitive soul! Even if his only companion be a well-trained caddie of impassive countenance the player's shame and annoyance at his own clumsiness are of the most acute description; nay, even if he be entirely alone his condemnation of himself cannot be avoided, and he begins, continues, and finishes his game in an atmosphere of mental anguish which is infinitely bad for both body and mind. Far better for him had the victim of his own bad play stayed at work and denied himself this "recreation."

Of course, there are duffers who either do not know that they are duffers or who are of that sweetly placid frame of mind which suffers their own dufferdom gladly. We have all heard of the man who remarked, "I did the first hole in ten, and the next in seventeen, but after that I went all to pieces." To such serene minds golf does no sort of harm; but to the ambitious yet unsuccessful player it may bring mental ruin.

The remedy, of course, as our medical contemporary points out, is to indulge in some non-competitive and unskilled form of exercise such as walking or cycling—or, we might add, keeping rabbits.

You see, we are getting a terribly nervous people nowadays, and so it becomes more than ever necessary for us to take our recreations restfully. We may admire the splendid people who can play games and be content to learn slowly so that they do their best. We may realise that if everybody worried himself into a state of ill-health because he could not master a game at the offset, we should have very few games and very few players in a land which has been proud to think itself the home of manly sport; but then we must remember our nerves.

Yes, the man who cannot play golf or tiddley-winks or any other game without worrying over his lack of success, inflicting his troubles on others, and lying awake at night thinking about them had far better do something else. On the whole, we think the rabbits would be the safest.

If the late Mr. Barnum were now in England looking for fresh freaks he might find some interesting specimens among the town councillors of Tottenham. At a recent meeting of the Council, we read that some imbecile, supported by certain others in the same pitiable condition, took exception to the letting of the municipal hall for a boxing and wrestling exhibition, the councillor who called attention to the matter saying that he protested against what ought to be the most dignified buildings in the parish being used for such a "debasing purpose."!

One sane councillor remarked that in regard to a similar exhibition recently held at the hall he had heard it said that if the proceedings had been in a church they could not have been better conducted, and another declared that that display was far more orderly than many meetings of the council. A proposal that promoters should be informed that they could not have the use of the hall was defeated and the exhibition was held.

Overheard at the Poona manœuvres—Khedite army. Artillery umpire to his "hairy" after it has taken charge and dashed into the middle of the teams:—

We all know you're a poor old "hairy"
We all know you're blasted plain
We all know you're most contrary
Now you'll know you're no aëroplane.

N. B.—For the benefit of our readers we may mention that a "hairy" is an artillery or ammunition column horse that is turned out under orders as a charger on manœuvres, etc.

The date of the annual regatta of the Madras Boat Club has been changed to the 20th March.

Twenty-eight teams have entered this year for the Punjab Native Army Hockey Tournament, which begins at Jhelum on the 1st March.

Weiss, the Australian Billiard champion, met a local player at Lucknow on the 10th instant, conceding him 500 in a game of 800 up. Weiss won easily by 199 points, his best breaks being 175,154,119 and 63.

The Native Army Hockey Tournament for the Cup presented by General Alderson was concluded at Poona on the 10th instant, when the 66th Punjabis beat the Sappers and Miners after a fast and exciting game by a goal to nil.

Entries for the All-India Hockey Tournament close on the night of Friday, the 19th February. The draw will take place on Saturday, the 20th, and the result will at once be announced. No team which has not paid the entrance fee by the 19th February will be included in the draw. The Secretary of the tournament this year is Mr. C. Moore, I.C.S., Allahabad.

The athletic sports organised by the Madras Cricket Club will be held at Chepauk on the 19th and 20th instant when an excellent programme of 12 events will be discussed. Entries are very good and a most successful meeting is anticipated.

It is satisfactory to learn that the Rugby Football trouble is now at an end and the match for the Calcutta cup between England and Scotland will be played. Reuter wires that following on an unanimous agreement by the International Rugby Football Board there will be no allowances to players in future.

England scored a double football victory over Ireland on the 13th instant, winning the rugby International match by 11 points to 5, and the association match by 4 goals to nil.

The short account of snake catching which appears further on may be of interest to our readers, in view of the correspondence on this subject which has lately been going on in the London Field.

A number of inter-regimental boxing contests will be held at the Columbia Rink to-night. The programme, which is under the management of the officers of the Gordon Highlanders and West Kent Regiment, will include a fifteen-round middle-weight contest, and five six-round contests, for middle, light, and feather-weights. As both regiments can place some good men in the ring an interesting display can be looked for.

An excellent tournament has just been held at that famous polo centre, Jodhpore. The tourney was in honour of the Maharaj Kumar's birthday and four teams entered, Jodhpur "A," "B" and "C" and the Quetta Gymkhana. Quetta were beaten by "B" team in the first round by 4 goals to 1 and "C" team were obliged to scratch owing to various casualties. The final between "A" and "B" teams produced a splendid match, "A" team eventually winning by 7 goals to nil.

A telegram from Sydney, dated 19th January, states that the New South Wales Cabinet has decided to introduce legislation to regulate the control of boxing contests. The Premier, in referring to the matter, said the only effective method to deal with those contests was to give the Government discretionary power to use its good sense. Pending legislation the Government had agreed to take action where any fighting took place or whenever gloves less than 6 ounces were used.

Tommy Burns expresses himself anxious for another fight with Johnson—just one more, to be his last appearance in the prize ring, win or lose. He has talked a good deal since his defeat and has now discovered that Johnson has only got one punch that hurts—the right hand upper cut. It was this blow that dazed him in the first round. He says that the referee in breaking through a clinch pulled his left arm down from its guarding position and Johnson got the blow in. Burns has given his opinion on the decision of the New South Wales Cabinet to insist upon clean breaks and no in-fighting. He considers this a good idea, and goes on to say that a man would not get hurt as quickly if there were clean breaks. One could do more damage at in-fighting. It would not do any harm if boxers had to quit in-fighting. Without it contests would be more often decided on points, and there would not be so much punishment inflicted on contestants. His first 12 or 13 matches were all carried through with clean breaks and no in-fighting. In his match with Johnson there was not an effective blow at long range.

THE Artillery Boxing Tournament at Secunderabad was brought to a conclusion on the 8th instant and Colonel Cadell, R. A., and Captain Craven are to be congratulated on the success which attended their efforts. There was a very big gathering of spectators on the last night when some special four and six-round contests were decided in addition to the final bouts in the various classes. Results :—Boys Light-Weights : Edwards (1st Battery R.F.A.) beat Dunce (13th Hussars). Boys—Heavy Weights : Adrich (1st Battery R.F.A.) beat Staples (16th Battery). Bantams : Murray (13th Hussars) beat Ince (Royal Fusiliers). Feather Weights : Howard (Cheshires) beat Munday (13th Hussars). The latter was disqualified for holding. 9st. 7lb. Class. Dr. Hocking (1st Battery) beat Bombr. Perryman (16th Battery). Light Weights : Dr. Shaw beat Evans (13th Hussars). 10st. 7lb. Class : Gnr. Clarke (16 Battery) beat Gnr. Kelly (1st Battery). One of the best fights during the evening was that between Corpl. Chapman (G Battery R. H. A.) and Gnr. Hicks (1st Battery R. F. A.). Chapman was Light Weight Champion of All India in 1904, 1905 and 1906 and showing good form in the present contest was given the verdict ; Hicks putting up a game fight.

THE Laver Hockey Tournament is now in progress at Secunderabad. The first game was played on the 8th instant, when the Cheshire Regiment beat the Railway "A" team by 6 goals to nil. The following day the Railway "B" team were beaten by the 95th and 97th Pioneers combined team by the same margin. On the 10th instant the 61st Pioneers easily defeated the Mahbub College by 9 goals to 1, and last Thursday an excellent game was witnessed between the Royal Fusiliers and Manchester Regiment. The game was drawn with the score 1 all, but in the extra period the Fusiliers scored again and ran out victorious.

WE have to thank the Superintendent of the Indian Museum for a copy of Asiatic Horns and Antlers. It is well got up and each species is illustrated from photographs. The price is Rs. 2.

THREE races were decided at the first of the series of Australasian swimming champions at Sydney on the 16th and 18th January. The programme opened with a display of diving which is reported to have been unique. An exhibition of life-saving followed and then came the 100 yards championship. The competitors were Cecil Healy (previous holder of the distinction), who with Harold Hardwick and the young Solomon Islander, Alick Wickham, represented New South Wales, C. Graham Queensland and T. W. Mason Victoria. Hardwick led for the first 20 yards, then Healy went ahead, and leading the rest of the way won by three yards. Hardwick was second and Wickham almost neck and neck with the Sydney Club's topnotcher, third. The Queenslander (Graham) touched the board 1½ yard in the rear of Wickham. The winner's time was 58½sec—1½sec. slower than the Australasian record created by him last April.

For the half-mile championship of Australasia Frank Beaurepaire (Victoria), holder of the title, A. D. Hill, J. R. Garland and H. Hardwick (representing New South Wales), G. Graham (Queensland), H. Eaton (South Australia) and J. Gunn and T. W. Mason (Victoria) lined up on the starting platform. They were together for the first length, then Beaurepaire took the lead : he completed the half distance in 5mins. 46⅕secs, and eventually won by 40 yards in 11mins. 36⅗secs. There was an excellent race for second place between Hardwick and Mason, the former securing the position by a touch. Garland filled fourth place, 25 yards away ; Hill fifth, and Gunn sixth, with the South Australian (Eaton) last. Beaurepaire occupied 11mins. 36⅗secs. over the journey, Hardwick 12mins. 2⅗secs., Mason 12mins. 2⅘secs., Garland 12mins. 31⅕secs. Hill 12mins. 42⅘secs., Gunn 13mins. 0⅘sec. and Eaton 13mins. 13⅗secs. The race for the mile championship took place on the 18th instant, Beaurepaire winning easily. The competitors were :—Garland (New South Wales) Graham (Queensland), Beaurepaire, Mason and Gunn (Victoria) and Eaton (South Australia.) When the fourth length was completed Garland and Beaurepaire were leading together, the latter showing the way six yards in front of Garland at 660 yards, Mason third. Beaurepaire continued to increase his lead for the rest of the journey and won by 90 yards. Garland and Mason fought a determined duel for second place, Garland winning by about 10 yards. Then, over a lap (110 yards) behind the winner came C. Graham (Queensland) and H. Eaton (South Australia.) They had kept each other pretty close company, with the Queenslander five or ten yards in front for the whole journey. In the last lap Eaton made a gallant effort to get up, but Graham ducked his head in the last thirty yards and finished very fast with the crawl stroke, being yards in front of Eaton.

SOME curious and interesting points in connection with modern sports were discussed by Lord Alverstone, the Lord Chief Justice, in a lecture last month at the Inns of Court Mission Institute, Drury Lane.

Since his college days, he observed in spite of increased training, high jumping had gone back two or more inches under six feet in the university sports. As to cycling, he recalled that when the low-wheel bicycle came in they made the high-wheel machine give it a start.

A fact about tight-rope walking was that it was natural. He had known a family of three or four brothers who were able to walk the tight rope from infancy. Tobogganing he described as "a dangerous sport," which he believed was practised on Highgate Hill on a tea tray. A summary of Lord Alverstone's remarks appear in our Athletic columns.

THE Minister's Cricket Cup Tournament at Secunderabad has ended this year in a win for the Futteh Maidan Gymkhana. They beat the Royal Fusiliers in the final game by five wickets. Scores will be found in the usual column.

THE annual sports of the Bengal Presidency Amateur Athletic Association will be held at the Eden Gardens on Saturday. The entries this year are exceptionally good, numbering over two hundred. The amateur events have all filled well, there are the usual large entries in the British and Native Army races and we may expect some fine performances. The tug-of-war has this year drawn a record entry, seven teams have sent in their names and with the Wiltshires, 8th and 9th Mountain Batteries, and Shropshires among these we can look forward to some splendid pulls. As in previous years, the heats will be run off on Friday commencing at 3-30 P.M., and we may draw the attention of our readers to the fact that with nearly thirty events down for decision a visit to the grounds on Friday evening will be amply repaid, for one is certain to see good sport. We have been asked by the executive to notify the advisability of purchasing subscribers' tickets before the day of the meeting ; the Honorary Secretary, Dr. Gray, 25, Chowringhee, will be happy to supply these at the usual price, Rs. 5 each.

THE Alderson Hockey Tournament for British troops ended at Poona in a win for the Northamptons who beat the Worcesters in the final by 3 goals to nil.

LAWN Tennis Tournaments occupy a good deal of public interest at this season of the year. The Punjab Tournament was concluded last evening. We publish results elsewhere. The tourney was this year remarkable for the defeat of the Punjab and Bengal champion, E. M. Atkinson, who was beaten by J. C. S. Rendall in the second round of the Singles, Rendall repeating his last year's performance by beating L. S. Deane in the final. Atkinson and L. S. Deane secured the doubles and will represent the Punjab at the coming Bengal championships. These begin at the Eden Gardens, Calcutta, on the 24th instant. The entries, we are given to understand, are not as numerous as they should be. Most of the veterans who have competed during the past two or three years have entered the lists once more, but there does not appear to be a big improvement in the numbers of new players. The South India championships are now in progress and complete results will be published in our next issue. The important contests so far decided are the championship singles in which J. F. Graham beat H. J. Allen and the Open Doubles in which these two players beat A. S. Milne and Captain N. Low.

WE are informed that His Majesty the King of Spain has been pleased to appoint M. L. Grezoux, Agent of the Messageries Maritimes deFrance, Vice-Consul for Spain in Calcutta. The Spanish Consulate will be transferred in future to 5/6 Hare Street.

OUR Bombay correspondent writes :—A start was made with the big meeting on Wednesday, when, as in the early Extras, the books surprisingly had the better of exchanges. With a big crowd out, the enclosure presented quite an animated scene, and, as there are probably more horses seen out in the mornings ready to run for their lives we may confidently look forward to first class sport during the remaining days. There were six events and only two favourites flattered, two races providing disastrous upsets.

SHERIFF gave punters a good start in the half mile scurry for new ones, though he lost many friends after his defeat, which was pretty accurately described as being due to his rider's over-confidence. Winchester went with him for a time, then his stable companion Hachal and finally Patras reproduced his original form only for the diminutive grey to go away again from each in turn. Big as his purchase money was, he has probably won it back many times over.

A TICKET for 400 to 10 about the winner of the Paddock Plate was shown to me as proof of how his own stable even despised Mountain King. They really have themselves to blame for backing him when Kamad used to ask him to perform little short of a miracle by dashing away lengths in front. Ames had the handling of him now and I hope has disillusioned them, as did Vedas his own when ridden a patient race. Bay Middleton was favourite, but the finish lay between two outsiders, the winner and Betty, with Creditor and Sabah, the latter especially, having bad runs and finishing well.

THIRDLY the Importers' Plate with Mereworth a very warm favourite from Metal Boy, Paul Pry, and four others. When Mereworth jumped away in front many people actually began to make their way off the stand saying it was all over. This was far from the case, as Twistum was only a length off and level at the beginning of the turn, followed by Paul Pry and Metal Boy. At the distance Killorn began to move on the favourite and Evans, cool as ever, gradually drew away on Twistum. It was a desperate race for the one place, Mereworth just saving it from Paul Pry, an improved Paul Pry from Saturday, and Metal Boy all in a bunch.

AGAIN only seven faced the starter for the Bombay City Plate with Kaffirpan beating Wise Bird for favouritism, Wandin and Sacricomar next. It was a good start, Wise Bird and Bull Dog together in front and Kaffirpan last. When they strung out a bit the order was Bull Dog, Wise Bird, Sacricomar, Wandin, Devereux, Misty Morn, Kaffirpan. Half way Wandin put in a run outside and raced level with Bull Dog, Devereux passing Sacricomar. Melsom had Bull Dog very nicely within himself, so that entering the straight he went away from Wandin, who saved place money by a head from Wise Bird and Devereux. A good horse as we know the winner to be, it is bad luck he should run into form without any warning to his owner.

A LOSER up to the Dealers' Plate should have been able to make good on Jehangir, but a doubt arose about him when money came plentifully for Famous on the supposition that a gallop or two had brought him on. The race needs but little description as, after Wild Poppy had led for a time, Jehangir went to the front and stayed there without being really asked to extend. Famous gave his backers hope just before the bend, but could not beat Bendigo for second place.

Lastly, the Fort Plate with Sir Jamal warm favourite from Gafal and Mudkoor. We knew next to nothing of Mudkoor except that a rumour went round of his defeat of Meerjan in a gallop. He displaced Hishan at the bend and got home half a length from Gafal, who was shut in and would find many supporters were the race re-run.

We are disappointed not to see Mr. Galstaun here but Lieutenant-Colonel Desaraj Urs was present to see Twistum win, also H. H. the Kour Saheb, Sir Pertab Singh and H. H. of Jodhpore.

Of the five teams entered for the Bombay Polo Tournament two have scratched. The first game was played on Tuesday when Bhopal unexpectedly beat Idar by 3 goals to 2, scoring two goals in the last chukker. Bhopal meet the Poona Horse in the final to-day.

The second [illegible]on Saturday was naturally better attended, betti[illegible]oeing heavy and brisk, but the punters had a trifle the better of it. One cannot say there were any really stirring finishes, but nevertheless the racing was classy and some of the wins pretty to see. Several trainers are complaining of coughs and fever amongst their charges, and the main sufferer is Jack Scott, who scratched all his, including Melbourne and Hughie, whom we would have liked to have seen run. Except, of course, in Arab races, Bombay owners did not have a good time, but all the waler winners were well backed.

Starting with the Melton Plate, the supposed moral of the day, Hyder, went down, though had he not been ridden outside King Henry, Chechan and Winchester almost all the way and thus opened to a bad bump at the bend this would probably not have been the case. As it was, Winchester came into the lead at the bend, but then found Zamorin come through and pass him fairly easily. Little Sheriff got away very badly and was never in it.

The Tom LeMesurier Plate also was a bit of a set back for punters with Meerjan, Saree and Grey Falcon in most demand in a very open race. To begin with, Mumbra and Sir Jamal in turn made the pace from Grey Falcon, Meerjan and Bay Middleton. All three bar Meerjan fell back at the bend, where he led easily from Bay Middleton with Saree coming through late and Gafal wide outside. Gafal had got away absolutely last but, instead of being shut in as last time, gradually drew up on the leader and won a very pretty race.

Tangaroa was always looked upon as a moral for the Malabar Hill Plate, though money for Wise Bird and Lovania enable one to get a bit over evens on the Trials winner. The favourite shot away from his field at the start, assumed a commanding lead and had Twistum and Lovania well beaten at the bend. Wise Bird made an effort down the straight, but to no avail and Killua's run was far too late, Tangaroa winning very easily.

Considerable interest was taken in the Bombay Derby with Jehangir always a hot favourite, calls coming for Famous, Sialkote and Dhafer. Mr. O'Gorman got them off in his usual competent manner and Colaba, Merrily and Nooman set the pace. Young Kohinoor put in a dash from last to first, showing he was merely pace-maker for the favourite and did not last long. Nooman and Dhafer were next to go out and then Colaba displaced the former, Jehangir always handy with Sialkote. Nearing the bend Dhafer fell away and Jehangir came up to Colaba going very easy, Sialkote, Famous and Merrily next. Down the straight there was nothing to touch Jehangir, who was followed by Colaba, Merrily, Sialkote and Famous, all under the whip. Jehangir has admirably carried out the promise he gave in Poona to Bleach's credit, and Alf. Hoyt could not have ridden a better judged race.

In the Grand Western those who thought Paddy's Darling a good thing on Melbourne being scratched were disillusioned when very determined calls came for Master Theo, Absentee and Stirabout being next. Paddy's Darling immediately took a commanding lead from Master Theo and the race developed into a two-horse affair. Nearing the three furlongs Mr. Jiji's was coming fast, and when he drew level he looked good. Whalley rode a very nice race, though eventually winning comfortably, Kaffirpan and Absentee being next to Paddy's Darling; the former of these running very differently to Wednesday..

When betting opened on the Importers' Handicap, Squire Alfred, Uro and The Rooster were in demand, but the last-named extending another two-horse race was promised. To begin with, Squire Alfred was never in it and Uro only got through at the distance, where The Rooster was too far ahead of him to be caught after passing Gambara and Bucolic. The Rooster's finish when he won last must have been very deceptive, as he now won as he liked, and one has no reason to believe it would have ended otherwise even had Uro had a better run.

Finally the pony race, the Stewards' Purse, with only Hughie scratched, leaving ten. Wild Boy and Russley Rose starting shortest, Lorraine went with a sudden rush from fives to twos and then to six to four with Russley Rose seven to two —sixes bar two. In the race there was really nothing in it but Lorraine, who passed Comeback within a furlong and then was not troubled, though Cracker hung on gamely all the way and Russley Rose put in a very fast dash at the finish which was too late to give his supporters much hope.

The agitation for the acquisition of the Crystal Palace for national purposes I think I noted some time ago: it is, I am glad to say, still in full swing. We cannot allow so large an open space to be built over. What with the Suffragettes, the Army Airships, Carrie Nation and other space-filling phenomena, space we want and space we will have The said Carrie Nation, saloon smasher and public nuisance has descended at last on London and had to own defeat in her first battle. Her descent was rather dramatic to begin with, but the wind up was screamingly funny. She lost no time for she drove straight from St. Pancras to the Oxford Music Hall and there created a scene unexampled in the history of that popular house of varieties. The ancient female, for she is now sixty-three, was accompanied by a a lady sympathiser, and she procured a five-shilling ticket in the ordinary way by paying for it at the box office. Despite her striking and undeniably unprepossessing appearance the attendants downstairs did not recognise her, although they raised their eyebrows in astonishment to see an elderly woman with large spectacles and a copious flowing veil pass up the carpeted stairs. Entering the bar she immediately attacked the barmaids, then the customers, hurling abuse around with impartiality, snatching at men's cigars and cigarettes, amidst shrieks of laughter or angry growls, according as she affected her audience. Ultimately, amid cries of "Have a drop of gin, old dear" cat calls and much whistling this incorrigible peace-breaker and most *in*temperate temperance apostle was put into the street by a stalwart commissionaire. Since then she has appeared at a few music halls and been booed, hissed, and pelted with eggs and garbage and the curtain at each place had to be lowered ere order could be restored!

Our Army aëroplane has been at it again, and our eyes have been regaled by the vision of its crumpled-up condition. But hope springs eternal in the human breast, and the experts realise that there is nothing like getting under way in good time and that even the non-existent makes in this country a capital excuse for a banquet. So the Aëroplane Club of Great Britain and Ireland has been holding its first annual dinner, after which there followed more plain speaking than plain sailing. Mr. Horridge, K.C., M.P., regardless of the proverb which deprecates the premature counting of chickens, took upon himself to speculate concerning the prospect of the policeman of the future timing the test mile in the air, and seemed inclined to think there might be some difficulty about it. But surely Mr. Horridge, a lawyer, must know that for centuries we have had justices in eyre—so why not policemen?

But let me leave the doings of the aviators and tell you about the goings on of other—"ators" (no prize offered for finding the missing syllables). The Stirling-Atherton-Northland matrimonial case continues to excite the usual interest, the public insist on taking in anything unsavoury. Mrs. Stirling charges Mr. S. with certain little seventh commandment matters in respect of the beautiful Mrs. Atherton, whose name, as Anglo-Indian readers know, was not so long ago coupled with that of Captain Yarde-Buller, who transferred his affections (after figuring as "Co." in the Atherton divorce case) to a musical comedy star. Mr. Stirling suggests that Mrs. S. is in the same boat and names Lord Northland as the wrecker of his domestic hearth, and, as may be imagined, what with the evidence of French maids, nurses, waiters, keyhole witnesses and others the nasty business provides pages of copy

While on this subject I may as well mention a curious matrimonial tangle in which a couple pretty well-known in Indian military society have presented an English jury with as complicated a marriage problem as ever came before a Divorce Court. I allude to the case of Monck Mason vs. Monck Mason and Robinson.

Captain Roger Henry Monck Mason, an officer in the Royal Munster Fusiliers, asked for a divorce from his wife, Ethel Beatrice Monck Mason, on the ground of her misconduct with Captain Edward Ernest Robinson. The precise positions of the parties may be tabulated thus :—

1878. Captain Robinson married an American lady.

1893. Captain Robinson married Miss Strickland.

1901. Mrs. Robinson, née Strickland, obtained a decree that her marriage with Captain Robinson was null on the ground that the American divorce was not valid in this country. In the same year Mrs. Robinson married Captain Mason.

1908. While Captain Mason was in India his wife was at San Remo, living with her former husband.

Captain Edward Earnest Robinson, the correspondent, surely occupied a position such as no correspondent has been in before. He had actually been married years ago to the lady whom the Court held to be his partner in a "cruel" matrimonial wrong.

From 1893 until 1901 he had been regarded in the eyes of the law as her husband.

In the former year Miss Ethel Beatrice Strickland, the daughter of an officer in the Army, met Captain Robinson, who represented that he was a widower. They were married, and he lived with her until 1898, when he left her. She set inquiries afoot, which divulged the fact that he had been no widower at all. He had another wife, living in the United States—a wife, indeed, who had gone through a Californian formality of divorcing him. But, as he was an Englishman, this Californian divorce was worthless.

"Mrs. Robinson" insisted on the worthlessness of it when, in 1901, before Sir Francis Jeune, she appeared as petitioner in the English Divorce Court to divorce the man who had deceived her, and get her marriage to him annulled.

This week in the same Court, before Mr. Justice Bargrave Deane, she performed a complete volte face. She insisted now that Captain Robinson was her true husband, and that his divorce from his first wife was quite valid.

Last year she returned to her old love, when her second husband, Captain Roger Henry Monck Mason, was in India.

The Court granted a decree nisi with £2,000 damages against Robinson.

The Imperial Press Conference progresses. About sixty proprietors or editors of newspapers in Australasia, Canada, India, South Africa, and other parts of the British Empire outside Great Britain and Ireland will be the guests of the Press of the United Kingdom.

An exceedingly strong committee includes the proprietors or editors, or both, of practically all the leading newspapers in London and the provinces. Never before has the Press in general entered upon any public undertaking with such extraordinary unanimity.

Lord Burnham is president of the conference, Lord Northcliffe is honorary treasurer. Mr. C. Arthur Pearson is chairman of the executive committee, and Mr. Harry E. Brittain is honorary secretary.

The Prince of Wales has intimated that he will give a garden party at Marlborough House to which the delegates will be invited. His Royal Highness, whose recent travels through our principal Colonies have given him so deep an insight into imperial affairs, has been prompt to realise the immense importance of the visit of the Colonial editors.

His Majesty's Government will entertain the delegates at an official banquet ; the Lord Mayor and Corporation of London will extend to them the hospitality of the Mansion House ; the Duke and Duchess of Sutherland will give an evening reception in their honour at Sutherland House.

On Saturday, 5th June, the proceedings of the conference will open with a banquet to the delegates by the Press of the United Kingdom, the hosts numbering, probably, about 1,000. Bombay, Allahabad and Rangoon, I see have sent delegates ; but, apparently, Calcutta and Madras have either no one available or the journalists of these presidencies take no stock in conferences.

The coming Imperial Exhibition which will be opened in May at Shepherd's Bush on the site occupied last year by the Franco-British display, will be the first international exhibition held in London for half a century. The project has met with a warm reception, and Sweden, Denmark, Norway, Holland, Persia, Turkey, and Roumania have already decided upon occupying large areas, while the negotiations now proceeding leave no doubt that Russia, Austria, Italy, Spain, and several nations of the first importance will follow the example of those which have already decided to participate.

The exhibitors of the United Kingdom are already well to the fore, and there will be special sections for Scotland, Ireland, and Wales. The engineers, mechanics and manufacturers of this country have no intention of being outshone by their foreign competitors, and there will be large and carefully selected exhibits of the leading firms from all portions of the British Isles. The purpose of the exhibition will be to show only the best and choicest products of all the countries of the world. Quality rather than quantity will be the object sought, and altogether the exhibition at Shepherd's Bush in the coming summer will make a record in the history of international exhibitions. The success of the "Franco" showed that the home country had nothing to learn in the field of exhibitors : the "Imperial" will undoubtedly prove that she has much to teach other nations.

Constantly are we reminded that England is the only place of refuge on earth for the foreign criminal expelled from his own country. The continental anarchist, thief and murderer are made almost welcome ; the Bengali sedition student or bomb maker pursue his studies unmolested in London, encouraged in his fell work by British politicians. This gruesome truth was brought home to us once again by the amazing crime of a couple of Russian anarchists at Tottenham last week. The affair began with highway robbery, was continued in a running-fight over a distance of eight miles in which three people were shot dead and twenty wounded, and ended in the suicide of one of the miscreants and an attempt on his life by the other. Both men were engaged in the distribution of anarchist literature of the most destructive type, both belonged to the colony of foreign pests who inhabit a quarter of Tottenham. The business began by their robbery of £100 and the holding up of the occupants of the motor car in which the money was being conveyed. The men were armed with three repeating pistols and had each about 100 rounds of ammunition—Dum-Dum bullets. They began firing at once. The chauffeur and the young man with the money were shot and badly wounded ; the alarm was raised and the pursuit began. A constable who attempted to seize one man and a poor little boy who was an onlooker were next shot dead, and the desperadoes, firing and wounding promiscuously, boarded a tramcar and with revolvers held at the ear of the driver made him proceed at full speed. The pursuers—many armed with shooting irons—begun a fusilade at the tramcar, the murderers escaped, a passenger was hit ! A block in the traffic occurred, they left the car, seized a horse and cart and continued the flight, shooting at short intervals and every now and then dropping somebody. Three men in a cart drew abreast of them, they shot the pony and the animal falling in its tracks the three occupants of the trap were pitched out and injured. Meanwhile, about 200 policemen—many with revolvers—were on the move and abandoning the car the villains took to the fields and a most exciting cross country chase ensued, the fugitives heading for Epping Forest. But they were brought to bay at last when one (Hefeld) turned his weapon on himself and fell badly wounded ; his fellow friend (Jacob) seeing an open door in a cottage, shot the woman who stood at the entrance and got to the top of the house ; but the police were at his heels and seeing the game up he blew out his brains. Of course everybody is asking how such ruffians can be allowed in Great Britain and how this criminal laxity in the administration of the Aliens' Act can be permitted. But, equally of course, this awful tragedy will be forgotten in a few weeks and we shall go on as hitherto harbouring the anarchist from Europe and welcoming the sedition monger from India. It is quite too much to expect that the hotbeds of foreign and Asiatic crime will be broken up, especially when we remember that, as far as Indian anarchy and sedition are concerned, strong encouragement is to be found in the House of Commons itself.

A telegraphic feat, between London and Karachi, was accomplished on Saturday. A message of forty words was sent over this distance—5,000 miles—within a minute and an answer received so quickly that direct telephonic communication could scarcely have been more convenient or expeditious. This splendid result has been rendered possible by the extension of the system of automatic "relays" which render the retransmission en route quite unnecessary. We seem to be getting nearer the East every year. In 1874 it took the best part of a month to travel between Bombay and London, a letter cost 9d. : now we do it comfortably in 14½ days and the postage is 1d. A telegram thirty-five years ago took many hours in transit and half-a-dozen words cost a handful of money : now we can "ring up" Bombay in 60 seconds and for next to nothing.

A stupendous reconstruction has been in progress at the Waterloo Railway Station for some time and at the moment the eyes of the travelling public are centred on the gigantic improvements which approach completion and which, in a few days, will make Waterloo the largest British terminus. For more than five years this work has been a progress, and about a year's work remains to be done in reconstructing some of the old platforms. Before this work was taken in hand the station covered just sixteen acres of ground and was divided into three portions. These were the main line of four platforms, which was opened in 1848, the north station, with six platforms, opened in 1885, and the south station of two platforms, which has been chiefly used for the Hampton Court traffic.

The station will henceforth cover twenty-two acres, which, so far as space is concerned, puts it in the forefront of all British railway termini. The three new roads, which are almost ready for use, have been constructed to the south of the existing south station, and form what is practically a new station, facing Waterloo Road. The three new platforms are 22 feet above the road level, and have an available length of 700 feet, the width being from 30 feet to 33 feet. All possible curves have been avoided, and there will be practically a straight run in for a considerable distance. This straightening process will be applied to the existing lines as soon as possible. Subways have been constructed between the new platforms and the City and Waterloo and the Bakerloo "Tube" systems, and there will also be connecting subways with the other portions of the station, but the full effect of the great work will not be grasped by the public until the approach to the terminus from Westminster Bridge Road has been completed.

Last Saturday night, amidst scenes of great enthusiasm, the Gaiety Theatre produced another new play, the twelfth new musical piece in seventeen years. First nights are rare events at the Gaiety, where the runs of plays are never under 200 performances, and the average is up to 300. The full strength of the old company came back for "Our Miss Gibbs" last night. Miss Gertie Millar, Mr. George Grossmith junior, and Mr. Edmund Payne were the returned wanderers.

"Our Miss Gibbs," like the other musical plays at the Gaiety Theatre, has Mr. George Edwardes for her sponsor. Mr. Lionel Monckton and Mr. Ivan Caryll have given her the music to sing and dance to, Mr. Adrian Ross and Mr. Percy Greenbank have written her lyrics, Mr. James T. Tanner has constructed her story, and "Cryptos" has written it—a well-known group of entertainment-makers this, and one that knows what light-hearted fare a Gaiety audience wants. Two acts carry the play, both in London. The first is at a great West End shop, where pretty Miss Gibbs from Yorkshire is manageress of the flower department ; the second in the Court of Honour at the White City. The scenes are wonderful triumphs of stage art—a marvellous shop with every detail perfect, and a dazzling city of white buildings, in a sunset glow that turns to nightfall and illuminations. As a spectacle this White City beats all Gaiety records for magnificence. Peopled with the prettiest of girls, in gowns, some simple, some daring, some strangely beautiful, with men in uniforms of every nationality, they make a fascinating environment for the play.

The story is simple enough. Mary Gibbs is the idol of Garrod's Stores and the sweetheart of Lord Eynsford. But Mary thinks her lover is only a poor bank clerk, and when she discovers that he is an aristocrat and engaged to a lady of his own class she refuses to believe that he does not want to marry this aristocrat. Mary, disconsolately enough, goes off to the exhibition with her country cousin, Timothy Gibbs, and as that cousin is Mr. Edmund Payne, Mary has more cause for laughter than tears. Timothy is mistaken for a burglar, and before his innocence is proved changes clothes with half the men in the grounds. It is his only way to escape his pursuers. Mr. George Grossmith is, of course, Mr. Payne's partner in all the funny schemes, and immensely droll the two of them are. Mr. Grossmith, as the Hon. Hughie Pierrepoint marries the girl that Mary thought was her rival, and there the way is made clear for Mary's happiness.

No actress on our stage has made such improvement as Miss Millar has done. Intelligence and a real sense of acting have enabled her to become the great artiste that she is. It is a delight to watch her. In musical comedy she has no rival, and she has not many out of it. Mr. Edmond Payne and Mr. George Grossmith never let the fun flag when they are on the stage. Their song, "Come and stay with me," is a huge success. The former's duet with Miss Millar, "When country cousins come up to town," and Mr. Grossmith's and Miss Millar's song and dance, called "Not that sort of person," are also among the "plums" of the piece. Quite different in character, for it depended on its pretty fantasy, is the "Moonstruck" number of Miss Millar's. Miss Denise Orme looks very charming and sings delightfully some numbers of which "Romance" is the best. Mr. O. B. Clarence, Mr. Edward J. Fraser, Mr. Arthur Atherton, Mr. F. Payne, Mr. J. A. Evelyn, and Mr. H. B. Burcher all are excellent, and among the ladies Miss Jean Aylwin and Miss Kitty Mason are also very good.

The Gaiety's reputation for pretty girls is enhanced by this production, and they are pretty girls who can act, too, when they include such names as Miss Olive May, Miss Julia James, Miss Adeline Balfe, Miss Gladys Cooper. Never was there such a spectacle of pretty frocks and wearers, among whom may be mentioned Miss Irene Warren, Miss Chrissy Bell, Miss Enid Leslie, Miss Joe Howard, Miss Pattie Wells, Miss Pauline Francis, etc., etc. It is one of the sights of London to see a Gaiety chorus coming on the stage—light hearts and light feet and smiling faces—and that was how it was last Saturday night. People coming home this summer from your part of the Empire have something good to look forward to.

THE VAGRANT.

Shikar.

AN XMAS SHOOT.

Of my fifteen or sixteen Xmases in the Shiny, I suppose, either voluntarily or otherwise I have not spent more than three in civilization. This year I decided to head for an old haunt of mine, inhabited by all the big game that can delight the heart of man. Having made my bundobust I started off and after a rail journey of some hours, and an eight to nine miles foot slog, I arrived at the first stage, the village wherein my Karen shikaries resided.

That evening I sat up for sambur, which were said to fairly jostle one another after nightfall in the paddy fields. However, no sambur appeared and the jostling was done by mosquitoes, about 500 to the square inch on any part of me where there was not sufficient thickness of clothing to defeat them.

Leaving my kit to follow, I started early next morning for my first camp, two and a half hours away steady walking. I spent that day and the next casting in every direction for bison and tsine but could find no tracks newer than a couple of days old. The jungles were full of elephant, which perhaps accounted for this. The other animals generally following two to three days in rear of the elephants. We once thought we were on to a solitary bison, but on near approach found it was a solitary elephant cracking the bamboos. The only incident during these two days was that on one of them while cooking breakfast at a small stream, we heard a solitary elephant feeding by us on the top of a ridge parallel to us. The smoke from the fire was being blown straight towards this ridge and as soon as the elephant got opposite it and got our wind, he began charging down to us as hard as ever he could. My shikaries had just put the cooking pot down in front of me and I was about to help myself when they both ran up to me, snatched all my things up and saying, "the senage hine" (tuskless male) hurried me up a narrow path and behind a tree. I must add that we had been sitting in a hopeless place to withstand any charge. The swamp we had passed through en route to the breakfast place was on our left, behind us the stream bank rose sheer and to our right was a continuation of swamp. They took me to the high bank overlooking the stream. The elephant however, stopped at the edge of the thick jungle and never gave me a chance at him and after both sides had kept quiet, waiting for a false move on the other's part, he went off. The shikaries afterwards told me he killed a sahib a few years ago while out shooting. I also learnt there were two more like him, so I sent off and got permission to shoot any of the three, should I run up against any of them again. I think elephant preservation is carried to extremes. The herds we passed did not mind us a bit, they snuffed up our taint and then went on feeding. One or two shots occasionally would put the fear of man into them, that they had a few years ago. Two of the vicious elephants I refer to above, raided one of my shikari's tai or hut in the cultivation, destroyed it and ate all the paddy in it, while the owner was out with me. This they do regularly during the crop season, but of course they kept away during the first night I was in the village.

Next day leaving my kit again to follow, I went on another three hours and reached a big grassy plain, surrounded by thick jungle on all sides, these plains I found out afterwards occur every few miles in this part. We got on to the tracks of a herd of tsine and with great difficulty tracked them through the grass, into the jungle and back again into the grass. Here we sighted two cow tsine and knowing the herd would be asleep in the shady nullah below them, I started stalking them. I got within fifty yards of the cows, when the wind went round with a bang on to them, and they and the herd disappeared. Followed them up in the jungle till 3 P.M. the wind again spoilt sport and they again made off, so we headed for camp, reaching it at 6 P.M. about a mile south of the grass plain. Owing to the way the jungle track through long grass was pitted by elephants, sometimes to over a depth of three feet, it was impossible to start before daybreak and it had to be "eyes in the boat" for about a mile. As it was, in broad daylight, I shot into an elephant hole up to my knee, and jarred myself pretty considerably. That night we had an exciting time in camp, which lay in an elephant road. About 10 p.m. it became apparent that a herd was about to change its feeding ground and had begun to feed its way along to our camp. I was awakened, and having told everyone to keep big fires lit and beat tins and cooking pots, I went to sleep again. However, about midnight my servants and shikaries turned me out in a wild state of excitement, and there was no doubt about it, the elephants were only hundred yards away. Unfortunately there were no large trees about, only bamboo jungle to take cover in against a charge. I loaded up my Magnum ·400 and my twelve-bore shot gun with ball, took the first myself and gave the other to the shikari and tried to spot something to fire at. There was no moon. The elephants did not mind the fires, or the shouting, or the tins, etc., being beaten and were just feeding along quite unconcerned, squeaking and making those curious noises they do make. However as I could see nothing to fire at, I took my shot gun and discharged it, first one barrel and after a pause the other and then the fun began; they all started bolting as hard as ever they could go, I do not think they stopped for ten miles, as I never came across any fresh tracks in that part again.

The next day was also a blank one, after a long track, the wind changed and a herd of tsine bolted without our sighting it, when we were within thirty yards of it in thick jungle. As the shikaries said it would make for the tank on the plain, I took one man with me to try and head them off and left the other with my shot gun loaded with ball, to follow the tracks. We had gone up hill several times for an hour and a half and I was absolutely cooked, as we had been going as hard as we could. The plain was nowhere in sight so I said I had had enough and was going to camp, as it was nearly dark. We started for camp, but on hearing a shot, stopped and waited, till the other man shouted, we called him up and found that without knowing it, we had headed off the herd, and they not knowing what to do, had stopped and offered him an easy shot, which he missed. I had never meant him to fire, as a matter of fact, but his excuse was to drive them to me. He found our tracks had nearly enclosed the herd, his tracks forming the third side. About 7 A.M. next morning we came across fresh bison tracks, a herd first and then a bull and cow. We followed the latter tracks and soon heard the bamboos cracking in front of us. A topi is the biggest nuisance in the jungle I know of, and the only way to get up to big game successfully is to risk sunstroke and take it off. This I always do. After most careful crawling and crouching we got on to the top of the bamboo covered hill and at the end of a tree covered neck, about 50 yards from us, we saw the cow lying down facing north and the bull facing south and shifting about in an amorous manner. Between us and the neck was a small hollow about 2 feet deep in leaves and rotton bamboos and beyond was a large ant heap. As the cow got up and began looking towards us I was afraid they would be off. I aimed for behind the bull's elbow as near as I could make it out in the dark corner they were in. After the first shot I dashed for the ant heap, thinking the bull would come towards the shot, as I have always found they do if hit. Instead of that I found he was standing 30 yards away from me and facing straight away from me. So I had perforce to fire at that portion of him facing me. Like a fool my shikari, instead of reserving his shot, loosed off at the same time, doing no damage whatsoever. At the second shot, the bull was off towards us and the whole of the jungle resounded with crashing bamboos, as he and the rest of the herd, ten to twelve animals, bolted in different directions. My second shikari came up and said the bull had passed him quite close going on three legs. Both my men were disappointed at not finding blood immediately, but I considered it a good sign. After going quarter of a mile we began to find blood. We followed him till 3 P.M. during which time he had lain down twice and was bleeding from the mouth, near side (I fired at the offside of him) and buttocks. We got near him once, but he got away without offering a charge. We heard him calling two or three times a long low "moo" they give. At 3 P.M. the herd joined him from the tracks, and it being pitch dark jungle, we returned to camp, reaching it at 6 P.M. Next day we took up the tracks again and after some hours steady collar work, we found the bull had separated from the herd, a good sign, which bucked us up a lot. Soon after we found his night sleeping place with any amount of blood in three places. One of my men picking up a lump of blood and leaves said there was a pound of it in his hands. We found more sleeping places of his and bloody foam in one. As he had also fallen head over heels going down the next hill, when we got to the next hilltop and saw a black mass, tail towards us, head sunk out of sight, I thought he was dead, but thought I would give him a tester. I did so and to my surprise he made off at a great pace. Cursing myself for my folly in not making a detour quietly, so as to get in a death shot, we followed him up. An hour after, at 11 A.M., just as we got to a stream at the foot of a very steep, thick-jungled descent, during which to avoid accidents, I had lowered both hammers my head shikari said, "Will you breakfast here?" I had sat down on a fallen tree disgusted with myself. Hardly had the shikari opened his mouth, when there was a commotion in the jungle in front of us and ont dashed the bison and made for me. I had just time to cock my right hammer and loose at him. The shot turned him and he went off with a loud snort. I ought to have dropped him then of course, and if only I had had time for a second shot, I could have done so. However, I found it was a hit, by tracing the course of the bullet through bamboo leaves and blood on the far bamboos. After an hour's rest we followed him up and after a bit found he was bleeding like a stuck pig. The shikari warned me that now he was really angry and would charge on opportunity for a dead certainty. However, very luckily for us he did not, because for the next two and a half hours we were led through regular rhino jungle, swamps, streams and thorny stuff. Absolutely no cover and very hard work, expecting a charge every minute. My instructions to the shikari were on a charge I should kneel and let drive right and left and jump to the left, if I did not down or stop him the shikari was to let go twice at him and clear out. However, nothing happened. At about 3 P.M. we found fresh rhino tracks crossing a stream to the right of where the bison had crossed it. We discussed in whispers the chances of getting him later on, and leaving my men talking I crossed the stream following up the bison tracks. About fifty yards on I saw the bison about forty yards away from me lying down, he had heard my men talking, I could just see his left eye shining but he lay as usual tail on to me. There was a small tree to my right front which would bring me to about twenty yards off the bison. I went to it, knelt down, took careful aim at his backbone and fired and immediately let drive again in the hopes of finishing him off. He got up and I went after him, into long grass and stuff, but took shelter behind a tree, as I heard him fall, get up again and then begin to play Merry Hades with everything near him for about ten minutes. He fell again and then went a hundred yards or so and began making extraordinary noises. The shikaries then came up and said he was dying and if I waited a few minutes we should find him dead. So I rolled myself a cigarette and then all was still. As I sat smoking one of my men offered to go and see where the bison was exactly and, if dead, would come and let me know. He returned saying it was standing up with its head away from us. I went with him, the bison had got into a swamp, in the middle of which was a small island of thorn twelve feet high or so and I could not get a shot at him. I went right round and at last got a position twenty to thirty yards from him. It must be remembered that there was no cover from view of the bison anywhere, if he heard or saw one, as the only thing growing in the swamp were scattered thorn bushes like reeds about twelve feet high. I let drive and knoocked him over: he got up: I knocked him over again. He charged but being dazed went by my right. I followed him up and at last found him facing me twenty yards off. I had only one cartridge left. I could see the top of his forehead over the strip of grass separating us. I placed my rifle on a bit of creeper hanging down and put a bullet into the middle of his forehead as near as I could judge, then ducked and jumped to avoid any charge. However he had gone over with a bang on his game leg side into a wallow. I was very disgusted with myself for not having finished him long before, but the only two clear chances he gave me was his first charge, when I was not ready, and the time I killed him. How he could have gone on so long is a marvel. I had hit him every time I fired, nine shots. The first broke his right shoulder and was too high, the second had penetrated his stomach and caused him to pass blood from his mouth. His lungs were a mass of blood, internal hæmorrhage from my hasty shot when he first charged. I had apparently broken his back, as although he charged a second time at a great pace he was dragging his hindquarters. In fact, he was so damaged that the meat went bad before the Karen villagers could get to it the next day. The head though old was a poor one. I was the more annoyed as I have never with my present rifle had an animal go far with one bullet in him, but my first shot was too high and my second offered not much chance of a quick ending.

While the Karens were out the next day after the meat, with one man I followed a herd of tsine all day without success, but I got into a tract of country my man called "Bison camp," and I have never seen anything like it. Nearly dark at any time and covered with weeping bamboos, forming perfect lying up places, it was a mass of tracks, elephant, rhino, bison, tsine, tiger, sambhur, etc., etc. A stream ran through it, and one end of it, as the builders say, "gave" on to the big grassy plain referred to above. I did not go after the rhino whose tracks we had found when after the bison, as in addition to the shots I had fired the Karens used my gun to keep a couple of tigers off the carcase of the bison all one night. This, however, I do not learn till two days after I shot the bison: I heard the shots but did not know the reason. My last day in that spot I devoted to following up the tracks of a bison, I found in Bison camp and who must have been an absolute monster from his tracks. Making our way to Bison camp, we crossed the morning tracks of the tsine herd we had followed till dark the previous day, but leaving them we went on and found our monster friend had left the plain by the same path we had entered it by, his prints being over those of my rope soled boots. This I thought was a huge stroke of luck and I hugged myself with delight. After going some way, something began cracking bamboos in front of us, and despite the sun, off came my hat and we did a cautious stalk for a couple of hours but never came up with it. At 11 A.M. we stopped for breakfast and on going on at the junction of two streams found the fresh tracks of two more herds of bison joining in, so altogether we had three herds or about 30 bison in front of us, our friend's herd being the last. Here my second shikar (my other was away at the bison meat) said he was afraid they were going on to another big feeding ground and we would not come up with them. With so many animals marching along in front of us, there was no difficulty in following the direction, but it was a steady three hours climb and a sudden long steep descent to a stream, which the bison crossed and passed out of this history. The time was then 3 P.M., the herds had evidently started almost on empty bellies, as they had neither eaten, drunk or lain down during the eight hours or more we had been following them and there were no droppings. There was another eight miles to go before we reached a feeding ground, which by taking a direct route was 16 miles from my camp, so we had to give it up and return to camp. I found the head had arrived and there was much indignation among the villagers at having been hauled out about 20 miles to only find a rotten carcase, they then and there cleared out as soon as I gave them permission and I went all night back to their village, where I also arrived next day. We found fresh tiger tracks to and from the village as we went into it and heard that a tiger (not a panther) had, as they do in the Chin Hills, entered the village the two previous nights and taken a good sized pig on each occasion. I arranged to sit up in a machan at the entrance to the village, but later at 4 P.M., when my kit arrived in a hill cart, the owner, whose pigs had been taken, suggested sitting up in his house. This I did from 6 P.M. to 5 A.M., but devil a sign of tiger,—just my luck! Also in the morning, to crown everything, I heard that the two vicious elephants to whom reference has been made before, had spent the night rampaging about the cultivation, huts and uncut paddy, etc. Knowing I was sitting up for the tiger, they did not tell me about it till morning. However as I had already had an extra day, I could not stop and had to make the best of my way on my flat feet to the railway.

Fishing.

MERELY A FISHING TRIP.

ALL angling cruises are so much alike that their description is liable to become monotonous. Still, the occurrences and happenings of each are in a measure dissimilar, which will possibly excuse the relation of a trip that afforded me much sport and enjoyment.

The sun was shining over the Illinois as my canoe poked her nose into the waters of the Mississippi and turned southward to the head of the backwater whose length I meant to angle that day. Some anglers arrange their tackle before starting out, some at the point where they intend to fish, and others, who are wealthy enough to afford it, hire someone else to do all this work for them. I do not belong to either class, as will be explained. Landing when the backwater was reached, I cooked breakfast, which in itself was a rare treat for a city man. Though the bacon was burned and the eggs were fried too hard, the coffee and bread were good, and one rarely cares to eat much so early in the morning. Then the dishes (tin ones) were washed, my pipe was lighted, and the tackle made ready. For bait I had a pail of minnows, some angle worms, and a variety of spoonhooks and flies. Besides these I could easily catch frogs, crawfish, and grasshoppers, and it may be well to note under what conditions each sort of bait was offered, and the species of fish that accepted it.

My first stop was on a bar covered with about six inches of water, dropping at its lower end to a depth of three feet, with numerous ripples made by projecting snags. West of the bar was a channel some three feet wide and two feet deep edging the shore. A secret learned in the days of bare feet and short pants was that the fish would work in the deep water below the bar until this channel was found, and then follow it. Few anglers knew of the channel, and, in consequence, it was not "fished to death." A sand-pike was landed with the first minnow cast; then a sheepshead and a wall-eyed pike. After a half-hour's fishing the canoe was pulled across the bar, and I dropped down to where a fallen tree lay with its entire length in the water, here about two feet deep. The current had scooped hollows along each side of the trunk, and the larger limbs, which still clung to the parent stem, formed archways through which the fishes darted and played. It seemed a fine spot for black bass. As I anchored above the tree I could see the water wave and circle with their movements, and a minnow dropped beside the log was eagerly taken by a small mouth. Owing to the disturbance made in playing him, I thought best to wait ten minutes before another cast was made. I let this minnow drift in among the limbs and around the trunk, but not a fish was enticed, though I could see abundant proof that they were there. When a live minnow will not attract a game-fish, some fishermen will give up in despair and say, "It's no use." But there are anglers who know better. An artificial fly was next sent to the proper spot, but either it was too dull in colour or the sun was too bright; anyway, the fish would not take it.

It is at times such as this that experience and perseverance count. A few minutes spent ashore yield a supply of grasshoppers, and the first of them turns the trick by hooking a rock bass; the next, a sunfish. This last capture is a "straight tip," and a change is made to angle worms, which entice other sunfish, a bullhead, and—that most stubborn of fighters—a dogfish. A hooked dogfish invariably churns up the water and frightens other fish away; so the anchor is lifted and the canoe floats to where a fallen maple lies with the tips of its branches submerged. The water is deeper here, and presently the worms are discarded for minnows. For half an hour the crappies bite so fast that count of those taken is lost; then they bite no longer, nor will grasshoppers, worms, or crawfish induce a solitary nibble. Back to the old log again, where minnows yield a black bass, a rock-bass, and a striped bass in quick succession. Then a spoon hook is substituted, and a wall-eyed pike surrenders to its charms. A few more sunfish acknowledge their fondness for worms, and a catfish is abducted by a grasshopper; then the sport lags, and it is time to go elsewhere.

A leaping bass splashes under a steep bank where the water runs deep and swift. A deftly-aimed fly drops into the centre of the whirl, and a short strike shows that he is in fighting trim and evidently hungry. He strikes short again at the second cast, and after that neither fly nor minnow will tempt him. A whirling spoon-hook brings another half-hearted strike; worms are offered him, but he declines them with contempt. Crawfish, grasshoppers, and frogs are the only items remaining on the bill of fare, and must be procured ashore. When, at last, the frog is offered, a catfish accepts it with great willingness. I am confident the bass is still there, and as second choice I tender him a grasshopper, which is greedily taken by a nice rock-bass. Then on to the hook goes the "real thing"—a crawfish—and a 3½lb. small-mouth responds gallantly to the invitation, and is soon lying in the canoe, to be admired at my leisure.

I lunch in the shadow of a great elm beside a bubbling spring, and a good smoke and a long rest put me in shape for the remainder of the day. Then the canoe is headed up-stream, and the sport commences anew. A minnow lures a nice pickerel from beside a stump in the water; two black bass follow the whirring spoon from their rocky shelter; another school of crappie is encountered, and the little catfish show quite a liking for grasshoppers. Off a shelving bank a mud-turtle toys too long with the hook, and there are sand-pike in the channels ready to risk much for a square meal. The last place fished is in the shade of some leaning maples, and here, for the first time during the day, a fly is effective. Three black bass are added to the string; then I paddle ashore, dress the catch, take down the rods, stow the tackle neatly, and at eventide am at home, tired and content.—E. K. STEDMAN, in Sports Afield.

RAWALPINDI, 11th February 1909.

A CURIOUS SNAKE CHARMING INCIDENT.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE INDIAN FIELD."

SIR,—The snake catcher is supposed to be an invariable fraud, and I believe the men who undertake to rid one's compound of cobras, generally let loose a few tame snakes in their patron's domain the night before the performance. An incident, however, which I witnessed at Rawal Pindi, leads me to think that occasionally men are to be found who possess a special talent for capturing snakes, and certainly in this particular instance the conduct of the serpent gave little indication of its being a tame specimen. A brother officer and I were living in the bungalow, 151, Mackeson Road; we had found out that there were snakes in the compound, both from hearing them hissing in the hedge which bordered the drive, when going to and from Mess after dark, and also from both my friend and the chowkidar having seen Russell's vipers going into holes under the same hedge. As we had dogs, snakes seemed most undesirable additions to the ménage, and so we sent for a snake catcher who lived, we were told, somewhere in the country outside Pindi.

All the servants were united in prophesying that the man would turn out to be a rogue; so that the man when he did come, had to face a very hostile audience. Unluckily the charmer arrived while we were both away on parade, and we did not come on the scene until two snakes had already been caught. The capture of the second of these, a big Russell's viper, had entirely flabbergasted our retainers. They related how the snake had rushed out at the man, and tried to bite him, and from their vivid accounts the scene had evidently been most exciting. Naturally, my friend and I wished for a repetition of this sensational exhibition, and set the snake man to play away with his pipes in front of some holes where a Russell's viper had been seen a few days before. The man tootled away for a considerable time without results. He had only a scanty loin-cloth on, having deposited his upper garment in a compact heap close at hand, to use as a shield if the snake came out at him. Eventually, we saw a snake moving among the twigs and leaves of the hedge, and then suddenly without the least warning a big Russell's viper charged out straight at the snake catcher, as he sat on the open drive three or four yards away. Instantly the man picked up his cloth and held it out; the viper struck savagely at it two or three times, and then suddenly the snake catcher got hold of the reptile by the end of the tail, and slipping his other hand quickly up, in a moment had it safely round the neck, close behind the jaws. Everything happened very rapidly, but both my friend and I were standing close to, and there was absolutely no doubt that the snake was simply furious with rage. Directly the man had the reptile safely gripped round the neck, he picked up a little bit of stick and forced open the jaws, showing the formidable poison fangs.

This particular snake charmer was a very odd looking creature; he was a Hindu of some sort, and had a wild and rather silly looking face: his eyes too were mild and absent looking, and in fact his whole appearance was such as to preclude his having the right quality of cunning to imitate the methods of the ordinary sham snake charmer. My friend whose knowledge of native ways was particularly thorough, told me he was convinced that the whole affair was absolutely genuine. The first snake caught, I forgot to say, was a harmless little green one, which the syces had often seen look out of a hole in the mud wall of the stable. The snake man piped to it, and after a time it put its head out, when he promptly got it by the neck and pulled it out.

I have set forth this incident at some length, as I have read lately several letters in the London Field completely ridiculing all idea of snake catchers ever being anything but frauds. It would be interesting to know whether the readers of the Indian Field all share these views, or whether other people besides myself have met with serpent catching incidents, which appeared to be genuine captures of wild snakes.

For ten years I had suffered acutely from Gout, and life had lost its attraction, owing to the uncertainty of health and the sudden visitation of the enemy, which prostrated me for months or weeks, according to the virulence of the attacks.

Blair's Pills have rendered me immense service, as I no longer fear an attack of Gout.

LINGFIELD.

IN town last Friday morning the air was thick enough to suggest fog, but over the Surrey hills a brighter scene was laid, and though the sun had barely a chance at Lingfield, and the afternoon was raw cold, with a nor' easterly wind, the weather furnished no hindrance to sport. The specials from town were better filled than those from the South Coast, but taken all round the attendance was well up to the January average. Though mist hung round the far side of the course, the light was not bad after all, but the course afforded sticky going, while fields panned out well. Results:—

FOOTBALL.

ASSOCIATION RULES.

THE LEAGUES.—Newcastle United gaining a brilliant victory over Notts County at Trent Bridge on Saturday, and Everton merely drawing with Middlesbrough at Goodison Park, the Newcastle team wrested the leadership of the First League from Everton, who had held that distinction for the past three months. Everton were at some disadvantage in taking the field without either Sharp or Coleman, but they had no more formidable opponents than Middlesbrough, and, moreover, stood a goal ahead at the interval. Newcastle, on the other hand, found themselves engaged in a very stiff task, for Notts Country, although knocked out of the Cup on the previous Saturday, had not lost a League match at home since October. In the opening half, too, Notts held their own, and must have taken the lead had not Lawrence saved from a penalty kick. Crossing over, however, Newcastle went right ahead, thanks to Shepherd, the dashing centre-forward, who appeared for England against Scotland at Glasgow three years ago, accomplishing the remarkable feat of scoring four times after change of ends. A wonderfully clever and speedy dribbler on his day, Shepherd has often done big things in the way of scoring for Bolton Wanderers, from whom he was transferred to Newcastle a little while ago; but in the international encounter of 1905, he met his master in Raisbeck, the famous Scottish half-back, and cut a sorry figure.

Outside the change in the relative positions of Newcastle United and Everton, Saturday's games in the First League did not materially affect the aspect of the competition, for success attended the efforts of the next four clubs on the list. Sheffield Wednesday, on their own ground, beat Nottingham Forest for the second time this season, and Manchester United again overcame Manchester City, Liverpool won at Bradford, and Sunderland, after leading Aston Villa at one point by 4 to 1, just got home against the Birmingham team by the odd goal in seven. Woolwich Arsenal and Bristol City, both of whom had engaged successfully in replayed Cup ties during the week, drew at Plumstead, and Chelsea, so far from repeating their triumph at Bramall Lane over Sheffield United, narrowly escaped defeat. In this match at Stamford Bridge, Benson, the Sheffield United back, figured prominently. Taking a penalty given against Miller, he secured for his side a lead which they retained until within five minutes of the finish, and then, in an endeavour to clear from Brown, had the mortification of directing the ball into his own goal. Bury, in addition to Newcastle United and Liverpool, won away from home, and, as four of the ten matches resulted in draws, visiting clubs halved the points. While Newcastle, Manchester United, Sunderland, Sheffield Wednesday, and Aston Villa obtained nineteen goals between them, eight other teams secured only one goal apiece, and six did not find the net at all.

Some unlooked-for results occurred in many of the Second League matches, visiting teams enjoying a very large measure of success. Half of the ten games comprising the programme ended in victories for clubs having to play away from home, while two other engagements were left drawn. Hull City, Derby County, and Glossop being the only sides to win on their own grounds. The three London clubs were among those who had to make journeys, and, singularly enough, all of them won, Tottenham Hotspur beating Bolton Wanderers, Fulham scoring three goals to one against Birmingham, and Clapton Orient gaining a victory by a similar score over Blackpool. Of the three the performance of the Hotspur was undoubtely the best, and, thanks to their success, they have once more advanced to second place in the table of results, They are now level on points with Bolton Wanderers, but take precedence by reason of a better goal-average and a fewer number of engagements fulfilled. West Bromwich Albion, though playing at home, could do nothing better than draw with Burnley, but they still possess the best record in the second division, and are not likely to be deposed from their position at the head of affairs for some time.

After gaining seven victories off the reel, and establishing a strong position at the head of the Southern League, Northampton, following upon their overthrow in the Cup by Derby County, suffered a severe defeat at Watford. As it happened, Southampton, playing at home, fared even worse, and Crystal Palace no better; but Bristol Rovers and Swindon, beaten a week before, found a week's rest from hard work so beneficial that they gained victories which take them to the third and fourth places in the tournament. Northampton, Southampton, and Crystal Palace all suffered from the effects of replayed Cup ties during the week, so that their failures hardly occasion surprise. Bristol Rovers now become the most serious rivals to Northampton in the race for the championship.

ARSENAL vs. BRISTOL CITY.—The appearance of Bristol City at Plumstead attracted no more than 10,000 spectators, the attendance probably being affected by the bitterly cold weather. As Woolwich had Gray at back and Neave at outside-left, the home team may be said to have been at full strength, but Bristol were without Starr at right-half, for whom Hanlin played. The game proved fast and well contested except during periods in the second half, when play was very scrambling. The Arsenal had the advantage at the start, and after twenty minutes Clay, the Bristol goalkeeper, had great difficulty in dealing with fine shots from Greenaway and Raybould. The latter forced a corner, which being well played by Neave, Hoare headed into the net. Bristol were not long in equalising, but it was an extremely doubtful point. Gray had dribbled forward, and before he recovered the ball was returned, and Ripon receiving when he was generally considered off-side, was allowed to score with a fast, low ball. Shortly, afterwards, Fitchie should have put the Arsenal again ahead when he missed a pass from the right. The second half was marked by few incidents of note. Greenaway had one fine dribble and shot, which Clay was lucky to push round the post, and at the other end McDonald saved magnificently in rapid succession from Staniforth and Gilligan. McDonald made other fine saves, and altogether Bristol was the more aggressive in this half. The defences were very strong, however, and kept out all attacks to the end. Woolwich Arsenal, 1; Bristol City, 1.

CHELSEA vs. SHEFFIELD UNITED.—Chelsea rather luckily escaped defeat in their home match with Sheffield United, but they had so much of the play that they were fully entitled to a victory. It was a curious sort of game. Each side scored once in each half, and Benson, the Sheffield United full back, got both the goals. The first came from a penalty kick in the first half and the second goal came from a miskick whereby the full back turned the ball through his own goal ten minutes from the finish. About 20,000 people saw the match and Chelsea were without Kennedy, while United had Peart for Kyle. Quite early Evans made a fine attempt from a centre by Hobson and then Windridge headed over with Lievesley beaten. After ten minutes Miller handled and gave the penalty kick, from which Benson scored, and McRoberts nearly headed through his own goal. Once Rouse and Lievesley collided and the ball dropped on to the bar, which was lucky for United. After the interval the play was very poor. Chelsea forced the pace, but their forwards were woefully weak and there was nothing in the match so good as the play of Warren, Needham, and Brawn. McRoberts was hurt fifteen minutes from the end and retired, and with ten minutes to go Brawn broke away. Eluding Brooks, he centred from the goal-line, and Benson, in trying to clear, turned the ball through his own goal. Chelsea 1; Sheffield United, 1.

BOLTON W. vs. HOTSPUR.—The meeting of two of the three leading clubs in the Second Division at Bolton proved a great attraction, fully 25,000 people being present at the start. The weather was fine but dull, and the ground proved on the heavy side. Except that the Wanderers had Barber in place of Gaskell, both clubs took the field as in their Cup ties last week. The only goal of the match came after half-an-hour's play, R. Steel beating the Bolton goalkeeper after a free kick. The shooting of the home forwards was very weak, but Tottenham showed the better combination, and deservedly won by 1 goal to 0. Late in the game Morris missed with a penalty kick given against the Wanderers. Tottenham Hotspur, 1; Bolton Wanderers, 0.

BLACKPOOL vs. CLAPTON ORIENT.—Making four alterations in their team Clapton Orient went to Blackpool and gained a splendid victory by three goals to one, in the presence of 4,000 spectators. Tonge, of Atherton, appeared at inside-right for the home team, who were outplayed from the start. Quick on the ball and well together, the Orient did most of the pressing, and at half-time led by two goals, kicked by McLean and Gates. Afterwards Beale increased their advantage before Lyons got the last goal of the match for Blackpool. Clapton Orient, 3; Blackpool, 1.

BIRMINGHAM vs. FULHAM.—An evenly-contested game between these sides was witnessed by 12,000 spectators at Birmingham, but owing chiefly to the weakness of the home forwards in front of goal Fulham won fairly easily by 3 goals to 1. Birmingham won the toss and Beer opened the scoring for them within eight minutes of the start. Freeman equalised and Parsonage gave Fulham the lead. The second half provided a keen struggle. It was not till towards the finish that Freeman put the issue beyond doubt by scoring Fulham's third goal. Fulham, 3; Birmingham, 1.

CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY vs. OLD CARTHUSIANS.—The Light Blues were much the better side at Queen's Club on Saturday, and won by 5 goals to nil—a result that was in accordance with the run of the game. The superiority of the winners was in their attack, their forwards being well together, and they developed an excellent understanding that was altogether absent from the front rank of the Old Boys, whose individual efforts were not of much avail against the robust defence of the Cantabs. A word of praise should also be given to the defence of the losers.

There was a poor attendance when play commenced, the Light Blues, with the wind at their backs, soon getting in the neighbourhood of H. Dixon, who was keeping goal for the Old Boys in place of R. Curwen. It was some time before he was really tested, as the backs in front of him did their work exceedingly well, but eventually Brisley sent in a hot shot, which the goalkeeper only partially saved, and, the referee deciding that the ball had crossed the line, Cambridge took the lead. Continuing to have the best of matters, the Light Blues worried the opposing defence, and before change of ends Brisley scored a second goal for his side from an accurate centre by Bache.

The exchanges were more even in the second half, G. C. Vassall being especially untiring in his efforts to reduce the lead against his side, but he was not so well supported as he should have been, and C. Pinkham was seldom troubled in goal. As the game progressed the Cantabs again asserted themselves, and V. Edwards beating Dixon, the Light Blues won 3 to 0.

OXFORD UNIVERSITY vs. NEW CRUSADERS.—Neither Braddell nor Berry figured in the 'Varsity side that opposed the New Crusaders on Saturday, but the Dark Blues gave a fine display, and gained a highly creditable victory by 8 goals to 2. Oxford had rather the better of the opening exchanges, Raynor being very prominent, and it was due to his initiative that the first goal was scored Sayer, whilst a minute later he only just missed scoring himself. The Crusaders played up much better after this, and Campbell and Joseph sent in good, but futile shots. Give-and-take play followed, but eventually after some short passing Edwards scored a second point. Then Pears got through after a tricky run, and at half-time Oxford led by 3 goals to nil.

On resuming, the Crusaders' forwards showed to considerable advantage, but the Oxford halves tackled well, and Maples, getting the ball on the wing, transferred, and scored with a fine shot from a difficult angle. B. S. Farnfield all but replied for the visitors, and eventually Gold got through. Thence to the finish, the play was all in favour of the Dark Blues, Hain (twice), Pears and Sayer all notching further goals. A few minutes before the finish B. S. Farnfield netted for the Crusaders, who were thus beaten by 8 goals to 2.

NORTH vs. SOUTH.—It was a thousand pities that fog should have settled upon the Fulham district on Tuesday, for it kept numbers away from the Stevenage Road enclosure, who would otherwise have been present, and the Lord Mayor's Italian Earthquake Disaster Fund will consequently not benefit to the extent that was hoped. It speaks volumes for the enthusiasm of Londoners for first-class football that some 12,000 spectators assembled, and the gate-money amounted to about £370, the whole of which will be handed over to the Lord Mayor, as the expenses of the match will be borne by the Association. The severe frost of the past two or three days had made the surface of the ground hard, while the turf was so slippery that the players found considerable difficulty in keeping a footing. One regretted this the more because two fine teams were in the field, and with favourable conditions the onlookers would have been treated to a brilliant exposition of the art of attack and defence. The players on both sides made great efforst to surmount the natural difficulties with which they had to contend, and it is a tribute to their skill and determination that they should have provided so fine a game. The early stages of it were seen without much difficulty, but in the second half the fog, which had partially lifted, descended again, and many of the finer points were lost to those who were watching from the stand. The result was a draw, no goals being scored, and this fairly represents what occurred. It would have been unfortunate for either side to have lost, and yet opportunities for scoring were not embraced by both sets of forwards.

The teams took the field as originally chosen, and it was a few minutes late, due to the attentions of photographers, before proceedings began. The North, thanks to some subtle touches by Brittleton, were early prominent, and Holley shot past, but in the next half-minute the South were attacking, and Middlemiss got through and centred, Woodward missing the posts by a yard. The North forwards at this stage were better together than their opponents, Bradshaw being particularly prominent, but the resolute and skilful tackling of Wedlock and his colleagues, backed up by clean and accurate kicking by Charlton and Cottle, kept the opposition at bay. A couple of shots were sent in, but they had no sting in them, and Lock cleared without difficulty. Holley and Sharp were persistent on the right, but they were not given much rope by Kenneth Hunt, and eventually Windridge was started off by the latter to some purpose. Pretty footwork all along

THE CRUSADE AGAINST DYSENTERY.

Wise Words by a Physician.

Among the pernicious diseases incident to life in India dysentery takes an important place. The reasons for this are many and varied. It is, however, unnecessary to enumerate them here. The great fact which every resident in the country, and therefore every possible sufferer, has to keep prominently in mind is how to avoid this dread complaint in the first place, and, in the next, how to take steps to cure it should he be unfortunate enough to contract it.

Speaking broadly, no tropical disease is more pestilential than dysentery, for it undermines the health, depresses the nervous system, reduces the tone and vigour of the whole body, diminishes the mental energy, and, generally, interferes with the individual's physical power of resistance against disease. The result is that, unlike what happens in most other diseases, one attack does not act as a preventive, but rather predisposes to another, thus rendering the sickened system liable to still further inroads, until the condition of the sufferer is deplorable indeed, for he may be attacked by many after-effects, like abscess of the liver, dropsy, scurvy, and nervous affections of various sorts.

Bad as all this is, the patient's case is rendered still worse by consideration of the fact that the general nutrition of the body is lowered by life in hot climates, that the digestive system is therefore depressed as well as the vitality, so that he not only starts heavily handicapped in favour of the disease, but also heavily handicapped against the conditions which make for recovery.

In these respects dysentery may be said to resemble typhoid fever on the one hand, and malaria on the other, and the danger of both is too well known to need more than passing notice. As typhoid is due to ulceration of the small intestine, so dysentery is due to a similar condition of the large or lower bowel, while malaria and dysentery are believed to often have a close relation, the former predisposing to attacks of the latter. The treatment of dysentery, like that of typhoid, and, in great measure, that of malaria, is admittedly one of diet. Milk, the blandest of foods, was, until a comparatively short time ago, the sheet anchor of the physician. In the very acute stages of the disease many doctors are, however, opposed to its use, and many patients are not able to digest it, so that they grow steadily worse.

Happily, science has discovered a food-tonic which, as one physician has written, "possesses virtues of a very high order," and is practically a specific in the modern treatment of dysentery. This is Sanatogen. Its composition is well known, for it has been widely stated to consist of 95 per cent. of pure casein of milk, the substance to which that food owes its nutritive value, in chemical combination—not merely mixed—with 5 per cent. of Glycero-Phosphate of Sodium, the chief vital constituent of the nervous system. These two substances, in the combination in which they exist in Sanatogen, are so digestible that the preparation puts no strain on the most enfeebled digestive organs. All of it is absorbed or assimilated by the body, so that there is no residue to irritate the ulcers which are formed in the course of the disease and prohibit the giving of solid food.

Sanatogen is, therefore, universally prescribed even in the acutest stages of the severest cases, for it prevents deterioration in nutrition, and maintains the patient's power of resistance at a high level, thereby giving him a better chance of recovering quickly and without complications. More than that, cases which get worse under ordinary conditions rapidly improve when Sanatogen is added to the diet. One of the supremest values of Sanatogen is that it is not limited to restoring the health during or after dysentery. It is actually a preventive of the disease by strengthening the system so that it can withstand exposure to the infection.

Sanatogen can be obtained from all chemists. To meet the special needs of the Indian population, a booklet, "How to keep well in India," has been written by a physician, who has practised for many years in the country, and it will be sent free to all who write for it mentioning The Indian Field to Messrs Smith, Stanistreet and Co., Calcutta, who are also able to supply Sanatogen.

WILKINSON'S SAFETY RAZOR.

A Safety Razor which all users pronounce perfect.

The high reputation enjoyed by the Wilkinson Sword Company is sufficient guarantee that the quality of this shaver is of the highest grade the South line had the North defence in a tangle, but the final shot by Woodward was dealt with by Hardy in that style which is associated with all his work. As the game progressed so did the struggle for supremacy become keener, and both teams were again and again applauded for clever aggressive and defensive work. It made one deeply regret the surface was so slipperv and yet an object lesson was provided of how unfavourable conditions may be overcome. As the forwards became more certain in their methods so the halves and backs had their work increased, and the constant duels between giants of the game in their respective positions provided many thrilling moments, and much fine football. Neither goalkeeper had sinecure office, but both refused to capitulate, and when the interval arrived the score-sheet was still a blank. Half-time:—North, 0 goal; South, 0 goal.

It differs from other shavers, because instead of the old-fashioned fence or comb protecting the face from the cutting edge, and which has always been the great objection to Safety Razors, a deep cut helical rollller has been substituted. As this rolls, the lather and hair pass between the projecting screw threads and all parts of the cutting edge are brought into action. This gives even wear along the whole cutting edge and feeds the lather on to it.

The South went off very strongly on resuming, the forwards well fed by the halves, making numerous attempts to break through, but they ran up against a powerful double line of defence, behind which was Hardy, always on the alert, cool and resourceful. A splendid bit of combination between Woodward and Hilsdon, with Windridge intervening as a third party, was one of the gems of the match, and at the proper moment the latter transferred to Middlemiss, who cleared the bar with a smart shot. This was a narrow escape for the North, but a few seconds later the South goal, had a similar let-off, Bradshaw on this occasion failing to find the net. Lock was next given a couple of opportunities to show his skill, and one of his saves was extremely clever, the judgment he displayed in running out being a lesson to those who are advocates of the stay-at-home theory. Thus the tussle went on, and if one minute the North seemed certain to take the lead, in the next the South were threatening danger. Berry was slinging in perfect centres and corner kicks. Woodward was twisting, turning, and wriggling like an eel, Hilsdon always endeavouring to burst through, Windridge seeking to provide his club-mate with opportunities, and Middlemiss attracting attention by his smart runs at outside left. And yet a goal would not materialise. There were two or three occasions when there was quite a bombardment of the North goal, but it was not captured, and a similar story has to be told of the happenings at the other end. Freeman twice got clear, but Hunt on one occasion and Lock on another intervened, the latter only preventing a goal by a brilliantly-daring clearance. Towards the close the balance of play was in favour of the North, and several times it appeared that they must get past the opposing defence, but they were kept at bay, and time arrived with the score:—North, 0 goal; South, 0 goal.

RUGBY RULES.

Last Saturday, was a quiet day in the Rugby world, but several of the club games produced some capital sport. The Oxford and Cambridge fifteens resumed their fixtures after the vacation, but the great game having been decided the doings of the University men do not attract so much attention as in the early part of the season. The games during the present term, however, often prove of useful service to the fresh captains in their choice of players for the next great struggle in December. The Dark Blues just pulled through against Richmond by the difference of a successful goal kick. The game was well contested, and Richmond quite maintained the improved form they have been showing this season. Tarr, the Oxford and International taree-quarter, went lame during the game, and it is quite in keeping with England's luck this year that another mishap should happen to those eligible for the International three-quarter line. Cambridge won at Bedford, also by the difference of two points. The Harlequins were again successful against the London Scottish, and Blackheath came to grief at Cardiff. Both the Scottish and Blackheath are doing badly this season. London Hospital, who are, perhaps, the strongest side in the metropolitan district this year, drew at Gloucester, and were, on the afternoon's play, rather unlucky not to win. One successful place kick in four attempts would have given them a victory. The Swansea fifteen gave further proof of their superiority in Welsh Rugby by winning at Newport.

Oxford vs. Richmond.—This was a capital game at Richmond, for it was remarkable for much really good play, and full of interesting incidents. The Richmond forwards were every bit as good as the Oxford pack, and they tackled so well that they held their own from start to finish, despite the extra skill and pace of the 'Varsity backs, and at the finish they were only beaten by the narrow margin of a successful place-kick. It was always a fast and open game, and in the first half the Richmond men did most of the attacking. Odgers got in with a try for them after a run by Wilson, and Pritchard scored for them, but Gildray, after clever passing by the Oxford backs, also scored two tries, and as each of the place-kicks failed the honours were even at half-time. In the second half Oxford, owing to an injury to Sloane, were reduced to fourteen men, but, lasting better than their opponents, they always appeared to have something in hand, despite the spirited tackling of the Richmond men. Parker finished off a brillaint run with another try for Oxford, and Cunningham kicked the goal; but shortly before the end a splendid effort by Pritchard enabled Wright Nooth to score for Richmond. Gray missed an easy kick, and so the game ended in favour of the Dark Blues by 11 points to 9. Oxford, 1 goal, 2 tries; Richmond, 3 tries.

Bedford vs. Cambridge University.—Cambridge University opened their programme for the new term with a match at Bedford, where a company of 4,000 people assembled to see the Light Blues. Both clubs were well represented. Possessing a distinct superiority in scrummaging, the University had much the best of the opening half, and Murly-Gotto and Scholfield gained tries, both of which were converted. Heard, of Bedford, crossed the Cambridge line. On crossing over Bedford fully held their own in some very exciting work, and just before the close Heard obtained another try, the match ending with the score:—Cambridge, 2 goals; Bedford, 1 goal, 1 try.

London Welsh vs. Thomas' Hospital.—Played at West Ham in a biting wind before a very meagre attendance. The visitors played up in surprisingly good fashion, and the easy time of it anticipated by the Welshmen did not eventuate. So easy did the home side expect matters to be that they had five three-quarters, and the seven forwards were all wingers. The game was of an interesting character for nearly an hour. Then Jeppe, after a sharp turn of handling, scored a capital try for the medicos, and although this was not converted the reverse had the effect of waking up the Welshmen, who now did a bit in the scrum. In a very short time Alderman crossed after Maddocks had made the matter easy, but Maddocks failed at the kick. Thereafter in quick succession three further tries were added, all by Alexander, but only one was converted and that by Jenkins. The score is very flattering to the Welshmen, and particularly to Alexander, who had the way made for him on each occasion and had only to take the ball and race in with it. Welsh, 1 goal, 3 tries; St. Thomas's, 1 try.

Old Leysians vs. U.C.S. Old Boys.—At Wandsworth, in very cold weather, the visitors were one man short all through the game, and the Leysians only played fourteen men in the second half, losing Mallison by a trifling injury. In the first half, the game was fairly even and neither side showed anything like skill. There was no score at the interval, but in the second half the Leysians soon achieved superiority. They pressed nearly the whole time and should have scored long before they did, numerous openings being made for the backs by a couple of capable halves. From a scrum near the posts Pepper dropped a goal and a few minutes later Holloway dribbled from midfield, and, kicking the ball over the line, beat the defenders for pace and scored a try. Shortly, afterwards from another scrum in front of the goal, the ball was passed out to Fidian, who dropped a second goal. The Old Boys rarely looked dangerous, and only experienced occasional relief from the kicking of their backs. Old Leysians, 2 dropped goals, 1 try; U.C.S. Old Boys, 0.

Harlequins vs. London Scottish.—No unfortunate accidents such as occurred in the Harlequin-Scottish match at Richmond early in the season happened in the return game at Wandsworth. For the home side Maxwell Dove turned out as a new man at full back, and Stoop was away; otherwise they had their usual side out, as did the visitors, with the exception of Wade, who was an absentee. Bruce Lockhart was in fine form, and soon found an opportunity to cross-kick following a forward rush. Gowland, among others, followed up, and this latter player scored a try for Lockhart to convert. With a 5 points lead, the Scotsmen kept pressing for the remainder of the first half, after which, however, the home side's three-quarters carried all before them. It was a fine piece of work which led up to Dove's try just after the restart, and an even more brilliant try was scored by Lewis. On this latter occasion Poulton made a clever opening for Lambert, who raced on and passed to Lewis close to the line. Lambert added the extra points (he had failed at his first attempt) and this enabled the Harlequins to win on their merits by 8 points to 5. Dove, the new full-back, made a more than promising first appearance. Harlequins, 1 goal, 1 try; Scottish, 1 goal.

Guy's Hospital vs. Old Merchant Taylors.—Guys deserve full credit for their victory over the Old Boys at Honor Oak Park, for after the Taylors had scored a goal, kicked by Raphael from a try by Bull, the home side had the misfortune to lose F. G. Sprague's services, the Thames Rowing Club man breaking his arm. From that point, however, despite the handicap, the Hospital men held their own. Before half-time one of several penalties given against Wyatt, the Taylors' scrum-half, for off-side resulted in Stokes placing a neat goal; while after the change of ends, Medlock and Stringer crossed the visitors' line, the latter following a most brilliant run. In neither case was the place-kick successful, and so Guy's won by 9 points to 5. The Taylors' three-quarters strove with great dash to regain the lead, but the Hospital tackling was very safe and hard. Wyatt's repeated off-side tactics probably cost the losers the match. Guys, 1 penalty goal, 2 tries: O.M.T., 1 goal.

Rosslyn Park vs. Lennox.—Lennox were in good form at Richmond, and defeated Rosslyn Park by 16 points to 3. For the first half hour there was no score, although Lennox had the better of matters. At length, Atkins, as the result of one of the numerous bouts of passing by the Lennox three-quarters obtained a pretty try, which Newberry failed to convert. Haxell added a second try a few minutes later from a scrimmage a few yards from the Rosslyn Park goal, McLachlan obtaining the major points. A few minutes before the interval a penalty for offside was given in favour of Rosslyn Park, from which King-Stephens scored. Crossing over with a lead of 8 points to 3, Lennox had little difficulty in maintaining their position throughout the second half, although the Rosslyn Park three-quarters made some excellent attempts which were spoilt by erratic passing. Pearce-Jones obtained another try for Lennox ten minutes after the interval, and another fine bout of passing let in Atkins, who scored a fourth try for Lennox, McLachlan adding the major points. Lennox forwards also played a strong game, and their full back seldom had occasion to touch the ball. Lennox, 2 goals, 2 tries: Rosslyn Park, 1 penalty goal.

Northampton vs. St. Bart's Hospital.—In this match at Franklin Gardens, Northampton, the Hospital fifteen failed to make much of a show against the home men, who were strongly represented. Northampton started before about 3,000 persons, and the first incident of note was a clever run by Mobbs, which ended by that player being pulled down on the line. After fifteen minutes, however, Harrison made an opening for Cook, who slipped between the visiting backs and scored near the posts. Coles failed to goal, and this was quickly followed by a try by Mobbs, who, sprinting down the wing, got over in the corner. This time Welsh failed to convert, and a try scored by Coles, after clever play by Harrison and Cook, also went unconverted. At the interval Northampton had a lead of 9 points.

Restarting, the visitors went off with a rattle. Just nearly getting over after smart combination, in which Faulkner and Coombs participated, Leigh pushing him into touch in the nick of time. This was followed by a smart run ov With, which nearly produced a try, but afterwards the visitors never had a chance. Mobbs augmented the home total with a try after a dodgy run down half the length of the field. Welsh just missed with the goal kick, following which Harrison ran over and scored behind the posts, himself adding the goal points, this being the only try which was converted. Before the end Cook twice got over, and the eight try was added by Beasley just before the end, the game ending:—Northampton, 1 goal, 7 tries (26 points); St. Bart's Hospital, 0.

England vs. Australians.—The meeting of the Australians with the English Northern Union team attracted a crowd of 15,000 spectators to Newcastle, where the conditions were favourable and the pitch was dry and firm. The Australians, who looked much stronger in build than the Englishmen, won the toss, and decided to play uphill. From the kick-off England had the advantage, and a scrummage took place in the Australian twenty-five, but the game opened out when the ball came to Conlon. Lomas next took a place-kick and just missed scoring a goal for the Englishmen this being followed by a series of long punts between Morton and Messenger and Tyson and Jenkins. Frameley made an effort, but the Australians nearly crossed the half-way line. The English three-quarters shaped in promising fashion, passing beautifully, and at length Thomas scored a try which Lomas converted. A piece of clever work was well followed up by Batten, and a try was claimed, but this was not allowed England's superiority was pronounced, their passing being very clean and their pace faster than that of the Australians, who were now playing with more determination than before. Lomas scored again, and the interval arrived with England leading by one goal and two tries (8 points) to nil.

The Australians improved after change of ends, but their form was still disappointing. Except for occasional loose rushes, which seldom reached their opponents' twenty-five, they did little in the way of attacking. In scrummaging they did little in the way of attacking. In scrummaging work England nearly always came out best, and when the Australians did get possession they gained no advantage. From a free kick Lomas scored a goal for England, and with a score of 10 points against them it seemed a poor outlook for the Australians, who never seemed to get into good working order, their efforts being met without much difficulty. At length Messenger scored a try and goal for the visitors, but Tyson quickly followed with a try for England, and Lomas got another goal. The Australians were completely outclassed, and England won easily by three goals and three tries (15 points), to 1 goal and 1 try (5 points). England, 15 points; Australians, 5 points.

HOCKEY.

London vs. The Combined Universities.—A fast and interesting game at Sundridge Park on Monday between London and the Combined Universities ended in favour of the former by 3 goals to 2. As a result of the thawing of the morning's heavy frost, the ground was in a very sticky condition, and the players with difficulty kept their feet. About halfway through the first half London were awarded a penalty bully, which Allen converted into a goal and thus opened the scoring. Soon afterwards A. J. M. Bacon, at left half for London, had to leave the field as a result of a nasty knock on the hand from a clearance by Edgell, but although Bacon had done a lot of useful work the 'Varsities were unable to obtain any advantage during his absence, and at half-time London still led by the only goal scored.

Bacon reappeared after the interval, but looked very queer. Eiloart let Leese through, and with a stinging shot the latter brought the sides level. Then Church found the net with a fine cross shot, but sticks was given against him. The ball was then transferred to the London goal, and Edgell saved finely from Stinson, who, however, should have scored from the rebound, but missed the ball altogether. Receiving from Poulton, Leese beat Edgell and put the 'Varsities ahead. London soon equalised through Church, who received from Kendall, and after several opportunities had been missed by Church and Allen, Kendal scored the winning goal from a corner. Result:—London, 3 goals; Combined Universities, 2.

ROWING.

UNIVERSITY CREWS AT PRACTICE

Oxford.

The fog which hung over Oxford was much denser yesterday, than was the case on Wednesday, and great difficulty was experienced by the coxswains in steering the numerous crews practising for the torpids, whilst the 'Varsity crew's practice was very materially interferred with. There was a very meagre atendance along the towpath. In the eight on the first journey Barker resumed possession of No. 2 thwart in place of Somers-Smith, whilst on the second journey Cudmore and Barker exchanged at 2 and 7. The crew were afloat at 2-35, and paddled to Iffley in short stages at a stro of 24 per minute, and on the return no extended rowing w done, whilst they did not venture below the boathouse.

Owing to the density of the fog there was no tubbing, and a second journey was made to Iffley after half an hour's rest. They kept to the same stroke, and again finished up at the boathouse. Mr. Holland, accompanied by Dr. Bourne, was again in charge, both being on horseback. Names and weights:—

Hunting.

THE BOMBAY HUNT

Two good runs and two more kills was the fare meted out by the Bombay Hounds last Bye-day. The meet was at Parla, and as soon as the early morning mist lifted the covert near by was tried. Meeting with success, we had a fine gallop over rice fields as far as Chuckla, turned down to the left and worked our way round the Groves into the lane over a stretch of good lepping country, and thence into Bomanwadi Valley. Circling round, we next head for Marole, the pack very strong on the jack, who only had time to reach the old well in the village itself before he was put an end to.

Hacking back to Sahar, we had time to change mounts before another jack was put up. He also went away fast over strongly banked rice fields, and eventually reached the Backwater near the stone bridge. Crossing, he and hounds were lost momentarily in a thick wood, to be met again at the Andheri Road. Thence the quarry went on the old line, to the Marole Hills and Goregaum. Nearing the lake, he took to a thickly wooded hill, and, after twisting in amongst the undergrowth for some time, was caught.

The Horse Show combined with the Byculla Club dance tended to make the field on the extra day a small one at Jackal Hill. A move was made right away for the Mango Tope in quest of our old friend, but a thorough search proved fruitless. Leaving it, we cross the Andheri Road at the point where the Tulsi water main tunnels under it, and the small wood here gives up an object of the chase. Making away towards Vehar, the jack takes us along the Tulsi main over some stiff jumps, and eventually came back to the aforementioned Tope. He is hard pressed through it, and on towards Andheri, doubling back before reaching the railway. Setting his mask for Pereira Hill, he climbs it and descends into the Chuckla Groves, where a splendid long stretch of paddy fields gives us a great gallop. Past Callena Tank, he takes us to the barracks at Vakola. Reaching the Officers' bungalows, hounds make furious attempts to enter one of them, but the lady in occupation was obdurate, showed no signs of melting in answer to entreaties and gave us no option but to draw hounds off and return home.

Thursday's Meet was postponed till Friday on account of the Horse Show, and the horses not having all returned there were but few to participate in the runs which gave hounds another brace to add to their bag.

The Meet was at the Kennels and as usual a move was first made to Chuckla, a jack being driven from the adjacent brick-field. He gave us a fast gallop as far as Bomanwadi Hill, and another on coming down into the rice-fields of the valley of that name. Passing thence to Vangoli we get into the open, but passers-by presumably made the quarry turn away from Andheri Road to Chuckla Hill again. Over this, he led us on to Pereira Hill, but spared us the climb, being pulled down in the cactus at the foot of it.

It had been a fast run and time was well in hand as we changed to our second strings, and put hounds into the Sahar covert. Fruitful as ever, a jack was unearthed and set out on a rather circuitous run, crossing Andheri Road, and coming to Marole. Circling round, he came to the Mango Tope, and took to the long lane, past Roberts' corner, back across the road, and to Chuckla. He then made for the railway at Irla, but, being gradually gained on, was run into before reaching it.

Paperchasing.

IX,

THE strenousness with which the light horsemen are attending to their duties in camp was largely responsible for the small attendance at the paperchase last Friday. The most notable absentee from the hard riders was Mr. Ballantyne, who after his cruelly hard luck of the previous week retired from the contest for the Average Cup and is saving Fairy and Meprise for the horse and pony cup chases. Captain Holden was again placed in both chases and thus secures both average cups as he cannot be beaten now even if he does not start again and he will probably rest his gees also in view of the other cup chases. The course was over the Jodhpore country about 4½ miles and there was very keen competition both among the horses and ponies. The final order was as follows:—

HORSE CHASE.

1. Captain Charrington on Benalbi
2. Mr. Morris on Blue Bell II.
3. Captain Holden on Lord Harry
4. Mr. Cowper on Maisonette
5. Mr. Clive on Colours
6. Mr. Tegart on Necklace followed by Messrs. Payne and Macpherson, Miss Hasluck, Captain Stewart, Mrs. Myers, Messrs. Ross, Craik, Walsh and Winkworth.

PONY CHASE.

1. Captain Holden on Pathfinder II
2. Mr. Tanner on Bandy Leg
3. Captain Stewart on Record
4. Mr. Tegart on Nancy
5. Mr. Annesley on Miss Mac
6. Mr. Muir on Ungava

followed by Messrs. Cowper and Malcolm.

NATIVE CAVALRY TOURNAMENT.

THE first two matches of the second round 8th Cavalry vs. 18th P. W Lancers and 36th Jacob's Horse vs. 5th Cavalry, were played on the 8th instant in the presence of a large crowd of both visitors and residents in Umballa. There was a high wind which was very difficult to play against, and such clouds of dust that it was almost impossible to distinguish individual play. The remaining two games of the second round, viz., 26th P. W. C ight Cavalry vs. 39th P. W. O. Central India Horse and 3. .1 Lancers vs. 4th Cavalry took place on the 9th instant under very similar conditions and before an even larger audience. The play was of a very high order and the excitement intense.

18TH LANCERS vs. 8TH CAVALRY.

First Chukker.—The 18th won the toss and had the initial advantage of the hurricane in their favour. Just after the throw in the ball was worked down to the 18th's flags, where Lane had a shot at goal but missed. Play then for the greater part was in the middle of the ground when just as time sounded the 18th ran the ball to the 8th's territory and Mills scored the first goal for the 18 h. Score: 18th, 1 goal.

Second Chukker.—The 8th were on the offensive for the first half of the chukker when Mills slipped through and shot but the ball went wide Up and down play then ensued, both teams racing for all they were worth. Hudson managed to slip away after a back hander and scored. Immediately after the ball was rushed to the 8th's goal, but Chaplin saved with a neat back hander under his pony's neck. Hudson again got away and had a nice run down the ground but failed to score. After this the 8th were on the defensive again and had to hit behind to stop the 18th scoring. Score: 18th, 1 goal; 8th, 1 goal.

Third Chukker.—A lot of sticky play in front of 8th's flags resulted in a goal for the 18th out of a scrimmage. Immediately after Howell got on and scored again. The 8th were all along on the defensive and in a cloud of dust the 18th scored once more from a nice long shot by Gul Nawaz. Score: 18th, 4 goals; 8th, 1 goal.

Fourth Chukker.—Off side given against 18th, no result. The game was evenly contested until Chaplin went up a bit too much and let Howell slip away. He ran the ball to 8th's flags but the shot went wide. Blood and Hudson getting on had a nice run down the ground which was cleverly stopped and returned, 18th again scoring a goal. Score: 18th, 5 goals; 8th, 1 goal.

Fifth Chukker.—Marsh getting possession got in a couple of nice long shots and put the ball through. From the throw in the 8th attacked vigorously, and Lane scored. Shortly after Chaplin b ought the ball once more into 18th's territory when Hudson taking a pass nicely put up one more for the 8th. Score: 18th, 6 goals; 8th, 3 goals.

Sixth Chukker.—The 8th were very hard pressed for the first three minutes and Chaplin continually saving; while trying to cut a ball away from goal with a shot under his pony's tail, the ball jumped and coming off at an angle followed him through the 8th goal. Lane made a desperate effort to score for the 8th just on time, but after running the ball down half the length of the ground his shot went wide. 18th Lancers were thus left winners by 7 goals to 3.

36TH JACOB'S HORSE vs. 5TH CAVALRY.

First Chukker.—From the throw in the 36th got possession. Gavin Jones centred neatly and Fagan getting on scored. One of the 5th Cavalry ponies did a roll but the rider was only shaken, and remounting almost at once the game continued. Fagan's play was the feature of this chukker; he seemed to do his work as I, and also continualy to be making runs. The 5th were on the defensive throughout this chukker except just on time when Davidson saved very nicely. Score: 36th, 1 goal; 5th, nil.

Second Chukker.—Hay had a nice run in this chukker and taking the ball the whole length of the ground scored. The 36th were playing rather a risky game and coming up too much in the game. There was nothing much to choose in this chukker but the 36th's ponies seemed to be the faster. Score, 36th, 1 goal; 5th; 1 goal.

Third Chukker.—Fagan was paying his attention to the 5th back and some nice combined play on the part of the other members of the 36th's team resulted in a worry in front of the 5th's goal from which the 36th scored. Score: 36th, 2 goals; 5th, 1 goal.

Fourth Chukker.—Farquahar fouled, Nutting and Hay taking the penalty shot gave it a tap and then following up with a nice clean shot put it through. Rest of the chukker very fast but uneventful. Score: 36th, 2 goals; 5th, 2 goals.

Fifth Chukker:—The 36th through going up too much into the game let Hay away by himself, had a run for three-quarters length of ground with no one near him and scored. The umpires would have done well to stop one of the ponies playing in this chukker as it had been most disgracefully spurred. Both flanks were covered with blood and being a white pony it was all the more noticeable. Score: 36th, 2 goals; 5th, 3 goals.

Sixth Chukker:—This chukker was evenly contested, but no further score was made. Davidson took the ball the length of the ground once and looked like scoring, but just missed the flags. DeGale also made a fine run.

Hay played a first-class game for the winners and Fagan for the losers played in his usual brilliant style. The 36th had the best of the game all through and looked like winning, but luck was on the side of the 5th Cavalry and they came out victors by 3 to 2.

C. I. HORSE vs. 26TH LIGHT CAVALRY.

The C. I. H. were deprived of the services of their back, Captain Eckford and consequently the chances of the 26th were thought to be much improved, but Major Daunt was found to be a most efficient substitute.

First Chukker.—From the throw in the C.I.H. got possession and assumed the offensive. After three shots at goal which went wide Todd looked like scoring, but the ball was returned to the centre of the ground when time was sounded. Score: nil.

Second Chukker.—Todd meeting the ball nicely had a couple of clean shots at the flags and scored the first goal to the C. I. H. Almost immediately the ball was again taken by Todd and Watson to the 26th's territory, where the former put it through. The 26th were confined to their own end of the ground throughout this chukker. Score: C. I. H., 2 goals.

Third Chukker.—From the commencement the C.I.H. pressed and Ebrahim sending the ball up to Todd, who passed to Watson the latter scored the third goal for the C. I. H. The 26th made a good run to the C.I.H. flags, but owing to the high wind the ball was blown wide. Score at half time: C. I. H., 3 goals; 26th, nil.

Fourth Chukker.—Another combined run down the ground resulted in the ball narrowly missing the 26th's goal. Up and down play ensued, neither side gaining any advantage and the chukker finished without any addition to the score. Score: C. I. H, 4 goals; 26th, nil.

Fifth Chukker.—Popham getting possession made a nice run and with a good long shot placed the ball nicely in front of goal, and before he was caught managed to get in another hit which scored. In this chukker a foul was given against the 26th. Ebrahim taking the shot narrowly missed scoring, the ball being returned to mid ground, time sounded. Score: C. I. H., 4 goals; 26th, 1 goal.

Sixth Chukker.—Almost at the start Todd and Moir in getting to the ball had a bit of a cross which was given against the C. I. H. and from the penalty hit Popham scored. In the remainder of the chukker the C. I. H. more than held their own and when the ball sounded were winners by 4 to 2.

4TH CAVALRY vs. 32ND LANCERS.

First Chukker.—From the start the 4th assumed the offensive and made several runs to the 32nd's flags but failed to score till finally Williams sent a shot home. On changing ends the 32nd ran the ball to the 4th's goal and Cassels hit through and soon after renewal of play Griffiths put in a nice shot that scored again. Play then was kept in midfield whence Johnson by a long shot just failed to equalize. Score: 4th Cavalry, 1 goal; 32nd, 2 goals.

Second Chukker.—All through this chukker the 4th kept the 32nd pinned to their ground and had several runs to and shots at the flags but failed to add to their total. Score: 4th Cavalry, 1, goal; 32nd, 2 goals

Third Chukker.—Play opened in midfield and the 32nd ran away with the ball and had a shot at goal which missed. The 4th then worked the ball back to midfield after some sticky play. Williams had a run and out of a scrimmage in front of goal managed to get in a hit which equalized. Immediately after Johnson scored again. Play was in midfield till Cassels scored again for the 32nd. Score: 4th Cavalry, 3 goals; 32nd, 3 goals.

Fourth Chukker.—Play was centred in midfield for a bit then the 4th worked the ball to their opponents' flags and Stainforth getting a chance scored with a pretty angle shot. Very equal play followed, both backs defending their goals cleverly. Score: 4th, 4 goals; 32nd, 3 goals.

Fifth Chukker.—Play proceeded for the next few minutes without advantage to either side till a foul was given against the 32nd, who hit out from between their flags. Williams stopping it neatly sent a clean shot into goal. On changing over the 4th at once rushed the ball to their opponents' goal where out of a scrimmage Wilson scored. Score: 4th Cavalry, 6 goals; 32nd, 3 goals.

Sixth Chukker.—The 4th continued to attack the 32nd and forced them to hit behind. The penalty shot taken by Johnson was well met and the ball ran to the opposite end of ground whence it was worked back and from a nice run Stainforth shot the last goal for the 4th. Score: 4th Cavalry, 7 goals; 32nd, 3 goals.

The first match was one of the best that has yet been played during the tournament. The second game was disappointing, as the C. I. H. were masters of the situation from the first, and outplayed and outgalloped their opponents. There was less wind than hitherto and consequently less dust.

First Chukker.—A very fast game was the order of the day from the throw in hard galloping up and down neither side gaining any advantage. A foul was given against the 18th for hooking a stick on the wrong side. Mills had a nice run to the flags when deGale returned the compliment and being ably supported by Nutting scored. Score: 5th Cavalry, 1 goal; 18th nil.

Second Chukker.—5th got possession and ran to 18th's flags, where the ball went out wide, the 18th returned and had several shots at goal without scoring. Score: 5th, 1 goal; 18th, nil.

Third Chukker.—Gul Nawaz saved a sharp hit from Hay right in front of goal. Gul Nawaz with a long shot returned it to mid ground and again getting another hit Howell kept the 5th back employed while Marsh put it through. Foul was given against Howell: good shot at goal by the 5th a just went wide. Good runs by Hay and deGale followed but Gul Nawaz saved cleverly each time. Score: 1 goal all.

Fourth Chukker.—A long run by Hay opened the play and deGale getting possession nearly scored with a beautiful shot under his pony's neck Hay stopped the hit out and put the ball through. Score: 5th, 2 goals; 18th, 1 goal.

Fifth Chukker.—Off side given against the 5th. The 18th ran the ball to 5th's flags where from a wild scrimmage in clouds of dust Mills put on the second goal for the 18th and thus equalized.

Sixth Chukker.—Desperate play on both sides and hard galloping resulted in no further score. Time was sounded and immediately after the ball went behind the 5th's goal line.

On flags being widened, the 5th hit out from behind. The ball was stopped and went through off a pony leaving the 18th winners by 3 to 2.

C. I. H. vs 4TH CAVALRY.

First Chukker.—Off side given against the 4th almost immediately after commencement of the game. Sticky play followed in midground. The C. I. H. at last breaking away had a good combined run, Todd scoring. Score: C. I. H., 1 goal; 4th, Cavalry, nil.

Second Chukker.—The ball was at once worked up dangerously near the 4th's goal where Colonel Watson got a nice clean shot through the flags. From the throw in Watson got hold of the ball and after taking it down the side line centred beautifully but just failed to score. For the remainder of this chukker the 4th were pinned to their own ground, while the C. I. H. had repeated shots at goal. Score: C. I. H., 2 goals; 4th Cavalry, nil.

Third Chukker.—This chukker was a good fast one. Up and down play followed with no scoring, but every time the 4th assumed the offensive they were stopped and the ball returned to the neighbourhood of their flags. Score: C. I. H., 2 goals; 4th Cavalry, nil.

Fourth Chukker.—Up and down play more or less evenly contested but always somewhat in favour of the C. I. H. No score. Score: C. I. H., 2 goals; 4th Cavalry, nil.

Fifth Chukker.—Colonel Watson after a grand run nearly scored; immediately after he again got possession and this time his perseverance was rewarded. Score: C. I. H., 3 goals; 4th, Cavalry, nil.

Sixth Chukker.—In this chukker the C. I. H. seemed to come to themselves and it looked as if they couldn't miss. Todd ran the ball towards the 4th's goal and passing to Watson the latter scored. From the throw in Todd and Watson again helped one another, the former hitting through Then Ebrahim with one of his celebrated rushes took the ball down the side and from a very sharp angle shot a goal just as the halt sounded. Score: C. I. H., 6 goals; 4th Cavalry, nil.

For the winners colonel Watson played brilliantly. He was at his very best and seemed to be everywhere; Todd and Ebrahim too were conspicious and Daunt the 5th man served his forwards nobly by dealing out strong and well-played backhanders. For the 4th Cavalry, Captain Johnson played in his usual style which is first class. Often with two or even three of his opponents jostling him he managed to save and had it not been for his steady play the score would have been much greater than it was.

Final.

C. I. H. vs. 18TH.

No wind, perfect afternoon very large attendance.

First Chukker.—Even play in midground. Ebrahim getting possession had a run stopped by Howell, but taking the ball on managed to draw first blood for the C. I. H. On being thrown in the ball was at once rushed to the C.I.H flags by Mills, who with a nice clean shot equalised. Mills and Marsh passing cleverly the former again scored. After another rout of furious play up and down the ground Gul Nawaz again scored, four goals being thus put up in 5½ minutes. The ball after 2½ minutes' fast play in mid ground went out Score: C. I. H., 1 goal; 18th, 3 goals.

Second Chukker:—The ball was first taken to 18th's territory and went over the line, and back to C. I. H. end. Gul Nawaz made a nice run alongside the line and taking it through a mêlée in front of goal again scored just as time sounded. Score: 18th, 4 goals; C. I. H, 1 goal.

Third Chukker.—Watson made a fine run to 18th's flags, but Gul Nawaz saved in the nick of time. Daunt passing to Watson nicely, Todd got possession out of a scramble in mid ground; taking it down the side line he centred and shot a goal under his pony's neck. Score: 18th, 4 goals; C. I. H, 2 goals.

Fourth Chukker.—Out of scrummage in front of goal C. I. H. scored. A good run by Watson just went wide and equal play in centre of ground followed C. I. H. had slightly the upper hand in this chukker. Score: 18th, 4 goals; C. I. H, 3 goals.

Fifth Chukker.—Watson passed to Todd, who centred beautifully and shot a goal from at least 100 yards. On being thrown in the ball was taken with a combined run to 18th's flags, where C. I. H. again scored. Mills got away but the ball jumped and Gula Nawaz following on had shot at goal which just went wide. After a clever passing by the 18th in front of C. I. H. goal Gul Nawaz managed to equalise. Score: 5 all.

Sixth Chukker.—Play in front of 18th's goal followed. Daunt had a chance but missed and immediately after the C. I. H. flags were in danger. A tremendous run by Watson just went wide on time Score; 5—5.

Flags widened. The 18th hit out and taking the ball to the C. I. H. end Gul Nawaz just missed amidst great excitement Watson got possession from a hit out and taking the ball the length of the ground won the match.

Athletics.

ATHLETIC SPORTS ANCIENT AND MODERN.

The Right Hon'ble Lord Alverstone (Lord Chief Justice) gave an interesting address on the 27th January to the members of the Inns of Court Mission Institute and Working Men's Club, Drury Lane, W.C., his subject being, "Athletic Sports Ancient and Modern." The lecture was illustrated by numerous lantern slides, and these considerably added to the pleasure of the evening, the lucid explanations of Lord Alverstone investing them with value and significance. The chair was occupied by Mr. H. C. Gutteridge, who at the close tendered the thanks of the audience to his lordship.

In the course of his remarks Lord Alverstone mentioned that it had been suggested to him he should deal with professionalism in athletics, but while such a subject was most interesting to many of them, and especially to those who had thought much upon it, he had chosen one which had a wider application, and one likely to be more generally interesting. Dealing first with ancient athletics, the lecturer referred to the Olympic Games, which were begun, he said, nearly 3,000 B.C., and at that time there were only five or six sports practised, some of which had continued down to the present time. We owed much to Greece—language, philosophy, politics, music, ethics, and all the higher developments of men were started in Greece, and at the same time that nation were a great athletic people.

In 1776 B.C. the 200 yards race was started, and about fifty years later the 440 yards was introduced, while subsequently came javelin throwing, wrestling, the broad jump, and throwing the discus. Spear-throwing and boxing followed, and the latter had come down to this day. The way in which the muscles of the body were developed in Greek athletes was shown by views thrown upon the screen, and it was emphasised that ancient sculptures portrayed the contemporaneous development of all the muscles of the body, and not the excessive development of a few at the expense of the others.

In ancient days they did not compete in athletic sports simply to obtain prizes. The athletes were not then pothunters, as wreaths of laurel were sometimes the only rewards they obtained for successes after many months of training. Professor Jebb had beautifully expressed the idea he wished to bring prominently before them: "Olympia remained the central expression of the Greek idea that the body of man has a glory as well as the intellect and spirit, and the body and mind should both be disciplined." The main object with which we in the present day should cultivate athletics was to a large extent embodied in that interesting expression.

In making a passing allusion to cricket, Lord Alverstone urged that this was, in his opinion, the finest game there was, and one that they all ought to practice if they had the opportunity. Football, too, was a game which of late years had grown to great prominence, and important points with regard to professionalism had arisen in connection with both those pastimes. Practical advice on some branches of athletics was then given, and the extreme importance of the runner running on his toes was insisted upon. His Lordship said he noticed many boys still ran flat-footed, but if they wished to be expert runners they must always run upon their toes. In high jumping they must spring as close to the bar as they could consistent with getting enough forward motion to carry them over the bar. The high jump had not been developed of late years so much as it should have been. About 1878 Mr. Brookes, of Manchester, a young amateur, jumped at Lillie Bridge 6ft. 2½ins. That was exceeded by the American players, who came over here and jumped 6ft. 3ins. The average winning jump at the University sports and amateur athletic championships for some years was two inches under 6ft.

With regard to the broad jump, let them bear in mind that nobody could cover a lot of ground unless they rose a considerable height in the air, and it was equally important that as they approached the take-off, they should take long strides, because if they took off after several short strides they could not possibly make a big jump. The essence of putting the weight was to get the body behind the shot. A man might be as strong in the arm as he pleased, but unless he got his body behind his arm he would never make a long putt. The sports next touched upon in succession, and the salient features in each pointed out were wrestling, cycling, fencing, physical drill, mountaineering, skating, tobogganning, ice hockey, curling, and sports on boardship.

In conclusion, the lecturer said he wished his hearers to remember that all these various sports were to be practised by them not for the purpose of gaining prizes only, although that was a very nice thing, but for developing their bodies from a health point of view. As to training, they should not imagine that any special methods of feeding or training were necessary. He supposed he had trained as much as anybody, and for many years he had kept in as good condition as most people who reached the weight he had, and he spoke from practical experience when he advised them as he did. Whatever, they might be aiming to achieve in athletics, they should never in training do more than enough to keep themselves in thoroughly good condition They should not make their final effort until they actually competed in the race. Then he wanted them to consider their practice in athletics from the point of view of doing better their work in life. There might be some of them or their friends who thought of becoming professionals in some branch of sport They did not want to develop sport for the benefit of the professional, but for the benefit of the amateur. Neither did they want to develop sport only for the man who could win prizes, and therefore they should not consider they were not doing good by practising athletics in a moderate way even if they did not win. Then, as a result, they got a healthy body, and this was an object well worth striving for.

Lord Alverstone's last sentences were that if they were going to enjoy their sport and be successful in the truest sense of the world, and be able to look back upon their efforts with unsullied pleasure, they must compete in the highest spirit of honour. Be defeated a dozen times rather than win by a trick.

LIMITS OF HUMAN SPEED.

The recent doings of Shrubb, Longboat, and Dorando suggest the question whether we have been improving all round in running in recent years. It seems clear that Walker of South Africa, who created so great a surprise by beating the Americans at the Stadium, has proved that his victory was no fluke by showing tremendous pace at Johannesburg, where a consensus of opinion seems to agree that he covered a hundred yards in the amazing time of 9 2-5secs. Whether it will be established as a record is not yet certain, for he seems to have "beaten the pistol:" but he certainly covered the distance in the time given, and for the moment that is sufficient. His great speed was further proved in the 120 yards, which he won in 11 2-5 secs., apparently without any question being possible as to the correctness of the race and the conditions. The two performances taken together leave no doubt that he is the fastest runner over a short distance now alive, and it is probable that no one has ever done these distances so fast. On the same day almost as good a time was done by that speedy professional, A. B. Postle, of Calgoorlie, who has covered 100 yards in 9½secs, and is well at the head of his class.

The Hurdles.

These things are somewhat remarkable when considered in connection with the fact that they occurred within six months of an equally amazing performance over the hurdles, when Smithson (of Portland, Oregon, United States of America) covered 120 yards, over ten flights of 3ft. 6in. hurdles in 15secs. He was 23 years of age, weighed 12st. 10lbs., and stands 6ft. high. For speed and strength and skill combined nothing like his race in the Stadium has ever been seen. What it was worth may be judged from the fact that if he had been doing the distance on the flat in level time the addition of ten rows of obstacles only involved 3secs. longer in the 120 yards.

The only thing it can be compared to is the speed of modern thoroughbreds in the Liverpool Grand National, who do 4 miles 856 yards over thirty big fences in less than 9mins. 35secs., carrying 10st. 9lbs. on their back. That is faster than any horse could do the distance on the flat a hundred years ago. In their case, as in Smithson's, the art of getting over obstacles with a minimum loss of pace has reached its highest point, so that their speed itself assists them at each take-off, and never checks after they have landed. In the case of the human hurdler, a bigger and stronger man is evidently necessary for gerat speed than is proportionately necessary for horses. Strength and height, which connote weight, were evidently essential to Smithson's marvellous victory. Walker's measurements seem to indicate that they are not so necessary for sheer speed without the added effort of surmounting obstacles, for he stands 5ft. 7ins., weighs 9st. 4lbs., and has only just completed his nineteenth year.

The Sprinter's Mechanism.

Walker is wonderfully light and springy on his feet, with finely-developed thighs, a light body, and good chest, with remarkably good muscular development on each side of his spinal cord. But no one would pick him out as champion in the present state of our knowledge as to the physical merits that are especially necessary. Some attempt to sketch out the physical qualities common to seventy-four fasts sprinters in the United States has, indeed, been made. It showed an average height of 5ft. 8¾ins., which appears to be an inch above the average height of man; but it varies from 5ft. 5ins., in a runner who could make sure of 10 1-5secs for his hundred to 6ft. 1¼in., in another, who had several times done 10secs.

Among the twenty-four men who were under 5ft. 8¾ins. were such flyers as Eaton and Duffey. The majority (including Wefers) were grouped between 5ft. 9ins. and 5ft. 11ins. Their weights varied also, and if it may be argued that a sprinter's height is slightly over the average, it may also be said that the same holds good of him in the scales. The extremes are from 8st. 5lbs. to 13st., and the average of the whole seventy-four men is 10st. 5lbs., which works out at about 6lbs. heavier than the average man of 5ft. 8¾ins. In other words the special muscle needed for sprinting has produced that amount of extra weight in a body which must otherwise be harmoniously developed and mechanically correct.

A most remarkable parallel with the thoroughbred horse may also be observed in the fact that all sprinters' muscular measurements are above the average, while their bone measurements are below it, which probably means in them what it does in the racehorse their bone is of the best possible quality. It was only to be expected that, whereas the leg-lift of the average man is 331lbs., that of the sprinter is as much as 550, what is less obvious is that the sprinter's back-muscles are superior also, in the ratio of 396 to 323. This the writer noticed in Walker, without, at the time, realising its value. Evidently these muscles not only assist the action of both legs and arms, but also keep the body steady during a succession of movements which continuously tend to overbalance the runner by throwing him forward, at a speed which involves an average of twenty-two miles an hour in the 100 yards, and rises to over twenty-five miles an hour at the finish of the 220 yards, a seemingly incredible rate to be developed by the unaided movements of the human body.

Distance Runners.

Though we appear to have improved in sprinting, it is certainly not owing to any science of Eugenics that we have done so. The combination of qualities necessary for high speed over a distance seem to be a bony framework, somewhat taller, yet lighter, than the average; a short, broad head; clean, somewhat narrow hips; high insteps on short feet: a larger and stronger muscular development than usual; and the indomitable courage which alone could make the fullest use of these advantages in an emergency. At present it is impossible to say that this can be bred. Its finest exponents do not seem to flourish in the English climate at any rate, where longer distances seem to be the more natural result of the curious combinations of weather which these islands are supposed to enjoy.

The mile in 4mins. 12¾secs. by W. G. George in 1886, has, for instance, never been surpassed anywhere. His time for two miles was first beaten (by two-fifths of a second) by A. Shrubb, who did the distance in 9mins. 17secs., on a rather heavy grass course, measuring 440 yards. On a good day and track he could no doubt have knocked 7secs. off it. George thinks that two miles will be done some day in 9mins. 5secs., and Shrubb himself in 1904 at Glasgow has got as near that as 9mins. 9 3-5secs., which is the world's record. He has also done ten miles in 50mins. 40 3-5secs., a very remarkable time indeed: but whether he can last for twenty-six miles is quite another matter. In his prime there was certainly no one alive who could touch him from two miles up to ten. He has never attempted anything so extensive as his latest venture.

What will Oxygen do?

The rise in records of late years does not entirely prove the fact that we are so much better men than our fathers were. It proves that we practice a good deal more, at such details as starting in sprints, for instance, and that our running tracks are much better, and that we take the thing far more seriously than was ever the case before. If the oxygen treatment introduced by Dr. Leonard Hill becomes common, we may expect still further developments. For he let Mr. Just inhale oxygen for two minutes, with the result that the speedy Cantab did a half-mile in 1min. 55 1-5secs., on 27th July, at Stamford Bridge, faster time than he ever ran before, and only 1 4-5secs., worse than the world's record of C. H. Fitzpatrick, which has stood since 1895.

Similar trials were made with H. E. Holding, and it was demonstrated that oxygen not only improved a runner's pace, but diminished his fatigue and prolonged his endurance for fresh efforts. This is certainly very remarkable, and it is difficult to see where it is all going to lead us. Perhaps the next University sports may produce some surprises. But we are not likely to see Walker's time beaten for the 100 yards, and when the South African is in London next summer it will be of the highest interest to see exactly what he can do when he has a year's more strength and experience, and when the most skilled officials in the world are ready to vouch for the accuracy of his performances.

CRICKET IN CALCUTTA.

CALCUTTA vs. DALHOUSIE.—This two days' match in the Eden Gardens at the week end resulted in a win for Calcutta by an innings and 29 runs. Dalhousie went in first and scored 154. Hodges being top scorer with 30. Calcutta replied with 128 for 2 wickets when play closed on Saturday, Turnbull contributing 52, and Hudleston 45, not out. The latter carried his total to 74 before he was caught the next day after a sound innings which included ten 4's and three 5's. The others all made useful scores and Calcutta were all out for 288. The visitors went in again and fared very badly, the innings closing for 99. Hodges was top scorer once more with 31: Cobb (26) was the only other to reach double figures. Scores :—

BALLYGUNGE vs. Y. M. C. A.—Ballygunge just managed to scrape home on the call of time, in their match with the Y. M. C. A. on the latter's ground on Saturday last, the winning hit being made off the last ball of the last over. Scoring on both sides was low, due chiefly to a very bumpy wicket, and some good bowling by F. H. Reynolds for the home team, and by F. Gould for the winners, the former being responsible for 5 wickets for 30 runs, and the latter for 5 for 39.

F. H. Reynolds, T. Shuldham and H. G. Pooler for the losers, and F. Townend and F. Gould for the winners all made useful contributions to the score, whilst there were three or four good catches made, notably by Coulthard and A. Gould.

BALLYGUNGE vs. ST. XAVIER'S PAST AND PRESENT.—Time alone robbed Ballygunge of another win on Sunday last, St. Xaviers, on the call of time, being 150 runs behind with only 2 wickets to fall; the absence of both the Goulds from the home team was probably the means of bringing about this indecisive result, as the bowling was much weakened in consequence.

For the second week in succession, Ballygunge put up a score of over 300, and once again White was the chief factor, though on this occasion Beddy rendered him valuable support, the pair putting on no less than 172 for the fourth wicket; Skinner's 39 was the only other score of importance on the side, though seven of the team got into double figures.

Had it not been for Cameron (61), Klemis (43), and Bath (not out 25), St. Xaviers would have made a very sorry show; as it was they had lost 8 wickets for 162, when time arrived. White followed up his brilliant innings of 94, by some excellent bowling, 6 out of the 8 wickets that fell being credited to him for 59 runs. Scores :—

PUNJAB CHAMPIONSHIP TOURNAMENT

THE tournament was played at Lahore from the 8th to the 17th instant and produced some excellent games. The singles was well contested and the final brought together the same pair as last year—Rendall and Deane. E. M. Atkinson who did not play last year was, to the surprise of most people, defeated in the present tourney by Rendall who accomplished the extraordinary feat of winning sixteen games in succession and gained the match with the score, 6-5, 6-0, 6-0. In the Ladies Singles, Miss Deane beat Mrs. Leslie Jones. The doubles produced some interesting games. Atkinson and Deane eventually beat Jacob and Furnival in the final. DOINGS IN DOGDOM.

IN England the breeding of pet dogs for show purposes is becoming more and more a study of how to secure animals of minute proportions. In the recent Pet Dog Show at the Royal Horticultural Hall practically every breed of dog which is recognised as a pet had its miniature or toy counterpart. In pet dogs the craze of the moment is to produce the smallest specimens. The smaller the dog, the more valuable it becomes. For instance, one lately saw a toy bull-terrier, full grown, which scaled a pound and a half. Dogs like this scaling some twenty-four ounces, are, however, becoming comparatively common and lighter specimens are not unknown. Judging from the way pet dogs have decreased in size and weight during recent years, it appears quite within the range of possibility that we shall soon be keeping our miniature dogs in canary cages on the wall. If a dog can be reduced to about 20 ounces, why not to 8 ounces?

A SUGGESTION is seriously being made in England that distemper should be notifiable under the Contagious Diseases Animals Act. If it were, it would be adding materially to the labours of the Board of Agriculture, and would be throwing a good deal of expense upon the country. There is no doubt that the ravages of the disease entail enormous loss every year, but we would rather see the Kennel Club taking some drastic action, for it is irrefutable that dog shows are a plentiful source of spreading contagion. It is almost impossible to exhibit a young dog, who does not contract the complaint, usually at the first opportunity. The mischief lies with selfish owners, who persist in sending dogs from infected kennels, and we should like to see the Kennel Club penalising such an offence with a long period of suspension. We have known dogs removed from the club's own show because they had developed distemper while there. As the disease is usually present in the system for about twelve days, after coming in contract with a contagious case, the inference is too pointed to need emphasis. It cannot be too generally known that the disease is not spontaneous, although certain conditions may increase a dog's susceptibility to contract it, just as, in the case of human beings, we are continually taking in the germs of certain complaints, but our health may be inimical to their growth and development. If all owners were considerate enough to quarantine infected animals for a sufficient period much might be done to curtail the consequences, but only those who have had experience realise how long distemper may hang about a place. It is frequently a question of several months before a clean bill of health can be given, and this may mean a good deal of monetary loss to the proprietor of valuable stud dogs much in demand. Still, there is no doubt that something needs to be done to diminish the heavy annual mortality. Some breeds are far more immune than others, or, at any rate, less liable to take the disease in its worst forms. No doubt in-breeding, for the purpose of fixing type, is responsible for lowered vitality. Mongrels, as a rule, escape lightly. We have read letters from people, who claim to have largely stamped out distemper in their kennels by giving their dogs unlimited exercise. Unquestionably exercise is a splendid thing for keeping dogs in good health, but we know fox-hounds suffer greatly from the complaint, yet no one will venture to say that they are not kept in hard condition. Therefore, this is a theory that scarcely squares with facts.

MANY people are unable to recognise distemper until it manifests itself in a virulent form. It is safer, however, to take precautions if a puppy is off his feed and shows signs of general indisposition. There is evidently some cause for his sickness, and this is, in nine cases out of ten, distemper. The experienced man always has a clinical thermometer handy, and a rise in temperature should be enough to satisfy him. The best thing to do is to keep the patient warm and in an equable temperature. He should at once be coated in flannel, with special protection to the chest, and put upon a diet of slops. Careful nursing is more valuable than physic. Distemper takes so many forms that advice of more than a general nature cannot be very helpful. Every dog-owner, who hopes to rear puppies should have by him a handbook on canine ailments, and if he is reasonably observant, he will be able to do much himself. If the case is a bad one, he must have proper advice unless he wishes to lose his youngster. Whatever he does, his primary effort must be directed towards keeping up to the strength of the animal, and this can only be done by constant feeding on a strengthening diet. In all probability, the patient will have to be drenched. This can easily be done by using a fairly wide-mouthed bottle and making a pouch of the patient's lips. The bottle should be inserted in one side of the mouth while the lips are held on the other. A useful plan is to thicken the fluid very slightly, as the puppy is then less likely to cough, and choke. The mouth calls for daily ministrations, or bad sores will break out on the gums. A wash made of Condy's fluid is as useful as anything. If the action of the bowels is at all restricted an aperient is necessary, and in case of diarrhœa, five to ten grains of carbonate of bismuth, according to the size of the sufferer, should be shaken dry on the tongue three times a day.

Shows.

BOMBAY HORSE AND DOG SHOW.

THE Bombay Horse and Dog Show took place this year on the Marine Lines ground, as last, from Monday to Thursday, the prizes being given away at the end of the latter day by Lady Warrender. Amongst those present were H. H. the Maharajah of Gwalior, H. H. Sir Pertab Singh of Idar, Brigadier-General Richardson and the Hon'ble Justice Russel, Gymkhana President. Large numbers filled the well arranged stands and enclosures and the Show throughout may be said to have been a great success, with the various classes well and fully represented. Captain Crosse and the Hon'ble A. Hill Trevor, for the horse portion of the Show, and Mr. Douglas Bennett for the Dogs have to be warmly congratulated and thanked for the way in which they have carried out their onerous duties.

With reference to the Horse Show, many of our old favourite were seen in the rings and Mrs. Beatty as usual wore the winning red rosette on several occasions in saddle classes, with Mr. M. Goculdass as usual carrying off more than his share of the harness classes.

Mr. Stevens's brilliant little 13-3 pony put up a remarkably fine performance by winning both the horse and pony jumping competitions. A natural jumper, he is a pleasure to watch though excelling more over high jumps than the moderate show ones. Altogether the lepping was very classy, but Donald undoubtedly took the plum. There was, in fact, fairly general satisfaction expressed in this as well as the Dog Show—the latter description of owner being somewhat hard to please. Colonel Broome, Major Haig, Captain Meynell, Mr. Prevost and Mr. "Jack" Scott have also to be complemented on the way they did the judging.

The officials in the Dog Show were Lieutenant-Colonel G. E Hydecates, Lieutenant-Colonel J. Anderson and Mr. A. Purser as Judges. These too had a very difficult task as the dog owner is ever getting keener and improving the class. Three of our well-known local fanciers, Messrs. Stone, Patterson and Morris carried off prizes, Mr. Patterson's Dawdler winning him two special prizes. The success of the Show should mean renewed efforts towards the formation of a Kennel Association here.

The other day a man walked into a barber's shop, deposited upon a table a number of articles he took from a satchel, and arranged them with artistic care. "This is pomade," said the visitor. "I am well supplied," said the barber. "This is bear's grease." "I am full up with bear's grease." "Here is some fine bay rum." "Don't doubt it, but I make my own bay rum, and put on foreign labels." "Here are an electric brush, a duplex elliptic hair dye, lavender water, and a patent face powder." "I don't want any of them." "I know you don t." "Then why do you ask me to buy them" "I did not ask you to buy them. Did I say anything to you about buying them?" "Come to think of it, you did'nt." "I did not come here to sell anything. I only wish to let you know that I possess all the toilet articles that a gentleman has any business with. Now, don't try to sell me anything or praise up your wares. I am stocked. Now give me an easy shave without asking me to buy anything."

The Story Teller.

GALLAGHER'S LUCK.

THERE is nothing like an extraordinary run of good or bad luck to make a man superatitous. In Gallagher's case it was bad luck.

His misfortunes were no doubt largely due to errors of judgment, and the fact that he belonged to a decaying industry. If he had sold his cab-yard to the new tramway company when they wanted the site for a generating-station, he might have retired with a competence instead of being driven out of business slowly by the competition of the cars, and later of the automobiles. If his judgment had been better he would not have tried to redeem his losses by embarking on another business of which he knew nothing with a scoundrel as partner. But, apart from his mistakes, poor Gallagher was certainly assisted in his rapid decline to poverty by a sequence of calamities for which he could honestly hold Fate responsible. His wife had a long and expensive illness and died at the end of it.

Their only child, a son, robbed him and ran away. A bank, which was generally supposed to be quite sound, failed because Gallagher's money was in it. Then when he was reduced to taking a situation as a vanman, he had an accident on the first day and broke his arm. It was really through no fault of his, but by the time he was out of hospital his place had been filled and he found it difficult to get another.

It was plain that luck was dead against him, but he was a cheery soul, and he said to himself: "It is a long lane that has no turning." He did not admit that he was an unlucky man; he only reckoned that he was having rather a long run, and he lived in hopes of it changing.

When his health broke down he began to think seriously that something must be done to change it. He had been living on next to nothing to husband his few remaining pounds, and going out in all weathers to do odd jobs, or more often merely to seek them, and he started a cough which would not go. He could not help coughing when he was applying for work, and it lessened his chance of getting it, already small enough, for he was over sixty now, and his hair was almost white. A shilling doctor, to whom he betook himself, looked grave and told him that he must take care of himself, which sounded to poor Gallagher rather humorous.

But he wanted to be fit and well when his luck changed, so that he could take full advantage of it and build his fortune up again, and he was taking care of himself by spending a very wet morning in the free library instead of the streets, when he came across a paragraph in some magazine about a man who ascribed all his success in life to the finding of a horse-shoe.

It revived certain old doubts that had troubled Gallagher more or less vaguely. In his prosperous days he had nailed a horse-snoe over the entrance to his yard, through convention rather than any superstitious belief in its luck-giving qualities. But he remembeerd that it was not till the horse-shoe had fallen from its nail and been cast aside, that his run of ill-fortune set in. Perhaps if he found another and kept it his luck would change.

The superstition took hold of his mind, and grew, as superstition easily does when one has lost faith in all ordinary means of attaining one's purpose.

From that afternoon he ceased to look for a job—the search had grown hopeless—he looked instead for a horse-shoe. And it seemed to him as though the search were almost as barren of result.

Horses do not cast their shoes in the streets with any degree of prodigality, and in the prosperous little town where motor-cars and the electric tram had diminished the number of horsed vehicles by at least half, day after day passed without Gallagher finding what he wanted.

But day by day his obsession grew. If he could only find the fetish his luck would change and all would go well again. It was useless to try and find work until the spell was broken, and he paced the streets or the high road all day with eyes only for the roadway. At times when he saw a horse-shoe nailed over a barn he was tempted to beg or steal it, but the genuinely superstitious man is observant of the laws of luck,, and he knew that the fetish has no power unless one finds it for oneself.

At last the day came when the last penny of his carefully husbanded money was spent, and he rose and went out without breakfasting. His cough was so bad that he would have preferred to stay indoors, but to do so would mean that he had given up all hope. And to-day something told him that the spell would be broken. "It is the darkest hour before the dawn!" he quoted to himself, and the very desperateness of his position gave him a feverish hope and expectancy.

And the hope was realised. He was passing the yard where once his cabs had been kept, but which was now turned into a motor garage, when his eye lighted on a rusty horse shoe lying right in the centre of the road. For a moment he stared at it, scarcely believing his eyes. Then at the thought that somebody might secure the precious piece of iron before he could get it, he darted out from the kerb and stooped down to grasp it with eager trembling fingers. At the same moment a motor car that had come whizzing recklessly from the yard, knocked him down.

He was taken up dead. He had been killed instantly; but the horse-shoe was still held tightly in his hand. Taking all things into consideration, I suppose it brought him luck.

It was a happy inspiration, and Mr. Flexby immediately acted on it. Since his holidays his appetite has been particularly keen. Ringing up his wife on the telephone, he said: "I'd like to bring a friend home to dinner this evening. Have something good." "Why, certainly, my dear!" responded Mrs. Flexby . . . . "John," she said, "you told me you were going to bring a friend home to have dinner with us, and I've done my best to prepare a really nice meal. Now, where is he" Mr Flexby did not even blanch, "My dear," he responded, "I said I'd like to bring a friend. I couldn't find one to bring. If dinner's ready, let's make a start. I'm hungry!"

There was something about the face of the stranger, who sat opposite to her in the tramcar that was familiar to the stern lady. "Pardon me," she said "If I am not mistaken, you are one of the poor, underpaid working girls whom our Emancipation Society tried to benefit—or, at least, you were a year ago." "That is so," said the stranger. "Then our Society has evidently not been without influence, for you look prosperous now." "I have everything I want, and never was so happy in my life." "That's splendid! You must have solved the woman problem." "I have." "Glorious! Do tell me about it!" "I've married!"

A PRACTICAL AGRICULTURIST.

THE death of the Earl of Leicester at his seat, Holkham Hall, Norfolk, removes one of the most interesting links with the past in the United Kingdom. His lordship was the father of the House of Lords, of which he had been a member since 1842, and like the late Duchess of Abercorn, he could count his descendants to the third generation. Lord Leicester was born on 26th December 1822, the eldest son of the famous "Coke of Norfolk," the first earl of this, the last creation, who was himself born in 1754, so that the lives of father and son covered over a century and a half. The late peer had eighteen children (ten sons and eight daughters) of whom fourteen are living; and some forty-grandchildren and twelve great-grandchildren survive him. Of his grand-children an earl and a viscount sit in the House of Lords, three are heirs to earldoms, and one is heir to a barony, while another is heir presumptive to a baronetcy. There is a difference of very nearly half a century between the ages of his eldest daughter (Lady Powerscourt) and his youngest son, who is fifteen. Perhaps, however, the most extraordinary thing about Lord Leicester's family history is the fact that he married his second wife, the present Countess, exactly a hundred years after his father married his first, the respective dates being 1775 and 1875.

The late Earl will best be remembered as one of the greatest of British agriculturists. When he came into his heritage at the age of twenty he at once took up the duties of his position at Holkham; and thenceforth Holkham and the administration of his vast estate became the ruling object of his life. Some great landowners are in the habit of leaving their estates to the care of agents, but this was not Lord Leicester's way; he loved the work too much to surrender the direction of it into other hands. Like his father before him he was an ideal landlord, and it would be difficult to point to an estate which has enjoyed a wiser and more liberal system of management than that of Holkham. Mr. Arthur Pell in an article which he contributed to the Journal of the Royal Agricultural Society of England in 1887, stated that the Holkham estate furnished a striking illustration in support of the contention that value is due to outlay, and that some of the most splendid exhibitions of fertility and agricultural wealth are traceable not to natural circumstances, but rather to the continuous application of skill and extraneous capital to the soil. Excluding the park and domain, with the mansion and buildings pertaining to it, as well as the Marsh Farm of 459 acres, Mr. Pell gave statistics to show that the amount expended by the first Earl of Leicester on buildings and repairs from 1776 to 1842 was £536,992. By the second Earl, the expenditure for buildings and repairs, gates and fences and under draining from 1842 to 1883 was £344,994, while for purchase of land £145,224 was paid, making in all, £490,218. The amount expended by both Earls on improvements and in the purchase of land was thus over one million sterling. Mr. Pell's statement showed roughly that one half the entire income of the estate was laid out annually in the shape of improvement, taxes and rates.

Lord Leicester was opposed to Protective duties, but in a speech in 1885 he anticipated some of the present arguments of Tariff Reformers. He held that the products of the earth were too cheap and argued that it was all very well to have the necessaries of life cheap, but it was more important to have the money to purchase them. If their price increased—not to an exorbitant extent—there were thousands of men in the North of England, he said, who would find employment by an increased demand from the rural districts for their manufactures. Higher prices for corn and produce, obtained by the operation of natural causes, would be to the advantage of the great manufacturing towns of England. Referring to the results which flowed from so much land being laid down to pasture, he claimed that nothing could compel owners to keep land under cultivation at a loss.

In an interesting letter in 1895, Lord Leicester described his method of meeting the difficulty of low prices. He stated that his home farm consisted of 879 acres of arable land (beside permanent pasture) formerly farmed under the four-course system. At that time 524 acres were laid down to temporary pasture, the dates of their being so laid down varying from one to sixteen years. By this system he had been able to reduce his horses from 34 to 18, and the labourers employed upon the farm from 2 to 12. He, however, employed the same number of labourers as he used to do, but not on unprofitable farming. The financial result had been very satisfactory. His lordship went on to explain that he selected those grasses that are adapted to establish themselves on light soils, the cost of seed not exceeding 15s. per acre. He did not find the pastures deteriorate much by constant sheep-feeding, even to the length of sixteen years, but as sheep did not do as well as on land more newly laid down, he broke up from forty to fifty acres annually, and obtained by the aid of the nitrogen that had accumulated in the soil, four productive crops—two of corn, two of roots—without the application of any manure. Lord Leicester continued: "To the present methods of farming every description of land under the four-course system I attribute much of the ruin that has fallen upon landlord, tenant and labourer." These remarks, he added, applied solely to poor lands, subject to drought, which could not be kept in constant cultivation at the existing price of corn, without entailing serious loss. As long as the price of corn remained as it had done for the last few years, the system he adopted was the only way to prevent light-land farms, with their occupiers, going to ruin.

Until comparatively recently, Lord Leicester was afoot every morning at nine o'clock, personally superintending all the complicated machinery of a vast property. Though lacking in a taste for horse-flesh, he was a keen sportsman. He was for many years one of the best game shots in England but an operation for cataract left his sight dim, and he laid aside his gun, not caring to take secondary rank. Until recently, however, he directed the great annual four days' drive at Holkham. A thousand head of partridges to eight guns is a good average bag for a day's shooting, and the richness of the sport has often tempted the King from his own well stocked fields at Sandringham. Lord Leicester was a scientific ornithologist, and a lover and defender of all that was rare, curious, or beautiful among British birds. With his tenants and labourers on the estate, Lord Leicester's relations were admirable. He took comparatively little interest in political affairs, preferring to live for, and among, his own people and his memory will be handed down to posterity as that of a fine old English gentleman.

Sporting & Athletic Notes.

IT was with great regret that the sporting community of Calcutta saw Mr. Roland Leigh, one of the C.T.C. handicappers, leave for home on account of ill-health some three weeks ago. During his short period of service Mr. Leigh had given us handicapping of a class to which, since the days of Mr. Boteler at least, we have been almost strangers. Owners, trainers, and generally all concerned were for once content and the previous state of almost chronic dissatisfaction had practically disappeared.

Regret at Mr. Leigh's departure was at the time shared in many minds by a fear that the old state of discontent with the handicapping would soon reappear. It has reappeared with a vengeance, and we think with good cause. To make up apparently for the good time we have had during the past two months the work of the dispenser of weights has been such as to call forth the strongest complaints and protests and the question at the moment in everyone's mouth is how long is the present state of things to be allowed to continue. Rumour asserts, and we trust for once correctly, that a new handicapper has been engaged and is on his way from Australia. May he come quickly!

THE last Racing Calendar issued by the Calcutta Turf Club, contains the folowing announcement:—

Notice is hereby given that the following addition has been made to the Rules of betting with effect from 4th February.

4 (a) "In the case of Dead-Heat for first place between two or more horses, the horses which run the Dead-Heat shall be considered to be horses placed first by the Judge within the meaning of the preceding Rule, and the money betted shall be put together and equally divided, irrespective of whether the race be subsequently run off or not."

SATURDAY'S racing was not at all uninteresting and was full of surprises with a consequent excellent profit for the books. Mr. Holmes' stable, which has had anything but his usual good luck this season, seems to be getting back into its old form as he had two wins on Saturday with Mystic Circle and Retort. There were good fields in all the events except the Hunters' Hurdle Race and the Valentine Plate which had 3 and 6 started respectively.

FOR the Hunters' Hurdle Race three horses went to the post out of an entry of no less than fifteen, and two of the three went out, we must presume, simply to give their owners a ride, as it was at once recognised that on the handicap nothing entered had any "show" against the winner, who was quoted at even money before the acceptances were out on Friday and started at 4 to 1 on—winning in a common canter.

Four to one on in a $1\frac{3}{4}$ mile jump race is a very short price indeed and it is very evident the "dispenser of burdens" was not so well acquainted with the capabilities (and incapabilities) of his field as were the general public.

We congratulate Mrs. Dangar on Benalbi's win, the more sincerely after her hard luck in being prevented from starting in the Ladies' Cup, but we believe Mrs. Dangar would herself have been better pleased to have seen a bigger field go out for the race.

IN the fifth selling handicap Abet, who has been running badly of late by reason of get her inability to get well out of the gate rather than from any difficulty in galloping, got away with a flying start and leading all the way won easily by five lengths in the excellent time of 1min. $2\frac{1}{2}$secs. Musette and Colina a pair of utter jades ran second and third respectively. The much over rated Blue Flame was favourite and though well with them a furlong from home died away rapidly at that point and seemed almost to stop under the whip.

THE Serpentine Plate was the big upset of the day as the two well backed favourites, Capsicum and Palindrome, made a dead-heat for last place. Morsel, who won the race by a head from Singleton, galloped in first rate form which was probably a surprise to all concerned as she started at the healthy odds of 10 to 1.

BELLE COLE was quickly made favourite for the Mayo Plate. Cocky next in demand and an extremely good looking well-bred pony called Dinghy belonging to Mr. T. E. Adams was also much backed. The latter, however, did not run very well and evidently needs more racing to bring her on. Belle Cole was caught by Cocky 100 yards from home and was soon a beaten pony, the little fellow running away from her at the finish.

THE Esplanade Plate provided upset No. 2. Golden Morn was favourite, Captain Carrington next. Runaway Girl backed a bit by the public and everything else tens to thirties. The winner came from the latter division as Golden Morn, after making all her own running, was caught in the straight and beaten with great ease by the top weight, Mystic Circle, who finished like a race horse, running the distance in the good time for the weight and class of 2mins. $0\frac{3}{5}$secs.

THE Valentine Plate rang down the curtain on a pleasant afternoon's sport rather sadly as poor old Galley Slave, when running well up to the front, knocked himself somehow and came in with a broken fetlock, and was, of course, destroyed. He has been doing well this season, scoring two nice wins and everybody sympathises with Mr. MacGeorge in his bad luck. With Galley Slave broken down it was absolutely a one horse race and Retort showed how class will tell in spite of weight by winning very easily by two and a half lengths. Dirty Boy just shot Mount Dane on the post for second place. Mr. Bell had had to declare 15lb. over weight as he could get no one lighter than Randall who rode 8st. 11lb. against Mount Dane's handicap 7st. 10lb.

THE dearth of light weight jockeys won't be quite so pronounced on Saturday as we understand that Murdison and very likely Killorn will be back though on the other hand the ranks of the medium weights will be thinned by the absence of Firth who has sailed for Australia and Randall who has gone up to ride at Meerut.

WE learn that at the end of the current season the hardworking Secretary of the Calcutta Turf Club, Mr. J. Hutchison, is going to Europe for a much needed rest and that matters during the coming Monsoons will be in the capable hands of Captain Hughes, who has had previous experience in Poona and is himself a G. R. of no small merit and Mr. Lance, the present Assistant Secretary.

CINDER KING bred by Mr. R. D. Jameson, by Wild Fowler—Cinder Ellen (the old Calcutta performer) has been leased by Mr. Karl Meyer, and has gone to Captain "Bob" Dewhurst's stable at Newmarket, where he is in training for the Derby. This colt was offered to Mr. Mathuradass Goculdass of Bombay for £1,200, but he said he must have one with performances. We hear that Cinder King, although a small one, is thought a lot of at Newmarket and is expected to run well.

OWNERS of race horses who prefer to send their horses away from the plains during the hot month will be interested in an advertisement appearing further on of a Summer home for horses at Dehra Doon.

A GYMKHANA Race Meeting will be held at Agra on the 18th and 20th March.

THE Gymkhana Race Meeting at Bareilly, advertised to take place on the 20th instant, has been indefinitely postponed owing to insufficient entries.

After all Rs. 32 per doz "WHITE HORSE" WHISKY IS THE BEST.

In the English market, there seems to be a growing demand for unstained silkworm gut leaders, and while custom or habit may induce the older anglers still to select the stained article, it is evident that practical knowledge and experimenting have resulted in convincing anglers that for general use the unstained gut is equally as effective as the highly coloured article. Some anglers of wide experience assert boldly that they capture just as many fish on unstained as on stained gut, and while most of the material employed in imparting colour are harmless, it is believed that some shorten the life of the gut and others deepen in shade instead of fading out. It is evident that the gut stained with harmless solutions to a faint grayish or greenish tint may be considered better than the highly bleached article of pearly white shade, but the number of anglers who object to deeply stained gut is evidently increasing in proportion to facilities had for obtaining the unbleached and unstained gut. Efforts have been made abroad and influence brought to bear on the market with a view of popularizing unbleached gut, the end sought, of course, being to increase the demand for the unbleached article until in time stained gut would become unpopular.

A White Paper on the Preservation of Wild Animals in Africa was recently issued. It includes correspondence ranging from 17th September 1906 to October 1908, as well as letters relating to the Game Laws from all the British Dependencies in Central Africa; also letters addressed to the Governor of German South-West Africa, etc. With regard to the East African Protectorate, Sir John Hayes Sadlar states that a revision of the game-shooting regulations in East Africa is called for, and that the time has arrived for removing certain restrictions under the present regulations to secure immunity from the depredations of wild animals; but he does not think that it is at present necessary to remove all restrictions on the shooting of game outside the reserves. The settlers have asked for concessions in the Game Laws, and if these were conceded they would be quite satisfied. The Governor of Gambia expresses his opinion that it is not necessary to restrict the sale of elephant tusks under a certain weight. The Society for the Preservation of the Wild Fauna of the Empire, on the other hand, suggests the prohibition of the sale of tusks under 30lb. in weight in Uganda. In his reply the Governor regrets that no alteration of the present law as to the export of ivory from the Gambia can be made. In another letter the Governor of Uganda states that buffaloes have been removed from the list of protected animals owing to the damage they cause. Of the East African Protectorate the Governor states there was talk among the settlers of a game preservation society to be formed among themselves on similar lines to those in many parts of South Africa. This should have every assistance from the Government. He only once saw a district where a society of this sort was in existence, and it was remarkably effective. Among the better class of settler there seems to be an inclination to preserve game on and around their land, and in several districts landholders have combined to preserve the game on adjoining farms. He felt sure that this sort of thing would do a great deal of good. On the other hand, the Governor says, there are unfortunately, a number of men, mostly from South Africa, whose only desire is apparently to kill off as much game as possible, and at the same time talk largely of preserving it. The Secretary for Native Affairs of the Gold Coast observes that the sale of black monkey's skins is a serious matter, the number exported having reached 79,240, of a value of 5,915.

The Australian Swimming Championships were continued at Sydney on the 20th and 23rd ultimo, when the 220 yards Breast Stroke Championship and 220 yards and ¼ mile championships were decided. The 220 yards brought out nine starters. New South Wales were represented by Cecil Healy (holder), H. Hardwick and A. D. Hill; Victoria by F. E. Beaurepaire, T. W. Mason and J. Gunn; Queensland by C. Graham and A. R. Harrower, and South Australia by H. Eaton. Beaurepaire was the first to show in front but at the end of the first lap, swum in 1min. 8⅘secs., Healy led followed by Hardwick with Beaurepaire third. On the home journey the last named made a great effort and coming up to the New South Wales' representatives passed them 60 yards from the finish and won by three yards from Healy, Hardwick beating Hill by a touch, Mason fifth. Beaurepaire's time was 2mins. 30⅘secs., and Healy's 2mins. 31⅘secs.

The Breast Stroke Championship provided a splendid race. New South Wales was represented by H. Snell, Victoria by Trevor Richardson (that State's champion) and A. Meadows, Queensland by G. Hollingsworth, West Australia by E. Finlay, and South Australia by A. E. Kenney. Finlay and Richardson led from the start, the former being in front at the half distance but was soon caught by Richardson and they swam abreast for a time: then Finlay spurted and secured the lead again, eventually winning by a yard: Meadows third, four yards behind Richardson, Snell fourth. Time—3mins. 17⅕secs.

The ¼ mile championship brought together F. Beaurepaire, T. W. Mason, and J. Gunn (Victoria), Cecil Healy, H. Hardwick, and A. D. Hill (New South Wales), C. Graham (Queensland) and H. Eaton (South Australia). Hardwick forced the pace at the start with Beaurepaire and Healy in close attendance. Hardwick turned with two yards to the good and still led at the 220 yards, but half way in the third lap Beaurepaire assumed the lead and was three yards in front of Hardwick when they started on the last lap. Hardwick swam pluckily to the end but was beaten by five yards by Beaurepaire. Healy third, eight yards behind Hardwick, Hill fourth, Mason fifth. The winner's time was 5mins. 33secs. Hardwicks' 5mins. 37secs. and Healy's 5mins. 45secs. The swimming carnival was a big success. Victoria retains the Kieran Memorial Shield, thanks to the victories of F. E. Beaurepaire who appropriated the 220 yards, 440 yards, ½ mile and mile. The 100 yards' race as noted in our last issue went to New South Wales through the agency of Cecil Healy and West Australia won the 220 Breast Stroke Championship through E. Finlay.

The English Betting Bill will probably be introduced in Parliament at an early date contains clauses which go very much beyond the suppression of tipsters' advertisements and the publication of betting odds and commission agents' advertisements in newspapers.

It aims directly at closing the offices of turf commission agents throughout the kingdom, and at making it a criminal offence to send a betting commission through the post, or by telephone, or telegraph.

Without the support of the general public, racing could not be carried on at a profit, and it is obvious that the National Anti-Gambling League recognises this, and, having failed in its many previous attempts to stop betting on the course, is now endeavouring to accomplish its object in an indirect manner, and by first attacking what it believes to be the point of least resistance.

There are many old 'Varsity and Leander men in India who will learn with regret of the death of Mr. E. G. Monier Williams. He was President of the O.U.B.C. five years ago, stroked the 'Varsity eight in 1903 and assisted University to secure the headship of the river the same year. He died from enteric in South Africa.

An interesting story of the loss and recovery, after over nineteen years, of a pair of fieldglasses is told in the Field by Sir John Kinloch and Mrs. Alec. Tweedie. The glasses belonged to Mrs. Tweedie's late husband, and were lost while he was deer-stalking on the Grampians with Sir John in November, 1889. The deer got away, and then, while the sportsmen were, as Sir John puts it, reflecting "with broken spirits and contrite hearts, and cussing freely," the loss of the glasses was discovered.

An hour's search for them was fruitless, as was many a subsequent inspection of the spot, "the Grampian Hills being very large and the field glasses very small." Now, after lying for two decades exposed to wind and storm, they have been found practically uninjured. Mrs. Tweedie, whose pleasure at recovering this interesting memento of her husband may be imagined, declares that the glasses are "not even shabby."

The London Zoo Carpenter must be disconsolate now that he can no longer walk hand in hand with the surviving walrus. The survivor of the pair purchased by the gardens last November died on the 1st instant of pneumonia, as a result, so the Zoo wiseacres declare, of the heavy fogs London experienced the week before his sudden demise. These Arctic creatures may skip in ecstasy when the mercury in the thermometer freezes; but they languish under English humidity and a fog, such as London had on the 29th ultimo is more than walrus flesh and blood can stand.

The satisfactory conclusion of the Rugby Union Football disagreement announced last week, was it appears, not final, for we now learn that the dispute has been reopened by the Scottish Union owing to English Unions refusing to make the resolution on the subject retrospective. The International match has again been cancelled.

The Inter-Varsity Association match last Saturday ended in a draw, the score being one all.

The following are the results in the third round of the Association Cup Football tournament played last Saturday:—

Derby County beat Plymouth Argyle, at Derby, by one goal to nil.

Bradbury City, playing at home, were defeated by Sunderland, by one goal to love.

Manchester United beat Blackburn Rovers, at Manchester, by six goals to one.

The match between West Ham United and Newcastle United, at West Ham, resulted in a draw, there being no score.

Playing at Bristol, Bristol City defeated Sheffield Wednesday, on the latter's ground, by one goal to nil.

Notts Forest beat Milwall, at Nottingham, by three goals to one.

The match at Tottenham between the Hotspurs and Burnley resulted in a pointless draw.

We understand that an important development is about to take place which will create widespread interest among British amateur oarsmen. Details of the scheme have not yet been finally decided upon, but it has been proposed to form a united club consisting of members of the principal rowing clubs affiliated to the Amateur Rowing Association, which will have its headquarters at Henley, and which will have its headquarters at Henley, and which among other useful objects will provide its members with a club-house and lawn during Henley week.

A preliminary meeting of representatives of the principal rowing clubs was held early this month and a sub-committee was formed to discuss the details of the scheme.

The Inter-Regimental Polo tournament begins at Meerut on Saturday next.

The Bombay Open Polo tournament was brought to a close on Thursday last when the Bhopal team, who had beaten Idar in the first round, met the Poona Horse in the final. There was a big gathering of spectators owing to the public holiday. Bhopal had their own way all through and eventually won by 9 goals to 2. Details further on.

The Point to Point races of the Madras Hunt brought a successful season to a close on the 18th inst. There was a big crowd of spectators, and H. E. the Governor was among those present. The finish was right under the hill known as Sheepshead Kopje and each event provided interesting sport. The first race was for the Pony Cup, and it looked as if it lay between Mr. Vernon and Major Symonds at the finish but Captain Carter, who had taken a different line, came through and secured the verdict. Mr. David fell early in this race and broke his collarbone. The Ladies' Cup came next. Mrs. Miller made the running from the start but resigned command to Mrs. Porteous and Miss Romilly three-quarters of a mile from home. These ladies fought out a great finish. Mrs. Porteous snatching the verdict on the post, Mrs. Miller third. Miss Rolfe fourth and Mrs. Jessop fifth. The Horse Cup closed the programme and provided an easy win for Mr. Vernon who led all the way and won as he liked, Hon'ble Mr. Horne second and Captain Walshe third. The Cups were given away by Mrs. Homes and the proceedings terminated with the usual cheers.

In the challenge for the Chamba Cup, in connection with the Punjab Lawn Tennis Championships, Captain Davies beat E. M. Atkinson by three sets to two and then met L. S. Deane. The tennis was excellent from start to finish and at the end of the fourth set when the score was two all it was impossible to say who might be the winner. But at the beginning of the decisive set Deane showed that he was tiring more rapidly than his opponent under the long strain and though the finishing games provided beautiful tennis, it was chiefly a test of endurance. Davies winning by 3 to 2. The scores were: 6—2, 2—6, 3—6, 6—5, 6—3.

Bengal: Past and Present, the journal of the Calcutta Historial Society increases in bulk with each successive issue, while its contents maintain the high standard of its first number. The latest number is the first of the third volume and contains many articles, well written and brimful of historical interest. "Selections from the Note Book of Justice John Hyde," a further account of the career of Major-General Claud Martin, and an article on Anglo-Indian Ghost Stories are among the most interesting features. A notice of this admirable quarterly would be incomplete did we fail to make special mention of the number of excellent illustrations, all the photographs being exceptionally well reproduced.

The Laver Hockey tournament at Secunderabad was continued last week. The R. A. were to meet the 13th Hussars' "B" team on the 12th instant but the latter failed to put in an appearance. The next day the Secunderabad combined team beat the Futteh Maidan Gymkhana by 6 goals to nil, and on Monday, the 15th instant the Cheshires beat the Gymkhana by 5 goals to nil. The game between the 61st Pioneers and combined 95th and 97th Infantry was a hard fought one, the Pioneers acknowledging defeat by 3 goals to 1. The best game played in the tournament thus far was that between the Royal Fusiliers and the Royal Artillery on the 17th instant. At the call of time each team had scored one goal and an extra 10 minutes each way was ordered, the Fusiliers scoring once more and winning by the odd goal in three. On the 18th instant the Secunderabad combined team and the 13th Hussars "A" team played a pointless draw: the game was replayed last Friday when another draw resulted, the score being one all. A third meeting ended in favour of the Hussars by 5 goals to nil. The Cheshires on Friday beat the combined 97th and 95th Infantry team by 2 goals to nil.

The Gordon Highlanders and Royal West Kent Regiment held an Inter-Regimental Boxing tournament at the Columbia Skating Rink, Calcutta, on Thursday last. The customary courtesy of a ticket to view the show was not extended to us but from accounts appearing in our contemporaries the results were as under, the West Kents winning five of the six events:—

Lce.-Corporal. Sheppard, West Kents, beat Lance-Corporal Gillespie, Gordons, in a 15 round contest. Gillespie being knocked out in the seventh round. The West Kents won the next four contests, Private Hill beating Private Allen on points, Private Page knocking out Private Simpson in two rounds, Private Browne beating Private McBee on points and Private Ryan knocking out Private Howie in the second round, and the Gordons won a single victory. Private Mills beating Drummer Knight on points.

Bill Lang and Bill Squires met at the Sydney Stadium on the 3rd instant to contest the heavyweight championship of Australia. The betting opened in Squires' favour 5 to 4 on being laid, but it veered round after the twelfth round to 2 to 1 on Lang. Squires did most of the leading in the first four rounds. Then Lang began to score but his opponent forced the pace again in the eighth and ninth round and confining his attention to Lang's ribs had him in trouble. The next three rounds were uneventful but Lang recovered and from the thirteenth bout scored repeatedly with his left. Squires was now tiring and becoming slower. He came in for a good deal of punishment and though he appeared to gain strength in the sixteenth round it was not for long and in the seventeenth Lang got him a left hook on the jaw which he followed up with a heavy right on the jaw, Squires going down and out.

A telegram from home announces the victory of Johnny Summers, the clever English lightweight, over Jimmy Britt of San Francisco in London on the 22nd instant. Summers won on points in a twenty round contest. These boxers met at Wonderland on the 2nd October last when it will be remembered the verdict went to Britt on points, the decision being a most unpopular one.

In a recent issue, we gave a few details of the phenomenal scoring in the cricket match between Victoria and New South Wales. Further particulars show that after having made 468 runs in their first innings, Victoria followed on with a balance of 347 against them. Their second attempt realised 487 runs, New South Wales thus being left with 141 to win. Ransford for the second time in the match completed his century, his score being 110, and Armstrong contributed 171. Barnes was again by far the most successful bowler, and took five wickets for 147.

New South Wales hit off the 141 runs required for the loss of four wickets. Noble scored 60 not out. New South Wales by this victory regain the Sheffield Shield. The match produced the gigantic aggregate of 1,911 runs.

The summarised scores of the match are as follows:—

New South Wales.

First innings, 815 (Noble 213, Bardsley 192, and Gregory 179).

Second innings, 141 for 4 wickets (Noble 69 not out).

Victoria.

First innings, 468 (Ransford 182, McAlister 108, and Horan 55).

Second innings, 487 (Ransford 110 and Armstrong 171).

Thus, 1,911 runs were scored in the four innings, this constituting the highest aggregate for any match on record. The previous best was the 1,739 made in the match between New South Wales and Stoddart's team at Sydney in February 1898. In that match—which New South Wales won by 239 runs—four centuries were scored, A. C. K. Mackenzie making 130 and S. E. Gregory 171 for New South Wales, and N. F. Druce 109 and A. C. MacLaren 140 for Stoddart's team. The respective totals were: New South Wales, 415 and 574; Stoddart's team, 387 and 363. The second highest aggregate was the 1,716 made in the match between New South Wales and South Australia at Sydney in December 1907. In that match centuries were scored by C. E. Dolling, Victor Trumper, and H. Carter.

Curiously enough the fourth (up to now the third) highest aggregate was made in the corresponding match between New South Wales and Victoria last season. At Sydney in January 1908, 1,615 runs were scored in a match which extended over seven days. Six centuries were scored in the match, Noble claiming two, and Gregory, Armstrong, Tarrant, and Ransford one each.

Other large aggregates are:—

1,553—Australian XI. vs. Rest of Australia, at Sydney, in March 1899.

1,541—England vs. Australia, at Sydney, in December 1903.

1,514—Australia vs. Stoddart's first team, at Sydney, in December 1894.

1,497—New South Wales vs. A. O. Jones' team at Sydney in February, 1898.

1,492—Worcestershire vs. Oxford University at Worcester, in July 1904.

1,427—Sussex vs. Surrey, at Hastings, in July 1902

1,425—Worcestershire vs. Leicestershire, at Worcester, in July 1906.

In the match just concluded the 1,911 runs were obtained for the loss of thirty-four wickets, giving an average of 56·205 for each wicket that fell. In the match between New South Wales and Stoddart's team at Sydney, in which 1,739 runs were scored, each side completed two innings, and the average of runs per wicket was 43·475.

Vernon F. Ransford's name has now to be added to the list of batsmen who have scored two separate centuries in a first-class match. Ransford's record for the present season is a splendid one. He made 131 for Victoria against South Australia at Adelaide in November last; 94 for Victoria against New South Wales at Melbourne; 171 not out for Victoria against South Australia at Melbourne; and 182 and 110 in the match just concluded.

The following is a list of Australian batsmen who have scored two separate centuries in a match:—

V. T. Trumper (109 and 119), for the Australians vs. Essex, at Leyton, in July 1902.

J. R. M. Mackay (105 and 102 not out), for New South Wales vs. South Australia, at Sydney, January 1906.

D. R. A. Gehrs (148 not out and 100 not out), for South Australia vs. Western Australia, at Fremantle, in January 1906.

M. A. Noble (176 and 123), for New South Wales vs. Victoria, at Sydney, in February 1907.

V. Ransford (182 and 110), for New South Wales vs. Victoria, at Sydney, in January 1909.

The feat has also been performed in Australia by C. J. Eady (Tasmania) and K. E. Burn (Tasmania) twice each, and by A. C. Bannerman, H. Pellew, A. A. Campbell, O. W. Cowley, J. H. Savigny, J. P. Mahoney, R. Hawson, W. Morgan (twice), and H. Cranney.

C. B. Fry has obtained two centuries in one match on four occasions, this being a world's record. W. G. Grace, R. E. Foster, and Tom Hayward have each accomplished the feat three times.

Warwick Whitridge Armstrong, who made 171 in the Victorian second innings, is one of the finest all-round cricketers Australia has produced. He is a brilliant forcing batsman, built to hit—he stands 6 feet. 3 inches.—and though a certain awkwardness hampered his style in his early years, and prevented him from showing his best form in the Australians' tour of 1902, he came into his own in 1905, and was the great outstanding success of the tour, making 2,002 runs and securing 130 wickets, while he set up a record for an Australian batsman in England by making 303 not out against Somerset. Armstrong's second highest score is 248 (not out) made during the same tour against the Gentlemen of England.

Our Bombay correspondent writes:—The first taste we had of handicaps, on Monday, was a sour one for punters, as Winkfield's Melody was the nearest they got to a good thing. Impressive as were the species of "machan" erected they do not seem to be as popular with the Stewards as might have been. The next move ought to be some sort of contrivance to ensure the starting of a favourite, as for the second time this season a hotly fancied one never even got a run, this one being the great Tangaroa. Apart from the financial losses of punters, the public witnessed a day's sport which one has to think a long time back to equal. In many cases we find it impossible to tell the winner for certain and lament more and more the position in which the general public are placed by the recent rearrangement of the enclosures.

As to the racing itself, we began with the Midget Plate, a field of nine second raters with Scimitar, Najmi and Real Blood having the support of their stables. Mountain King naturally found six too much and Scimitar came up on the rails at the bend into the lead, all over a winner. Hermit had not been reckoned at all but, striking some of his old time brilliance, he came through and away with the greatest ease, to win his owner the stakes only.

The field of fourteen for the Salsette Plate were also not of the best, Spearmint being the "office" a rod in pickle suddenly brought to light after a term of retirement. A run came also on Dhafer by those who bore in mind the fact that in his longer races he had practically made his own running. Spearmint got the best of the run, Killorn taking advantage of Ajeel going a bit wide at the bend, and his backers felt on good terms. Dhafer had been lying rather far out of his ground, but coming the long way round he drew up and won a good race by a neck.

We now come to the first of the horse races, the mile Mahaluxmi Plate, with five out of the six top weights scratched, leaving nine second raters. Money came for Winkfield's Melody, Squire Alfred and Lachlan, the former two warming to equal favourites. Getting the best of the start and the running throughout in Ames' capable hands, Admiral Crichton ran about a stone above his form. Even when Winkfield's Melody caught him he kept with her to lose by a neck in a splendid finish with Craigendorrie coming with a late run to within a neck also of the outsider.

Third and last of the Arab events saw eight none too capable stayers go for the mile Town Plate. Saree and Vasco were at once settled on, but neither could reproduce true form; Saree, particularly after his recent prominences, falling further and further back. False Start did his best to merit the name, but got away next to Vasco, whom he soon passed and was never seriously troubled thenceforward. Farick was the danger all the way but failed to catch him, and Vasco coming late secured a dead-heat for third with Antica.

His hollow win in the Malabar Hill Plate and the way in which he invariably steals a march on the others at the post naturally led one to consider Tangaroa the good thing of the Flying Plate. Whether Robinson overdid his old trick of being on the move when the barrier goes up or whatever the cause, the starter let them go at just that moment when the favourite was being turned to have another walk up. Both he and Manlock were out of it from the pop and Picturesque next door to it. Mereworth got a nice break, but Lovania and Wise Bird gradually drew up on her nearing the turn. A very pretty race followed, Wise Bird coming in between the others to win by a neck, same next and Vigorous thereabouts.

Finally a closer thing still in the six-furlong Gaye Cup for 14-2's, Russley Rose carrying a ton of money; commissions also for Lady Avon and Lorraine, Wild Boy expanding. Settling down after a level start, Lady Avon very slightly led Lorraine and Minimus, the favourite beginning slowly. At the bend Minimus gave up her position to Wild Boy and he raced neck and neck with the other two. "Russley out of it," was the general opinion till she was seen coming on the extreme outside with Evans getting desperately to work, using the whip for the last two furlongs. Opposite the stand, Wild Boy showed in front but Russley Rose was with him at the post and the judges failed to separate them, this also being the case with Lady Avon and Lorraine.

We went one better on Wednesday, when two dead-heats occurred and one of them was run off. In the other Mozart was given a walk over and the public realise the merits of the new rule, which enforces halved money whether run off or not; the run off being treated as altogether a different race with fresh betting. There is no use in harping upon the old subject of the general public being unable to judge a finish for themselves, but there is certainly no need for all the delay in putting the numbers up. A head in front is a head in front, and a long discussion is not likely to encourage confidence in those in whose hands we, the public, are. There was some very fine racing and honours were fairly evenly divided, though for future reference one would have liked to have been perched up in one of the newly erected, and neglected, look-outs.

To begin with, Bay Middleton, though asked to give Creditor over a stone, was a shade shorter in the Asian Plate with Meerjan taking out a heap of place money. The first half dozen in a bunch which could be covered by the proverbial sheet all the way to the bend, made the race an interesting one. Evans cleverly enough sneaking inside False Start, secured Creditor the shortest journey and won him the race. Gold Mint, not looking as handsome as of old after a long rest, showed some of his past form and Meerjan came well, but Creditor had a bit to spare. Bay Middleton was not placed and once more one wonders why the stewards do not add to their improvements a rule making it compulsory to ride out for a "shop."

Next the Imperial Plate with Lady Avon first call till a run came for Refresher and money also for Comeback and Gun Metal. Koko slipped out first and ran unexpectedly well all the way though missing a place. Gun Metal soon displaced him with Lorraine and Refresher handy but Lady Avon never in it. Gun Metal held to her guns all the way and only got caught by Refresher on the post. Had the latter had the benefit of the straight course Ames rode the other there would certainly have been no dead-heat, as it was, the run off was a moral for the better stayer, Refresher, who was in almost as well in the Stewards' Purse as now, but ran nowhere.

The pros and cons of the pick of those in the Second Dealers' needed a deal of consideration, Zamorin, Parliament and King Henry having great calls for support on form but stable money for Jadir made him first favourite. Hyder was next, though his recent six furlong performance did not suggest his even getting a place. The game is a wonderful one though and after Jadir had taken up the running from Goldman, Hyder was the only one in it from the bend. Parliament passed Jadir, who held his place from King Henry and Hyacinth, an unknown quantity who wants watching. The time, 1min. 54⅘secs., was remarkably good, and actually beat Darianoor's and Dhafer's as well as Wild Poppy's last year.

Eleven went out for the nine furlongs and Dhafer's improvement since going off found him tons of money though when once the stable showed their hand with Precious, he warmed to an equal price. Jehangir had an extra stone to carry and naturally found it tell when they began to race. It was here Precious came into the lead with Dhafer behind, Jehangir and Spearmint at his side. The former of these was apparently done with but held on long enough to spoil whatever chance Dhafer had of catching the leader, which was a good one as, when Evans got through, he came on him fast. It was nevertheless a fine performance by the old champion who beat Peculiar's last year's time by no less than a second and a half, taking extra distance into consideration.

Tangaroa being withdrawn, Paddy's Darling was backed to favouritism for the Exeter Plate which certainly looked good for her, though Mumford had two in, Stirabout and Lady Voilet, well thought of and Lovania had a good following. Of these Lady Violet ran far below even her Poona form, Killua making the running for a time from Stirabout and Lord Merv. Less than half the journey saw the favourite going well within herself in the lead, Stirabout and Lovania still in close attendance. The last one's effort was staved off in the home stretch though had she not gone so far round she might have troubled Paddy's Darling.

For comparative second raters, the Stand Plate was a capital race in smart time, 1min. 2⅗secs. off which one must take a second and a tick. Hughie's first appearance meant plenty of money for him, bringing him equal favourite to The Rooster, and getting the best of the start he streaked away. Before the bend The Rooster put in his run followed by Mozart and both passed the pony. The Rooster seemed sure to win but, Mozart putting in a last dash, dead-heated. Mozart being given a walk over, the race was won by an outsider as was Faded Lily last year.

Byculla Club Cup Day, the concluding day of our Big Meeting, was as much of a success as it always is in every respect. More people naturally enter the gates on this occasion than on any other and adding the fine sport enjoyed to the success of punters all doubtless went away satisfied with the proceedings. For the most part there was pretty open betting with good fields and, as I hear a number of up-country stables are likely to remain for the extras, we are anticipating more of this sort of thing.

Getting to business, the dozen in the Bedouin Plate provided us with a bit of a problem, Scimitar eventually warming to favouritism from Bay Middleton, Lookman, Betty and Mountain King. For a change the last named was not first out, Mutlag and Creditor in turn making the pace. The latter of these assumed command at the bend from a close bunch of which Bay Middleton was prominent. Then Scimitar outside came away passing the leader, only for Lookman on the extreme outside to smother everything. Improved as he is over six, this performance makes him quite a champion all round.

Poor as the class in the mile Desert Plate appeared to be on form, they nevertheless cut a bit off the previous best for the distance. On form Meazer really looked a good thing though his tendency to "cut it" is fairly well known now. Ames gave him every chance by waiting nicely in front and having Bendigo beaten as well as Sir Jamal, but rounding the bend he was seen to have had enough. Mint here came outside all over a winner and in an exciting race home none of them going too strong, stayed Multiform out by a head, with Amood passing the favourite for a place.

Amongst the second raters in the Colaba Plate Craigendorrie was settled on as the good thing on the strength of his late finishes and consistent running in shorter races, Lady Violet and Winkfield's Melody also coming in for support. It was a splendid race to follow, Oakton, Lady Violet and Craigendorrie leading out in Indian file till at the six the favourite was second. Approaching the bend, Winkfield's Melody put in a run into second place, Admiral Crichton coming up fourth and entering the straight Mr. Galstaun's assumed command. All was not over though as Killorn getting to business on Craigendorrie drew up outside and snatched a win by a neck.

THE starting machine was then brought to work near the second enclosure for the two long races, first of which was the Turf Club Cup. All ten carded went out with Merrily favourite from Hazza and Precious in a very open affair. Heeroo was requisitioned for the ride on Antica and immediately let him out to the front past Nooman, Famous, Hazza, Young Salanic, Young Kohinoor and Soheil in that order. First change came before the mile when Young Salanic came up third with Famous fourth, and this last was second at the seven. Much the same was it till after the half mile Merrily, who had been drawing up, passed Nooman into third place with Hazza fifth. Down the straight Famous' weight began to tell and Antica answered gamely only to find Hazza much too well in hand but keeping a clear length ahead of Merrily, Nooman passing Famous.

NEXT the all-important Byculla Club Cup with eleven runners and Pelargonium a warm favourite from Hunting Horn, Absentee, Misty Morn, Kaffirpan and Cairnsmore. In the paddock noticeable improvement was seen in Kipling, more filled out than last year, with Pelargonium stronger looking and Absentee and Misty Morn handsome as ever. First out to a fine start was Absentee followed by Kipling, the order changing after the first bend and these being followed by Misty Morn, Galloping Girl and Pelargonium. A change at the seven when Sugar Apple drew up third followed by Pelargonium, Misty Morn, Kaffirpan and Devereux, Kipling leading by a couple of lengths. At the bend the winner took a bit of picking, Absentee, Misty Morn, Kaffirpan, Pelargonium and Hunting Horn outside all being close together. Down the straight Kipling held out gamely but opposite the second enclosure it was evident Rickaby had been waiting for a late rush and Pelargonium shot out from the bunch to win a fine race by half a length, Galloping Girl, Sugar Apple, Absentee, Hunting Horn and Misty Morn being next to these two in order.

ANOTHER fine race resulted in the Mansfield Plate, in which a run on Lord Merv made him a better favourite than Tangaroa, Lovania, Wise Bird and Stirabout. This time Tangaroa was soon out in front from Lord Merv and Wise Bird, Killua displacing the last named at the three. Beginning the turn Lord Merv took the rails from the leader and galloped with him to the distance where, on the approach of Wise Bird, he was ridden. He got his head in front, but that was all he could do from the top weight, Wise Bird passing Killua for third place. Again the race was run in 1min. 15⅗secs., equivalent to 1min. 14secs.

FINALLY the 14 2 race, the Innovation Plate, Russley Rose opening out and remaining favourite from Wild Boy and Cheeky. Unwise as it seemed with 9st. 10lb. up, Lady Avon was sent out to make the running and held the lead till entering the straight. Then, however, Russley Rose had caught her and it was all over, she winning easily by two and a half lengths. Cheeky ran well all the way, winding up third by half a length beating Lorraine who stayed as much better than anticipated as did Wild Boy worse. Thus ends the Big Meet, and a most successful one too.

THE Bombay Junior Polo Tournament for the Challenge Cup presented by H. H. Major-General Sir Pertab Singh will commence on the 1st of March The following teams have entered :—26th P.W.O. Cavalry, General Alderson's team, Idar, Bhopal, Government House and Bombay Gymkhana. As the entries are still open for a few days more, the Honorary Secretary expect some more entrants and the tournament should prove very interesting and provide some good polo.

Pat got a job moving some kegs of powder, and to the alarm of the foreman was discovered smoking at his work. "Gracious," exclaimed the foreman. "Do you know what happened when a man smoked at this job some years ago? There was an explosion which blew up a dozen men." "That couldn't happen here," returned Pat calmy. "Why not?" "Cos there's only me and you," was the reply.

A cricket eleven, on arrival at a village ground, saw one of the best of the opposition (a burly blacksmith) in his ordinary clothes. Someone said to him: "Hollo Bill! are you not playing to-day?" "No," was the reply, "our side be rather weak to-day, and they thought I would be of more service standing umpire?"

"What brought you here, my poor man?" inquired the prison visitor. "Well, lady," replied the prisoner. "I guess my trouble started in attendin' too many weddin's." "Ah! you learned to drink there, or steal, perhaps?" "No, lady; I was always the bridegroom."

London Week by Week.

FRIDAY, 5th February 1909.

A THREE days' fog has been succeeded by a spell of splendid, dry bright weather and freezing withal in so much that the Amateur Skating Championship was held after all. Only just held, be it noted, for a thaw set in on the day and had the officials not kept up to their time table with the utmost precision the final stage could not have been decided. An hour after the result—which produced a fresh record, by the way—the ice was not safe! I dare say your sporting correspondent will be giving you details in his weekly budget of Home sport. The fog was a bit trying, and on the second day business and pleasure in London were practically paralysed : trains were hours late, the tramway service was almost suspended in parts of the suburbs, 'buses were by no means as plentiful as Scotch lawyers are said to be in Hades, and most things were either at a standstill or were indefinitely marking time. It seems strange that in London, with all its resources and organisation, a few hour's fog should produce such chaos as this. I used to think it was only in Calcutta and other Eastern places where abnormal weather conditions—such as forty-eight hours' rain—meant bazaar supplies at vanishing point, and consequent short commons, ticca gharis at rates for which one might hire a Lord Mayor's coach, wholesale absence from work of mild Hindus, and much tribulation and angry passions, domestic and official. But, bless you, we are just as bad over here and with infinitely less excuse. How often does the Anglo-Indian exile, bitterly railing at Oriental manners, customs and institutions, remark, "Good Lord, Sir, do you think this sort of thing would be tolerated for an instant in England?" Many a time and oft has your "Vagrant" so exclaimed. Many and many a time does he now find things which cause him to suspect—that he spoke in haste and without knowledge in those old days.

* * * * * *

AND talking of fogs. In discussing our late visitation, with the untravelled Londoner, I find him more or less incredulous when I have asserted that you in Lower Bengal have little to learn on the subject of mists and dense vapours. I have been three times absolutely lost on the Calcutta maidan on certain January nights years ago. Once, returning from the Opera House to Alipore in a ticca, we got on to the grass and when I took bearings I found we were heading for, and within thirty yards of the Serpentine tank in which your longshoremen sail model yachts and on the banks of which your golfers use lurid language on hearing the "plunk" which heralds the retrieving act of the ever handy chokra.

But a truce to weather talk. The days are drawing out and the winter, let us hope, will soon be drawing in ; presently we shall be in our back gardens, picking the spring flowers and forgetting that such a thing as winter ever was. In less than a fortnight St. Valentine's Day will be upon us and that, at any rate, is the commencement of the spring of the heart, my young friends tell me.

WE are a curious people. Day after day we are reminded that, at any moment, we are open to invasion by German hordes, that we have no army worth mentioning wherewith to oppose them : Lord Roberts, the National Service League and other bodies—and some nobodies—constantly warn us of danger and insist on more preparedness than is now apparent. But we just smile and pore over the last divorce case. Then the constant reiteration of principles and proposals strikes some bright genius as containing good material for a patriotic drama and so we have "An Englishman's Home" put on at Wyndham's and received with a clamour of approval and a shedding of ink by admiring and delighted pens for the like of which we should have to seek many years back, and probably seek in vain. The author, who is content to be known by his pen name of "A Patriot," is said to be "A Military Officer now serving in South Africa." In his play he depicts the horrors (and humours) of a foreign invasion and occupation of London, and most people venture to hope the piece may reach minds and hearts which have hitherto been closed to the weighty declarations of the Elgin and Norfolk Commissions. P'raps.

Now there may be two opinions on this drama, it may or may not fail in its object of conveying a word of warning to the British people ; but as an entertainment it is most decidedly worth seeing. It rouses to hilarity, or tears, or unbounded enthusiasm. It has no love interest and is none the worse for the fact ; but it is full of life and bustle, it is capitally played, the dialogue is smart and racy, and though through all the realism there is a vein of decided satire and much broad farce, the fact that England triumphs in the end makes for comfort and popularity and, as at present advised, it is likely to have a phenomenal run and break a few theatrical records.

And it may teach the lesson the enthusiasts profess to find in it, for one can't help remarking that nothing nowadays seems to matter unless it is connected with the stage. A few pantomime gags, or a musical comedy ditty will do more to damage the reputation or undermine the prestige of a Government than a million leading articles and platform speeches !

BUT to return to our piece. It is called a drama, in reality it is that, and melodrama, farce, satire and tragedy by turns, and it is interesting by the indication it gives of an intimate knowledge of stagecraft, politics and soldiering. First of all there is shown an exaggerated, but at the same time not untruthful, picture of an entire household crazy on sport. While Mr. Brown struggles with Diabolo, sons and daughters talk football and the friend who intends to spend his afternoon rifle shooting is ridiculed by them all. Everything that is shallow and frivolous this family glorifies as among the most vital things of life, and the picture is shown with admirable satire and humour.

The act closes with the entrance of a foreign military officer. After that, for "A Patriot's" sermon to be effective, the atmosphere of the play should have turned from gay to grim. Instead, the author still "plays light." Even when the Brown family know that England has been invaded they treat the affair as a joke. Mr. Brown, we are told, has gone to fetch a policeman to have the invaders turned out of his house, and other members of the household want to know when the fun is going to begin. The introduction of a company of burlesque Volunteers continues to keep the action rather out of tune with the situation, but anon, the tragedy is turned on, men are killed, Mr. Brown led out and shot, and the house stormed by shells, in the most realistic way. Needless to say the acting is excellent. Mr. Charles Rock, as Mr. Brown, who begins by being a foolish old simpleton without dignity or character, and finishes as a hero and a man, capitally played the difficult part, and Mr. Lawrence Grossmith, as a young man with a fund of cockney humour—the best-drawn character of all—was the life of the piece before being wiped out by a chance bullet at the end of the second act.

A FINE example of theatrical architecture is that unpleasant play "Samson," by Mr. Henry Bernstein the French author, produced for the first time last Wednesday at "The Garrick" by Mr. Arthur Bourchier and Company. The desire to pander to the susceptibilities and prejudices of an English audience has resulted in the slurring over of many big points and there is a consequent weakness in several places but, on the whole, there is enough of realism for most tastes and sufficient pourtrayal of the baser motives to please all. None of the characters call for sympathy though they are well drawn, but the language is strong and direct, there is any amount of mental vivisection, and the interest never flags. The controlling character is Jacques Brachard, one of those iron-willed, self-made men of fortune so often employed by writers of novels and dramas. And the story of his tragedy is a familiar one enough in stageland. He has married a woman of noble family, a woman practically sold to him for gold by her callous parents. He has discovered that a man he thought his friend, and whose fortune his own financial genius had gone to build, has sought to take her from him. He seeks to ruin this man by causing a slump in certain shares ; and he goes through with his revenge, although in carrying it out his own fortune is lost, and his own good name soiled. Like the Bible story of Samson, who pulled a temple down upon himself and his enemies, so does this modern Samson in the play glory in his own destruction, because his enemies are destroyed also, and when he is ruined his wife, who had only a day or two before expressed her loathing for him with the hardest words her tongue could find, suddenly finds her hate turned to love. That is the weak point of the play. There is no manner of reason for her change of view. It is a concession to the "happy ending" that brings artificiality and anti-climax into glaring prominence.

Mr. Bourchier played Brachard with a true sense of the character of the man—grim, solid, unyielding in his purpose. Miss Violet Vanbrugh brought much charm of personality to bear upon the unsympathetic part of the wife, Miss Edyth Latimer won a little triumph by a vivid description of a scene of debauchery in a Paris supper room, and capital work was also done by Mr Charles Bryant, Mr Arthur Whitby, Mr Kenneth Douglas, and Miss Marie Illington.

* * * * * *

"THE CHIEF OF STAFF," at the Lyric, does not strike one as having a long life before it. It is by Mr. Ronald MacDonald and has been built upon the most approved lines of old transpontine melodrama. There are plots, counter-plots, shooting, death, noise and much more out of the theatrical stockpot and ladled liberally ; but it is full of small talk too and frequently hangs fire badly. Mr. Lewis Waller ought to find good enough material in it, but he doesn't. With his arm in a sling, as Colonel Cavendish, a sort of Cromwellian Lord Kitchener in a South American setting, he makes [illegible]able impression as hero, but he appears to lack interest in his part. The best work in the piece is done by Miss Evelyn D'Alroy, the heroine. The scene is an inland Republican State in South America, and the Chief of the Staff is an English gentleman with a decidedly shady reputation. One time officer in the British Army, bankruptcy and an unsavoury divorce case have ruined his career at home ; and although he is the hero of the piece, his conduct is decidedly ignoble. He makes love to the wife of the Dictator of the Republican State, and that is the cause of all the trouble. For he is observed by the lady's husband at a moment of passionate love-making, and the lady's loyal stepdaughter, in order that no trouble shall result, changes head gear with her, and her father is thereby deceived into believing that she—the daughter—was the person who received the kisses. To sustain the fraud the pair pretend to be engaged, and in the end love springs up between them.

"The Merry Widow's" merry party at the Hotel Cecil on Sunday night was probably the largest convivial gathering that ever honoured a single play in London and seldom, if ever, have so many theatrical stars of the first magnitude dined together. The members of the O. P. Club were the hosts, the guests, Mr. George Edwardes, his Merry Widow Company and a host of friends from before and behind the footlights to the number of five hundred and fifty. Mr. Max Pemberton presided, on his right sat Mr. Geo. Edwardes, on his left Miss Lily Elsie, the Merry Widow, and among others were Miss Evie Greene, Miss Gertie Miller, Miss Gabrelle Ray, Messrs. Joseph Coyne, Edmond Payne, Geo. Grossmith, Jun., and W. H. Berry. The banquet was worthy of the occasion, the oratory of the standard one naturally expected—humour, personalities and anecdote being harmoniously blended—and the fun and laughter were incessant. The piece, I may say, still flourishes vigorously and will possibly run beyond the autumn !

Pondering the other day on the wily ways of our biggest literary and theatrical boomsters, I was struck by the very much better way they do things in France and was forced to the conclusion that we may have still a lot to learn from the French. For example, here is M. Rostand, fully realising the duties he owes to himself as a popular dramatist, and consequently travelling about incognito as "the Duke of Cambo," and wearing a false beard and goggles, in order to avoid journalists on interviewing bent Do we ever hear of Mr. Hall Caine going around as the Marquis of Man, or Mr. George Bernard Shaw cutting off his beard in his modest shrinking from publicity ? And when you come to think of it, what a sight for the gods would be a clean-Shavian !

By the way, war has again been declared between Shaw and America. It is some time since "G.B.S." ran a tilt at the Yankees, but quite recently, by way of discharging accumulated venom, he has had another bite at them and this time his attack on the entire American nation is brutal, coldly analytical and utterly blasting. He says that "the American stands to-day in scandalous preeminence as an anarchist and a ruffian, a liar and a braggart, an idolator and a sensualist." He says much more but this will serve as a fair sample.

But for the wreaths which once a year decorate the statue of King Charles I. at Trafalgar Square, we should be in some danger of forgetting the Jacobite, Legitimist, and Royalist societies, whose harmless activities do at least help to brighten our [illegible]ded streets. Last Saturday, the 30th January, was the 260th anniversary of the execution, and the statue was bravely decorated out with laurel and lilies and mimosa, and the blossoms in which the decorative florist delights to work. One of the inscriptions bore the mild phrase, "Beheaded by the Cromwellian gang of traitors and rebels." Well, Cromwell and his fellows have been a long while dead, and so much indignation at this time of day cannot but move us to chastened admiration.

Another "Gaiety romance !" It would be a dull month indeed in which Mr. George Edwardes or Mr. Seymour Hicks' young actresses did not provide the ha'penny papers with pabulum for personalities and the publication of private details of no possible interest to the public. As one or other of the contracting parties may be known to some of your readers who attended "Havana," the Gaiety success this summer, I may mention that Miss Adelina Balfe, last Saturday was married at the Holborn Registrar's office to Lieutenant Gerard Randel Klombies of the Queen's Bays. She is eighteen and he twenty-one, and with a very large fortune in silver and gold.

The Indian friends of Sir William Lee Warner, K. C. S. I., Vice-President of the Council of India, Whitehall, will be amused to hear of his recent encounter with a bellicose Bengalee named Bhattacharjee. This importunate person had been pestering Sir William with some imaginary grievance and finding his petitions unanswered he waylaid his victim who was on his way to the Athenæum Club. At the club door Sir William declined another proffered epistle and tried to shake off the persistent one and ultimately pushed him aside as his entrance to the premises was being barred. Bhattacharjee then went for Sir William, butted him in the "tummy," used some filthy language—and bolted. With true Bengalee foresight he repaired to the nearest magistate and charged Sir William with assault and battery and said he had been called a soor-ka-butcha. The magistrate refused to grant a summons and characterised the application as wholly mendacious. Bhattacharjee remains unkicked : but one of these fine days he or one of his genus who go about literally asking for it will come up against an Anglo-Indian of the "brutal planter" class and then the Hindoo community of London will be taught a salutary lesson.

Major-General Sir Owen Tudor Burne, G. C. I. E., K. C. S. I., a Mutiny veteran and distinguished servant of the Empire in various capacities died, after a protracted and painful illness, in London on the 3rd instant. His gallant exploits in the troubles of 1857 are writ large on the scroll of fame and his military career was full of brilliance. A. D. C. to Sir Hugh Rose, Private Secretary to Lord Mayo—it was in his arms Lord Mayo breathed his last at Port Blair—Assistant Political Secretary at the India Office, service with Lord Lytton and many other important posts he filled with the utmost distinction, and though he made sacrifices he had his rewards. But in the opinion of those best able to judge, the true reward of this great man was the consciousness of duty done to his country, for in exchanging the high promise of his military career for political service he relinquished much.

The death occurred on the 1st instant of Lord Burton, director of the well-known firm of brewers, Bass and Co., Ltd., and of the South-Eastern Railway Co. He was born in 1837, and was created Baron Burton in 1886.

He is succeeded in the baronetcy by his nephew, Mr. William Arthur Hamar Bass, who is a prominent figure in Turf circles, has some celebrity as the owner of Sceptre and Cyllene and will be remembered by people in India as a racing man when he was stationed at Mhow and also as the backer of "Tiger" Smith when that gentleman tried conclusions with one of Calcutta's fighting men. In addition to taking such an active interest in horse-racing, he is an all-round sportsman of the best type and is well-known in the hunting field, his other recreations including shooting, fishing, and motoring. He was born in 1879, and married in 1903 Lady Wilmot Ida Noreen Hastings, daughter of the Earl of Huntingdon. He was formerly Lieutenant of the 3rd Battalion, East Surrey Regiment, and joined the 10th Hussars in 1899, serving in South Africa in 1900 and afterwards in India.

Just as I close this letter I hear that another move has been made in the direction of the conscription which so many of us clamour for and which must ere long be introduced. The National Service League has issued an appeal for a four months' compulsory training of all youths between eighteen and twenty-one signed by Lord Roberts, the Duke of Wellington, Lord Meath, Lord Milner, Lord Curzon and Lord Raglan.

The appeal, which coincides with the furore caused by "An Englishman's Home," dealt with earlier in this letter, calculates that thus a Territorial Army of 400,000 men could be formed at an extra cost of only £4,000,000.

The Vagrant.

A funeral was taking place from a neighbouring house, and little Marjorie eagerly questioned her mother, who is an invalid, as to whether the young men or the young ladies of the deceased's family would attend. Then she said, "When you die, mother, shall I go to your funeral?" "No, dear, I don't think you will go," answered the mother. "Will Eddie go?" "Oh, yes, I think Eddie will go." The little girl flushed with jealousy of her brother. "It's too bad, mother," she cried, "Eddie gets all the treats."

REMINISCENCES OF SOME LEOPARD HUNTS.

VI.

A few years ago the inexorable decree of Fate doomed the writer for two successive cold and hot weather seasons to solitary exile in an erstwhile military encampment in Upper Burma. Like many another advanced base in our frontier expeditions that insatiable demon disease had taken heavy toll from among the ranks of the soldiery, both British and native. As invariably happens sooner or later (in this particular instance much later than was ever anticipated) the object being accomplished, the force as a tangible unit was broken up, and all that the visitor will now see are the grassy outlines of some raised dykes, some charred poles, and within easy reach of the old-time camping ground the inevitable weather—worn lichen-covered enclosure, separating the all too familiar rows and rows of tarred wooden crosses from the stir, bustle, and wranglings of passing life.

My residence, made entirely of bamboos, with the exception of the uprights and flooring was perched on the brink of a fair-sized river. Here the peace, or one should rather say, the impassibility of enforced banishment, held the alien in a grip of steel, for the knowledge was brought constantly to the fore that the nearest of his own kith and kin was outside a thirty-mile radius. The further bank of the river was immersed in a sea of elephant grass, backed by a range of low wooded heights, and to the northwards stretched a vast terai, intersected in places by clearings reclaimed from the avaricious clutches of a verdant Nature. Adjoining the manor grounds and not more than 100 yards distant, stood grim, repellent and usually deserted the traveller's bungalow.

One October night, when the paroxysms of a virulent attack of malaria had left me incapable of exertion, and when the mosquitoes were in full blast, the monotonous singing of the myriads of these winged pests was of a sudden broken in upon by the husky cough of a leopard some distance up the stream and on the opposite flats. Instructions were shouted to secure the ponies in safety and the presence of this felon was for the time being forgotten. Its existence, however, could not be ignored, for its unmelodious gurglings became more distinct at each successive utterance. Interest became aroused when an answering call came from out the belt of forest at the back of my mansion. This challenge and its echo were pushed forth at less infrequent intervals, the feline that first gave tongue gradually approaching my habitation. There happened to be no goat at this period included in my ménage, and all efforts to secure a village dog proved futile, so that the idea of picketing out a bait had to be abandoned. A spell of silence ensued, followed by two voices in place of one in the timber behind my domicile. Was it war or love ?

Soon all noise ceased, and the writer retired to rest his fever-wracked body.

On the following morning I determined to investigate the night's experience more thoroughly, with the intention of elucidating if possible an extremely interesting problem. The first step was to discover where the beast had effected a landing on the near shore. This obstacle was surmounted with far greater ease than was expected. Crossing the dâk bunglow compound unconcernedly, eyes instinctively aground, I was filled with astonishment to see before me on the path leading from the landing place, the pugs of felis pardus. There was no room for doubt, the imprints of its pads where it had scrambled out of the water were deeply moulded in the slimy mud. The tracks were next followed up in the opposite direction. They passed directly beneath the edifice, which was raised high on piles, and on emerging the beast had evidently paused to consider the best means of exit from this apparent cul-de sac. The notion of a six-foot leap over a spiked bamboo fence was presumably not relished. The trail led to a small wicket gate, fastened at the top by a ring of wire, and the uprights of which had become warped out of the strict perpendicular, leaving a small gap at the base. It must have been a tight squeeze, for in squirming a way through, some hairs had been left behind both on the post and the edge of the gate. The pugs were traced onwards, but pursuit was cut short by an impenetrable thicket bordering a small rivulet. At this junction a goat was tied up during the following few nights, but the pair of leopards had departed to other climes further removed from the precincts of mankind.

The experience was one of considerable interest. First and foremost it was evident that the creature that primarily made its presence known, wholly misjudged the force of the current of the river, which was flowing a good six knots. It would be impossible to entertain the idea that the spot chosen for landing was selected voluntarily, for above this place stretched half a mile of elephant grass, where the creature could have gained a footing without fear of molestation, and the possible upsetting of its intentions.

I think there can be no doubt that this feline tryst must have been arranged for amorous and not for bellicose purposes. It would also seem probable that the rendezvous was a place well-known to both animals. It was of course impossible to state with any degree of certainty which of the two was the male and which the female, but the laws of nature would point to the fact that the male would seek the female. This is the one and only occasion on which an event of this description has ever, during a somewhat varied period of existence when passed in field and forest, fallen to my lot to experience. The leopard's habits are usually silent, but this incident clearly proves that a pair of these creatures will systematically call to each other, in order that their exact localities may be made known accurately the one to the other, in any case when certain conditions are prevalent.

A further point that leads to conjecture is whether a male leopard as in the present instance, would stop to kill a goat even though it came right upon it. It is the writer's opinion that under such circumstances the bait would have been left quite untouched.

THE NEW STEVENS' REPEATING SHOT-GUN.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE INDIAN FIELD."

SIR,—The Stevens Arms and Tool Company are making a new departure in putting upon the market a repeating shot-gun of novel design. The weapon is one of Browning's numerous patents, and like other productions of that clever inventor, possesses some notable points of merit.

The gun is a fore-end worked repeating 12 bore, with tubular magazine of the usual type. The weight is about 7¾lbs., and barrels may be 28, 30, or 32 inches in length as desired: while the boring can be cylinder, modified choke, or full choke.

The take-down arrangement is quite new, and very quick and easy to manipulate. Parallel grooves are cut on the breech end of the barrel and magazine, and there are similar grooves in the forward end of the receiver. To assemble stock and barrel, the receiver is turned with its under surface upwards, when the grooved part in the forward end will be seen to be open below, so that the threaded parts of the barrel and magazine can be slid into the receiver like a drawer into its grooves.

The Stevens' repeating shot-gun is hammerless, and the empty cartridge case is ejected from the side, like it is in the Marlin gun.

The safety is in a novel position, being inside the trigger guard, and in front of the trigger: the idea is to enable it to be manipulated by the finger, without moving the hand.

The slide handle remains locked, as in the Winchester gun, until freed by the recoil: then its backward movement by the left hand draws the discharged shell out of the chamber, at the same time starts a loaded shell out of the magazine into the lifter. This simultaneous withdrawal of the spent shell together with feeding up of the next loaded one, makes the functioning of the repeating mechanism very quick and certain, and the gun can be shot as fast as it is possible for the left hand to work the fore end.

There is a large and solid locking block, which shows itself plainly on the top of the receiver, when the gun is in the locked position. The firing pin is drawn back and held firmly locked, until the gun is properly closed in the firing position.

There is a pistol grip to the stock of the gun; and though this is an objectionable feature in a double barrelled two trigger gun, it has not the same disadvantages in a repeater, with single trigger, where there is no occasion for rapidly shifting the grip for a second shot. At the same time I can never see why American gun makers always put pistol grips on their shot-guns, for they are really no earthly use on anything smaller than an 8 bore.

The price quoted for the new Stevens' gun is $ 27, so I suppose it could be delivered in India at something under a hundred rupees. The new guns will be ready for delivery at the beginning of June next.

DEAR SIRS,—I have delayed my thanks as I wished to test the effects of Blair's Pills by a sufficient interval of time.

For ten years I had suffered acutely from Gout, and life had lost its attraction, owing to the uncertainty of health and the sudden visitation of the enemy, which prostrated me for months or weeks, according to the virulence of the attacks.

Blair's Pills have rendered me immense service, as I no longer fear an attack of Gout.

As sporting rifle Makers Messrs. Holland and Holland attach very great importance to achieving a high standard of accuracy in target results. A notice in this journal of a new rifle and cartridge has, by long custom included shooting results at 100 yards, firing from the table rest, and year by year for a long time past the closeness of grouping has shown a marked tendency towards improvement.

"The group illustrated was made with the 365-grain bullet as fired from the ·465 cartridge. It was produced at the very first attempt, and it constitutes what seems likely to stand for some time to come as a record amongst properly authenticated targets. The centres of the whole seven shots lie within a space practically 1 in. square (actually 1·00 in. by 1·05 in.), and the reader may satisfy himself from the reproduction of part of the actual target that all the shots would have hit a postage stamp. It is interesting to know that the sights used were of the open variety, and that orthoptic spectacles were not employed.

LAHORE HUNT POINT TO POINT RACES.

Tuesday, 16th February 1909.

THESE popular Annual Races came off this afternoon over a very sporting course. There was a large attendance, including Sir Louis Dane, Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab, and Major General Pearson, Commanding the Lahore Division. Colonel Templer and the Officers of the 25th Cavalry were "At Home," and Colonel Burne and the Officers of the 38th Dogras kindly lent their band. Colonel Western acted as judge and Colonel Tanner as starter.

The course was about 3½ miles, and was not for an untrained or inexperienced hunter to tackle. Unfortunately grief was great; no less than three riders meeting with very nasty accidents, and three horses having to be destroyed. In the second race Mr. Digby's horse fell in crossing a field and broke his neck, the owner was thrown heavily on his head, and was picked up unconscious. Captain Salt, R.F.A., and Mr. Boyd, I.C.S., were unlucky to lose their horses, the first by a broken back, the second by a broken leg. The owners fortunately were not hurt. In the third Race Mr. Owen Jones, South Lancashire Regiment, and Captain Fry, 25th Cavalry, both came to grief over the third jump. Mr. Jones' pony fell and brought down Captain Fry's. The latter pony severely kicked Mr. Jones in the face. Both riders were badly shaken, and had to be carried in.

We were all glad to see the Hunt Officials win every race. The Master, Capt. A. F. Stewart, S. and T. Corps, won the horse race, out of a large field of eighteen; the first whip, Mr. S Burne, R.F.A., secured the first race on his good English mare Lady Abbess; and Mr. Nethersole, 25th Cavalry, the second whip, won the last race on Major McBarnet's Anina which won in excellent style.

Mr. Bellamy, the well known book-maker, attended the meeting, and his sporting prices tempted backers. Mr. Bremner first photographed the Master with his whips and hounds, then took the followers of the Lahore Hunt including the only three ladies who hunt, Mrs. Tennant, and the Misses Keatings.

The prizes were kindly given away by Mrs. Western, for whom three cheers were given and after three more cheers had been given for our popular Master, the proceedings ended. The following is the result of the races:—

SHALIMAR CUP.—For English and Australian ponies 14-1, others 14-2 and under, English and Australians 12-7, others 12-0. W. I.

Mr. Burne's Lady Abbess ... ... Owner 1
Capt. Cotton's French Maid ... ... Mr. Allsopp 2
Major Dunlop-Smith's Sparklets ... Mr. Carless 3

Eight started. A good race, all keeping well together till within a quarter of a mile from home. Lady Abbess led throughout and won by one length.

NATIONAL HUNT CUP.—For Horses.—English and Australians, 12-7-C. B's. and Arabs 11-0, W. I.

Mr. D'Arcy Fielding's Kate ... ... Capt. Stewart 1
Mr. S. Burne's Spot White ... ... Owner 2
Mr. Winser's Black Coon ... ... Mr. Stretton 3

Eighteen ran. The pace proved too great for most of the field Lanercost led for a long way but was passed by the three placed horses. Black Coon looked a winner all over, but on jumping the last dyke the rider mistook the course, leaving Kate who had been ridden with judgment throughout, to make a great race home with Spot White winning on the post by half a length.

Falls were numreous. Three horses had to be destroyed and one rider, Mr. Digby, R.F.A., was badly hurt.

SHAH KI KOI VASE. For Arabs and C. B. ponies 14-2; ponies 14-2 to carry 12st. 7lb. W. I.

Major McBarnet's Anina ... ... Mr. Nethersole 1
Major A. Smith's Recall Silver ... Mr. Curless 2
Mr Burne's Knowall ... ... Owner 3

Fourteen started. Anina led throughout and won easily, falls were very numerous.

WINDSOR.

ON Tuesday it must have been a source of satisfaction to Messrs. Frail, that the welcome change in the temperature came just in time to allow of them carrying out the programme originally framed for Monday, though, as usual in such circumstances the postponement did not conduce to success, and with sportsmen only half-convinced, the muster proved a small one, the strength of the attendance centreing in Tattersall's as the club enclosure was very sparsely filled. The weather, however, proved delightful, though a bit raw towards the finish, while fields panned out better than might have been expected, affording a fair afternoon's sport. Indeed, had it been worse it would have been none the less acceptable, after the unsatisfactory experiences of the past week. Whereas, the course was a bit sticky to begin with, improving under sunshine and what little wind there was, we heard from Lingfield that frost was still master of the situation. Results:—

FOOTBALL.

ASSOCIATION RULES.

THE LEAGUES.—Making great strides of late, Newcastle United have now excellent prospects of securing the League Championship for the third time in five seasons. Four years ago, they carried off first honours, with Everton one point behind them. Again in 1907, they repeated the performance, Bristol City finishing second, three points in arrear. All through the present winter they have occupied a prominent position, but until recently their record was distinctly inferior to that of Everton. Since Christmas, however, they have not only made up the four points they stood behind Everton, but established a lead of three points. Indeed, since the opening Saturday of December, they have proved victorious in all their engagements, but one—the return with Manchester United on Boxing Day, when they lost by 1 to 0. Circumstances generally combined to improve their position, as, opposing Sheffield Wednesday—one of the most prominent clubs in the competition—they themselves, just won by a goal, and both Everton and Manchester United suffered defeat. Newcastle have still thirteen matches to play, but, with nearly two-thirds of the competition completed, a lead of three points is a substantial advantage.

Everton, who in marked contrast to Newcastle United, have only five points to show for seven matches since the beginning of the Christmas holidays, had not until Saturday sustained a single defeat away from Goodison Park, the four reverses standing against them having all been inflicted on their own ground. They played a lifeless and unenterprising game at Manchester, and were deservedly beaten by 4 to 0, Holiford, the City centre forwards, scoring three goals for the third time. Manchester United looked like faring much better at Liverpool. Indeed, up to the interval they showed better football than Liverpool, whose forwards failed to combine to any purpose, and half-time found last season's champions leading by a goal. Change of ends, however, was associated with a remarkable improvement in the Liverpool front rank, and, so far from being easily held in check, Liverpool scored three times, Manchester United meeting with the eighth defeat inflicted upon them in the course of five months.

Apart from the big advance made by Newcastle, the feature of the First League games was the poor display made by the large majority of visiting clubs. For the most part, visiting teams have acquitted themselves remarkably well this season, often sharing the honours of the afternoon, but yesterday no fewer than seven were beaten, and of those which managed to escape defeat not one succeeded in obtaining a goal. The scoring, indeed, proved very meagre, for, although Middlesbrough's match with Leicester Fosse yielding 8 goals, and those at Liverpool, Manchester, and Nottingham 4 goals apiece, the aggregate for the ten contests amounted to no more than 25 goals. Of the clubs dangerously near the bottom of the list Nottingham Forest gained a handsome victory over Sunderland, and Bury just pulled through against Bradford City, who, promoted in company with Leicester Fosse at the end of last season, have much reason to fear that—again in company of Leicester Fosse—they will have to return to the Second Division at the end of the present season.

Not one of the first five clubs in the Second Division of the League proved successful on Saturday. West Bromwich Albion, Tottenham Hotspur, and Birmingham drew, while Bolton Wanderers and Derby County were both defeated. The positions remain unaltered, but Tottenham Hotspur improved their prospects by the aid of the point they secured in drawing with Hull City, and they now possess a clear lead of point over Bolton Wanderers, with a couple of games in hand. Taken as a whole the results were surprising and no doubt the hard ground had as much to do as anything with the way the games went. Except at Craven Cottage, where the Fulham team beat Gainsborough Trinity by 4 goals to 0, the scoring was very low, all ten games producing only sixteen goals. Curiously enough the only matches in which nothing at all was scored, were those in which the two leading clubs took part. It is quite likely that both West Bromwich, Albion and Tottenham Hotspur were content with drawing, the near approach of the second round of the Cup, making the men chary of risking their limbs on the partly-frozen turf by putting forth their strongest efforts.

In eight of the ten Southern League matches, home clubs scored 27 goals to 3; the other, two ended in favour of the visitors, who obtained 3 goals to 1, every game having a definite issue. The results in many instances were rather astounding, with the defeats of Northampton, Southampton, Crystal Palace, and Bristol Rovers standing out as the events of the day. Of the first five clubs only Swindon proved successful, and their splendid goal average carries them to second place. Northampton may consider themselves, fortunate that at this period of their decline their most formidable rivals in the championship competition have similar misfortunes to deplore. To lose at home to Norwich City after a heavy defeat at Watford means loss of form and of confidence, particularly as on each occasion Northampton had the better of the early play. Swindon have four points to make up before they can catch the present leaders, but, while the prospect still favours Northampton, there may yet be an interesting struggle for premier honours.

ASTON VILLA VS. CHELSEA.—Fine, cold weather prevailed at Aston, where 15,000 people assembled to witness the meeting of Chelsea with the Villa eleven. Chelsea won the toss, Logan kicking off for the Villa, who were the first to attack. Brawn was compelled to retire owing to injury, but he soon returned. In the course of some fast play George saved from Hilsdon, and at the other end Whitley had to clear from Logan, who shot in after a good individual run. Although the pace was smart, careful methods were being observed owing to the treacherous state of the ground. At half-time there was no score. The second half was well-fought out, and honours were evenly divided, both sides having an equal share of the game. Windridge and Fairgray made a good run, but George saved the final shot, and Whitley also made some good clearances. Towards the finish

TO CONQUER MALARIA.

Words of wisdom from a Physician's Pen.

"Those who conquer Malaria conquer the tropics" is a proverb with which every resident in India is familiar. While in consequence of the onward march of scientific achievement, this disease, so depressing in its onset, so devitalising in its effect, and so disorganising in its result to the whole system is better understood than it used to be, it is still, unhappily, exceedingly prevalent and is likely to continue until the conditions which produce it have been banished.

Most people know that while Malaria may take various forms it is due to a specific germ or microbe, which destroys the red corpuscles by which the oxygen of the air is carried by the blood to every part of the body to burn up its impurities. The destruction of these corpuscles produces the marked symptoms so characteristic of the disease,—the pale, sallow, earthy complexion, the mental and physical lassitude, the depression, the morbid thoughts and feelings, the aching muscles and the tender joints.

Bad as is all this, the result of Anaemia or poverty of the blood, as it is commonly called, which makes life a burden to the sufferer, it may go considerably farther until it produces that wasted and dangerous condition of the system doctors call "Cachexia."

For long, Quinine has been the sheet anchor of the physician, and in the acute stages it generally answers admirably, but in the later stages something else must be employed to destroy the effects wrought by the microbes.

Happily, in this conquest of the hosts of the disease germs which invade the body under the banner of Malaria the physician has been presented with a weapon as potent over them as the modern machine gun is potent against the old flint lock gun.

This weapon is Sanatogen, one of the most powerful restoratives and vitalising agents ever given to the world. Its remarkable properties are due to its two constituents Casein, the solid portion of pure, new milk, and Glycero-phosphate of Soda, a preparation containing phosphorus in the precise form in which it exists in the body. Phosphorus, as every one knows, is not only as a physician has written "intimately associated with the health of the system, and is indispensable for the discharge of the functions of the nervous centres," but is also absolutely essential for the growth of what physiologists term the cells of the body, the microscopic bricks of which the human edifice is constructed." This cell growth is greatly interfered with in Malaria, and a supply of phosphorus which is easily absorbed by the depleted system is urgently necessary to restore it to its standard activity. Nothing does this so well as Sanatogen, as nothing so rapidly restores the vitality of the blood as this preparation, which is prescribed by over ten thousand physicians in the world because no secret has ever been made of its constituents and they realise its overwhelming value in rousing the functions of the body to do their duty.

How rapidly Sanatogen restores the blood after Anaemia may be judged from the fact that one eminent physician records that the red blood corpuscles in a patient increased eighty thousand per cubic milli-metre in a week, and the percentage of red colouring matter in them advanced from 61 per cent. to 62·5 per cent., while another patient, who was unable to take any solid food and was losing weight rapidly so improved in a fortnight that the red corpuscles increased two hundred thousand per cubic milli-metre, their red colouring matter from 48 per cent. to 52 per cent., and she was able to resume her household duties, completely cured of the terrible melancholia from which she was suffering.

Children are especially liable to Malaria and its pernicious after-effects which may delay their development and stunt their growth. When given Sanatogen they rapidly improve. One child who at three years old, in consequence of Malaria, weighed only half a pound more than it did when it was a year and a half, was given a small quantity of Sanatogen daily, and its weight at once began to go up half a pound a week.

Just as Malaria causes wasting in children it makes adults prematurely old, in consequence of the depression of the vitality of the system. This condition is rapidly cured by Sanatogen which removes the prematurely old look and soon substitutes for the feeble will and listless spirit a healthy interest in normal pursuits.

An exceedingly interesting pamphlet on the subject of Malaria has been written by a physician who had a wide experience of it in India. In order to give this momentous publication "Malaria, its Causes and Effects" the widest publicity, the proprietors of the copyright have instructed Messrs. Smith, Stanistreet & Co., Calcutta, to distribute a limited number of copies free of charge, to anyone who may feel interested in it, and will send them a postcard mentioning the "Indian Field." a desperate struggle was witnessed, but defence prevailed, and the match ended in a draw, nothing being scored. Aston Villa, 0; Chelsea, 0.

Sanatogen, by the way, may be obtained direct from Messrs. Smith, Stanistreet & Co. Calcutta, and at all chemists, etc.

PRESTON NORTH END vs. WOOLWICH ARSENAL.—Delightful weather prevailed at Preston for this match, and there was a crowd of about 7,000 people present. The ground was rather slippery. Preston took the field without Bond, who is under suspension, playing Main in the team. Woolwich Arsenal had Lewis and Satterthwaite for Raybould and Fitchie. In the first half the football did not reach a very high level of excellence, but on the whole the Arsenal forwards did the most work, McBride having to save several shots. Some good chances fell to the Preston forwards, but they missed them, and at half-time nothing had been scored. After ends had been changed the play was of a faster description, but it did not improve in quality, and neither goalkeeper was seriously troubled with the shots he had to save. Halfway through this half Rodway (the North End back) retired with a badly bruised knee. Despite that handicap, the home side appeared to do better than before. Neither side could score, however, and the match was consequently left drawn. Preston North End, 0; Arsenal, 0.

FULHAM vs. GAINSBOROUGH.—There were probably about 10,000 spectators at Fulham to witness this game, played in dry, cold weather, but with the ground somewhat heavy. The visitors found Fulham in great form, and although they put up a good fight and did some smart things they were quite outclassed. The Fulham forwards have been on the target recently, and in this game they were by no means flattered by the score of 4 goals they put on. The first of these was put on by Freeman almost, before Trinity knew the proceedings had started, Lipsham racing down and centreing to the feet of Freeman, and that player had but to tip the ball into the net, which he did. Later, when Millington had the opportunity to do the same thing, he shot with terrific force when only two yards out, but the ball crashed into the goalkeeper and rebounded. Before the interval, however, Dalrymple made no mistake when the chance came to him, also fom Lipsham, and the home side crossed over leading by 2 goals to 0. In the second half, although they had the wind in their favour, Gainsborough shaped no better, and their goal had some remarkable escapes, while their keeper effected some fine saves. Harrison was the source of danger in this half, and his centres were always dropped between the two backs and close to the inside forwards. They were not taken full advantage of, but first Millington and then Freeman put on goals, while Goldie followed with a shot that just grazed the top of the bar—all as the result of extremely skilful play by Harrison. Towards the close, Curtis tricked Sharp, and dribbing right from the middle he looked all over a scorer, but Fryer, with fine judgment, jumped out and saved from his toes at the right moment. Fulham put on pressure, but failed to score again. Fulham, 4; Gainsborough Trinity, 0.

CLAPTON ORIENT vs. CHESTERFIELD.—After their fine win at Blackpool on the previous Saturday, Clapton Orient played the same side against Chesterfield at Homerton, where 5,000 spectators attended. The ground was in a terribly heavy condition, and the young Orient players quite failed to play up to their form of a week ago, and the result, a draw of one goal each, left the home team no cause to complain. Chesterfield missed a fine chance of opening the scoring when Holmes, their left winger, sent over a centre which the right winger failed to head into an open goal a little more than a quarter of an hour from the start; a brilliant effort by Palke brought a goal to the Orient. The winger beat the Chesterfield defence and sent the ball against the cross-bar, whence it rebounded to Gates, who headed through. Parker almost repeated the movement immediately after, and Scott twice burst through, only to have his shots saved by Cope, the Chesterfield goalkeeper. Towards the interval the visitors made a great effort to equalise, and after the resmuption they were very aggressive, Broad, their right winger, putting in many sparkling runs. There was a short Clapton revival, in which Parker, McLean, and Scott played a leading part, but Cope was very safe. At last fifteen minutes from the close, Chesterfield got a well-deserved equalising goal, Broad beating Johnson and scoring with a low shot. Clapton Orient, 1; Chesterfield, 1.

TOTTENHAM HOTSPUR vs. HULL CITY.—After a keen, hard game, too hard perhaps to be pleasant, Tottenham Hotspur and Hull City played a pointless draw at Tottenham yesterday. The Tottenham team was the same as has done so well in recent matches, but Hull still had Toward at centre-forward in place of Shaw. The ground, although on the hard side, was quite in good condition, but the lively ball made play very scrambling. For instance, the Hotspur forwards never found their game, and the half-backs kicked too hard in feeding them. Then the extremely vigorous tactics of the Hull defenders, which in the second half became actually rough, dangerous play, doubtless had its effect on the players, who, in view of next Saturday's Cup-tie, did not respond or retaliate as might have been expected. Coquet was badly kicked in the face, and was off the field for ten minutes, and Middlemiss was lamed by a nasty kick on the knee. In the first half play was bright and fast. Early on Temple missed a grand chance of scoring for Hull, and later on Roughley saved a couple of splendid head shots from Woodward. In the second half play became an actual scramble, and free kick after free kick was given against Hull. Once Minter broke through the Hull defence, but shot straight at Roughley. Both goals were attacked in turn after this, but neither side looked like scoring. The weather was delightfully fine, and there were 25,000 spectators present. Tottenham Hotspur, 0; Hull City, 0.

SOUTHERN AMATEUR LEAGUE.

EALING vs. RICHMOND ASSOCIATION.—Ealing suffered defeat by Richmond Association at Ealing on Saturday afternoon by 3 goals to 2. Throughout the first half the visitors monopolised the attack and their passing was far superior to that of their opponents. The Ealing defence was good and their forwards put in some good work, but careless shooting in front of goal no doubt lost them the match. No score had been recorded by either side when half-time arrived, and at the commencement of the second half the Ealing defence had a hot time, Richmond scoring their three goals within ten minutes—two being the result of clever passing up the wings, Mitchell finding the net on each occasion. The third goal Richmond obtained luckily through Hopkins's mistake in passing back to his custodian before the latter was ready to receive the ball. An interval of over twenty minutes elapsed before Ealing scored through Etheridge, who found the net as the result of a fine individual effort. Five minutes before the end, Doll headed Ealing's second gaol from a corner kick and the game wound up with an exciting few minutes round the Richmond goal, during which Drake had an easy opportunity of scoring an equalising point, but in the excitement of the moment he shot wide. Richmond Association, 3; Ealing, 2.

CORINTHIANS vs. CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY.—Well represented, the Corinthians beat Cambridge at Queen's Club by 3 goals to 0. The University played F. W. Stretton at full back again, F. H. Mugliston still being absent, and their defence was, on the whole, good, Thew and Prest, the centre-half, doing a lot of capital work; but the forwards failed to settle down to an effective game. Squire and W. B. Harris were away, and though the substitutes, S. A. Pike and H. S. Perile, showed to fair advantage the line did not get together in the face of a resourceful defence, in which Timmins, Page, M. Morgan-Owen, and Canny stood out conspicuously. Play, on the whole, was fast, often good, but never exciting. Cambridge held their own in the first half, but the only good shots were by Pike and Prest, and their goal had a few narrow escapes before H. Morgan-Owen opened the scoring with a smart low shot. After change of ends the Corinthians made many strong attacks, R. Turner, at outside, becoming very dangerous on several occasions, and from centres by him, H. Morgan-Owen put on two more goals, the first with a smart shot. Near the finish Cambridge improved, but met with no success. Cold bright weather prevailed, but there were less than a thousand spectators. Corinthians, 3; Cambridge University, 0.

QUEEN'S PARK RANGERS vs. LONDON CALEDONIANS.—At Tufnell Park the Rangers played a return fixture with the London Caledonians, and the result was the same as at the first meeting—a victory for the professional team by five goals to nil. The Rangers tried a new centre-half, Reid, but otherwise they were at full strength. The Caledonians had not quite their best side, Porter and W. J. Reid being unable to play. On a rather treacherous ground the game was fast and very pleasant to watch, though the Caledonians were not strong enough to extend their formidable opponents. For the greater part of the first half the Rangers pressed, but, thanks to some fine goal-keeping by Guy Watson, they only managed to score twice. The first goal was the result of a fine shot by Downing and the second came from a corner kick, Greer scoring with a smart low drive that gave Watson no chance. Melhuish was very prominent on the right wing for the Caledonians, but none of his centres were turned to advantage. Play in the second half was fairly even for a time, but then the Caledonian defence went to pieces, and after their goal had had two marvellous escapes, Rogers scored with a soft shot when Watson had run out. Two minutes later a square pass by Macdonald let Greer shoot another neat goal, and after another interval of two minutes a good shot by Barnes went over Watson's shoulder into the net. From now till the end the Caledonians had a fair share of the game, and the left wing pair, who had been starved in the first half, did a lot of good work, but the shooting of the amateurs was poor, and they failed to take advantage of their chances. Queen's Park Rangers, 5; London Caledonians, 0.

OXFORD UNIVERSITY vs. OLD CARTHUSIANS.—At Oxford the University gained a decisive victory over Old Carthusians by 8 goals to 0. There seemed every likelihood of a good game at the outset the Carthusians' defence being excellent. Eventually, however, it went to pieces, and the University had matters all their own way. Before the interval Sayer and Berry scored, and afterwards further goals were put on by Pears (two) Berry, Raynor, Maples, and Sayer. In the second half the Oxford eleven showed good combination. Oxford University, 8; Old Carthusians, 0.

THE GAME IN SCOTLAND.

As matters stand at present, there is every possibility of a serious hitch occurring in the Scottish Cup competition. In the first round Partick Thistle were drawn at home against West Calder Swifts, but as the Thistle have been without ground all the season, and there is no prospect of them being on their new ground before the beginning of next season, they decided to play the tie at West Calder. The game ended in a draw, and as a result of an application by the Thistle for the game to be played at Glasgow owing to West Calder's ground not being fully equipped, the Association ordered the game to be played on the Clyde Club's ground at Shawfield on Saturday. West Calder Club protested, and as a result of special meetings of the directors, indignation meetings of supporters, and special interviews with counsel, the club decided to refuse to play off the tie at Glasgow. Both clubs now claim the tie, West Calder on the ground that as Partick Thistle, have no ground when the draw took place they could not legally be members of the Association. Public opinion is decidedly on the side of the West Calder Club, and it is probable that a special meeting of the Association will be called early this week to consider the matter.

With the exception of the Queen's Park and Hamilton Academical game, little interest was evidenced in the other replayed Scottish ties, although Airdrieonians had a hard struggle to get the better of the Qualifying Cup holders, Vale of Leven. The Hampden Park match, which attracted the biggest crowd of the day in Scotland—24,000 spectators, with £578 gate money—was a regular Cup tie tussle, play being keen and fast from start to finish. R. S. M'Coll reappeared for the amateurs, while Hamilton tried their new centre, M'Laughlin, from Preston North End. M'Coll's inclusion in the Queen's team seems to give the rest of the players a confidence which is lacking when he is off, and his generalship on Saturday was pretty to watch, his passing to Dickson and Paul always being effective and dangerous.

In the League competition the best game of the day was at Dundee, where Clyde, who had been undefeated for eight weeks, met the local club, before a crowd of 15,000. Dundee won by the fine play of their halves, while Clyde forwards showed very little of the combination which has recently been a feature of their games. 3rd Lanark, at Aberdeen, found the locals at the top of their form, and it is a long time since Brownlie, who is considered about the best goalkeeper in Scotland this season, lost six goals in one match. At Glasgow next Saturday the same teams meet in the second round of the Scottish Cup, and on Saturday's form there is little hope for the Glasgow Cup holders.

Rangers started badly against Motherwell, and at the interval were a goal down. The second half told a different tale, and Rangers, playing to suit the ground conditions, rattled on five goals in quick succession, R. G. Campbell and Bennett having two each.

Falkirk are not the team they were last season, and although Celtic managed to get full points against them both teams will have to show a great improvement if they hope to go far in the Scottish Cup competition. Without Walker, Hearts are like Hamlet without the Prince, and against Morton the Tynecastle men gave a weak exhibition and were decisively beaten. Edinburgh football was again seen in its weakest form when Hibernians threw away one of the points against Port Glasgow by the poor shooting efforts of their forwards.

RUGBY RULES.

ENGLAND vs. FRANCE.—When, and if, one fine day our French friends learn the game of Rugby football not all the king's horses and all the king's men will save England from a defeat at the hands and feet of the sky-blue jersey and red-stockinged brigade. But that day may be a long way off. Judging by form displayed last Saturday, the leading players have not improved one whit in their knowledge of the game to play under the varying circumstances peculiar to a pastime of Rugby football's kaleidescopic tendencies. There is still the same insistent slapdash, go-ahead method in everything, the same tenacious tackling, the characteristic national élan which compels, and the same keenness and staying power; but when the chance of a score presents itself, there is the same helpless-ness as to what to do and the same impression conveyed to the mind of the interested spectator that, however promising the outlook, there will be no score. The loss of head, which is so conspicuous—and painfully considering how one naturally wishes success to such keen and energetic players—can only be ascribed to these sons of France never having been taught the correct game to play to meet the case of each phase of the game.

On the occasion of their fourth match with England—the three previous having ended in a pointage of 95 to 21 in favour of England—played at Leicester on the 30th ultimo, not only did the representatives of French Rugby football have golden opportunities of scoring half a dozen times, but they deservedly kept England from scoring until the game had lasted over half an hour. Tarr then ran in twice, the first time for a combined try between himself and Mobbs, and on the second by a purely individual effort from the visiting twenty-five. Jackett converted both tries, and then the teams changed ends. Simpson very nearly scored in the first minute of the second half, and within ten minutes Mobbs and he had added two tries. This pair had changed over from one wing to the other at the interval. Shortly afterwards Jackett was carried off hurt in stopping a fine bit of work down the right wing by Lane and Masse, and Archer went full back until the Leicester player's return. During his absence the Frenchmen maintained a vigorous attack, in which the whole team shared. One after another, Lesieur, De Molmann, Hubert, Lane, Theuriet, and Communeau were on the verge of falling over our line with the ball, but every one of the attacks failed for want of just one touch of "the game." On one of these occasions, in order to illustrate how the visitors literally threw away a try, Hubert, in possession, backed up by a man each side of him, ran up to Jackett with our line three yards behind the full back. Instead of passing on either side of him Hubert turned his back on Jackett and hurled the ball straight back at the head of the nearest Frenchman!

Actions of this kind it was that saved the English line at least three times. And with Hutchinson and Johns, or Mobbs—even the referee was undecided as to who actually scored—adding two more unconverted tries, England won by three more points than at the last meeting of the two sides in Paris. England, 2 goals, 4 tries; France, 0.

County Championship.

Lancashire vs. Northumberland.—Only 1,500 people gathered at Waterloo, Liverpool, to see this contest in the Northern Division of the County Championship, Both counties had to make several changes in the constitution of their fifteen, but at the start the sides appeared to be well matched. Within five minutes of the kick off, however, Singleton scored in the corner for Lancashire, Derbyshire's attempt to convert being naturally unsuccessful. Entwistle followed with a further try for the home team and later on a big effort by Derbyshire ended in that player crossing the visitors' line, but Kennard did not improve. Still, by the time the interval arrived Lancashire had thus established a lead of nine points. On resuming, the home team at once took up the attack again and Kennard dropped a goal. Northumberland then put in more effective work and Robinson gained a try which Maddison easily improved. A few minutes later, however, Kennard placed Lancashire further ahead with a penalty goal. Morrison followed with a penalty goal for Northumberland, but before the end was reached Bryning added a further try for the home side. Lancashire thus proved victorious by 2 goals (one dropped and a penalty) and 4 tries to 1 goal and 1 try. Lancashire, 19 points; Northumberland, 8 points.

Cornwall beat Devon.—At Exeter on the 3rd instant, the home side played as selected, but Jackett, the Cornish full-back, had not recovered from his injury in the match with France, and his place was taken by F. Smith (Redruth). For a long time the game was fought out amongst the forwards. Cornwall gradually asserted their superiority, chiefly by reason of their greater pace. Some pretty passing was seen among the visiting backs, and the home forwards were not good in the scrimmages, and with few exceptions their halves were smothered before they could get their quarters going. Hoar and Butcher, however, had hard lines in failing to score. Pretty passing among the Cornish backs let in Bennetts with a try, and before the interval he scored a second, Solomon having made a capital opening. At the interval Cornwall were six points ahead.

Devon attacked for a lengthy period in the second half, but their efforts were quite disjointed. Almost as soon as Cornwall got on the aggressive Dean dropped a goal, and a little later Tregurtha scored a try from a melee. Result:—Cornwall, 1 dropped goal, 3 tries (13 points); Devon, 0.

Irish International Trial.—The final trial to aid in the selection of the Irish team against England, took place on Mardyke Grounds, Cork, on Saturday, when Ulster gained an easy victory over Munster. There was one change on the Munster side, Murphy coming in for Morris amongst the three-quarters; but this would not explain the poor show put up by the Southerners as compared with their capital display when opposing Leinster at Lansdowne-road on the previous day.

At the start the Munster men were very aggressive, and the game was not long in progress when Murphy passing to Desmond, the latter let Ryan away, and he avoiding opposition, made a nice opening for Griffin to score. McGrath just failed to goal. This was the turning point in the game, for not long afterwards Ireland headed a Northern rush, and that player, receiving from Gardine, who had picked up, made the scores equal. Pinion failed to improve on the try scored. The Ulster backs were showing to much more advantage than their opponents, and Pinion at half was giving them every opportunity to display their cleverness. Any good work accomplished for Munster was done by the forwards, and they were making things pretty warm when Donoghue muffed a pass from Ryan, and so lost a certain score. Still the visitors were confined to their own half until a touch down by Cotter brought relief. Munster were again attacking when Hutchinson passed wildly, and Ireland, turning the mistake to account, got clean away, and scored again for Ulster. Pinion this time converted, and at the interval Ulster had a lead of 8 points to 3. Shortly after resuming, a fine run by Griffin and McGrath brought the latter close to the Ulster lines, only to be finely tackled. The visiting forwards worked down to Henebry, who was playing a fine game and stopped a rush. Two further attempts on the part of Munster to score were frustrated, once when Piper was pulled up just on the line and again when Donoghue made a crude effort to kick a goal. At last the long sought for points arrived, when the forwards had brought play close to the Ulster posts, and Halpin forced his way over, Griffin failing with the kick. This was a spasmodic burst on the part of the home side, for immediately Ulster again assumed the upper hand, and after only fine tackling by Munster had kept them out, Pinion put in the finest piece of work of the match by dropping a goal. The same player was responsible for a further addition to his side's lead, for he opened up nicely for Thomson, Ireland, and Stewart, the last named scoring cleverly. Munster were now badly beaten and Pinion and Ireland gained further tries, which were converted. Result:—Ulster, 2 goals (1 dropped) 4 tries (21 points); Munster, 2 tries (6 points).

Ulster.—T. Cotter (Knock); M. Ireland and A. L. Stewart (N.I.F.C.), C. Thomson (Collegians), and A. R. Foster (Queen's University); A. S. McLinton (N.I.F.C.) and G. SKATING.

The Amateur Championship.—The N. S. A. have suffered many reverses of recent years, but they have scored for the last two seasons. On the 30th ultimo they again succeeded in deciding the Amateur Championship, but, in striking contrast to last year, under the worst possible conditions—that is to say, it was thawing fast, and but for the promptitude of the officials, it would have been impossible to finish the racing. Despite this, the ice was fast, and some magnificent racing resulted in F. W. Dix, of Raunds, Northampton, retaining the King's Cup, and beating his own world's records for the distance.

Dix must now be regarded as one of the most magnificent skaters (amateur or professional) England has produced, and in the opinion of an expert with 50 years' experience, he is the fastest skater seen since "Fish" Smart retired.

Last year there was wide disappointment that F. W. Dix and A. E. Tebbit did not meet, but this time they drew together in their heat, and being the fastest two, also met in the final of the two races. The first was decidedly the best. Tebbit, who was champion for thirteen years, lost the toss, but 600 yards from the start he was leading by about a yard, when he fell. He quickly recovered, and stuck hard to his antagonist, but was well beaten. This could be hardly wondered at, as Dix was in grand form, although it was his first turn on the ice this year. Twelve months ago he covered the mile and a half with three sharp turns in 4mins. 37⅕secs., which set up a world's record. The conditions then were ideal, and it was said that the time would never be beaten, but yesterday he knocked off the odd two-fifths, covering the distance in 4mins. 37secs. The ice was rough in places, but decidedly on the fast side, whilst there was no wind to hamper the skaters.

In the final Tebbit again lost the toss, but condition and age told, and he was never able to push his more youthful antagonist. The other final between Collier (from Leigh, Lancashire) and Hudson (from Raunds, Northampton) was the keenest race of the day, being neck and neck all the way. Once Collier fell, but he soon made up for it, and a ding-dong struggle ensued all down the last straight. Ten yards from the finish Hudson was just leading when they both fell, Collier being fortunate enough to slide past the post. Details:—

First Round.

Fred Hudson, Northampton, 5mins. 2secs. beat St. G. Ashe, Warwick, 5mins. 51secs.

F. J. Christmas, Cambridge, 5mins. 18⅕secs. beat W. F. Shepperson, Whittlesey, 5mins. 19secs.

F. W. Dix, Raunds (amateur champion) 4mins. 37secs. beat A. E. Tebbit, Wentworth, 4mins. 55secs.

H. Collier, Leigh, Lancashire, 5mins. 4secs. beat Ben Thorp, Swavesey, 5mins. 42secs.

P. J. Arch, Boston, skated a bye, 5mins. 28secs.

Final.

H. Collier, 5mins. 5secs. beat F. Hudson, 5mins. 12⅕secs.

F. W. Dix, 4mins. 41⅕secs. beat A. E. Tebbit, 4mins. 57secs.

The final placings were:—

Posn.		m.	s.
1.	F. W. Dix, Raunds (amateur champion and holder of the King's Cup)	4	41⅕
2.	A. E. Tebbit, Wentworth	4	57
3.	H Collier, Leigh, Lancs	5	5
4.	F. Hudson, Northampton	5	12⅕

In the first round Hudson had no difficulty in beating Ashe, the old Thames sculler. At the half-distance Hudson led by 120 yards, and he afterwards increased that distance by 80 yards. It was an exciting struggle between Christmas and Shepperson, the latter leading at half-way by 20 yards. The old runner kept his man going, but 80 yards from home Shepperson fell, and Christmas won. There was a great struggle for the lead between Dix and Tebbit. The former won the toss, and just got away the fastest. Tebbit, however, soon got on level terms, and was leading by about a yard as they approached the turn, when he fell, and destroyed his chance. Dix completed half the journey in 2mins. 12secs., leading by 20 yards. Tebbit continued to struggle on, but eventually suffered defeat by 100 yards. Collier, who is only twenty-one, and hails from Lancashire, easily disposed of Thorp, going right away, and winning by 120 yards. Arch skated a bye.

In the final round Collier and Hudson started first, and it was the best race of the day. Collier was the first to show in front, but he could not draw away. Eventually he got a lead, but fell before reaching the turn. He gradually overhauled his man, and was only half a yard behind at the second turn. Then there was a desperate struggle for the rest of the journey. Hudson was just ahead, but when there was only another 10 yards to go both fell, and Collier was the first to glide by the winning-post. The last race was between Tebbit and Dix. There was only one man in it, Tebbit struggling manfully, but being hopelessly beaten. Dix led at the half-distance by 80 yards, and finally won by 120 yards.

Golf at Cannes.—Arnaud Massy, who has been engaged by Mr. E. Esmond to play for a month at Cannes, accomplished an excellent performance in beating the best ball of three players, Mr. A. E. Hedstrom, Mr. Fitzherbert, and Mr. Esmond. The ex-champion won the match by 2 and 1. Ben Sayers, of North Berwick, has been engaging in rounds with Lord Carnarvon.

American Memorial to Tom Morris.—The United States is to have a Memorial to the late Tom Morris. Mr. Peter Dawson, of Glasgow, having presented a statuette of the "grand old man of golf" to the Western Association of America, who have devised for it a novel kind of team competition. Each club will be represented by eight members, who on a given date will play against the par of their own course. The scores will be submitted to a committee, who will decide which club shall be considered winners. The value of the trophy is 1,000 dollars.

Royal Blackheath Club.—Yesterday at Blackheath the Bombay scratch medal was won by Mr. A. S. Johnston with a return of 110, and the Adam Cup (handicap limited to 21 strokes) fell to Mr. W. E. Gray with 122 less 12—110.

BOXING.

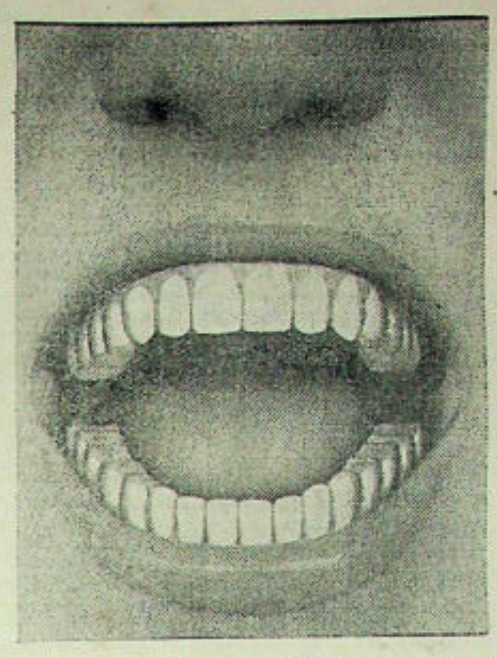
The National Sporting Club.—The members of the club in Covent Garden are very keen on the noble art of self-defence just now, and although the programme arranged for last evening contained nothing very special, the theatre was full when the entertainment commenced. The second series of the heavy-weight novices' competition was worked through first, and, as usual, several of the bouts were over in double-quick time. The form shown, however, was not very impressive.

Any deficiencies in the novices' bouts were compensated for by the fine contest put up by Sweeper Madge and Jack Lamb—participants in the first important bout of the evening. Two thoroughly willing lads, they must have been in splendid condition to last as well as they did. Madge won by a narrow margin, and they left the square to the accompaniment of rounds of applause. They deserved every bit of it.

After the interval, Petty Officer Brayfield and Gunner Dawson took the ring for the principal contest. It was a very clean exhibition, neither man doing the slightest thing contrary to the rules, and Brayfield, who won, beat a man who must have a cast-iron frame to stand the amount of body punishment inflicted upon him. Appended are details of this contest:—

Petty Officer Brayfield (H. M. S. "Ganges") beat Gunner Dawson (R. H. A.).—They boxed at catch-weights for £25 a side and a purse. Brayfield was seconded by Harry Greenfield and Arthur Gutteridge, and Dawson by Young Patsy and Bill Baxter. Dawson was slow in comparison with the sailor when they left their corners, and Brayfield took advantage in the shape of three on the body and one on the head. He followed by upsetting the gunner just prior to the going with a punch on the jaw. Stepping well in, Brayfield delivered another body punch as soon as they resumed, Dawson getting even with a well-timed left-hander on the face. So far, it was Brayfield's contest, and he went further ahead at the third meeting, landing three blows—always near the heart—to one of the Gunner. Dawson did better in the early part of the fourth round. He shifted his man with body blows—one rather low—and got in another with Brayfield off his balance, but the sailor went very strongly in the last minute, and always made the body his mark. He missed a rare chance in the first few seconds of the fifth meeting, when both were visibly slower, with the gunner getting shaky on his feet. But the gunner was in such fine condition that he came up in very good trim, and he had little, if any, the worst of the sixth passage of arms, blocking Brayfield's punches very cleverly. Still going for the body, the Petty Officer found the spot several times in the seventh round. Dawson, too, aimed his blows in a similar direction, and if they lacked the precision of his opponent's, they were by no means light deliveries he landed. The eighth round was Brayfield's, and in the next Dawson was down for seven and eight seconds following terrific punches, but he was still able to give and take in the tenth round, and in the eleventh had a bit the best of it. They went the full distance, when Brayfield gained the award.

The Inter-Varsity Contests.—The preliminary competition at Oxford to decide representation against Cambridge will be held on 26th February (says the Tuesday Review). This is only two days after the finish of the Torpids, which may have some effect on the entries for the competition, for several of last term's boxer are rowing in the Torpids, and in the very short interval between the races and the preliminary competition it may be found difficult to get down to the desired weight. Judging, however, from last term's competitions, it is very probable that the entries in the various weights will be numerous, and from the form then shown it is certain that some very keen bouts will be seen.



In the Bantam-weights the chief man is E. G. S. Gordon (Exeter), who represented Oxford last year. He will, however, have to pay some attention to R. Spread (Exeter), who has the making of a first-class man at this weight. There is also T. C. Corker (Trinity) to be reckoned with.

E. G. Barlas (Exeter), who boxed against Cambridge last year in the Feathers, is up this term, and will probably compete. Sillem (Oriel), the winner of this weight last term, will, with coaching, be a most useful man, and he and Rutherford (Merton) will have a very brisk contest. Grundy (Lincoln) must not be despised at this weight, as he has a very useful right hand.

Unfortunately, the captain of the club, M. Thorneywill (New College), will be unable to box in the Light-weights this year. There are, however, several good men to choose from to fill his place at this weight. The winner of last term's novices' competition, Gibbs (St. John's), is a boxer of some merit, and will undoubtedly show up well in the competition. Fenwick (Magdalen) is another very good man in the "Lights." His footwork is exceedingly good, and he hits hard. Brown (Worcester), Fearson (Jesus), and Evan-Jones (Hertford) are three others who all have a very thorough working knowledge of the science, and will show game fights.

For the Middle-weights there is a very fine selection of men. Mains (B.N.C.), who represented Oxford last year against Cambridge, is still going strong, and Greenfell (Balliol) and Fairbridge (Exeter), who had such a remarkably fine fight last term, will have to do their best to come out top.

In the Heavy-weights, Reynell (Balliol), who beat Cambridge last year, will not be boxing. Beale (Trinity) boxes most pluckily, but the choice will probably rest between Day (Christ Church), who boxed so powerfully last term, and Basden (Lincoln), who will give him a good run.

ROWING.

BOAT RACE PRACTICE.—The practice of the Light Blues during the last ten days has been of a varied character. Owing to unforeseen circumstances Mr. F. J. Escombe had to leave Cambridge, and therefore Mr. D. C. R. Stuart, the president, took charge of the crew during the first part of last week. In consequence of this, and also because G. C. Fairbairn contracted a cold, there were two alterations—namely, at bow and two—T. D. Richardson and C. P. Cooke coming in.

The work of the crew is still of a light nature, as the make-up of the boat is by no means settled yet, although it ought to be. There is a great tendency to bucket badly, and this is surprising since the Cambridge style teaches the men to slide and swing forward very slowly and steadily. The boat rolls badly, and does not seem to possess the travelling power it had a fortnight ago. Mr. H. E. Kitching has resumed his seat at four, and is rowing well.

Bow, two, and three are improving, as they should with practice, while Perry has given up his seat to Kitching. Williams, at five, is still rather heavy with his hands over the stretcher, and rather ponderous.

Rosher at six is rowing better, and Hornidge is doing well at seven, although he finds stroke somewhat hard to follow.

Stroke has not fulfilled the promise he gave in the trial eights, and will probably give way to the president before very long.

Ten days ago the Oxford boat started on its second week of practice with a complete rearrangement of the crew. A. G. Kirby took his seat at five and Newman left his at bow, D. Mackinnon going to three, H. R. Barker to two, and Gladstone bow. Somers Smith has also been given a trial again, and A. G. Kirby has taken his place earlier than expected. J. Gillan has also come into the boat at six. The crew has been making good progress, and should turn out well.

Now that stroke and seven have been settled there seems every reason to believe that the crew will be made up for good very shortly. If this is the case Oxford ought to be a very good crew, and it will need all Mr. Stuart's experience and good stroking, backed up by a good crew, for Cambridge to defeat them.

There is no doubt that Mr. Stuart ought to stroke the Cambridge boat, as on the present form of the Oxford crew no risks should be taken, not even with the idea of giving Arbuthnot a chance of becoming accustomed to the Putney-to-Mortlake course.

In the Oxford crew E. C. Bourne has greatly improved, and is well backed up by seven. Six is rowing well, while Kirby has still his old form. The four bow oars are improving. There is not much rolling and the boat travels nicely between the strokes.

In the little betting that has so far taken place on the race odds of 6 to 5 on Cambridge have been laid.

The crews as at present arranged are as follows :—

Hunting.

THE BOMBAY HUNT.

THIS being the most important time of the year in Bombay, from a sporting point of view, there was naturally a big field out on last Bye day, including many who are not regular supporters. Fortunately two very good runs were obtained, enhancing the reputation our Hunt enjoys.

Moving off to Chuckla Hill, hounds were put into the covert at its base as soon as practicable and almost at once we were away after hounds, who broke with a burst of music into Bomanwadi Valley. This fine, firm bit of going liberally interspersed with bund jumps gave way to a very bad stretch of country over which one of the followers came to grief, fortunately without serious injury. In and out of the old nullah, we came to better ground past Sahar as far as the Backwater. Instead of crossing the quarry made along the water past the Mango Tope and then into the open over Andheri road. Crossing the Vehar road, he made for a bad, stony hill and pottered about it for some time before descending into Powai Valley. Hounds were gaining fast now and the end was near, the jack failing to reach possible safety in the hills beyond.

It had been a run of more than ordinary pace. The next was after a jackal put up at that point where the Tulsi water main meets the Andheri road. Going away towards Marole he took us past Stacey's Tank and thence to the far side of the Mango Tope, straight into it and then turned sharply out into probably the finest stretch of galloping ground to be obtained thereabouts. It extends right away as far as the Marole Hill without anything in the shape of jungle to penetrate. He took us right up the big hill from which the whole surroundings can be seen, a fine panoramic view. No less than three times did he leave the hill and return to it, a sure sign of distress, and it was here he was eventually pulled down.

ACCUSTOMED as we are getting to two runs in a morning, the one we had on Tuesday quite sufficed. A very heavy mist met us at Santa Cruz and progress was slow as we wended our way to the meet at Iria. In the groves adjoining Chuckla village the pack drew blank so a move was made to the Mango Tope in quest of the wary and wiry customer who is still at large after giving us more than one long run. Satisfied that he was not there, the Masters moved away to the covert drawn last Bye day, where the Tulsi water main meets the road near Marole and here hounds were more fortunate.

Galloping over acceptable rice fields we pass Stacey's Tank and climb Sunday Hill and thence on to the hill of caves at Marole. No time is wasted, hounds moving straight up and down the steep slopes without a halt; and a long run ensues in the valley as far as a still worse hill of a positively dangerous nature. Descending again, the quarry makes over the road towards the jungle but must have been headed as he came straight back towards the same hill. Hanging rigidly to the scent, hounds were sure of him and achieved their object before he could climb the steep and stony slopes again.

THURSDAY being Bank holiday, there was a big field to be seen trekking across from Santa Cruz to the Parla Covert on the edge of the dry tank. Hounds finding early led us across a grass field into some particular bad melon ground abounding with holes. This we thankfully leave and enjoy a fine long stretch of paddy fields along the railway in Jackal Hill direction. Before reaching it the jack turned and after surmounting Pereira Hill, dropped into the Chuckla Groves and eventually entered Bomanwadi Valley. Crossing this over some good jumps, we pass Sahar, cross the water main near Andheri road and make for the Backwater. The pace had apparently told on the quarry as he attempted to hide in an adjoining quarry but scent was far too good for that sort of thing.

It being early yet we made off once more to the spinney off the Andheri road and it again proved tenanted. First making across the plain straight for the distant Marole Hills he turned past Vangoli and then up and around a wooded hill before entering the Palm Groves and then the Goregaum district. He refused to steer a straight course throughout and in looking for suitable cover he was pulled down after a short run right in the open.

THE meet on Friday was a small one, a number of horses being reserved for the Cup chases. The line took us twice across the Gurrea Hât Road, over the Band Country and home across the Gurrea Hât Road once more, finishing close to the starting place. In the Horse Chase Ermine, Colours and Billikins led from the word go but Colours refused the second fence and Ermine led for the rest of the journey. Billikins was in close attendance all the way but was just beaten for second place by Dainty, who came through at the finish. The official order was as follows :—

1. Mr. Winckworth on Ermine
2. Mrs. Dods on Dainty
3. Mr. Macpherson on Billikins, late Treasure
4. Mr. Cowper on Maisonette
5. Miss Hasluck on Saionara
6. Mr. Payne on Bayleaf followed by Mrs. Dudley Myers on Napier, Mr. Douglas on Schoolboy, Captain Fowke on Merman, Mr. Corbett on Myolene, Mrs. Buck on Referee, Mr. Rees on Spinnet, Mrs. Ross Craik on Argyll, and Mr. Ross Craik on a bay.

In the Pony Chase Marconi led from start to finish and won easily from Bandy Leg. Results :—

1. Mr. Glen on Marconi
2. Mr. Tanner on Bandy Leg
3. Mr. Muir on Ungava
4. Mr. Deakin on Scarboro
5. Mrs. Walker on Night
6. Mr. Hutchison on a bay followed by Messrs. Johnston and Prophit and Mrs. Buck.

PONY CUP.

The clerk of the weather despitefully served us up a boiling hot day on Wednesday, the date fixed for the Pony Chase Cup and the chase taken at a fast pace became a question of endurance, at which Marconi, the top weight, proved himself the best. There was a very fair gallery out at Jodhpur Thana at 7-45, the time appointed for the chase, and eight competitors in all weighed out. Mr. Tegart's entry of Nancy having been refused as she held no measurement certificate. Messrs. Allen and Dalgleish went round with the bags and the field were despatched to a good start pretty punctually to time. The start was on the east side of the Gurrea Hât Road and the paper went over a hurdle, then across the road and alongside the Molla Hât Road. It then swung round back to the Ladies' Wall, and back again over the bunds. Then left handed into the jungle and finally across the Gurrea Hât Road once more round by the railway, where a final mud wall was placed and then a sharp turn to the left over the first hurdle to the winning post. The whole was about 4½ miles with some 15 made jumps. Meprise (Mr. Ballantyne) soon settled down in the lead with Marconi (Mr. MacDonnell) and Pathfinder II, (Captain Holden) close up. The pace was restrained at first but they began to crack it on soon after they passed the Ladies' Wall, though they checked a little over the bunds. Here Marconi, went to the front and the order over the gridiron was Marconi, Meprise, Pathfinder II. close together, then Emerald (Mr. Tanner) two lengths behind; Ungava (Mr. Muir) next, then Scarboro (Mr. Deakin), Envious (Mr. Cowper) and Pink 'Un (Mr. Corbett). The last named already beginning to tail off. After the gridiron Meprise went to the front once more and the pace became very strong. Crossing the road the last time Marconi went ahead and taking the final two fences in first-class style won fairly comfortably by about two lengths from Ungava.

The following is the final order and weights :—

	Height.	Weight.
Mr MacDonnell on Marconi ...	14-2	12
Mr. Muir on Ungava ...	14-1½	11 8
Capt. Holden on Pathfinder II.	14-1½	11 11
Mr. Ballantyne on Meptise ...	14-1¾	11 11
Mr. Tanner on Emerald ...	14-1½	11 8
Mr. Cowper on Envious ...	14-1¾	11 11
Mr. Deakin on Scarboro ...	14-1	11 2
Mr. Corbett on Pink 'Un ...	14-1	11 2

"I really don't know what we shall make of little Bertie when he gets older," said Mrs. Smallpatch. "He's so dreadfully slow and sleepy. If you tell him anything he forgets it the next minute, and he can't even read correctly." "I know what to do with him," said Gub. "What?" "Make a telephone clerk of him."

It was an after-dinner party, and a taxi was hired, and six over-merry men were bundled into it. On arrival at the first address the driver failed to wake any of them, so he rang the bell, and when a feminine voice called from an upper window, "Who is there?" the taxi-cabby replied, "Missus, will you be so kind as to come down and pick out your husband!"

Polo.

BOMBAY OPEN TOURNAMENT.

THE Bombay Open Polo Tournament, which thanks to the energies of Mr. L. Barraclough, the Honorary Secretary, was revived last year after a lapse of three years, found five entrants this time. But unfortunately at the very last moment, the Kishengar team was called to Calcutta and the Royal Fusiliers had to with draw on account of a serious accident to Mr. Wilson, one of their best men. Consequently Idar, Bhopal, and the Poona Horse were left in to fight for the cup.

The opening match was on Tuesday, the 16th instant, when Idar and Bhopal met. There was a very large and distinguished gathering. The ground upon which money and labour had not been spared was in an excellent condition and favoured a good display, in which the public were not disappointed. The Idar team was the better mounted of the two and in offensive tactics, composed as it was of some of the best of Jodhpur players, superior to anything we have seen on this side of India. On the other hand, Bhopal's stubborn defence and eventual victory won admiration on all hands.

In the first chukker, Idar were the first to open the attack, and after about two minutes' play Dhokal Singh scored for them by a back-hinder. Further pressure, however, brought them no score, while a flying visit of Bhopal narrowly missed them the chance of equalizing. During the second and third bouts Idar were mostly on the attack, but a skilful defence prevented further scoring. In the fourth chukker the ball was all over the field and in a mêlée in front of the Idar flags, Captain Greig equalized. In the next, Idar again started pressing and a foul against Bhopal was utilized by Guman Singh to secure the lead for the Rajput team. The final bout, however, told quite a different story. The defenders turned aggressors and a pass from Greig was successfully taken up by Captain Abdul Wahed and his clean and straight shot brought the scores level. From the hit out, Bhopal followed up this advantage and just as the bugle was piping full time, Abdul Wahed from another pass from Greig scored the winning goal. Score: Bhopal, 3 goals; Idar, 2 goals. Final.

There was again another big gathering on the polo ground on Thursday, the distinguished company of the previous day being present, to witness the final battle between Bhopal and the Poona Horse. The latter team, who year after year have won against tremendous odds, the Poona Junior Polo Tournament, seemed on the Bombay ground, from the very start of the game, no equals to the Bhopal team, the narrow winners of the previous day whose win, as many ascribe it, was indeed a stroke of luck. Bhopal had the better of the game from the start to the finish and the hollow victory of nine goals to two was as much due to their faster mounts as to their superior tactics.

Play commenced at 5 P.M. and within a minute of the start, Ali Khan opened the score sheet for Bhopal by a neat shot. The ball for the rest of the period was at both ends, but no further damage to either flags was done. Ali Khan scored during the second chukker, to which Greig and Abdul Wahed added two more in the third, Poona Horse failing to open their account. Although a penalty against Bhopal secured Poona a free shot it was not availed of to any advantage and the fourth chukker ended in a blank for both sides. In the fifth bout Greig and Abdul Wahed added two more goals for Bhopal, while at last Hildebrand placed a point to the credit of Poona. Before the close of the chukker Abdul Wahed secured a further increase by a series of long and pretty drives.

In the closing period Bhopal was again on the offensive and Abdul Wahed after missing once, soon after scored, then a couple of minutes later Ali Khan shot the ninth and last goal for Bhopal. Though beaten Poona had the last say in the game and as final time was being called, Hildebrand by a magnificent long shot raised his side's score to two. Score: Bhopal, 9 goals; Poona Horse, 2 goals. Teams :—

SIXTEENTH MEETING.

Saturday, 20th February 1909.

THE Honorary Secretary is to be congratulated on the success which attended the annual sports last Saturday. The meeting fell through last year and had not Dr. Gray and the energetic Secretary of the Y.M.C.A., Mr. F. H. Reynolds, come forward this year and undertaken the manifold duties attendant on the running of this big fixture, it is more than probable that there would have been no meeting in 1909. Although with so short a time at their disposal, these gentlemen made the most of it and all who were present last Saturday must acknowledge that their efforts were indeed well rewarded. In spite of it being

WINCHESTER

.22 Short and .22 Long Caliber Rim Fire Cartridges.

If you want to use .22 Caliber Cartridges that shoot when you want them to and where you point your gun, and strike a good, penetrating blow, buy the time-tried Winchester make, having the trade-mark "H" stamped on the head. They cost but a few pence more a box than the cheap, unreliable kind, and they are shillings better. Winchester .22 Caliber Cartridges are loaded with Black and Smokeless Powder. Those loaded with Smokeless Powder have the celebrated Winchester Greaseless Bullets, which make them cleaner to handle than any other .22 Caliber Cartridges. Special powder, made according to carefully determined and tested formulas, is used in loading all Winchester Cartridges, and every bullet is swaged by special machinery, which makes them uniform in size, weight and density. This modern method of manufacture, coupled with a rigid system of tests, makes Winchester Cartridges better than any other brand on the market. A trial will convince you.

a race day there was a good attendance and Lady Baker came early and distributed the prizes at the conclusion of the sports. The afternoon was hot (Old Sol as usual shining his brightest on the day fixed for the annual sports), but some good times were put up and three records were broken. The entries were the largest on record and necessitated the running of many heats the day before. Among the amateurs, Mr. R. T. Ross, the holder of the 100 yards Championship Shield once again annexed this trophy, his time—10⅘secs. being ⅕sec. slower than on the last occasion. He also won the 220 yards. The Quarter Mile Championship was won by Lieut. N. I. Whitty of the 2nd West Kents, while the ½ mile went to another army man, Capt. B. E. H. Lockley of the Gordon Highlanders. The handicaps filled well and panned out very fairly. The back markers could not get up to their field in the 300 which was won by Mr. H. Griffiths from 12 yards, while in the hurdles Mr. Knyvett, who was penalised 20 yards, could not quite get up and was beaten in his heat and in the final by a couple of feet, the times being 18⅗ and 18secs. respectively. Mr. Knyvett has improved wonderfully over the sticks since his last appearance at the P. A. M. and he hurdles in capital style. He won the high jump again, his third win in this event, this year clearing 5ft. 8ins which has only been beaten by Barton's exhibition jump of 5ft. 10 in. 1905. The 150 Yards was won by Mr. F. Rosetti from a yard in 15⅗ secs. and had the 220 Yards not come quite so soon after the handicap, Mr. Rosetti would probably have won this too. He made a great finish and was only just beaten.

The British Army Championships provided interesting competition which resulted in the Wiltshire Regiment retaining the Shield. Pte. C. Chandler was mainly instrumental in this success, for he repeated his victories in the 1000 yards and mile gained at the last meeting, and secured the further honour of lowering the mile record of 1min. 41secs. which has stood to the credit of Pte. C. Checkley of the Black Watch since 1897. Chandler's time was 4mins. 35⅘secs., an excellent performance. All who witnessed the race will long remember it, for Pte. McGuire, of the King's Royal Rifles, made the pace all the way and looked like winning, but Chandler hung on gamely and beat him in the last stride. Pte. McGuire is a long distance runner with a reputation and is open to run all comers for any distance over twenty miles. The 100 yards and ¼ mile were won by Sergt. T. Miller of the Royal Irish Rifles. This speedy runner was timed 10⅕secs. for the 100 yards in his heat on Friday, but was ⅕sec. slower in the final. The 600 Yards went to Lce.-Cpl. J. Mahoney of the Royal Irish Regt. The Wiltshires and the Royal Irish Rifles had two wins each, but the former also ran third in the 100 Yards and thus won the shield.

The Tug-of-War drew eight entries this year. Of these the Leinsters scratched, leaving seven to pull. The Wiltshires, who held the shield, were not represented by the big team who were down here two years ago, but they had a good eight, as had the two Mountain Batteries. The Wilts gave the 8th a good pull but were beaten and the gigantic gunner teams met in the final, victory lying with the 8th.

The Native Army Shield was again won by the holders, the 91st Punjabis, who won the half, were placed 2nd and 3rd, in the ¼ mile, and 3rd in the 100 yards. Entries were very big in the three events and two existing records were lowered. Sepoy Sher Jang, of the 33rd Punjabis, won the 100 yards in 10⅗ secs. which is ⅕sec. better than Mirza Khan's time in 1906. The ¼ mile went to the 93rd Burma L. I. Lce.-Naik Imam Din winning a good race, with the 91st Punjabis representatives finishing second and third. Bugle Major Jamal Din won the ½ mile in the good time of 2mins. 4⅕secs, ⅕ better than the previous best put up by Lce.-Naik Abdul Sattar in 1906. The latter was running again this year but was quite out of form.

St. Xavier's retain the Schools Shield with a win in the ¼ mile, dead heat second in the 220 yards and third in the 100 yards. Full results as follows :—

MADRAS CRICKET CLUB SPORTS.

19th and 20th February 1909.

THE Athletic Meeting of the Madras Cricket Club has been resuscitated after a lapse of several years and the success which attended the sports on Friday and Saturday last would lead one to expect that they will not fall through again. Mr. H. F. Wilkieson and Mr. A. H. Wellman, were judges while Sir Henry King acted as Starter. Mr. A. P. Symonds held the watch, and Mr. W. F. Petty was Clerk of the Course. The arrangements were in the hands of Mr. A. H. Steele, the Honorary Secretary, to whose efforts the success of the meeting is largely due. Entries were good but fields were not so large owing to scratchings. Nevertheless good sport was witnessed though times were not particularly brilliant. Preliminary heats in the 100 yards open and closed races, and 120 yards hurdles, the long jump, half mile and throwing the cricket ball were decided on the first day, while an attractive programme was run through on Saturday. There was a good attendance on both and the band of the 88th Carnatic Infantry played a fine selection of music on the second day. Lady King gave away the prizes. Results :—

THE CALCUTTA LEAGUE.

CALCUTTA vs. ST. XAVIER'S.—The hockey season opened in Calcutta on Monday when three games were played. That between the above teams on the C.F.C. ground was fairly fast but not very scientific. The visitors drew first blood through L. Rosser. Beddy equalised and the score was one all at the interval. Both sides attacked in turn on changing ends but there was no score till just before the close of the game Simpson scored the winning goal for Calcutta. Teams :—

O.F.C.—Badham, goal; McCaw and Bocquet, backs; Heilgers, Studd and Oliver, halves; Dawson, Beddy, Roberts and Simpson, forwards.

Referees :—Messrs. G. V. Wade and N. R. Bhattacharjee.

RANGERS vs. MOHAN BAGAN.—Played on the Rangers' ground on Monday, the home team having the best of the exchanges. The first half was pointless but in the second Davis scored twice and though the visitors made great efforts, erratic shooting lost them opportunity of reducing the margin. They were thus beaten by 2 goals to nil.

MOHAN BAGAN.—Guin, goal; Dass and Bose, backs; Bannerjee, Sircar and Bhadury, halves; Bose, Mozumdar, Bagchi, Ghose and Sen, forwards.

RANGERS.—Nugent, goal; Margrett and Postence, backs; Lawton, Warden and Little, halves; Davis, Oliver, Skempton, McCullogh and McKay, forwards.

Referees :—Messrs. McCready and Cody.

Y.M.C.A. vs. MEDICAL "A."—This game on the Y.M.C.A. ground on Monday ended in a win for the medicos by 4 goals to nil. The home team played a man short throughout. The goals were scored by Hendrick, Elkins and Rowley (two) in the first half. Teams :—

Y.M.C.A.—Heysham, goal; Reynolds, back; Adams, Vanspall and Pooler, halves; Berkley, Collins, Price, Hudson and Rosetti, forwards.

MEDICALS.—Mann, goal; Asquith and Perkins, backs; Lynch, Elkins and Rogers, halves; Boileau, Beveridge, Rowley, D'Arcy and Hendrick, forwards.

TOWN CLUB vs. LA MARTINIERE.—A level game between these teams on the Town Club ground on Tuesday resulted in a draw of one all. H. Sircar scored for Town Club, and Duff equalised.

The solemnity of the meeting was somewhat disturbed when the eloquent young theologian pictured in glowing words the selfishness of men who spend their evenings at the club, leaving their wives in loneliness at home. "Think, my hearers," said he, "of a poor, neglected wife, all alone in the great, dreary house, rocking the cradle of her sleeping babe with one foot and wiping away her tears with the other!"

In a Pennsylyania town, where everything is up-to-date and the ladies are always planning some new scheme, a strange thing happened. A "White Elephant" party was announced, and each guest was requested to bring something that she could not find any use for, and yet too good to throw away. The party would have been a great success but for an unlooked-for development, which broke it up. Eleven of the nineteen women brought their husbands.

A ganger on one of our large lines of railway has a keen Gaelic wit. One warm afternoon, while walking along the line, he found one of his men placidly sleeping on the embankment. The "boss" looked disgustedly at the delinquent for a full minute, and then remarked, "Slape on, ye lazy spalpeen, slape on, fur as long as ye slape you've got a job, but when you wake up you ain't got none."

An Irishman, having enlisted in a cavalry regiment, was undergoing all the horrors of learning to ride, when his horse threw him over its head. According to custom, the sergeant, who was superintending the riding lesson called out. "Pat Murphy, did you receive orders to dismount?" "I did sorr," said Pat. "What from?" bawled the sergeant. "From hind-quarters, sorr!" was Pat's grinning reply.

SOME STRANGE HAUNTS AND HABITS.

EVERYBODY knows that bats are in the habit of taking up their quarters in all sorts of chinks and cranies, whether it be in a cave, in a church-tower, in a disused chimney, beneath the eaves of a house, or in the thatch of a cornstack or hayrick. It has been reserved, however, for the Director of the Botanical Gardens at Singapore to discover that one small species hides itself in—of all unimaginable places—the hollow spaces within the stems of bamboos.

The discovery took place in this wise. A big clump of dead bamboo was being removed in the Singapore Gardens, when the attention of one of the coolies was attracted by a peculiar noise inside one of the stems. On opening it to ascertain the cause, two or three bats flew out, while a number more were found inside. The stem was tied up and taken to Dr. Ridley, who forthwith proceeded to make a careful examination with a view of ascertaining how the creatures had effected an entrance. To his surprise, he found that the only means of entrance was by way of a narrow chink, with a maximum diameter of not more than a quarter of an inch. That any bat, however small, could creep through such a narrow chink, seems incredible, but it must nevertheless be taken as a fact that such an apparently impracticable feat is not only possible but must be comparatively easy. Some explanation of the marvel is afforded by the circumstance that the particular species of bat in question—as was ascertained by reference to the Natural History Museum—has an unusually flattened skull, thus permitting it to pass through orifices which would be impracticable for other species of similar bodily size. As other specimens of the same kind of bat were subsequently found in one of the hollows in a second stem from the same clump and also in that of a stem from a second clump, it would seem that these bats habitually take up their quarters in residences of this kind, which are no doubt delightful, comfortable and secure when the creatures are once inside, although the difficulty about finding a sufficiently wide entrance would seem to be a bit of a drawback, especially if any of the tenants happened to be in a hurry to get home.

Apparently the unusual flatness of the head in this particular species of bat must to regarded as a special adaptation to the peculiar lodgings in which it takes up its abode.

From bats to ants may seem, perhaps, a rather wide jump, but it is from the latter group that our second instance of strange haunts is taken. Most ants, as we all know, construct their domicles on or in the ground, but there are a few little known tropical species which spin curious silken nests in the leaves of palm or other trees. A nest of one of these ants (which are scientifically known by the name of Polyrhachis) was recently found in the leaf of a palmtree in Java. It formed a long and slender tube, slightly expanded at the two ends, with a minute entrance at the lower extremity; its total length being about ten inches. When examined, it was found to contain one adult winged female, twenty-five males, twenty-four workers and a host of larvæ and pupæ in various stages of development. A nest of a somewhat more complex type is constructed in palm-trees by a West African ant of the same group.

The fauna of a palm-tree, it may be incidentally mentioned, would form the subject of an interesting monograph, if any one could spare the time and devote the necessary labour and working it out.

That certain species of fishes—notably the common stickleback—depart from the casual ways of most of their kind in matters connected with their eggs and young is a well known fact. One of the species devoting special care to its nursery arrangements is the bolti of the Nile, a member of the genus Chromis, and valuable as being one of the few fishes of that river whose flesh is really toothsome. According to a recent description, the male bolti constructs a simple, basin-shaped nest in the sand among tamarisk bushes or reeds near the bank. On the bottom of this hollow the female then deposit her eggs; but this is not to be their permanent home, for soon afterwards she takes them in her mouth, where they are retained till the young fry have hatched out and attained a size sufficient to enable them to take care of themselves. This is, perhaps, one of the most remarkable kinds of nursery arrangement to be met with in the whole animal kingdom. How Mrs. Bolti manages to feed herself with her mouth full of eggs or young fish, as the case may be, is not stated.

As this is not a connected article, but merely one in which reference is made to certain features regarding the habits of animals which have been described or discussed during the past year, we make no apology for turning to a totally different subject, namely, pigs and tortoises.

And what have these to do with one another? our readers may well ask, to which we answer, a great deal in one particular instance.

That pigs are very destructive to lizards, is well known; and to their introduction into New Zealand is due the extermination of the curious tuatera lizard from the mainland. It is, however, a quite recent discovery that they will devour tortoises. Some time ago an observer in one of the North American States came across a pond which contained scores of the common box-tortoise, a species which is enabled to close its shell by means of a hinge-like arrangement in the lower half, and is thus quite secure against ordinary enemies. Not, however, against swine.

For while the observer was watching the living denizens of the pond a drove of pigs made their appearance on the scene and promptly began a raid on the tortoises.

These were seized in the jaws by the swine, which endeavoured to crack the shells with their teeth as one would so many nuts. In the case of the smaller and thinner-shelled tortoises these efforts were successful, and the luscious contents were swallowed with evident gratification on the part of the pigs. On the other hand, some of the oldest and stoutist reptiles proved too tough nuts for their assailants, and these were reluctantly let go. In spite of the escape of a few of this type, the great bulk of the colony of tortoises appears to have been wiped out of existence by their assailants; and it is thus evident that the introduction of pigs into a country inhabited by tortoises of the smaller kinds is absolutely fatal. Now in past times Norfolk was inhabited by the European pond-tortoises, shells of which have been discovered in the superficial deposits of the county; and, so far as one see, the district is just as suitable for the existence of these reptiles as are several of the European countries where they are still to be found. Can it be that they have been exterminated by the omnivorous swine?

THE HARVEST OF THE SEA.

Although everyone is aware that the fish taken annually from the sea is prodigious in amount and enormous in pecuniary value, it has till recently been practically impossible for the ordinary individual to obtain trustworthy data in regard to either one of these items. All this has however been changed by the energy of the Permanent International Council for the Exploration of the Sea, which has undertaken to issue a series of annual returns of the amount and value of the sea-fisheries of the chief European countries. The latest of these returns has just been issued at Copenhagen under the title of Statistical Bulletin of the Sea-Fisheries of the Countries of Northern Europe for the year 1905. The volume is a somewhat polyglot production; the title being in French, while the returns themselves are given in English on one page and in German on its fellow. It is however, none the worse for this; and many of the items are of very great interest, although from the nature of the case the whole work is essentially a mass of what are commonly known as dry details. To those who know how to read them even the driest of statistics can however be made to yield a fund of interesting information, and this is the case in the present instance.

Immense care has been taken in ascertaining that the information given is trustworthy; and in the case of both weights and value only such items are quoted as have been definitely authenticated; such catches as were never properly weighed or valued being altogether ignored. It will therefore be apparent that such deficiences as the document presents are to be regarded in the light of under-estimates rather than of excesses.

The various items are given under the headings of the respective countries to which they relate, and are subdivided according to the different species to which they refer; while at the end of each section is added the total catch. The returns are given under two headings,—value and quantity; and as the values are stated in pounds sterling, while the quantities are mentioned in kilogrammes, we shall restrict such quotations as are made in this article to the former series, as being the more familiar to English eyes and ears.

Starting with the British Isles, we find that the most valuable item in 1905 was the Scotch herring fishery, which yielded no less than £1,343,080. This is however, run very close by the take of haddock in England and Wales, the value of which totalled £1,329,537; while herring in England and Wales, inclusive of course of the famous Yarmouth bloaters, likewise exceeded a million sterling in value, the exact item being £1,164,442. On the other hand, the comparatively small items yielded by the takes of some of the higher priced kinds of fish will probably come as a surprise to many of our readers. Thus the total value of the catch of turbot amounted to only £318,013, and that of soles to £474,443. The abundant low priced fish are therefore those which really bring in the biggest reward to the labour of the toiling fisherman.

Of the sea-fisheries of England and Wales as a whole was a no less sum than £7,502,360. If to this be added the value of the Avon, Severn, and Welsh salmon captured during the same year, together with that of the shell-fish—both apparently unknown quantities,—it is probable that a round eight millions would be reached. As regards quantity, the shell-fish included 5,106,343 edible crabs, 502,673 lobsters, and 35,426,700 oysters, in addition to an unknown quantity of shrimps, welks, periwinkles, scallops, corklew and mussels.

During the same period the value of the Scotch sea-fisheries was £2,719,810, while Ireland comes in a bad third with £414,364. Adding to these the English and Welsh product, we have the prodigious total of £10,436,534 as the total value of the sea-fisheries of the United Kingdom for the year 1905. Adding salmon and shell-fish, we shall probably not exceed the mark if we estimate the total product of the British sea and rivers at thirteen millions sterling!

Although no other country has a record anything approaching this, yet the collective value of the fisheries of all the other North European countries works out at a huge figure, and thus gives some faint idea of the enormous drain annually made on the resources of the sea. And yet in spite of this we are told on the best authority that very little diminution in the fertility of the ocean as a whole can be detected.

Sporting & Athletic Notes.

The annual general meeting of the Calcutta Turf Club held at the Club House on the 24th ultimo, was largely attended. Draft programmes for the season 1909-10, were passed and the following Stewards elected:—Hon'ble Mr. A. A. Apcar, Messrs. W. Garth, A. G. H. Macpherson, G. B. Deakin and J. D. West. The 8th Extra Meeting on Saturday had seven races on the card, but nothing especially exciting as in many of them the handicappers had been much too good to some one or other horse, and there were nearly all runaway victories.

In the first race for ponies Cocky most decisively proved that the report he could not win was incorrect, as after staying with his field until well into the straight, he came out and won absolutely as he liked by three and a half lengths. The stable had been confident and backed him for a very good win.

Again the National Plate, on her running in the mile an-a-half race, the week before, was an absolute gift for Golden Morn. She ran true to her form and won with great ease from Dirty Boy by a couple of lengths. The only surprise in the race was Captain Carrington, who did not get anywhere near, though he looked to be quite well handicapped.

The Selling Handicap which came next was a more open affair. Blix and Rubrette were most fancied by the public and Eruption, a big somewhat clumsy looking horse, who is, however, extremely well-bred (Grafton—Loch Lava), was well backed by his stable. He justified their confidence by winning in a canter by two lengths. Mr. Galstaun bought the winner for Rs. 950, and we understand he proposes to put him over the Hurdles in the Monsoons for which he looks uncommonly well suited.

The Rawdon Plate was the best handicap and the best plate race of the day. Nearly everything looked to have a chance and there was a good deal of money forthcoming for most of the animals. In the finish, Mr. Galstaun's horses, Silphoe and Windy, got first and second, and though we do not think it would have troubled the winner, we believe if Mount Dane have not got away badly and been shut in in the straight, he would certainly have been well up at the finish.

Only five of them went for the Elgin Plate and in this Mr. Griffith's Northwood, a horse for which he paid a lot of money in Australia, was a big boom and carried any amount of money. It was, however, once again demonstrated how foolish it is to back horse on reputation instead of recent forms as the favourite after leading the field to the distance died away and Marcelle got the better of Jack Sheppard in a good race, the latter coming up very fast at the finish.

The 5-furlong race was spotted by every one as a good thing for Harene and she won it all the way, finishing four lengths ahead of Singleton, who got second. The upset of the race was Little Meg, who was very much fancied by her connections for a place and was heavily backed, but could not get nearer than fourth. A great deal of money came on for Royal Colours at one time, but it was only on one commission and she lengthened out again to a long price.

The Middleton Plate was the last race of the day and here again the favourite, Belle Cole, came in a very easy winner by three lengths. Solace was also much backed, but went to pieces after they had gone a little less than 5 furlongs: it is evident that the cough which had been troubling her lately had made a lot of difference to her.

Of all the long-distance races in America which have occupied attention recently, that in which Alfred Shrubb, the old South London Harrier, and Tom Longboat, the Canadian, were principals at Madison Square Garden, New York, on Friday, the 5th February, possessed most concern for sportsmen in Great Britain. J. J. Hayes' matches with Dorando Pietri, and the latter's meetings with Longboat, certainly aroused considerable excitement, but there was that in the Shrubb-Longboat race which quite beat them for interest so far as Britishers were concerned. The contest was decided on an indoor track, and 10,000 people attended to witness it, Shrubb being favourite at 8 to 5 on.

Much curiosity was felt as to whether the Englishman would be capable of lasting the distance of 26 miles 385 yards. Hitherto he had been seen at his best in shorter races, and up to just less than 12 miles he was without a peer in his amateur days. There could be no question as to the Indian's ability to cover the distance, for he has demonstrated this on several occasions. What appeared to favour Shrubb, and previous to the affair was considered by his supporters to be his strong point, was that his speed would avail him in the earlier period of the race, and so, as it were, would run Longboat off his feet. The high rate of speed, however, set up by Shrubb proved his undoing.

Shrubb started off at a rattling pace when Tim Sullivan fired the pistol at 9-19, moving as a well-oiled machine, and immediately rushed to the front. Longboat being apparently unable to follow. The first mile was covered in 4mins. 32secs., Shrubb being then three-fourths of a lap ahead. At the second mile there was a lap and a ha between the runners. Shrubb's perfect action aroused great enthusiasm among the spectators, but many declared that he would not last the distance. The fifth mile was reached in 27mins. 54secs. Shrubb would run fast for a mile or two, and then slow down to a trot, apparently to reserve his wind and strength, and at the tenth mile, which he reached in 57mins. 32⅗secs., he was no less than half a mile ahead of the still steadily-plodding Indian.

Longboat was apparently not worried when the Englishman increased his lead to six laps at the twelfth mile, but when he entered the fifteenth he sprinted, and gained 50 yards. This was seemingly done to test Shrubb's strength, for when the Englishman refused to let the Indian get any nearer, the latter resumed his long, swinging stride. When the fifteenth mile was completed in 1hr. 28mins., Shrubb had a lead of six and a half laps, and he was loudly cheered by the spectators. During the nineteenth and twentieth miles he made another fine burst, and put eight laps between him and the Indian. The time at the twentieth mile was 2hr. 1min. 25⅘secs. In the next mile Shrubb stopped to change his shoes, and this enabled Longboat to gain a lap, but Shrubb soon returned to the track, and set off again at a lively pace.

Longboat's manager now brought the Indian's bride to the side of the track to encourage her husband, who responded gamely, and went away at a fast run, smiling at his wife. Meanwhile, Shrubb seemed to be in trouble, and his gait slackened. Longboat began cutting down the lead yard by yard and pandemonium was let loose when, at the twenty-second mile, Shrubb slowed down to a walk. His distress was apparent to all, but he was game to the core, for he soon started to run again with a swinging stride. Cheered on by his bride, Longboat electrified the spectators by drawing up on his fast tiring rival so rapidly that he was only four laps behind at the end of the twenty-third mile. Shrubb now frequantly broke his pace, but the Indian continued to sprint, and in the first half of the twenty-fourth mile he again won applause by gaining another lap. It was only his great gameness that now kept Shrubb going; his mouth was wide open, his legs were stiff with cramp, and his attendants vainly slapped his limbs in the endeavour to relieve him. The crowds yelled and shrieked in their excitement as Longboat slowly but surely recovered the lost ground, then drew level with Shrubb, and finally passed him in the twenty-fifth mile. With a smile of triumph the Indian sprinted to the goal, and Shrubb, unable to respond to the challenge, fell exhausted to the ground. The time was 2hr. 63mins. 49⅘secs. Shrubb has since beaten Dorando at Buffalo in a fifteen mile race.

THE adage that "a little knowledge is a dangerous thing" finds its justification in the unconscious humour perpetrated by a schoolboy on an examination paper. EVERYONE interested in sport has heard of Mr. W. B. Woodgate, the famous oar—has he not helped to make history at Putney and Henley?—and every reader who takes up the memoirs which he has lately published under the title of "Reminiscences of an Old Sportsman" will be delighted with their breezy, vigorous style and their wealth of good stories. The only complaint likely to be made against Mr. Woodgate is that he is too reticent about his own achievements—on those of his comrades he is always ready to dilate. The son of a rector of Belbroughton, a village in Worcestershire, Mr. Woodgate was sent to Radley School and afterwards to Brasenose College, Oxford At Radley, where he shared in what might have been a serious school rebellion, he complains that he had too little sleep and so was stunted in growth. But for this he thinks he might have scaled thirteen instead of twelve stone when up to full fighting strength at Oxford. His 'Varsity chapters are perhaps the best feature of the book, and are full of humour. Old "House" men will chuckle over the writer's story of how he bearded Dean Liddell at Christ Church after having severely damaged an under-porter of that college in a row and by talk of prosecution and by glorious "cheek" carried off all the honours of the interview. Excellent, too, is the yarn he tells of the Queen's man who got a first-class and became so elated as the result of a "wine" that he mounted the cupola over the college gates and harangued a crowd that had assembled in the "High." The Provost (afterwards Archbishop Thomson of York) implored Mr. Simcox to consider the reputation of the college, and ended his remonstrance, "Pray come down; we can all understand your feelings." Whereupon came the reply, "Understand my feelings! You! Understand my feelings! You, who only got a dirty third! Not you, Mr. Provost." Talking of the University Boat Race Mr. Woodgate says:—

> I am in my declining years more or less a neutral as to University boat-racing; in fact, ever since 1883, when I coached both crews an equal number of days and one day took Cambridge a morning tideway course and caught train to Taplow in time for Oxford's afternoon row. Of course, one is glad to see one's own colour win, where it merits victory; but the chief sentiment that grows upon us is a desire to see the standard of U.B.O. oarsmanship maintained high. It is small satisfaction to see Oxford win with a bad crew, beating a still worse Cantab team. Far more satisfactory to see a tip top crew win, even though it be from the rival club.

There speaks the true sort of English sportsman.

"LONG-LEGGED, high-standing, thin—nosed storks," is the best word that a correspondent has for the fox-terrier bred for prize-winning at English shows, unemployables whom the breeder's foolish ingenuity has made unfit for the terrier's natural work of going to ground. He might say as harsh things for the highly bred bulldog, a mild monster whose ancient qualities of courage and tenacity have been lost while his breeder has been lengthening his lower jaw.

There are men who are unconcerned with the dog as a companion and a fellow-hunter. They are content with a beast whose nose-angle, hair and measurements approach the æsthetic ideals of those who deal out cups and commendations. Such people should be gumming postage stamps into albums and rapturously contrasting the Pink Patagonian (water marked) with the Pink Patagonian (no water mark).

CRUFT'S Dog Show, held in London on the 10th and following days of last month, was a gigantic success. The Agricultural Hall has seldom seen a more astonishing and high-class group of animals than the 3,500 benched on this occasion. A correspondent writes:—

England has the largest dog shows in the world and contains more varieties of dogs than any other country, but the cradle of the dog race is in the East as this show went further to prove. The newest dogs are the Lhassa terrier and the Tibet spaniel, Probably the most valuable dog in the show was Mrs. McLaren Morrison's tiny Lhassa terrier, one of the very few in England. Great numbers of people are eager to acquire these terriers, which will have a great vogue if the species can be multiplied; and though like nearly all other exotic dogs, including retrievers from Labrador, they do well in our climate, the stock is very slender in England, and the enforced six months' quarantine is apt to kill off fresh im portations.

The Pekinese, of which many beautiful dogs were shown, have not changed a point for a thousand years. It is interesting to note that the penalty of taking away a palace dog from Pekin is now death by stoning.

The greatest increase in any class was in the comparatively new white West Highland terriers, which have doubled in number. The vogue is extraordinary, and the oddest of many things about them is that the almost irrepressible tendency of the West Highland terriers to bark seems to have been bred out of them. Another odd and baffling point is that only about a third come white, and they seem to answer what is called the Mendelian theory of heredity.

Mr. Lewis Harcourt was again showing the newly-bred golden retrievers, and in these, just as in the terriers, the change from dark to light colour has resulted in increase of good temper. Gentler dogs could not be imagined. Are we arriving at the scientific production of a dog without a bark.

The Queen's affection for the Borzois, of which her Majesty was again showing her old favourite, has prepared the way for a new vogue for this graceful wolfhound. Yorkshiremen especially have taken up the species, and many of the young dogs are so fine in the coat and long in the head as entirely to surpass the older dogs. The Queen's dog could get no more than a "very highly commended." The first prize went to Mrs. Borman's Ramsden Rajah.

One of the best classes was for Labrador retrievers, another instance of England's debt to distant countries. Mr. Holland Hibbert, whose splendid kennel has led the fashion, and the Duchess of Hamilton and Brandon were among the successful exhibitors. So many well-known sportsmen have seldom been seen at a dog show; and the sporting dog, from the little Cocker spaniels—an admirable class—to these incomparable retrievers, were a conspicuous success.

A "boneless" duck is the latest American product. "It has been a question of careful culture and selection, nothing else," says Mr. Winter, the inventor, who resides at Bridgeport, Connecticut, the place where the wooden nutmegs come from, we believe. "Years ago I succeeded in reducing the breast-bone to a mere rudiment, and now there is hardly a suggestion of breast-bone." The breast-boneless duck is not the first of Mr. Winter's wonderful "inventions." We are told he has succeeded in raising redcomb brown Leghorns which lay 2,000 eggs a year, and that, he contends, is the limit for one hen. We should rather think so, as this works out at an average of nearly six eggs per day, counting Sundays. Such a hen would be a perfect egg-hopper, and would be a godsend despairing poultry farmers.

The final game in the Madras Association Football Tournament was played on the 27th ultimo, when the Sherwood Foresters beat the holders of the cup, the Leicester Regiment, by one goal to nil. Details further on.

An Ootacamund correspondent writing to a contemporary says that the trout which the Nilgiri Game Association has so assiduously introduced for so many years past are now to be found where little expected, namely, in the headwaters of the Bawani River at McIvor's Bund. Specimens of fine length and weight are here caught by native anglers, who sell them in the Ootacamund bazaar. The official Fish Conservator, Mr. Wilson, is away just now, arranging for a fresh consignment of trout ova, of which we should hear in a few days. I don't think the Nilgiri Game Association is earning credit by the persistence with which it is trying to handicap the visiting licensee and placing him in a relatively inferior position to that of the resident licensee. The contention is that, as the visitor for a shorter period pays a smaller fee, he should shoot less game. This seems reasonable at first view, but the visitor contributes largely in other ways in taxes. The matter is in the hands of Government, and it is hoped it will be disposed of in a spirit of magnanimity. The Game Association unfortunately does things in a spasmodic way, and hence money is thrown away in experiments carried out for a year or two and then discontinued. Such has been the case with the introduction of pheasants, of partridges, and of jungle fowl. Pheasants do well and are plentiful in Mussoorie, why should they fail in the Nilgiris? The last meeting of the Association records a resolution to start afresh with the experiment of introducing jungle fowl.

The Rugby International match between Ireland and Scotland ended in a win for Scotland by 9 points to 3.

The end of the Rugby Football dispute is in sight. The English Union remained obdurate, adhering to their refusal to make their resolution on the subject of allowances to players retrospective. But we learn from latest advices that the Scottish Union is now conciliatory, and it is probably that the disagreement will shortly be settled.

When the last Australian mail left the following had been selected to represent Australia in their coming English tour:—Noble, Trumper, Armstrong, Ransford, Hartigan, O'Connor, Cotter, Carter, and Macartney. The first trial match, Australia vs. Rest of Australia, was played at Sydney on 5th, 6th, 8th and 19th February, the Australian XI winning by 8 wickets. Hartigan was unable to play, but Gregory, McAlister, and Carkeek with those named above made up the team.

The football tournament for the Lahore Trades Cup ended on the 1st instant in a win for the South Staffords, who beat the Black Watch by 2 goals to one.

A general meeting of the Calcutta Football Club was held on the 2nd instant, when the proceedings of the last general meeting were confirmed and the accounts for 1908 were passed. The Committee then elected the following office-bearers:—President:—Mr. G. Pickford (vice Mr. Birkmyre resigned). Hockey Vice-Captain:—Mr. H. M. Sherman (vice Mr. Manders resigned). Rugby Selection Committee:—Mr. T. Thornhill (vice Mr. Manders resigned). Hockey Selection Committee:—Mr. R. N. Bocquet (vice Mr. H. M. Rule 5 of the Club was then altered. The rule originally stood as follows:—

All elections to the Club shall be made by a Committee consisting of the President, Vice-President, Rugby Secretary, Association Secretary, Hockey Secretary, Rugby Captain, Association Captain, Hockey Captain, and Honorary Treasurer.

It was altered as follows:—All elections to the Club shall be made by a Committee consisting of the President, Vice-President, Rugby Secretary, Association Secretary, Hockey Secretary, Ground Secretary, Rugby Captain, Association Captain, Hockey Captain, and Honorary Treasurer, and the following shall be the laws governing such election:—

The Kasim Football Challenge Tournament at Lucknow ended on the 25th ultimo in a win for the Jubilee National Club, who beat the Oudh and Rohilkhand Railway Sports Club in the final by 3 goals to nil.

In the re-played Association Cup ties on the 24th ultimo, Newcastle United beat West Ham at Newcastle by 2 goals to 1 and Burnley playing on their own ground beat the Tottenham Hotspurs by 3 goals to 1.

The Laver Hockey Tournament was continued on the 21st ultimo, at Secunderabad, when the 13th Hussars met the Royal Fusiliers in the semi-final, the Fusiliers being victorious by 2 goals to 1. The final was played on the 23rd instant, when the Cheshire Regiment beat the Royal Fusiliers by 5 goals to nil. The winners showed splendid combination and attacked all through, scoring three of the goals in the initial half. There was a big crowd of spectators and H. H. the Sahibzada and the Resident were among those present.

F. L. Weiss, the Australian Champion billiard player, who is now on tour in India, arrived in Calcutta last week and has played two games with local amateurs at the Dalhousie Institute. On the 24th instant, he met Mr. F. N. Whiteley, conceding him 650 in a game of 1,000 up. The professional was not seen at his best and had just got into his ninth century, when Mr. Whiteley ran out. Weiss' best break was 115, and he had also put together nice breaks of 100, 77, 70, 63 and 54, his average being 15.11. The New Club players' best contributions were 37, 35, 21 and 20 unfinished with an average of 5·08. On Thursday last, Weiss met Mr. W. A. Bonnand, who if we remember rightly, has upheld the honour of Calcutta in exhibition games against Roberts, Cook and Stanley, and in December, 1907, against Stevenson. This last game in which the Champion conceded Mr. Bonnaud 650 in the usual 1,000 ended in favour of the local player. But with a similar concession of Thursday last, Mr. Bonnaud was beaten. The professional scored rapidly and caught his opponent at 841, running out with an unfinished break when Mr. Bonnaud's score stood at 892. Weiss' best breaks were 124, 90, 81, 77, 77, 71, 68 and 60, while Mr. Bonnaud, who was quite out of form, had 26 and 20 as his best efforts. At the conclusion of play on both nights, Weiss gave a novel and interesting exhibition of trick shots.

The Bengal Lawn Tennis Championships are now in progress, and the games have been largely attended daily. The Singles Tournament has been brought to the final stage and Messrs. E. M. Atkinson (the holder) and L. S. Deane, both visitors from Lahore, meet in the deciding round on Saturday. The Doubles have reached the semi-finals. Details in our next issue.

Two further games in the Murray Football Tournament were played on Tuesday. The Royal Dragoons beat the Leinsters by two goals to one, and the Highland L.I. beat the Rifle Brigade. The Lancashires having scratched, the Durhams thus enter the semi-final.

Our Bombay correspondent writes:—Naturally enough a falling off was noticeable in the numbers passing the gate, the business in the ring and the class of animal seen out on Wednesday for the Ninth Extra, but nevertheless sufficiently big fields gave us a day of close finishes and mostly upsets. Since the Big Meeting the public have been louder than ever in their protests against the inconsistency of racing here and seem to be determined to get a hearing. There have certainly been cases which would have been severely dealt with in other countries and it is about time the club lent an ear to the voices of those who do much to support it, instead of adopting that air of aloofness and independence which, as a public concern, they scarcely are right in doing. Further comment is unnecessary, as the general tone of dissent will surely waken the officials to some activity in the several respects which need remedying.

Six events were on the card, first of these being a six-furlong race for new ones in which, Thuvil, having given proof of his staying power, was well backed, though passed in the betting by Champion, whom I mentioned as not yet at his best when beating Sheriff. An unknown quantity in Sharar went well to the bend, but was here held safe by Champion and all looked over. Thuvil and Patras had, however, to be reckoned with coming very strong, and the latter putting in a last effort secured a neck win. Many thought Champion had won, and more still stated that Evans had been caught napping.

The Kensington Plate was not easy to pick, though only six went out and a strong call on Yankee Boy made him better favourite than Comeback. Gun Metal, as expected, could not stay with them for six and Cracker looked a winner down the straight. From the bend, however, the other two in company came up like race-horses to catch him opposite the stand. Backers of each voted their own the winner, and only when Yankee Boy's number went up could one be sure, Comeback a head off and Cracker the same distance behind in 1min. 16⅗secs. or ordinarily under 1min. 16secs. Whether because the horses are at their fittest or whether the going or the wind was favourable, times throughout were very good.

The Thannah Plate next had a field of fifteen, and was run in 1min. 22secs., very near record. It was very open in the betting, Scimitar threes with Grey Falcon, Dojan, Najmi and Salanic next. On settling down, Najmi, Dojan, on the rails, and Sanjakdhar led together and then Dojan went away from Sanjakdhar. This latter came again at the bend and it was evident all was over, Scimitar failing to catch Najmi with Grey Falcon close up, having come late.

Next the Mile Doncaster Plate, Oakton being backed down to twos on from Admiral Crichton and Kipling. The favourite's run on Saturday prepared us for this one, he leading from the seven to the end well in hand. Kipling came with a nice burst, but could only just deprive Admiral Crichton of a place, there being five runners.

For the second time, his stable place full confidence in Spearmint, and fives bar one was on offer in the Parel Plate with Darianoor and Multiform next. That Antica could be almost despised after his Turf Club Cup run is surprising. As usual, he made all his own running, with Barrett keeping him nicely in hand, and shaking off the attention of Spearmint came into the straight sufficiently full of running to go away again on the approach of Multiform and Darianoor.

In conclusion, the Ascot Plate with Chivalry considered one of the "morals" of the day, though it was his first outing of the year. Towards the finish a most determined rush came for Croat, a new one of Mr. R.R.S.'s barely landed two months from Australia. A renowned flier, he left the other half a dozen standing on finding his legs, Chivalry and Manlock next. Nearing the stand, however, want of condition began to tell and the other two drawing up, Manlock shot out to win by a neck. The marvellous time of 1min. 1⅗secs. was put up, which meaning under 1min. 1sec. constitutes a new record.

We were faced with seven events on Saturday for the Tenth Extra and another capital day's racing which was a trifle better for punters than the previous one. "Jack" Scott pulled off another win after an unlucky season and leaves us before the next meet. By this mail, Barrett left for Home, but one is glad to hear he will return in six months. He has severed his long-standing connection with Mr. J. B., so will ride independently.

Naturally, the Novice Plate, which opened the game, saw a poor lot out, the best seemingly being Dojan and Desert King with Farick and Fritz next in demand. It was not a level start, but Akrabad and England, who got the best of it, were never in it and when Dojan came into the lead with Desert King handy the two seemed to have it between them. This, however, proved to be a day when Farick condescended to show back form, and he had the other two pretty safe down the straight. A previously unknown one in, No Trumps, got a poor run, but made up well though missing a place.

On the strength of his gallop as well as his previously good run into fourth place, which, I think, I remarked upon at the time, Fruit Salt was made a warm favourite for the new pony race from Goldman and Champion. The last named got a bad run and came wide at the finish, too late, and the other two had it between them. Goldman getting a nice break led Fruit Salt by about four lengths, but the latter, pulling double all the way, caught him round the bend, and won on his own. He is every bit as good as they said he was and has the makings of a real champion.

Happy Land was expected to go so far ahead of his field in the Substitution Plate that nothing was thought to be able to catch him though money came for Plassey, Sir Jamal and Rajput from the right quarter. It is a well-known fact that the favourite can barely get the five and as it was the extra few yards we have this year lost the public a pile. Though Sirur for a time held his own, Happy Land soon gave his field the slip and, with Sir Jamal shutting Plassey in at the bend, all seemed over. He, however, stopped to nothing and, Sir Jamal coming with a great rush secured a win by a neck.

Wholesale scratchings in the Kempton Park Plate, left only six in with Paul Pry at the last warming to favouritism from Forfeit, Chivalry and Lipscombe. Chivalry jumped away in his old style clear of Paul Pry, Winsome and Forfeit setting a smashing pace. At the bend Paul Pry drew up with Forfeit outside. To keep him to his work, Evans gave Paul Pry one here and this had the effect of making him swerve right under Chivalry's head. Nobody would have been surprised to see both come down, and they being stopped, this gave Forfeit the advantage. Paul Pry came again gamely but missed by half a lenth. 1-15 was the time returned which, with quite a second off, is really smart.

A better betting race than the Callian Plate would take finding. Ten started, and Nusri Pasha, who ran a bad last, and Meerdhan were about the only two running loose; Famous, Young Kohinoor, Darianoor and Nooman being the order of betting. Whether, because the commission came late or because punters lost sight of Nooman's run behind Antica up to the last furlong of the Turf Club Cup, I do not know, but he certainly should have been shorter. Meerdhan and Antica were first away, but at the nine, Nooman was in command and, though Darianoor, Sialkote and Famous made their runs before the bend, stayed everything out comfortably.

Only four out of nine were left in for the Newmarket Plate of a mile, Lachlan being the pick of Byramjee's lot, but failing to displace Kipling from favouritism. Barely a head separated them to the six, where Lachlan went out, followed by St. Patrick, the favourite last, but not far behind. At the bend Kipling came and showed himself going much the best of the lot and stayed them out comfortably. Zotique, who was confidently backed came well, but failed to pass Lachlan.

The only serious upset came last, in the Coorla Plate, when Meerjan was a warm favourite from Gold Mint and Saree. Tachreet with 10-1 up made all the running and had Maharaja beat, but Lookman had followed them closely all the way and went away with a bit in hand down the straight. Not having had the best of the run, Meerjan answered the whip well, but, though passing Tachreet, missed Lookman, the "not fancied," one of the Ali bin Talib pair, by half a length. This is something like Tachreet's old form and, when more judiciously ridden, he should continue his past successes.

Another candidate for the next Viceroy's Cup Peru, was landed on Monday for Mr. M. Goculdass With this Australian Cup winner and Mooltan in we shall have class indeed.

That popular annual event organised at Pyrke's saloon, the Amateur Billiard Championship, was begun last Monday, entries numbering well into double figures and including many first-rate players, but not last year's winner, Mr. C. V. Louth.

First was the game between Messrs Pyrke and Munks. The latter is new to India, having recently come over with a good reputation from South Africa. Since his recent, serious illness Pyrke has not been in his old form, but made a game bid and only lost by 500—462.

On Tuesday Messrs. Young and Watson met and, though the former was expected to have a fairly easy job, quite a good game was seen. They kept fairly well together all the way, Young winning in the end by 500 to 431.

London Week by Week.

Friday, 12th February 1909.

Last Monday the King and Queen left London for Berlin on a visit which is creating unusual interest. The German Emperor and Empress visited England in 1907, this is the return visit, as a matter of fact, but the public imagine somehow that much significance attaches to the event in view of the atmosphere of distrust which has clouded the relation between the Fatherland and ourselves for some time. At the time of writing Berlin is engaged in extending a thoroughly cordial and popular welcome to the royal visitors and the demonstrations, it is hoped, will promote amity and harmony between the two nations. But ere these lines see print the enterprising Reuter will have told you all about it; besides this is a London letter you will say Mr. Editor.

Apropos of matters foreign, thank goodness England seems safe at last! I am credibly informed that the box office returns at Wyndham's Theatre ("An Englishman's Home") show that the mother country has awakened to a sense of duty to herself and I can once more sleep soundly in my bed. Very comforting is this sense of security malgre those horried people who persist in saying that the whole thing is merely the result of a ha'penny newspaper boom. Sufficiently tangible results are at once forthcoming. The Germans are doing everything in their power to show that they are actuated by the most kindly feelings towards us, and that they love us in that whole-hearted way in which cousins are in the habit of liking each other. They even go so far as to tell us that their Kaiser never sent that telegram to President Krüger!

By the way the author of "An Englishman's Home" is now acknowledged to be Major Guy Louis Busson Du Maurier, D.S.O., son of the late Mr. George Du Maurier, the well-known Punch artist and author of "Trilby," and brother of the popular actor, Mr. Gerald Du Maurier. Major Du Maurier commanded the 20th Mounted Infantry Regiment in South Africa in 1901 and 1902, being mentioned in despatches, and is serving at the present moment with the 3rd Battalion of the Royal Fusiliers at Pietermaritzburg, Natal. Well, he can congratulate himself on having written an exceedingly popular piece for one thing and on having stirred up a fine martial feeling for another. The play has stimulated volunteer recruiting in a really wonderful way vide reports from most headquarters. All battalions are arranging for serious work. The London Scottish, with pipes and band, have marched through London and made a fervent appeal and given the Territorial Army a picturesque advertisement, particularly stirring to enthusiasm certain parts of suburbia; a practical proof of patriotism is the anonymous gift of £10,000 contributed by a Daily Mail reader; and the music halls are making a special appeal. I repeat we are generally feeling safer from foreign invasion than we did a fortnight ago.

to become president, whilst the list of vice-presidents includes the headmasters of nineteen leading public schools. The advisory board and acting committee is a thoroughly representative one, containing the names of several well-known old blues and public school men. The object of the club is to provide a suitable meeting place for old public school boys in London who are entering upon their careers, and for this reason the subscription has been fixed at a moderate figure—three guineas and one guinea respectively for town and country members, with an entrance fee, after the first 250 members, of one guinea.

The committee has in view capital premises at a moderate rental near Piccadilly Circus, which, it is hoped, will afford convenient headquarters for old school societies and clubs. It should be mentioned that boys will not be eligible until they have left their public school and passed their eighteenth birthday, when their subscription will be £1 1s. per annum, wherever residing, until they attain the age of twenty-one years, after which period they will join at the full rates of town or country members. The following list of public schools has been selected by the committee: Beaumont, Bedford, Bradfield, Charterhouse, Cheltenham, Clifton, Eton, Fettes, Glenalmond, Haileybury, Harrow, Loretto, Malvern, arlborough, Radley, Repton, Rossall, Rugby, Sherborne, Shrewsbury, Stonyhurst, Tonbridge, Uppingham, Wellington, Westminster, Winchester, Sandhurst, Woolwich, Osborne, and his Majesty's ship Britannia will also be included.

That rather funny little man Mr. George Grossmith, senior, the ex-Savoyard and society clown, does not desire to lag superfluous on the stage (though he is really not a very thickly crusted veteran yet) so he announces his retirement. This had been received with a good deal of regret and some protest, for there are many who consider that he has by no means outlived his popularity in those recitals which have made him famous in most parts of the world. He seeks the seclusion of Folkestone, leaving his two sons, George and Lawrence, to carry on the family traditions in the metropolis: both have long since established fairly good reputations as mummers.

This week two men from India have been lecturing to large and distinguished London audiences. Sir Patrick Manson, the eminent specialist on tropical diseases, was dined on Monday night by the Authors' Club and in the course of a lengthy and interesting reply to the toast of "Our Guest," gave his audience some remarkable information about the mosquito and its connection more particularly with malaria. He preached eloquently and convincingly on this text and was followed with close attention. I believe in India the moral is being applied and the deadly insect is being everywhere slaughtered by myriads in his lair, whole municipalities being freed from his attentions at the expenditure of a gallon or two of kerosine oil! You know all about him, but he is far from being understood over here, so that Sir Patrick's help in this war of science is both opportune and material.

The other lecturer was Dr. Sven Hedin, who was recently in India, I think. His story of his travels through forbidden Tibet was rapturously received by a great audience at the Queen's Hall. The meeting was arranged by the Royal Geographical Society. Lord Morley, the Secretary of State for India, was present at the head of a distinguished company, for the exploration of Tibet means more to India than to any other country. The enterprising doctor's maps will help us to know a good deal more than we know at present about the area to be called Trans-Himalaya.

A few of the London theatres are doing really marvellous business just now, but the majority, notwithstanding the dry weather, have been experiencing something of a falling off in their receipts. One can always know that things are not really good all round whenever the list of attractions at the West End theatres includes a great number of revivals, and since December London has had a surfeit of these resurrection pies. One of the houses which have not done well lately is the Waldorf, that unlucky playhouse which no one has yet succeeded in associating with anything even distantly approaching a success. Last Saturday night candidates for admission had a novel experience for London; there was no performance and ticket holders had their money returned. About eight o'clock the theatre lights went out, and the commissionaires shouted that there would be no performance. Many people who had stood in the queue for just on two hours were angry, while others were amused. Some policemen were summoned, but there was no disturbance, and after lingering in the vicinity of the theatre for some time the would-be audience disappeared. The explanation is that the orchestra had not been paid, that they struck, that the electricians joined them and somehow the light wouldn't work! So the final representation of "Dorothy" was not given and the unfortunate contretemps has aroused much speculation and comment.

The successful run of "The Lyons Mail" at the Shaftesbury has been followed by a revival of "Hamlet" which promises to be the most brilliant feature of Mr. H. B. Irving's present season now fast drawing to its close. He was, perhaps, a trifle fussy, and mannered in the opening scenes, and rather restless, but after the first act, when there was method in his madness, he felt and rendered the character with sureness and increasing charm and art. The scene with his mother was his best effort. Here, with the soft lights, he had moments of exquisite pathos, dignity, even grandeur. In short the performance is highly interesting and Mr. Irving's Hamlet is certainly a study of beauty and charm.

Miss Dorothea Baird was simple, touching, and effective, and made a graceful and very human Ophelia. Mr. Eric Maxon was good as Laertes. Mr. Frank Tyars played the King with vigour. Mr. George Silver was excellent as Second Grave-digger; but the Ghost, a melancholy monotony of elocution, seemed somewhat too mortal.

It is a delightful production, not overdone with scenery, and Mr. Irving deservedly received the applause which crowned a dignified and very meritorious performance.

Referring in a recent letter to Mr. Lewis Waller's unfortunate selection of "The Chief of Staff" at the Lyric I think I predicted its early withdrawal. In spite of the fervour which greeted its first performance and the hysterical enthusiasm of the Lyric female claque who call themselves members of the "Keen Order of Wallerites" to-morrow night sees the last of it.

On Monday Mr. Waller will revive the evergreen "Monsieur Beaucaire" for a special fortnight, and at the conclusion of that, on or about 3rd March, another revival, that of "The Three Musketeers" will be given, a piece which Mr. Waller has been repeatedly asked to revive and in which he is really not half bad.

This summer's exhibition at Earl's Court is to be "The Golden West and American Industries." It will illustrate in the most impressive way the rapid progress of the United States, to the highest plane of influence in the applied arts, industries, and commerce of the world. For this purpose the entire available space in the buildings and grounds of Earl's Court has been set apart, and such modifications and alterations as may be essential to give realistic effect and to give local colouring to the exhibition will be carried out.

The idea strikes one as being good having in mind the fact that the business between England and the United States represents about a fifth of the commerce of the entire world. One will expect a bringing together of all the present-day achievements of science, invention, handicrafts and trades which flourish across the herring pond.

The unemployed are getting unpleasantly assertive again, poor beggars, and small wonder when they ponder on the Messina Fund collected in the city. This has now reached £130,000. The painful reflection naturally arises that so much money might be put to better use in relieving the terrible distress at our very doors than in sending it out of the country for the relief of foreigners. No one denies the need of help and sympathy for the victims of the earthquake; but, being of the school which teaches us that charity begins at home, I feel acutely distressed when I think to what good purpose this vast sum of money could be applied in England. Should London ever be wrecked by an earthquake, I wonder how much money would be forthcoming from Italy.

The Pageant craze is to break out again in the summer. Probably the largest and most elaborate display of Pageantry will be that which is to be given at Cardiff in July. It will be unique in one way, for among those who will take part in it are the Marquis of Bute, the Earl of Plymouth, Lord Aberdare, and possibly Lord Tredegar. The Master of the Pageant is Mr. George P. Hawtrey, who is to be paid £500 and 20 per cent. of the net profits up to £1,000, and 10 per cent. of the net profits over that sum. Some 4,000 to 5,000 people will take part in the display. Mr. Hawtrey would appear to be in for a good thing: running a pageant seems to be a more lucrative business than running a newspaper in some parts of the world, I know.

Many of your Calcutta readers, at least those who were in your city about twenty-four years ago, may remember that exceptionally clever Irish American comedian John Sheridan, who, with Miss May Livingstone and a first-rate musical company, ran such a phenomenally successful season at that old converted livery stable, the Corinthian Theatre. Their show was called "Fun on the Bristol" and in it Sheridan played the part of the "Widow O'Brien:" this piece was the forerunner of all musical comedies, not excluding Minnie Palmer's "My Sweet-heart." Poor old "Johnny," I regret to see, has just died: he must have been well stricken in years.

A HIMALAYAN MAN-EATER

Throughout the Himalayas, where such a thing as a man-eating panther, if not unheard of quite, is certainly very rare, the fact of two being on the prowl in one district and within 20 miles of each other, is something worth recording and as the place is well within reach of Simla and frequently visited by sportsmen, it will probably interest many to hear about him, I say him, as now only one remains the other having been shot a few months ago. This one took up his beat between the Luri Bridge and Kotgarh and killed a good many people. I heard of three human kills within a fortnight, a short time previous to his own death. Man-eater No. II is still at large and his beat extends from Bahli, the third march from Narkanda, through Taklech and up to the Daranghati forest bungalow, along the upper H. T. Road and taking in the villages, within two or three miles on either side of that road, but the environments of Taklech are his real headquarters. I first heard of him last year, when passing through Taklech in October and in the April of this year I came a little nearer to making his acquaintance. About a mile from the Taklech Forest Bungalow, on the Rampur road, there seemed to be an unusual stir in one of the hamlets above the road, so I made enquiries as to the cause of it and was informed that the night before, a panther had carried off a child who was asleep near the door of the hut and the villages had just found the remains, a part of the skull, a hand and the legs. As the place was not far off the road, I went up to have a look and close to where the boy's remains were found, was, strangely enough, a freshly killed porcupine and absolutely untouched. Whether the porcupine had come along just as the panther had finished his meal and was killed for future use, or whether "Spots" preferred human flesh and gave up the porcupine for the boy, it is not for me to say, but there lay the porcupine all the same. Unfortunately the moon was then about a day old, so no use to sit up under and the jungle, too, was dense, so I gave up the idea of sitting up that night.

His next victim was one of my contractors, who was dragged out by the back of his neck from inside his house. Feeling the grip he let out in all directions and grabbed what he thought was the ear of a dog, but when he felt himself being dragged, he guessed the old panther was his assailant and no dog, so yelled for all he was worth. In his struggles he had managed to get his blanket mixed up in the panter's feet, which saved him from a clawing as well and other men rushing out, "Spots" let go and bolted. I saw the man a fortnight later and all he had to show for it were two marks, more bruises than teeth marks on the nape of his neck. He said the brute seemed to have no teeth or very blunt ones, since what he felt chiefly was as though he was being choked by a pair of very strong and hard thumbs. The same morning, but later, one of the same contractor's coolies was seized and knocked over, as he left the village and was rescued by other men coming up behind and escaped with little more than a tiny scratch and a shaking. This was in June and I heard no more of him for a couple of months and was beginning to think that he and the Luri panther must be one and the same and that we should hear no more of human kills, or rather attempts at kills, for so far the boy was the only kill he had made, when I heard of two men being attacked, whilst going along a road, but both escaped without so much as a scratch. I next passed through Taklech in the middle of September when all was quiet and nothing had been heard of him for some time, except that a panther— he or another— had carried off the Forest Officer's terrier, from in front of the Bahli bungalow at 9 o'clock in the morning. When I came from Bahli I saw the tracks (fresh) of seemingly a large panther, though not a very heavy one, and these I followed up as far as the ridge above Taklech where he left the road and went into the forest. Five weeks later I once more find myself in the neighbourhood and every one is full of the "Bhirty" this time. The villagers say the thing is like a panther to look at but in reality it is a "Bhirit." Some assert that a "Bhirit" or "Bhirty" is a devil of sorts but they know nothing more about him, while others again say, it is a dead "Sadhu" who was refused food in this district, during some pilgrimage he was making to "Kailas" and so after death he has returned in the guise of a panther to teach the villages around how terrible a crime it is to refuse a Sadhu food when he begs!

A week ago he pulled a woman out of her hut and had dragged her some 30 yards off before her cries awoke the men in adjoining huts who rushed to the rescue and he dropped her and bolted. The woman is badly mauled about the neck and shoulders and claws have played no small part in the mauling. It is doubtful if she recovers ultimately though she is at present alive. Three days later he pulled another woman out of a machan while guarding her crops, who was also rescued, and the same night he pulled out a man out of his machan in the same way. The woman, I hear, is none the worse, but the man received some nasty gashes in the back.

All these clumsy maulings endorse my contractor's statement, and he must be a very old and toothless beast or he would have made a better business of some of his attempts at any rate. A human being caught by the throat by a panther does not usually survive to relate his experiences!

Then on the other hand how does he subsist at all? if he is not capable of even killing a man, he is not likely to do much in the way of wild game and, strangely enough, I have heard of very few kills among sheep or dogs about here.

Well, be he a panther pure and simple or a "Bhirit" its about time his career was brought to a close and the villagers I am sure would bless the sportsman who relieved the neighbourhood of such a scourge. I have paid visits to Taklech and somehow every one during moonless nights, so have not even had an opportunity of sitting up for him, but I hope to time myself better on the next occasion and to see and make the acquaintance of the old "Sadhu," unless someone else brings him to book in the meantime.

WARTS.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE INDIAN FIELD."

SIR,—Can you tell me of anything that will effectually remove warts from dogs? I have a terrier slut much troubled this way, and I cannot say that much good has resulted from various treatment she has undergone.

CANIS.

[The following might be tried :—
Common soda, dissolved in water, as much soda as the water will dissolve, applied two or three times a week, or oftener, if desired. The warts will soon begin to scale off. Keep up the applications, and the wart will gradually disappear. Kerosine will accomplish the same result.—ED.]

ARDATH TOBACCO COMPANY.

No more than some three or four years have elapsed since their large new premises, a handsome building of several floors, were opened by the Ardath Tobacco Company at the corner of Worship Street and Paul Street, Finsbury. The building is of quite a model character, such essentials as light, sanitation, and the saving of labour having received the utmost consideration in its planning and equipment. One would have felt justly entitled in considering at that time that the new building would prove ample in accommodation for many years to come, notwithstanding the rapid growth which has always characterised the Ardath business. Such prognostications, however, if they were made, have already been falsified, for the company have now been forced to make further extensions of their premises.

The "State Express" cigarette has reached such a large sale in the home market, as well as in export quarters, that the manufacturers have been obliged to add to their existing building the large block adjoining, numbered 39 and 41, which will be joined up to the present building, and thoroughly equipped on modern principles. The extension is largely rendered necessary by the fact that a new brand of "State Express" cigarettes is now also being manufactured of Turkish leaf tobacco. There are, of course, only two kinds of cigarettes made, those manufactured of Virginia Leaf grown in America and those manufactured from Turkish leaf grown in Turkey. Any others are named merely according to their place of manufacture. The Ardath Tobacco Company have made large purchases of the very best growths of Turkish leaf from various provinces of Turkey. They have invested a large amount of capital in this business, and find themselves in possession of sufficient tobacco of the finest grades to enable them to maintain an Oriental cigarette of standard quality as well as any manufacturer in existence.

The original "State Express" cigarette is known as "State Express 555 Virginia." The new one is called "State Express Turkish Leaf No. 1," and is being sold to the consumer at 6s. per 100, at which price it will be difficult to beat in quality and value.

Referring again to the question of the origin of different types of cigarettes, it is interesting to recall the fact that the only revenue collected in Egypt (and contributed by the English consumer) is 4s. per kilo on tobacco, which has to be imported, since no tobacco is allowed to be grown in any part of Egypt. The regulation is enforced by the Egyptian representative of the British Government, in order to provide adequate revenue for administrative purposes, and is rendered necessary by the great reductions effected in general taxation since the British occupation. Now, the Egyptian cigarette manufacturer only receives 2s. per kilo drawback, and, consequently, on a cigarette weighing 2 kilos per 1,000 (equivalent to 4lb. 6oz. English) he loses 4s. 9d.—a palpable disadvantage, in addition to which he has to pay 8 per cent. duty on every article he has to import for packing, labelling, etc., which is not returned to him. The wages paid for cigarette rolling are exactly the same in Cairo as in London, and it therefore follows that a cigarette of relatively the same value can be made considerably more cheaply in this country than in Egypt. The public have not been slow in recognising the superior value of the "State Express" Turkish cigarette over the imported variety.

The whole of the newly added premises will be occupied by the manufacture of "State Express Turkish Leaf No. 1," and arrangements are being made for accommodating a large number of hands for this purpose. The Ardath Tobacco Company have had a record year, and were quite unable to fill all the orders received for Christmas trade, although every nerve was strained, and home orders were only executed by holding over export orders, which could not be sent in the respective steamers for which the firm had instructions. This is certainly a happy position to be in, and may be regarded as the outcome of the public appreciation all the world over of the high quality and sound value of the Ardath productions.

For ten years I had suffered acutely from Gout, and life had lost its attraction, owing to the uncertainty of health and the sudden visitation of the enemy, which prostrated me for months or weeks, according to the virulence of the attacks.

MR. ROCKEFELLER, who is almost as insistent upon publicity as Mr. G. B. Shaw, has been telling the public that he gets up at 6 A.M., breakfasts at 7-30, lunches at 1 o'clock, dines at 6, and goes to bed at 9-30. Furthermore, that at the first meal of the day he drinks milk, that at lunch he drinks milk, and that at dinner he drinks still more milk. And thus he pursues his peculiarly uninteresting milky way.

THE late Lord Burton was wont to say that only once during the course of his lifetime had he tasted the famous ale which brought him his wealth. The occasion was when the Prince and Princess of Wales paid a visit to the big brewery, and a hogshead of "Bass," which had been brewed when the Prince was a boy, was tapped with much ceremony. Everyone tasted the brew, and Lord Burton, for the first and last time, put his lips to a glass of his own or anyone else's ale.

Sport in England.

LONDON, Friday, 12th February 1909.

SANDOWN.

DIFFERENT opinions were expressed about the wind at Sandown last Friday, the young, hardy brigade voting it an exhilarating breeze, but older people, on whom the English climate had developed various ills, would rather have been without it. The gale, however, put the course into splendid condition, and had it only blown from the rear of the stands, instead of right into the teeth of spectators, there would not have been much to complain about. Sportsmen, after their enforced retirement, are getting into swing again, and the attendance, which included several notabilites in the word of sport, was a strong one, the cheaper rings being crammed, while the charter was well kept up in Tattersall's and the member's enclosure. A few flakes of snow were mingled with rain at Birmingham on Tuesday morning, but the temperature did not long hang in the balance, and by the time set for a move to the course, it was raining in a style that suggested a regular wet day. The going, however, did not get much the heavier for the regular thaw, and, as usual, was good for the jumping game. With the weather in such doubtful case, the attendance was moderate compared with the previous day's good muster, and as was the case on Monday, the fog gathered thickly, and spoilt a bright, clear light after the second race had been run. Do you realise the immense importance of the unique superiority of Odol? While all other preparations for cleansing the mouth and teeth are effective only during the few moments of application, the antiseptic and refreshing power of Odol continues gently but persistently for hours afterwards. Odol penetrates the interstices of the teeth and the mucous membrane of the mouth, to a certain extent impregnating them, and thus securing a safeguard and preservative for the teeth such as no other dentifrice can provide, not even approximately.

A more moist and unpleasant morning than that experienced at Oadby yesterday could hardly be conceived. Flat, stale, and unprofitable it was to the deadliest degree, heavy flakes of snow darkening the air, and covering the course and the open country, but melting into slush as it touched the greasy pavements of Leicester, and the roads were quickly three inches deep in mud. There was no silver lining either to the cloud, as when it did not snow, it rained, and a lull between twelve and one o'clock only flattered to deceive, the charter being kept up to the bitter end. It was also bitterly cold, and for once we English merited the Continental reproach of taking our pleasures sadly. The attendance, as might be expected, was but scanty, while the course was sticky to a degree; but a redeeming feature of the day was the excellent light, which gave a good view of the racing after the mirk and mist of Wednesday and with fields averaging fairly well, some good sport was enjoyed. FOOTBALL.

ASSOCIATION RULES.

APART from the capital game played by Tottenham Hotspur against Fulham and the performance of West Ham United in drawing at Leeds, London clubs cut a rather disappointing figure in the Cup ties on Saturday. Chelsea and Brentford, as well as Fulham, were knocked out of the competition, Crystal Palace, on their own ground, failed to overcome Burnley, and Woolwich Arsenal and Millwall showed only moderate form in a draw at Plumstead. Thus while either the Arsenal or Millwall must qualify for the third round Tottenham Hotspur stand as the only metropolitan team that have so far gained that distinction. If however, only a meagre share of success attended the London organisations, not one of them sustained a severe defeat. Chelsea, with their right wing reconstructed, although two goals down at the interval, ran Blackburn Rovers to a goal at Blackburn, Brentford were beaten by a no more than 1 to 0 at Nottingham, and West Ham United gained the lead at Leeds half an hour from the start and retained it until the last few minutes.

The round furnished comparatively little in the way of surprises, except for the difficulty which some clubs, apparently assured of success, experienced in winning; but Norwich City accomplished a startling performance in beating Liverpool in the Anfield-road enclosure. The Norwich team, having met Reading three times before emerging from the first stage of the competition, were expected to meet with a severe defeat from their First League opponents, but, awarded a penalty, they scored the only goal of the first half, and though Liverpool subsequently twice got on level terms, Norwich pulled through by 3 to 2. Indeed, so far from having a heavy score piled up against them, Norwich enjoyed the distinction of obtaining more goals than any other club taking part in the Cup competition this day. Their remarkable win recalls the fact that last season they upset all anticipations by knocking out Sheffield Wednesday—the holders of the Cup—in the opening round. As it happened, they went no further in the struggle, Fulham disposing of them in the second round.

Tottenham Hotspur had to fight hard all the way to get through against Fulham, but they worked with splendid dash and energy and thoroughly deserved their success—narrow as it was. Fulham repelled their attacks time after time, and Hotspur, never sparing themselves, it seemed quite possible, when half time arrived without any score, that Fulham might win, but so far from the Tottenham men relaxing their efforts the early portion of the second half showed Hotspur even more dashing than before. Midway in the latter part of the game the exertions undergone began to tell somewhat, but by that time Tottenham had obtained their goal and could devote their energies to retaining the lead. Fulham wanted more combination forward, but the stoutness of their defence kept the game always interesting. The Hotspur forwards, if obviously very anxious in some instances, showed football of a high order, the halves came through the ordeal creditably, and Burton tackled and kicked admirably, while Coquet atoned for faulty kicking by his unfailing pluck and energy.

From the very moderate display the Crystal Palace team gave it is charitable to assume that they had not recovered from their tremendous struggle with the Cup-holders little more than a fortnight ago. Collins, still incapacitated by an injury sustained in the great victory over Wolverhampton Wanderers, could not play, but Burnley seemed to present an easy task after the previous ordeal. Expectations of a win look like being realised when the Palace monopolised the attacking, and Woodger put in some splendid long centres, but the inside forwards never played in convincing style and chief merit on the side belonged to the defence. Burnley scarcely made any pretence at combination, and energy afforded no excuse for the absence of skill. For some reason both teams played badly, and, to all appearances, took matters easily. Halves and fullbacks often missed their kicks, and yet worst blunders never brought disaster.

A great crowd at Plumstead saw a good first half and a hard, desperately-fought second half, with honours divided between the Arsenal and Millwall. The Woolwich Club have but a moderate Cup record, and this season they are not rising above their average. To beat Croydon Common was a difficult matter and a draw against Millwall, when enjoying the advantage of playing at home, does not promise well for a further advance in the competition. Milwall's robust game was the kind to upset the Arsenal, usually noted for cleverness. Fortunately the Arsenal maintained their form long enough to rob their visitors of the lead; but they could do no more, and they must improve if they are to win the replay. Millwall do not change their methods whatever the personnel of the team. They play in the same fast, go-ahead style as when they reached the semi-finals several seasons ago, and these methods pay against any but the most resourceful sides.

HOTSPURS vs. FULHAM.—After a bright and very interesting game Tottenham Hotspur beat Fulham at Tottenham and qualified for the third round of the national trophy. The greatest enthusiasm has been aroused in North and West London over the match, and despite the fact that the admission had been raised to a shilling, there were nearly 40,000 people on the ground when the play began. Both sides had been in special training at the seaside and arrived in town yesterday morning, driving straight to the ground, and both sides were at full strength. The Hotspur were splendidly served by their halfbacks, Morris, Steel, and Darnell, and Woodward at centre forward was the most brilliant player on the field He led his men splendidly, and most of the dangerous attacking movements came from his initiation. Walton on the right wing was also in excellent form. The Fulham backs, Sharp and Charlton, and particularly the latter, were splendid, and Fyer did a man's work in goal. The Fulham forwards, never together as a line, were not often dangerous, and when they did get through the halves, Burton and Coquet usually held them comfortably, with the result that Hewitson in goal had little to do. Play in the first half generally went in favour of the Hotspurs, but the forwards were given little scope for shooting close in to goal, and Fryer made a couple of magnificent saves from Minter and Woodward. He also had to give away a good number of corners. Now and again Fulham broke through, but Lipsham and Millington were the most dangerous forwards in these attacks, Hewitson having difficulty in clearing once from Lipsham. Tottenham continued to attack in the early stages of the second half, and after several corners had been forced Steel scored from one of them. Fulham subsequently made desperate efforts to equalise, and play was very exciting. Both goals were frequently threatened, but nothing more was scored. Hotspurs, 1: Fulham, 0.

BLACKBURN ROVERS vs. CHELSEA.—Glorious springlike weather favoured this tie at Blackburn, which attracted an attendance of 30,000 spectators. The Rovers were expected to give a good account of themselves, the side having beaten Notts County at Trent Bridge by one goal to nothing, while Chelsea were only able to reach the second round after a drawn game at Hull. Chelsea were unfortunate in having to dispense with the services of Brawn, McRoberts, and Kennedy, who were on the injured list, but the Rovers were able to rely upon the team which drew in the League match at Sheffield the week before. The ground was in excellent order and the game opened in brisk fashion, the Rovers settling down to a wide, open game, which suited their methods and putting in a lot of aggressive work which taxed the Chelsea defence to the utmost. At the end of fourteen minutes Cameron opened the scoring for the Rovers. An exciting incident was witnessed shortly after this. The ball was centred from the right wing, and the Rovers' goalkeeper, rushing out to save, slipped at the critical moment. With the ball at his feet, Windridge should have scored an easy goal, but, owing probably to over-anxiety, he shot over the bar. Five minutes before the interval Latheron, from a pass by Cameron, scored the second goal for the home side, and at half-time the Rovers led by two goals to none. Early in the second half a foul by Chapman on Windridge resulted in Chelsea initiating a dangerous attack. Hilsdon got possession, and, with a fast, low shot, beat Ascroft at the second attempt, and scored for Chelsea. At the other end Whitley saved magnificently from Chapman. The closing stages were most exciting. The Rovers gave nothing away, but Chelsea never relaxed their efforts to get on terms until the whistle went. Blackburn Rovers, 2; Chelsea, 1.

NEWCASTLE UNITED vs. BLACKPOOL.—At Newcastle, before thirtyfive thousand people. The United started fairly well and showed good combination. Fiske was called upon early to save. Blackpool set up a strong defence, and at length attacked in spirited style. Their forwards played with plenty of dash, and after a quarter of an hour Weston, the centre-forward, scored with a good shot. The goal was the outcome of a splendid centre by Baddeley. After half an hour's play Howie equalised for Newcastle, who continued to press, but Fiske gave as fine an exhibition of goalkeeping as has ever been seen at St. James' Park. Beare and Baddeley formed an excellent wing, and the United were held well in check. At the interval the score stood at one goal each. The football in the second half was more dashing than before. Blackpool continued to play a clever game, and lost nothing by hesitation. At length the United asserted their superiority, and Rutherford gave them the lead, this proving the limit of the scoring. Gardiner was injured and had to be removed on a stretcher. Newcastle United, 2; Blackpool, 1.

PORTSMOUTH vs. SHEFFIELD.—Portsmouth's Cup Tie at Fratton Park with Sheffield Wednesday aroused great interest, the accommodation of the ground being fully tested by a crowd numbering about 30,000. The game opened at a fine pace, and at the outset there was little to choose between the sides, neither goalkeeper being tested for some time. Bradshaw was early prominent among the Sheffield forwards, and once had MacDonald in trouble. Chapman, with the Portsmouth goal at his mercy, shot wide. The pace was fully kept up, and there were many exciting incidents before half an hour after the kick-off. Portsmouth obtained the first goal. Kirby got the ball near the touch line, and, after tricking Burton, passed to Dix, who shot through. McConnell should have cleared, but the missed his kick. The second half opened with some sensational play, for after two minutes Dix brought off a splendid run down the centre, and centring right into the goal-mouth enabled Kirby to shoot through before Lyall could get to the ball. Now two goals behind, Sheffield Wednesday played up with desperate energy, and McDonald had to save a fine shot by Lloyd, and once Portsmouth only just managed to clear after a prolonged scrimmage in their goal-mouth. Eight minutes from the end Tummon scored for Sheffield from a corner, and just as the whilstle blew the same player shot a second goal from a free kick. Portsmouth, 2; Sheffield Wednesday, 2.

MANCHESTER UNITED vs. EVERTON.—At Manchester, before forty thousand spectators. The early exchanges were not of an exciting character, neither goalkeeper being troubled in the first ten minutes. Then Sharp and Coleman gave the home defenders an anxious time, but Taylor shot wildly over the bar. It was a most evenly contested struggle, first one side and then the other appearing to have the upper hand. At the end of forty minutes some good work by the two Turnbulls enabled Halse to get in a splendid cross drive which put the United ahead, the shot giving Scott no chance of saving. In the second half the United did most of the attacking, but the chief feature of the play on both sides was the excellence of the defence. Ten minutes from the end Everton had a good chance of equalising. Sharp made a splendid opening for himself but struck the outside of the net. A hot attack on the United' goal was repulsed, the defence of the home side reaching a high standard of excellence. Nothing further was scored. Manchester United, 1; Everton, 0.

LEAGUE—DIVISION I.

SHEFFIELD UNITED vs. ASTON VILLA.—These sides met in spring-like weather at Bramall lane before about 15,000 people. At the start the play was devoid of interest, neither side becoming dangerous for some time. Then, however, Aston Villa pressed, and Hampton scored after twenty minutes. After this the United took up the attack, but the Villa were playing the better football, and had the best of the game. Then, however, matters underwent a complete change. The United broke away and Evans equalised. A little later Evans put the United ahead, and before the interval he got through again. In this way Sheffield United crossed over with a lead of three goals to one. During the second half the play ruled fairly even, first one side and then the other pressing, but the defences held out and nothing more was scored. Sheffield United, 3; Aston Villa, 1.

SOUTHERN LEAGUE.

LEYTON vs. SOUTHAMPTON.—There was a crowd estimated at between 6,000 and 7,000 at Leyton to witness this game, and they were treated to a lively and well-contested game. The home defence was weakened by the absence of Meredith, whose place at back was but indifferently field, while Southampton played one forward short after the interval to the end of the game. At the outset Leyton took the game in hand, and after threatening danger several times Mayo put them one up in curious fashion. This speedy winger swung the ball across and Renneville shot, bringing Lock to the

HOW GREAT MEN RECOUP THEIR ENERGIES.

SOME STRIKING TESTIMONY.

Eminent men are the authoritative exponents of a nation's thought. Their views, given with the sense of responsibility which rests upon those who mould public opinion, must command the most earnest attention. When the subject for consideration is the creation and preservation of those physical and mental attributes which so largely enter into the sum total of human success, then, surely, the opinions of those who have risen to the proud position of leaders of men will be all-convincing.

The unanimity with which the most distinguished personages proclaim Sanatogen to be the ideal tonic food remedy, affords striking evidence of the high esteem in which Sanatogen is held as a restorative and a tonic.

Sanatogen is proclaimed as being the most powerful restorative known for renewing and sustaining the vigour of health. When run down and in conditions of lassitude, nervousness, metal inertness, as well as debility, and all the ills foreshadowed by that danger signal depression, Sanatogen is unrivalled. It speedily and permanently restores that buoyancy and elasticity which are the very essence of well-being.

Sir Gilbert Parker, equally famous as a gifted author and an intrepid traveller, is full of enthusiastic praise:

"20, Carlton House Terrace.

"I have used Sanatogen with extraordinary benefit. It is to my mind a true food tonic, feeding the nerves, increasing the energy, and giving fresh vigour to the overworked body and mind."

Gilbert Parker

Sir John Hare gives us a peep into the means employed to sustain the wonderful vitality which is one of his distinguishing characteristics:

"Upper Berkeley Street.

"I have found Sanatogen a most valuable tonic and stimulant during a period when I had to work very hard under conditions of great weakness and ill-health."

John Hare

Lord Sutherland Gower, the creator of the noble Shakespearian memorial at Stratford-on-Avon, says of Sanatogen:

"Hammerfield, Penshurst, Kent.

"I feel it only due to the benefit conferred on my general health by Sanatogen to write to inform those interested in that wonderful medicine that in a couple of months' time it has cured me of all gouty trouble. Sanatogen has done me far more good than all the waters of Bath and Harrogate."

Ronald Sutherland Gower

The Venerable Archdeacon Sinclair expresses his opinion as follows:

"The Chapter House,
St. Paul's Cathedral,
London, E.C.

"Sanatogen appears to be an admirable food for invalids and those who suffer from indigestion."

William Sinclair

Madame Sarah Grand, the gifted authoress of "The Heavenly Twins," says she has found in Sanatogen renewed vigour of body and brain.

"Grove Hill.

"Sanatogen has done everything for me which it is said to be able to do for cases of nervous debility and exhaustion. I began to take it after nearly four years enforced idleness from extreme debility, and felt the benefit almost immediately. And now, after taking it steadily three times a day for twelve weeks, I find myself able to enjoy both work and play again, and also able to do as much of both as I ever did."

Sarah Grand

Conclusive proof is forthcoming also in the testimony of over 9,000 physicians as to the superlative merits of Sanatogen as the ideal tonic food remedy.

Amongst the many who have written in praise of Sanatogen, Dr. Andrew Wilson expresses golden opinions in that striking publication, "The Art of Living," a copy of which will be sent gratis and post free on forwarding name and address to Messrs. Smith, Stanistreet and Co., Calcutta, mentioning the Indian Field.

Sanatogen is sold by all chemists, etc., throughout India.

ground at full length. The ball was on the line, and Seeburg, who rushed in, kicked over it, but Mayo darted across before Lock could recover and got the ball into the net. A fine run and well-judged shot by Hodgkinson made the scores equal, but before the interval Lock fisted a shot from Nicholls to the feet of Mayo, who thus recovered the lead for his side, which was held to the interval. Within five minutes of the restart Whitbourne, in the Leyton goal, made a similar blunder, throwing the ball, which he took from Bainbridge's shot, out to Hodgkinson, and the latter sent in a successful hot shot. Leyton had more of the play after this, but they failed to again secure the lead, and a well-contested, enjoyable game ended in a draw. Leyton, 2; Southampton, 2

CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY vs. CASUALS.—In an interesting game at Cambridge the Light Blues were defeated by two goals to one. The Casuals showed good form at the outset, and within the first twenty minutes Vann and Pink scored for them. Then however, they lost Wright, who injured his ankle, and before half-time Squire scored for Cambridge. After ends had been changed Cambridge University did most of the attacking, but they could not get through again. They tried a new goalkeeper named Hopewell but he was not a success. Casuals, 2; Cambridge University, 1.

OXFORD UNIVERSITY vs. NORSEMEN.—In this match at Oxford the University team, although Appleton, Braddell, Pears, and Berry were all away, proved too strong for the Norsemen, the game ending in a victory for the Dark Blues by three goals to none. In the first half Vidal, an Old Malverian who was being given a trial, scored, and Raynor also got through. After crossing over the Norsemen showed better form but their shooting lacked strength and direction. Hain added another goal, and Oxford University won easily. Oxford University, 3; Norsemen, 0.

THE GAME IN SCOTLAND.

Some good and exciting play was witnessed in the second round of the Scottish Cup on Saturday, and as a result Edinburgh, Aberdeen, and Motherwell are without a representative in the third round. The weather throughout Scotland was ideal, and the tie of the round at Dundee, between the local club and Rangers, brought out a record crowd for Dens Park—28,000, with drawings £778. Considering that on the same ground three weeks ago Rangers were defeated in a League game by 4 goals to nothing, the Glasgow team accomplished a great performance in drawing, and Dundee's chances in the replay at Ibrox are considered small. It was a game in which Dundee were superior in the first half and Rangers in the second, and chief credit for the draw was due to the fine defence of the Ibrox team's young backs, Law and Craig, and Rennie in goal, the old Internationalist saving grandly throughout.

Considering Aberdeen had beaten 3rd Lanark in a League game at Aberdeen recently by 6 goals to 1, the result of the Cup tie may seem surprising, but on the play the Galsgow men in winning by 4 to 1 got no more than they deserved. Aberdeen's display was disappointing, and from beginning to end they never got a chance. Niblo, in the centre, failed to combine with his wings, and kept the ball too much to himself.

Both Edinburgh clubs went down after making plucky struggles, and against Airdrieonians the Hearts forwards failed them, and it was only as long as Walker lasted the pace that the Hearts looked like scoring. Otherwise the forwards shot wretchedly, and showed poor ideas of combination. Hibernians gave Clyde a much harder struggle than the Shawfield club expected, but, as has been the case most of the season, it was Clyde's backs and halves that pulled them through. The winning goal was scored fifty-five seconds after the start.

Against Falkirk, Motherwell played Rob McFarlane, the old Aberdeen-Middlesbrough goalkeeper, and although he did well, Falkirk won because of better stamina, being a goal down at the interval, but getting three in the last twenty minutes of the game—all through Simpson.

Queen's Park gave one of their best displays of the season against Partick Thistle, the work of the forwards in the first half being delightful. It was in this half that all the scoring was done. Paul having two goals and McColl one from a penalty. St. Mirren had no trouble with Beith, and won easily; while Celtic's victory over Port Glasgow Athletic was equally easy, the feature of the game being the two goals scored by Celtic's left half, Hay.

RUGBY RULES.

THERE was quite a dramatic finish to an otherwise moderate game at Inverleith on Saturday. Less than ten minutes from the finish Scotland led by three points, and looked to have the match in hand. An unexpected chance turned up for Wales, and their backs promptly seized upon it. It was after depriving Scotland of their lead that Wales came within an ace of losing the match, Simpson crossing their line and being forced into touch just in time. It was a desperately near thing, and on the whole Scotland were rather unlucky to lose. It was a case of the turn of the luck in the final stages, but the Scotchmen had had their chances earlier, and, thanks to the superiority of their forwards, Scotland during the greater part of the second half kept the games in their opponents' half, and were three or four times dangerously near the Welsh defence. At the same time it cannot be said that the Scotch attack was conducted with sufficient precision. The centres, Gilray and Angus, were usually out of position, standing up too close, and as a consequence the ball travelled rather strongly to the wings. Martin, however, did well on three or four occasions, but there was a lack of finish about their attack. The Welsh backs were only a little better, but they rose to the final chance that came to them, their accurate passing on that occasion easily breaking through the Scotch defence. The play for the most part was a trifle dull, with only occasional moments of excitement. This was largely due to the game being mainly confined to the forwards. Of course, as Scotland held the advantage at that point, they naturally strove to make the most of it. Their superiority, however, was hardly enough to turn the game, as the Welsh front rank made a rare good fight of it. However, the latter could not obtain the ball with any frequency, and on the other hand the Scotch scrummagers did not heel very much, concentrating their energies in wheeling and going on with footwork. The Welsh defence kept very steady in some trying circumstances, and there is no doubt that Welsh backs do now defend more strenuously than in some former years. At all events, it was equal to the occasion on Saturday, and the Welsh backs deserve every credit for the brilliant effort which enabled them to pull the match out of the fire. The weakness of Scotland was at three-quarters, particularly in the centre. Their backs could not complain of want of opportunities. They had them, and, mainly because their formation was all wrong, or very rarely right, they failed to score.

SCOTLAND vs. WALES.—The twenty-fifth match between the Rugby representatives of Scotland and Wales was played on the Inverleith ground, Edinburgh. Of the previous games Scotland had won thirteen to Wales's ten, and one had been drawn. The conditions were entirely favourable to a good game, the ground being in fair order, and there was an absence of wind. The sun shone, and altogether the afternoon was a pleasant one. The Scottish fifteen took the field as originally selected, as also did the Welsh, with the exception that Jones and Owen played at half, as had been previously announced, in the places of Bush and Vile. The match aroused the usual interest in Scotch Rugby circles, and there was a large contingent from Wales. The ground looked crowded, and the attendance probably reached 20,000. The game was started just after three, Wales kicking off against the sun, which, however, was scarcely bright enough to seriously bother the players. Martin misfielded the kick, and the first scrum was formed in the Scottish 25, Schulze saving the situation. The home forwards gained a little ground and reached the centre, where a penalty was given against Scotland, but Wales gained nothing from the kick, Gilray returning into touch near the centre. By hard kicking and following up the Scotch forwards reached their opponents' quaters, Bancroft making a poor kick. It was now evident that the turf was rather heavier than had been suspected. A good kick into touch by Bancroft enabled Wales to reach the centre, and a free kick further helped them, but a free kick well taken by Gilray enabled Scotland to more than regain their ground. After another free kick which, however, did not help them much the Scotch backs attempted a round of passing, but were rather slow, and in turn Gilray and Simpson were collared.

The game was now in the Welsh 25, and Angus had a good chance, but instead of passing to Martin on his right he kicked across, and Wales, with the assistance of a free kick, worked to the centre. The Scottish forwards were a trifle the stronger, but J. P. Jones broke through. He passed forward, but Trew found touch in the Scottish 25, and with a rush the Welsh forwards reached the home goal line. A free kick, however, helped Scotland out of an awkward position, getting past the 25 line. A free kick directly afterwards did not assist them much, and from his own mark Bancroft, with a fine kick, round touch near the Scotch 25. Again the struggle went on dangerously near the Scottish line, but Bancroft was collared before he could get in his kick, and was penalised for not playing the ball. The Scotch forwards made another rush and took the ball past the centre, and Bancroft once more had not time to get in his kick. The Welsh passing broke down, but without causing any mischief. So far the play had been mainly confined to the forwards, and had not presented any attractive feature.

A poor cross kick by Martin lost Scotland some ground, but Schulze regained it with a capital kick which found touch. Owen and Gilray came into collision with a tremendous impact, but while the former was able to resume Gilray, who seemed stunned, was removed to the touch line. Then from a drop at goal by Schulze Wales touched down and the play was continued in the Welsh half, the Scottish forwards doing good work. Then J. P. Jones broke through but passed too soon to Williams, who was collared. A blunder by Martin nearly let in Wales, but Tennent touched down just in time. The game was resumed at the centre and some kicking took place between the backs without any definite advantage to either side. J. P. Jones was nearly through again, but the Scotch tackling was sound. The Scotch forwards looked like dribbling away, but Baker stopped the rush but the Welsh 25 line was reached. Then Angus held too long and lost an opportunity of opening up the game for Martin, and Wales reached the centre by hard kicking. Another delay was caused by an injury to Scott, but the player was able to resume. Trew made a dreadful pass; but J. P. Jones saved the situation. Half-time:—

Gilray returned to the field after the interval and the game opened in the Welsh 25 though the visitors being penalised for off-side play. This was not by any means the only penalty, but the kicks did not produce anything, Angus on one occasion making a very poor shot at goal. Schulze maintained Scotland's position by a good kick into touch, and then came a burst by the Scotch backs and Martin nearly reached the Welsh line before being collared by Williams and Bancroft; a free kick helped Wales to reach the centre and the play remained in midfield for some time, being mostly amongst the forwards. Then came another bout of passing by the Scotch right wing and Martin cross-kicked, but Wales saved themselves. Directly afterwards Angus found touch close to the Welsh goal line and Wales, being again penalised, Cunningham kicked a fine goal ten minutes after the resumption. Soon afterwards there was a clever bout of passing by the Welsh backs, but Baker could not get through and his cross-kick led to nothing. A free kick to Scotland did not prove any advantage, being poorly taken by Angus. The play was now in the Scotch 25, but Tennent, beating Owen, dribbled past the centre. Then Martin broke away, but was collared by Bancroft, and then in some loose play Simpson nearly scored, Wales touching down and having a lucky escape. Again the play was removed to the centre, and Bancroft gained some ground for Wales by a good kick. Once more the Welsh passing broke down, Baker being tackled by Simpson, and the play was once more taken into the Welsh half. A long dribble by the Welsh forwards did not quite come off, and Schulze replied with a kick into touch at the centre. The Scotch forwards brought off a capital rush, and Bancroft was tackled before he could get in his kick. They escaped, but some useful play by Simpson once more took the play near to the Welsh line. The struggle was now very keen, and Gilray looked to have a fine chance of making a good opening for the Scotch right wing but his pass, a lofty one, was intercepted by Williams. Bancroft cleared with a long kick, which Schulze failed to field. Then Tennent looked to be clear, but unwisely kicked instead of running on, but Scotland reached their opponents' quarters. A few minutes before the close Trew scored a try for Wales, and Bancroft converted with a good shot. After this Scotland made a desperate effort, but Simpson was forced into touch in goal, and Cunningham failed at goal from a penalty against Wales. Scotland had very hard luck. The result was:—

Wales	... 1 goal.
Scotland	... 1 penalty goal.

COUNTY CHAMPIONSHIP.

YORKSHIRE vs. CUMBERLAND.—Delightfully fine weather favoured the meeting of these counties at Harrogate. Robotson played in place of Eddison for Yorkshire and Davidson and Thompson appeared for Cumberland instead of Banks and Ewbank. There were about a thousand spectators. In the early stages of the game Cumberland had the advantage. Thompson scored for them, Gardner failing at the place kick. The Cumberland forwards were playing a capital game and their backs tackled well. After change of ends Cumberland for some time were pinned in their own twenty-five, but at length they came away with a rush, only to be stopped by King, of Headingley, who played a brilliant game. Yorkshire were doing nearly all the pressing in this half, but they failed to make the most of their chances. Towards the finish Cumberland attacked strongly, but were unable to add to their score. Cumberland, 1 try; Yorkshire, 0.

DURHAM vs. LANCASHIRE.—The meeting of these counties in the Northern Division of the championship competition attracted 4,000 people to the Durham ground. Play ruled even at starting, but at length some smart passing between the Durham backs ended in Neilson gaining a try. The place-kick failed in this instance. A little later, however, Taylor converted a try by Phillips, and after some temporary pressure by Lancashire Taylor scored. Thus at the interval Durham led by a goal and two tries to nothing. On crossing over the game still went in favour of the home team. Watson, crossing the Lancashire line, Taylor failed to improve, and Chapman was also unsuccessful in an endeavour to convert a try by Johnson. Although thus badly beaten Lancashire struggled on, and before the end arrived Schofield scored for them. This place-kick also failed, so the match terminated in a victory for Durham by 17 points to 3. Durham, 1 goal 4 tries; Lancashire, 1 try.

LONDON WELSH vs. OXFORD UNIVERSITY.—At West Ham. The London Welsh had a fairly strong side out for this match but the Dark Blues were very weakly represented, having four of their team in Scotland and several on the injured list. However, matters were made somewhat more even by the fact that early in the game Evans was injured and took no further part in the play. From the outset the home side by means of good back play gave the visitors a lot of trouble, and as the game progressed so the Welshmen improved. In fact, the Dark Blues rarely became dangerous, their backs being very weak. On the other hand, the Welshmen's rear division was always conspicuous, Maddocks in particular showing up prominently, while Harding, who went full back after a short time, relieved occasional rushes with fine touch kicking. Rowbotham also did well in that department for Oxford, and B. Rands kicked three splendid penalty goals, one from near the half-way line. At the interval the London Welsh had a lead of 14 points—Maddocks (2), J. F. Williams and T. R. Jenkins scoring tries, and Harding goaling once. In the second half the Welshmen did pretty much as they liked, and Maddocks (3), Jenkins (2) scored further tries, while Richards goaled on three occasions. Vivian also scored a fine dropped goal; and the Dark Blues retired with their heaviest defeat of the season. Welsh, 5 goals (1 dropped) 5 tries; Oxford 0, penalty goals.

RICHMOND vs. ROSSLYN PARK.—There was a keen game at Richmond, and Rosslyn Park gave their opponents a much harder fight for it than the scores suggest. For the greater part of the opening half, they played a man short, but for all that they held their own on the general turn of the game, and though the superiority of the home and three-quarter line was always evident the home team had to go all the way to win. In the opening stage of the game the Park forwards worked so well that they did most of the attacking, but still Richmond opened the scoring from their first breakaway, Watson following up a kick by Brayshaw gained their first try, and Pritchard kicked a goal. A little later Ireland ran in with another try that was not improved, and despite the good work done by the Park men, Richmond led by 8 points to 0 at half-time. Early in the second half Dixon very cleverly dropped a goal for Rosslyn Park, but though they were frequently dangerous afterwards this proved to be their solitary success. Two further tries were scored for Richmond, and as both kicks for the goal failed Richmond won the match by 14 points to 4. Richmond, 1 goal 3 tries; Rosslyn Park, 1 dropped goal.

LONDON SCOTTISH vs. CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY.—This was not by any means a great game at Richmond. Neither side was anything like at full strength but on the day they were fairly evenly matched. On both sides the forwards worked hard and there was little between them, while the tackling all round was of a distinctly high order, but the Cambridge backs had something in hand, and but for the fact that their passing broke down on several occasions at the critical moment they would probably have won decisively. The Scotsmen never spared themselves, and in the opening half they frequently threatened danger, though they never really looked like being able to get through the Light Blues defence, but Cambridge were no more successful, and when they changed over nothing had been scored. The Scotsmen did even better in the second half and several times were nearly in, but the Cantabs' defence was always equal to the occasion, while after they themselves had wasted more than one promising opening by their poor passing, Pyman and Jones made a capital run, and on Jones being tackled close to the line Pyman dashed up and scored the only try of the match. Marton took the place kick, but failed to place the goal, and thus the game ended in a win for Cambridge University by 3 points to nil. Cambridge, 1 try; Scottish, 0.

CROSS COUNTRY RUNNING.

NORTH OF THAMES CHAMPIONSHIP.—At Wembley Park on Saturday, over a distance of seven miles, the sixteenth annual championship of the North of Thames Cross-Country Association was decided. Thirty clubs had entered. These included the Essex Beagles, who won in 1907, and also then supplied, in G. M. Parkinson the first man home (and again supplied last year's individual winner in A. E. Wood), and the Polytechnic Harriers, who won in 1908, but who were precluded, under the rules, from running last year's winning six in yesterday's race, whereas, under the same rules, the Essex Beagles again had the right to put their old team in the field.

All of the thirty clubs which entered were represented, there being in all 343 runners. The weather was fine and a large number of spectators witnessed the ace. A. E. Wood, Essex Beagles, and B. C. ROWING.

UNIVERSITY CREWS PRACTICE.

OXFORD.—The state of the weather somewhat upset the president's arrangements yesterday afternoon, as the original intention was to make a trip below locks; but rain fell steadily after luncheon, and the idea was abandoned. They did some strong work over the short course instead. Under the circumstances the tub pair was not requisitioned, and they manned last year's boat shortly before 5-0, Dr. G. O. Bourne being in attendance on horseback. An alteration was made in the order, Somers-Smith, who rowed bow on Tuesday, giving way to Newman, Trinity, the original occupant of that thwart.

They headed down stream and paddled to Iffley without a break, turned, and with little delay covered the home course in one piece at 26. Having put about, they prepared for a hard row down stream, and starting at 31 they went through to the Lasher, the latter part of the distance being done at 29. After this they paddled back to the Willows, and with a brief halt pulled on to Salter's. On turning, a straightaway paddle was taken to the Lasher, after which they pulled back to the raft at 26, the whole of the work having been done without leaving the boat. Names and weights:—

CAMBRIDGE.—The result of the recent heavy work undertaken by the Light Blues is beginning to have its effect, as yesterday they were much better than on the day before, although they are still far from as good as they promised to be at the commencement of practice. Yesterday, for the first time, every member of the crew was tubbed, Mr. Wauchope advising Thomson and Kitching, and Williams and Rosher in the morning, and Hornidge and Arbuthnot, and Stuart and Fairbairn after lunch.

Getting away at three o'clock, the crew paddled to the Lode and Eel, and then on to Baitsbite at 24, indulging in occasional very short bursts for rowing at 28 and 29. Having swung round at the locks, they drew up alongside the bank, disembarked, and ran for five or ten minutes. Taking up their positions again, they pulled to Ditton Corner, when they stripped (with the exception of the president at bow), and rowed to the Railway Bridge at an average of 31 all over. The rowing was much cleaner, although No. 4 washed out badly, whilst the rhythm was also better. After this they took matters lightly back to headquarters. Mr. Wauchope coached. Names and weights:—

Hunting.

THE BOMBAY HUNT.

THERE were about four score out last Bye day on a cool, promising morning. How deceptive scent is, however, has often been proved, and on this occasion sport was poor contrary to expectations. The Meet was at the Cross Roads, Melon ground, and a move was made across this bad country to the covert at Sahar Hill. From here we were soon informed of the presence of a jack and went away over rice-fields towards Vangoli. It was a circular course, the quarry set across the Romanwadi Valley, up Chuckla Hill and into the Groves. Here the first signs of the catchiness of the scent occurred when there was a long check before hounds took Pereira Hill. This led us back to the Cross Roads again, but just before reaching it hounds rolled the quarry over.

It had been a short, sharp run and the morning was yet young, but try as they would another jack was not to be found in any of the usual haunts and an adjournment was made.

PROBABLY the biggest field of our extra meets was out on Wednesday, when a long and enjoyable run was experienced, though the jack eventually made his escape. Chuckla Hill was the rendu, and a move was made along the lane into the Mango Tope in quest of the old champion we have unsuccessfully chased more than once. He was unfortunately not at home, so a move was made to the foot of Sunday Hill, and here at last hounds spoke to a scent, though only faintly. Soon, however, they were strong on it and made away into the open through the Palm Groves. This leading to good, firm grass lands a long full gallop was enjoyed till reaching the jungle. It is a jungle in the true sense, being almost impossible to penetrate, and taking in some of the worst stony hills to be met anywhere in the Salsette country. The end of it naturally was that the jack made good his escape, and the Huntsman and Whips had their work cut out to collect hounds.

THOUGH the weather was fresher on Friday, (you will notice the days were changed this week owing to social occurrences,) the probability of scent being good was not great. It, however, turned out contrary to expectations and a fair field indulged in two good runs. We met on the flats by the Jackal Club and, as usual when meeting here, the brickfield covert near Chuckla was tried. A jack breaking from here we galloped away over rice fields, but on nearing Sahar the going was very bad. This improved on entering Romanwadi Valley with its sporting jumps, and thence hounds took us into the Groves at Chuckla. Making for the railway, the quarry took a line parallel with it and attempted to hide, a ruse which met with the almost inevitable results when hounds are going strong.

Hacking back past Romanwadi to Sahar, another is put up in these woods and set his mask across the Tulsi water main to the Backwater without wasting time in the Mango Tope, he took us away in the direction of Hog's Back Hill but then turned towards the railway at Thana. Here he doubled straight back across the main road and, though this attempt to puzzle hounds was unsuccessful, finally saved his brush in the thick undergrowth at the commencement of the hills bordering Horse Shoe Valley. Though losing him, everyone was satisfied with the two runs.

The going was hard and bumpy throughout. Some thirty started in the Horse Chase which was won by Captain Jelf on Trilby, the official order being as follows:—

2. Mr. Clive on Miss Mac
3. Mrs. Walker on Night
4. Mr. Hutchison on Guardian
5. Miss Warren on Puck
6. Mr. Macrae on Griesette followed by Mr. Hilliard on Ziska, etc., etc., etc.

They talked during dinner of the Anarchic outrages, to which there seems no end. "But" dadda, what is an Anarchist?" asked little Willie. "Well, my boy," replied the father, "an Anarchist is a very violent person—always blowing somebody up, you know." The innocent child turned naturally towards his mother. "Are you an Anarchist, ma?" he asked.

"I suppose you carry a memento of some sort in that locket of yours?"

"Yes; it is a lock of my husband's hair."

"But your husband is still alive!"

"Yes, but his hair is all gone."

CRICKET IN CALCUTTA.

BALLYGUNGE C. C. vs. CAPTAIN G. H. S. FOWKES XI.—Ballygunge concluded a most successful season on Sunday last by defeating a strong military team got together by Captain Fowke and Mr R. L. Beddy by 3 runs and 2 wickets, the game being prolonged a few minutes after the agreed upon time for the drawing of stumps, in order that a definite result might be arrived at.

The military, for whom Fowke was at the last moment unable to play, had first use of an excellent wicket, the last man not being dismissed until the third century had been hoisted, the highest score made against Ballygunge for the last two or three seasons. Towards the total of 302, Bocquet contributed 54, Townend (who came over with the Bombay team last Christmas) 62, and Carr 84, Huddleston, Pelham Burn and Beddy also helping to swell the score.

The home team went in about half-past three, thus having only about 2¼ hours to get the runs, but they set about the task in such earnest that the game had only to be prolonged a few minutes to enable the few remaining runs to be obtained.

White, Frost, Guise, Dawson and Skinner all scored freely, the latter's 65 being one of the hardest hit innings seen on the Ballygunge ground this year.

For the winners Frost kept wicket splendidly, giving away only 6 byes in a total of over 300. Score :—

WINCHESTER

RIFLES SHOOT STRAIGHT AND STRONG.

The name "Winchester" on a rifle barrel is the hall-mark of straight and strong shooting. This is due to the excellence of Winchester barrels, the knowledge and experience embodied in their manufacture and the great care taken in targeting them. Every Winchester barrel is shot to test its accuracy, the distance varying according to the caliber. A corps of experts devote their entire time to this work, and before a rifle is passed it must be capable of shooting seven consecutive bulls-eyes on the standard size target for the distance shot. The proper rifling or twist to give best results with a given cartridge is determined in the same careful manner, which assures accuracy and strong shooting.

MADRAS GYMKHANA TOURNAMENT.

MADRAS GYMKHANA vs. DORSET REGIMENT.—The tournament opened on the 22nd ultimo with the match between the above teams when the Gymkhana were outclassed and eventually defeated by 4 goals to nil. Though the Dorsets did most of the attacking in the opening stages the Gymkhana forced two corners which were, however, unproductive. The Dorsets scored a goal and the play till the interval was level but slow and there was no other scoring. On changing ends the retirement of Cooper, who was injured, was a further handicap to the Gymkhana and the Dorsets registered their second point. The Gymkhana then rallied and a good run and pass by Braithwaite should have let them in but Sturrock missed. In spite of all the efforts the Gymkhana were kept busy defending for the rest of the game and Shute scoring two more goals the Dorsets won as stated Teams :—

DORSETSHIRE REGIMENT—Prestridge, goal ; Emberson and Brown, backs ; Raynor, Banbury and Raynor, half-backs ; Scott, Lieutenant Shute (Captain), Tarrant Sangar and Bonter, forwards.

GYMKHANA CLUB.—A Wernigg, goal ; P. Holt and W. H. Johnston, backs ; H C. Dibben, C. A. Scuter (Captain) and P. P. Braithwaite, half-backs ; A. S. Sturrock, K. E. Cooper, A. L. Purves, A. S. Todd and R. C. M. Strouts, forwards.

SHERWOOD FORESTERS vs. BORDER REGIMENT.—This match on the 23rd ultimo ended in a draw of one all. Replaying on the 24th another keen struggle was witnessed the Foresters eventually winning by 2 goals to nil. Both periods were unproductive and extra time had to be played. During this the Sherwoods attacked and forced a corner which was not improved upon then the Border Regiment pressed but the Foresters' defence was impregnable. At length a foul was given against the Border Regiment and the penalty kick being well centred Orange put the ball through. The Foresters scored again just before time and won as stated. Teams:—

SHERWOODS—Marsden, goal ; Doncaster, Buyford and Moss, backs ; Smith, Chesterton and Pykett, half-backs ; Smedley, Sibthorpe, Withers and Orange, forwards.

Referee :—Mr. P. P. Braithwaite.

LEICESTER REGIMENT vs. DORSET REGIMENT.—Played on the 25th ultimo, the Leicesters winning by 3 goals to 1. The Leicesters attacked but Pa tridge cleared and the Dorsets rushing down Banter drew first blood. The Leicester made great efforts to get on terms. A penalty for a foul against the Dorsets was followed by a scrimmage in front of their goal and Butler equalised with a good kick. The Dorsets then attacked and had the upperhand for a spell till Murphy got away for the Leicesters and enabled Vann to put them ahead. The Dorsets pressed for the rest of the period but without success. On changing ends they continued to attack but lost chances owing to erratic shooting. Then the Leicesters worked the ball down and obtained a corner : this was not improved upon and the Dorsets pressed once more but poor shooting and a strong defence prevented their getting on terms. At length Jackson got away and put on a third goal for the Leicesters. The Dorsets had the best of the play during the closing stages but could not score and the game ended in a win for the Leicesters by 3 goals to 1 one. Teams:—

LEICESTER REGIMENT.—Owen, goal ; Bailey and Dool, backs ; Wardle, French and Whitmore, half-backs ; Murphy, Vann, Wale, Jackson and Butler, forwards.

Final.

LEICESTERS vs. SHERWOOD FORESTERS.—The final game in the tournament was played on the Island on the 27th ultimo. The play was not as good as was expected, neither team showing good combination. The Sherwood Foresters had the best of the exchanges and won by a goal to nil. Play was fast in the first half, which ended without score. Then the Cameronians transferred play to the opposite end where the Middlesex goalkeeper did great things—keeping out all shots. On resuming after the interval a foul against the Cameronians

The Story Teller.

ON THE CROOK.

THE three men looked in at the door of the railway carriage, sized Bertie Atherton up pretty accurately, and decided to enter. They seated themselves in the three unoccupied corners of the carriage, and had another good look at Bertie.

Bertie was rather like a bird. His mouth was diminutive, but what it lacked in size was made up by his nose, which was more than usually prominent. His eyes were large, and when he opened them wide his resemblance to a bird was apparent to the least imaginative person.

He was a young man who knew a good deal of the world and its ways, and he looked upon his fellow men with just a suggestion of challenge, for he felt that he was very competent to attend to his own interests whatever anybody else might do.

People were passing and repassing the door of the carriage, so one of the men pulled down the window and filled the gap with arms akimbo to keep them out. He looked what he was, a racecourse sharper, and the people on the platform did not exactly desire to share his company. Thus when the train finally pulled out, Bertie and the three men were the only occupants of the carriage.

"I learnt something to-day that I never knew before," said one of the men at length, "how to do the three card trick. One of these rogues who practice the game wanted me to put half-a-sovereign on the card, I thought was the lady. I knew I should lose if I did, and so I made a bargain with him. 'Look here,' I said, 'I'll give you five shillings to show me how the trick is done,' and he agreed. I have not practised the trick, so I'm not certain I should be an expert at it, but I'm willing to give you gentlemen a demonstration as far as I can."

He searched in his pocket, but discovered that he had forgotten to bring any cards with him. This deficiency was made good by the man sitting opposite Bertie, and the demonstrator of the trick was just about to begin when the man who had lent him the pack stopped him.

"Look here," he said, "it's an absolute impossibility for you to bring off that trick if you only got the explanation to-day and have never practised it. There's a deal of sleight of hand about it that can only come by practice, and just for a bit of sport I'll bet you a sovereign that I find the lady."

The bet was accepted, and the man who owned the cards unearthed the lady without the slightest difficulty, and pocketed his own sovereign and another which he received from the demonstrator to keep it company.

"Let this young gentleman have a go," said the man opposite Bertie.

Bertie was willing, and, pulling out a £5 note from a pocket book stuffed with duplicates of it, he waited till the three cards had been arranged by the demonstrator upon the seat.

He had watched the handling of the cards carefully, and had observed that the lady appeared to be the card to the extreme left, but Bertie knew the trick and so planked his £5 note on the middle card. It was the lady, and the demonstrator handed over five sovereigns.

"Well, I'm jiggered!" remarked that gentleman, as he thrust his hands into his pockets and looked vacantly out of the window.

By this time the train was slowing up for its first stop.

"Gentlemen," said Bertie, as he clicked the five sovereigns he had won, "I'm always open for a little bit of sport. There it was a case of this gentleman's skill against mine, but I propose that this time we should have some bet which chance and chance alone shall decide. Suppose we each stake £5 and have a guess at the number of telegraph poles on the north side of the line between this station and the next."

The three sharpers saw small opportunity in this for cheating Bertie, but, being born gamblers, they were ready for a flutter, and agreed.

Before the train started from that station Bertie made a note on a scrap of paper of the number each guessed. One man said 120, another 150 and the third 200. Bertie's guess was 247. When the guesses had been registered, the train moved off and the four men busied themselves counting the telegraph poles. 249 was found to be the exact number, and so Bertie pocketed £15 more.

He quite forgot to tell them that he had counted the number of poles on the journey down to the races.

The three sharps were now extremely anxious to recover their losses and fleece their victim of his gains without wasting any time about it, for the journey would not last for ever.

The man with the pack of cards proposed a nice quiet game of nap, but Bertie after examining the pack asserted that he quite understood the gentlemen were gentlemen, but on principle he never played cards with strangers except when they used a pack bought at a bookstall and opened for the first time before him.

The man with the cards was amenable to this proposal, and at the next station he got out, crossed over to the bookstall and bought a sporting paper which he thrust into his pocket. From another pocket he produced a pack the seal of which had been steamed up and gummed down again and every card in which had been marked with little scratches which the crooks knew how to read.

Bertie examined this pack, broke open the seal, and declared himself satisfied. As travellers may know, the cards sold at Smith's bookstalls are all of a pattern, and Bertie was quite pleased with these for they could not be distinguished from the four aces which he had hitched up his left sleeve, each ace being fixed there with a little bit of elastic and a clip.

When the train started, the game began. The sharps did not trouble to let Bertie have the usual preliminary win, for, as has been said, time was precious. But Bertie won without their permission or assistance. At the right moment he brought the most useful ace from its hiding place, slipped it in amongst the rest of his cards, and won easily. The cards were dealt again and Bertie was just on the point of slipping the ace of diamonds in amongst his when one of the sharps clutched him by the sleeve, and felt the two remaining cards through the thin cloth.

"You are a beauty," remarked the man, gazing at Bertie in open-mouthed wonder.

The man, who was sitting beside Bertie got up, and the three sharps held a little conference at the far end of the carriage. One, with more force of character than delicacy of invention, suggested that they should simply attack Bertie there and then, rob him, and make a bolt for it at the next stopping place, but the man who had so unsuccessfully demonstrated the three card trick succeeded in persuading his companions to leave the further treatment of Bertie in his hands.

"You're a fly one," he said, seating himself opposite that young gentleman. "What a lot of money you would make on the crook."

"What a lot I do make," said Bertie. "I have a playful little way of counting the telegraph poles, the number of threads on the tassel of the window strap, and little things like that. It's awfully profitable."

"It's no use our hiding it from a man like you," remarked his companion; "we three are crooks, pure and simple. You seem to be a sort of gentleman player, a successful amateur, as one might say. We were just planning a very fine coup at euchre to-night, and we badly want somebody to help us. One of my pals here can't come, and we've just agreed that if you care to take his place we'd be willing to go shares with you."

Bertie smoked his cigar in silence, luxuriating in the sensation of being a master criminal whose assistance was coveted by the lesser fry.

"I don't care if I do," he said at length. "I'll do my little bit, but I must have not a third but a half of the proceeds."

To these terms the crooks agreed, and the two who were to accompany Bertie on the card-sharping expedition, explained to him what he would have to do.

"The man we're going for is a young millionaire, who is stopping at the Savoy," said one of the men. "I was lucky enough to make friends with him, and being a champion euchre player he has challenged me to play against him for any stakes I like to name, or to bring any of my friends to play against him. Now I propose that you should play with him first. We'll see that this marked pack is used, and besides one of us will stand behind his chair and signal you his cards. Of course, you play euchre?

Bertie agreed that he was an expert.

"We can squeeze this young oof bird to any extent," continued the crook, "but he is a shrewd sort of chap, and he won't continue playing unless he wins a lot to start with. It will be necessary for us to lead him on, and so for the first few games you must play carelessly, take no notice of the marks on the backs of the cards and so make certain that he wins."

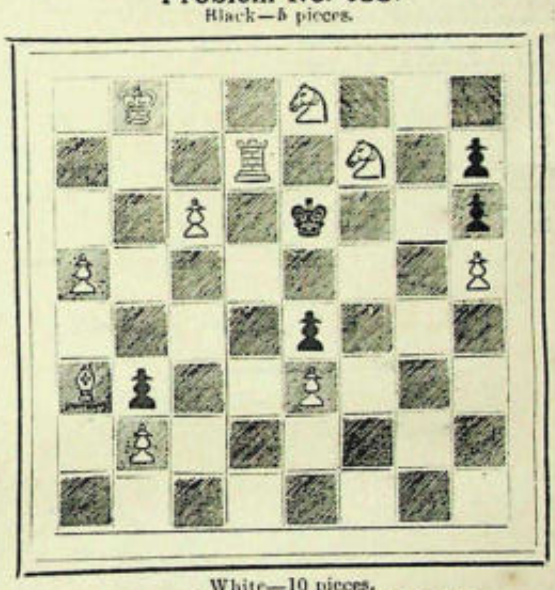
Bertie agreed to this proposal, and spent the rest of the journey learning to read the secret marks on the backs of the cards, and being instructed in the code of signals.

They dined together that evening, Bertie's education in the code being continued during the meal. Then he drove off to his rooms, changed into evening toggery, and met the two crooks at a certain public house. On being introduced to the young millionaire, Bertie was delighted to find him most affable and quite lacking in conceit. There was no waste of time over preliminaries, for the millionaire himself suggested cards. Bertie was selected as his first antagonist, and the play began.

Bertie had won about £50 at the races that day, and had brought with him £150 more from his rooms. In less than twenty minutes he had allowed the millionaire to win the £200, and then he prepared to play in earnest.

Just then the millionaire's face became drawn. His eyes closed, and he fell forward against the table. The sharp who knew him best rang the bell, and a young man who appeared to be the millionaire's valet informed the assembled gentlemen that his master was at times subject to such fainting fits and would not be able to play again that evening.

"It's very rough on you," whispered one of the crooks to Bertie, "but you will be able to play him some other evening and get your money back."



Bertie wanted to rob the millionaire there and then, but this was impossible, for his valet would not leave him, and so together with the two crooks Bertie took his departure.

The whole inwardness of the business was not borne in upon Bertie, however, until a few days later when he met the millionaire and the three sharps walking together in Regent Street. Bertie followed them for a considerable distance, and when he saw the millionaire deftly remove a lady's purse from her hand-bag he realised the bitter truth that he had been let down and that the supposed magnate was but another crook.

DEAR SIRS,—I have delayed my thanks as I wished to test the efforts of Blair's Pills by a sufficient interval of time.

For ten years I had suffered acutely from Gout, and life had lost its attraction, owing to the uncertainty of health and the sudden visitation of the enemy, which prostrated me for months or weeks, according to the virulence of the attacks.

Blair's Pills have rendered me immense service, as I no longer fear an attack of Gout.

SPORTING GUNS.

TEN years or more have passed since the invention of the system of firing double-barrelled guns by means of a single trigger, and to-day there are a great many different patterns on the market, most of which are fairly reliable, and some as infallible as a double trigger. Its advantages are many, yet, for some curious reason, it appears that the single trigger is by no means so popular as one would have expected. One cause of the single trigger's failure to become a universal favourite among shooting men is, perhaps, the fact that in many cases unreliable patterns were put on the market at the outset, and the faith of the public was shaken in the system. The ordinary gunner is not a practical man who understands the difference between the different systems of gunlocks, and so long as his gun behaves properly he does not care much how it is constructed as to its hidden interior. But he does expect it to go off when required, and not to go off when it is not required, and when he is respectively disappointed or alarmed by his gun doing what is not expected of it, he grows tired of the whole thing, and will have no more of it. Scores of men who took up the single trigger when it came out have discarded it with disgust because of its failure, and gone back to double triggers.

Every gun-maker will tell you that he has come across men of this sort, but it has not always been the fault of the gun. The fact of the matter is that the single trigger requires a change in the habit of the individual, and there are some men who lack the patience or the power to adapt themselves to something fresh even though it may be quite a simple matter in itself. The single trigger was the first alteration in guns of recent years that called for any special adaptation of the individual's habits. The breech-loader, the hammerless gun, and the ejector were improvements of a different kind, and most people were ready enough to take them up, because they obviously saved a good deal of trouble, and also, so far as the first two are concerned, made shooting safer. The advantages of the single trigger are not so readily apparent, for they are what one might call unconscious advantages. No actual trouble is saved the shooter at first sight—indeed, it is more trouble to him to remember that he has only one trigger than to put his finger unconsciously on the second as he has always been used to do. But with patience and practice he will in most cases learn the advantages of the single trigger system and may then be surprised that he did not discover them before.

Whether the automatic shot-gun lately introduced will ever catch on remains to be seen. There has always been a prejudice against any sporting weapon capable of firing more than two shots in succession. Some years ago, an enterprising firm of gun-makers brought out a four-barrel gun, but it was never a success, although well enough in all respects and well advertised. One thing against a gun of this sort is its weight, and the public in these days is ready to sacrifice a little power if it can have something a little less burdensome to carry and manipulate. Plenty of 12-bore guns are made nowadays weighing from 5lbs. to 6lbs., the charge being slightly reduced, and the days of ordinary guns which weigh 7lbs. to 7½ lbs. are certainly over. The 12-bore is also the recognised size for all-round efficiency, and a gun of that calibre with more than two barrels is bound to be unwieldy. With the repeating shot-gun, used to some extent in America, there is also the objection of weight, and, what is of more importance, balance. Balance is everything in a sporting weapon, and it stands to reason that each time a cartridge is fired out of the magazine the gun grows lighter at the butt end, and the balance is consequently destroyed. It is at the best of times a clumsy weapon, and its looks are against it. There is also the necessary movement of the sliding and ejecting mechanism between each shot, and that places the gun at a disadvantage as compared with the ordinary double barrel breech-loader. None can call it in any circumstances a handy or handsome weapon.

The automatic shot-gun is a distinct advantage over the repeater. It does automatically what in the repeating gun the shooter has to do for himself. But the matter of balance is still a difficulty, and the weight is much more than that of an ordinary shot-gun. But even supposing that some means of compensating or correcting the balance after each shot could be discovered, and the weight could be reduced without affecting the safety or utility of the weapon, what real opening is there for a sporting gun capable of discharging half-a-dozen shots in a few seconds? It might be useful very occasionally when birds are being driven over the guns in large numbers, but where coveys come singly no man wants more than a double barrel. Prejudice, too, is against every kind of magazine shot-gun, because, rightly or wrongly, it is considered unsporting in its principles, and prejudice is a very hard thing to overcome.

Sporting & Athletic Notes.

The present Calcutta racing season is rapidly approaching its end: Saturday was the 10th extra meeting and it is not at all likely that we shall have more than one other. The public are not doing too well at the finish, as only two good things came off on Saturday and both these were a question of stable profits more than that of the general public, as in neither case had the animals in question shown any form to encourage the average punter to put up his money.

Our popular and successful starter, Mr. R. G. Bates, had left Calcutta for Home before the meeting and his place was taken by Mr. Kenneth Campbell, who met with considerable success in the position and is likely to make an efficient substitute.

Mr. Boteler, the Stipendiary Steward, is also going Home after the next meeting and we are sorry to say will not be here for the Monsoons. The Stewards have asked him to come back and take up his position again next cold weather, and if he returns to India he has promised to do so: we sincerely hope that this will be the case as he can ill be spared. It is not yet definitely settled whether a substitute will be appointed during the Monsoons.

The afternoon's sport on Saturday opened with the Pony Hunters' Hurdle Race, for which a good field of eight started. Marconi was made favourite on his running in the Pony Paperchases and Loch Lily was next well backed. Marconi, however, did not run at all kindly and was all over the place. The whole field were pretty well together as they came to the last hurdle which Bandy Leg was the first to take. Mr. Williams' pony looked all over a winner after the hurdle, but Pathfinder excellently ridden by Captain Holden came very strong on the outside and succeeded in beating Bandy Leg, who does not finish any too well, by a length. Pathfinder has had so much paperchasing of late that no one, not even his owner had expected him to run anything like so well and he was on offer at the books at 10 to 1 with very few takers!

The Mediocre Plate was a peculiar race. Punt on a good gallop and following the stable money was quickly made a hot favourite at evens, and he justified this by winning easily hard held throughout by two and a half lengths. It is, however, a mystery what Little Meg could have been doing to run second only in such poor time as 1min. 18½ secs., as a fortnight before she was a very good second to Palindrome at about the same weights when the time was 1min. 16½secs., so that it would appear that the mare must have gone off or is a bit of a cock tail, though the way she has finished each of the three times she ran does not give one the latter impression. The Stewards held an enquiry about the running of Punt after the meeting, but the explanation offered was accepted as quite satisfactory, and indeed anything might win a race run in such slow time, whatever the previous performances.

The Harrington Plate was a good open race, and Singleton, Harene, Palindrome, Morsel and Marcelle were all well backed, Singleton being absolute favourite. There was a good race till near the finish when that exceedingly honest mare Marcelle came out and won pretty comfortably by two lengths from Harene.

The March Plate, 1 mile, on paper looked a most excellent thing for Golden Morn, who has made favourite at 6 to 4. The mare, however, could not get nearer than third, finishing three lengths behind Mercedes and Dirty Boy, who made a dead heat of it after a magnificent race from the distance. In the run off Dirty Boy was most liked to win, but Mercedes getting away the quicker of the two managed to stay out the other's final challenge and just got home by a head, after a magnificent struggle. Curiously enough the time for both the race and the run off was identical, being 1min. 43secs., or two fifth of a second better than Golden Morn did it the previous week, so that the favourite ran pretty true to form.

Cocky was most fancied for the Second Charnock Plate, though several of the others were well backed. Eventide caused a lot of delay by bolting with her rider under the gate. She was, however, pulled up within a couple of furlongs, and then when they started Wal was able to lead from the beginning and win easily by two lengths from Matin Bell.

Perhaps the biggest upset of the day was in the last race which on paper looked a gift for Harene with Punt the biggest danger after his running in the 6-furlong race earlier in the day. (Both these animals by the way had already had one run.) Mr. Deakin's mare Royal Colours was standing at about sixes, when a large commission came for her and she was backed down to twos, being second favourite to Harene. This was, however, justified by the result, as she led the whole way and won in a canter, never troubled, in the excellent time of 1min. 2½secs. The mare has come on most surprisingly since last time she ran, as there was nothing in her previous performances to lead any one to suppose that she could hold that field beaten from start to finish in the way she did. Royal Colours was ridden by Kilfoin, who returned to us with Mr. Scott for these last two extras and signalised his reappearance by getting four winners in all, Marcelle, Mercedes, Wal and Royal Colours. We tender him our congratulations on his success.

The entries for next meeting show no signs of falling off and it looks as if we would have a good afternoon's sport to wind up with. The Balaclava Plate for the Light Horse chargers which is exciting a lot of interest has got the smallest entry; only ten, but as they are all almost certain to start it will make quite a good field. Of the others the Farewell Plate has 26. The Sprinters' Consolation Plate 23, the Amateur Pony Handicap 16, and the Amateur Pony Handicap 13. However the two Consolation Plates are not likely to have such very large fields, as 16 horses are entered in both races and five of them figure in the Farewell Plate as well. We see that Mr. Galstaun's Berthier, who came up with a great reputation and was supposed to be good enough to win the Trials last season, once more, appears in the list of entries. He was a very good horse in Australia, but has never been fit since he arrived in India, if, however, by any chance he strikes form he will be very useful in any class up here.

We would draw the attention of our readers to the notice, appearing further on, giving dates of the tour of the Official Measure of the Calcutta Turf Club.

The Calcutta Paperchase Cup last Saturday was won by Mr. Cowper on Maisonette. Lord Francis Scott on Fermoy winning the Heavy Weight Cup. Details further on. The annual dinner of the Paperchase Club was held the same evening and was largely attended. Mr. J. M. G. Prophit presided and in his speech congratulated the winners of the various cups, whose health he proposed in succession. Mrs. Paris, winner of the Ladies' Cup, Captain Holden, who had secured both the average cup Capt in MacDonell the winner of the Pony Cup Mr. Cowper winner of the Paperchase Cup and Lord Francis Scott winner of the Heavy Weight Cup. "X" the Paperchase Recorder, was not forgotten, when the health of the Chairman was proposed by D. Forsyth.

Mr. Prophit announced that some of the Cups for next year had already been presented. H. E. the Viceroy's Staff had presented the Pony Cup, Mr. M. W. Muir the Average Cup and he himself had been allowed to present the Cup for the ladies. The names of the donors of the Heavy Weight Cup and the Pony Average Cup had not been disclosed. A small dance brought a very pleasant evening to a close.

We have to thank the publishers, Messrs. Thacker Spink and Co., for a copy of Calcutta Paperchasing Records by "X." In this elegant volume we find the annals of paperchasing in Calcutta dealt with from its earliest days. The records previously published by "C.C.M." are incorporated in this new edition and much additional matter makes the compilation full and complete. The history of the Paperchase Cup is continuous since the first race, while interesting chapters on the other events of the season, statistics and lists of winners, an excellent map of the paperchase country and photographs of prominent members of the club and celebrated horses, combine to make the book an interesting addition to the chronicles of sport in Calcutta and a pleasant souvenir to members of the club past and present.

The Stewards of the Meerut Races held a meeting on the 4th instant to consider the representation made by Major Lane, handicapper, regarding the irreconcilable running of the pony Post Entry. On the first day, when ridden by Taylor, it ran unplaced, and yesterday, when carrying 10lbs., more weight, being ridden by Fisher, it won.

Taylor's explanation was considered unsatisfactory, so the Stewards have forwarded a report to the Calcutta Turf Club, requesting that body to deal with the case. Taylor has also been reported to the C.T.C. for his riding of Jeddah in the first race on the third day of the Meerut Spring Meeting.

The Inter-Regimental Polo Tournament at Meerut ended on the 5th instant in a win for the 10th Hussars, who beat the 1st King's Dragoon Guards by 8 goals to 1. Details further on.

The final in the Bombay Junior Polo Tournament resulted in a win for the Idar State, who beat the General Alderson's team by 3 goals to 2.

For this year's Kadir Cup, to be run off near Sharpur on 22nd, 23rd and 24th March, the first entries number 68 riders; and almost every rider has entered two horses. The final entries do not close until the 21st March.

The race for the Merchants Cup at the Rangoon Spring meeting on the 6th instant provided a sensational finish. Mr. B. N. Burjorjee's Echo led from start to finish, the favourite, Lorette, belonging to the same owner, making her run too late to win. Another of Mr. Burjorjee's candidates Curlew, who has two previous victories in this race to her credit, made a gallant effort at the finish and just failed by a head. She burst a blood vessel in the race and fell dead entering the paddock.

The 9th Division Polo Tournament for General Sir Charles Egerton's Cup ended at Bolarum on Saturday last, when the 13th Hussars beat the 33rd Cavalry by 7 goals to 2.

The Grand Prix at Monte Carlo was won by Signor Cassiari, which makes the thirteenth win by an Italian against a like number of successes by England. The scores at the last were as follows:—Cassiari, 21 out of 21; Count Eulenberg, 20 out of 21; Moncorge, 15 out of 16; Wilder, 14 out of 15; Geynet, 13 out of 14; Eldmann, 13 out of 14; Fadini, 13 out of 14; and Polastri, 12 out of 13. The termination of the contest was rather exciting, as Cassiari (Italy), Eulenberg (Germany), Moncorge (France), and Wilder (England), had tied and all held clean scores. In the next round Wilder had hard luck, as the bird was just able to reach the boundary and fall over dead into the sea. Moncorge also failed to stop his bird in the next round whilst Cassiari and Count Eulenberg both missed in the final. These two, however, came to an arrangement by which the money was divided, and Cassiari took the objet d'art. Last year the prize was won by an Austrian and the year before by an Englishman.

Messrs. Ross' latest development in highest grade photographic lenses is the "Homocentric," some interesting details of which we give further on.

The firm constantly introduces us to something out of the common. Another of their spring novelties is the "Pauros" camera which has been designed to meet every requirement of up-to-date photography in respect of the folding camera so essential for a sportsman's use. It is extremely compact, embodying the latest achievements in lens and shutter construction in a simple and practical form, and in such a manner that successful work is possible under the disadvantageous circumstances such as often present themselves in the camp or anywhere off the beaten track.

Their prism binoculars, telescopes and field glasses are of the standard, which directly appeals to our readers.

Polo players throughout India will hardly need reminding that, as specialists in their particular gear, Messrs, J. Salter and Sons, of Aldershot, are quite at the top of the tree. The remark occurs to us on perusing a copy of their latest catalogue replete with information on polo sticks, balls and heads, with important hints to players on the selection and care of their gear, and with, the latest rules of the game. A very useful novelty is their polo stick carrier, a capital contrivance for keeping sticks straight, when being carried about, and of very special value in India, when we consider the huge bump of destruction with which almost every syce is filled. It is cheap, strong, light and efficient, and weighs 1¼lbs. only. Another of Salter's specialities which some of our big station clubs might, with advantage, add to their equipment is the "Hastings" automatic polo clock and combined scoring board as used at Ranelagh. Its chief points are that it will put the proper time of the game beyond all doubt, it will register periods by the sounding of a very powerful bell at the end of each ten minutes, by regulating a stopping appliance stoppages in the game and extra time can be allowed for with perfect accuracy, while the instantaneous telegraphing of the game as it proceeds, can be seen all over the field.

Salters, as most Indian tennis and racket players know, also specialise for their benefit. Their best makes in bats, strung with the celebrated black gut, successfully stand the extremely severe heats imposed on them in our climate with its variable changes in temperature. Their "Champion," "Patron" and "Doctor" bats are hard to beat.

The Johnson—Burns fight is being cinematographically fought again in London: it was first shown on the 13th ultimo at the National Sporting Club. According to our correspondent the contest itself was considered disappointing and unworthy of so great an occasion. The chief points, which the cabled reports had paved the way for, were carefully noted. There was the knock-down blow administered by Johnson in the first round, the severe signs of punishment received by Burns (becoming very manifest in the tenth round), and the way in which Johnson threw up his arms and laid himself open for punishment.

Although it was perfectly apparent that Johnson had matters all his own way, it is only just to Burns to say that he appeared comparatively strong right up to the time, when the contest was stopped by the superintendent of police in the fourteenth round. The disparity of size in the two combatants was most marked, Burns appearing more diminutive still by his crouching style. He gave the impression that he was endeavouring to climb an inaccessible mountain, for he scarcely ever reached Johnson's head.

But give ear, gentle readers, and share with us one of the best jokelets of the season. We know that since Massa Johnson "put it across" the white man Burns, the Australians, in whom the colour prejudice runs high, have been rather cool to the nigger—so cool, indeed, that the management of a music hall, paying £350 a week for Johnson's turn, hastily transferred him from Sydney to Melbourne on account of the chilling draught. Johnson acutely feels the black man's burden and resents the withdrawal of the cakes and ale, which are wont to go as by right to a champion bruiser. He has been complaining to the Press, and after the complaint, he goes on to say he found consolation by turning to "one or two of my favourite books—Shakespeare's Titus Andronicus, Bunyan's Pilgrim's Progress or Milton's Paradise Lost, and there I found plenty consolation to soothe away my irritation." Claiming to be a Methodist, the black is disappointed because his fellow-religionists ignored him. Thus, he says of the elect, for whom he longs:—"When I won I fully expected to be feted. In return, I was prepared to spar with local champions, play the piano, guitar, or other instrument, in aid of local charities or churches." And so on. The world is a waggish place, and this black man's trouble has made us laugh until we feel pensive. Fancy an African prig, who is a boxing champion, reading Paradise Lost to soothe his irritation and twanging the light guitar at a Methodist "Band of Hope!"

The Bangalore Hockey Tournament ended on the 6th instant in a win for the Cheshire Regiment, who defeated the Leicesters by 4 goals to 2.

The final in the Murray Football Tournament was played at Lucknow on the 6th instant, the Royal Dragoons beating the Highland Light Infantry by a goal to nil.

The annual Regatta in connection with the Royal Connaught Boat Club, Poona, began on the 9th instant and will be continued to-day and on Saturday.

The full team selected to represent Australia during their tour in England this year is as follows. Noble (captain), (N. S. W.), Trumper (N. S. W.), Armstrong (Victoria), Carter, (N. S. W.), Cotter, (N. S. W.), Ransford, (Victoria), Hartigan, (Queensland), O'Connor, (S.A.), Bardsley, (N. S. W.), Whitty, (S.A.), Carkeek, (Victoria), Macalister, (Victoria), S. Gregory, (N.S.W.), and Macartney, (N. S. W.)

Frank Laver will be manager of the team.

The Rugby Unions' dispute is at length at an end. A mutual agreement has been arrived at, there is to be no professionalism in future and the international match will be played at an early date.

The final in the All-India Hockey Tournament at Allahabad brought together the Naini Tal Volunteers and the Royal Munster Fusilers. The game was played on Saturday last and full time arrived with the score one all: extra time was played and each team scored another goal. The tie was replayed on Monday when the Munster Fusiliers won by two goals to nil.

The Pioneer writes:—A meeting of hockey players and persons interested in hockey was held at the Allahabad Club on Saturday afternoon and a number of matters came up for discussion. Among these was naturally the question of a hockey association for India. We say "naturally," for this question has been to the fore at every meeting of hockey tournament players at Allahabad during the last few years, and it is certain that the feeling exists among a large number of hockey players that the time has arrived for starting an association which shall legislate in hockey matters and act as a final court of appeal in all hockey disputes, besides taking up such duties as the registering of referees. The sanguine also foresee the time when such an Association may help materially to increase the popularity of the game by providing funds not only for improving grounds but also for assisting local committees to get up tournaments. In India we are accustomed to begin at the "wrong end" and this is probably as true of our play as of our work. So if elsewhere local associations gradually lead up to the creation of a central organisation controlling these local associations, that is no particular reason why here in India we should not begin with our central body before the smaller associations are in existence. That there is no demand for a merely provincial association—which after all could hardly legislate for hockey all over India—seems evident from the lack of support given to the United Provinces Association formed last year. Mr. Bramley, the Honorary Secretary of an Association that in reality has no existence, has already informed us that he has received no "response whatsoever" to the appeal made to clubs to affiliate. Now we may be sure that Mr. Bramley has left no stone unturned to make the Association a success, and his failure can only be taken as proof that a United Provinces Association is not wanted. The present idea is a somewhat ambitious one. A committee of three—Messrs. Bramley, Troup and Ross, the latter Captain of the combined team that won the All-India Hockey Tournament in 1907 and 1908—has been appointed to consider the possibilities of an Indian Hockey Association on the lines of the Indian Polo Association (or any other Association that may suggest itself as appropriate to imitate) and to draw up a draft constitution to be submitted to captains of teams and secretaries of tournaments throughout India. It is proposed that when that draft constitution has been duly drawn up captains of teams and secretaries of tournaments should be invited to send representatives to a meeting to be held during the next All-India Hockey Tournament at Allahabad and that that meeting should consider what amendments should be made in the constitution submitted and also elect an executive committee for the ensuing year. The final constitution would thus be the work, it is hoped, of a thoroughly representative meeting, the present committee of three doing merely the necessary spade work. Much will, of course, depend on the manner in which this Committee sets to work. If the Association is to prove a success the Committee's labours are not likely to be light. But the object is perhaps worth the effort and the experiment at any rate is highly interesting. One of the first tasks of the Committee will, of course, be to raise preliminary funds to carry on its work of correspondence. No very large sum will be required in the first instance and the Committee have, we understand, been already promised some assistance. A number of teams have also, we believe, already signified their intention of joining the Association when it is formed, so that the scheme may be said to have been launched under favourable auspices.

A new edition of Major C's "Indian notes about Dogs" has just been published by Messrs Thacker Spink and Co., to whom we are indebted for a copy. Carefully revised by an officer of the Civil Veterinary Department the eighth edition of this excellent little book contains much valuable information on the management and care of dogs in India in a concise form. The brochure should be in the possession of of all who keep dogs.

The football matches between Burnley and Manchester United and Derby County and Notts Forest in the Fourth Round of the Association Cup, which should have been played on Saturday afternoon, were both postponed, owing to a blizzard.

The match between Glossop and Bristol City, at Glossop, resulted in a pointless draw.

Newcastle United drew with Sunderland, each side scoring twice.

Our Bombay correspondent writes:—With four out of seven races on terms, the Eleventh Extra was voted a benefit for punters, and proceedings in the afternoon fully bore out that belief. Though an easy win or two occurred to put punters early out of their misery, the racing on the whole was interesting and good, and the season is likely to die as hard as ever. At as late a time as this, we have fairly correctly gauged the form of all and a comparatively casual glance shows what is better in than would be the case had the handicapper, the allotment of leads.

To begin with, the race for new Arabs filled well enough to be divided, eleven and thirteen respectively starting. The first saw Mundoor out and never having failed to place, he naturally had many supporters, unaware of the fact that he was only just out of fever. The matter of sending horses out unfiit "for an airing in public" has often been discussed, but surely this is nothing to leaving in an animal who has been tried previously and is likely to be backed by those not in the stable's confidence! That Zinfandel had struck form, was made no secret of by his connections, and he ultimately displaced the former with Defence and Mushin on the job. Mushin led on suffrance, and on entering the straight Mundoor only showed out momentarily before Zinfandel went away. Little King was after him, and only a game answer to Evans' call got the favourite there by a head, Defence next.

Probably anticipating a short price, owing to early betting, Prime Minister was taken out of the second, and a rush consequently went on Sharar of the same stable after his showing in a six furlong race. Over five now, he was never really troubled after being at odds on. Duxwin next at sixes will show up better with a clear run, but could not catch Halai and Azzad.

So much has Meerjan improved, being consistent too, that he was always first called for the Medium Plate from Reefat, Rajput and Najmi, and the public were not far wrong. Najmi and then Rajput made the pace, the latter a bit too strong, and Meerjan coming at them had everything safe. Najmi just beat Rajput at the finish, and in the struggle they effectively shut Reefat in, Evans being lucky to only bruise his ankle on the rails.

After his defeat by Forfeit, Paul Pry was a warm favourite for the shorter journey, the former beink scratched, and some confidence shown in Winsome and Lady Metal. Winsome got well away, but Paul Pry passed her easily and Lady Metal snatched second place. At last my remark when the winner first started has been justified.

A bigger certainly, if one might use such a word in connection with racing, than Happy Land in the Small Arab Plate would take finding. Sir Jamal and Plassy out of it, he was rarely anything but two's on from Prince Chestnut and Brussels at sixes. He and Prince Chestnut were fit out and naturally nothing could keep with the grey, who held the other and Light very safe.

Only three went for the Long Consolation Plate and, though Ashanti Gold was a very decided favourite, both Lachlan and Clear Artist could not be despised. This small field, as a matter of fact, provided quite the race of the day. Lachlan, setting the pace, appeared to be going best when the three entered the straight in line, Clear Artist outside. Nearing the Second Enclosure, the favourite showed out and, Lachlan not answering as well as might have been expected, got there a head, tht other only half a length away.

We finished with the Selling Plate, eleven starting, with Vasco a bit shorter than Akrabad and Bendigo. Nagashi led them at the bend, but Vasco passed him here only for Bendigo to come very full of running and win on his own by six lengths, Meerdhan passing Nagashi for a place.

The seven events were split up between Killorn, Hill and Evans, the first getting the odd one also.

Seven events again on Saturday for the Twelfth, when results went a bit more in favour of the Books. Killorn having left for Calcutta, Evans and Hoyt won three each, Bleach naturally being the trainer of the day.

The card opened with the New Arab Maiden with fourteen starters, Goldman, Mubrad and Racer monopolising the market with a few on Hundred. March Past and Sandid showed out momentarily to fall back to Goldman and Racer. The positions of these changed at the bend, where Hundred and Malta followed to pass the others down the straight, Hundred winning with comparative ease.

On the supposition that he could go a mile, Reefat was a firm favourite for the Lanowli Plate from Brutus, Darianoor and Meazer, in whom Mr. M. G. now has a share and who has been transferred to Bleach's charge: England was first away to make the running clear of Meazer, Darianoor and Reefat, and soon after half the journey Meazer led Reefat, Darianoor and Brutus. Tre favourite made his effort from distance, but Meazer was hard held with Reefat staying out Brutus's run in a field just big enough for three places.

A track performance was the cause of a good deal of money going down on Rufus in the Karjat Plate, as he failed to show any improvement on past form. Winchester, a well-backed new one, followed Murzook and passed him within a couple of furlongs, Light and Sir George following to fall back to Squire as they entered the straight. Winchester, however, had them all set and won very comfortably in quite good time. This speaks well for the new ones, as there are better animals amongst them than this one.

Next the six-furlong Goodwood Plate with Forfeit, despite the difference in weight to when he last met Chivalry, a warmish favourite. Manlock was first away from Chivalry, St. Patrick and Forfeit, Chivalry taking the lead at the half mile. Rounding the bend Forfeit drew up and Manlock fell back, pulling up afterwards very lame on his dicky leg, but Chivalry was full of running and won in a straggly finish in a second worse time than when Forfeit won.

Though under a steadier of 10-5, Dhafer looked, and was the good thing in the Mile Maiden Arab Plate. Grey Rose went away at the start and held on remarkably well even if he just failed to place, Spearmint, Diamond King and Dhafer were next, and the first of these collared the leader before the bend. Rounding it Merrily had drawn up and he and Dhafer were neck and neck at the distance. It was evident, however that the favourite was going much the better and he passed the post not all out by two and a half lengths. This is his sixth win this season.

The nine-furlong March Plate took a bit of picking, Lachlan on his last showing being shorter than Admiral Crichton, Ashanti Gold and Cheeky, Umutbee and Sir Galahad any price. Sir Galahad led for half the journey on sufferance, and was then passed by Lachlan, Admiral Crichton, Cheeky and Ashanti Gold in turn. At the bend the first three of these were in a dead line but Lachlan going a bit wide gave Ashanti Gold an opening, Bray was not slow to take advanage of it and slipping through on the rails, landed Ashanti Gold a comfortable winner from Admiral Crichton.

A hot thing on paper awaited us in Hachal for the last race, Middleman, Beyhazar and Sunsum being the dangerous ones. Hachal was first out, had Redbreast well set and led Telegraph, hard held all tre way. A strong run by Beyhazar down the straight beat Telegraph, but nothing could touch Hachal who won practically as he liked in only a tick slower than Winchester, and carrying the same weight.

Added to the general increase of energy on the part of the Bombay Gymkhana, evidenced by the revival of the Polo Tournament and Athletic Sports, we have just concluded a Racquets Tournament of a more pretentions nature than has probably ever been the case here. Four events were down for decision and all filled well, the finals creating a good deal of interest on the part of a well-filled gallery of spectators. We published results last week. Amongst those present on the last evening were H. E. Sir George and Lady Warrender, with Mrs. Leather giving away the prizes, and at their request, we were able to witness some of the finest play likely to be obtained anywhere in the world, in the shape of exhibition games in which the Parsi professionals, Jamshetjee and Hormusjee, took part. The former and R. D. England gave the latter and Captain Leather 3 and a beating and in a single Hormusji beat his brother receiving 5.

London Week by Week.

Friday, 19th February 1909.

This has been an uneventful week. Since last Friday no Gaiety girls have married into the Peerage or the Guards, and matters social, sporting and theatrical have been unusually flat and uninteresting.

Our King and Queen returned to London from their Berlin visit last Saturday. They were in the best of health; it was officially announced that the visit was thoroughly enjoyed, and it followed as a matter of course that public interest in their Majesties' movements culminated in a great welcome home all along the line from Victoria Station to Buckingham Palace.

I may here make passing allusion to the reopening of what of late years has been regarded in many quarters as one of London's places of amusement—that spasmodic variety house, Parliament. A comprehensive programme has been arranged, which the enterprising management describes in its advertisements as "grave and urgent," and shortly we may expect to see all the old familiar turns—John Burns, Keir Hardie, Will Thorn, the suffragettes—going strong. But to describe the event as "the feature of the week" is surely going a bit too far. The return to the stage of Maud Allan is a far more momentous business to thousands of Londoners!

The opening of Parliament was attended by the usual street demonstrations, the procession of antique beefeaters intent of searching the cellars for modern disciples of Guy Fawkes, the royal cortége, the milingtary, the crowds in Whitehall and Parliament Square. Of course the suffragettes tried to be funny. Miss Muriel Mathers (the girl who last year chained herself to the grille in the House and had to be filed loose, you will remember) conceived the happy idea of floating over the buildings in an airship, placarded "Votes for Women," and showering down leaflets. She started with Spencer, the balloonist, from the Welsh 'Arp ('Endon Way) but failed to reach Westminster, the aerial voyage ending dismally miles away. Other suffragettes did some picturesque clowning with banners in motor cars and an army of women and children representing the unemployed—six thousand or more—filled Cavendish Square and marched headed by a banner with the motto "Work or revolution: Which," to the Horticultural Hall with a petition intended for presentation to the House of Commons. But some window smashing set the police in motion and the procession got left out of the picture in the end.

"Indian Danger in London. High Officials guarded by Police. Suspects shadowed." How does that strike you as a contents' bill my friends across seas? It arrested my attention on Monday morning, and further details showed that what every Anglo-Indian in England has been looking for has at last arrived and, strange though it may appear, the Government of the country has come to the conclusion that the Indians in London form a not altogether desirable and possibly dangerous class. The old fable of the countryman and the adder has been brought home to the authorities at last, and it is now being recognised that a serious situation has arisen in regard to the Indian population. Scotland Yard has adopted strong measures. Let us hope the awakening has not come too late. Though it would be neither prudent nor permissible to publish all the details that have come to light, still enough may be said to indicate that matters are approaching a crisis.

There are in the metropolis about 600 Indians of various castes and creeds. They are mostly young men studying law or medicine, and the majority belong to the Indian Nationalist Party. For years no one looked with distrust upon these gentle-mannered, law-abiding Oriental subjects of the King, but recently it has been found necessary to have the more prominent Indians shadowed day and night, and, of course, such measures have not been resorted to out of mere curiosity.

As a matter of fact the gravest reasons underlie this police espionage. Information of the most disquieting nature has reached the authorities, necessitating not only the shadowing of the more virulent and murder-preaching Indians, but also the bestowal of precautionary attentions upon high placed Government officials. In a word, it is feared that the war against existing authority is being transferred from India to London in the worst form of rampant anarchism and sedition, approximating perilously near to the terrorism that prevails in Russia.

Bomb-making is being specialised in by the gentle Aryan, seditious literature has for a long time been freely distributed, the gospel of murder has been openly preached among this community. Any one in London, knowing the baboo and his ways, could have told the authorities what to expect, but experience has taught these knowledgeable men that such warnings would fall on deaf ears. The average Britisher angrily declines to listen to the man with a quarter of a century's experience of India and Indians, so the informed ones have ceased to talk and have for some time awaited the eye-opener which is to rudely awaken the British

The Veterans' Club, of which I told you last year, is progressing: very shortly a selected spot in the barren waste of Kingsway will see the builders at work. A glance at the plans shows me that there are to be five hundred bedrooms and a large banqueting hall with gymnasium and rifle range among other attractions. This club is intended primarily for men who have completed their service in the Army or Navy, and is therefore supplemental to the Union Jack Club, which is for men in the services. When the premises are opened the Veterans' Club will have a membership approaching 20,000. Most of these men will be still in their prime. Thus there will be a large reserve of men, representing all branches of the services, ready to the hands of the military authorities in case of national need. An employment bureau has been started, and there is also a uniformed Veterans' Corps forty strong, for the supply of commissionaires, messengers, etc. The idea is very popular and from every point of view the scheme looks promising.

Most regular playgoers like myself must often have been struck by the fact that the reception accorded to a new play by its first night's audience is by no means a reliable indication of its ultimate fate. Plays hissed and booed on first nights have over and over again lived to be enormous successes. Others greeted with the utmost enthusiasm have frequently failed lamentably from an artistic and financial point of view. The fact would appear to be that first nighters are not always good judges of what the public want: a better opinion can often be formed after a play has been running a few nights.

Two concrete instances of this are before us just now. On 2nd February, Mr. Waller produced a play called "The Chief of Staff" at the Lyric Theatre. It was received with extraordinary enthusiasm, but, after a run of fourteen performances, has been taken off for want of public support. On 23rd January, a new musical play, "Our Miss Gibbs," was produced at the Gaiety Theatre. There were plenty of boos on the first night. Why, I do not know, but no one could fail to hear them. What has happened since? All Gaiety Theatre records are broken by the amount of the advanced booking, and for hours every day before the pit and gallery doors are opened people are waiting outside patiently to get places to see this entertainment. First-night receptions "cut no ice."

We have just been given another of the "bedroom pieces" so much in vogue during the last year. "The Truants" is a puzzling play produced at the Kingsway Theatre by that clever actress and shrewd business woman, Miss Lena Ashwell. It has the merit of much smart dialogue, the directness of its action is pronounced, and success ought to wait upon the sincerity with which most of it is written. The play undoubtedly has some purpose, it makes a fairly strong appeal to the intelligence, and though it opens seriously, changes to melodrama and winds up on the borders of farce, with some rather sugary sentiment as a tag, it never jars and in following it one passes almost without knowing it from mood to mood. It is made up entirely of agreeable, if widely assorted materials and it has been well received.

First there is introduced the "woman with a past." This is Freda Saville, who is a mother without having been a wife, and who is about to marry Dick Chetwood. Then there is Bill Chetwood, a "rough diamond" from the wilds of South America, who seeks to elope with his pretty, eighteen-year-old cousin, Pamela, without worrying about a marriage service. It is to save Pamela that Freda Saville risks her all. She discovers that the pair are about to run away together. She threatens to thwart Bill Chetwood in a thing that he has worked for years to accomplish if he persists in his villainy. And when he gives her to understand that he is in possession of her past and will give it to the world, she points a revolver at his head and threatens to shoot him if he does not promise to marry Pamela on the morrow, and he is so delighted by her pluck that he gives the promise—after the revolver has gone off and alarmed the household—and preserves her secret.

This might well end the play, but there is another act to be provided for. So a brand new complication is introduced by way of Lord Shelland, who has also became possessed of Freda's secret, and threatens to "give her away" to Dick unless she allows him to adopt her little son, whom everyone had been led to believe was her cousin. But a mother's love prevails, she makes full confession to Dick, who takes it with a light heart and fresh tokens of love. Bill marries Pamela by special license, and "all's well."

The emotional character of Freda is well suited to Miss Ashwell and she played the part with force and conviction: the short tempered Bill of Mr. Denis Eadie is a very likeable person: as the genial Dick Mr. C. M. Hallard is quite good, and a certain charm attaches to the Pamela of Miss Athene Seyler.

The return to The Palace of Miss Maud Allan after her accident and enforced rest—was heralded last Saturday with much enthusiasm by a packed house with a large leaven of social and professional celebrities. She did not include the famous "Vision of Salome" in her performance; but she gave many of the other best known dances from her repertoire, and introduced several new to London. Perhaps she was most successful with Mendelssohn's "Spring Song," Tchaikowsky's "Arabian Dance," and Greig's "Peer Gynt Suite." There is nothing new to be said about Miss Allan's style of dancing. It is an individual art, having something of music, much of drama, and the grace of nature itself. She dances with every part of her body; her movements illustrate hope and despair, gladness and sorrow and she moves her beholders in a way no other artiste of her class has yet succeeded in doing. And she draws a salary most high Indian officials might envy.

And talking of the emoluments of variety stars, the Chairman of the Pavilion meeting the other day asserted that there were nearly a dozen musical hall artistes in London receiving between £5,000 and £10,000 a year. Truly this thing grows ridiculous. What one would like to know is how many in this golden bunch are honestly worth the money? It strikes one that alert and clever managers—not the sort who put on Carrie Nation or Miss Charlesworth to be pelted with the eggs they themselves ought to receive—might, by a not over-exhaustive search, find hundreds of people at less than, say, £2,000 to replace this clever dozen whose every grin seems, so to speak, to cost a pound an inch. In this matter all sense of proportion seems to have been lost.

Mr. H. B. Irving continues to follow in the footsteps of his father and with every credit. He revived, last week, "Charles I" that pathetic but somewhat lop-sided drama by the fervid partisan, W. G. Wills, who twists history to suit his own purpose which is mainly the distortion of Cromwell's none too lovely character. But while this tends to the weakening of dramatic effect we have left enough of pathos, thrill and picturesqueness and the public invariably flock to see the piece. It has had a hearty reception and fully proved its right to a revival. It is pleasant, also, to congratulate Mr. Irving upon his personal success in the leading part. His portrait of the martyr king is conspicuous throughout for its sense of regal dignity, of profound feeling, of commanding power. Very beautiful and touching, too, is the Queen Henrietta Maria of Miss Dorothea Baird, a study nicely compounded of womanly sweetness and queenly grace. For the rest the Cromwell of Mr. Frank Tyars, the Marquis of Huntley of Mr. Tom Reynolds, the Moray of Mr. Eric Maxon, and the Lady Elinor of Miss Eily Malyon are commendable.

The grievances of the middle-class playgoer were set forth by Mr. Max Beerbohm in a paper entitled. "The Obsessive Upper Classes" which he read last Saturday night to members of the Playgoers' Club—at least he made out a case with which he seemed well stisfied. Playwrights, according to this gentleman, did sometimes deign to write about the people to which they belonged, but it did not occur to them to take this class seriously as human beings—creatures of like feelings with the aristocracy. They came out merely as superficial grotesques.

He could recall only one play of recent times in which there was an attempt—and a wholly successful attempt it was—to take that particular class seriously. That play was "The Voysey Inheritance." Did the public flock to see it? Not they. It was on them especially that the fate of plays depended. If they made a stand and said, "We are sick of pieces concerning the upper classes, and we won't go and pay to see any more of them," then the playwrights would concede the demand. But in point of fact, nobody went any further than to say, "We are sick of this sort of plays," and there was no use in saying this if these presentations were precisely those which they were most ready to patronise. Upper Tooting was as central for the purpose of tragic drama as Mayfair, and the simple people of to-day were quite good material for a masterpiece in comedy. If our dramatists must confine their survey to one class of the community, they had better choose that section which they could survey best, and which they already knew best; in fact, the middle class people to which they nearly all belonged.

This, and much more to the same effect, said Mr. Max Beerbohm; but I think, after all said and done, he would find the British public, which dearly loves a lord, would go on patronising the aristocratic pieces and those who didn't go would probably sit at home reading their novelettes of high life and the present cause of complaint would remain.

MEN in India who have eaten many lonely dinners at English clubs or restaurants will recall the resentment that has sometimes taken them when the unknown diner at the opposite side of a table orders and devours with unpleasant enjoyment the dishes most unacceptable to his neighbour. But civilisation has helped us to cloak our feelings of disgust. In such cases we suffer with a polite frigidity.

There are circles, however, in which human emotions are allowed to take their fling. Dining at a Huddersfield eating-house, Donohue and Kelly, his friend, warm-hearted Celts, are said to have leaned over the table and warned the young man opposite that, if he ordered another helping of pudding, they would smash his face with the plate. The young man, with Saxon obstinacy, ordered that forbidden helping, and not the plate only, but the restaurateur's head was broken during the remonstrances that followed. A sad and bad story, but many a clubman will confess to a sneaking sympathy for Kelly and for Donohue.

Review.

OUR COMMON BIRDS.*

IN our issue of 31st May 1906 when reviewing Bombay Ducks by Douglas Dewar, we expressed the hope that ere long the author of that interesting volume would give us something more from his versatile pen. This something more has now reached us in the form of Birds of the Plains. Mr. Douglas Dewar is far too well known as an authoritative field naturalist and a ready writer to require any further introduction from us.

We may well rest assured that facts and figures published above or behind his name, are the outcome of close personal observation. However well established a theory may be and no matter by what eminent authority it may have been propounded, Mr. Douglas Dewar does not accept that theory until he has obtained an opportunity of putting it to a thorough and searching test and has personally satisfied himself of its worthiness. Ornithologists and sportsmen in general have long puzzled over the fact that in this peninsula snipe first make their appearance in any appreciable numbers in our southern presidencies. The natural supposition would be that the Punjab and the northern districts would form the rendezvous for these migrants, whence the bonny little birds would gradually spread south. Yet the former phenomenon holds good.

A possible solution to this problem is advanced by the author. Yet we feel that in this particular connection we are still groping in the dark. Let us take an example. In Burma the snipe shooting in the vicinity of Pegu is practically finished before a bag of double figures is recorded in the neighbourhood of Mandalay. To what grounds do the battered armies of Pegu snipe migrate? We are positive that these war-worn warriors, these pellet-plastered pilgrims, that, towards the close of the Rangoon snipe season, start up with a screech 100 yards away are not the same confiding innocents who, two months later, round Mandalay, have literally to be kicked up. This is surely a new army of invasion recruited from some other locality.

Mr. Dewar brings another unexplained question to light, namely, Do young birds in the nest require water and, if so, in what manner is the precious fluid supplied? The author has taken very careful observations on this point, but has been unable to arrive at any definite conclusions in the matter. The discussion on the stability of species and sexual selection is one of extreme interest, and the arguments put forward in the chapter devoted to these topics will undoubtedly appeal to the reader.

The apparent idiosyncrasies of the nutmeg bird are thoroughly explained, and we must confess that the tables have been turned on the human race by this so-called silent warbler. Yet it is a misfortune that the ordinary ear of mankind is so constructed that the sound waves arising from the notes of the spotted munia, are incapable of being transposed into sense.

The sportsman naturalist during his wanderings afield will assuredly at one time or another, have examined and marvelled at the construction of the nest of what people are pleased to "call the tailor bird." There are not many of us who can boast of ever having witnessed the stitching or cobbling process. Mr. Dewar obtained such an opportunity, and in Birds of the Plains will be found a full and detailed account of this ingenuous operation. The author has just a little to say on the modern craze for species making, but in the few pages that are devoted to this subject, he has stated his convictions without in the least mincing his words. We are in entire accord with Mr. Dewar and his co-naturalists of the field in their strenuous protest against this species splitting monomania by the museum classifier. The examples quoted illustrative of what leads to the formation of a sub-species, and what in the future may assuredly necessitate the registration of sub-sub-species, show us in no uncertain light to what extremes a hobby horse can be driven. As the author tritely puts it:

"Any local variation in the colour of the plumage is considered sufficient justification for the formation of a sub-species."

If the same procedure were applied to the human race where would it not end? Genus homo is divided into three distinct species as distinguished by the hair.

(a) Mongolian with long straight hair.
(b) Caucasian with long wavy hair.
(c) Melanesian with short curly or frizzled hair.

Among the Caucasian type are found many varieties of hair. Starting with black the colours range through brown, brunette, auburn chestnut, nut brown, red, ginger, golden, carroty, fawn, tawny, sandy, lemon, saffron, sulphur, amber, straw, flaxen, each of which would be at once classified as a sub-species. But observation points to the fact, that in each of the above sub-species a variety in the colour of the iris occurs. All shades from black and brown, including greenish and yellowish, to blue and grey. This will entail a further division into sub-sub-species and so we might well go on splitting up "subs" ad infinitum. We can only hope that the words of wisdom and warning conveyed between pages 73 and 77 of Birds of the Plains may attract the attention of the leading field naturalists of the world. We also trust that some steps may be taken before it is too late, to establish some fixity of purpose in the denomination of species and sub-species, in place of building up a complicated fabric which sooner or later is doomed to descend with a crash and throw ornithologial research back for a decade or two.

Mr. Dewar has a considerable amount to state concerning protective colouring, and in conjunction with him, we hold the views that this theory has been advanced in far too conclusive terms. Its acceptance may be a convenience in patching up the problem of the law of colouration in Nature; but every-day observation elicits facts which shake the theory to its very foundations.

The reader must not harbour the impression that Birds of the Plains is merely a scientific treatise on the leading ornithological and zoological questions of the day; this is by no means the case. Mr. Dewar takes the reader metaphorically, as well as illustratively into the open air, and points out in a style that fascinates and at the same time instructs, our many feathered friends and fiends. Some are found even before the garden gate has been reached; others will be seen or heard in the crops, in the forests, in the grass-lands, in the fields and in the swamps. The author discourses humorously, vivaciously, yet authoritatively on the habits of our plumaged companions, on the happiness of the courting season, on the cares and anxieties of the parent birds during the period of incubation, on the screams of joy and delight that ripple forth when the first little chick breaks through its egg-shell, on the troubles and trials of the nursery days, when food has to be supplied to fill those yawning cavities, on the methods employed in chasing or luring away an enemy from the vinicity of the home, and on the hundred and one episodes that go to make up the daily bird life from the time the happy couple first mate, till that time when the father and mother drive their progeny into the world to feed for themselves.

The reader will take up the book with expectancy and when the last page has been turned, will put it down with regret. But Birds of the Plains is not a volume that will grow dusty and uncared for on a neglected shelf. To the amateur field naturalist it will prove a book to which constant references will be made. It will be produced in the drawing-room, in the library, in the mess-room and in the club house to settle friendly discussions and arguments on bird lore. It fills a gap in the literature of this peninsula which has for some time past made itself felt.

One of the most pleasing features of this work is the series of remarkable photographs taken from life by Captain Fayrer, I.M.S. These illustrations form a most valuable addition and go far to promote the general excellence of the book. The portraits of the grey pelican, the Indian adjutant, and the Indian paddy bird are quite masterpieces.

A finishing touch is given to the volume by an appendix which includes a list of all the birds that have been recorded both in the British Isles and in India, by a glossary of commonly-used expressions, and by a complete index. The work is produced in the publisher's plain, yet handsome style, which goes far towards the pleasure of perusal.

To our readers interested in field natural history, more especially in its ornithological branch, we can recommend Birds of the Plains whole-heartedly. To the author we will express the hope that the result of future research may be presented to us at no great distant date, and we feel sure that purchasers of the latest production from the facile pen of Mr. Dewar will welcome with equal cordiality such another volume.

PHILIPPINE WILD GAME AND BIRDS.

To those interested in bird, animal and flower life, the Philippines present a never-ending charm. The species of birds are so brilliant and varied, the appearance and habits of the animals so strange, and the flora so huge, so splendidly coloured and so overwhelming that one feels the constant pleasure of being in a land where all is a delight to the eye.

Often in these islands can be seen singular birds. Huge pigeons, as large as barnyard fowls and heavier, coo to their mates from the lofty summits of giant trees; doves of alluring and sparkling colours, rivaling those of a macaw or pheasant, fly swiftly through the dense foliage, sending forth after reaching the shelter of their resting place their melancholy plaint. Jungle fowl hardly to be distinguished from the American gamecocks flit like shadows across the trails; great callao birds, large as turkeys, with enormous red bills eight or nine inches long, and often several inches in diameter, set the forest ringing with their thin, hoarse roaring.

At first hearing the timorous man might take this roaring for that of a wild beast, so unlike the call of a bird is the note of the mysterious and rarely seen callao. This species is one of the oldest known, and a member of it is about as near a prehistoric bird as any in the world. The callao is called the hour bird by the natives because it is believed to cry off the hours of day. The reason for this belief is probably found in the fact that the bird visits different parts of the forest at the same periods of each day and when alighting upon a tree gives a harsh, bleating call. The callaos are fruit-eating birds and their bills are wonderfully adapted for cutting soft fruit, being large and sharp. There is a remarkable variation in the shape and size of the birds, the ordinary callao being so different when young from what he is when old that the native insist that it is a different species. The common callao is of a creamy colour. In detail the bird has a black back and head, a snow white tail and a bronze or golden coloured neck. This bird is said to resemble the famous hornbill family of South America, and there are twelve species known to the Philippines. The male bird plasters up the female in the nest with mud just as the hornbill does, and then feeds her, in which act he looks very much like a woodpecker pecking at a tree. The young birds are fat and are considered very good eating.

Besides the callao there are huge fruit-eating bats, whose spread of membrane equals that of an eagle's wings, these fly by night in countless thousands toward some great natural forest orchard. There are quail, too, some of them as small as the English sparrow; ducks, herons and brant of familiar and unknown types, which crowd unexplored lagoons in vast flocks. Everything is wild, shy and easily startled. Even domestic fowl have caught the note of wildness, and in the Igorrote country an instance is mentioned of a tame hen, a speckled Biddy, that deserted her brood and flew hundred feet across a canyon at the approach of a stranger.

To get some accurate information on the rare birds of the Philippines, Fajor Edgar A. Fearns, a surgeon in the United States army, was interviewed by Hamilton Wright, a well known correspondent. For thirty years Major Mearns has made a study of rare fauna and flora. He has discovered many new specimens and was for some years actively engaged with the Smithsonian Institution.

"The Philippines," stated Major Mearns, "contain fauna, birds and animals which do not, so far as is known, exist anywhere else in the world. They were probably driven down by the advance of the glaciers and escaped to the mountains on account of their more congenial temperature. As the glaciers receded the birds would descend from the mountains and go to temperate climes which suited them and remain there.

The islands have been subject to many remarkable volcanic and glacial changes. As a consequence they have many varied fauna. We have two distinct fauna on the two islands of Luzon and Mindanao. These islands are near together and in any other part of the world they would have the same birds; but it is true that you will find a great many distinct forms of bird life in Mindanao which are not found in Luzon.

On the top of Mount Apo, a spouting volcano in the Davas region of Mindanao, we discovered six new species and five new genera. Among these were seventeen new mammalia. Down in the Davas district, at the foot of Apo, I discovered one new monkey and two insectivorous animals looking like moles. One was a kangaroo-shaped animal and was a great jumper. The other was a mole that climbs trees; he had a big bushy tail. The eyes of both these moles were well developed.

"The great changes of the earth," continued Major Mearns, "the result of volcanic eruptions, which brought the bottom of the sea up in the form of islands in the sea, affect the distribution of birds and animals. All the Philippines belong to the Asiatic continent. Some one once said that Porto Rico would be a very good country if it could be sunk for a little while and get rid of the human fauna. There are 691 birds in the Philippines that are known at present: that is, there are 691 identified species, and there are two species not identified, and 284 genera. There are twenty genera and forty-two species of pigeons. Of these only one belongs to the same species as our domestic pigeons, but they are about twice as big. They vary in size from that of a robin to the big torcasa pigeons and nicobar pigeons, which are almost as large as a domestic fowl. On Bold Island probably never visited by ornithologists before, I discovered Miscadevois Langhorne; named after Captain George T. Langhorne, secretary of the Moro province, a bird about the size of a torcasa, almost like a balud, a wild pigeon, which is about the size of a chicken. This new pigeon is one of the largest and prettiest of the fruit-eating pigeons. It has a beautiful metalic green on the back with a hoop-band of gray across the tail. Five of the smaller pigeons are largely green in colour, as bright as a parrot's with plumage veined with red, brown, rose colour, orange, and yellow."

The laymen in the Philippines does not, of course, recognize the wonderful new species of birds of which Major Mearns speaks, but he sees many remarkable and gayly coloured birds in the dense forest. The writer spent ten days hunting the callao before he finally succeeded in getting a specimen. The huge birds alight on the tops of the tallest trees and are almost out of reach of any but the heavier buckshot.

The hunter in the Philippines can have probably as good sport in hunting deer, wild boar and wild buffalo as he can in hunting wild game perhaps anywhere else in the world. There are probably millions and millions of deer in the Philippines. In the remote provinces of the interior of Luzon almost every little wooded hollow will contain several deer. Once, up on the borders of the Cagayan Valley, we got thirty-five deer in two days, and could have killed a good many more had it been desired. With the exception of two of the deer, all were killed by running them down on fleet horses and spearing them. The Philippine deer is a little larger than the American red deer, Cervis Virginianus. The natives take small mongrel cur dogs into the brush, and by repeated halloing and the barking of the dogs the deer are scared out of the gullies into the broad, rolling pampas. The Philippine deer is heavy of body and is unable to run fast. When hard pressed by the excited sportsmen on their swift little ponies the deer runs stiff-legged, jumping high up in the air and down, bouncing like a rubber ball, and are soon overtaken. A peculiarity of the Philippine deer is that, instead of bleating like the American deer, they give a hoarse, sharp, ringing bark. Often the male deer sets the hills ringing as he barks to his mate at sundown. In the night in the Philippines you can hear the deer barking, and sometimes you can see them in the white tropical moonlight.

A deer hunt on horseback is far more exciting than a fox hunt in the States. When the deer once gets into the open country he selects the roughest spots imagineable. He will jump up to his belly in an estero or creek, or he will run at full speed through cogon grass higher than a man's head. As soon as your horse sees a deer it is all off; all you can do is to let the reins loose and hold on for "deer" life. It is a strange sight to see a hundred or perhaps a hundred and fifty natives, armed with their long spears, and howling in their enthusiasm upon the course of a deer. A running deer in the Philippines seems to be making much better time than a pony, and the average hunter who sees one of these animals fleeing will declare he is as big as a house and jumps as much as thirty feet at a bound. But as a matter of fact this deer will dress about 200 pounds and cover eight or ten feet in its jumps. They are, however, able to go up or down hill rapidly, as they jump so high.

Deer in the Philippines are either caught in nets or run down and speared. To run down a deer requires a trained pony which the native calls a "banu caballo," or deer horse. These animals are rough, shaggy, unkempt little brutes, so low in stature that a man's feet are not more than a foot from the ground as he rides. But they are fleet of foot and will run down a deer every time in the open country. The deer horse follows precisely in the track of his fleeing quarry; no obstacle deters him. He leaps through the high cogon grass or almost flies over the great meadows of wild gramma grass (which is a fine pasture forage bearing a cereal something like oats) pursuing the fleeing "banu."

Greater sport than deer hunting is the pursuit of the wild carabao or water buffalo. Though a clumsy looking animal, the carabao can move with incredible swiftness when once he is aroused. If hit, or even fired at, and he sees his enemy, the wild carabao will immediately charge him. Lieutenant Louis C. Dean of the Philippines constabulary had an exciting adventure with a carabao near Echague, a city located at the Cagayan Valley. Dean was out with an expedition of Philippine constabulary, or native soldiers, and about thirty miles west of Echague they sighted a small herd of carabao. The constabulary soldiers selected a large bull and fired a volley into it. Dean then went closer and fired seven shots from a Springfield into the animal, most of which hit the mark. The carabao fell, then got up and ran into a patch of cogon grass, which was higher than a man's head. Dean, thinking that the carabao had gone to die, dismounted, and, taking a 38 Colt's revolver, followed the animal's tracks into the edge of the jungle patch. He had no sooner reached the edge of the patch than the carabao, who had circled around, charged him from the rear. The soldiers hallooed and Dean turned, and by dodging managed to shoot seven times into the carabao; but the shots had no more effect than so many mosquito bits. Finally the carabao caught the young lieutenant, tossed him up until he was unconscious, then prepared to kneel on him as a wild elephant does. But life seeming to have departed, the carabao abandoned his intention, sniffed the body, walked away about three hundred yards and died. Dean was frightfully mauled and disfigured for life and was transferred by the constabulary to Manila. He became a hopeless invalid and died from the effects of an overdose of morphine taken to allay his pain.

There are thousands of wild boar in the Philippines and you can shoot them anywhere. The natives usually drive them into nets with dogs. Sometimes they are caught in pitfalls or traps. No one ever heard of the Philippine wild boar attacking any one, although it grows to a great size and looks very fierce. Like the wild jungle fowl, which will breed with domestic poultry, the wild boar will breed freely with the native pigs.

A peculiar animal found in the Philippines, and thought to be limited to the island of Basilanm, not far from Zamboanga, is the monkey stoat. This animal grows to about twice the size of a big cat. It has wings like a bat and is covered with a thick red-brown fur, spotted with white. It lives solely on insects. To the layman the head resembles that of a weasel. The monkey stoat is exceedingly tenacious of life, and about the only way to get a specimen is to have it trapped.—Breeder Sportsman.

RIFLE NOTES.

President Roosevelt's Battery.

The battery with which President Roosevelt has armed himself and his party for his African Expedition according to newspaper account consists of the following rifles, all of American make.

The ·405—presumably a ·95 model Winchester five shot magazine rifle—which carries a 300 grain soft-nosed bullet with a high velocity nitre charge, the muzzle velocity being nearly 2,200 feet per second and the muzzle energy over 3,000 ft. lbs. This is a very handy and excellent sporting rifle with sufficient power for most kinds of game, its lever action makes it almost equal to an automatic rifle in speed and accuracy; it has a flatter trajectory than the ·303 within sporting ranges and double its power, but it is distinctly inferior to the ·400 cordite express rifle of corresponding calibre in hard-hitting qualities, the latter with its heavier 400 grain bullet having a muzzle energy of some 4,300 ft. lbs. with about the same velocity and flat trajectory.

The next rifle mentioned is the ·45-70 of extra light weight, presumably the 1886 model Winchester magazine rifle chambered for the old ·450 United States Military Cartridge. This rifle, the "extra light weight model 1886," is a four shot repeater with a half length tube magazine and with a detachable or fixed barrel of nickel steel ·22 inches long. It weighs only 6½lbs. with a fixed barrel or 7¼lbs. with a detachable barrel. The ordinary black powder ammunition, 70 grains of black powder and 405 grain bullet can be used in it, but its barrel is made of nickel steel specially to carry the high velocity nitro charge, a 300 grain soft-nosed bullet with 1,850 feet per second muzzle velocity and 2,200 ft. lbs. muzzle energy. In power and trajectory it is about equal to the best of the old black powder expresses of corresponding calibre. Its light weight and handiness and the comparatively large cross section of its bullet make it a very useful weapon for ordinary sporting ranges. It is a pity that the size of its bore (·450) prohibits its use in India as the high velocity charge gives it nearly all the advantage of the small bore, while the comparatively light 300 grain bullet has not the dangerously long range of the small bore bullet.

The third rifle mentioned is the ·30 calibre carrying the 1903 pattern of United States Military Cartridge, a 220 grain bullet with a muzzle velocity of 2,200 foot seconds and over 2,300 ft. lbs. of muzzle energy. This rifle, which is intended for long range shots, is presumably of the Winchester 1895 model, which is a handy weapon of the same dimensions as the ·405 high velocity Winchester already mentioned, with a 24 inch barrel and rimless cartridge. It is considerably inferior in power to the ·375 303 or ·318 rifles introduced within the last two or three years by Westley Richards. The ·375-303 carries a 215 grain bullet with a muzzle velocity of 2,500 foot seconds and a muzzle energy of about 2,950 ft. lbs. The charge can be increased to give a muzzle speed of 2,700 foot seconds which raises the energy to nearly 3,500 ft. lbs.

The ·318 rifle, which was intended to take the place off the ·303 in India, is a still more powerful rifle; its energy 2,500 foot seconds, muzzle velocity 3,400 ft. lbs. Its charge can be increased. The powder used in these rifles is axite, which gives less pressure than cordite and among its good qualities has far less wearing effect on the barrel. No doubt this propellant or something of the same kind will be adopted for service purposes some day.

The American Army rifle now carries the 1906 pattern cartridge It has a pointed bullet of 150 grains, which is driven at a muzzle velocity of 2,700 foot seconds and has, like other similar military cartridges, a very flat trajectory up to long ranges. It may with modifications make a good sporting bullet.

The only other weapon, besides short guns and revolvers carried by the Presidential shikar party, is a weapon which is described as a light high velocity rifle of ·400 bore carrying a 170 grain bullet. The only weapon of this description that I know of is the Winchester ·38 repeater of 1892 model, the bore of which is really ·400 inch. Its bullet is 180 grains, and the high velocity smokeless cartridge "the ·38·40" has a muzzle velocity of 1,700 foot seconds with 1,154 ft. lbs. muzzle energy.

The light weight half magazine 5-shot carbine of this model only weighs 5½lbs. and is a very handy little weapon. It has a fairly flat trajectory, ought to do well for buck and small game up to 200 yards. Its low velocity smokeless or ordinary black powder cartridge has a muzzle speed of about 1,300 foot seconds and the cases like those of the ·45-70 can be refilled with black powder charges and cast lead bullets if necessary. The most powerful weapon taken is the ·405 which is now well known in India. It is of course a powerful weapon of its kind, but hardly, I think, sufficiently so for the biggest African game, for which the very superior larger calibre high power double barrelled rifles of our makers are much better adapted.

B.

THE "HOMOCENTRIC" LENS.

The first lenses in the early days of photography were taken from small telescopes or binocular glasses, used with extremely small diaphragm in front, and necessitated exposures of prohibitive length. For some time the attention given to the production of more suitable lenses was directed to improvement of such single combinations, and to rendering the chemical rays coincident with the visual; and it was not until the introduction of double combinations that any decided advance was made towards increased aperture and correction of distortion. Then came the wonderful objective for portraits calculated by Petzval, which to this day is made and holds its own in many of the best studios at home and abroad, and the Ross Doublets for Landscapes, Architecture, Copying, and all the varied requirements of field and outdoor photography.

Following on these from Steinheil's formula were developed the Symmetrical and Rectilinear; and first-class makers were still endeavouring to bring about improvements on much the same lines when the new glass manufactured at Jena was introduced.

This suggested fresh possibilities for those investigators who were pretty well convinced that little better results could be expected than had been already obtained with the limited variety of glass at their disposition.

Serious calculations based on the properties of the new material brought forth the Anastigmatic lenses, the first of which was the Concentric produced in the Workshops of Ross from the formula of Doctor Schroeder.

This lens astonished everyone in the photographic world—it gave a perfect image over an absolutely flat field of large extent, a result never before attained. It failed, however, like the older lenses, as regards rapidity, as its largest aperture was hardly adequate for anything but long exposures. The rage for instantaneous and snapshot work having already set in, the Concentric was soon discarded for Anastigmats of larger aperture.

Of these, the very excellent Anastigmats of Zeiss were introduced into this country by Ross and Co., who obtained the right of manufacture. Ross and Co. also became sole British manufacturing licensees for the Goerz Double Anastigmats.

In 1902, Ross, Ld., secured the services of a mathematician who worked out the formula of construction of the "Homocentric," and in the hands of their skilled workmen this lens was produced and immediately became popular, owing to its exceptional properties. These include great rapidity, extended covering absolute to the margin of the field, with definition unsurpassed by any existing lens. In fact it is a lens that answers all the purposes of the photographer, except perhaps in the case of extremely wide angle work, for which a special lens is sometimes desirable.

The lens is equal in all respects to any existing modern Anastigmat Lens, while certain aberrations hitherto considered unavoidable are entirely eliminated. Anastigmat Lenses, well corrected for flatness of field and freedom from astigmatism, generally possess Spherical Aberration in their intermediate Zones, i.e., if the central and marginal areas of the lens have their focus in one and the same point, the foci of the intermediate Zones will not coincide with this focus. This focal difference, rarely amounting to less than a half and often to more than one per cent of the whole focal length of the lens, naturally creates diffusion in the picture, possibly not very noticeable in ordinary work with short focus lenses, but very apparent when long focus lenses are employed, or when critical definition is necessary.

The "Homocentric" is absolutely free from this Zonal or Intermediate Spherical Aberration; all the rays of greatest chemical activity passing through the lens parallel to the axis meet within $\frac{1}{100}$ per cent. of the focal length of the lens in Series "V" f/8, within $\frac{1}{50}$ per cent. in Series "III" f/6·3, and within $\frac{1}{25}$ per cent. for the Series "II" f/5·6.

In all lenses not perfectly corrected for "Zonal Aberration" the focus at full aperture will not be the same when small stops are employed, and great inconvenience will be experienced where a critically sharp picture is essential. The focus of the "Homocentric" does not alter whatever stop is used. Therefore the object may be conveniently focussed with the full aperture and the exposure made with any stop without refocussing.

The "Homocentric" is free from the aberration known as Coma, which has been eliminated after a long series of calculations and experiments. Coma, when present in a lens, produces in the negative a grey and flat appearance, the finer contrasts being lost, and the detail veiled in the faint stray light resulting from this aberration. This flatness and greyness in negatives is often attributed to errors of exposure, development, or faulty plates, whereas they are often due to an excess of Coma in the lens used.

In short the "Homocentric" whilst equal, and in some respects superior, to all other Anastigmats as regards Chromatic Correction, Flatness of Field, Freedom from Astigmatism, Coma and Distortion, stands unrivalled in its absolute freedom from Zonal Spherical Aberration, which not only gives far greater certainty in focussing, and more fineness and contrast in the details, but also allows the negatives to be enlarged directly by means of a Telephoto attachment or indirectly from the unfinished negative with much more satisfactory results than with any other known lens.

Extract from "THE FIELD" Newspaper,

19th January, 1907.

As sporting rifle Makers Messrs. Holland and Holland attach very great importance to achieving a high standard of accuracy in target results. A notice in this journ of a new rifle and cartridge has, by long custom included shooting results at 100 yards, firing from the table rest, and year by year for a long time past the closeness of groupi as shown a marked tendency towards improvement.

"The group illustrated was made with the 365-grain bullet as fired from the ·465 cartridge. It was produced at the very first attempt, and it constitutes what see likely to stand for some time to come as a record amongst properly authenticated targets. The centres of the whole seven shots lie within a space practically 1 in. square (actually 1·00 in. by 1·05 in.), and the reader may satisfy himself from the reproduction of part of the actual target that all the shots would have hit a postage stamp. It interesting to know that the sights used were of the open variety, and that orthoptic spectacles were not employed.

THE TURF.

HURST PARK.

LAST Saturday under the drying influences of a keen east wind, the saturated course regained its springiness, and although the sun was in the ascendant, yet the "razor edge" of the wind was never blunted, and everyone was cold. With such a good imitation of the Grand National programme on the card, it was not surprising that the attendance was a good one, the handy service of specials from Waterloo being well patronised and the gathering was worthy of the occasion. Possibly at no other rendezvous in England on Saturday would racing have been practicable save at Hurst Park, whose thick, carpety grass had almost succumbed to another attack of severe frost. In fact, grave doubts were entertained of the practicability of completing the meeting, but a warmer stratum of air and a bit of sunshine came to the rescue, and the course got back again into fair order before business concluded. MANCHESTER.

For the opening of the meeting there was such a glorious day as has rarely fallen to the lot of the Manchester officials, and for once the whole course, with its surrounding little hills, was as clear and bright as the South Downs in summer. The attendance, which depended principally on local support, was a good one, and the course in excellent order, while fields panned as well as could be expected, and backers had a good day, Coolmoon being the only favourite to fail during the afternoon Results:—

With a keen recollection of past disappointments, visitors looked out on a very foggy Manchester on Tuesday morning and the mist, moreover, spread beyond the outskirts. Luck, however, was on the side of the management, and it was surprising to see how quickly and effectually the wind, rising with the sun, swept the air clear as crystal, and allowed a free view of the course. All traces of a rather sharp frost had been banished from the ground by the glorious sunshine, and the going was again excellent, while early morning arrivals had materially supplemented the list of competitors. The attendance—again principally a gathering of the Lancashire clans—was a good one, and the muster in Tattersall's was supplemented by several sportsmen who took the meeting in their stride towards Altcar for the coursing carnival. Results:—

WINDSOR.

The going is not on top of the ground after the thermometer can be read by daylight, and at Windsor on Wednesday the track was absolutely soft. East and Mid-London was enveloped in a thick fog, but the specials glided out into a sunny country, where it was a halcyon day, the Thames, drained low, being only half-bank high, with scarcely a ripple to ruffle its mirror-like surface. Doubtless, the fog in town had frightened many intending visitors away, as the attendance was by no means a full one; but those present were treated to a capital day's sport. Results:—

Another frosty night proved the precursor of another fine day on Friday and the going at Windsor was again on the soft side, thanks to the February sunshine. The members' train was by no means crowded, but the attendance showed a palpable increase on the first day's muster, and taken all round, the executive have not much cause for complaint. Fields were of fair size, but backers were very wide of the mark, as it was not until the last race on the card was reached that a favourite proved successful. Results.—

FOOTBALL.

ASSOCIATION RULES.

ALTHOUGH outplayed in the second half and beaten in the end by 4 goals to 0, Ireland on Saturday, at Bradford, in the first of the great Association internationals of the season, made to the interval a capital fight with England. Indeed, up to that time the general opinion was that the visiting side was the best that had ever represented the sister isle against England. The home team, no doubt, had the bigger share of the play, but the Irish halves—generally the weak point—tackled in capital form, and if not breaking up the Englishmen's attack, kept Hilsdon and the left wing well in check. The backs, kicked with judgment, and if Young and O'Hagan were only occasionally prominent, Hunter brought off a number of dashing runs and generally finished with a skilful centre. All round the Irishmen's play was full of life, and though the home side got in some awkward shots towards the interval, Scott, keeping a brilliant goal, was never beaten during this period. Both Cottle and Lintott fell distinctly below international form, and when the players returned to the field everybody looked forward to an exciting finish. Expectations in this direction were sadly disappointed. The English forwards at once regained the upper hand of the visiting halves, and if Berry did not justify his selection, Woodward continued to display all his well-known skill and judgment. Hilsdon and Windridge improved enormously, and Bridgett, though lame, put in some clever and strenuous work. The Irish forwards made spasmodic attacks, but for the most part were well held in check. Wedlock—always untiring—showed a distinct improvement upon his last year's form, Warren was quietly safe, and Lintott quite rehabilitated his reputation, considerably damaged in the opening half.

Within six minutes of the resumption Hilsdon had given his side the lead, and though another point by that player was disallowed, a score by Woodward placed the issue beyond all reasonable doubt. England, indeed, after change of ends were always master of the situation, and though for some time they met with no further success there came just before the close other goals—one headed by Woodward and another by Hilsdon from a penalty. It is to be regretted that after making so bold a show in the first half the Irishmen should have fallen off so badly afterwards, but with all its life their play never attained to the excellence displayed by England after the interval. Berry was never quite good enough for the occasion, but Lintott and Cottle atoned for some weakness at starting, so the Selection Committee should not require to make many changes in picking the team to meet Wales at Nottingham next month.

Newcastle United had their position at the head of the First Division of the League strengthened on Saturday. While they were gaining a bare victory at Preston, Everton, Sheffield Wednesday, and Manchester United were each engaged in drawn games. Four points to the good with a dozen fixtures to fulfil, Newcastle United should now carry off the championship, despite the additional work and anxiety caused by Cup ties. They appear in London next Saturday to play West Ham United in the third stage of the struggle for the Football Association trophy, and, with a task that appears so light, they may be expected to reach the fourth round without trouble. A feature of yesterday's results was the fine form shown by visiting teams, four winning and four avoiding defeat. Chelsea's success at Sunderland stands out as the most remarkable result. In the absence of Warren, Windridge, and Hilsdon, all playing for England, Chelsea seemed to have a poor prospect of repeating the victory they gained over Sunderland at Stamford Bridge. They had nothing to spare scoring the winning goal shortly before the finish ; but the ability to force a win under disadvantageous circumstances should give the side fresh confidence. Woolwich Arsenal drew with the City team at Manchester, and neither of the London clubs need now feel much apprehension of having to struggle to avoid reduction.

With a brilliant victory over Blackpool, Tottenham Hotspur won their fourteenth match in the Second League competition, and they now possess the best record in the division. They are still a point behind the leaders—West Bromwich Albion—who were defeated at Oldham ; but the London club have a game in hand and a far better goal average. If the men steer clear of accidents and do not lose their form in the cup-ties, there seems every reason to expect that the season will prove one of the brightest in the history of the club. They certainly possess a splendid chance of promotion, as Bolton Wanderers, their nearest rivals, are still a point behind them and have fulfilled two more engagements. Fulham were rather unexpectedly beaten by Bolton Wanderers and their prospects of getting into the First Division are once more remote. The game was splendidly contested, Bolton Wanderers giving a delightful display of clever football and thoroughly deserving their victory.

SUNDERLAND vs. CHELSEA.—Favoured with beautifully fine weather the visit of Chelsea to Sunderland drew together some 16,000 spectators. Neither side was at full strength, Hilsdon, Windridge, and Warren, of Chelsea, and Bridgett, of Sunderland, being all engaged in the International at Bradford. During the opening stages of the game the play was fast and exciting, but the shooting left a lot to be desired, and many good openings were lost. On three occasions Humphreys had the Sunderland goal at his mercy but failed to score. Nearing the interval Holley scored from a pass by Hogg, and a minute later Douglas equalised. On crossing over the play was much more spirited than before, the Chelsea forwards passing accurately and carrying on their attacks with excellent understanding. Humphreys and Birnie showed marked skill and were probably the most prominent men on the field. Thompson sent in a good shot for Sunderland, but Cameron cleared, being ably assisted by Walton and Whitley. At length Chelsea, who had attacked persistently, were rewarded, Bridgeman close on time shooting through. Chelsea, 2 ; Sunderland, 1.

MANCHESTER CITY vs. WOOLWICH ARSENAL.—Twenty thousand people assembled at Manchester to see this match. Woolwich Arsenal had not their strongest side, and at the last Fitchie could not play. On the Manchester side Thornley took the place of Stewart. There was a rather sensational opening to the game, as four minutes from the start Gray, in attempting to kick away a free kick put the ball through his own goal, and so gave Manchester the lead. Soon afterwards, however, Ducat equalised with a long shot being allowed by the opposing defence to take good aim. Following that the game was fairly even in character and at half time the score was still one goal each. About a quarter of an hour after resuming good work by Ducat, who played splendidly at half back, enabled Lewis to shoot through for Woolwich, the home goalkeeper allowing the ball to slip through his hands. The Arsenal held their lead until seven minutes from the end, and then Honford, who had just before missed with a penalty kick, diverted a centre by Conlin into the net. HOTSPUR vs. BLACKPOOL.—Tottenham Hotspur, without V. J. Woodward, who was playing for England at Bradford, found little difficulty in beating Blackpool at Tottenham, the margin in their favour being 4 goals to 1. Woodward's absence caused the first alteration in the team for several weeks, Macfarlane being brought in at centre forward. That player acquitted himself splendidly, and his work led up to at least two of the four points scored. He also got in some splendid shots himself, which would have beaten a less capable goalkeeper than Fiske. After their capital display in their Cup tie against Newcastle United the form shown by Blackpool was very disappointing. Of the forwards only Read and Tonge attempted much combination, and the halfbacks were completely at sea with the clever Tottenham front line. In the first minute of the game, the Blackpool goal had a very narrow escape from a shot by Walton, and after five minutes R. Steel beat Fiske with a shot that no goalkeeper could have saved. Then, after Burton had pulled up Read in fine style, Middlemiss received a delightful pass from Macfarlane, and running half the length of the field, the Tottenham outside left scored with a terrific drive. Read was again responsible for some clever work on the Blackpool right, and after tricking Burton, he sent in a centre from which Walker scored a very easy goal. Soon after Hewitson stopped a fine drive from Baddeley, but Tottenham resumed the attack, and Middlemiss scored their third point as the result of some clever close play by Macfarlane. The play deteriorated somewhat in the second half, and to add to their misfortunes Blackpool lost Read, who received a nasty kick on the head. He returned, however, after about ten minutes' absence. Towards the finish Tottenham infused more life into their work, and shot after shot was sent in at Fiske. He kept them all out, however, until beaten by Minter from a corner, and, but for his fine display, Blackpool would have lost by an even bigger margin. Tottenham Hotspur, 4 ; Blackpool, 1.

FULHAM vs. BOLTON WANDERERS.—Fulham once again disappointed their supporters at Craven Cottage, where a crowd of 15,000 people saw the home team defeated by 2 goals to 1. The conditions were excellent, although it took players some time to settle down to the adamantine ground. Both sides were at full strength. The first goal came at the end of ten minutes, when Freeman, whose position was open to question, got the ball, and beating Baverstock, scored with a fine goal. A great shot from Lipsham went just over the bar, and after Bolton, whose halfbacks played brilliantly, had shown great improvement, Hughes equalised with a good shot, following smart work by Greenhalgh and Stokes. Dalrymple missed a good chance of putting Fulham in front by shooting wide from a good position, and just before the interval Hunter, beating Charlton and Fryer, shot towards the goal. Hogan seized upon the chance and rushed up to score a rather easy goal. The play in the second half was again very entertaining, but the home forwards were lacking in resource. Two fine shots by Parsonage were cleared by the Bolton keeper, who also got away a powerful drive from Dalrymple. Fryer, also saved well from Hunter and also from Hogan after Stokes had made a good run. Fulham made strong, but futile efforts to equalise in the closing moments. Bolton Wanderers, 2 ; Fulham, 1.

VELOCITY 2,250ft. sec.

This cartridges originally designed did not, in our opinion, come up to a sufficiently high standard, and in consequence our expert visited Messrs. Kynoch's Works, and in conjunction with their experts conducted a series of experiments extending over three weeks, ultimately designing the bullets now in use for this popular rifle.

LANG'S therefore confidently claim that in collaboration with Messrs. Kynoch they were the first to introduce the ·470, and as evidence submit the following extract from the Field, and illustration of the actual diagram made before the editor of that journal.

"FIELD," 23rd March 1907 : ". . . . A very valuable advance has been achieved, and Messrs. Lang are to be congratulated on their enterprise in so promptly bringing forward a rifle and cartridges complying with the two most pressing demands in sporting rifles, viz., a weapon to take the place of the prohibited ·450, and a cartridge which shows an advance in flatness of trajectory, with a diminution of recoil and pressure."

CLAPTON ORIENT vs. STOCKPORT COUNTY.—After the poor display against Chesterfield a fortnight previously Clapton Orient reverted to what was practically the old constitution of the side in the game at Homerton against Stockport County. The policy was brilliantly successful, for the Orient deservedly won by 5 goals to 0, a result that greatly pleased a crowd of 7,000 spectators. For Clapton, L. A. Louch reappeared in the centre, Scott played inside left, while Word, Bell, Reason, and Whittaker were again back in their places. The forwards all over played a clever and effective game, and Parker was exceptionally brilliant at outside right. With the exception of Settle, the old International forward, the visitors had their full side, but almost from start to finish, they were playing largely on the defensive. They could never control Parker, whose centres, after giving Ward and Scott fine chances, allowed McLean to score the first goal twenty-five minutes after the opening. The second goal ten minutes after was the result of some clever play by Parker, Scott being left to shoot into an untenanted goal. Within five minutes after the resumption Clapton Orient had scored two more goals, Scott running clean through the Stockport defence and getting home a powerful drive, and Louch shooting past Molyneaux, when that goalkeeper ran out to charge down the shot. Thereafter, Parker put in several great individual efforts, in which he more than once beat the whole defence with the exception of the goalkeeper, who twice effected most wonderful saves. Fifteen minutes from the close, after one of Parker's bursts, which brought a corner, Louch headed through a fifth goal and by this decisive score the home team ultimately won. MILLWALL vs. NORWICH CITY.—In view of their coming engagement in the Cup competition Millwall and Norwich City played an easy game before 5,000 spectators, at North Greenwich. Neither side was at full strength, Millwall being without Riley, their right half, and Jones, their inside left. Their places were taken by Waller and Vincent, Craig and Tomlinson could not turn out for Norwich, who were hard pressed al through the second half. In the first two or three minutes Roney, their goalkeeper, left his charge and ran out to the corner flag, but Millwall failed to find the net. Roney, however, made several fine saves before he was beaten by Vincent at the end of twenty mintues. The ball was then slanted across by Dean to Tellum, and the last-named gave Vincent the pass, from which a goal was scored. Shortly after there was some close work by three Millwall forwards in front of Roney, and in the scrimmage Twigg sent the ball into the net. Thus at the change or ends Millwall led by two goals, and Joyce, their goalkeeper, had only a couple of really difficult shots to stop. Norwich had rather more of the game directly after the interval, but Millwall again pressed strongly. Subsequently, however, Waller erred in the Norwich penalty area. Allsopp took the kick and gave Norwich their only goal. Fine saves were made for their respective sides by Roney and Joyce during the closing stages. Millwall, 2; Norwich, 1.

BRENTFORD vs. PLYMOUTH ARGYLE.—Playing at home in splendid weather, before about 4,000 people, Brentford gained a very meritorious win over Plymouth Argyle by 1—0. The visitors turned up with a very strong eleven, but Brentford had to take the field without Ewing at left-back, Ramsden figuring in his place. At the start of the game the home side went away at a great pace, and after McKenzie had missed a somewhat easy shot, with Sutcliffe well beaten, a goal was registered by the home team from a simple movement. Atterbury had kicked into touch near the goal line, and, from the throwing by Ryalls, Sugden centred to Reid, who, standing unmarked, headed the ball past Sutcliffe. This reverse did not upset the visitors much and, playing a pretty game, they continually looked like scoring. Their fine work in mid-field, however, was never carried right through, and the most dangerous shots from their side were sent in from long range. Once McIntyre, running to the centre, sent in a long drive which McIvor saved well, while Warburton was also in the picture. The best shot of the match, however, came from Hindmarsh, who drove the ball with great force in the goal mouth only to see it deflected by the Brentford goalkeeper and a fruitless corner followed. Just before half-time Plymouth made a spurt, but Rhodes, who made few mistakes, and Ramsden kept them at bay, and at half-time the home side were a goal to the good. At the commencement of the second half, the Argyle had a fine chance, as Leavey had the goal at his mercy with a cross shot. McIvor, however, just got to the ball in time. At the other end Badger put in a chance shot, which Sutcliffe punched away splendidly, and then came some fine ding-dong work on both sides. Plymouth were occasionally dangerous, but they left their efforts too late. Brentford, 1; Plymouth Argyle 0.

ENGLAND vs. IRELAND.—The first of the international matches under Association rules took place on the 13th instant at Bradford, where the ground at Park Avenue—for many years identified with the Rugby game and until recently with Northern Union football—was the scene of the twenty-eighth contest between representative teams of England and Ireland. Of the previous twenty-seven matches England had won twenty-five, the other two having been drawn. The only change from the teams selected was that McConnell was unable to play centre-half for Ireland owing to injury received in the replayed Cup-tie between Sheffield Wednesday and Portsmouth, Darling in consequence being brought into the team at right half, and Harris going to centre. After a bright morning the weather, turned rather dull and cold, but remained fine. The game proved a big attraction, the company numbering quite 30,000 spectators. The field of play, which was bare of grass, had been well sanded, but despite this precaution it was still on the soft side. Scarcely any wind prevailed, and Woodward, winning the toss, gained little advantage thereby for England. Hardly had the game been started when Bridgett was injured and had to receive attention, play proceeding without him. He soon resumed, but was obviously very lame. Still England attacked, Hilsdon shooting wide, and then Cottle let the Irishmen in. Crompton relieved, and following further pressure by England, the Irish right wing went away, Hunter geting in a fine shot, which Hardy cleared. Berry started badly, hesitating to shoot with a good opening, and afterwards sending in wide. Ireland had a full share of the play for some minutes, McCartney kicking very strongly. The greasy surface of the turf handicapped the players considerably. Ten minutes from the start the Irish goal had a narrow escape, Woodward heading in from a corner, and Scott putting the ball over the bar, but Berry sent the succeeding corner behind. Warren and Wedlock were in great form, tackling and feeding the forwards well, and the cleverness of these two men added to Crompton's splendid kicking, kept Ireland well in check. Bridgett recovering, England set up several strong attacks, Woodward heading outside from a corner and Wedlock going wide. Hilsdon and Windridge accomplished little in the opening stages, the former missing a neat centre by Woodward, who in consequence played chiefly to Berry. A misunderstanding between Warren and Crompton let in Young, from whose centre the English goal narrowly escaped.

A foul just afterwards was given against England, dangerously, near the home goal, but Wedlock safely headed away, and after Hilsdon had lifted high over the bar, Bridget forced a further corner. The Irish half-backs worked much more skilfully than usual, and Hunter brought off several fine runs and centres. Still England pressed, and Hilsdon brought Scott to his knees, an exciting scrimmage ensuing in front of the Irish goal. Just afterwards, Woodward headed close in from a centre by Berry, and, with one interval drawing near, Scott saved grandly from Woodward and eventually cleared in brilliant style. Bridget next raced away, but his final shot went right across the goal mouth. With no one up at the other end, Young missed a great chance, and immediately afterwards Scott just got his foot in time to a finely directed effort by Hilsdon. Half-time:—

Ireland 0

On the game being resumed just after four o'clock, England at once dashed down, Hilsdon missing his kick, an awkward one right in front of goal. At the other end, following a centre by Hunter, Grier tried to charge Hardy, but the English goalkeeper eluded him. The second half had only lasted six minutes, when from Lintott's past Bridget centred well, and out of the ensuing scrimmage Hilsdon scored the first goal for England. The pressure on the Irish goal continued, the visiting half-backs failing to retain their early form. Scott just kicked away from Windridge, and then another skilful piece of work on the part of the English forwards followed. Bridgett centred to Woodward, who passed back to Hilsdon. The last-named shot through, but the offside rule caused the point to be disallowed. Scott next gave away a corner from a stinging shot by Hilsdon, and the kick being well placed, Woodward scored the second goal for England a quarter of an hour after the restart, Scott next saved from a fine shot by Warren. Play continued much in favour of England, whose half-backs were keeping the Irish front rank well in hand. Cottle, who appeared weak in the early stages, kicked with great power and judgment, and one of his corners fell to England, but the Irish goal was not in serious danger. During the next quarter of an hour, the Irishmen still worked with plenty of dash, but their attack lacked finish, and only rarely did Hardy handle. Ten minutes from the finish Balfe, kicking wildly, gave away a corner, which Bridget played well, and Windridge passed on to Woodward, who headed England's third goal. Before the end Hilsdon scored from a penalty given for a foul on Windridge, England thus winning by four goals to nil. The attendance was returned at approximately 28,000 and the gate receipts at £800. Result:—

England 4
Ireland 0

Teams:—

ENGLAND:—Hardy (Liverpool), goal; Crompton (Blackburn Rovers), and Cottle (Bristol City), backs; Warren (Chelsea), Wedlock (Bristol City), and Lintott (Bradford City), half-backs; A. Berry (Oxford University), V. J. Woodward (Tottenham Hotspur), captain, Hilsdon (Chelsea), Windridge (Chelsea), and Bridgett (Sunderland), forwards.

IRELAND:—Scott (Everton), goal; Balfe (Shelbourne) and McCartney (Glentoran), backs; Darling (Linfield), Harris (Everton), and McClure (Distillery), half-backs; Hunter (Belfast Celtic), Lacey (Everton), Grier (Queen's Park Rangers), O'Hagan (Aberdeen), and Young (Airdrieonians), forwards.

Kick-off 3 o'clock.

CORINTHIANS vs. OXFORD UNIVERSITY.—In their last trial match Oxford were beaten by the Corinthians, who scored two goals to nil at Queen's Club. Without Berry (playing for England) and W. C. Jordan, the University did not show to much advantage in attack, though Sayer and Maples put in some neat work on the left wing. Their chief strength was at half and full-back, where Braddell was particularly useful. The Corinthians were without several of their best players, and their form was not particularly good. The hard turf with a yielding surface bothered most of the men, and generally the game proved rather disappointing. No scoring occurred during the first half, Oxford holding their own and having rather bad luck, when Sayer hit a post. The Corinthians missed some chances, and in the second half neither forward line did well enough to promise goals. Sayer once got through and had a smart shot punched away by Rowlandson, while Appleton cleared from McIver. A quarter of an hour from the finish Vassall passed to R. A. Young, who sent in a low shot which gave the Corinthians the lead. Oxford played harder, but without success, and a clever kick by Vassal took effect. About 500 people saw the game. Corinthians, 2; Oxford University, 0.

RUGBY RULES.

IRELAND vs. ENGLAND.—The thirty-third match between Ireland and England under Rugby rules was decided on Saturday on the Lansdowne Road enclosure, Dublin. Of the previous games England had won twenty and Ireland eleven, and one, that in 1882, was drawn. The Irish fifteen took the field as originally selected, but several changes had been made on the England side. Williamson, Simpson, and Tarr dropped out of the back division and Sibree, of the Harlequins, came in at half, and the three-quarter line was completed by the inclusion of Poulton, Wright, and Palmer. There were, however, no further alterations in the team. The weather was pleasant, the sun shining brightly and the wind was slight, while the ground was in excellent condition. The crowd probably numbered 10,000, which is quite an average attendance for an international at the Irish headquarters. The game did not start till twenty minutes past three, Irish time. Ireland kicked off, and the game settled down at the centre, Mobbs making a good return. Sibree tried to break away from the scrummage, but was well tackled by Smartt. The Irish forwards made an effort to break away, but were checked by Mobbs, and then Poulton effected a good save. Parke dribbled through and picked up, but his pass was missed by Thrift. By hard kicking England reached the centre and in a rush Piper was temporarily knocked out, but soon resumed. The Irish forwards reached the English "twenty-five" line, but were forced back to midfield, where Poulton was tackled in trying to stop an Irish rush. England had a free kick, but did not gain much ground by it, the play still being in the English quarters. Then Sirbee started a movement which was carried on by Hutchinson, Poulton, and Wright, and ended by Palmer gaining a fine try, which he himself converted. This score came after about seven minutes play. Jackett made a fine return to the kick off, and the game was resumed at the centre. A short rush was made by the Irish forwards, but England soon recovered their ground. Then came a bout of passing by the Irish three-quarters, but Deane was well collared by Palmer. In some long kicking that followed Hinton came off best, finding touch in the English half. The play was rather loose, consisting of short forward rushes in which neither side held any particular advantage. Ireland had a free kick, and Jackett had his return charged down by Pennion, England having a narrow escape. Parke from his own mark had a shot at goal, but failed, and Jackett touched down. The game was continued near the English "twenty-five" line, and a free kick to Ireland was well taken by Hinton, but Jackett got in a good kick, and England once more reached the centre. The Irish forwards broke away, but were in the end checked by Mobbs. The Irish forwards were now playing well, and reached the English "twenty-five." England were penalised, but Pennion made a poor shot at goal. The Irish three-quarters attempted a bout of passing, but Thompson held too long and passed forward. Then the English backs were away and gained ground, Palmer cross-kicking and Hinton making only a moderate reply. The play was carried into the Irish quarters, but the Home forwards came away again, taking the game to the centre, England, however, were now doing better, the forwards holding their own and keeping the play in the Irish half. Mobbs and Wright brought off a combined run, and a similar effort was made by Wright and Poulton, and Ireland were kept somewhat on the defensive. Ireland however, worked past the centre, being helped by a free kick. Then England twice attacked, Mobbs being nearly over, and Parke from a dribble by Sibree kicking dead. At half time the score was:—

England ... ... 1 goal.
Ireland 0

The game was resumed in the Irish half, but Smartt found touch at the centre. A free kick to England was well taken by Jackett, who later made another capital effort of the same kind. Then came a fine passing movement by the English three-quarters, and Mobbs, who ran well, came very near scoring, the ball, apparently from a cross kick, going behind the dead ball line. On that occasion Ireland had a lucky escape. After the drop out Thrift ran to the centre, where he was tackled by Mobbs, and Hutchinson tried to break through, but was held up. Ireland had a free kick, but gained no ground. The Irish forwards rushed down, but twice in quick succession, Jackett saved cleverly, getting in his kick. Then the English forwards dribbled past the centre, reaching Hinton. The Irish three-quarters got away, but Deane knocked on Thompson's pass, losing a fair opening. A free kick enabled Ireland to reach England's "twenty-five," but Palmer following up a hard kick tackled Deane at the centre. Then Mobbs taking a pass from Wright gained a good try for England, but Palmer failed with the place kick. This score came rather less than a quarter of an hour after the resumption. Play was continued at the centre, but gradually England worked down. Then Sibree threw out to Palmer, who raced over with a try near the corner. He failed on his shot at goal, but England were then leading by 11 points. The Irish forwards worked down, but kicking too hard enabled Jackett to clear in clever fashion. The game was once more taken to the centre, where some sharp play took place, both sets of forwards bringing off some short rushes. Then came a bout of passing by the Irish backs, and Thrift was nearly over, being forced into touch just in time. A keen struggle followed, Ireland making desperate efforts to break through. These efforts were at last crowned with success. After a long forward rush, Parke scored a try for Ireland, and Pennion placed a goal. This was all, and when "no side" was called the score stood:—

England ... ... 1 goal 2 tries.

Teams:—

Ireland:—N. P. Hinton (Old Wesley), back; H. Thrift (Wanderers), J. C. Parke (Monstown), C. Thompson (Belfast Collegians), and E. C. Deane (Monkstown), three-quarter backs; F. N. Smartt (Dublin University), and G. Pennion (Belfast Collegians), half-backs; C. Adams (Old Wesley), F. Gardiner (North of Ireland), M. Garry (Bestive Rangers), G. Hamlet (Old Wesley), G. Piper (Cork Constitution), B. A. Solomons (Dublin), T. Smith (Malone), and H. G. Wilson (Malone), forwards.

England:—E. J. Jackett (Cornwall), back; A. C. Palmer (London Hospital), R. W. Poulton (Oxford University), and Harlequins), C. C. G. Wright (Cambridge University), and E. R. Ibbitson (Yorkshire), W. Johns (Gloucestershire), H. Archer (Somerset), F. G. Handford (Lancashire), A. J. Wilson (Cornwall), and H. J. S. Morton (Cambridge University), forwards.

BLACKHEATH vs. CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY.—At the Rectory Field, Blackheath played one of their best matches of the season against the Light Blues, and after having all the better of the game won by 19 points to 3. In fairness to the Cantabs, it must be stated that they were far from fully represented, no fewer than five—Morton, Ashcroft, Wright, Tudsbury, and Carey—being absent. Though somewhat greasy, the ground was in fairly good condition, and play ruled fast throughout. The home backs played well together, and always tackling strongly the opposition had very few openings. The Light Blues opened in promising style, and in the first few minutes Jones was over as the result of capital massing. Afterwards they had few chances, Blackheath, carrying the scrums on nearly every occasion. Erratic passing lost them two certain tries, after which Marsden grounded. Bilton soon increased their lead following a splendid combined movement, in which Twining, Marsden, and Mounsley took a big part. Stone added the extra points, while before change of ends Upson scored from a scrum, and Blackheath led at the interval by 11 points to 0. In the concluding half Blackheath practically monopolised the play, Cambridge only on rare occasions getting over the

TROPICAL DEBILITY.

HOW TO FIGHT IT.

Of all the evils which the inhabitant of the torrid zone is called upon to endure, the greatest are, perhaps, the deadly debility and nervous depression which are the forerunners of the more serious ills so rife in warmer latitudes. Physical fitness should be the constant watchword; healthy nerve force must be the subject of the most earnest consideration. Happiness, nay life itself, hangs in the balance.

When exhausted Nature fails readily to respond to the extraordinary demands made upon the system by the exigencies of climate, Science once more comes forward with precisely the needed remedy. Sanatogen, the tonic food, is the means discovered whereby impaired vitality may be safely and rapidly restored.

Sanatogen has a singular effectiveness. It is not as a tonic only that it stands unrivalled; it is, besides, a perfect food, extremely rich in just those properties necessary to the perfect nourishment of the depleted system. The basis of Sanatogen is the casein or "curd," the nitrogenous principle of milk. Nitrogenous foods are our bodybuilding ones. They are demanded constantly by the body for the formation, and for the repair of its tissues. United with the casein, we find glycero-phosphoric acid, which is an all-important constituent of the brain and nervous system. This is the reason then, why Sanatogen has obtained its high reputation. It repairs the wear and tear of the most vital parts of our frames, and above all it gives to brain and nerve their essential food in precisely the form in which they are capable of readily receiving and assimilating it.

Doctors in India have not been slow to see the wonderful advantages in the use of Sanatogen among their patients, and a great many of them have written setting out the success that has attended the use of this preparation. They have used it with the greatest success in Malaria, Dysentery, Enteric Fever, cases of Plague and Cholera, as well as amongst those who are suffering from ailments due to disordered liver, spleen or digestive system. One or two of their opinions are worth considering.

Thus Dr. H. H. W. HART, Hapur Remount Depot, Babugarh, United Provinces, India, writes:—

"I have much pleasure in certifying to the value of Sanatogen in cases of Malaria, Enteric Fever, Dysentery, and other exhausting diseases. I have used it regularly now in my practice for the past two years, and in no single instance have I been disappointed with its results. I can honestly affirm that many of my worst cases owed their recovery to Sanatogen. I could quote numerous cases where the administration of Sanatogen was followed by immediate and marked amelioration of the symptoms. I cannot speak too highly of its value, and I certainly consider it the best of artificial foods."

Whilst Dr. C. R. NAYLOR, Bangalore, South India, writes:—

"It was through my influence that your excellent medium of nutrition—Sanatogen—was introduced into South India, and I have reason to be proud of my success in doing so, for I consider that I have thereby conferred a benefit upon suffering humanity. I have found it unequalled by any other food when the internal arrangements of the body (whether in children or adults) are in want of a stimulating nutrient. When milk, diluted to any degree, cannot be digested, Sanatogen will be greedily assimilated. In many almost hopeless cases of plague, where heart failure has been threatening, I have found Sanatogen helpful in getting the patient to turn the critical corner, and it has admirably aided my treatment of this fell disease. I have no hesitation in stating that by the discovery of Sanatogen you have added a most powerful weapon to those already in the possession of every physician."

And Dr. R. F. BOWERS, Bhaptiahi, P.O., Bengal and N.-W. Railway, N. Bhagulpore, India, writes:—

"I was able to try Sanatogen in a patient who had passed through the acute stage of Asiatic Cholera (in a severe form) but was utterly prostrated. That woman, I consider, owes her life to Sanatogen."

A physician has written a remarkable treatise entitled "How to Keep Well in India," a copy of which will be forwarded, post free, to all who apply to Messrs. Smith, Stanistreet and Co., Calcutta, mentioning the Indian Field.

Sanatogen can be obtained from Messrs. Smith, Stanistreet and Co., Calcutta, and of all chemists, etc., in India.

half-way line. Further tries were added by Mounsey and Upson, Stone majorising on one occasion. Blackheath, 2 goals, 3 tries; Cambridge, 1 try.

LONDON WELSH vs. OLD MERCHANT TAYLORS.—It was only after consultation that it was decided to play at West Ham, where the frost had left the turf both hard and slippery. This latter condition was responsible for the Taylors' first disaster, for when Jenkins cross-kicked Raphael slipped in trying to get to the ball, and Maddocks intercepting ran in for Harding to easily add the extra points. This and a subsequent goal placed by Harding from a try of A. E. Evans was the sum total of the scoring in the first half. In the second, the Taylors not only had rather the better of the football until nearing the end, but were unlucky not to score on at least one occasion. Towards the close, with their opponents palpably tiring, the Welsh backs had several opportunities, of which Alexander availed himself twice and Edwards once. None of these were improved on, and so the London Welsh won by 19 points to nothing. The winners deserved their victory, if only for the way with which they seized their chances. London Welsh, 2 goals, 3 tries; O.M.T., 0.

CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY vs. GUY'S HOSPITAL.—Seldom, if ever before has Cambridge turned out thirteen Blues for an after Christmas match, as was the case on the 17th instant, when the only absentees from the team that played against Oxford were K. G. Macleod, who has gone down, and J. C. Pyman, who was stroking his college "Rugger" boat to victory in the "Geting On'" races. However, despite the strong side they had out, Cambridge could only draw. This was brought about by indifferent play, but was chiefly caused by the Cambridge wing substitutes (Wright and Jones going centre), who lacked pace, and several times failed near the line.

In the first half, the visitors fairly held their own, but only one try was registered, and that by Cambridge, fourteen minutes after the start. Ashcroft punted down the field, and Lacey failing to gather, the international gained possession, and got over under the posts. Purves failed to convert, the ball striking one of the posts.

After the change of ends the home team played well for a time. They attacked almost continuously for some minutes. Once Wright got on the line, but had the ball knocked away before he could grass it, and it was kicked dead, whilst on another occasion Watson must have scored had he been fast enough. However, the score at length came, the forwards, led by Purves, dribbling down from the centre, and Sutherland picking up and passing to Morton, who ran behind. Fraser added the major points. Soon afterwards Atkinson, who throughout the afternoon played indifferently, had his kick charged down by Lacey, and Saner rushed up and scored. Stokes goaled. After this the 'Varsity play was decidedly poor, and this resulted in Guy's drawing level. The Light Blues muddled in a loose rush, and J. P. Jones kicked through. Stranach falling on the ball over the line. Stokes failed at goal. Ten minutes from the finish Wright's leg gave out, and he had to retire, but nothing more resulted, and the final score was:—Cambridge University, 1 goal, 1 try (8 points); Guy's Hospital, 1 goal, 1 try (8 points).

HOCKEY.

SCOTLAND vs. WALES.—The first international hockey match of the season was played on the Wrexham Racecourse on Saturday, when Scotland gained a narrow victory over Wales by 3 goals to 2. It was generally expected that Scotland would win by two or three goals, and the fact that they proved successful by only the odd goal in five was due to the excellence of the Welsh defence. Turnbull, in goal, made some wonderful saves. Just before the interval, he cleared his charge three times in quick succession. L. A. Mackenzie, the Scottish centre forward, played a brilliant game, and A. B. Burt, the centre-half, was always prominent in defence.

Scotland began with a sharp attack, and before the game had been in progress many minutes both Elliott and Mackenzie narrowly missed scoring. Two corners were given against Wales in quick succession, and a little later Turnbull saved a fine shot by Mackenzie. The Welshmen at length began to assert themselves, and Lyne had a chance of scoring. He missed, however, and then ensued a long spell of even play. When half-time arrived, neither side had scored.

On changing ends, Scotland again assumed the aggressive, and it was not long before Mackenzie sent in a fast shot, which found the net. As the result of a nice run by Boswell, the Welshmen came near equalising. Ball got into the goal-mouth, but the Scotsmen cleared their circle, and a little later Mackenzie gave them a lead of two goals. Pallot then scored for Wales, but soon afterwards a scramble in the Welsh circle ended in another point for the Scotsmen. Wales played well in the last few minutes, but they could only score once again, this time through Duncan.

GOLF.

OXFORD UNIVERSITY vs. MID-SURREY.—The Dark Blues played their first match of the Lent term, against the Mid-Surrey Club, at the old Deer Park, Richmond, on Saturday, and gained an easy victory by 7 points to 3. The Oxford Captain, C. V. L. Hooman, always had the lead against H. L. Doherty, the famous lawn tennis player. Mr. Hooman went out in 38, and won the match on the twelfth green. Perhaps the most remarkable encounter was that between V. C. Longstaffe, last year's Cambridge captain, and P. de Putron. De Putron was 4 down at the turn, but he had two 2's coming home, and finished up by holing a 6 feet put on the last green for the match Details:—

CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY vs. RICHMOND — Although represented by a fairly strong side, Cambridge University were well beaten in their first match of the term, on Saturday, by the Richmond Club, who won a ten a side contest at Sudbrook Park Petersham, by 7 points to 3. H. B. Hammond Chambers, the 'Varsity captain, lost to H. E. Taylor, the runner-up in last years amateur championship but C. L. Macdona, the honorary secretary, halved with Spencer Gollan. Details:—

CROSS-COUNTRY RUNNING.

THE CHAMPIONSHIPS.—The twenty-first annual championship of the South of the Thames Cross-country Association was decided on Saturday, under very delightful conditions.

The venue for the race was Southend, Catford, a little old-world village lying within a mile or so of the tram terminus at Catford, and yet practically unknown to Londoners. By the kindness of that good sportsman, Mr. H. ... Forster, M.P., and of Mr. J. Perry, of Upper Mill, the latter of whom placed not only his fields, but the mill itself at the disposal of the Association, a splendid cross-country course was obtained, consisting of two laps of the park, and then two complete laps of the country. Spectators were by no means numerous when the 22 teams (Ryde being absentees) took the field just before 4 o'clock. The men were despatched to a splendid start, the line being unbroken for the first 300 yards, but nearing the first bend J. C. H. Price, of the Borough Polytechnic, was just ahead, with G. Saunders, of Brighton and County H., and T. W. Woodman, of the Herne Hill H., next. With a stiff rise to attack in the first half-mile, the order was soon altered, and by the time the circuit of about a mile was covered, F. C. Neaves, distinctly the favourite for the race on past performances, was out with a thirty yards lead of R. H. Backshall, last year's winner, with Saunders in third place. Another lap, and Neaves had increased his advantage, and when the men entered the outer country at 2½ miles, he was running comfortably, well clear of his field. At this point the Herne Hill H., looked sure winners, having nine men in the first 23, while Reading were next, Surrey and Kent close up.

Returning at 5 miles, Neaves was further ahead, and Backshall never looked like catching him, though he persevered in the pluckiest manner possible. Saunders, feeling the effects of his earlier efforts, was dropping behind, while W. G. Dawson, of the Herne Hill team, also one of the front rank for a mile or two, was having a bad time, and Reading were running the black and red contingent a hard race.

When Neaves was sighted on the hill a mile from Home, he was still farther ahead, and coming along in fine style, he won without ever appearing in the least distressed by about 250 yards, amidst a roar of applause, Backshall also getting a big reception, while little Long, of Reading, finished very strongly to secure third place; the fourth man, J. Gardiner, being all out at the finish. Reading just flattered their supporters by finishing three in the first eight; then Surrey came along strongly, and with four in sixteen looked like taking premier honours. Scarcely had this been roughly noted when five Herne Hill men came in together, and the team race was over. The club finished seven men in twenty-five, the veteran Jack Henney, one of the best all-round runners in the country, beating E. W. Lloyd, a this year's novice, by a yard for sixth place. Hard lines for the youngster, who has, however, plenty of time to improve. Reading had six in thirty-five, but owing to S. Morley being a B team man, they had to depend on L. O. J. Southwell, forty-third, to finish their scoring six for the A team; while Surrey were, as foreshadowed, let down by their tail. It was notable that, although the Herne Hill A team won the event, their B team was last, while the C team, composed of novices, was fourteen. The destination of the special medals was not decided definitely, as the list of starters has to be scrutinised before the matter can be settled.

ROWING.

UNIVERSITY CREWS PRACTICE.

OXFORD.—The Dark Blues had a long outing yesterday, and were certainly seen at their best, for the rowing was clean and steady, and they managed to get a capital pace on the boat. At one time the programme promised to be spoilt owing to Newman, the bow man, breaking his oar; but the mishap occurred close to Sandford, and they were able to borrow another from the Radley College, Boathouse close by.

Dr. Bourne and Mr. W. F. C. Holland were in attendance when they got afloat at half-past two, and with Gladstone still an absentee the order was the same as on the preceding afternoon. They went down stream at a leisurely paddle, and after clearing Iffley Lock, journeyed on to Sandford, having an easy at Kennington on the way. Getting to the usual starting point at the top of the Common, a start was made to 32, but it was not adhered to. After going a quarter of a mile, the stroke was reduced to 30. They passed Nuneham House, without an easy, and going round the island then worked up to 32 again, and finished with a capital bit of rowing down Nuneham Reach to the Black Bridge, when a halt was called. After the usual breather, the boat was put about, and with sundry stoppages on the way, they paddled up to Iffley, and then rowed through from the Lock to the boathouse at 28. Names and weights:—

CAMBRIDGE.—Very fair all-round form was displayed by the Light Blues yesterday afternoon, when they rowed a trial over the "lock to lock" course, a distance of about two and three-quarter miles. There was very little stream, but despite this, the conditions were very good.

After the usual tubbing, they paddled to the Chesterton Lock, and having turned, pulled up to the Victoria Bridge, where Mr. Wauchope, the coach, was waiting. At the word "Go" they went off smartly, registering 15 strokes in the half-minute and 29 in the full, but they then dropped to 28. They got just a shade short in the vicinity of Darts' Ferry, and slightly ponderous, and did not really liven up again till the Plough Reach was entered, when they quickened to 29.

All the way the boat was running well between the strokes, although they were at times a little unsteady, and down slightly on bow side. They never again dropped below 29, and at the Little Ditch began to quicken up. This they did gradually, probably to avoid getting short, and finished up well at 33, all the crew being very distressed at the finish. The "Sporting Life" representative made the time for the two and three-quarter miles 17mins. 33secs., but the official time was 2secs. faster. With the stream, and having previously rowed for nearly ten minutes, they were clocked at 7mins. 49secs. between the Railway Bridge and the Little Bridge. The time for the full course was only fairly good, even allowing for the slow stroke.

Having turned, they ran alongside the bank and disembarked, being out of the boat for nearly half an hour. Entering her again, they took matters easily home, indulging in easies at the Railway Bridge and Chesterton Horse Grind. For the greater part of the distance they were slumming at 21 or 22, occasionally picking it up to 26 or 28. Names and weights:—

Hunting.

THE BOMBAY HUNT.

DELAY owing to the lateness of the train from town, for some unknown reason, added to a stuffy morning did not tend to enhance the chances of good sport last Bye day. Again, however, things turned out contrary to the expectations of the large number that met at Sahar Mill, and a long run into regions seldom touched was the result.

Immediately on arrival of the Bombay contingent, hounds were put into the cover north of Sahar and away went a jack giving us a fast gallop across grass lands and through Bomanwadi Valley. Thence he led us across the Andheri road, through a thick mango tope and to Marole over ideal country, firm and full of good banks for jumping. Instead of climbing the hill we were taken through the Palm Groves at Goregaum. The other side we had some good, open country and a very long gallop, the quarry still keeping up a fast pace, as far as the thick wood we have encountered on previous occasions. This was not, as it sometimes is, the end, as hounds held sternly to the line and we had to make our way as best we could; those who shirked the jungle losing the hunt altogether. On coming out the other end, a fast gallop brought us fairly well on terms as the pack crossed the railway. Here the country is sand and part of a long run meant on crossing salt beds. This jack proved a real champion, as after leading us all that way at such a pace he succeeded in making good his escape.

A decreased field was out for the extra meet on Tuesday, when we experienced another long run. We are decidedly feeling the approach of the hot weather, the days are broiling, the nights clammy and windless and the mornings devoid of any of their former crispness.

The venue on the morning in question was at Chuckla Hill and from there a move was made into the Mango Tope but, as has been the case of late, it was found untenanted and, following the usual rule, we went on to the spinney adjoining the Andheri road near the Tulsi Water Main. Here hounds gave us the glad tidings, but instead of going away in Goregaum direction the quarry crossed the road and led us over firm rice fields. His line lay along the winding nullah we usually come across, and then with a turn to the left he came to the Backwater. Crossing the water, he entered the familiar stone wall enclosure and, after a run round, came out to lead us over enjoyable jumping country in an erratic manner, over the Kurla-Vehar road to Hog's Back Hill in Powai Valley. Driven from ... likely hiding place, he cross the valley and takes the young mountain bordering Horse Shoe Valley. Before reaching the top he turned straight back down the precipitous slopes and made his way to Hog's Back Hill again. On the top of this he leads the pack a dance round and round in the undergrowth, but they were far too close and keen to be shaken off and eventually achieved their object.

Santa Cruz was the meeting place on Thursday, when the increasing heat was again very noticeable, but another good run was nevertheless enjoyed. Moving away to the dry tank at Parla, hounds were soon away after a jack round the borders of the tank over rice fields and on to the Cross Roads. Hence, he made a line for Sahar Hill, round it, and into Bomanwadi Valley across the top end to then swerve ati Vangoli and re-enter the said valley at the lower end. This over, he led us to Chuckla Hill, over it and across the lane into the Groves. Surmounting Pereira Hill, he turns right handed across Andheri road into good going along the railway and eventually into the lane past the Mango Tope. After Roberts' Corner, we enter the Palm Groves, anticipated the usual open run to Goregaum. The quarry, however, must have felt the distance he had been, and turned away towards Marole. His object was, no doubt, to reach the caves on top of the hill, but he was pulled down before he could get there.

CALCUTTA PAPERCHASE.

THE PAPERCHASE CUP.

With the exception of the Light Horse chase, of which we give an account elsewhere, the paperchase season proper was brought to an end on Saturday last with the run for the paperchase Cup. The start and finish was as usual by the Mount out in the Lutonur country which has come to be known by the name of Grand Stand, as it makes such an excellent coign of vantage from which to see a large portion of the chase. The general line of the chase was from the Grand Stand eastward over the furzes and scrub met by the Railway back over the bunds, on through the Durzi's village across the Tollygunge Lane and on over the Mollahât road, over a line of fences in the low country near the Railway and then back across the Molla hât ploughs and round over the Lady's Wall to a finish close by the stand. It was a long and severe chase, being a run of something over 5 miles with 16 made jumps and several natural ones. Added to the troubles of the riders the dust in the lanes was terrible and going over the ploughs pretty bad. Messrs. Allen and Hamilton laid the paper and a start was made very soon after they got back in the presence of a huge crowd of spectators, including Lord and Lady Minto, Lady Ellen Elliot and members of the Staff. The following is the complete list of the starters :—

Mr. A. G. H. Macpherson on Billikins.
Mr. Curtis Hayward on Pardon.
Mr. Studd on Makatu.

Mr. Allen despatched the field to a good start, all getting away well except School Boy and Makatu. At the beginning Blue Bell was leading but Fermoy got to the front as they came near to the Mollahât Road. He, however, ran off the paper and lost considerable distance through this, then as they came over the bunds Blue Bell II. was ahead with Ermine and Lord Harry close up, then Fermoy, Merman and Maisonette. Fairy did not see the second of the bund walls through dust and hitting it very hard came a bad purler which temporarily knocked Mr. Ballantyne out of time. Blue Bell refused at the Bush Wall after the bunds and then Ermine went to the front with Lord Harry and Fermoy next and then Maisonette, Merman, Blue Bell II, Billikins and Myolene. They went much in this order for the rest of the way till nearing the Lady's Wall Mr. Cowper set Maisonette going on her top, and as they came round to the finishing straight she was just leading from Lord Harry and seemed to have the race in hand. However, there was very nearly a slip betwixt the cup and the lea, as Maisonette never rose an inch at the last obstacle but went through it carrying one panel of the hurdle with her. Surprising to say, however, she managed to stand up and came in a winner by about one and half lengths from Lord Harry, who was absolutely all out under the whip. The victor is a very taking looking little dark brown English mare. She is by Grand Duke out of Ophelia and ran at Home two or three times, winning once under the name of Mohala II in an unimportant Selling Steeplechase at Moreton on the Marsh. She was ridden by her then owner, Mr. J. H. Wheeler, a sporting farmer well-known in the Midlands. She was brought out to India in the autumn by Mr. Gamble, who passed her on to Mr. Cowper early this year. We take this opportunity to tender that gentleman our heartiest congratulations on his success, which was thoroughly well deserved. The Heavy Weight Cup goes Lord Francis Scott, who finished third on Fermoy, the first heavy weight in. The following is the final order :—

1 Mr. Cowper on Maisonette.
3 Lord Francis Scott on Fermoy (H.W.)
4 Mr. Stewart on Merman.
5. Mr. Winckworth on Ermine (H. W.)
6. Mr. Morris on Blue Bell II.
7. Mr. A. G. H. Macpherson on Billikins (H. W.)
8. Mr. E. H. Corbett on Mysleen.
9. Mr. Curtis Hayward on Pardon (H. W.)
10. Mr. Douglas on School Boy.
11. Mr. C. R. Hill on Tired Tim.
12. Mr. Studd on Makatu (H. W.)
Mr. Ballantyne on Fairy (fell).

C. L. H. PAPERCHASE.

There was a very small gathering out on Wednesday morning to witness the above chase for the cup very kindly presented by Lieutenant-Colonel E. C. Apostolides. The paper was laid by Mr. Allen on his own, the start being to the west of the Garia Hat Road, a little way past Jodhpur Thana. The paper ran over a hurdle and then circled round to the right back across the road to the Railway, then round again over the original hurdle and a mud wall. It then made another circle round through the Durzi's Bustee over the bund country and doubled back over a hurdle to the finish near the start. There was a good field of 13 starters lined up and they all took the first hurdle in good style. Dalgai, Ermine, and Honesty being quickest away. When they came over the same hurdle for the second time, Dalgai was leading by several lengths, the whole of the rest of the field pretty well together. Ermine turned turtle at the jump and gave Trooper Winckworth a very heavy fall. He lay unconscious for some time and was removed on a hurdle and we fear is somewhat badly knocked about. Further on in the jungle Vanity and Saracen both came down, but without any injury to their riders. At the finish, Dalgai came cantering in on her own without anything else in sight except the riderless Vanity. Some seconds later Honesty and Anna Maria had a good race of it for second place, the black mare just getting the best of it. The other warriors struggled in at long intervals.

1. Sergt.-Major Perkins on Dalgai.
2. L.-Corpl. Stephen on Anna Maria.
3. Corpl. Radmore on Honesty.
4. Lce.-Corpl. A. Harvey on Starboard Light.
5. Trooper Cropper on Joanna.
6. Capt. Percy Brown on The Squire.
7. Lce.-Corpl. Lovell on Portia.
8. Qr.-Master-Sergt. Antram on Myrene.
9. Lieut. G. Harvey on Cossack.
10. Lce.-Corpl. Rice on Good Friday (did not finish).
11. Trooper Donald on Saracen (fell).
12. Trooper Winckworth on Ermine (fell).
13. Trooper Skene on Vanity (fell).

MEERUT INTER-REGIMENTAL TOURNAMENT.

Semi-Finals.

King's Dragoon Guards vs. 15th Hussars.—The tournament was continued on the 3rd instant when the semi-finals were decided. There was a large attendance and both games produced good polo, the one between the above teams being very closely contested. There was no scoring till the seventh chukker in which the Dragoons registered two goals and the Hussars one, this being the score at the finish.

First Chukker.—Up and down play: a foul against the Hussars gave the Dragoons no advantage: both goals were visited in turn, but there was no score.

Second Chukker.—The Hussars pressed throughout this period. Bingham sent in a shot which struck the post and rolled out on the wrong side. Shots by Bingham and Charrington went wide and there was no score.

Third Chukker.—The Hussars continued to attack, but all their shots were abortive, the high wind doubtless being responsible for the failure of several attempts. Still no score.

Fourth Chukker.—Up and down play: then the Hussars had four shots at the K.D.G's flags and Charrington failed to score owing to a broken stick. The Dragoons pressed for the rest of the chukker, but the score sheet remained a blank.

Fifth Chukker.—Charrington ran down but missed. The Dragoons were forced to defend for a space but they cleared and solidified play followed.

Sixth Chukker.—The Dragoons attacked and play continued in the Hussars territory, but they cleared and rushing down opened the scoring through Bingham. The Dragoons then took up the attack. Score: Hussars 1 goal.

Seventh Chukker.—The Dragoons got the ball and Cheape equalised. Midfield play till a foul was given against the Hussars. The penalty hit was unproductive and play continued in the Hussars' ground. At length Cheape got away again and put the Dragoons ahead. Score: K.D.G.'s 2 goals. Hussars 1 goal.

Eighth Chukker.—Play was fast and level throughout the last period but neither team could score and the game ended in a win for the King's Dragoon Guards by two goals to one. Teams :—

17th Lancers vs. 10th Hussars.—The second game was another interesting display. The Hussars had been looked upon as certain victors, but although they won, the Lancers made them gallop. Up to the sixth chukker the scores were level, but thereafter the 17th fell off and the Hussars increased their score, eventually winning by six goals to two.

First Chukker.—The Lancers pressed and sent in several shots, none of which were successful and the period closed without score.

Second Chukker.—A free hit to the Hussars for a foul against the 17th went wide and the ball was brought to midfield. Play was stopped for a time owing to Melville being injured but he resumed and the Lancers goal was visited. Lockett saved but the ball was brought back and the Hussars drew first blood. On changing ends the Lancers got away and Melville equalised. Score: one all.

Third Chukker.—The Lancers attacked but the ball was returned each time. Then the Hussars pressed, and a clever save was followed by an incursion to the Hussars territory and Tilney almost scored. The 10th missing an opportunity at close of the chukker. Score: one all.

Fourth Chukker.—A rush by the Lancers ended in a goal. The Hussars were kept on the defensive for a spell, then the ball was taken to the other end and Vaughan put them on terms. Score: two all.

Fifth Chukker.—The Lancers pressed and missed an opportunity from a penalty hit for a foul. The 10th came away but Melville saved and the score remained unchanged.

Sixth Chukker.—The Hussars attacked vigorously and at length scored. A good run on changing ends culminating in another goal. Score: 10th Hussars 4 goals, Lancers 2 goals.

Seventh Chukker.—Up and down play till the Hussars got away and Palmer scored, midfield play closing the chukker. Score: Hussars 5 goals, Lancers 2 goals.

Final.

King's Dragoon Guards vs. 10th Hussars.—A large crowd of spectators witnessed an interesting game on the 5th instant, when these teams met in the final. Play was fast throughout, but the Hussars had the best of the exchanges and retained possession of the Cup, winning by 8 goals to 1. The Lancashire Fusiliers were "at home" and their Band was in attendance. Mrs. Eccles Nixon presented the Cup to the winners at the conclusion of the game.

First Chukker.—The Hussars were first to attack, but their runs were unsuccessful and the Dragoons taking the ball down just missed putting through.

Second Chukker.—The Hussars rushed down and Palmes scored. The Dragoons' territory was again invaded, but the defence was good and Rasbotham clearing, play was transferred to the opposite end. Score: Hussars, 1 goal.

Third Chukker.—The Hussars pressed and Vaughan scored, Palmer putting on another goal after ends had been changed. The 10th continued to press for the rest of the period, but their shots were unsuccessful. Score: Hussars, 3 goals.

Fourth Chukker.—The Dragoons ran down, but the shot went wide. Play ruled up and down throughout the chukker. The Dragoons had a chance of scoring from a penalty for offside against the Hussars but nothing came of it. Score: unchanged.

Fifth Chukker.—The Dragoons pressed but failed to score and the Hussars getting possesion took the ball down for Gibbs to put it through. They got away again soon after and Vaughan hit a goal. Score: Hussars, 5 goals.

Sixth Chukker.—Even play till the Hussars got away and Palmer scored. Vaughan added another goal on changing ends. Score: Hussars, 7 goals.

Seventh Chukker.—The Dragoons pressed and Renton scored from a scrimmage. Continuing the attack they got two penalty shots, neither of which gained any advantage. The Dragoons were attacking when the chukker closed. Score: Hussars 7 goals; K. D. G.'s, 1 goal.

First Chukker.—Up and down play till Bomford got away and hit the first goal for the Fusiliers.

Second Chukker.—Fast up and down play, the Hussars clearing a shot by Ashburner, took the ball down and equalised. The Fusiliers pressed on resuming and scoring took the lead once more. Desperate efforts were made by the Hussars but were unattended by success and the chukker closed with the Fusiliers attacking. Ashburner put the ball through but was off-side. Score: Fusiliers, 2 goals; Hussars, 1 goal.

Third Chukker.—The Fusiliers continued to attack and Ashburner scored again. Further attempts were frustrated by the excellent defence of the Hussars. Score: Fusiliers 3 goals; Hussars, 1.

Fourth Chukker.—The Hussars pressed and Lee was kept busy. Play was stopped owing to an injury to Ashburner but after retiring for a few minutes he resumed. The Hussars got on and a miss by Mason was followed by a successful shot by Fetherstonhaugh. Score: Fusiliers, 3 goals; Hussars, 2 goals.

Fifth Chukker.—Vigorous attacks by the Hussars; Mason missed a splendid opportunity of scoring and Ashburner cleared twice in great style. A foul against the Hussars but nothing came of the hit. No score.

Sixth Chukker.—This was another unproductive period. The Hussars tried their utmost to get on terms but their efforts were unavailing, the Fusiliers keeping the ball out most successfully. Two fouls against the Hussars gave the Royals no advantage and the game ended with the score, Fusiliers, 3 goals; Hussars, 2 goals. Teams :—

THE BOMBAY JUNIOR TOURNAMENT.

THE Bombay Junior Polo Tournament, made possible for the first time through the princely generosity of that gallant soldier and sportsman, H. H. Major-General Sir Pertab Singh, G.C.I.E., Maharajah of Idar, who presented a challenge Cup, took place last week. Five teams had originally entered but Bhopal owing to certain conditions in the rules about players, dropped out. This left Idar, the 26th Cavalry, General Alderson's team and Government House to fight out the issues.

The first round was played on Tuesday, the 2nd instant, when two games were held. Idar was set to face the 26th Cavalry from Poona. From what one saw of the performances of the 26th in the Poona Tournaments, a walk-over was expected for the trained team of Idar and the result justified the opinion.

In the opening and second chukkers both sides scored two goals apiece, but in the third Idar led by five to two. After half time it was all one-sided play, the Idaries having things in their own way. Goal after goal was scored and at the final sounding of the bugle, the Rajput team stood winners by eight goals to two. Teams:—

IDAR.		26TH CAVALRY.
Thakore Bhoore Singh ...	1	Mr. A. J. Callum	... 1
Mah. Kumar Daulat Singh	2	Mr. G. H. Summer	... 2
Thakore Dokul Singh ...	3	Capt. Popham ...	... 3
Maharaja Kishen Singh (back).		Mr. J. S. Moir	(back).

Umpires:—Mr. Hildebrand and Captain Greig.

The second game was between Government House and General Alderson's team. It was a great and spirited struggle, every inch of ground being fought out. The play was so even in the first two bouts that neither side scored and in the third after several failures, Captain Greig scored for Government House.

Leading by one to love at half time, the Government House team held their own till the fourth chukker when the Poonaites equalised. The fifth was a great display of polo, both sides trying all their tactics to secure the winning goal. At last, close upon full time Captain Bremner succeeded in doing the needful for Poona. The game ended in General Alderson's team winning by the narrow margin of two to one. Teams:—

GOVERNMENT HOUSE.		GENERAL ALDERSON'S TEAM.
Capt. Lucas ...	... 1	Mr. Wallace ...	... 1
Mr. A. K. Graham	... 2	General Alderson	... 2
Capt. Greig ...	... 3	Major Bremner	... 3
Thakore Guman Singh	(back).	Major Martin ...	(back).

Umpires:—Captain Popham and Mr. Hildebrand.

The Final.

Tuesday's winners met in the final struggle on Thursday afternoon in the presence of a gathering of society. It was one of the finest exhibitions of polo ever witnessed on the Bombay ground. Well mounted and equal in defensive and offensive warfare, both sides played for all they were worth. It was anybody's game from start to finish and when the final round found the opposing sides with level scores, it surprised no one.

In the opening chukker, after some contested play Wallace scored for Poona and shortly afterwards Daulat Singh equalised. In the second Poona took the lead through General Alderson, but in the third, Daulat Singh, after several checks, equalised. At half time the score was two all.

A great struggle was seen during the fourth and fifth chukkers and try hard as they would neither could score. At full time the score having stood level, the goal-posts were widened and an extra ten minutes each way was played. For the first five minutes Poona pressed but failed to score, then in a magnificent individual run by a series of long strokes Dokul Singh scored amidst applause for Idar. This left the Idar team winners of the Cup presented by their Ruler.

At the conclusion of the game, the Hon'ble Mr. Justice L. P. Russell, in a felicitous speech complimented the team on their brilliant display of polo and thanked the Maharajah of Idar for his generosity in presenting the Cup. Lady Maud Warrender gave the Cup to the winners.

THE MURRAY TOURNAMENT.

Two games were played on the 1st instant at Lucknow in the third round of the above tournament, both matches taking place simultaneously.

In the first, the Highland Light Infantry beat the Rifle Brigade after a close and exciting contest by 1 goal to nil.

The second game was between the Royal Dragoons and the Leinster Regiment. The Leinsters were the first to score, but the Royals soon equalised. In the second half play was extremely level, both sides striving hard to gain the mastery. Just before the close the Royals found the net, and thus defeated the Leinsters by 2 goals to 1.

SEMI-FINALS.

On the 3rd instant, in the semi-finals, the Royal Dragoons defeated the Middlesex Regiment by 2 goals to love.

In the second game, between the Highland Light Infantry and the Durham Light Infantry, the Durhams commenced by attacking, but subsequently the Highlanders had the better of the play and scored 2 goals before half time. On the resumption of play, the Durhams did their level best to score, but their two shots at goal were warded off. A third attempt was more successful, the shot going over the goalkeeper's head and finding the net. The Highlanders then notched a goal, and won by 3 goals to 1.

FINALS.

On the 6th instant a vast crowd witnessed the final between the Royal Dragoons and the Highland Light Infantry, and excitement was intense throughout. The teams were so evenly matched that expectations of a great struggle were not belied. The Dragoons at once obtained possession, and were twice within an ace of scoring. After some play in midfield the Highlanders nearly got the ball through. Shortly after, from a foul against the Royals, the Highlanders had a somewhat easy chance to score, the ball being near the goal mouth, but the shot just missed. Very rapid up and down play followed. Half time arrived without any score, and the final call of time found the teams in the same position. When the teams came out for extra play, the Royals carried the ball down and scored the first and only goal of the match. Though the Highlanders made heroic efforts to equalise, they failed so to do, and the Royal Dragoons thus won the Tournament by one goal to love.

Mrs. Bell, wife of Brigadier-General Bell, gave away the handsome challenge cup, and gold medals to individual members of the winningly team, also silver medals to the runners up.

The Rev. Mr. Kirwan congratulated the winners, and thanked Mr. Shewring, of Messrs. Murray and Co. for presenting the cup and medals for competition.

Up and down play followed till the Volunteers rushed down and forced three corners in quick succession, P. Jahans scoring from the last of these. The Naini Tal team continued to press and P. Jahans scored three more goals in the first half. ALLAHABAD VOLUNTEERS vs. MIDDLESEX REGIMENT.—Played on the 2nd instant a good game ending in a win for the Volunteers by two goals to one. They were away at the start and Pigott registered their first point. Play then settled down but though the Volunteers had the best of play before the interval there was no further scoring On crossing over the Volunteers again rushed down and Pigott scored once more, after a good combined run. The Middlesex Regiment improved as the game went on, and Cooper hit a goal. An excellent chance of drawing level was missed shortly after and though the Middlesex did most of the attacking during the remainder of the game they could not get on terms. Teams:—

MIDDLESEX REGIMENT.—Private Robinson, goal; Dr. Sutton and Corpl. Butterworth backs; Pte. Howe, Lance-Corpl. Rice and Pte. Wills, halves; Boy Daw, Sergt. Wilmer, Lieutenant Partiger, Pte. Cooper and Corpl. Adams forwards.

SECOND ROUND.

ROYAL MUNSTER FUSILIERS vs. DURHAM L. I.—The Durhams who had drawn a bye met the Munsters on the 3rd instant and gave rather a disappointing display. Save that the Durhams broke away once or twice, their opponents had the best of the first half and White shot a goal They continued to have the larger share in the game after the interval. From a corner hit Kelleher put on a second goal and Sullivan scoring just before time the Munsters ran out victorious by 3 goals to nil.

ROYAL MUNSTER FUSILIERS.—Barrett goal; Harris and Murphy, backs; O'Hanlon, Watts and Coffey, halves; Casey, White, Sullivan, Kelleher and O'Grady, forwards.

NORTHAMPTONS vs. ROYAL IRISH REGT.—Played on the 3rd instant the Northamptons winning an evenly contested game by five goals to three. They were the first to score, Parrot putting through shortly after the start. Then the Irish got going and Fowle and Curtis scored a goal each. Hitchcock equalised for the Northamptons and Parrot put them ahead shortly after but half time arrived with the score three all, Collings putting them on terms. The Northamptons put on two more goals in the second period, Parrot and Hemmings being credited with the points and all the effort of the Irish being unsuccessful the game ended as stated Teams:—

NORTHAMPTONS.—Mifford, goal; Lieut. Clive, and Roberts, backs; Church, Albon, Booth, halves; Towers, Parrot and Hitchcock, Hemmings and Gibbons forwards.

NAINI TAL VOLUNTEERS vs. 6TH JATS AND 37TH DOGRAS.—The holders of the Cup met the Naini Tal Volunteers on the 3rd and a splendid game ended in a score of 3 goals all. Extra time was played but no further goals were added, so the game was continued on the 4th instant when the Volunteers put on another goal and qualified for the final. It was an excellent exhibition of hockey throughout and while the Volunteers are to be congratulated on their win the sympathies of everyone are with the combined team who came so near winning the cup outright. Teams:—

NAINI TAL VOLUNTEERS.—as before.

6TH JATS AND 37TH DOGRAS.—Lieut. J. St. C. Darlington (6th Jats), Goal; Capt. C. A M. Dunlop (37th Dogras) and Lieut. R. C. Ross (Capt.) (6th Jats), backs; Lieuts. R. M. Brind (37th Dogras) and L. G. Dudley (6th Jats) and Capt. E. F. Wakefield (37th Dogras), halves; Lieut. Gilbert (6th Jats), Wheeler, Lewis, (37th Dogras), Thornhill (6th Jats) and Nicholson (37th Dogras), forwards.

SEMI FINALS

NAINI TAL VOLUNTEERS vs. U. P. POLICE.—Played last Thursday, the Volunteers after an extra allowance of time defeating the Police. The latter drew first blood but the Volunteers soon equalised and the score of one all was unchanged at the interval. On crossing over, Naini Tal played a splendid game and were soon leading by three goals to one but the Police redoubled their energies and after a strenuous struggle managed to get on terms before time was called. Extra time was played and the Volunteers added three more goals to their score thus winning by 6 goals to 3. Teams as before.

ROYAL MUNSTER FUSILIERS vs. NORTHAMPTONS.—The other match in the semi-finals was won by the Munsters, who had the best of the game all through and the fact that they only won by a goal to nil is due to their fumbling with the ball when in front of goal. Teams as before.

FINAL.

ROYAL MUNTER FUSILIERS vs. NAINI TAL VOLUNTEERS.—These teams met in the final on the 6th instant when the game ended in spite of extra time in a draw. The tie was replayed on Monday in the presence of a large crowd of spectators, an exciting and well contested game resulting in a win for the Munsters. The opening play was level, both goals had narrow escapes and after Barrett had saved from Jahans at the expense of a corner, the Munsters got away and put the ball through. They pressed for the rest of the half but could not break the volunteers' defence. On changing ends the Munsters scored again through Kelleher and though the Naini Tal team made desperate efforts they were unable to reduce the margin, the military team thus winning by 2 goals to nil. Lady Stanley gave away the Cup and medals at the conclusion of the game. Teams:—

NAINI TAL VOLUNTEERS.—S. A. Gabriel, goal, P. L. Haswell and L. E. Jahans backs, P. S. Chavasse, J. L. O'Hara and A. V. Nash, halves, N. C. Weston and S. B. Smart; P. F. Jahans, E. L. Roblin and J. H. Jahans, forwards.

THE BANGALORE HOCKEY TOURNAMENT.

BANGALORE GYMKHANA vs. ROYAL ARTILLERY.—Played on the 1st instant. This was a keenly contested match in which the Gymkhana played up and scored a popular win, Lieutenant Scott, I.M.S., making 3 goals for the Gymkhana and Sergeant Burgess 1 goal for the Royal Artillery Mr. R. R. Ricketts, goalkeeper for the Gymkhana, rendered yeoman service.

14TH KING'S HUSSARS vs. 2ND CHESHIRES.—The Cavalry men did not expect to win this match, but they gave the Cheshires a good game. In the first half, Trueman scored a goal for the Cheshires, the Hussars not being able to open their account. On starting play in the second half Baker, of the Hussars, netted the ball and equalised, but after this the Cheshires gave their opponents no chance, and Trueman scoring two more goals, the last one being made just on time, the Cheshires thus won by 3 goals to 1.

1ST LEICESTERS vs. 1ST SHERWOOD FORESTERS.—The above match was played on the Gymkhana ground on Tuesday, the 2nd instant. When the game commenced, it was a toss up as to who would win, the teams being very evenly matched. The Leicesters drew first blood, Murphy, the inside right forward, scoring a fine goal, and some ding-dong play followed. Then the Sherwoods attacked the Leicesters' goal successfully, Capewell (inside left forward), driving the ball between the uprights. When half time was called the score was 1 goal all. Some very fast play was witnessed in the second half. For some time neither side got an opening; about ten minutes from re-starting, the Leicesters made a big effort to score and with some fine passing Murphy again collared the ball and netted it. The Sherwoods pulled themselves together and played for all they were worth to draw level, but the Leicesters gave them no quarter. Both teams played splendidly, and no further score being made when time was called, the match went to the Leicesters by 2 goals to 1, after a very keen struggle.

2ND DORSETS vs. B. R. VOLUNTEERS.—This game was played on the ground of the Sherwood Foresters, simultaneously with the previous one, and it turned out to be a most uninteresting contest. The Dorsets had a very poor team, and the Volunteers were not long in finding this out. The latter played a very easy game and did pretty well as they liked, winning eventually by 3 goals to nil. At the same time it must be mentioned that the Volunteer team was not a very strong one. Half their best players, who belonged to St. Joseph's College, have left the station, and it was a bit of luck that they should have drawn to play against the Dorsets.

BANGALORE GYMKHANA vs. ROYAL ENGINEERS.—On Wednesday afternoon the Royal Engineers, who had drawn a bye, played the Gymkhana. A good match was anticipated as the Royal Engineers were the runners up last year, while the Gymkhana team, on their Monday's form, were looked upon in certain quarters as likely winners. The Engineers opened the attack and after two unsuccessful attempts to score, Captain White (inside left forward) netted the ball. The Engineers again put the Gymkhana on their defence and pressed them hard. Ricketts was again very useful at goal, and saved brilliantly several times. Eventually the Engineers made a determined attack and Hoskins, getting the ball, lodged it safely in the net. After some racing and hard titting the ball was brought into the Gymkhana circle, where a scrimmage ensued, from which Hoskins netted the ball, the score being: Engineers, 3 goals; Gymkhana, nil, when half time was called. The second was very hotly contested. The Gymkhana men pulled themselves together and successfully defended their goal (Ricketts doing a lot of work), till very near the end when Hoskins once more got hold of the ball and sent it into the net, the Royal Engineers thus winning by 4 goals to nil.

SEMI-FINALS.

CHESHIRES vs. ROYAL ENGINEERS.—Played on the 4th instant If anybody expected to see a close match they must have been disappointed. For the first quarter of an hour the Engineers were able to defend their goal, Agnew being really good at the net; but once the Cheshires opened their account the gallant Royal Engineers seemed to have lost confidence in themselves and began to hit out wildly. Witlow scored the first goal for the Cheshires, Pickering following it up with another. Five minutes later Hoskins of the Royal Engineers succeeded in netting the ball, and before half time was piped Russell put in the third goal for the Cheshires With 2 goals to the good the Cheshires continued to attack in the second half and before two minutes had gone Trueman hit a very fine shot for goal which he got home safely The Engineers were outmatched at almost every point now, and notwithstanding that Agnew stopped many a ball from going into the net, the Cheshires were determined to score. Pickering scored cleverly from a scrimmage in front of the Royal Engineers' goal and finally Witlow made another goal, the Cheshires scoring a decisive win by 6 goals to nil.

LEICESTERS vs. B. R. VOLUNTEERS.—This was a pretty even match, although the result was generally anticipated As soon as the ball was bullied off the Volunteers made one run with it to the Leicesters' goal ring, where Collins collared and netted it. From the fresh bully the Leicesters returned the compliment, Murphy accounting for the score. Some even play succeeded till the Volunteers again pressing their attack, Lopez

100 COPIES IN 10 MINUTES.

Of any kind of Circular, Notice, Bill of Fare, Drawing, Music Form, Estimate, Tender, Examination Paper, Plan, Map, Programme, etc.

You are losing money all the time by not adopting a machine. Have you ever considered how long it would take you to get out a notice and the expense you incur in doing so? All this can be saved, and you can do the printing in your own office in a few minutes.

Time Saved Is Money Earned.

YOU REQUIRE AN ELLAMS DUPLICATOR.

If you are a Teacher to get out examination papers, musical exercises, monthly reports, etc.

If you are a Minister or Sunday School Teacher, for use in printing Church and School readings and notices, lesson work, programmes for church entertainments, etc.

If you are a Merchant to send out circulars to your customers soliciting trade. It brings better results than newspaper printing as each notice is like a personal letter.

If you are a Hotel or Restaurant-keeper, for use in printing bills of fare, etc.

If you are a Railway Official, for the issuing of orders, tenders, tariffs, instructions to agents, etc.

If you are a Secretary of a Lodge, Society or Municipality, for printing notices of meetings, informing members of general business transacted, etc. By this method absolute secrecy may be preserved.

YOU SHOULD USE AN ELLAMS DUPLICATOR.

If you have anything to sell or anything to buy.
If you desire more than one copy of any typewriting, hand writing or drawing.
If you send out circulars, letters, notices, pricelists, changes in prices, schedules, descriptions, etc.
If you use office or factory forms.
If you are not now selling to every body who might buy your goods.
If you are handicapped in business, because your competitor uses a Duplicator and finds it advantageous to his business.

REMEMBER ELLAMS DUPLICATORS have been adopted by H. M. Government, Municipalities, Schools, Colleges, Educational Departments and Commercial Houses all over India. They have been in use in India for over 10 years. Surely these are ample proofs of their success and utility.

They are easy to learn, easy to buy, and you run no risk.

TRAILL & Co., Ld., Stationers and Printers, Calcutta.

broke through the Leicesters' defence and scored. The latter now realised that they would have to play up if they must win and shortly before half time was announced Murphy got the ball past Kenyon the Volunteer custodian, thus equalising. For some time the play in the second half was of a desultory character and then the Leicesters' left wing secured a goal. The Volunteers now "bucked" up and looked as if they would get even with their opponents, but they were beaten off each time they attempted to get within shooting distance. Eventually Capper very cleverly played the ball up to Lopez, who had an easy chance of scoring, but he was too slow and lost the ball as well as the match, the Lelicesters winning by 3 goals to 2.

THE FINAL.

CHESHIRES vs. LEICESTERS.—The match this (Saturday) afternoon attracted nearly the whole of the garrison and a large section of the civilian element. Play began at 5 P.M. sharp and the Cheshires at once assumed the offensive. Within five minutes from the start, Pickering (Cheshires) succeeded in netting the ball. For the next ten minutes neither side gave a chance, but eventually the Cheshires got an opening and after some fine passing Hayes drove it home safely. This was followed a couple of minutes later by Witlow, who scored the third goal for the Cheshires. The Leicesters now rallied and there were frequent calls from the spectators for "the Tigers," who towards the latter end of the first half managed to get in 2 goals, Mr. Braddell accounting for both. In the second half the play was very fast and even throughout, although the Leicester goal-keeper saved many a ball from the net. And it was only within the last two minutes of the match that Witlow increased the score of the Cheshires who won by 4 goals to 2. This is the second year in succession that the Cheshires have won the Challenge Cup. Major-General Pilcher presented the Cup to the winners, and made a short speech. Teams:—

Lawn Tennis.

THE BENGAL CHAMPIONSHIPS.

THE Championship Tournament was once more brought to successful conclusion. The entries were the best on record and some of the contests first class. The Lahore players, Atkinson and Deane, carried all before them and no local players were quite up to their form. In the Singles Atkinson beat successively Abdul Hakim, Kalberer, Warden and Z. M. Zorab: Warden being the only one to extend him. Deane beat Rice, J. M. Laing (who last year was runner up to Atkinson) and A. B. Zorab. In the semi-final he was to have met Mahomed Nagi, but this player, who also comes from Lahore, scratched in Deane's favour. A. B. Zorab showed capital form for two sets against Deane, but fell off in the deciding set. Deane and Atkinson thus came through to the final which was fixed for Saturday last. But the Doubles being undecided on Friday they were replayed on Saturday, and as the visitors were unable to stay in Calcutta any longer they obtained the permission of the Committee to play the final in the Singles at Lahore. The result is awaited with interest.

Deane and Atkinson were invincible in the Doubles and easily disposed of their opponents in the preliminary rounds. On Friday last they met Kalberer and Warden in the final, when before a big attendance there was a high class display of lawn tennis such as has seldom been witnessed in Calcutta. The first set was won easily by the Lahore couple at 6-0, but in the second set Warden and Kalberer warmed to the game and took the score to 6-5 in their favour. Then six all was called, seven all, and then Warden and Kalberer were within a stroke of winning the set with the score 8-7 and 30-40 in their favour, but they lost this game and Deane and Atkinson won the set at 10-8. Warden and Kalberer continued their high standard of play and won the next set at 6-3, and the fourth, which was a tremendous struggle, also ended in their favour at 7-5. With two sets all the light began to fail and though the game was continued it had to be abandoned with Kalberer and Warden leading 5-3. On Saturday the big crowd, which numbered over five hundred people, which assembled in the expectation of seeing a repetition of Friday's play were disappointed. Both couples were off colour, but the Lahore representatives were the better pair on the day's play and they won comfortably. They secured the first set at 6-2, and the second set at 6-3. The third was more evenly contested. Kalberer and Warden took the game to 5-3 in their favour, but Deane and Atkinson won the next four games and the set at 7-5.

The tournament was well managed throughout and a special word of praise is due to Sergeant Akers, on whom the splendid condition of the courts reflected the greatest credit. Results. :—

The new President of the United States is to be entertained by a few friends at a banquet to be composed chiefly of crocodile and rattlesnake meat, which will cost the mere trifle of five guineas a head. For simple living an advanced democracy can give points ad lib.

Come and dine with us, old fellow,
We'll have cobra-de-capello,
And the citizen who caters
Shall provide poached alligators,
And, to make your visage gladder,
He will haricot an adder;
And to make the banquet riper,
He will fricasee a viper,
And the Presidential victor
Shall have buttered boa-constrictor,
And some hamadryad roasted,
And a rattlesnake well toasted.
For a banquet so reptilian
Will impress the Yankee million,
So we'll eat it for the sakes
Of the whole United Snakes.

DEAR SIRS,—I have delayed my thanks as I wished to test the effects of Blair's Pills by a sufficient interval of time.
For ten years I had suffered acutely from Gout, and life had lost its attraction, owing to the uncertainty of health and the sudden visitation of the enemy, which prostrated me for months or weeks, according to the virulence of the attacks.
Blair's Pills have rendered me immense service, as I no longer fear an attack of Gout.

CALCUTTA RACES—SEASON 1908-09.

ANOTHER racing season has come and gone and most of us are busy counting up the losses and gains, the pleasures and pains resulting therefrom. In a pecuniary sense the season just past has not been one of disaster to the punting public and on the whole they have had quite as good a time as they can ever anticipate, as a large proportion of the favourites or well-backed horses have got home and our friends, the bookmakers, have in most cases done a little more than cover their expenses if that. As regards pleasures and pains we think that the general verdict from a sporting point of view will be that the former have greatly predominated. There have been one or two unfortunate accidents, however, to set on the other side of the account, notably. the destruction of Ballark and Dea, the death of Galley Slave and the accidents to McNeilage and Blades while riding. The demon of ill luck has certainly dogged the senior steward's stable throughout the season and starting with a really good string of likely winners they broke down and went wrong one by one till at the latter meetings he had nothing whatever to carry his colours and for the first time for many years did not win a single race during the season, figuring in the list of winning owners with a total Rs. 700 only for place money! However, Mr. Apcar is not easily daunted and we hear that he is busy making arrangements to get together another formidable string for next season, and following the law of averages is likely to have considerably better luck and again figure high up in the list of winning owners at the end of 1909-10. Another familiar Calcutta name that is absent from the list of Calcutta winners is that of Mr. A. N. Dass who, however, has had nothing worthy to represent him this time and will have to add some better material to his string if he wishes to pull off any winners under nowaday conditions of strenuous competition. We hope to see him do so during the coming season as none of us would like to see the names of good sportsmen disappear from the list. As usual Mr. J. C. Galstaun comes out top dog by a long way and deserves his position as he is by far the greatest supporter of racing that we have in Calcutta both in the cold weather and the Monsoons.

The sport throughout has been excellent. In very few races have we seen small fields and the only blot has been during the last few weeks when there has been so many races with two horses well-backed fighting out a finish lengths ahead of anything else and no other in the field with the ghost of a chance. The addition of a stipendiary steward has undoubtedly made for smooth working, but it is only the first step in the right direction and we do not think the racing public here will be content till there are at least three of these gentlemen sitting on the board and only two or three honorary stewards. We are of opinion that it will be far better to get the other two stipendiaries from England and Australia, men without friends or enemies on this side and who will therefore be all the freer from risk of prejudice or bias. Further if the number of honorary stewards is reduced it will be easier to find gentlemen who are not themselves connected with large betting stables and the possibilities of aspersions on the running of stewards' horses will be the more remote. The new five and six furlong course has been an enormous improvement and we now anxiously look forward to the continuation of the new course all the way round so that a big field in a 1¼ mile race may have a fair chance and the present bad corner between the 1¼ and 1 mile post be done away with. It is also to be hoped that in the coming season Stewards may see their way to appoint a Clerk of the Course as well as a Secretary instead of thrusting the burdens of these two onerous offices on one overworked gentleman. A great deal has been said about the condition of the course and, though we do not profess to be sufficiently au fait with the subject to say whether or how this could be improved, we should certainly think it worth the whole of the C.T.C. to spend money to obtain expert opinion on this important point and when obtained to act on it.

There is no need here to criticise or examine the figures which for the most part speak for themselves. Killorn, thanks to his great success in the last couple of extras for which he returned, heads the list of winning jockeys, but he is run fairly close by the evergreen veteran Jimmy Robinson, who showed us, particularly on Saturday last when he rode two magnificent finishes, that he is now and will be we hope for many years to come as good as ever. Young Barrett has got very excellent average with eight wins and eleven place mounts out of a total of thirty-eight rides, and he is undoubtedly a much improved horseman and we may reckon him among our coming best jockeys here. We understand that he has made no arrangements yet for next season, so there is a good chance for any stable who wishes to secure his services. Blades had extremely hard luck this year as for the first time out here he did not get a winner but this was due to the general bad luck which befell his stable through which he had nothing to ride whichever had a winning chance. Among G.Rs. we had none who could really go to the scale at a light weight and Mr. Charrington with four winners and nine places out of twenty-one rides is the only one who had much riding. As was to be expected the Bombay trainers, Mumford and Bleech, came very high up in the list considering that they left immediately after the second meeting and we hope to see big contingents here again from upcountry in the coming season. Harper also secured four winners for the well-known Ceylon owner, Mr. E. L. F. deSoysa, and it is to be hoped that his success will encourage that gentleman to send up three or four more good ones again.

We now have a break of three dull months before the Tollygunge Gymkhana usher in the new season.

WISDEN'S ALMANACK FOR 1909.

JOHN WISDEN'S annual almanack on Cricket is this year well up to the standard of its predecessors. In it are to be found not only the full scores and bowling analyses, together with a critical account of all important matches played in 1908, but there are also articles by Mr. C. Topping, the once famous Cambridge fast bowler, on "Public School Cricket," and by Mr. Alfred Lubbock, on "Cricket in the Sixties and at the Present Day," while the editor, Mr. S. H. Pardon, contributes some topical and interesting "Notes" and there are photographs and short biographies of Lord Hawke, Mr. W. Brearley, Hobbs, Marshal, and Newstead. In speaking of cricketers of the present day, Mr. Alfred Lubbock, who was a great batsman in his time, expresses a high opinion of the Jam Sahib of Nawanagar's batting, and "would rather see him make 25 than any of the others make 100," while Mr. Jessop is "amusing to watch, though I should not consider, as an actual hitter, he is anything to be compared to C. I. Thornton." Mr. Jessop, no doubt, does not drive the ball as far as Mr. Thornton was wont to drive it, but he has more strokes than Mr. Thornton ever had, and his consistency in run-getting is remarkable for one who takes so many and such extraordinary risks. Mr. Lubbock considers "A. Shaw, G. Tarrant, J. C. Shaw, or Willsher and Wootton and Freeman, quite as good as any same number at the present day," but it will be admitted that there is more variety about bowling to-day than in the days Mr. Lubbock writes so pleasantly about. There is greater variation of pitch, pace, and break, and then the "googlie" was not dreamt of in the sixties. Bowlers, we should say, think more in these days, and, as a consequence, their attack is less stereotyped than it used to be.

"I was interested a few weeks ago," writes Mr. Topping, "to observe a statement by a critic of the game, whose remarks are, as a rule, admirable and interesting. In the course of a general review of the first-class cricket of the year he asserted that in the case of some of the leading amateurs their respective schools cannot well claim to have taught them the style and the strokes to which they owe their present prominence. The inference, I suppose that we are invited to draw is that the training of our school cricketers has hitherto been based on an absolutely false system, and that the young aspirant to future honours in the cricket field is only taught on the school ground things which will have to be avoided, and lessons will require to be learnt in future before he can hope to be a good batsman; in short, that he must have the courage to cast away the tradition of the elders and evolve for himself a new system of salvation. . . . But, say the Arabs, 'A man cannot be wise without experience,' and again, 'Mind and experience are like water and earth-co-operating; neither of them alone can bring forth a flower.' The best two-year-old that was ever foaled would probably be incapable of winning the Derby, and we do not expect the head boy on the mathematical side of a public school to step straight out of the class-room into the senior Wranglership. But when the blue ribbon of either the turf or University is won is all the credit to rest with that man alone, be he trainer or private coach, who has put on the final polish? Fry, Foster, etc., are simply so many instances of boys, who were excellent types of orthodox cricketers when they left school, with such a groundwork of soundness that, having had the leisure to learn and the genius to profit by a few extra lessons won by experience, the development of manifold scoring strokes was bound to follow." All this is very true indeed, and is just what one would expect from so excellent and thoughtful a coach as Mr. Topping. Mr. Topping suggests that "schoolboys are expected to force the game too much nowadays," and thinks that Mr. Jessop's influence is here felt; but, he adds "no man living can play the kind of game which he produces. I do not for a moment advocate slow cricket, but I do deprecate, on every ground, the idea that a boy who is content to play a maiden over is an indifferent batsman." Here, again, anyone who has had experienced in coaching boys will agree with Mr. Topping; for it is suicidal to teach boys those scoring strokes which the cricketer of forty years ago would have regarded with horror: they must learn them by experience or evolve them for themselves. A coach should aim for roundness and orthodoxy, not forgetting that the old idea that the right foot should be glued to the ground is quite ridiculous. Mr. Topping gives the palm to Repton as the strongest public school team of last season. "There was batting, and sound batting too, to the eleventh man, and their attack, both in bowling and fielding, I have never seen surpassed by a school side."

The editor goes very fully into the history of the proposed Triangular Tournament between England, Australia and South Africa, and thinks that it was "put forward in too much of a hurry." Mr. Pardon like every one who knows anything about the Australians, deprecates the idea, which emanated from Johannesburg, that "the Australians declined the Triangular Tournament because they were afraid to meet the South Africans! This attitude would have been offensive if it had not been so transparently absurd. The Australians have their faults, but lack of courage is assuredly not one of them."

Sporting & Athletic Notes.

SATURDAY was our last day's racing in Calcutta and it furnished a very good afternoon's sport with a result of the interchanges all in favour of the backers.

THE first race, the Dwarf Handicap, had eight starters of whom Wal and Circus Girl were hot favourites and Cocky was also well backed. Wal took the lead but was beaten some 20 lengths from the winning post and then eased up so that he even lost the third place which fell to Eileen. Cocky showed himself an even better pony than he was thought by running Circus Girl to a short head at a difference of 6lb. only.

THE Balaclava Plate for the Light Horse chargers came next with but six starters. Padre was made favourite on the strength of a gallop he had done on the Tuesday morning when he beat Prince Moorfield giving him 7lb. and did the distance in 2mins. 22secs. With this performance common property the horse was backed down to 2 to 1 on and even at that price the layers of odds were not at all inclined for business. However, as has often before turned out, specially with old horses, the Padre did not reproduce anything of his track form. After flattering the hopes of his supporters by leading for about half the distance he curled up altogether when tackled in the straight and finished a length and a half behind Prince Moorfield, from whom he was receiving 7lb. this time, instead of giving it as he did when he won so decisively in the gallop.

A CLOSED one mile handicap for ponies was the next item. It was a G. R. race with professionals carrying 7lb. extra and this was felt to be by no means too much handicap for Killorn whose mount Meprise was made a very hot favourite. Tightlace and Eventide being the others most backed. At the finish the race developed into a duel between the favourite and Piccanniny, the latter of whom well ridden by Mr. Galstaun could not however quite get there.

THERE was a good field for the Mediocre Plate for which Punt who was backed by both stable and public was favourite. Kipling, however, also had a good following and Sue carried a great deal of stable money though the public did not fancy her much. The race, however, was a very easy thing for the favourite who, moving in really good style, had no difficulty in disposing of the opposition.

THE Sprinters' Consolation Plate was another good thing for the favourite. Longchamps, who carried most of the money, winning it fairly easily from Lefterin, who, however, might have troubled him if she had not made her run quite so late. Good Friday was also well backed but did not run well, this probably being to some extent due to the fact that Ames, who was riding her, got a stitch in the race and had to be assisted from the saddle and was unable to ride any more that afternoon.

LIPSCOMBE was favourite for the long distance consolation plate, Dirty Boy and Mount Dane also well backed. The race resulted in a win for Dirty Boy due to the magnificent riding of Jimmy Robinson, who put in as fine a finish as ever we have had the good fortune to witness with a result that he just got home in front of the favourite Lipscombe. Mount Dane who finished third had been sold by auction without reserve just after the third race. The Hon'ble Mr. A. A. Apcar purchased him for Rs. 1,450. The horse is now going to Bangalore, where, we believe, he is to be gelded and he will no doubt be a very useful addition to the senior steward's string.

THE last race of the day was the Amateur Handicap 1¼ miles. For this Lady Bentworth was favourite and Spinnet next most fancied. Mr. Davis on Pardon made all the pace till about 6 furlongs from home when the two favourites came through and a magnificent race between the two all down the straight resulted in a win for Spinnet by half a length. Mr. W. B. Bletsoe rode the winner in good style making his second winning ride on the day.

THOUGH Saturday was the official wind up for the season on Sunday morning down at the course some of our leading sportsmen amused themselves with a strictly unofficial, but none the less interesting, little meeting all on their own. The real thing in starters Mr. K. Campbell was kind enough to officiate with the flag and a well known Darjeeling trainer, who is famous for getting his horses as big and flourishing as he always is himself, did great execution with the white cone, there being no objection to give him an opportunity of hoisting the lalwala. There was no official programme and the first event was strictly ecclesiastical, being a race between the "Apostle" on Nicotine and the "Deacon" on Beaunero. Despite the fact that acting under instructions the starter did his best to give the gallant Colonel of Horse every advantage, he only got away about a length in front, which was not enough to stop the other winning pretty easily. Mr. Holmes on St. Rule was then matched against J. Davis on Lady Knight at 3 furlongs, the pony scoring easily. After this the "Apostle" once more came on the scene this time to prove that he was as good on foot as well as on horseback. His opponent was the one and only J. D. S. who mounted on Wal, gave the pedestrian a start of 50 yards out of a 100 and the latter, chosing his ground carefully and avoiding the long grass, was able to come in ahead of his opponent. Following was a three furlongs race of four Arabs, the starters being Mr. J. D. Scott on Secunder, Mr. J. D. Marshall on Master Willy, Mr. Charrington on Advance, and another starter who somehow got lost in the dust and whose name and fame has not transpired. Secunder won in good style despite the desperate efforts of Master Willy. After this we had a 6 furlongs race for all comers. The field consisting of Mr. Holmes on Billikin, Mr. Pauntley on St. Odille, Mr. Galstaun on Shooting Star, and Mr. Morris on Blue Bell II. A good race between Billikin and St. Odille resulted in a win for the former. The morning's fun wound up with a match between Blue Flame carrying 13st. 7lb. of "Arther George" and Loch Lilly ridden by her owner, Mr. Pauntley. Loch Lilly was much fancied but could not hold her own at the end and Blue Flame carried her heavy weight to victory in good style. Betting was fast and furious and we have heard of one gentleman who made as much as Rs. 30 in the course of the morning. Only one bookmaker had sufficient temerity to appear on the scene but having been mulcted in the sum of Rs. 20 on the first event beat a hasty retreat muttering that this was much too hot for him.

WE regret to have to report the sudden death of Mr. R. B. Lamotte, which has caused much regret among sporting circles in Calcutta. Mr. Lamotte has been importing horses into India since the season of 1892-93 and was a very well known figure here. He has usually raced one or two of his own in the course of the season with fluctuating success. In the old days he frequently rode in cross country races here, but has not done much of late. However in the season just finished he made one appearance at Tollygunge Steeplechases when he rode Mrs. R. H. Danger's Seagull in a Hunters' Steeplechase. He was at the Park Chummery Gymkhana on Friday but was taken ill on Saturday and died the following day. His death is a great shock to his large circle of friends and he will be much missed both in India and the colonies.

AT a meeting of the stewards of the Inter-Regimental Polo Tournament and representatives of regiments that entered in 1909 it was proposed to add the following to the rules of the Inter-Regimental Polo Tournament :—

"That a list of ponies, the property of officers of each regiment entering for the Inter-Regimental Tournament, be forwarded to the Secretary of the Tournament by 1st January and that the twenty-four ponies to be played in the Tournament must be selected from this list. This rule is not to apply to regiments arriving in India after the 1st September in the year previous to the Tournament.

It is desired that in case of dissent by any Regiment subscribing to the Inter-Regimental Polo Tournament the same may be communicated to the Honorary Secretary, Meerut, before this proposed rule becomes law."

ON the track at Colombes, a suburb of Paris, on Friday, the 18th February, Henry Saint-Yves, who won the Edinburgh Marathon race last New Year's Day at the age of 20, made a successful attack on the two hours' world's record of 20½ miles set up by G. Grossland at Stamford Bridge on 22nd September 1894. Saint-Yves had a stiff wind to contend with, but had the advantage of being paced by a bicycle.

He beat all French records from 21 to 35 kilometres, covering the former distance in 1hr. 13mins. 51⅕secs., and the latter in 1hr. 59mins. 49secs. In the two hours he covered a distance of 33 kilometres, 48 metres, or 20 miles 944 yards, an improvement on the old record of 64 yards.

"EARTHQUAKES and their terrible consequences have been sad subject of discussion lately, and one is minded," says a correspondent of the Standard, "to tell a story of how an earthquake was once associated with a game of golf, the story being as remarkable as it is true. Every golfer knows, or has heard of, that grand veteran of the old schools, Colonel E. H. Kennard, who for many years past has occupied the distinguished and honourable position of Field Marshal of the Royal Blackheath Club. The incident of the story happened in a foursome played out on a course in India, in which his son took part. The other side had played a very fine lie to a certain hole, the ball being laid dead only about a foot from the pin. Kennard's partner played the odd, the ball stopping about three yards from the hole. So Kennard himself had to play the two more, and he was walking up to their ball to do so when to his blank amazement he saw both balls begin to move and roll on the green! They had been at perfect rest for an appreciable space of time, and there was no visible cause for their movement. See what happened. The balls kept on slowly rolling, and the opponents' ball was running away from the hole all the time and finally came to a stop about four yards away. But the ball of Kennard and his partner ran towards the hole, and went in so that it had to be reckoned as having been holed from the last shot, the odd. The other side had thus only their four yards' put left for the half, and they missed, Kennard and his partner thus winning the hole. It was an earthquake, as was ascertained beyond doubt, that caused the balls to move, and so a hole has been won and lost through this strange agency."

THE English racket season is commencing with the introduction of the proposed new ball by the executive of the Tennis and Rackets Committee, who have recommended that for the amateur championships this year balls rather smaller and lighter than those hitherto used should be given a trial.

The majority of players and followers of the game will be interested in the cause and effect of the probable introduction of the new ball in the game.

It is not generally known that all good racket balls are of considerable age. After being used they are returned to the maker and the covers are taken off, cork and twine are added to the core to make it harder, and a new cover is put on. After this process has been constantly repeated the ball has not only grown in size, but at the same time is considerably harder.

These alterations are possible owing to the fact that there never has been a standard ball. At first the change was very slight and scarcely noticeable, but recently the ball used in the chief competitions, although making the game very fast—which is possibly one of its chief delights to the really great player—at the same time has drawbacks which are distinctly detrimental to the game as a whole. Foremost among these drawbacks is the additional expense caused by the extra strain put upon both the strings and the wood of the racket, the result being, owing to frequent breakages of both, far more rackets are required.

It is also probable that the more frequent use of the larger ball has been gradually brought about by the manufacturers. The cover of the larger ball cannot be sewn as tightly as that of the smaller, and so, with more required for a game, additional expense is incurred.

Another important point is that the larger and harder ball, especially in a fast court, puts too much premium on the service, and correspondingly lessens rally play, which is the chief delight of the game both to players and spectators.

The proposed alteration was due, after considerable discussion by the executive of the Tennis and Rackets Association, to the energy and efforts of one official, who took great pains in visiting the various manufacturers and thoroughly examining the process of making and the reasons for the enlargement of the balls, with the result that trial balls which were specially made are to be used this year. The proposed ball may this year cost slightly more, possibly 2½d. instead of 2d. per ball, but if it is a success it will probably be adopted as a standard ball for all competitions and come down to the old price.

It is greatly to be hoped that the new ball will be a success; no doubt the few really great players would sacrifice a little of the pace to what would undoubtedly benefit the game to the great majority of players. There are a great many who find the game too expensive, and consequently are debarred, even had they been able to take it up at school, from continuing it after leaving, and anything that would tend to lessen the expense would indeed be welcome.

AT the approaching meeting of Shareholders of the Chartered Bank of India, Australia and China the Directors will recommend a dividend for the past half-year at the rate of 15 per cent. per annum free of Income Tax, that £25,000 be written off Bank Premises Account, that £50,000 be carried to Reserve Fund (making that Fund now £1,575,000) and that £134,000 be carried forward as undivided profit.

THE ties in the fourth round of the Football Association Cup were replayed on the 10th instant.

Manchester United defeated Burnley on the latter's ground by 3 goals to 2.

The match at Sunderland between Newcastle United and Sunderland resulted in the defeat of the home team by 3 goals to nil.

Bristol City beat Glossop at Bristol by 1 goal to nil.

THE remaining game in the fourth round of the Association Cup between Derby County and Notts Forest was played at Derby this afternoon and resulted in a win for the home team by 3 goals to nil.

THE International Rugby Football match between Wales and Ireland was played at Swansea on the 13th instant when Wales won by 18 points to 5.

THE Punjab Native Army Hockey Tournament ended on the 8th instant in a win for the 47th Sikhs who beat the 23rd Sikh Pioneers by 3 goals to nil.

THE final in the Bengal Lawn Tennis Singles Championship will be played at Lahore to-morrow between Messrs. Deane and Atkinson who, it will be remembered, were unable to remain longer in Calcutta to play the deciding match.

THE endurance and speed exhibited by the canine race exceed those possessed by any other animals. Wolves will travel 60 miles in a night. Nansen saw Arctic foxes on the ice nearly five hundred miles from land. Eskimo dogs can travel 45 miles in five hours, according to an authority, who relates that he once drove a dog team seven miles in half an hour. A Siberian dog, on good ice, will draw about eighty pounds. The Indian hunting dogs will run down the fastest deer, and the way they stick to their work is marvellous. Ordinary domestic dogs, at full speed, run at the rate of from 33 to 49 feet per second; setters and pointers at about 18½ to nearly 22 miles per hour, and they can maintain this speed for two, or even three, hours. Foxhounds are very fast, and in a recent trial one of them beat a thoroughbred horse, covering four miles in 6½ minutes.

TWO International Associatian football matches were played on Monday. At Nottingham England beat Wales by 2 goals to nil, and at Glasgow Scotland beat Ireland by 5 goals to nil.

OUR Bombay correspondent writes:—The Club provided us with a generous card of eight events on Saturday for the Thirteenth Extra when, on results, it looks as though the punters had the better of it. Scratchings were fairly numerous in the big horse events, which were not exactly foregone conclusions, and good fields in the others spelt more good racing.

To begin with the first race, the Selling Plate saw a very strong call on Mubrad after his disappointing a week ago, with solid support for Durban on his second to Sharar. Durban made all the running clear in front from the favourite, but when it came to racing Mubrad got on terms and held the other very safe. Sinclair, well backed for a place, got where he was expected to and should improve on this first sign of being any good.

How Winchester would fare with 9st. up against a very fair class of new ones was solved in the betting ring, though Hyacinth was practically equ favourite in preference to his stable companion, Thaboor, who was picked by many on the strength of having finished strong on the tan last time. Hyacinth was ridden a rather erratic course and did well to run fourth, but Thaboor at one time looked to have some sort of a chance with Winchester when Goldman was done with. Winchester won with fair ease, but his timing was over a second slower than Fruit Salt's in the Second Nursery Handicap.

THIS red roan also had 9st. to carry and was backed with every confidence after his hollow win previously. Jadir also had a good following and, with a better run, many are agreed he should have won. His stable's other one, Rubio, cut out the pace when Champion fell back at the half mile. Fruit Salt, Tunis and Hurgon, all backed, displaced him at the bend and the favourite went away. Jadir was first noticed well after the distance and after finding an opening on the rails he came with a rush that landed him within a neck.

TWELVE out of twenty remained in for the Little Maiden Plate, and a very open affair it was with Corrector better backed than Good Chance, Farick, Light and Fritz. Good Chance took his usual position at the head of affairs, and when Light with Farick outside came at him he seemed for a time to hold them safe. Soon, however, all three were hard at it, and in a desperate finish Farick got there by a neck, Light getting second by only a head.

NEXT the Spring Plate of seven furlongs and we saw the fifth consecutive top-weight win. Even with 9st. 13lb. up Lovania appeared to be a class on his own from the five others, Forfeit and Ashanti Gold being next best. A slow starter, Chivalry was away last, but was well on terms with Lachlan and Paul Pry at the bend and went away with a good deal in hand, the other two keeping their positions from Ashanti Gold, Hoyt on Forfeit having a rough time along the rails.

A MOST interesting race to follow was the Andheri Plate, of a mile and a quarter. Fully satisfied that he is the equal of Precious, Dhafer with 9lb. the better of it was a warm favourite, Meazer, Merrily and Sialkote fancied also. Meazer has never shown any liking for such a long journey, but the other four made a great race of it. After Gladiator's run, comme toujours, Precious showed slightly in front of Dhafer and Merrily but at the three Dhafer had command looking very solid. Evans, however, would have profited by holding back a little longer as down the straight Merrily answered very gamely to the liberal use of Ferguson's whip and got home by a head, half a length away were Sialkote and Precious close together.

THE professionals had a turn at looking on in the next race, the Hunters' Flat, an annual mile and five furlong race looked forward to with no little amount of keenness by members of the Hunt. A bit of blood in the way of a dark brown Grafton gelding, Sentiment, owned by Mr. Vincent Clifford, was never available long at evens, winding up at twos on from Haphazard and Blackthorn and the betting went according to looks. It was no twos on chance, as Tragedian and Blackthorn assumed a ten length lead and looked like holding it. From the five the favourite began to come up and Mr. Owen Symons taking the shortest cut managed to squeeze home by only half a length from Tragedian out on the tan, a change of riders would most certainly have meant a reversal in favour of the outsider.

WE wound up with a nasty upset in the five furlong Auction Plate, Manlock contracting to 6 to 4 from Peria Doray and Wolferton, Alruna expanding from 2's to 6's. Old Manlock was first away with Koko who then left him with Wolferton and Alruna next. At the bend all four were well together, then Wolferton fell back and Alruna had a slight advantage. He went away nicely but a tremendous rush by Peria Doray on the extreme outside, landing him into second place, would find him many supporters were the race run again on the same terms; the time was very poor, 1min. 5secs.

We have at last seen "Alec" Taylor in something like his proper form, when he met a new arrival, Mr. E. C. Monks at Pyrke's Saloon on Wednesday, giving him 350 in 800, and a beating. The amateur was not easy to beat, as, scoring consistently, amongst his breaks were efforts of 40, 29 (twice), 28 and 27. In the first part of the game Taylor put up his biggest till then, a nicely compiled 90, but was in none too good a position at the interval when scores stood 619—430.

Later it was worse as when Monks only required 39, Taylor was at 58'. Taylor, however, rose to the occasion and after 42 and 33 in succession ran out at his next with 111 unfinished. He just got home by a margin of 28 points. Besides the breaks mentioned, he made 63 twice, 57 and 35.

In continuation of the Amateur Championship of the Bombay Presidency organised by Pyrke's Saloon and under the auspices of the Billiard Association at Home, several more interesting games have taken place in the preliminary rounds. The games are of 500 up each and, though nothing startling in the way of big breaks has occurred, the form generally shown has been of a high standard. Mr. C. V. Louth, winner for the past two years, will meet the winner of the preliminaries in the Tournament for the Cup which is presented by the Crystalate Company and which can be won outright. Thirteen altogether entered for the gold medal presented by the above Company and another for the runner up by Mr. Pyrke himself. Messrs. Simpson and Avery, are away so could not play.

All the "expected" ones won in the first round, and the first game of the second was probably the best we shall see, being between Messrs. Hallam and Monks, who are considered the pick. Not only was play quite classy, but most exciting after Hallam had assumed a commanding lead of a hundred. Monks is one of the plodding sort, more consistent than stylish, and in the second half of game played most pluckily. The result was that he caught his opponent near the finish and squeezed home by only 25. His best were 43, 33 twice, 24 and 20 three times, the loser's 44, 36, 30, 29, 26 and 20.

The other games in this round were not so level, Mr. Carnall beating Mr. Hutton by 148, scoring being rather slow till the latter stages, the former making 37, 28, 26, 25, 23 and 20 twice, and the latter 27, 24 and 23 twice.

After going away at the beginning, Mr. Fischer was caught by Mr. Young and eventually beaten by 180, Young making 33, 29, 28 twice, 27, 25, 23 and 20 and Fischer 28, 27, 25, 24 twice and 22 in a fast game. Lastly Mr. Gunian beat Mr. Self by 98 in rather a poor game, leading all the way.

This brings it to the semi-finals, the results being as follows:—

Mr. Pyrke	Monks	Monks	Monks
" Monks	500—468		500—475
" Hallam	Hallam
" Elliott	500—'33
" Gunian	Bye	Gunian
" Self	Bye	500—402
" Young	Young
" Watson	500—431	Young
" Fischer	Fischer	500—300		Young
" Avery	W. O.
" Hutton	Hutton	Carnall
" Simpson	W. O.	500—352
" Carnall	Bye

Young and Monks should fight out the final, the latter favourite.

The Bombay Jackal Club will hold their point-to-point races on Tuesday, 30th March. A programme of five events has been arranged—the race for the Bombay Hunt Cup, the race for the Pony Hunt Cup, the open point-to-point race for horses and ponies, and jumping competitions for horses and ponies.

According to a Reuter's telegram Dorando has again beaten Hayes in a Marathon Race at New York. His time on this occasion was 2hrs. 48mins. 8secs. which is 3mins. 47⅗secs. slower than in their previous race.

London Week by Week.

Friday, 27th February 1909.

That pathetic poem "Christmas Day in the Workhouse" may some day, not long hence, become additionally precious by reason of its record of incidents that are threatened with extinction. The cruel "workus master," the nasty spoken paupers "the old man in the corner with a heart as hard as brass," and the rest of the interesting and curious crew will become mere memories, the "grimy 'alls" will be put to other purposes. In a word the Workhouse is to be abolished. The recommendations of the Royal Commission on the Poor Law question, just issued, are of a most sweeping character. If they are carried into effect there will in due time be

No workhouses as they at present exist.
No boards of guardians.

The report recommends nothing less than a revolution in our present treatment of the problem of poverty, and among its many suggested reforms advocates that as a substitute for workhouses indoor relief shall be given in separate institutions for children, aged and infirm, able-bodied men, able-bodied women, vagrants, feebleminded, and epileptic.

Detention in colonies is proposed for those who wilfully neglect to maintain themselves or families, or give way to drink, gambling, or idleness. I cannot give here any extracts from the remarkable evidence as to workhouse conditions, which has driven the Commission to its drastic conclusions, but never before has there been grouped together such a collection of pen-pictures of human wretchedness as is now enclosed within the covers of this monumental report.

The London patriotic boom has not yet died out, it shows signs of running into eight weeks. The ha'penny press continues to make its "appeal" and they are doing as big business as ever with "An Englishman's Home." On the 2nd January, Lord Esher wanted 11,000 more men to complete the establishment of the Territorial Army in London, and there seems every chance of his getting them. The last official return of the Territorials showed a total strength of 15,811 officers and men. The latest official return, that of 20th February, shows an actually enlisted strength of 22,390 officers and men, or a gain since the "appeal" was made of 6,579 enlisted men. The establishment is 26,812 men, so that on 20th February there was a deficiency of 4,422. But since 20th February the enlistment of 800 men has been reported from the various headquarters, reducing the deficiency to 3,622, which was the total by which yesterday morning the recruited strength was below the established strength. Even this gap is practically filled. One thousand men are on the waiting list of the various corps—Artillery, Yeomanry, and Engineers—which are full and cannot at present admit any further recruits. Over and above these thousand there is a total of 2,800 men who have applied to the various corps for enlistment, but whom the recruiting staffs have not yet had time to examine and attest. All of which goes to show that Captain Du Maurier's clever and humourous play is another example of the old saying "what big results from little causes spring."

Suffragettes by post! This is the latest artifice of the shrieking sisterhood whose operations so frequently make the neighbourhood of Parliament Square intolerable. As no doubt, your readers are aware, it is possible to "post" people in this country. Accordingly two members of the Women's Social and Political Union had themselves posted as express letters to the Prime Minister at Downing Street. In charge of a post office messenger they were towed through the streets (placarded, of course, by some grotesque nonsense about their cause) and tendered for delivery. The bobbies guarding the Prime Minister's house detained them outside till the messenger returned with the announcement that the addressee declined to sign the receipt for them, so these living letters were conducted back to the office of issue and—let us hope—relegated to the dead letter office where may they remain.

The doom of the hansom cab seems only a matter of a few years, judging by the very marked decline in their numbers since the motor-cab came to stay. Alas! the hansom, which Disraeli once described as "the gondola of the streets," is steadily vanishing. In 1903 there were 7,490 hansoms and only one motor-cab in London. In February 1909, however, the hansoms had fallen to 4,747, while the motor-cabs had risen to 2,925. In other words, some 2,700 hansoms have disappeared and their place has been taken by the motor-cab. The pace of the disappearance would have been even more

THE subject of cabs suggests the telling here of a cabrank story : if its a chesnut you needn't finish the paragraph, you know. It was laid before the members at the last meeting of the Sphinx Club by Judge Rentoul who was among the diners. The raconteur explained that for many months he was driven to the Chancery Lane district by the same cabby, every morning—a cabby whose face did not suggest complete detachment from the flowing bowl. One morning he drove up sporting a huge bunch of blue ribbon on his coat lapel. The judge first chaffed him, then grew curious, then demanded to know had cabby turned teetotaller. Cabby was shy of the explanation, but judicial pressure prevailed. Confidentially leaning down from the box, he volunteered the following : "Well, it's like this, sir, I 'aint exactly teetotal, in a manner of speaking, but sometimes I goes on a strange rank. The other cabbies spots me bit o' blue and at first they chaffs me like anything, then they gits narsty and reviles me, and when that doesn't work, they tempts me with offers of drink. When they've tempted me long enough, I falls."

THE Lord Chamberlain has refused to license a skit on Major Du Maurier's play "An Englishman's Home"—which the Follies had proposed to introduce into their programme at the Apollo Theatre. The travesty would have played only about ten minutes, but the author and producer, Mr. H. G. Pelissier, was unable to convince the reader of plays that the skit would be accepted by the public, in its present martial obsession, merely as a harmless burlesque.

It has often struck me what a lack of burlesque there is in this big London of ours. Therein how our places of amusement differ from those of Paris or New York, by example, where practically every successful play has its inevitable burlesque. London is rarely treated to such entertainment. Somebody offers the explanation that comparatively so few real Londoners go to the theatres. Says he :—"Take any play you like to name, and ask your friends if they have seen it. You will be surprised to find, that hardly anyone you know has been to it. What is the good, then, of burlesqueing a play that has not been seen? The majority of the supporters of the London theatres are visitors. Thousands of people come to London for the theatres who would not think of visiting the local playhouse unless some 'starring' company was appearing there. These people do not want to see burlesque when they come to London." Now, the people of both Paris and New York, particularly the latter, are genuinely fond of the theatre. They know their best plays and their best players. They are so familiar with them that they can understand them when burlesqued, and, therefore, the burlesque pays. In England —outside of London—I am afraid the names of the postcard beauties are better known than the others. Some day, of course, it may happen that a clever writer of burlesque will arise, and that that amusing form of entertainment may be established here. Some of the burlesques to be seen in New York are screamingly funny.

THE only new play produced during the week for a run was the musical comedy called "The Dashing Little Duke," put up by Mr. Charles Frohman at the Hicks Theatre. To call this a new play is not quite correct, because, as "The Court Scandal," it was given, without music, at the Court Theatre ten years ago ; however, now that it is put up as a musical comedy, we may call it a new event. The story is of a young duke who on the day he is married learns that he is to be sent away with his tutor into the country for two years, and learns also that his bride despises him as a mere boy. Full of spirit, the young man resents these conditions. He gets into the Palace of Versailles at night, reaches the apartments of the Princess, and claims from her, as promised, a captaincy of dragoons. The scandal of a young man in the royal apartments has to be hushed, and the young man gets his way to some extent. He is detained, however, in his own apartments—a prisoner, after a sort, of his mother-in-law, who learns that her daughter now loves the young duke. The hero's duel and adventures form the other incidents, which are nearly everywhere weakened by the babbling of a crowd of chorus girls who follow or precede every entrance he makes.

There is plenty of movement in this play ; there is plenty of colour, too, and, Frank Tours has written several very effective musical numbers, the most ambitious of which are sung by Miss Elizabeth Firth, Mr. Hayden Coffin, Mr. Frank Wilson, and Mr. Courtice Pounds. As the dashing little Duke, Miss Ellaline Terriss looks delightfully happy, and sweetly feminine. The most perfect compliment you can pay her is to say that she does not look in the least masculine, but is just as pretty a picture when dressed as Miss Evelyn Millard, masquerading as a man, in "The Adventure of Lady Ursula." The great drawback to putting an actress on the stage to play an actor's part is that every scene in which she has to make love, or fight, loses all its sense of reality and goes for nothing. You may admit her cleverness and grace, but the most you can say is that she is doing very well in trying to do what would have been fairly easy for a young actor, but enormously difficult for an actress. Miss Terriss is trying to do what even Sarah Bernhardt could not make convincing. The scenes are all very pretty in this musical play, and Miss Louie Pounds looks a princess, and acts with charm and dignity as one. For the rest, "The Dashing Little Duke" is much as other musical plays produced by Mr. Seymour Hicks—the chorus is too obtrusive.

A LITTLE old-fashioned, but on the whole strong enough to hold the attention of the audience, Henry Arthur Jones's four-act play "The Dancing Girl" was revived by Mr. Tree at His Majesty's Theatre on Tuesday evening. As an entertainment "The Dancing Girl" is all right, but it cannot be said to be much more. Nothing could have been better than the cast got together by Mr. Tree ; even in the subordinate parts he put really good actors. As a melodrama, "The Dancing Girl" is good ; as a play supposed to be representative of real life, it is not convincing. It is a good entertainment, and will pass an evening pleasantly enough. In the first act we learned that the Duke was spending so much money that he could not raise funds to build a breakwater for his tenants in the island of Endellion. After a few years more of reckless extravagance we find him happy and repentant, laying the last stone of that breakwater. Miss Alice Crawford looked handsome and acted with spirit the part of the dancing girl. Mr. Tree was in his original part, the Duke. Miss Marie Lohr played with great sweetness the lame girl, and Mr. Louis Calvert was David Ives. Look at the other good names in the cast—Miss Rosina Filippi, Mrs. E. H. Brooke, Mr. Vane Tempest, Mr. Basil Gill, Mr. G. W. Anson, Mr. Charles Quartermaine, and Mr. Norman Page. The mounting was perfect, and the dresses in the third act wonderful.

YET another revival—"Louis XI"—by Mr. H. B. Irving at the Shaftesbury. The piece has held the stage since 1832, and has ever been a bravura piece for actors to whet their powers upon. Mr. Irving does not achieve greatness in the name part, still it is one of the best things he does. He cannot quite hold the part, to be sure. In the second act this was obvious. But at the beginning, in the scene in the bedroom, and at the end he gave a performance of real power and fascination. He "makes up" admirably for the part, and his physique seems to adapt itself with remarkable ease to the rôle, which puts a severe test on the whole gamut of a tragedian's strength. He succeeds admirably, and the house thoroughly appreciated it. One of the chief difficulties is the voice. This was perhaps the weak point, still there can be no doubt that his "Louis XI." is a very interesting and fascinating performance.

Mr. Erio Maxon was admirable as the young duke, and Miss Dorothea Baird played Marie de Comines with charm and distinction.

EVERYBODY knows everything that is to be known about "She Stoops to Conqner" in these days. David Garrick may have been right when he said of Oliver Goldsmith that he "talks like poor Pol," but Goldsmith certainly "wrote like an angel." The delicately woven story, the wit, the ingeniously arranged situations remain untouched by Time, and serve to make "She Stoops to Conquer" as lively entertainment to-day as it was more than a hundred years ago. Saturday night's revival at the Haymarket Theatre was chiefly interesting because of the appearance of Miss Ethel Irving as Miss Hardcastle. Since she came into her own, so to say, in "Lady Frederick," her numerous admirers have been longing to see her in the old comedies. Her performance as Miss Hardcastle is good, but hardly distinguished. It is dainty, it has some subtleties, it carries with it the charm of a charming personality, but it was not conspicuously distinguished. Mr. Robert Loraine's Marlow, on the other hand, was a notably clean-cut study, always convincing ; and Mr. George Giddens —no stranger to the part—was vastly amusing as Tony Lumpkin—never burlesquery, always funny without being impossible. Mr. E. Holman Clark's Hardcastle, Miss Beatrice Ferrar's Miss Neville, Mrs. A. B. Tapping's Mrs. Hardcastle, and Mr. Louis Goodrich's Hastings were adequate without being striking, and on the whole the revival was interesting, very interesting, without being particularly distinguished.

JUNGLE MEMORIES.

THE TSINE.

THE pursuit of the tsine or banteng is, in my opinion, the acme of still hunting. His sight, scent and hearing are most acute, especially the two last, and with the exception of the sambhur, he is one of the most elusive of animals. In fact, in wiliness and watchfulness, he can give even the sambhur points. With his rich red hide, white buttocks and stockings, he is one of the handsomest denizens of the jungle that I have ever come across. The horns have a different set and shape to those of the bison, being rounder and at a wider angle to the skull, and curving outwards, and then slightly forward and inwards, as opposed to those of the gaur, which curve upwards and inwards; they are also less massive, and where the gaur has a white or buff frontlet between the bases, the horns of the tsine are connected by a kind of hairless india-rubbery looking ridge. The hump of the tsine is not as developed as that of the bison otherwise he would nearly approach the latter in size, but he has the same abrupt drop between it and the back line which is so noticeable in the latter. In height they run between fifteen and seventeen hands, and their feet are slightly smaller and more pointed than those of the gaur. Tsine never seem to be found much over 2,000 feet, where they frequent engdine or teak forests. Their habits, diet and characteristics are with one or two exceptions similar to those of bison. The two species, however, never or hardly ever mix, and I have known occasions where tsine would be found on one side of a hill and gaur on the other, but never together. Their note of alarm is a double snort in contradistinction to the single one of their larger cousins, and as previously stated they are far wilder and shyer. If disturbed they dash off in the same manner, but whereas gaur may go for a long distance, tsine will generally pull up after two or three miles and describe their flight in a circle. As regards their fighting capacities, the Burmans say they are less dangerous than bison as they are not so inclined to resent liberties taken with them, but that when they do charge they are much worse, as like buffaloes, they will chevy a man from tree to tree, and not make the one headlong rush and away as does the gaur. Burmans also say that from the conformation of their horns, they are able to gore a prostrate man, which the bison is unable to do. The writer himself has never been attacked by one, but a friend of his, who on one occasion, jumping a fine bull, tickled up his posterior at fifty yards range, was attacked at once, the animal turning and charging back in the most determined fashion, and very nearly getting home. The contents of my friend's left barrel, however, catching the brute just above the eye, put all further ideas, out of his head for goood and all.

Many and many a time did I sally forth to try and slay my first tsine before success crowned my efforts. Again and again did find fresh tracks, which on being followed, slowly and cautiously, invariably led to the exasperating finale, i.e., whistling and crashing bushes, as the startled herd dashed away.

My luck, however, turned at last as it always will if one is persevering enough. One day in the middle of June in the later nineties, we got on to fresh tracks within a mile of my camp. After following them for a couple of hours (with how much care and caution after my previous disappointment can be imagined) the seemingly inevitable accompaniment to my stalks occurred, i.e., the double snort and then the crashing sounds of the galloping herd, which had winded us as usual. I ran after them for a hundred yards or so, in the hope that the bull might pull up and have a farewell look before continuing his flight, as tsine often do, but it was of no avail. We followed on for a bit and then came to the fresh tracks of a couple of bulls, which having been startled by the stampeding herd, had also quitted with celerity. I proposed following these, but old Pyat Gyi said they also had been disturbed, and that therefore we had better look for a solitary bull whose tracks we had followed the day before, but from which we had to desist owing to the heavy rain which had washed out the footprints. We struck off therefore, in a different direction for a couple of miles, but after prolonged search failed to find the tracks we had been looking for. With some difficulty we managed to light a fire to warm up my dekchi of Irish stew, than which there is no better provender for a long jungle tramp, and after a rest and a feed retraced our steps towards where we had jumped the herd. We had gone about a mile and were just entering one of these small open glades, which one frequently comes across in engdine forest, when San Young, who was leading suddenly dropped and pointed to the other end of the glade, or quin, as the Burmans call it. Sinking down at the same moment, I looked eagerly over his shoulder and saw a reddish mass, half hidden by bamboo stems, about a hundred yards away. "Tsine" whispered San Young. So taking his word for it, though for all I could see it might have been an ant-heap, I fired at where I thought its shoulder might be. It went down at once, and creeping up we found a fine young bull lying stone dead. The whole thing had been an absolute lucky fluke. Our coming on him thus unexpectedly, his staring at us long enough for me to get a shot at him, as from what I know of them we could not have been unobserved. My happy guess as to his anatomy, with a bullet fired at random drilling him clean through the heart, form a series of the luckiest and most remarkable events I have ever experienced. The head was only an average one, the horns if anything being rather on the slender side, still I felt happy enough, to have at last succeeded in my object, after the many fruitless efforts I had had to bag one of these wily animals.

On the next occasion that fortune smiled on me, I was back in the same old camp. The morning after my arrival I started as usual with San Young, my orderly, and a tiffin carrier. I had been forced to discard old Pyat Gyi, as he was getting too stiff and too deaf to be of much use, and in fact had become a nuisance. The other Burmans being afraid of him, used to agree to everything he said; often when he was obviously wrong, and as he was deaf, like many others thus afflicted, when he fancied he was speaking in a whisper, he was in reality—well! not whispering. But I am digressing. After tramping about in heavy rain for about two hours we at last came across the fresh tracks of a bull and cow, which we proceeded to follow. The rain had lightened considerably and what little wind there was, was blowing steadily. As there were only the two tsine my hopes ran high, though, of course, there was always the chance that they might have joined a herd before I came up with them, which would naturally make the stalk more difficult. Silently and noiselessly we stole along, carefully displacing the wet branches, and creeping through the matted tangle of the undergrowth, as from time to time we came across the denser patches of the luxuriant jungle. Here we would ford a small nullah the swollen waters curling round our waists, there the steep hillside would confront us and gaining the summit a small grassy green quin would stretch before our eyes, in the centre of which the sportsman's bete noirs, a pair of pee wits rising and circling above our heads, would give vent to their discordant cries. From the signs around us, the square cropped grasses, with their edges still green, the loitering clean cut footprints which aimlessly wandering, crossed and recrossed each other, we knew that our quarry had been grazing there that morning and should not now be far off. With redoubled caution; we descended the steep hillside to the banks of a small chouny along which the tracks were leading. Here and there the cropped grass and remains of bamboo shoots showed that the animals had been proceeding in a leisurely fashion to the secluded spot in which they intended passing the day. How I hoped that they would not be lying up in too thick a piece of cover. The tracks now crossed the chouny, and following slowly on we breasted the hill once more, and began to think it would not now be much longer before we came across our game. We had been tracking steadily without a pause for about two hours, so that judging from their leisurely rate of progression the tsine must be in fairly close proximity. The crest of the hill was soon reached, and peering over, another undulating quin met our eyes, but the big red bodies were conspicuous by their absence. There was a small bit of rising ground to our right front, which hid part of the quin from us, and thinking that perhaps the wild cattle might be there, we scouted carefully forward.

Looking over the brow my heart leaped, as I saw not forty yards away a fine bull with head up snuffing the breeze and listening intently, while a few yards off the cow grazed placidly beside him. He was evidently extremely suspicious, though his fears had not yet been communicated to his mate. To pitch and pull was the work of a moment and struck high up in the shoulder, the bull went over and lay struggling and snorting, as he made impotent attempts to get to his feet, but with a broken shoulder blade the poor brute was helpless. As I walked round to get a good target for my second barrel, the enraged brute propelling himself in some extraordinary way on his chest made a wild dash in my direction, but a bullet through the heart immediately abated his struggles to a few feeble kicks. He was not at all a bad bull; the longest horn being 26¼ inches, and the spread being 32 inches. His height from heel to wither being 15·1. As regards the shot, I have often noticed that one placed high up the shoulder, or about eight to nine inches below the wither, puts any animal at once hors de combat. He is invariably knocked off his legs, and falling always to the side on which he has been wounded, generally splinters the already damaged shoulder blade, and is then incapable of getting to his feet again. I now had some food and a smoke, and with great content watched the three men get the head off. When this was done the yard was extracted to be made into a cutting whip later on, and a very good one it was too, and much valued by one of my brother officers to whom I sent it. The head was very heavy, so on our way back I had to take my turn at one end of the pole to which it was slung. On arrival in camp I and my orderly set to work to skin it, as I wanted to have it set up, the operation taking over three hours. None of my men thought that I could save it in the rainy season, but I got it off all right packed in charcoal to Bombay, where it arrived perfectly sweet, but unfortunately with patches of hair off, as I had forgotten to dress that side, so that in the long journey the moths had got at it and, of course, ruined it.

Two months after I was back in the same old haunts again on the western side of the Pegu Yomahs, and was welcomed with great delight by the entire village, as my coming generally meant meat to them. Khubber was good as I was informed that two or three herds of tsine were about. My first two days I was unsuccessful, though each day I came across a herd, which was aware of my presence long before I knew of them. The next day we struck fresh elephant tracks which we followed, getting in amongst the herd about 7 A.M., but as we could see no tusker we backed out again and, resuming our wanderings, within half an hour came across the pugs we were looking for, and settled down on to the line. In about two hours, time we arrived at the place where the tsine had lain down during the night before, as I noticed the dung was much staler than that we had already seen. Pointing this out to San Young we made a cast, and struck the new trail about seventy yards off. Picking our way slowly along it, we soon heard a faint crack in front of us, which showed the tsine were still feeding, so we pulled up for a little to listen. Yes, there was no doubt we had come up with them, for now other cracks were to be heard, though fainter and fainter, as the animals grazed away from us. Proceeding down the jungle covered hillside and across a nullah, we climbed the grassy slope opposite, San Young, being very pleased, as he said there was no thick jungle in front so that with any luck we ought to get a shot. As we climbed on I began to get a bit nervous about the wind, as I could feel a puff every now and then on the back of my head, and thought that the tsine would probably scent us on reaching the top. On gaining the crest, we found a stretch of high Kine grass in front of us about fifty yards wide, and beyond that again was an open glade sloping gently downwards.

As we stole quietly to the edge of the grass, San Young pressed my arm, and fifty yards away I saw a large tsine, tail towards us scratching its ear with its near hind, and with a few cows dotted about grazing near it. Nothing seemed to me to be gained by waiting as we might be winded at any moment, so on the chance of breaking the joint I fired at his left hip. The herd immediately stampeded in my direction, and the next moment the tsine were galloping a few yards away on each side of me. Suddenly to my astonishment, from behind a bush close by where he had been lying concealed, a monster bull appeared racing straight down on me, not seeing me till he was three or four yards away, when he pulled up with a loud snort. I immediately fired my remaining barrel into his chest, dropping him on to his knees, while I bolted round the nearest bush to reload. To eject the empty cases and put in fresh cartridges was only the work of a few moments, and peering round the bush I found the bull was on his legs again looking towards me. The poor beggar looked a bit sick so leaving my shelter I began walking round him so as to get a shot at his vitals. He kept on turning towards me as I walked, snorting and shaking his head, and I think in a short time would have charged, had not San Young, who saw my difficulty, began walking round on the opposite side thus attracting his attention. The bull immediately turned towards him thus exposing his side into which I at once blazed off my right barrel behind the shoulder dropping him on to his knees. The tsine was up again on his legs directly after, getting the left barrel high up in the shoulder, when down he went for the last time, a fourth shot behind the elbow settling him for good and all.

This was indeed a red letter day for me, as he had an exceedingly fine head, horns measuring 25½ inches in length, 16 inches in girth, with a spread of 37 inches, the latter measurement being hard to beat. From heel to wither he taped 15 hands 3 inches, and I think would have measured more, if I had done it before removing the head, but this I had at the time forgotten to do.

After having finished off the big bull, San Young told me the other that I had first fired at was lying dead, and on going up to examine him I found that my one shot had dropped him in his tracks and that in a most curious way. It will be remembered that I had fired so as to try and break his hip joint, but I found on examining him that the bullet having grazed his quarters had taken a long strip of hide from his ribs and finally lodged in his neck-bone killing him instantaneously. It was a unique shot due, of course, to the attitude he was in, when fired at, when he was scratching his ear. He had only a moderately sized head, his horns taping 24 inches in length, 11 inches in girth with a spread of 30 inches. I was a happy man as I had my breakfast, and watched the man getting the heads off the big red bodies, and later on when with pipe alight I strolled to the edge of the hill, and looked at the miles of jungle with the many different shades of green, stretching in one grand panorama below and around me, the calm beauty of the scene stole upon my senses, and I felt that mysterious fascination with which lovely Nature at times speaks to the forest wanderer. It was good to be alive.

As we started on our return journey, I gave my rifle to my orderly, as it seemed to me too late in the day for game to be visible, as it often is in the early morning and evening. I much regretted I had done so, however, as a minute later up jumped a fine stag sambhur, which I could have easily shot if my rifle had been in my hands. It was rather curious and shows how close these big deer will lie. The stag was not more than sixty or seventy yards from the place where the big bull had been killed, and where for the last hour or more we had been talking and wandering about, to say nothing of the five shots that had been fired, and yet he had all the time laid as close as a hare in its form, when he could easily have slipped away. This little incident shows how one ought never to part with one's rifle; in sport as in war it is the unexpected for which one should always be ready.

Even one's unlucky days when after tsine impress themselves on one's memory. I was on one occasion shooting near Tennar on the Upper Chindwin, and we were out one morning looking for tracks as usual, and about eight o'clock came across some fresh ones which we proceeded to follow. The tracks were those of a small family party consisting of a bull, cow and calf. In an hour's time we came to a low ridge, on climbing which we saw the tsine nearly two hundred yards off, walking steadily away from us. The ridge was almost bare of trees so that we could see them easily, and followed on cautiously, congratulating ourselves on there being every chance of a shot, when suddenly after going about quarter of a mile we saw the tsine flinging up their tails turn sharply to the left and gallop off. Something had scared them badly, but what it was we could not guess, until we arrived at the place where they had taken fright, and then to our disgust and not a hundred yards away, we saw the white tent of my little camp, neither Po Say nor myself having recognised the ridge on which we were on, as being the one which overlooked our abode. The next day another funny thing happened, I had been out all day looking for tracks and was returning home in the evening along one of several knife-edged ridge, which ran parallel to each other from 200 to 300 yards apart towards the river. It was nearing sunset when on the ridge to our right and about 100 yards in front of us, a solitary tsine bull came into view walking quickly and steadily along in the same direction as ourselves. It was too far off to shoot so the only thing to be done was to continue along the ridge we were on in the hope that he might cross over to us, or that if he went down on the far side we might be able to run across the valley and get up to him under cover. We were within a mile of the camp and it was very exasperating to see the brute keeping steadily on and not turning to the right or left as we had been hoping. At last he turned off to the right so we doubled over, and as we could see nothing of him took up the tracks, which within quarter of a mile took us straight into the camp, which we found in confusion, as it appeared our friend had suddenly walked on to it, and then instead of turning off had galloped through, and taken five years off the cook's life, the pair having almost met round a corner, as the latter was coming back from the water.

Well, well, those happy days are over now, never to return. The memories of the green grass and park-like surroundings of the engdine forest, in which the tsine peacefully dwell, give me as much quiet enjoyment as those which I have just been recording, and in conclusion I hope that those of my readers who have the opportunity of tracking these wild cattle will obtain as much pleasure in their pursuit as has had the writer.

THE BEHAVIOUR OF MULTIPLE BULLETS IN RIFLES.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE INDIAN FIELD."

SIR,—Not very long ago a duplicate bullet was brought out by an ingenious American, for the ·303. It consisted of two short bullets, the nose of one of which fitted exactly into the base of the other, so that while in the rifle they behaved just like a single bullet, of ordinary length, but separated slightly from one another during flight. The contention was that the two were about 6 inches apart, at 100 yards, and proportionately more at longer distances. The principle of this double shooting was to afford Maxim guns a means of increasing the volume of their fire, when meeting a sudden rush at short range. What the history of this double bullet was, I do not know, but I fancy if it had come up to the inventor's fond expectations, it would not have sunk into oblivion, as seems to be the case. It will have occurred to most investigators of rifle shooting, that the use of multiple bullets offers a simple and effective way of converting a rifle, when the need arises, into a shot gun.

All that seems to be wanted, is to cut an elongated bullet into four or five discs, re-assemble them again into bullet form, and load the cartridge with the sliced bullet: then on firing each disc takes the rifling, and the pattern at moderate ranges must be close enough to hit anything. This is exactly the theory which an enquiring brace of riflemen (of which I was one) held, until the affair was tested practically. Then came disillusion.

We took a good deal of trouble over the business, fitting the segments together most accurately, and swedging the bullet after assembly to the exact size necessary to take the rifling. Sometimes the discs travelled truly, and punched neat round holes in the card target without any signs of tipping: at other times the discs tipped badly, without any assignable reason. The dispersion of the discs was in all cases so great, as to make the contrivance quite useless for all practical purposes. We went to the length of fitting each disc with a projection to go into a corresponding hole in the base of the next one, and in spite of all these pains, quite failed to get any decent results. We next tried a light tubular bullet open in front, but with a solid base. Five large shot were fitted down the central channel: the idea being that the light bullet would lag behind the heavy shot, which would issue from the case after it had got a little distance from the muzzle. This was a failure because the shot set violently back into the case with the shock of discharge, and so became déformed and jammed, and never got out at all. Thus this last patent of ours merely acted like an ordinary single bullet, and so was quite useless. We carried out our experiments with a 250 medium power rifle. Of course shot can be fired out of a rifle, by having a wooden thimble to keep them together while passing down the bore. The trouble, however, in this case is, that the thimble is liable to take the spin of the rifling, and this has a most disastrous effect on the pattern. Spin brings centrifugal force into play, so that the shot as they issue from the thimble scatter enormously, and useful effect is confined to very short distances.

The above short account of our abortive experiments may be of interest to people who think it would be a good thing to have some means of converting their rifles into shot guns, on emergency. Loose shot can of course be used at a pinch, and this also I have tried. The pellets as they are driven across the groves, naturally cause considerable leading, and the patterns obtained are deplorable.

United Provinces.

Depôt of Museum and Naturalists' supplies with Department for Ornamental Taxidermy, Feather Pictures of Birds, Skin Dressing, etc.

The above business has been started to fill a long-felt want and to give sportsmen an opportunity of having their trophies artistically mounted with anatomical correctness.

There is no further need to send trophies to Europe to be prepared, as the work turned out by this firm is equal to that of any similar business in England or elsewhere, and the rates are very much cheaper.

The mounting of birds and animals and the modelling of heads is entirely done by European workmanship and not by European supervision only, as is the case with other firms of this nature in India.

AT THE TELEPHONE.

A CONFIDENTIAL CONVERSATION.

HE : That you, sweetheart ?

SHE : Yes, darling ; what is it ?

HE : Oh, I want you to do something for me. I quite forgot to ask you before I came away this morning, to buy me a bottle of Odol.

SHE : Speak louder ; I can't hear. A bottle of what ?

HE : Odol ; O-d-o-l, Odol. You know, the famous preparation for the teeth.

SHE : All right : I won't forget. I'll make a memorandum at once that you want something for your teeth. I'll ask them at the shop to give me the best powder they have for the teeth.

HE (shouting) : No, no, no ! I don't want tooth powder.

SHE : All right ; I'll get you tooth soap.

HE : No, no, no ; I don't want tooth soap either.

SHE (rather irritably): Then what do you want, darling ?

HE : Odol, sweetheart. Tooth powders and tooth soaps are no good. They don't get into the crevices and between the teeth, so they are useless for preventing fermentation, which causes the teeth to decay. Odol gets into every crevice of the mouth, and washes away everything that may do harm. It penetrates the interstices of the teeth and the mucous membrane of the mouth. It is an antiseptic, and its refreshing effect lasts for several hours after using it. That is why I don't want you to get me anything else but Odol. All my friends use it now.

SHE : All right, darling ; I'll get you a bottle of Odol. Good-bye.

HE : Stop a minute ; don't ring off. Say, Sweetheart ?

SHE : What is it ?

HE : There are two sizes of Odol—one at eighteenpence, and one at half-a-crown. Buy the half-crown bottle, for it is much more economical, as it contains double the quantity of the other flask.

SHE : All right. Good-bye.

HE : Just another minute, sweetheart. There are two flavours—Standard and Sweet Rose. Buy a bottle of Standard for me—yes, Standard flavour ; and buy a bottle of Sweet Rose for yourself. It is simply exquisite. Bye-bye, sweetheart. Take care of yourself, and be very careful how you cross the road.

SHE : Good-bye, darling.

They ring off.
