ROULETTE SYSTEMS.

LORD ROSSLYN'S roulette system has recently been put to a practical test in London in a friendly tournament between him and Sir Hiram Maxim, and the result has been a victory for the Bank. The struggle originated in a correspondence in the columns of a London evening newspaper. A correspondent called attention to the fact that the Casino at Monte Carlo made a profit last season of a million francs more than it had ever made before, and he hinted that those who asserted the possibility of systematically winning at roulette should show how to do it. Sir Hiram Maxim wrote claiming that the "board" at Monte Carlo is so arranged that no matter where the money is placed the bank makes its percentage, and that this percentage is a fixed quantity—"quite irrespective of what system is played or whether no system is played; it is always the same for the bank" Sir Hiram insisted. This letter caused Lord Rosslyn to look to his laurels, and he declared that with his system and £15,000 capital, "the bank at Monte Carlo would not exist in ten years." Finally Lord Rosslyn challenged Sir Hiram to a game. The challenge was accepted. Sir Hiram represented the Bank, and the tournament was conducted in the following manner:—Each party was provided with counters representing £10,000, and it was agreed that whichever side made inroads into his opponent's capital after 5,000 coups had been played was to be adjudged the winner.

Lord Rosslyn's system, it is interesting to learn, was originated by an Italian who died in 1890, "From him," says the earl, "my brother learned the system. One day at Monte Carlo my brother advanced me £25 on condition that I played the system. I won £50 in an hour and lost it in ten minutes, having, however, gained some insight into the system. I gradually improved it out of all recognition." What, it will be asked, is Lord Rosslyn's system? His lordship explains that it is based on the law of averages. "There is no such thing," he added writing before the tournament, "as a system which is absolutely certain to defeat the bank. The one I am playing is the nearest approach to a certainty that will ever be devised, and I write with no uncertain mind on a subject I have studied for seventeen years. The basis of all systems must be the law of average. I know that the difference between the red and the black for the past twenty years is so minute as to cause no danger to my mathematical culculations." Lord Rosslyn further showed his confidence in his system by declaring "If there have been any bets made on the contest those who have backed Sir Hiram may prepare to pay." To t... Maxim replied "Lord Rosslyn is ... his system is certainly a ... if he were playing in earn... ld get more fun for his m... gentlemen with systems. ... ly. It is simply to me a ma...

The tournament occupied eight days and the variation of the play may be gathered from the following table:—

"Bank" won first day 4, 730 fr.
"Bank" won second day 7,585 fr.
Lord Rosslyn won third day 49,395 fr.
"Bank" won fourth day 2,305 fr.
"Bank" won fifth day 28,615 fr.
Lord Rosslyn won sixth day 6,960 fr.
"Bank" won seventh day 101,880 fr.
"Bank" won eighth day 147,270 fr.

At this stage Lord Rosslyn had about 17,000 fr. left, but under his system his next stake would have been 6,040 fr., 40 fr. above the maximum. It was open to him to cut his losses as he had already done that day but, in view of the small amount of capital left to him, he decided to stop. For the whole game the colour proportion was: Black, 1,555; red, 1,440; zeros, 86. It was all against Lord Rosslyn, who played 2,680 times on red and only 319 times on black. In explanation of his defeat Lord Rosslyn says:—"The predominance of black to the extent of 4 per cent., rising to 9 per cent., rising to 14 per cent., and finally reaching 18 per cent., has defeated the laws of average. As my system is founded on the laws of average, I have to take my defeat like a man, and admit my loss." Sir Hiram Maxim is not at all surprised at the result. "It was inevitable," he says, "I have always contended that it is absolutely impossible for anyone to beat the bank over a prolonged period. Every spin of the wheel is a gamble in itself, and has no connection whatever with the spin that preceded it. Lord Rosslyn sees that he has been absolutely beaten." The result, it is evident, has not discouraged all the system makers. M. Inaudi, a celebrated French calculator, has challenged Sir Hiram Maxim to test his system for winning at roulette, which he declares is infallible. Sir Hiram, however, advises him, if he has such faith in his system, to try it at Monte Carlo. To anybody who has given even the slightest study to the question it must seem ridiculous that any system can defeat the bank. Where all the system-mongers—and there are over 10,000 of them—go wrong is in confounding the law of probability and the law of average. The whole thing depends on luck, and luck alone. The system player is the one class of gambler from whom the proprietors of gaming tables are certain to make a profit. The plunger, as the Daily Graphic points out, "accepts the odds against him, stakes his money and conceivably may snatch from the hazard a goodly purse, but the system maker deliberately refuses to admit that if the chances are ever so little against him they must ultimately overcome him if he plays long enough and thereby insures his own defeat." The only way to play roulette and not lose is to play as Lord Rosslyn did with dummy money.

THE POPULARITY OF THE DOG.

Never was the dog more popular than he is to-day. As showing how much the canine is in favour at the present time, it may be mentioned that nearly four thousand entries were received for the Kennel Club's 53rd show, which was held on the 20th, 21st, and 22nd instant, at the Crystal Palace, Sydenham. Never has a more magnificent entry been obtained for any show since canine exhibitions were first inaugurated and never has the quality of the exhibits been excelled.

When in 1873 the late Mr. Shirley of Ettington organized the first Kennel Club show at the Crystal Palace, Sydenham, he could hardly have foreseen that he was starting a movement which was to become one of the most popular and fashionable pursuits, not only in the United Kingdom but in every civilised quarter of the globe.

At the Sydenham show in 1873 the entries number 975, but this number has shown a steady increase ever since. To come to later years the entries in the first show of the present century were 2,140. The following year 500 more were received and since then the total has grown larger every year so that by now the total of the first exhibition has been nearly quadrupled.

The high position which the Kennel Club holds in all matters as the ruling authority in kennel affairs throughout the United Kingdom is largely due to the support given it by that large and influential section of society which recognizes the invaluable services rendered by the club in making dog breeding and the exhibition of dogs a pursuit in which respectable persons can engage.

King Edward when Prince of Wales graciously extended his patronage to the club at its inception, and when he ascended the throne he further gave a signal proof of his interest in canine affairs by continuing to be patron of the Kennel Club. Nor has the King's interest ended here, for he has been a frequent exhibitor at the Kennel Club shows.

Queen Alexandra is well known as an ardent admirer of dogs, and, like the King, does not confine herself to any one breed. Other members of the Royal Family are equally enthusiastic dog lovers, and, as is well known, the Duke of Connaught is President of the club. The honour of having the King for patron and the brother of his Majesty as President is a distinguishing mark of Royal favour enjoyed by no similar institution.

Coming to the show, the aggregate value of the prizes given amounted to £7,000, the largest sum offered at any previous dog show. A specially interesting feature of the show were the hounds of various breeds. As usual fox-terriers headed the list numerically, and they were followed in the order named by Pomeranians, Bulldogs, and the Toy breeds.

Space will not permit of a reference to every variety of dog represented, but some mention must be made which are more particularly associated with lady owners, these were easily led by Pomeranians, which were shown in six different varieties of colour, and next to them were the more expensive Pekinese and Japanese Spaniels.

It has ever been the aim of the Kennel Club to bring together a representative collection of sporting dogs, and its efforts have met with varying success. Naturally the season of the year in which the show is held has much to do with the number of the entry. Thus, in October, it can hardly be expected to have a large collection of hounds of various breeds in evidence as most of the packs are busy hunting. Greyhounds also are in training, and their owners are naturally chary of interfering in their preparations in any way.

The Kennel Club, however, has framed special conditions for the exhibition of Fox-hounds, Stag-hounds, Harriers, Beagles and Greyhounds, whereby hounds belonging to a recognized pack and required for hunting purposes, and Greyhounds in training and about to be trained for a coursing meeting may be removed from the show immediately they have been judged. Another good rule of the Kennel Club is that any puppy may be removed on the first day of the show.

The necessity of such a rule must be apparent to the most casual observer. The strain on a puppy at a show is severe, and the chances of it suffering in health in consequence of excitement and other causes very great; it is therefore essential that it should not be exposed more than is absolutely necessary to the risks referred to, hence the framing of the rule which has been hailed with such general satisfaction.

The continual enforcement of the quarantine regulations prevents some of the best specimens of the various breeds being brought to Kennel Club shows from other countries, but it is hoped that as soon as the Government sees fit to remove the restrictions that this great show will assume an international character.

The great and active interest taken in dog-showing by women is one of the most remarkable features of the past few years. At the earliest shows women were rarely other than visitors: now a large proportion of exhibitors at all dog shows are of the gentler sex, and in certain varieties they actually preponderate.

There can be no doubt that when a woman seriously takes up dog showing she is very thorough and much in earnest, and allows neither trouble or expense to stand in the way of her efforts toward perfection in her kennels. Two examples may be quoted in support of this statement, and undoubtedly if keenness exists in two kennels it probably is indicative of the general spirit which pervades the ranks of the lady exhibitor.

In one case alluded to the owner of a well-known kennel of fox-terriers, when preparing her dogs for exhibition, regularly sends them to the seaside for a change of air, and in the other the lady who runs her setters at field trials rents a moor for no other reason than that her dogs may be properly trained under her personal supervision.

Not only have all the specialist clubs a good proportion of lady members, but several influential organizations are entirely composed of women. To name the principal of these are the ladies' branch of the Kennel Club and the Ladies' Kennel Association (Incorporated), which between them include in their membership many of the leaders of society, including the Queen, the Duchess of Connaught, the Duchess of Newcastle, the Duchess of Sutherland, the Countess of Aberdeen, the Countess of Chesterfield, and many others.

Patient: "The examination seems to have delighted you, doctor. I judge from your happy countenance that you can save my life."

Dr. Sawbones: "I cannot promise you that, but we must perform a number of most interesting operations on you."

Sporting & Athletic Notes.

The Tollygunge Club Fifth Gymkhana on Saturday was a very jolly little affair and though the three races were all such hollow victories for Mr. Evers the two jumping competitions provided lots of fun and interest and the excitement of going out in public all by themselves was too much for the nerves of some of the equine performers, who consequently gave their riders a hard and not in all cases successful tussle to maintain their centres of gravity.

There was little doubt as to who should win the pony jumping as Lady Lovelace is a great performer and stood out a long way from the others. In the horse jumping there were thirteen competitors and very little to chose between several of them. The first prize was eventually awarded to Rainbow a very big bay belonging to and ridden by Mr. F. C. Halliday. He jumped very well and cleanly but is none too pretty to watch. Sauce, an animal of much the same style, was placed second and old Cain who was not in his best form, third. Of the others, Ruby, Joe and Colours put up the best performances, the first named going in particularly good form.

The first race was The Pony Hurdles for which five started. Mr. Evers' mount Ungava was well backed at 2 to 1 on and had the race in hand from the flag fall, coming in an easy winner by a length from Dynamite. The Pink 'Un who was thought to be Ungava's only danger did not run up to form at all and finished a bad third.

The promised gate was not in evidence in the two flat races and there was a long tiring wait at the start for the Autumn Plate, Mr. Maxwell's pair both giving as much trouble as they knew how. Monotony played about all over the place; Hall Mark absolutely refused to go up to the other horses and eventually they went off to a very bad start without him and he retired ignominiously to the stables. St. Victor who was favourite ran badly and Mr. Evers got home a second time, Ynsylas leading all the way cantering in a winner by six lengths.

It was two to one on Reha for the Club Cup and though Grey Granite led the field at a hot pace for four furlongs and got right away from them, he stopped pretty quickly when he came into the straight and the favourite went through the field and won very easily by two lengths. Furlong who was also much backed showed very poor form being beaten by Ziska for second place, and is apparently an over-rated pony.

The club emboldened, by the success of the five meetings held so far have advertised a couple more for 7th November and 14th November and there is every possibility of an eighth on 21st November which will take us up to the First Extra at Calcutta on 28th November and mean weekly racing without a break right through from 31st October to the middle of March!

Next week's programme is very attractive and as might be expected has attracted a very good entry. It caters for every class of animal from the tum-tum pony to the second class race horse.

The entries for the Viceroy's Cup are not yet officially published, but from what we can gather from private sources they are as under:—

The appeal by Mr. F. F. Goodliffe, agent for Mr. St. L. B. Aldworth against the decision of the Stewards of the Rangoon Races in disqualifying Mr. Aldworth's pony Bob for crossing in the Newlyn Plate at the Sixth Extra Meeting in September was allowed by the C. T. C. Stewards and the race has accordingly been awarded to Bob, Celia being placed second and Waif third.

The Gymkhana Meeting to have been held at Guindy, on the 31st instant has been postponed till next Saturday owing to the wet weather in Madras.

We regret to learn of a serious accident to Mr. C. Latimer I. C. S., Second Assistant to the Agent to the Governor-General at Indore. Mr. Latimer had a bad fall while playing polo and was picked up unconscious and had to be removed to the hospital where he is making favourable progress.

That fine English race horse and successful sire Kendal died last month in the Argentine. At the time of his death he was head of the winning sires of South America, with the winners of 41 races, value over £16,700. His stock have always been well appreciated, and many of them have been publicly sold for large sums. When Kendal was exported to South America in 1901, many people in England were inclined to regard him as having passed his prime. That this was a fallacious idea is proved by the fact that the average yearly winnings of his stock since have exceeded £15,000. His son Boreal was the best of his year. The loss of Kendal, coming at the commencement of the Argentine stud season must not be a slight one, but fortunately the owners of the Olo de Agua Stud have at their disposal such magnificent specimens of the thoroughbred as Cyllene and Polar Star. Both recently landed in excellent condition, and caused quite a sensation when they were exhibited on the Hurlingham Racecourse prior to being sent into the country to their new quarters. While in England Kendal sired, amongst other good horses, Galtee More, the triple crown hero of 1897, who was sold to the Russian Government for £21,000, and after having sired the best of the year in Russia three seasons in succession, was acquired by Count Lehndorff for £12,000 on behalf of the German Government.

Full details of the Newmarket Second Meeting and the race for the Cesarewitch will be found in our review of English Sport further on. The result of the race was published in our Special Telegram of the 15th October. Yentoi enabled Lady de Bathe to score her second win in this event, her first having been with Merman in 1897. Merman was imported from Australia especially with an eye to this race, and a remarkable feature of his success was its synchronising with the birthday of his owner. A fortnight later, Sir William Ingram won the Cambridgeshire on his birthday, so completing, a unique double coincidence. Everybody, of course, knows of the identity of Lady de Bathe with Mrs. Langtry, and so familiar is the old name, which she still retains for stage purposes, that lots of people habitually speak of her by it, though she has been a titled personage for some years now. Both in Merman's year and this her ladyship was exalté as the French say, lifted out of herself with joy and pleasure, and no wonder, either; she had won the Cesarewitch and something like £12,000 in bets. An interesting article on the Cesarewitch and some famous partnerships and trials connected with it, appears in this issue.

Sports and pastimes will flood Olympia immediately after the Horse Show next July, and for a full month there will be the opportunity to study the law of demand and supply—in amusements. The exhibition is being arranged by the organisers of last year's Travel Exhibition which was held at the Royal Horticultural Hall. The variety of exhibits will be enormous; they will range from cricket and tennis to ballooning, flying, and big-game hunting. Many countries will be officially represented, and Sweden will monopolise the whole of the annexe, where a host of popular ice games will be shown. Four large rooms will be given over to cinematograph shows. In the big-game hunting section a very large number of trophies will be exhibited. They will include loans from Earl Lonsdale, Admiral Sir W. R. Kennedy, Sir J. West Ridgeway, Colonel Sir Thomas Hungerford Holdich, Sir Harry H. Johnston, Mr. C. S. Rolls, Sir Henry Seton-Karr, Captain F. G. Jackson, leader of the Jackson-Harmsworth Expedition to Franz Josef Land, Colonel C. E. Yate, and many other well-known people. The aeronautical section is being arranged by General Baden-Powell. There will be many models, and all the latest appliances and outfits will be shown. It is hoped that in the games section it will be possible to get some well-known players to give demonstrations in lawn tennis.

An International Sports Exhibition is to be held at the Royal Agricultural Hall in May next. A number of novel features are to be introduced, the most prominent of which will be a series of athletic competitions for amateurs, for which purpose the whole of the arena is to be set apart and converted into a lawn for tennis, bowls, batting and bowling, archery, etc., whilst a special track for running and walking is to be prepared.

Mr. Frank Hedges Butler (founder of the Aero Club of the United Kingdom) describes his impressions of his recent flight with Mr. Wilbur Wright at Le Mans, France. He says:—"I have just flown the same as the birds. It is like gliding on beautiful water where you can see the bottom—in perfect security. Wright feels his levers and looks at his planes like a skipper looks at his sails. In 120 free balloon ascents that I have made, includiug twice crossing the channel in the widest and narrowest parts, and once in a dirigible airship the Ville de Paris, nothing is more charming than flying." The first six Englishmen to fly in an Aeroplane heavier than air, are:—Mr. Henry Farman, who resides in Paris; Mr. Fordyce who resides in Paris; the Hon'ble C. S. Rolls, son of Lord Llangattock; Mr. Frank Hedges Butler, Director of the well-known firm of Wine Merchants, Regent Street, London, W.; Major Baden-Powell, brother of General Baden-Powell; Mr. Griffith Brewer, a Member of the Aero Club.

As will be seen from the report in our English Sporting Letter the Marathon race promoted by The Evening News was most successfully carried through at the Stadium on the 12th October and was won by a young Frenchman named Siret who, running like a machine from end to end, finished like a lion in 2hrs. 37mins. 23secs. Thus covering the 26 miles in seventeen minutes less than Dorando Pietri and nearly eighteen minutes less than the American Hayes, who, it will be remembered won on protest at the Olympic sports last July. It was a magnificent performance and was greeted as it deserved to be. Of a truth France has recently risen remarkably in the athletic world. Frenchmen can now boast of fine performances in many branches of sport. A high medical authority comes forward with a possible explanation. He says the Continent is now beginning to reap the full benefit of universal conscription. "The men of to-day are the sons of the men who were the first to be drilled in their youth. With every generation the stamina and athletic fitness of the Frenchman and the German will inevitably increase. While in England, except among public school boys, where athletics are a cult, the standard will correspondingly decline." We are not of those who every time a foreigner wins an event when competing against Englishmen, find in the fact a proof that England's supremacy in sport is at an end. We do not grudge a Frenchman, American, or any other foreigner his success, it should only suggest that we look to our laurels as, of course, we do, and our turn will come round again no doubt.

Poor Inman, the billiard player, has rushed upon his fate and taken a bad knock on his first appearance in England since his return from his tour round the world. He met Stevenson in a 10,000 up match early this month, received 2,000 and a beating by 821 points. The scratch man made a dashing finish which included a break of 475 and several over the century.

The Sculling Championship of England was won by Barry (Britisher), who beat Towns (Australian) in record time after a good race: details in Sport in England to-day.

No less than five centuries were scored in Calcutta in the matches during the holidays at the beginning of the week. H. C. Chandler has twice reached three figures: playing for the Caledonians, against the Rangers he put up 110 and against the B. N. Ry. he compiled 113 G. Turnbull made 100, batting brilliantly in the inter club fixture of the C.C.C. and Mr. Battliwalla retired after scoring 103 in the match between the the Captain's XI. and the Secretary's XI. of the Nattore C. C. In their match against Ballygunge United Oghad Sankar scored 106 not out for the Nattore team.

Our Bombay correspondent writes:—With the prize-giving on Monday, the Gymkhana Mounted Sports Meeting came to a close, leaving the Honorary Secretaries heroes of a more than usually successful big meeting following an interesting series of smaller weekly affairs. A very picturesque sight was this prize-giving on the lawn in front of the Gymkhana building with the Pipers of the Royal Scots marching up and down before and after the presentation which took place before a very large gathering. Mrs. Hewett kindly consented to do the necessary, and it took some time as the athletic and golf prizes were given away at the same time. There is a Cup for the largest number of points gained at the small as well as the big events, and that for the former went to Symons with that for the latter to Baraclough, both admirable horsemen who deserve their success. The Ladies' Cup was deservedly won by Mrs. Rumboll, who was not seen riding during the week owing to being away.

An early start was made at 3-30 with the Tent Pegging on horses and this went to Gray from Baraclough and Scott after they had been given an extra run. The section jumping was extremely well carried out, the first two being mounted on good natural leppers. "D" Troop of the Bombay Light Horse eventually won the prize presented by their own corps, they consisting of Stileman, D. Graham, Baraclough and A. K. Graham. They were on ponies and, letting them have their heads a few strides from the jumps, they went over splendidly. Carter, Christie, Clare and Grayburn were placed next, also doing well, in fact an extra run had to be ordered before a decision could be arrived at.

The Bending Race was made more difficult by the competitors having to ride bare-backed. Eleven starting, it was run in heats which were won by D. Graham, Baraclough and Symons, whose pony went straight into one of the posts, but with a little pig jump got himself out of trouble. In the final, Graham won by a couple of lengths with Symons just beating Baraclough.

An easy thing for Baraclough was the Polo-ball Race in which he won his heat and the final right away in front and made no mistake at the goal. Scott won his heat and ran second in the final when he beat Westropp and Graham. As easy a thing was the Postilion Race for D. Graham, competitors having to ride the course and change mounts without dismounting. The horses of the two Grahams being perfectly trained. D. won from A. K. with ease, the rest nowhere.

We come now to the events in which the ladies took part, the Cocoanut Race being very hotly contested. The fruit were placed on posts and the ladies had to pick them off one by one and throw them to their partners to catch, any missed were to be returned and thrown again till caught. Ten runners necessitated three heats which were won by Mrs. McCausland, Mrs. Pickard and Mrs. Priestley. A splendid race was seen in the heat which Mrs. Pickard won from Mrs. Hatch, who led to within a length of the post. As consolation, Mrs. Hatch was allowed to start in the final and shewed her appreciation by winning it. It was a most exciting affair, Mrs. McCausland at one time looking like getting away first, but bad throwing lost her the race and, as mentioned, Mrs. Hatch won narrowly from Mrs. Priestley and Mrs. Pickard.

Another was the Crawford Market Stakes for which no less than sixteen went. The scrummage that ensued when the men arrived and the hunt began for the various comestables, the pairs dashing about wildly for the tables on which rested the fruit or vegetable they required. In their zeal, some were at fault in their catering and as a result no less than four of the first to pass the post were disqualified, and Captain Crosse, who only landed in about fifth, was the quickest in with his supply correct. He had Miss Froome as a partner and has to thank her for having her wits about her. Second were Mrs. Valentine and Franks with Mrs. Boyd and Williams, third.

The Consolation Scurry found ten starters and, soon going to the front, Carter won comfortably on Hall's Scepto with Priestley next on his Curlew, closely followed by a bunch.

The last event of the meeting was the Balaclava Melee which had previously been postponed owing to failing light. It had quite a gladiatorial aspect and provided some excitement. After two heats, the four, including Carter, Christie, Clare and Grayburn won easily, knocking the plumes off the helmets of some of their adversaries and bustling others out of the ring.

The first sign of the approach of the Bombay Hunting season was the arrival of thirty couple, twenty-four of them dogs, by the Clan Leslie. They were in charge of Will Morgan, to whom credit is due for landing them all fit and well. Master and Whips met the steamer and, as soon as hounds were got ashore, saw to their removal in two bullock vans to the Santa Cruz Kennels. Judging by their looks, we shall have more sport of the first water this season. It is with great regret that we hear of the critical condition of William Cole, the recent huntsman, in Newton Abbot Hospital. He did splendid work out here and, as hope has been practically given up, subscriptions are being raised by the South Devon and Dartmoor Hunts for the benefit of his family, which example is being followed by our M. F. H.

As with the successful revival of the Athletic Meeting in Bombay, so is it with Polo, and with the publication of the prospectuses of the Junior and Open Tournaments one looks forward to more keen struggles. One hopes a large entry will be received to compete for the Cup which is now in the possession of the Bombay Gymkhana. On 1st February the Junior Tournament starts, being open to teams of four, of which two shall not have played in any Tournament (Open) since 1st January 1904 and not more than three in the final of any Tournament between 1st January 1904 and 1st January 1908. Of the Rs. 30 entrance fee, two-thirds will go to the winning team as well as the Bombay Junior Challenge Cup, which they can hold not more than twelve months, or till the date of the next Tournament if within that period. The teams are limited to twelve ponies and the duration of play will be five periods of seven and a half minutes. Entries close on 16th January 1909. On the 16th the Open Tournament begins, also under I. P. A. rules, ponies of each team limited to 16 with a fee of Rs. 10. As with the Junior, the Bombay Polo Challenge Cup can only be held for twelve months, or till the next Tournament if within that period, and must not be taken out of India. In addition a Cup valued Rs. 500 will be presented to the winners, or, if they prefer it, four Cups. There will be six periods of seven and a half minutes' duration. Matters are once more in the able hands of that popular sportsman, L. Baraclough, who may be trusted to run the Tournament of 1909 as successfully as he did its predecessor. Owing to the various cricket clubs being provided with pitches on the Gymkhana maidan, the matter of keeping the polo ground in good order is not easy. Last year, however, it was generally admitted that it played fast and true and we are promised even a better stretch for next February. It is to be sincerely hoped that all who can will give their support to what used to be one of the Tournaments of India.

I have before me the Royal Bombay Yacht Club's programme for the Season of 1908-1909 of six months' duration. A start is made with the usual weekly races on 7th November and the first Challenge Cup race is sailed on the 30th January with the second on 13th February. The Regatta begins on 25th February, continues on the 27th (Lord Curzon's Challenge Cup) 2nd and 3rd March (Ladies' Day), 4th (Y. R. S. race), 5th (Rowing, &c.), and 6th, when the third Challenge Cup will be sailed for. The season then continues with Handicaps till the 8th May.

On Wednesday night the final of the Bombay Gymkhana Billiard Handicap came off between Collin and Rumboll before a full room of spectators. Collin was right up to the top of his form and won by not far off half of the game in the 200 up. When on his game he takes beating by any of our amateurs—and that is saying a good deal.

London Week by Week.

(From Our Own Correspondent)

Friday, 16*th October* 1908.

What marvellous weather we have been having! From the beginning of the month it has been early August instead of autumn, and with the disposition to make the most of it, London's influx of autumnal visitors has hardly begun, people preferring to linger yet a while in the country. But after the second Newmarket Meeting, several prominent residents will open their town houses and the season, ere the month is out, will be in full swing.

The mention of visitors suggests hotels. I see it suggested in some quarters that the metropolis has now far too many of the huge caravanserais which have sprung up during the last decade. Ten years ago London was open to the reproach of providing the poorest and most inadequate hotel accommodation of any big city in Europe. Then came the hotel boom and with it the erection of the palatial piles to be seen fairly jostling each other between the Law Courts and Kensington, till in present up-to-dateness, luxury, and comfort we have possibly reached the highest note of such enterprise. But all this brilliance has cost the shareholders dear, many of these palaces are white elephants of the worst description—some, like the "Piccadily" opened but a few months are now in the Receivers' hands—one or two perhaps pay 5 per cent., the majority declare microscopic dividends or none. In these ten years about £9,000,000 sterling has been locked up in these big London hotels, and it is certain that a few millions of this will never come out. Why this thusness? Surely there must be a lack of the right sort of management somewhere? These places are always full; throughout the past season the accommodation problem, from Piccadilly to Bloomsbury, has, we are told, been acute, the ordinary observer, in his failure to make profit naturally suspects the want of proper business management. This is one of the things (the profit making at any rate) which hotel proprietors in your part of the world understand better I think.

On Monday and Tuesday evenings this week, the intelligent foreign visitor might well have been excused for concluding that a revolution of some sort was going on in London, certainly the doings round and about Parliament Square justified the impression. The insufferable Suffragettes were responsible for this. They had announced their determination to "rush the House," had called on the unemployed to assist, and inflammatory speeches and circulars had the effect of bringing together many thousands of loafers who formed themselves into more or less turbulent bands and required six thousand police (on duty and in reserve) to keep them moving and prevent rioting. But everything went off well, thanks to Robert; the demonstrators were broken up with a quiet firmness beautiful to watch, the menace of serious disturbance was averted, the silly women failed to carry out their programme (whatever it may have been) and, while disgusting most people, it must be evident that their amazing tactics have completely played into the hands of the opposition. The Commissioner of Police on Monday summoned the three ringleaders of these frenzied females for inciting the populace to disorderly conduct and as they declined to appear they were arrested and were in chowkey just about the time they should have been "rushing" elsewhere. Robbed of leaders, the women were foiled and the net result is forty arrests, seven policemen injured and impending legal proceedings of the kind we are heartily sick of. The demonstration was not altogether devoid of humour. This was supplied by a married woman named Travers Symons who induced Mr. Idris, M. P., to take her into the House and rewarded his courtesy by suddenly rushing from the lobby, gaining the floor of the House and beginning a shriek which was cut short by a burly attendant who picked her up bodily and carried her out yelping, ere the astonished members had time to start getting angry or amused. The trustful Idris has stated officially that the woman was the daughter of an old friend and that in securing her admittance as an ordinary lady visitor he hadn't the least suspicion that she intended making this startling demonstration.

It has been quite a week of disorderly exhibitions in addition to those for which the unemployed and the suffragettes have been responsible. There was a disgraceful brawl at a L. C. C. meeting on Monday; that old offender Mr. Will Thorne attempted last Sunday to incite a mob to raid bakers' shops and has, of course, been proceeded against; and there was a scene in the House of Commons on Wednesday when Mr. Victor Grayson (who when not obstructing the course of legislation helps to run the New Age) attempted to interrupt the business in hand, was ordered to sit down, declined to do so and was removed by the Serjeant-at-Arms.

The enemies of the motor fiend, those who champion the right of the general public to protection from the motor pest now in our midst, continue their activities I am glad to report. On Monday afternoon, the Lord Mayor, Sir John Bell, presided at the Mansion House at a private conference of members of the Corporation and well-known business men, at which further steps were discussed to check the speed, noise, and smell of heavy motor traffic in the city. Their present aims are these:—

To clear the city streets of flagrantly noisy motor-omnibuses, motor-lorries, and traction engines.

To impose a speed limit in accordance with the congested conditions of the streets.

To limit the weight of motor vehicles run through the city—thus checking vibration in the buildings.

To make it impossible for nauseating smells of petrol and burning oil to be wafted about the streets.

Above all, they want to obtain such a control of the routes used by heavy motor-vehicles in the city as will enable them to divert these nuisances from narrow and congested thoroughfares.

Sixteen London Borough Councils anxious to see restricted the speed of motor-omnibuses will participate in a conference on the subject at Poplar shortly. Those who had well-nigh come to regard the position as beyond remedy now begin to take heart of grace and many have decided to await developments ere leaving London—it is common knowledge that the motor traffic and its attendant horrors have driven many thousands away and is preventing thousands more from coming into the city. Those who can do so flee before the motor car as from a pestilence, as landlords know to their cost.

The general verdict on "Bellamy The Magnificent" at the New is that it is an unpleasant play, some of it is harrowing, parts are revolting and much of it is cynical, flippant and ugly. But it is fair to add that it teems with neat dialogue and there is the occasional paradox and epigram which give it here and there a smack of Oscar Wild somewhat diluted.

There are five acts in Mr. Horniman's play and for part of three of them he contrives to keep the essential ugliness of his theme fairly well concealed. From the first the atmosphere is distinctly sultry, but the humour of his dialogue and the ingenuity of his situations seem to promise that in spite of sailing very very close to the wind, actual mishap will be avoided.

Presently, however, things take a nasty dig downwards, and Bellamy is shown to be blackguardly as well as cynically and flagrantly "geographical" (i.e., Eastern) in his morals. His servant meets trickery with trickery, and by having Bellamy accused of cheating at cards leads up to a situation from which suicide seems the only way out. And so Bellamy goes to his death.

In the part of the polished, flippant rake, Bellamy, Sir Charles Wyndham acts with his accustomed skill, but not even he could make the character tolerable. Stephens, the gentleman's gentleman, was magnificently presented by Mr. Robert Loraine. In the part of a private detective as odious as those who hired him, Mr. Paul Arthur did extremely well.

It is the author's fault that the ladies, accomplished as they are, show to so little advantage, but Miss Fortescue, Miss Sarah Brooke, Miss Alice Beet, and Miss Kate Cutler (particularly the two last named) do all that can be done with unsympathetic parts.

An important addition to contemporary drama is "The Sway Boat" in which Miss Lena Ashwell presents us at the Kingsway Theatre with the work of another hitherto unknown playwright—Mr. Wilfred T. Coleby. It is sombre, full of merit, carries conviction and ends "badly," from the popular point of view, because it ends sadly, but it makes one think, and its success with those who can appreciate plays that present ideas is assured.

The play is a study, chiefly, of a woman who fell a sad victim to the cross-currents of life. Fate was too strong for her, that was all—and enough: and the tragedy of a torn, hunted soul is told so strongly that you must see it to believe.

As Lady Kilross, Miss Lena Ashwell has an emotional character which suits her emotional powers as an actress exactly. Not a sympathetic character, not a good woman as the laws of Mrs. Grundy accept such, but a character to appeal, to move, to reach your heart. A character finely drawn by the author, and finely coloured by the actress. Not less successful was Mr. Norman McKinnel as George Lomax: it was a striking piece of acting. Mr. Dennis Eadie, the versatile gave a fine study as Lord Kilross, Miss France, piece of acting.

Ivor was his Puritanical mother to the life, Miss Kate Rorke was capital as Lomax's wife, and M. C. M. Hallard was convincing as the presumable fickle Maitland, while a capital study of an aged butler was given by Mr. Ernest Cosham. But not the smallest virtue of the play was the character of Freddy Cartwright. The author has drawn a real small boy, and Master Philip Tonge interprets it like a real small boy—so very rare in theatredom.

In writing "Fanny and the Servant Problem," which was put on at the Aldwych Theatre on Wednesday night, Mr. Jerome K. Jerome might have taken one of three obvious courses; he might have given us a good light comedy, or a screaming farce or even a decent drama. He has done neither and the result of this inability to make up his mind is a patchy, padded tediously lengthened and unconvincing piece, ingenious and whimsical though the main idea may be. Vernon Wetherell Lord Bantock, when in Paris falls in love with a pretty cafe chantant singer and marries her. Like Lord Burleigh, he conceals the fact that he is a Peer and he makes no particular inquiries about her family. He is informed that she has an uncle who is a Colonial bishop, and another relative who is an American judge. When he brings her home to Bantock Hall it comes out that he is married to his butler's niece, and that the Bennet family of ancient retainers who dominate the household are one and all his wife's relations. The truth is kept from him for a short time, while the butler and the servants generally try, and most offensively, to implant in the new and rather Bohemian Lady Bantock some idea of what they think she should be. They lecture her, bully her, and make her life so miserable that at length she turns round and proclaiming the truth to her husband (namely, that he has married his butler's niece), gives all the servants notice. But the play dodders on and ends up with a general making of friends and patching up. Lady Bantock, under the eye of her much tried and really excellent hubby, kisses her cousin the underfootman, and is blessed and kissed by her uncle the butler, and so on and so forth. As the ex-variety artist, Miss Fannie Ward was in a part well suited to her, Mr. Charles Cartwright made a decided hit as the portentious butler, as Lord Bantock, Mr. Leslie Faber was good and the minor parts were well filled; but the piece fails to satisfy and will probably soon be taken off.

The change which the public taste has undergone within the last fifteen years or so in the matter of its amusements is a subject of common remark. It is obvious to everybody. Forms of entertainments that were once the delight of our grandfathers, and even of our fathers, have long passed into the region of the neglected, the forgotten. Even in regard to such productions as the spectacular ballet, which has existed so long as to have established a tradition of its own, the taste of the public is said to be changing. Such is the opinion of no less an authority than Mr. Moul, the popular managing director who presides over the destinies of the Alhambra Theatre.

Taste seems to be moving in the direction of the relegation to the background of the purely conventional ballet, with its obvious, artificial, and stereotyped variations of the premiere danseuse in toe-pirouetting and the like.

At the present time it is difficult to see to what extent one may have to experiment in the new direction; but there is no doubt that there will have to be repose and refinement rather than riot of colour and prodigality of display.

The skirt dance, the cake-walk, and pirouetting all have their day, and one by one have to stand down, to be replaced by different forms of appeal to the senses.

The demand of the public to have as many of the senses as possible entertained is certainly on the increase. The eye, the ear, and the mind require to be catered for at the same time, and that, too, without any fatigue. There must be no necessity for the public to have to seek to know what is going on. It must all be facile of comprehension.

The Exhibition of "Ideal Homes" at Olympia, promoted by The Daily Mail, is a scheme having for its object the betterment of the people, and it is as complete, instructive and attractive as anybody could wish. The vast interior of Olympia has been turned into a town of lovely palaces and cottages, with airy avenues, close-cropped, bright, green lawns, gorgeous flower-beds, and a picturesque piece of ornamental water—a veritable paradise of all that is artistic in house and garden construction. And the best place from which to command a complete view of this superb scene is from the spacious lounge on the balcony, which is decorated with handsome tall palms and ferns, Oriental rugs, and cosy chairs.

On another balcony, immediately opposite, is the stall of the Queen's Schools at Sandringham, and here members of her schools are seen at work, and specimens of their clever handicraft are exhibited.

In the Babyland section there is a creche organised by the Dowager Lady Helmsley for the National Society of Day Nurseries, and all the most modern adjuncts in the nursery are shown in order that the care and management of babies and older children may be brought prominently to the notice of mothers.

The specimen homes on view vary, of course, according to the money at one's disposal. An artistically furnished room is shown which cost only £20, while next door there is a room furnished and decorated as though it were part of a royal palace. Then there are baths of onyx and marble for the affluent, and enamel baths for the less fortunate.

Even those people who have no fixed abode, and prefer a nomad existence, have not been forgotten, for two caravans, fitted as ingeniously and as neatly as state rooms on a liner, are shown by members of the Caravan Club.

Another Mutiny veteran passed away last week in the person of Major-General Boswell, at his Tweedside residence, Darnlee, near Melrose, after a paralytic seizure. He was 73 years of age, and had over thirty years' service, chiefly with the Indian Army. Besides serving in the Mutiny, for which he had the medal, he was in three frontier Campaigns—the Miranzai, the North-West Frontier Expedition, and the Hazara. He also went through the Afghan War in command of the 2nd Sikhs Infantry, being mentioned in despatches and receiving the C.B. decoration (1881).

Mr. Justice Dean early this week heard the undefended divorce petition of Mrs. Ethel Mary Medley against her husband, Colonel Ernest James Medley, formerly of the Indian Army. The marriage took place in India in 1887, and was a happy one until, in 1903, while in London, the Colonel declined to live any longer with his wife and lately went off with someone else writing that he was "tired of single blessedness." The Vagrant.

Shikar.

A NARROW SHAVE.

It was in January 1905 that I got news from a favourite shooting resort of mine that there was a tiger, who, though he had not harmed the villagers, with the exception of killing one buffalo, had taken up his abode in their jungles, and was constantly seen in the neighbourhood, and also his pug marks were found in every direction, and occasionally the bones of a sambhar or nilghai. At the time of receiving the khubbar, there was only a three days moon, and as I was rather busy at the time, I decided to wait for a few days till the moon got larger.

I sent off the carts, tent etc., on the morning of the 9th day's moon, and started myself on the following morning, just before daybreak. The village of B. G. to which I was going, was about 20 miles off, and as there was some good buck shooting to be had the latter 10 miles of the distance, I had told the men to leave my small "chuckla" bullock cart, at the village of S. which was half way. I saddled up in the dark, and we were at S. before sunrise. It was a grand ride, though a bit cold, but I have always considered the best part of the day to be between dawn and sunrise, and when one knows that one is starting out for a few days' shooting, that one's work at home is all satisfactorily settled, what can be more exhilarating than a gallop on a good pony, with the sky changing from grey to red, then to yellow, then red again before sunrise with the lovely up-country scenery all around one. Long stretches of green wheat fields, here and there patches of broken and scrubby ground, and the long line of the rugged Satpuras on the right hand about 10 miles distant, looking blue and grim in the dawn.

One reaching S. we yoked the bullocks and started off, leaving the pony to be brought on by the syce. Just outside the village a herd of pigs crossed the road in front of us, and a mile or so further on we came upon a fine buck grazing in a wheat field, about 500 yards from the road. Leaving the cart, I took my rifle and after a bit of stalking, managed to bag him. A few miles further on we saw two bucks fighting in a field. I shot at them, but owing to their constantly changing position, the first shot missed; they took no notice however but continued fighting. The second shot wounded one, and though he ran away into a til field I managed to bag him after a long hunt. After this we pushed along.

We arrived at B. G. about 10 A.M. and after having breakfast, skinned the two buck. Then taking the village shikari we went down to the river which was quite close to camp, to find a suitable spot for tying up, as the tiger was in the habit of crossing and re-crossing the river at certain ghats though, at which one there was no certainty. We selected two places at separate ghats, and tied up my machan at a third and then went back to camp. In the afternoon, we went out over the fields to see if we could get a buck, but were unsuccessful. B. G. itself is a small village by the side of the Gungal river. There is some jungle on the village side of the river, and then comes the open plains, of wheat grain, tour fields, etc. On the opposite side of the river is the Satpura range, of course, very large jungle.

About sunset, we tied up our three badas at the ghats, and I sat up in my machan over one of them. Nothing came my way for a couple of hours, except a hyæna, who seeing the bada, bolted as hard as his legs would carry him. About 9 o'clock I heard the wooden bell which we tied round the bada's neck, ringing from the adjoining ghat which was about 500 yards distant. It continued for about a minute, and by the sound, the bada was very much excited, and I guessed rightly that the tiger was there. I listened intently, hoping to hear the death groan of the bada, but after a short space all was quiet. I waited till about 2. A.M. and then as there was no signs of the tiger, and my bada was contentedly lying down and chewing the cud under my tree, I whistled up the men and returned to camp. We were up at dawn next day and went off to the further ghat in great hopes of finding a kill, but were much disgusted to find the bada still alive, and much relieved to see us, as he began to call as soon as we were in sight. The tiger had been there however, as we found his pug marks all round the bada, though why he hadn't killed it is a mystery.

We went back to camp taking the bada with us, and after breakfast, got the villagers together, and had a day's beat in another part of the jungle, as I did not wish to disturb the tiger. In the first beat I bagged a fine sambar stag; the rest of the day drew blank, though a large panther broke back through the beaters. I was too tired to sit up again that night, but we tied out the three badas, and next morning were greatly pleased to find one of them killed. We set a man there to keep away the vultures as the kill was in the river bed, and we didn't wish to disturb the ground, or kill, by covering it up, and in the afternoon tied up my machan in a tree that grew in the river bed.

I commenced sitting up just at sunset, and told the men to return to camp. It was a lovely moonlight night and the river sand and rocks being white, everything showed up most distinctly. About 10 o'clock a hyæna came, and began eating, and in another minute he was joined by his mate, and for about half an hour they had a real good time of it. Suddenly from the edge of the jungle opposite I heard a low growl, and the next instant saw some large animal approaching slowly. The hyænas also saw it, but didn't wait for an introduction, down went their tails, and off they went as hard as they could run with the hair all standing up straight along their backs. It was a very comical sight, but the approach of the tiger prevented me from enjoying it properly. He advanced very slowly—looking this way and that, and giving a low growl from time to time. When a short distance from the kill he sat down and commenced licking himself, but he was still a little way off and not in a good position for a shot. Presently he got on to his feet again, and came up to the kill, sniffed it once or twice and began eating. He was still with his chest towards me and I didn't care to risk the shot, but after eating a little in that position he got up and in doing so showed me the whole of his side. I fired a soft nosed ·500 express bullet at him, and hit him, for with a roar, he tumbled over. Before I had time to shoot again, however, he was on his feet and making off across the river at a considerable speed, though I knew that he was badly hit. I fired another shot at him, but missed, and saw him disappear in the jungle, before I could reload. I sat up for the rest of the night as I did not care to call the men up with a wounded tiger in the vicinity.

Next morning the men arrived at dawn, and I got down from my machan very stiff and cold. We found a good deal of blood on the rocks where the tiger had run, which showed that he was pretty badly wounded. The jungle into which he had run, was very thick, with grass luckily only knee deep, but the trees were numerous, and dried and broken down bamboo clumps made it all the more difficult to penetrate. We followed the spoor of the tiger for a short distance, but the jungle was so thick and there were only a couple of men besides myself that I decided to return to camp, and bring more men with the buffaloes to help us out of our difficulty. This may be put down as cowardice, but it is no joke following up a wounded tiger on foot in such thick jungle. Accordingly, we returned to camp, and having had breakfast, got together about ten men from the village, and with difficulty succeeded in getting the loan of a herd of buffaloes about twenty in all. Arrived at the spot we formed up in line and drove the buffaloes on ahead. The trail led us to a fairly large nullah, with thick clumps of bamboo growing here and there, and into this the tiger had evidently gone, for the buffaloes showed great excitement at this point, and were very unwilling to descend. At last however we managed to get them down, and just as the foremost reached the bottom, with a terrific roar the tiger sprang out on him, from behind a bamboo clump, and seizing him by the neck, pulled him to earth. I took as steady an aim as was possible and fired, hitting him in the right leg above the knee and breaking it. The next second he was coming at me on three legs, growling horribly, with his ears laid back, and his huge teeth showing in a most ferocious snarl.

The natives of course had all bolted, or taken refuge up trees, and there was only one barrel between me and death, for I knew if I failed to stop him, I should be done for. I will not say that I fearlessly raised my rifle and fired, as I didn't, but somehow or other, it seemed more like a dream, the rifle came up to my shoulder, and seemed to go off of its own accord. When the smoke cleared, the tiger was lying about 15 yards from me, and vainly struggling to rise to his feet and get at me. Then I came to my senses a bit and hastily slipping in another cartridge gave him his quietus.

The natives then came down from their trees and were very brave, now that the danger was all over. I also went up and examined the tiger, and tried to look unconcerned, though I must say that my hands were far from steady. It appears that my first shot, from the machan had hit him rather far back, and though he would eventually have died from it, he had managed to go some distance and show fight when cornered. The shot I fired when he charged me hit him fairly in the chest, had this gone a little lower, I do not think I should have been able to write this story. We carried him to camp with great rejoicing, and having skinned him, struck camp and went home, as our object was achieved, and also time was up and I had to return to business.

Fishing.

A CENTRAL INDIAN STREAM.

It is strange sometimes how long it takes to know all the possibilities of sport round some Indian stations. After a year in most cantonments one generally flatters oneself that no tank or jheel yet remains to be discovered, nor yet any stream within fifty miles in which one at least has failed to wet a line. And it is particularly in regard to the fishing that one often makes discoveries. So many men shoot in India, that it is seldom that any good snipe, partridge, or quail ground remains without one or more pioneers, even so far out as forty miles. And now in these days of motors still more is this the case. It was in August that we lighted on the little river herein told of. True we had often heard of it, rumours from native shikarees, but as these stories always tallied exactly with what they told us of the streams nearer home it was some time before we summoned the requisite energy required for the trip. Our station lay on the ridge of a plateau, in such fashion that many streams took their rise in the hills near by. All that bore northward, ran through an alluvial plain, till they joined one of the bigger tributaries of the Jumna. But those that ran south, almost from their very sources, rushed their brief course through rocky gorges and jungle clad ravines till they plunged to the valley below to join the great Nerbudda. And only in these streams was any real pleasure to be got from fishing, but one was very liable to disappointments, owing to the rapidity with which they coloured and cleared, so that one could never be quite sure of finding them at their best. And then a fortnight after the close of the monsoon, they would dwindle to mere trickles, uniting a succession of pools which dried up one by one, only some three or four of the deepest, usually those under waterfalls, holding water through the hot weather.

There was a short break in the rains when we started our trip of discovery to this new stream. Three of us started; D., N. and myself—at 6-30 A.M. to cover eleven miles in the motor, a tonga and cart having gone on the previous day to the point where we should have to leave the main road. As expected we had the joy of crawling over one mile of new laid metal, which they strew with lavish hand over all roads in the monsoon, and never seem in the slightest hurry to roll in. Except for this delaying us, it did not take long to reach the waiting tonga, and from here our troubles commenced. Owing to most of the country being black cotton soil, the going was very heavy, and as there are practically no villages of any size along the edge of the ghauts, the country roads were the merest apologies for cart tracks. It took us 2½ hours to do some seven miles, most of which we walked behind the tonga. About half way we crossed the largest of the innumerable small streams that went to make up our river, and some difficulty was encountered in getting the tonga across a very muddy ford. But at last we arrived near our destination and then were rewarded with a sight; it was well worth risking the journey just to see. For the last two miles we had been walking across rolling downs, covered with thin jungle, the ground everywhere carpeted with brilliant green grass, the first fruits of the monsoon rains. But suddenly almost at our feet there seemed to open a great chasm, and another 100 yards on, the full beauty of the scene lay bare before us. A great gorge some two to three hundred yards across, and about as many feet in depth, lay before us, while on our right hand, the small tributaries having united into quite a respectable stream, hurled themselves a mass of feathery white spray, a sheer drop of 200 feet into a huge green pool beneath. And of these waterfalls there are many all along the southern slopes of the ghauts, where they run close along the north bank of the Nerbudda. All of them are beautiful in the rains, and some which run to 430 and 350 feet, may aptly be described by the term magnificent. But this was not actually our goal, and after a short spell of rest to admire the white mist of the fall with its background of grey rocks and delicate tracery of ferns, we started to walk along the top of the gorge seeking a way down to the river below. For we had come hoping for a chance to catch fish, and though the great pool looked deep and big enough to hold any sized fish, we knew that there could not be many fish up as high as this, since but a little way down the gorge the river took another plunge of some 50 feet into a second big pool. And right up to this second pool could fish from the Nerbudda penetrate, as though the whole stream was one succession of rocks and rapids, there were no further falls of such size as to form any obstacle to ascending fish. At last our guide, a shikaree we had sent out to explore, pointed to a precipitous descent and intimated this to be the road. We were not monkeys, however the few simians that were about turned green with jealousy at our progress, and half an hour later we were half way down on a great ledge and full of admiration at the sliding rushing green water that glided its way down an almost perpendicular slope into the great pool below. And such a pool it was, one could imagine it being bottomless, and on three sides rose sheer precipices some 100 feet high, the fourth being a bank of shingle. A mugger was seen in the pool and visions of monstrous mahseer taking the rest cure in its cool depths, after a tempestuous season in the Nerbudda rose before one. But, and our guide trembles at that but, to this day, we now found that it was absolutely impossible to get any nearer to the water. Sheer rocks never less than 50 feet high presented an obstacle that would even have defeated an ibex. And to the bank of shingle no way of approach suggested itself, unless one came up stream from some two miles lower down, and this would probably mean swimming in places, so sheer and deep was the gorge. We mean however to try it one day with a folding boat. Our miserable guide had climbed thus far evidently, and never troubling to look farther, assumed the rest was easy and so reported to us. This meant a most arduous ascent, and as it was past noon, and the sun had come out, our condition and language adequately suggested Turkish baths. Arrived at the top we drank in a glorious breeze, and then settled to a council of war. D. was fed up with such climbs, and seizing his rifle vowed he would go and slay something. We commended our guide to him, but he missed him. M. and I being determined not to return without giving the river a chance, started to walk down the gorge to a small hamlet where there was a probability of a track of sorts descending to the water. And glad we were that we had persevered, though we nearly died of heat and thirst during two awful climbs, one down and one up. Near the hamlet we found a place to descend, which it was possible to tackle, without trying to work out in your head the whole time, whether orders would publish you had died testate or intestate. The river bed at last, and all troubles forgotten; for a more fascinating stream it would be hard to imagine. We struck it at about the only possible place, as we discovered, as here another huge gorge joined from the last, and another stream of about the same size effected a junction with our stream in a small rocky pool. Below this the river, a glorious succession of rapids and pools, became quite a fair size, most ideal mahseer water all of it, and our hopes rose high. Despite the fact that Nerbudda mahseer insist with no uncertain voice on having gram, we could not resist spinning baits, and soon M. had on a minnow and myself a spoon. Curiously enough his bait was not appreciated; mine was from the very start. A three-quarter inch flying spoon, gold and silver, it had not crossed the junction pool before a nice fish darted to inspect it. However he came no more, so down to the next pool, where I felt a fair fish, and thought he was hooked, but he was off in 5secs., no use trying for him again. On again, passing M. who was prepairing for a prolonged siege of a big pool with a fine rapid into it. By this time we were both tired; it was very hot, being nearly 2 o'clock and we had to start back very shortly, therefore, I personally fished in a hurry. To the above reasons must be ascribed the fact that in the next hour's fishing, only two fish rewarded us. But it was an exhilarating hour. The next pool down I could not move a fish, then came the style of pool one dreams of. About 30 yards across, and 60 long with a rapid boiling at its entrance, and swirling through to its exit, it was indeed a perfect pool. For all my hurry, here I felt it would be a crime not to use some caution. So gently crawling under the cover of a small rock, and balancing on one knee, my spoon shot out into the pool, and was drawn back to within three feet of my rock, followed to my excitement by a fish of about 3lbs. But he turned back into the rapid, without apparently having noticed anything uncommon. The next cast I felt the familiar and delightful jerk, and moving slowly back over the rocks, I managed to draw out a 1lb. mahseer without much disturbance to the pool. Back again and a longer cast, a tug and the reel whirred. I was into something better this time, but alack, suddenly the strain ceased, and on hauling in my spoon I found one hook of the treble taken clean off, just as if a pair of pliers had been used. Still the next cast again was successful, and for two minutes my fish fought well, helped by a strong current, also as I was using fairly fine gut, I could not put much strain on. However out he came at last a 2¼lb. fish. Then I had to work some way down the pool before I could get another offer, and then had to pay the well deserved penalty of carelessness. For making an extra long cast, the line caught round the but, only slightly it is true, but a fish of about 6lbs. met my spoon as it touched the water, and though the rod point was lowered, and feverish efforts made to clear, all was futile, the only piece of luck being that nothing broke, the hook hold giving way. No more from that pool, and time was up, so hastily I started back. A nice rapid tempted me, it looked better coming back, so that I could not resist a few casts. The second and fifth both lured fish of a pound or so to follow my spoon, but they would not take, and being urgently exhorted by M. from the bank above to come away, I had to cease. We stopped a few minutes at his pool, where we discussed his luck, he had only hooked one fish, a good one who had broken him. Although he had spun all down the rapid with minnows I tried just one cast with spoon, and curiously enough, instantly rose a fish of about 2lbs., but he saw us, and disappeared for good. Just as we left we threw in a handful of gram, and as it floated down had the satisfaction of seeing two or three fish of over 1lb. each, feeding on it as it sank. I was all for a few tries for them, but M. was inexorable and we started on a hateful climb up. It was hot and arriving parched at our tonga we found D. just back and for the next few minutes nothing but sounds of gurgling were heard, and not till nine bottles graced the sward posing as marines, did life appear worth living, and the homeward journey become a possibility. We reached home just in time for dinner with many vows to explore our little river further, as we had really had barely 1½ hours' fishing, and then during the hottest time of the day, and when we were beginning to feel our pristine energy starting to evaporate.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE INDIAN FIELD."

Sir,—I have referred in former notes to the excellent qualities of the Ross-Eley ·28 cartridge, with light expanding bullets, for sporting purposes. Rifles adapted to this ammunition gave the phenomenal muzzle velocity of 3,040 f. s. and that too with perfect accuracy.

We now see the Ross Straight-Pull Rifle making its début at Bisley as a military arm; and displaying in this capacity first-rate accuracy at long ranges. The Ross Military Rifle is of ·28 calibre, about the same as the Boer Mauser, and shoots a bullet of the now familiar pointed Spitzer form weighing 180 grains. The muzzle velocity with this comparatively heavy projectile is 2,700 feet per second. The powder is a simple nitro-celulose, manufactured by the New Explosives Company, and called by them "Neonite." The rifle has a straight pull action, and the platform spring which lifts the cartridges in the magazine can be controlled from outside. Thus one can compress this spring before dropping the cartridges into the magazine, and this makes reloading a very rapid and easy operation. The Ross Rifle is capable of keeping up a continuous fire of 30 rounds a minute, when manipulated by an expert rifleman.

It will be noted that in this new arm, we have a weapon which is decidedly superior in ballistics to all the military rifles of the world. The German arm has certainly a slightly higher muzzle velocity, but this has been secured at the expense of weight of the bullet, which is very much lighter in proportion than that of the Canadian rifle. The Ross bullet has all the advantages of the pointed head, which has been found to so greatly improve ballistical results with very high velocities; and at the same time there is the weight, which tells so at ranges of 1,000 yards and beyond. The German rifle is only superior in flatness of trajectory to the Lee-Enfield at 1,000 yards and under; at longer ranges our heavier bullet tells, in spite of the fact that the German pointed bullet starts at a velocity some 700 or 800 feet per second higher than the projectile of the Lee-Enfield.

With the Ross, one has both the initial velocity and the weight. So that the trajectory at all ranges is phenomenally flat. Experts have pointed out times without number two cardinal faults of our service arm. Too large a calibre, rendering very high velocities combined with a good weight of bullet, out of the question on account of the bulk and weight of the ammunition, and severe recoil. Weakness of the breech action, owing to the bolt having its supporting lugs in rear instead of in front.

The soldier can obviously carry more rounds of light ammunition, than he can heavy: and equally obviously the flatter the trajectory at all ranges, the broader the zones in which the bullets are flying at a less height than that of an average man. It is the breadth of these dangerous zones, which in war directly governs the number of the men hit. So a rifle with a flat trajectory, is tactically superior to all arms showing a higher curve.

In these days of economy, there is no likelihood of any change being made in our national small arm. The best that we can hope for is that a higher velocity cartridge, with pointed bullet will be adopted for the Lee-Enfield, so as to bring us at all events into line with Germany, as regards our Infantry Rifle.

"Fleur-de-Lys."

A practical joke which might have been somewhat cruel in its consequences, and which emanated from Oxford, resulted in the publication in the Morning Post of an inaccurate and unauthorized honours list. To say the least, the hoax will involve needless annoyance and inconvenience to a number of persons. The list was received by the above journal on paper bearing the University seal, and was regarded as having been sent by the University correspondent. Steps will be taken to discover, if possible, the author of the hoax.

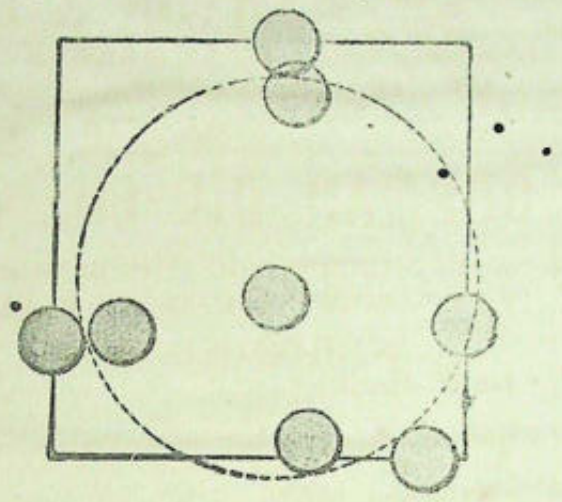
LANG



New No. 2 ·360 Bore

In comparison with the ·400/·360 the muzzle velocity of this new Cartridge is approximately 230 F.S. higher, and although the charge is increased the same low pressure, viz., 14 tons, is maintained. The increased velocity coupled with the extra weight of bullet and consequent greater striking energy gives one a rifle that has practically the stopping power of a ·450 or ·500 Black Powder Express, and is consequently an ideal weapon for deer stalking and for shooting heavier forms of non-dangerous game; moreover, in consequence of the importation of the ·303 into India being prohibited, it is well worthy the notice of Sportsmen in that country who desire to have a weapon in which is combined High Velocity, Flat Trajectory, Great Striking Energy, Minimum Recoil, and in which, through low pressure, a greater margin of safety is given and the risk of jamming reduced to a minimum.

VELOCITY 2,150 F. S., Striking Energy 3,280ft. lbs.

The accuracy is of the highest order, as will be seen by the accompanying diagram made by the Editor of The Field and not by a professional expert.

"FIELD." "A trial series produced a remarkably fine group of eight shots fired alternately from the two barrels. . . A very fine performance for a double rifle very hard to beat."

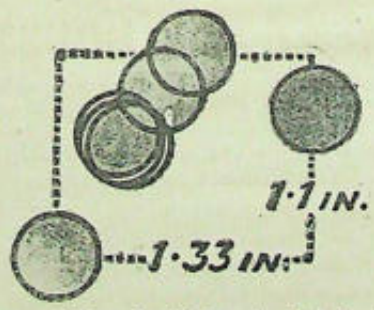
SPORT IN INDIA.



VELOCITY 2,250 ft. sec.

This cartridge as originally designed did not, in our opinion, come up to a sufficiently high standard, and in consequence our expert visited Messrs. Kynoch's works, and in conjunction with their experts conducted a series of experiments extending over three weeks, ultimately designing the bullets now in use from this popular rifle.

J. L. & S. therefore confidently claim that in collaboration with Messrs. Kynoch they were the first to introduce the ·470, and as evidence submit the following extract from the Field, and illustration of the actual diagram made before the editor of that journal.

"FIELD," 23rd March 1907: ". . . . A very valuable advance has been achieved, and Messrs. Lang are to be congratulated on their enterprise in so promptly bringing forward a rifle and cartridges complying with the two most pressing demands in sporting rifles, viz., a weapon to take the place of the prohibited ·450, and a cartridge which shows an advance in flatness of trajectory, with a diminution of recoil and pressure."

KEMPTON.

The long-expected rain came at last at Kempton Park on the 9th instant and in the absence of wind a mist obscured the far side of the course. Umbrellas were hoisted now and again, but the visitation hardly called for a light waterproof, its principal drawback being the murky light, which made it difficult to distinguish colours at a distance. The meeting always supplies good sport in quality and quantity, and its popularity was evinced by a large and representative attendance which filled the rings and enclosures. Thanks to the hydrants—the most perfect system on any course—fed by the sparkling well at the end of the buildings, Mr. Hyde had been able to turn the course out in capital trim, the going being just the happy medium between hard and soft. Every condition that could possibly conduce to success was fulfilled on the Duke of York Stakes day. The weather, bright and breezy, spiced by a couple of showers, was perfect, the going splendid, the attendance enormous, fields strong and full of quality, with sport of the liveliest character throughout. The South-Western Railway put on a capital service, and must have reaped a good harvest, as the numerous specials were crowded on out and home journeys. It was almost impossible to get about in Tattersall's ring, the paddock was thronged by a representative muster of society, the fair sex being strongly in evidence, while battalions of holiday-makers skirmished from one starting-post to another. THE

STRENUOUS LIFE IN INDIA.

Is It Possible?

A want of energy and whim are characteristic traits of the white population in tropical and semi-tropical countries. It is a well established fact that this unfortunate condition is in a very large measure due to insufficient nourishment; to want of a diet that shall sustain the system under the increased demands upon the powers, Not only is the appetite feeble, but the food supplies also leave much to be desired in both quality and nutritive power as compared with the products of the temperate zone. Hence one often feels at a loss to know how to combat the depression and languor consequent on what may fairly be termed an improper diet supply. It follows therefore that the ideal remedy for physical exhaustion must be one which feeds the hungry tissues with a nutrient that is easy of assimilation, and at the same time enriches the blood and tones up the nervous system. This much-to-be-desired remedy is found in Sanatogen, the wonder-working food tonic.

Sanatogen is a scientific combination of two distinct elements, the one nutritive, the other tonic. The nutritive element is presented by pure milk albumen—the body building food, demanded constantly by the body for the repair of its tissues. Without a due supply of such food-principle, life would not continue.

The tonic element is represented by Phosphorus. The latter is an all-important constituent of the brain and the nervous system. But hitherto it has been impossible to administer this vital principal so that the nervous system could take hold of it. Dr. Andrew Wilson, the well-known medical author, writes:—"Sanatogen has solved the problem of administering Phosphorus in precisely the form in which the tissues can readily seize upon it and appropriate it to their various needs." The medical profession in Great Britain and India entertain the highest opinion of Sanatogen, which is amply evidenced by the fact that over 7,500 physicians have written in praise of it. This and the written attestations of very many distinguished men and women, whose names are well-known in the community, conclusively establish Sanatogen to be the pre-eminent recuperative and restorative.

The Rt. Rev. William Sinclair, D.D., Archdeacon of London, writes:—

THE CHAPTER HOUSE,

ST. PAUL'S CATHEDRAL,

London, E. C.

"Sanatogen appears to be an admirable food for invalids and those who suffer from indigestion."

William Sinclair

Unlike other tonics the use of Sanatogen does not derange digestion but actually assists enfeebled appetite and strengthens the digestive organs. Its tonic effect is marvellous, and if taken regularly for a short period the feeling of being run down will be replaced by brightness, mental alertness, and healthy vigour. It differs also from other tonics in that its effects are permanent.

Mr. C. B. Fry, the celebrated cricketer, writes:

GLENBOURNE MANOR,

WEST END, HANTS.

"Sanatogen is an excellent tonic food in training, specially valuable as a tonic during the periods of nervous exhaustion commonly called staleness, to which men who undergo severe training are liable. I have recommended it to many of my friends."

C. B. Fry.

There is no doubt that Sanatogen is the ideal food for invalids and convalescents. It can be borne by the weakest stomach when all other food is rejected. It is powerfully effective in all those cases where through illness, or overwork, or climatic conditions, the system has become debilitated. For the nervous and the dyspeptic, Sanatogen restores, naturally, sound digestion, healthy vigour, and the elasticity of well-being.

Sanatogen, which is a fine white powder, is packed in bottles, and can be obtained from all chemists.

An engrossing booklet containing matter of vital importance to well-being in the Tropics has recently been issued. It is from the pen of a physician long resident in India and is entitled "How to keep well in India." It should be in the hands of all desirous of knowing how to get well and keep well. A copy can be obtained free of charge from Messrs. Smith Stanistreet and Co., Calcutta, from whom also Sanatogen can be purchased.

Dr. E. J. Lazarus's ESSENCE OF CHIRETTA,

In Bottles Re. 1-8, 2-8 and 4.

WHAT PEOPLE SAY OF IT.

From Mr. W.—Dear Sirs,—"I suffered from Liver complaint in its most aggravated form pain in the side, shoulder-blade and stomach; vomiting after every meal, excessive acidity in the stomach, constipated bowels and extreme debility FOR TEN YEARS, I tried all the known remedies without success and had given up hope, when as a last resource I tried your 'Essence of Chiretta.' I have taken it for some time and am now nearly quite well. Pain in the side nearly gone, in the shoulder-blade entirely so. No vomiting, little or no acidity in the stomach, bowels relaxed, no debility, being now a stronger and better man than I have been for years."

H. James Rainey, Esq., of Koolnah, Jessore, writes:—"Having derived a deal of benefit from the use of your 'Essence of Chiretta' (combined with VERY SMALL doses of Quinine) both as prophylactic and anti-periodic for intermittent fevers of malarious type, which would not yield to the usual remedies employed, and which disease is very prevalent in the Districts of Lower Bengal, in particular those parts bordering on the Sunderbun, I think it incumbent on me to acquaint you thereof pro bono publico. You are welcome to give this letter all the publicity you may deem necessary in order that this excellent remedy of yours may become generally known."

From J. A. Farrell, Mooltan.—"Your Chiretta has already done me a WORLD amount of good. I had an enlargement of the spleen and fever for 9 months which reduced me to a mere skeleton. The fever I got rid of with your Antiperiodic Pills in 3 days; and the spleen I let be—thinking it could do me no harm. In this I was greatly mistaken, my complexion became as yellow as gold. Seeing your Chiretta I determined to use some of it, and see what good it did me. I have used it for about a week and already the colour is coming to my cheek and the TAN (through continued fever) has left my face. For the climate of India there is no medicine so good, for a Tonic, &c, as your "Essence of Chiretta." This is only an addition to the valuable testimonials you have so well earned through the Chiretta."

NEWMARKET.

A colder temperature thickened the mist on Tuesday morning, while autumn's chill tinged the temperature, but the sun was doing good service behind the curtain, and gaining in power brightened up the Heath, a fine afternoon affording a good light for seeing colours. The welcome presence of the King ensured a large and representative muster of society in the club enclosure and Birdcage, while the stands and three big public rings were as well filled for a Tuesday in Cesarewitch week as we have seen of late years. Results:—

A more gloriously bright, still, mellow autumn morning never inflated the lungs and cleared the pipes of sportsmen than that of Wednesday. Newmarket was early astir, and Tuesday's muster had foreshadowed this particularly strong crowd, when the one big thoroughfare with its disgracefully narrow, cross-and-led arteries, becoming almost impassable, as the good-tempered crowd of visitors—many quite new to the place—lounged the intervening hours away, with utter disregard to the rules of the pavement or the road. Trains from all parts reinforced the crowd that fed the numerous vehicles speeding "courseways," and when the big rings were almost crammed, the cry was "still they come." This happy consummation was in a great measure due to the presence of the King; no meeting at Headquarters—a favourite rendezvous with His Majesty—seems complete in his absence. A thoroughly representative assemblage of the rank, beauty, talent, and fashion of the country followed the Royal lead, townsfolk turned out in force to see their favourite race, the going was fairly good, and the weather put everybody on good terms. Slight rain fell in the night after the Cesarewitch, but the sky was again as clear as crystal, and, paradoxical as it may seem, the wind, though blowing from due south, came cold as winter's icy blast in the shade, so sweltering hot was it in the open. The holiday element—casual visitors, who only go in for the big events here, and folk from all parts who make Newmarket their Mecca on this occasion—had taken swift departure, thanks to a thorough system of specials, and once more one could move about in comfort, yet it was surprising to see what a big attendance it was for an off day. FOOTBALL ASSOCIATION RULES.

IRELAND has one more score to wipe off against the Sassenach. Year after year our Hibernian friends, in both International and league games, stand up cheerfully to receive a drubbing. A long tale of reverses does not depress them, and they still confidently and serenely anticipate that in due course of time Fortune's wheel will take a turn in their favour. It is right that it should. On Saturday, the Irish League was not a match for the Football League, the latter scoring five times without response. This wide margin suggests the easy superiority of the English, and so far as the defending portions of the team are concerned, there was no comparison. The forward work was more evenly balanced, not because the Irishmen were extra smart, but because the English line was somewhat below the usual standard. They were clever individualists, but they did not really get together, and against a stronger defence they would not have showed up prominently. Maltby, as I anticipated, was a convincing success at left back.

Every Saturday this season has provided some sensational results, and the last batch of returns to hand contains a fair proportion. The Southern League served up a couple. Fancy Southampton, after seven successive wins and a draw being beaten on their own ground by Northampton! Fancy, also Coventry City, who had not won a game in the tournament, going to Bristol and defeating the Rovers by three goals to one. Then we have New Brompton winning at Reading, and Crystal Palace going to the top of the S.L. table by virtue of a superior goal average to Southampton. In the First Division of the Football League the startling incident was the defeat of Blackburn Rovers on their own ground by Nottingham Forest, while in the Second Division Grimsby lost two points at home to Burnley. The goal scoring in the S.L. and First Division of the League was well up to the average, but in the Second Division the aggregate of goals in the ten matches was a paltry dozen, nine of the twenty teams actually failing to net the ball. Gainsborough was the only side that scored two goals during the afternoon!

At last! Southampton have fallen, and Northampton are their conquerors. The final verdict of 3—2 in favour of Northampton was incredulously received at the outset, and when confirmed it caused considerable amazement. I wrote last week that the Sotonians would not have an altogether unchallenged march to the championship, and the team then referred to as likely to give them trouble are now on top. Crystal Palace are playing a really good game, and their 2—0 win over Luton, coupled with Southampton's defeat, carries them to the head of affairs with a goal average of 2·60 as against the 2·23 of the Saints. Southampton however, have a game in hand, and are consequently in a relatively better position than the Palace. Congratulations to Coventry City on winning their first S.L. game. It is a curious coincidence that, while Southampton were losing their first game, Coventry City should be earning their first brace of points at Bristol against a team that all the critics regarded as certain to register an easy win. New Brompton, too, have been showing remarkable improvement recently, and it was a capital performance to win at Reading, because the Berks team are a difficult side to overcome at Elm Park. Millwall did not do any better than was expected of them in bringing back a point from Norwich, but Southend United had a slice of good fortune in equalising at Watford almost on time. West Ham United vs. Portsmouth, at Upton Park, was probably the best game seen there this season, and the United won as the outcome of a remarkable rally when Portsmouth seemed certain to bear away the honours. Leyton, too, won on their merits against Exeter City, but Brentford were defeated at Plymouth. Brighton and Hove had no difficulty with Swindon, the heaviest defeat of the afternoon being registered against the latter.

Chelsea and Woolwich were both at home in the First Division of the League, and both placed a win to their credit. It really begins to appear that the anxiety expressed as to the ability of the Arsenal to hold their own was unnecessary. A team able to beat Manchester City 3—0, and with only ten men more than half the game to do it, should be able to secure and retain a satisfactory place in the table. Chisholm, before his injury, gave such a display as to warrant the assumption that he will be heard much of in the future. At Stamford Bridge, Chelsea did not have matters all their own way, for the Sunderland defence held out on Saturday until only about twenty minutes remained for play. Then Rose was beaten, and Windridge added a second, both goals being thoroughly deserved. The Pensioners won because they were the smarter team, and finished better than their opponents. Except for the remarkable upset of form at Blackburn, the other games in the League went along normal lines. Home clubs had a right royal time, as eight won outright, and there was a draw at Bradford between the City and Aston Villa. The supporters of Leicester Fosse were highly jubilant at the first win registered at home this season in the League, Liverpool being beaten by the odd goal in five, and another win that must have cheered the home supporters was that of Notts County over Middlesbrough. Bury never had any chance of success against Everton at Goodison Park, but Sheffield United gave Manchester United a very hard game at Clayton. Had they had their deserts, the Blades would have halved the points, but with Needham off the field through injuries they were sorely handicapped in the closing stages, and the Mancunians won by the odd goal in three. Sheffield Wednesday got back to winning form against Bristol City, and Newcastle United overcame Preston North End on the banks of the Tyne.

The Second Division of the League furnished a curious set of results. Only three of the ten home teams obtained the two points for which they were striving, one visiting side was successful, and there were six drawn games. The three Metropolitan clubs were all away from home, and each returned with one point. It is difficult to decide which is the most meritorious of the three performances, but perhaps Clapton Orient should be assigned first place for their draw at Stockport. The Orient have had a most disheartening time. Not a victory has yet rewarded their efforts, and in this respect they stand alone in the three big leagues. Yet they go to Stockport, and share the honours with a club well in the top flight. At Blackpool, Tottenham Hotspur played very pretty football, but the forwards, clever as they were in the open, were not sufficiently determined near goal. Fulham may well congratulate themselves on leaving Burnden Park with a point, and had there been more incisiveness among the forwards, they would have had both. The game was not exhilarating to watch, owing to weak forward work on both sides. It is significant that Birmingham were fortunate to draw at home with Wolverhampton Wanderers, and Leeds City must have wonderfully improved to return from Glossop with half the spoils. Derby County gave away a point to Hull City they could not afford to lose, and Grimsby Town may have to pay very dearly for their failure to overcome Burnley.

INTERNATIONAL LEAGUE MATCH.

ENGLAND vs. IRELAND.—Played in Belfast, on Saturday, under most favourable climatic conditions, and before a crowd of 12,000, Ireland made one change, Seymour (Cliftonville) replacing Willis (Linfield), the latter having an injured knee. The Irish captain won the toss, and held a slight advantage, for there was a rather stiff wind blowing across the ground. The opening stages favoured the Irishmen, who made several incursions into English territory, but were easily repulsed by Maltby and Crompton. Four corners fell to Ireland, without their realising anything owing to the brilliancy of Warren, Wedlock, and Makepeace. The English forwards eventually got moving, and without any apparent effort they swarmed round Hehir's charge, and Woodward beat him with a rather soft shot. Fifteen minutes later Mordue added a second goal, after some clever combination by Woodward and Halse, and scored. England had a lead of 2 goals to 0 at the interval.

The concluding half was a complete walk-over for the Englishmen, who scored three goals more, Warren, Halse, and Bradshaw being successful, giving England one of the easiest victories ever obtained on Irish soil. The Irish team were weak in every department, and lacked finish. Bradshaw and Mordue (forwards), Warren and Wedlock (halves), and Compton (back) were most noticeable. Result:—England, 5 goals; Ireland, 0.

ENGLAND.—*Hardy (Liverpool): Crompton (Blackburn Rovers) (capt.) and Maltby (Nottingham Forest): *Warren (Chelsea), *Wedlock (Bristol City), and *Makepeace (Everton); Wallace (Aston Villa), *V. J. Woodward (Tottenham Hotspur), Halse (Manchester United), Bradshaw (Sheffield Wednesday), and Mordue (Sunderland). *An International.

IRELAND.—Hehir (Bohemians); Balfe (Shelbourne) and J. Seymour (Cliftonville); Mercer (Distillery), Darling (Lingfield), and Stewart (Linfield); McDougall and Mitchell (Glentoran), Webb (Bohemians), and McAuley and Thompson (Cliftonville).

GLASGOW CUP.—REPLAYED SEMI-FINAL.

Clyde	0	3rd Lanark	0

Interest in the Scottish League competition is greater at the present moment than it has been for a long time. Aberdeen, for the first time in their history, are at the top of the League table, while Clyde (who were engaged in a Glasgow cup tie on Saturday) is the only undefeated first-class club in Scotland—a record which beats even the memory of "the oldest inhabitant." Aberdeen have gained first position on the table through the defeat of Rangers at Airdrie, St. Mirren losing a point to Queen's Park, and Dundee going down to Celtic, so that Saturday was truly a day of surprises. Aberdeen entertained Partick Thistle, and although there was no difficulty in getting the points, the feature of the game was the magnificent display of Lennie and O'Hagan on the left wing. Their play was brilliant, and gave the Thistle defence a terribly trying time.

Few expected Rangers to drop both points to Airdrieonians, but such was the case, and Rangers met with their first League defeat. At the start it looked an easy task for the Glasgow men, as within five minutes of the opening they were two goals up—both scored by half-backs, Gordon and Campbell. The home side, however, never lost heart, and as time went on they improved, but only sufficient in the first half to get one goal. Murray, the Rangers' centre, however, was badly injured before the interval, and limped so much that shortly after resuming he had to retire. This handicapped the Glasgow men to such an extent that they were never in the game again, and Airdrie, playing football of the "fear nothing" order, scored more goals, Craig and Sharp at back being unable to hold their front rank. The ex-Woolwich player has not been seen to such disadvantage since he returned to Scotland.

Celtic by no means appreciated their defeat at Dundee a month ago and they made no mistake with Northern men at Celtic Park on Saturday. Dundee were, however, without Crumley, Bellamy, and McFarlane—all absent through injuries. The visitors never gave themselves a chance, Dainty in particular keeping such a close watch on Quinn that he was rarely of assistance to his forwards. These tactics not only spoiled the game but gave the Celtic chances which they did not miss. In the end their victory was an easy one. Dundee, however, had the consolation of sharing in the best "gate" of the day in Scotland—£437. Queen's Park are the surprise packet of the League—one never knows what they are going to do. On Saturday, they met St. Mirren, at Paisley, and considering that the home men got two points off Celtic at Parkhead, and one off Rangers at Ibrox, defeat was looked upon as a certainty. However, the unexpected happened, and they did well in drawing, thanks to a grand defence by Thomson and Richmond, and a rare forward display by McColl, Paul, and Donald Dixon, the latter a good capture from that famous junior team, Ashfield.

Falkirk, even without Leishman and Skene, who had to leave the field through injuries, were too good for Hamilton Academicals, while the weakness of Edinburgh football was again in evidence by Kilmarnock drawing with Hearts at Tynecastle, and Hibernians only getting the better of Port Glasgow by the odd goal. The Hibernian forwards were weak in front of goal. Motherwell were superior to Greenock Morton, and their victory was never in doubt.

The undecided Glasgow cup tie between Clyde and 3rd. Lanark, at Shawfield, again ended in a draw, and as the final must be decided next Saturday, at Hampden Park, with Celtic as one of the clubs, the tie will be replayed during the week. On Saturday the play throughout was very poor, the only gratifying feature to the clubs being the "gate" amounting to £427.

RUGBY RULES.

AUSTRALIANS vs. PENYGRAIG.—On Saturday the Colonials met Penygraig on the Mid-Rhondda Athletic ground, permission having to be obtained from the Welsh Rugby Union to play on the ground, as it is the enclosure of the Mid-Rhondda N. U. club. The Australians, feeling assured of a "soft" match, played the weakest side they have had out during their visit, there being nine changes from the side which so decisively defeated Glamorgan on Wednesday last. Penygraig's forwards heeled splendidly at the outset, and several chances were given their backs. These were badly fumbled or spoiled by wild kicking into the open. One of the mistakes was almost turned to account by Parkinson. He apparently had a clear run in when Arthur Williams, showing great speed, effected a very fine tackle. The game was robbed of much of its interest by the persistent kicking to touch of the home men, evidently a part of the defensive campaign. Some very clever line-out work by McArthur and Middleton opened up the game, and had not Griffiths and Williams tackled finely, scores must have resulted. Eventually a fine bout of passing by the Colonial three-quarters resulted in Moran getting over near the uprights. Daly converted. Penygraig restarted with vigour, and hotly besieged the Australians' line. Although Penygraig were greatly overweighted forward, their eight showed great keenness in the loose, and more than once Dix had to dash for the ball to prevent scores being registered. Smith, who damaged his ankle, went back in place of Dix. Gathering a poor pass from Prentice, Carrol beat Williams, and was almost over when Griffiths pushed him in touch a yard or two out. A moment later Prentice lost a good chance by failing to take a pass from Wilkinson. Rowe, however, just before half-time literally threw himself over the line and scored. Daly failed to convert. Half-time:—Australians, 1 goal 1 try (8 points); Penygraig, 0.

The game in the first half had been disappointing, for Penygraig played completely on the defensive. After some indifferent passing by the Colonials, Matthews picked up in the loose, and sent a long pass to Williams, who beat his vis-a-vis before parting to Rowlands. The last named got over with four Australians hanging on. The goal kick failed. A fine individual effort by Hickey would have ended in a score had he not slipped a few yards out. Rowe, taking a penalty near the 25 line, goaled. Play was of the scrimmaging type—mostly in mid-field—until the whistle ended a disappointing game. The victors gave a poor display compared to that at Cardiff, when Glamorgan was beaten. This was in a large measure due to the tactics of the home men in acting almost wholly on the defensive. Result:—Australians (1 goal 1 penalty goal 1 try), 11 points; Penygraig (1 try), 3 points.

BLACKHEATH vs. OLD MERCHANT TAYLORS.—There was again a disappointing match at the Rectory Field on Saturday, and Blackheath had only themselves to blame for their defeat by 18 points to 14. It is a story of lost opportunities. For once in a way the play of the home forwards lost nothing in comparison with that of the backs. As a fact, upon this occasion the performance of the latter was decidedly mediocre, whilst the pack showed much better form than usual. The failure was Gotley, who, in the absence of Flemmer and Portus partnered Mainprice; moreover, the latter suffered injury towards the close of the first half which robbed "the club" of their captain's services for a considerable period. The home "threes," too, were an indifferent lot. Pillman, the old Tonbridge forward, who was transferred to the three-quarters on Saturday, proved as efficient as any. As for the O. M. T.'s, their salvation proceeded from their rear division, where Raphael gave a capital display. As a line the visitors' "threes" worked admirably together. The halves also were prominent, and seeing how very frequently their forwards were beaten for the ball, the visitors' rear division came out of the ordeal very successfully.

The game needs little description. "The club" showed to considerable advantage at the start, and but for repeated bad bungling would have led by more than 8 points to 0 at the interval. This score was the result of a try each by Begbie and Morton, Stone converting the latter. Afterwards, with Mainprice away, the visitors quickly got level with tries by the two Lepingwells, Raphael improving one of these. "The club" next obtained a penalty goal, but Parker and Raphael, for the visitors, got over, and the latter converted both. Near the close Pillman raced in and the resulting kick went astray. Result:—O. M. T.'s, 3 goals 1 try (18 points); Blackheath, 2 goals (1 penalty) 2 tries (14 points).

ATHLETICS

THE SECOND MARATHON."—Henri Siret, the youthful French professional, won the great Marathon Race from Windsor to the Stadium, promoted by the Evening News, on Saturday from eighty-eight competitors, representing the professional athletes of many nations. He covered the 26 miles 586 yards in 2 hrs. 37 mins. 23 secs.

Whether or not the brilliantly-successful endeavour by the Evening News to revive professional footracing in a clean and healthy form will have a lasting effect on the sport it is impossible, at this point, to say. But it can be safely asserted that Saturday's great gathering at the Stadium, with its 60,000 spectators, all of whom were keenly interested in the splendid sport within the arena, and the magnificent performances of the French champion and his immediate pursuers—P. White, of Ireland, J. Keywood, A. Crudgington, and A. Aldridge, of England—will be long remembered.

Siret's time of 2 hrs. 37 mins. 23 secs. compared very favourably with the 2 hrs. 54 mins. 26 2/5 secs. in which Dorando Pietri covered the same course and the 2 hrs. 55 mins. 18 secs. the American, J. J. Hayes, to whom (on Dorando being disqualified) the Olympic Marathon Race was awarded.

The Frenchman was the youngest of all the eighty-nine competitors whom the Princess Victoria of Schleswig-Holstein sent on their long and trying journey from the Long Walk, Windsor, at about 2.25 p.m. on Saturday. He is not yet twenty-one years of age, and was given special extension of time before going in for his two years' military training in order that he could compete in the race which he so worthily won.

Siret ran with perfect judgment all the way. He did not attempt to get among the leading men until nearing the twenties mile. H. Farrow, of Southwark, showed great pace in the early stages. He covered twelve and a half miles in 1 hr. 12 mins. 41 secs.

Siret assumed command at twenty-three miles, and retained his lead to the end. He entered the Stadium full of running and covered the lap and a half of the cinder track with an ease and grace and at a pace which suggested the beginning rather than the end of a twenty-six miles' run.

The times of twenty-six men were officially taken, and the positions of sixty-four men were recorded at the journey's end. A special prize of £10 for the first veteran over forty years of age was won by the eleventh man, A. Turner, of West Ham, whose time—3 hrs. 2 mins. 48 2/5 secs.—was wonderful for a man of his years.

Appended are the placings and times of the first ten men:—

	H.	M.	S.
1—Henri Siret, France	2	37	23
2—Patrick White, Ireland	2	40	15⅖
3—J. Keywood, Bromley Common ...	2	41	19⅖
4—A. Crudgington, Bethnal Green ...	2	42	17⅗

8—W. Swan, Catford	2	56	33
9—H. A. Lewis, Sidcup	2	57	52⅓
10—J. Punter, Hornsey Vale	2	59	1⅘

The winner receives £100, the second man £15, the third £10, and the fourth £5.

In the final heat of the 100 yards A. B. Postle, the Australian, when leading thirty yards from home, struck the inside bending with his left foot, the sudden jerk causing him to rupture a muscle at the back of his left thigh. He was eventually placed third. E. Eastman, of Canada, won, beating J. Todd, of Australia, by two yards in 10 1/5secs.

Todd was seen to greater advantage in the quarter-mile race, in which he strode out splendidly and beat F. C. Davies, of Tenby, by fifteen yards in 51 2/5secs. G. Fry, of Walthamstow, was third.

The one mile running race was won, in fine form, by the Army champion, A. Heaver (2nd Lincolnshire Regiment, Aldershot), after a desperate race with W. T. Day, of Ramsgate, in 4 mins. 29 1/5secs. There were four yards between them at the finish. C. W. Gardiner, of Lewisham, was another yard away.

Two famous ex-amateurs fought out the finish of the two miles walk. They were G. Topliss (Kentish Town), first, and W. H. Martindale (Kensal Rise), second, E. Fanton (Paris) was third. The winner's time was 13 mins. 58 secs.

The heavy-weight tug-of-war was won by the London United Tramways (Hanwell), who beat Mann, Crossman and Co.'s team by 2 pulls to 0; and the light-weights went to the Central London Railway, who beat the South-Eastern platelayers by 2 to 0.

ROWING.

The Sculling Championship.—That the Old Country is not quite played out athletically was proved on the River Thames on Monday afternoon when Ernest Barry of Billingsgate, beat George Towns, of Australia, for the Sculling Championship of England and the Sportsman Cup in the record time of 21 mins. 12 2/5secs. The previous best 21 mins. 9 4/5secs.—stood to the credit of that incomparable waterman, George Bubear, who accomplished it in a contest of minor importance.

Everything was in favour of the men, and those who had come to see them settle the question as to superiority. There was a very strong tide and a following wind. Naturally, considering the August-like character of the weather, the public lined up in very large numbers. Putney "hard" was crowded an hour before the start. As is usual at all water functions, there was a big muster of the merchants and musicians of the gutter, but these did not seem to do much trade, for the character of the assembly was not exactly high-class. There was a very strong representation of the bookmaking brotherhood, but they, too, complained of lack of business, seeing that they generously offered to "take five to four Towns" and lay even money Barry.

The race was timed to start at 2.45, but professional watermen are not as a rule punctual, and it was after that time when Barry made his appearance. He was followed by an "eight," in the bows of which sat Tom Green, to whom had been allotted the task of "showing up" the young Englishman. Towns had as his guide a fellow Colonial in Tom Sullivan, who some years ago fought for the honour that was at stake this day.

At six minutes to three the men, who had agreed to start by mutual consent, set out on their arduous journey. The start was a particularly clean one, both pairs of sculls dipping together. Inside a dozen lengths it was seen that Towns, who had lost the toss and was rowing on the Middlesex shore, was pulling the faster stroke. He put in 35 in the first minute to 32 by his rival, and before half a mile had been covered he was quite half a length to the good. The Australian's form, in addition, was much better than that of Barry, who seemed unable to keep his length, nor was he steering any too well.

At the mile post the Englishman had improved, but he was now about a length to the bad. The men were quite close together at this point; indeed a foul almost seemed possible. Green quickly got his man straight, and they reached away for Hammersmith Bridge. Before getting there—Towns passed under in 8 mins. 23 2/5secs.—Barry was barely half a length behind, and he was rowing wonderfully well, while Towns seemed to be slackening.

At the bottom of Chiswick Eyot, the Englishman, made his effort. It was a grand one, for in less than a hundred yards he caught and passed his man, and ere Thorneycroft's was reached he was quite a length and a half to the good.

Unless Towns had a big lump up his sleeve, the race was over, said the experts. The further he went the better Barry seemed to row. Before reaching Barnes Bridge he crossed over and took his opponent's water. Towns was not quite done with, however. A couple of hundred yards from the winning post he made a very fine spurt, but he could not reduce the gap by two lengths, and by this distance he was beaten.

It was a real sporting struggle from beginning to end, and there can be no doubt that the better man won. Barry was much the fresher at the finish.

GOLF.

Champions at Hampton Court.—James Braid, J. H. Taylor, Harry Vardon, and J. Hepburn took part in two interesting events on the links of the Home Park Club in Hampton Court Park on the 24th instant. An 18-holes stroke competition was decided in the morning, and in the afternoon play consisted of a 4-ball foursome, in which Braid and Hepburn, who is the local professional, beat Taylor and Vardon by 3 up and 2 to play. Fine weather prevailed, and the competitions were followed by about a thousand spectators.

The stroke event in the morning resulted in a tie between Taylor and Hepburn, each with 74. Vardon and Braid each recorded 76. Hepburn made an indifferent start by getting into the rough with his tee shot at the first hole. He began with a 6, but fine form on the putting greens enabled him to reach the turn in 36. This was the best outward score in the morning. Coming home, the local man holed a five-yards putt for a five at the eleventh, but at the twelfth he missed one of less than a yard. Going to the home hole, he pulled his tee shot into the rough, but, making a fine recovery and holing a good putt, he was down in 4. Taylor played steady golf without doing anything brilliant. He reached the turn in 37. The competition record for the course is 72, held jointly by Mr. George Brann, the old Sussex cricketer, and Mr. H. Davenport. The details of the leading cards were:

Taylor.

Vardon occasionally showed his old weakness of faulty putting. He was bunkered from his second shot to the first hole, and then missed a 5ft. putt for a 5. Subsequently, however, he showed greatly improved form, and reached the turn in 37. Coming home, he missed a 4ft. putt on the seventeenth green, and at the eighteenth hole he hooked his iron badly, with the result that he took 5. Braid did not play his usual game. He took 38 for the first nine holes. At the thirteenth he had a piece of bad luck. After being in the rough all the way, he lipped the hole with a 10 yards putt for a 4. The details of Vardon's and Braid's cards were:—

At the first hole in the four-ball foursome Taylor pulled his brassie shot and lost his ball. Vardon, however, effected half in 5. Taylor and Vardon looked like becoming 1 down at the third, where Braid holed a 12 yards putt for a 3, but Taylor saved the situation by getting down one of 5 yards for a half. Vardon got down a good putt for another division at the fourth, but Braid and Hepburn took the lead at the fifth, where the champion holed one of 4 yards for a 3. Hepburn made his side 2 up at the sixth, where he holed a 5 yards putt for another 3. The Scotsmen lost the eighth, and, halving the ninth, turned for home with a lead of 1 up. Their score for 9 holes was 33 to Taylor and Vardon's 34. Braid and Hepburn became 2 up at the twelfth, where the champion holed a 5 yards putt, and they increased their lead to 3 up at the thirteenth. Halves at the next three holes gave them the match by 3 and 2. The winners' best-ball score for the round was 68 to their opponents' 71. The details were:—

BOXING.

Tommy Burns vs. Bill Lang.—At the Stadium, Melbourne, on 5th September, about 7,000 people watched the contest between Tommy Burns and Bill Lang. A good deal of interest, naturally, had been taken out of the affair owing to the decisive fashion in which the world's champion had finished off Bill Squires at Sydney, so that the gate at Melbourne must be considered a good one. Lang, who is a big fellow, evidently went into the ring with the fixed intention of making the most use of it, and so prolonging the contest, in the hope of getting home a chance hit, but Burns followed him round, cool, determined, and watchful. The first round was spent in mutual stocktaking. Lang had seen the Sydney contest, and realised how dangerous Burns was at close quarters: Burns had been told to keep a watchful eye on Lang's left. As so they sparred and clinched, Lang always striving to keep away from those terrible short-arm jolts.

The Australian provided the sensation of the match, for in the second round he electrified the crowd by knocking the champion flat on his back. Burns, apparently satisfied that his man was not very formidable after all, rushed in with both arms out. Lang shot out his left in the peculiar twisting way which is all his own, and catching Burns under the side of the chin, lifted him clean off his feet. It was a new experience for the champion. A look of blank wonder and astonishment passed across his face. Then he gazed at Lang with amused admiration, and broke into a smile. The crowd went mad. Men shrieked with joy, cheered, danced, and threw their hats up. The American was sitting, half lying and smiling up into Lang's face. The ten seconds' check attracted his attention—he was saying "Five! Six!" Tommy Burns jumped to his feet, and Lang flew at him, heartened and encouraged; but Burns had learnt his lesson. He gave no more chances. He was determined to avenge that knock-down blow quickly. He got a few heavy body blows in, but none of them reached a vital spot. The round closed in a scene of wild enthusiasm. The crowd believed that Lang would win.

Even the most ardent supporter of Lang could not honestly declare that after the second round he ever had a hope of winning. He had had his chance. Thereafter the fight was the American's. He meant to knock Lang out and he worked fiercely to do it. Lang showed a wonderful capacity for taking punishment. Again and again the American got home on him, but the Australian never winced. The fight was a singularly clean one all through; neither man bled noticeably. Lang's seconds poured advice into his ears at the end of each round. There was silence in Burns' corner. Nobody felt competent to advise the champion.

When the fourth round opened, Lang stepped in briskly and landed a well-placed right cross on the American's jaw that merely shook it off. Then Burns started feinting, and Lang responded with similar tactics. "Don't feint," shrieked his seconds. Lang heard them, and rushed at Burns with right and left going. Burns smothered a shower of hits in some remarkable fashion, and the crowd laughed. It was beginning to occur to them that Lang was only a small man beside the American. Then Burns opened the attack. Lunging forward, as though fencing, he launched sharp hits at Lang, hitting him everywhere—one blow cutting open his eyebrow, and half-blinding him. Then a powerful swing on the side of the ear brought Lang to the boards in that limp fashion which always heralds the end. He got up at eight seconds, and rushed Burns again. The fight was now over, so far as Lang was concerned, but Burns refrained from finishing matters until the sixth round, when a heavy half-arm jolt to the jaw dropped Lang for good.

Burns received £1,000 for his end of the contest, and Lang £600, these amounts being paid over the following day. On 5th September Burns was leaving for Kosciusko, away in the mountains, for a couple of months' rest, so that the Burns-Johnson contest will be not yet.

JUBBULPORE TOURNAMENT.

(From a Correspondent).

The first ties of the Jubbulpore Polo Tournament for the Cup presented by the Begum of Bophal were played off on Friday the 23rd October before a large gathering of Jubbulpore society. The Officers of the 60th King's Royal Rifles were at home on the ground, and their band played throughout the afternoon. The first match was between the 25th Light Cavalry from Poona, represented by Thakur Mul Singh, 1; Mr. H. C. Chayter, 2; Capt. E. L. Popham, 3; and Mr. J. S. S. Moir back; and The Fettesians represented by Mr. T. Nisbet, 1; Mr. D. B. Edwards, 2; Mr. W. H. Todd, 3; and Mr. J. F. Todd back.

This was a very fast galloping game throughout, and play was very level, for although the 25th Light Cavalry established a good lead of 3 goals in the first chukker, the Fettesians pressed them all through the second and scored a goal in the third. There was no score in the 4th chukker but the Cavalry put up one in each of the 5th and 6th, thus ultimately winning by 5 goals to 1. For the winners Popham played a good game at No. 3, his shooting at goal being very straight, and Moir played a sound game at back. For the Fettesians J. F. Todd of the 39th Central India Horse at back played magnificently and did yeoman service for his side. The losers had the worst of the luck, but their shooting at goal and general attack was somewhat weak. On the whole it was an excellent and most exciting game to watch, and the Fettesians put up a very good fight against a powerful and well organised team, making them gallop their very utmost throughout.

The second match was between the Jubbulpore Gymkhana represented by Capt. A. L. Godman, 1; Capt. L. Gascoigne, 2; Mr. R. H. Bond, 3; and Major W. Barnett back; and the 27th Light Cavalry represented by Mr. W. G. Durham 1; Mr. H. Jackson, 2; Mr. A. D. Wise, 3, and Capt. W. F. S. Casson back. This was a much slower game than the first, although very closely contested throughout. There was no scoring in the first chukker, but in the second Bond scored a goal for the Gymkhana. The 3rd and 4th were devoid of score, but the Gymkhana put up another goal in the 5th and ultimately won by 2 goals to love. For the Gymkhana Bond played a good game.

The Final was played off on the following Monday, 26th October between the two teams left in viz., the 26th Light Cavalry and the Jubbulpore Gymkhana team. The 33rd Punjabis were at home on the ground. As was expected the game was a very one sided affair, the 25th Light Cavalry winning by 11 goals to love without any difficulty. For the winners Chayter, Popham and Moir all played well, while for the losers Barnett at back and Bond at 3 put up a game fight against heavy odds. After the game the handsome challenge cups was presented to the winning team by Mrs. Blennerhassett and smaller cups to the individual players.

It is really a pity that more teams did not enter for the tournament this year, as the ground was in the most perfect condition and everything tended to make it a success. There were seven entries last year but of those the 38th Central India Horse the holders of the cup were unable to come, and the Bhopalis who generally make an entry did not do so this year.

THE CESAREWITCH.

Famous Partnerships.

The history of the Cesarewitch for sixty-nine years has been somewhat remarkable for partnerships in what have been called great coups. The well-kept good thing of 1857, when Saxon and Barber were very nearly bringing off a £30,000 chance with Queen Bess, beaten only after a dead-heat between three, was one instance, and there was the alliance of William Day and Fred Swindells the year before with a four-year-old colt called December, in at the flattering weight of 5st. 5lb., and getting third in a field of twenty-six, while the same confederacy brought it off altogether four years later with Dulcibella. There have been other victories also, in which more than one have been concerned, but the most notable partnerships of the century will be associated for various reasons with the names of Mr. George Payne and Mr. Charles Greville. These gentlemen were both in the first ranks of society, and the wealth they expended on the Turf has scarcely ever been surpassed.

Mr. George Payne was really the senior partner in the banking house of Smith, Payne, and Co., with an income variously computed at from £20,000 to £30,000 a year, besides £60,000 in ready cash when he came of age. He was a born speculator, and would dabble in anything, from racehorses to Russian tallow, and with all this spirit of enterprise, which led mostly to unfavourable results, he was a thorough English gentleman and sportsman. He had lost immensely at racing at the whist table before he was 21, besides being rather too lively for the Dons of Oxford, but, good-tempered to a degree, fond of every manly sport, and an adept at most of them, his popularity was unbounded at the time he took the Mastership of the Pytchley country, to become famous almost at once. As a capital amateur huntsman, and mounted on the best hunters Anderson could find him regardless of expense, he was never away from his hounds, although a welter of fifteen-stone, and his cherry, musical voice used seemingly to charm his pack, as well as his field, in many a good thing from Crick or Brampton Wood. He did things in great style, too; his whips, Charles Payn and Ned Kingsbury, were always on 200-guinea hunters, and Sulby Hall or Pitsford was full throughout the season with boon friends, the leaders of fast society, and sportsmen of note. Times have never been greater with the Pytchley than in those six years of Mr. George Payne's Mastership, and during that period he was a great patron of cricket, having his own eleven at Sulby, and a supporter also of the noble science of boxing. A request to make the stake-money for a good man was never refused by him, and when a big fight was decided upon, anywhere within twenty miles of Sulby, the ceremonies were always adjourned until the squire drove up his four-in-hand, the coach well loaded with the choice spirits of the day. Mr. Payne had himself been a diligent pupil of Tom Spring, while as a whip he was talked of as the equal of Sir Vincent Cotton and Sir Henry Payton. Such was Mr. George Payne when he went in very deeply for racing, early in the forties, at first as a partner with another Northamptonshire squire, Mr. Bouverie, devoted to sport, but no great judge of racing. The alliance, besides being productive of no good, was marked by a serious mistake in selling Fortress, the dam of Pyrrhus the First, to John Day, and so missing a Derby winner.

Mr. Charles Greville, who was the senior of both Lord George Bentinck and Mr. Payne, was at one time a sort of partner with the former, and in Mango's St. Lever they stood together in trying the horse and backing him for a very heavy amount, when it was ostensibly the property of Mr. Greville; then the cousins had a deadly quarrel over racehorses, which was never made up, and there was a talk of Mr. Payne's becoming the purchaser of the whole of Lord George Bentinck's stud. In his liberal way, Mr. Payne replied: "Give me a night to think over it, and if I do not accept I will pay your forfeit of £300." This he did, and handed over the cheque the next morning, the truth being that Mr. Payne had great faith in his trainer, Montgomery Dilly, but he did not think he had sufficient business ability to manage a very large stud. So it came about that Mr. Payne and Mr. Greville became partners, and continued to train at Dilly's, near Manchester, having only twelve or fifteen horses at a time there, and a few occasionally at George Dockery's, at Epsom. They had some pretty good ones, and were very unlucky to lose the Derby with Alarm in 1844, through the colt's upset at the starting-post. Ill-luck was also associated in other events, and yet these two gentlemen, of totally different ideas and characters, were racing partners for a number of years, the one always cheery and good-natured, the other morose and, although very clever, never satisfied, and generally unpopular. His partner used to say of him: "Greville has queer notions, but a better-hearted fellow never lived." Lord Maidstone, in his satire, which began with:

Greville of a noble race,
With nose as long as Portland-place.

took a different view, and perhaps the author of "The Memoirs of the Reign of Queen Victoria" was never thoroughly understood.

Cesarewitch Trials.

The partners were well agreed on some points. They had no belief in large studs, and they liked their training quarters to be pretty far away from the hurly-burly of the clubs, or from classic Newmarket. At Littleton, a hamlet a few miles from Winchester, and close to the old Crawley Kennels of the Hursley, there was a quiet that nothing could well disturb in that little dell, with the flint-faced house and stabling, wherein dwelt Montgomery Willy, a trainer of the old school, excellent stableman, good judge of a horse's formation and honesty itself to his employers. They liked him, and as he always agreed to the funniest trials possible that they summed up by weights and measures, there was no difference of opinion in the establishment. Old Nat Flatman, their jockey, however, used to laugh heartily about the home trials that were always either too high or too low, and sometimes the greatest precautions as to secrecy were bowled over by mishap or accident. In the case of one Cesarewitch trial, the town hummed with rumours of what Greville and Payne were going to do, and how the market depended on a gallop at Littleton. On an afternoon late in September a carriage was ordered from the George, at Winchester, to meet the 2-50 train from London, and this was seen wending its way towards the downs that stretch away from the old racecourse. It was conveying Mr. Greville, Mr. Payne, Nat Flatman, and Sam Rogers. Three racehorses met them, at a convenient point. Flatman and Rogers exchanged mounts with the lads on two, and after a steady canter the trio were conducted by Dilly to the starting-post. Every precaution had been taken to see that the coast was clear. Not a soul or a cow could be seen on those miles of flats, bar an old man in a smock on a field edging the Down where the finish was visible, and he was quietly hoeing turnips. The trial came off, the horse wanted was beaten, and to get out of the money and back the other was mooted; but there was a change in the scene. Where was the man in the turnips. A hoe and a smock lay where he had been, and the disappearing figure was seen in the long distance towards Winchester, the cat being out of the bag in club land in less than half an hour.

These were the times of no training reports and very few sporting newspapers. Every dodge, therefore, came into vogue to get information, and schemers were everywhere to be found. William Day told a good story of one of his Cesarewitch trials. To be perfectly sure on the score of secrecy, he decided on his gallop just as the day was breaking. On looking round he perceived a man in a stooping position, and on riding up the individual, who was armed with an easel and paint-box, came forward, explaining how much he admired the beautiful scenery and autumn tints at daybreak. "Yes, I know," said the famous trainer, "but are you aware that these Downs are private?" Upon that the early-morning artist began to descant on the follies of the times, why true lovers of nature should not be prevented from enjoying such beautiful scenes, etc., but William Day had by this time beckoned to one of the lads to canter back and fetch Baker—Ike Baker, to wit, very nearly the champion middle-weight boxer, who had held his own amongst the heavies, and who was located at Woodyeates to keep order and attend to intruders. The stranger on this occasion showed a disposition to be hostile, and squared up to Baker, who gave him a tap, and the whole artistic arrangement collapsed, the curls down his neck, was scattered, and the student of art was simply a red-headed ruffian, with his hair cropped as if he had been doing six months at the expense of her Majesty.

A Deceptive Trial.

The Cesarewitch trials that did take place at Littleton were often deceptive, if not found out, and thus it was in the case of Glauca, a four-year-old mare of only fair middle-weight class, and yet tried high enough to win a Derby, according to Nat Flatman. Naturally, she was beaten by close on a hundred yards, and was never really in the gallop. Mr. Payne and Mr. Greville both opined that she could not have a ghost of a chance, and consequently they let Colonel Anson have Flatman to ride Backbiter. The mare was started, however, as a cockboat, and with little encouragement from the stable the ring laid 66 to 1 against her. Mr. Payne, following his practice of backing everything he ran, took the night before the race £2,000 to £35, £1,000 to £20 twice, and £4,000 to £40. It was a notable race, as Mr. Gatwicke had such a big stake on Landgrave that it brought him to 2 to 1 in a field of twenty-three. John Scott's party would not believe in the defeat of Backbiter, and so supported him down to 5 to 2, while Newmarket backed Sir Robert Pigott's representative, Essadarius, at 9 to 1. The favourite looked all in it as they raced into the dip, but there they were joined by Glauca, on whom Chapple had been riding a very careful race, and in a beautiful finish between him and Alfred Day on the Newmarket fancy, Glauca won by a neck, with Landgrave close up third. The general opinion was that Messrs. Greville and Payne should have won a fortune, and the latter remarked that his £8,000 should have been £80,000. They were successful in another Cesarewitch, but that was all comparatively clear sailing, as Muscovite had run second in the Great Metropolitan to Virago when giving Mr. Howard's great filly 21lb., and with the exception of an easily-won match at York, against Lord Glasgow's Caracera, he had been kept specially for the Cesarewitch. At 8st. 3lb. he was voted well in, and he was never at more than 100 to 6, the commission being executed at a still lower rate. A warmer favourite had never been known down to 3 to 1, although there were all sorts of rumours floated to the effect that some very heavy metal was against him. The partners, however, had him well guarded, and with the incorruptible Nat Flatman in the saddle the good thing came off in a canter by four lengths. The owners had a rare afternoon, as Mr. Payne's Polydora won the Clearwell as a 7 to 1 chance, and after the Cesarewitch horses had been weighted in Mr. Greville won a match with Kaffir against Lord Glasgow's Phillis colt. There was an unfortunate piece of bad judgment shown, though, when it was deemed wise to sell Muscovite, as he only realised £100, being bought by the much-esteemed trainer, Tom Carter, of Chantilly, a year before it was known that the Duke of Beaufort had a clipping good two-year-old by him, afterwards named Vauban, the winner of the Two Thousand. The confederates had generally one or two running in the Cesarewitch in the sixties. Mr. Greville died in 1865, and the last that Mr. Payne backed with his usual spirit was Bradamante, in 1866, as it was thought the five-year-old had a great chance at 7st. 5lb. and so was supported to win a big stake down to 10 to 1. Mr. Payne also ran Adelaide in 1870, thus completing a record of twenty years' patronage of the Cesarewitch.

Race won by all Classes.

The Cesarewich has been very remarkable in the bestowal of windfalls on people of all classes. "Tom Parr," perhaps the most knowledgeable individual ever known in all that concerned racehorses, bought Weathergage as a draft from the Duke of Bedford's stable for £60 only. The astute purchaser, who had commenced life as a working lad in a market garden, soon won races with the discarded colt from the ducal stable, as after a turn in a selling plate at Northampton, in which he was second, he won the Aristocratic Handicap at Bath, ridden by his owner and, better still, the Goodwood Stakes, for which he started at the nice price of 15 to 1. Tom Parr securing enough over this to give him plenty of balance for a much more important coup. The country, too, was loud in praise of the clever tactician, and his Cesarewitch hand was watched with peculiar interest. He had three in it, but with Clothworker beating a retreat, it was soon apparent that Weathergage was the one, despite his fairly good weight for a three-year-old of 6st. 11lbs. With money pouring in from every quarter, the lists were soon full about the son of Weatherbit, and no horse ever started against such an array of noble speculators, as Lord Wilton, Lord Chesterfield, and their friends declared heavily for the Oaks mare, Lady Evelyn. Lord Glasgow fancied Knight of the Garter, Lord Bruce, Mr. Greville, and Mr. Payne stood two, Knight of the Shire and Ariosto. Lord Exeter had two, in Phlegra and Ilex, and General Anson King Pepin. The list-keepers inclined to the view that Tom Parr would be bought over, and that there was too much money in the market for Weathergage, but not a bit of it, the humble Devonshire man stood to his guns, backed his horse for all he had down to 4 to 1, and, with Wells up, there was not a doubt about his going for it. In a beautiful race the verdict was never in doubt, as the magnificent effort on the part of Frank Butler to score for Lord Wilton's party with Lady Evelyn made no real impression on Weathergage, who won very cleverly by half a length. No greater disaster had ever befallen the ring, or, more particularly, the betting houses, the proprietors of at least twelve being scheduled as dead-broke the week after, and one went for £50,000! The little punters did not, therefore, in all cases get their money, but Tom Parr got his to the tune, it was said, of £40,000.

There was another Cesarewitch very similar to the above in 1853, when thirty-one started for it, that included possibly the best lot of horses ever seen in a handicap as there was the great Teddington, conqueror of Stockwell, in it; Songstress and Catherine Hayes, both Oaks winners; Dove, an Oaks second; Nabob, the subsequent sire of Vermouth; Mountain Deer, destined to become one of the best sires in Ireland; and King of Trumps, almost as noted. The North went dead for Songstress, who started favourite, and Mr. Padwicke had a great stake on King Pepin, who had run a good second to Buckthorn in the Ascot Stakes, while the Morris's had made their book for Indian Warrior, and Mr. J. M. Stanley by this time the sole owner of Teddington, backed his celebrity down to 12 to 1, despite his great weight of 9st. 7lb. There were lots of outsiders at 40 and 50 to 1, and amongst others at the latter figure was Haco, a three-year-old by Old England, in at 5st. 12lb. belonging to Mr. Barratt, the host of the Grosvenor Hotel, at Stockbridge, and trained by Young King, a veteran trainer of the old school with a juvenile Christian name. As usual, the pace was tremendous at start. Haco, pulling his small pilot Palmer's arms off, rushed to the front, and, leading through the gap, was heading the troop all the way to the turn of the lands, when, apparently, he was beaten, and Songstress took up the running. She was in trouble before reaching the Bushes, and then Nabob and King Pepin both in turn looked like winning. The latter failed half way up the ascent, and something now joined Nabob; it was Haco coming again, and a desperate race ensued. Alfred Day, on the smack, was getting every ounce out of him, but the light-weight rode for his very life, got level two strides from home, and no one but the judge could tell which had won. There was a breathless silence, and then mighty cheers from the ring, as Haco's number was hoisted, for his name was scarcely on the books. A sensational ending, but one by no means unique in the history of the race.

Calcutta C.C. vs. Town Club.—Calcutta opened their season with this two days' fixture on Saturday and Sunday last. Batting first they compiled 145 for 9 wickets and declared, Turnbull being top scorer with 57. The Town Club were trundled out for 37, Beachcroft bowling with great effect, his seven wickets only costing 15 runs. Following on, the Town Club made 88 for 6 wickets. Calcutta won on the first innings by 108 runs. Score:—

Football.

THE COST OF PROFESSIONAL FOOTBALL.

"HIRED gladiators," "white slaves," "muddied oafs." These and other such opprobrious epithets have been hurled at the heads of those English professional footballers who week by week from the first day of September until the last day of April attract crowds the like of which the world has never seen before.

Of course, these epithets are totally undeserved, and are wholly unwarantable. Very naturally there are some black sheep among the hundreds of professionals, but the majority are clean sportsmen who—paid, it is true, for their services—play the game for the love of the game, and play it on wholesome lines.

We do from time to time read of foul tactics and unpleasant incidents on the football field, but let me say very emphatically that in the majority of cases the players themselves are but little to blame, the fault lying with the directors of the club which permits incidents of this nature to pass unnoticed, or with an unsportmanlike crowd which rouses the players' passions and urges them to employ unfair methods.

The professional footballer is a good sportsman, in spite of the many temptations to which he is subjected.

The evolution of the professional footballer has been phenomenally rapid—as rapid, indeed, as the increase of the financial prosperity of the great League clubs.

Just imagine that the first "gate" ever taken by the wealthy and famous Aston Villa Club amounted to the noble sum of 5s. 3d., whereas for the last four or five years its gate receipts have averaged anything between £10,000 and £20,000!

Clubs handling so much money naturally looked about to obtain the best possible fare to provide their patrons with, and consequently the price of players rose in proportion to the competition to obtain their services.

One reads that the first player who ever signed a professional form in the south received a salary of five shillings a week for his services. To-day a player's wages, be he the greatest exponent of the game in the world or be he merely a moderate performer, are limited to £208 a year.

This rule was introduced in 1900, and is one of the burning questions of the football world to-day.

Previous to that date players received any wage that their club saw fit to pay them—that is, they were paid according to merit.

Where do all these footballers come from; how do the clubs find recruits? is a question often asked.

Each year during the football season a club's "recruiting-sergeant" (shall we call him?) wanders round, watching local games between villages or small clubs. He watches the form of the players, and when he "spots" a likely man he approaches him, makes him an offer, and gets him to sign a League form.

This binds the player to his club. For signing this form a player may receive a a bonus not exceeding £10; but should he re-sign for the club by the rules of the Football Association, he is not allowed to receive a further bonus. Again, a First League club may have been doing very badly all the season, and may be in danger of being relegated to the Second League. This means a big loss of gate money, and the directors of the club, having decided that the team's weakness lies in the forward line (let us say), set about to remedy this defect.

They approach the directors of another club who are in possession of a powerful forward line and offer to "buy" two of their players. For this "transfer," as it is called, they may have to pay any sum up to £1,000 apiece. Not a penny of this goes to the player.

It all goes into the club's coffers. The player himself, whose services have been so highly priced, serves his new masters at the old wage of £208 a year. He cannot benefit by his brilliance.

A man, then, whose transfer fee is £1,000 and who receives £208 a year for his services must be kept fit and well and in perfect trim all the year round. How is this done?

Every day the men, in charge of the club's trainer, are taken for a brisk walk; gymnastics, ball-punching, Indian clubs sprinting, and, above all, skipping are also freely indulged in. Of actual football during the week very little is done; it is essential that the men should not get stale, and the men during the long season from 1st September to 30th April have quite enough of the game in actual matches.

Once, or perhaps twice, a week they may go down to the ground and indulge in some shooting, thus giving the goal-keeper practice, and the backs indulge in some mild tackling and big kicking.

Then baths and a vigorous rubbing down at the hands of the trainer, a visit from the club's doctor if anything is wrong, and special massage treatment if any muscle is weak. This is the course usually adopted by most of the clubs, and it keeps the men busy.

That is essential, for a professional footballer has much time on his hands if left to himself, and with the very comfortable wage of £4 a week he is naturally liable to "find mischief" unless kept well employed.

During the "off" months—i.e., May June, and July—many of them play cricket, some of them being regular members of county teams. Needham, the prince of half-backs, plays for Derbyshire; Sharpe, the brilliant Everton forward, is a regular member of the Lancashire team; Vincett, Ducat, and Leach are almost as well known to the cricket-loving public as to football enthusiasts.

In August, however, strict training begins again, and club practices are fairly frequently indulged in, so that when the curtain rings up on 1st September the perfectly trained athlete steps into the football arena wound up to the minute.

Of course, the expenses of a club are enormous. An average outlay of a club in the First League in wages and transfers for one year is about three to four thousand pounds; travelling, training, and hotel expenses amount to nearly a thousand pounds; while there are other heavy items to be met, such as advertising, gatekeepers, police, etc.

Most of the popular clubs can meet these expenses easily; nay, not only meet them, but can put a good sum away in the bank each year, a sum varying from £1,000 up to £5,000, and practically all this money comes from the spectators.

Newcastly United has averaged a "gate" throughout the season of 20,000. Chelsea nowadays rarely play to fewer than thirty-five or forty thousand spectators, and so it is in more or less proportion all over the country.

For instance, over four hundred and twelve thousand spectators were present at the matches of the three big Leagues on a recent Saturday. That is where the money comes from.

FOX-TERRIERS AT THE SIMLA SHOW

THE Fox-Terriers at the recent Championship Show at Simla were judged by Mr. N. White, who, though it is believed that he donned the ermine for the first time, is by no means a novice in knowledge of the breed. He is himself a Fox-Terrier fancier and has an excellent kennel; he has also been a prominent exhibitor of recent years, consequently, although all his awards may not meet with universal concurrence, he evidently knew his work, and if he made mistakes they were comparatively few.

In Open Smooth dogs, the good dog Indigo being absent, the judge soon recognised that the choice lay between the imported dog South Cave Splinter, and the Indian bred ones D'Arcy Tackler and Honest Injun. Tackler, a dog of far more than ordinary merit with a beautiful head, was no doubt thrown out for size. He is a trifle beyond the admissible limit in the eyes of judges of the day, but would win with those judges who are not over particular in this respect. Of the other two, Honest Injun, bred by Mr. Lionel Jacob and now the property of Mr. Bean, is a very striking youngster. He has a lovely head of good length and expression, very good legs and feet, and a sound coat, but is just a bit long cast and was shown in too light condition considering he was a youngster not fully matured. It is probably that this fact caused him to be placed second to Splinter, who without possessing any remarkable good points, is thoroughly well built all over.

In Open Bitches, Mr. Patterson's Dulcie Belle was placed first. In this the judging was consistent but on pure quality alone most judges would have given the red ribbon to South Cave Sarcelle, a bitch abounding in quality, and who made Dulcie Belle look a trifle commonplace.

In Novice and Puppies, Dogs and Bitches, Honest Injun romped in first, the second going to Mrs. Jackson's Black Bill, a gaily marked terrier of Redmond type and much sterling merit, a dog very much of the stamp and appearance of Indigo, the Calcutta winner. Dulcie Belle was Reserve, and D'Arcy Tackler H.C. A nice little bitch, Mrs. Hudson's Locket, was commended. A bitch, with some very good points, Mrs. Cuthbert Edwards' The Only Way, was overlooked. She is a bitch with grand bone but was shown badly and far too fat.

The Wire-haired Fox Terriers were generally of a good deal higher quality than the smooths owing mainly to Mr. Lionel Jacob's strong team. Every class was a most interesting one. In Open Dogs, it is very soon evident that the choice lay between Mr. Lionel Jacob's Jim the Penman and Jo Hukm, two very high class terriers of very much the same breeding, both bred by their owner, and shown in superb condition. They were eventually placed in the order named and there is probably little or nothing to choose betwen them. Jo Hukm scores in head, which is magnificent, in legs and feet which are of the very best, and in size. Jim the Penman has the pull in shoulders and general quality of outline. He is a game terrier who has greatly improved since he was at Simla and Calcutta last year. He was then too light and his jacket a trifle loose; he is now filled out and let down, and no fault can be found with either bone or coat. Rassendyll was Reserve, a very nice terrier who made the most of himself in the ring. H. C. went to Captain Normand's Dasher, a puppy with a great head, good bone, but faulty coat. Peter Cackler was another good one in the ring, an excellent stamp of terrier spoilt by too gay a carriage of stern. Mr. Bean's Darby was another well-bred one, a bit soft in coat, but with first-rate legs and feet and general build. The class altogether a very strong one.

The Open Bitches were also very strong, and Mr. Lionel Jacob's old Champion Diva again went to the top. She is a wonderful laster, with a skull as clean as a puppy's, and has never so far been beaten, but on this occasion it is a question whether the same owner's Billie Burke should not have beaten her. Billie Burke was placed far too low; she has grand style, the shortest of backs, and a very hard jacket. She was placed Reserve, the second going to Indian Lass, a very sweet little bitch of great quality who showed herself to perfection. H. C went to another very good bitch, Mr. Bean's Joan, but rather too young a puppy for an open class.

In Novice Dogs and Bitches, Mr. Lionel Jacob's Jo Hukm, already mentioned, fairly smothered his competitors. Indian Lass was second, Joan Reserve, Billie Burke H. C. (an inconsistency as she beat Joan in the open), and Dasher commended (another inconsistency as Rassendyll beat him in the open).

In Puppies Joan, bred by Mr. Lionel Jacob, by Dusky Ploughboy out of Dil Pasand, a bitch, also the dam of Jo Hukm and Honest Injun, winners at this show, was placed first over Indian Lass, second (another inconsistency). Both very nice puppies who will no doubt be heard of again. Dasher was Reserve, Rassendyll H. C., and Blackguard commended.

A further interesting competition was the result of a cup offered by His Highness the Maharajah of Jind for the best coated wire fox terrier in the Show. The question of coats has recently been under considerable discussion. Soft, straight coats, and hard, heavy coats are simple enough to breed, the desideratum is a hard, straight coat of just sufficient length and quality to give the true wire character. The judge gave the point much careful consideration, and eventually awarded the cup to Champion Diva, the winner in Open Bitches, a decision with which no fault can be found. Her jacket is of the true pin-wire texture, and of good length and straightness with no want of face hair. This unsolicited special from the Maharajah, himself a prominent wire terrier fancier, is a most desirable special at Shows, and must lead to greater attention being paid to the coats of wire-terriers, a point of much importance in the breed.

In the other specials, that expert and experienced judge, Major Williamson, officiated. The best in Show and best bred by exhibitor in India, Cups presented by H. E. the Viceroy, and H. H. the Lieutenant-Governor, fell to Mr. Lionel Jacob's Jo Hukm. Jim the Penman and Jo Hukm were the best brace in the Show. The wire fox-terriers were therefore pre-eminent.

The Story Teller.

LADY ELTON'S IDYLL.

"I KNOW what it is, dear Lady Elton. It's another of your idylls."

"It's the quietest wedding in all London; just you and I to write our names. I'm glad you've come in time, Clara. A hansom will be at the door in a quarter of an hour."

"Then you have a quarter of an hour to explain. All your note said was, 'Be here for Ashton's wedding at eleven.' And here I am in this funny little hotel! How quiet you've kept it! I must say I never thought you'd practice anything pastoral on your own nephew. It made me gasp. Who is it?"

"It's quite the nicest idyll I've ever thought of. She doesn't understand in the least, and she'll be here in six minutes. Do you mind three in a handsom, Clara?"

"Not in the least. And will Lord Ashton meet us at the church?"

"A Presbyterian church, because of her mother. Isn't it deliciously romantic?"

"Of course it is, Lady Elton, but—the rest of the family?"

Lady Elton placed a jewelled finger on a plump cheque-book which bulged gaudily on a dingy buhl table in front of her.

"They'll never quarrel with me, Clara Terhune; they can't afford it, poor dears."

"But who is she?"

"I'm afraid, Clara, she isn't anybody at all; but Ashton's persuaded me to make her my idyll as well as his. To tell you the truth, I don't know her by sight."

"How on earth did it happen?"

"He found her in some little corner of the South Coast, while he was getting his sprained wrist right for the hunting. She was doing water-colours—rather weird water-colours, as far as I can gather—and so, of course, he talked art to her. Incidentally, he led her to believe that as soon as his wrist was all right he would be the most indefatigable artist in England. Then they drifted into deeper things, and, of course, he came to me."

"Of course."

He put it very sweetly and simply, Clara. Don't look so hard and mocking. No woman can afford to be a cynic after forty. It makes one so wrinkly. Besides, you know, my idyll is ever so much better than that individual at the Atlas Theatre."

"Equally of course. But who is she? The individual at the Atlas Theatre at all events had a name."

"This one is quite, quite different, with all the dear, dead notions of the middle class before it became sorry for itself!"

"But the water-colours?"

"Absolutely harmless, Clara. Splashes of just anything, so Ashton says. Yes, it's quite all right, so far; no scraggy women in loose tights, so stupid and proper. You know what these impressionists get to when they're tired of the hay and things?"

"I'm sure she's quite proper; but what is her name?"

"A name they're making rather a fuss about just now—a sturdy, backbony sort of name: Smith—just Smith."

"How could you do it? How could you do it?

"Now, Clara, I'm fifteen years older than you, and I've a right to be tiresome, but you've no earthly right to be conscientious. All you've got to do is to write your name, have lunch in a private sitting-room in this little hole, and hold your tongue for three-quarters of an hour, just until they're in the train."

"Yes, I can do that," said Mrs. Terhune, rather dismally. "Isn't Lord Ashton going to bring a man of some kind with him?" she added.

"No, I told him to come by himself. It would spoil it all. He wouldn't be naive enough. My poor little idyll would dissolve under the stare of a single eyeglass."

"How will she be dressed, Lady Elton? I never heard of a bride making a third in a hansom."

"Well, my dear, you can follow us if you like. But that's only a detail. When she comes back, however, you must be useful, teach her how to dress—everybody will be willing enough to teach her bridge—and I'll see about the presentation, by proxy, I think."

"How dear and thoughtful of you, Lady Elton; but isn't it all going to be rather deadly for us—this morning, I mean?"

"There you go, Clara, out of key again. What is it?"

A slovenly waiter informed them surlily that a young lady had asked for a Mrs. Elton.

"Show her up at once. Clara, you can take your cue from that waiter. Incidentally, I didn't know that there were waiters quite like that anywhere on earth. It was my slum mentor, little Mr. Pike, who told me of this place. He thought it was for a protégée, and so it is. We follow them back here, Clara, after the service, and by the time we get here she will have learned her real position. It's rather exciting, isn't it, in a way?"

"I hope she won't be hysterical, or break down or anything idiotic."

"Ssh! Here she is."

A tall girl, beneath whose white veil a bronze curl strayed waywardly, entered the shabby little drawing-room unannounced.

"How do you do, Mrs. Elton?" she exclaimed a little breathlessly, as she shook hands. "It is so very, very good of you. Mother is laid up, and there is literally nobody else in the world I could ask."

"My dear child, who should put you through your last paces if not me? That isn't exactly grammar, but you know what I mean. This is Mrs. Terhune, and she's going to help. It will be very nice and unpretentious, and—do you mind three in a hansom?"

The girl shook back the dark-green skirt of her travelling dress and smiled detached acquiescence. Lady Elton smuggled her cheque-book into some recess of her ample person, and then turned to her future niece.

"I think, dear," she said, rather fussily, "it would be a good thing if you got into the hansom now while I give a few directions about the little breakfast—just a chicken and a splash of salad, and a little Heinseck."

She rang the bell as she spoke, and Miss Smith followed the sulky waiter downstairs.

"You must keep it, up, Clara," said Lady Elton when they were left alone.

"Oh, I'll do as well as I can, but the verger or somebody is sure to say, 'My Lord,' and spoil everything."

"Not a bit of it. Ashton has provided for that kind of contingency. He told her at the very beginning of the idyll—they will have known each other exactly a month the day after to-morrow—that his first Christian name was 'Lord,' and that it led to innumerable mistakes on the part of well-meaning, friendly strangers. Ah, here we are at that dreadful little sitting-room. We mustn't keep her waiting in the hansom."

The service passed off easily, and it was evident to the two witnesses, at least, that the bride was too wrapt in her own inner dream to be fully conscious that she was taking part in any idyll at all. The signatures were duly affixed, and Lord and Lady Ashton Thorpe drove back to the little hotel, followed some fifteen minutes later by Lady Elton and Mrs. Terhune.

"I wonder how she'll take it?" muttered the bridegroom's aunt to her companion as they hurried up the narrow staircase.

"She'll be excited when she hears!" said Mrs. Terhune as they entered the sitting-room in which the wedding breakfast was waiting.

Lady Elton sat down heavily at a side table, and drew out her cheque-book.

"I'm just going to write the figures, Clara, and sign my name. I'll fill in the rest afterwards."

"Why?" enquired the second witness. "Well, Clara, you see, in a way, I've been rather playing with these young people. It's my idyll, and I'm going to pay for my amusement. If she's only idyllic, a simple little person, gaspingly thankful, anything more than my little present to her would be so overwhelming as to be rather vulgar. But if she carries it off with an air, if she shows spirit—you understand me, Clara—then I'll add another nought! Come along, you shall be the judge."

When Lady Elton opened the door of the hotel drawing-room Lord Ashton Thorpe was staring into the empty fire-place, with both elbows on the blackened mantelpiece. The bride was sitting on a chair near the window, her face buried in her hands.

"She's broken down!" muttered Mrs. Terhune. "Those tears may save you a good many thousand pounds"

"Wait a bit," said Lady Elton, as she closed the door.

"Oh, Mrs. Elton," exclaimed Lady Ashton Thorpe, as she rose to her feet, "he's told me everything. It's too dreadful. I thought that he might have been one day among the lifegivers. I thought that he might have been with Corot, with Constable, with Turner, with Millet—and he's just—a—British—peer! It's too horrible for me to grasp it all at once."

"I think, dear Lady Elton," said Mrs. Terhune, "that you'll have to add another nought."—T. P's. Weekly.

An old lady passed away at Carlsbad, where she had gone for her health. Her nearest relation, a nephew, ordered her body to be sent home for burial—as was her last wish—in the quiet little country churchyard. His surprise can be imagined when on the arrival of the coffin he opened it for a last look at the remains and found, instead of the placid features of his Aunt Mary, the majestic form of an English General in full regimentals, whom he remembered had chanced to die at the same time and place as his aunt. At once he cabled to the General's heirs, explaining the situation and requesting instructions. They came back as follows: "Give the General quiet funeral. Aunt Mary interred to-day with full military honours, six brass bands, saluting guns."

A well-known General, in reviewing a corps of cavalry, suddenly stopped before a splendid-looking fellow, and asked, abruptly: "Which is the best horse in the regiment, my man?" "Number forty, sir." "What makes you think that he is the best horse?" "He walks, trots and gallops well, is a good leaper, has no vice, no blemish, carries his head well, is in his prime." "And who is the best soldier in the regiment?" "Tom Bodgers, sir." "Why?" "Because he is an honourable man, is obedient, tidy, takes good care of his equipment and his horse, and does his duty well." "And who is the rider of the best horse?" "Tom Bodgers, sir." "And who is Tom Bodgers" "I am, sir." The General could not help laughing, but he gave a sovereign to his informant.

Nini: "Jean told me last evening I was the prettiest girl he had ever seen."

Fifi: "Oh, that's nothing! He said the same to me last year."

Nini: "I know that; but his taste may have improved since then, you know."

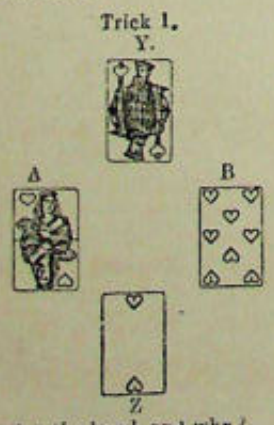
Solution of Problem No. 74.

A has led from ace, queen, knave, etc., in diamonds, and the position of the 10 is uncertain; so if the lead comes from A, Z may make a second trick in the suit. It is desirable to let A in rather than B, therefore, but if Z leads a small heart to Y's queen, with a view to finessing against B in spades, he runs a great risk; for if B wins with the ace, A B will make all their diamonds before Y's spades are established, It is better to establish spades once, if they can be established, and Z should accordingly lead the knave and let it go round even if A covers. If B gets in he will return his partner's lead in preference to opening an unknown suit, so there is little danger of being led through in clubs. When Z gets in again he will, of course, lead ace of spades, and then the 4 to Y's king. As A cannot place the ace on the first round it is just possible that he will pass the knave with queen and two others.

Problem No. 75.



Score: A B, 24; Y Z, 18. Z deals, and leaves it to Y. who declares no-trumps. Y's and Z's hands are as follows:—

Y's Hand (Dummy).—Hearts, ace, king; diamonds, king, 10, 9, 2; clubs, knave, 8, 3; spades, queen, 10, 5, 4.

Z's Hand (Dealer).—Hearts, 5, 4, 3, 2; diamonds, queen, 6; clubs, ace, 10, 9, 5, 4; spades, 3, 2.

MOTOR MEMS FROM HOME.

ORIGINAL AND OTHERWISE.

LONDON, Friday, 16th October 1908.

NOTWITHSTANDING fine weather and an attractive programme, the attendance was extremely poor on Saturday, the 3rd instant, at the final Brooklands meeting for this season at Weybridge. This was a great disappointment to those who wish well to the Brooklands Automobile Racing Club.

There were many well-known motorists present who informally discussed the why and wherefore of this lack of interest taken by the public. General opinion expressed itself in the statement that the only hope to attract the crowd was to shorten the track by omitting that portion of it behind the stands, so that the cars continually passed in front of the enclosures. This would entail a considerable expenditure, but it would bring the spectators and the cars nearer to each other while the latter are racing.

As regards the day's racing, it was made noteworthy by the entire absence of both Napier and Métallurgique cars competing, and by the succession of victories gained by the German Mercédés. In fact, although the first heat of the All-comers' Handicap was won by a M. A. B. car, every first prize at the meeting was won by Mercédés cars. Two new cars made their debut on Saturday. One was a little £100 car of five h.-p. named the Varsity, with a Peugeot engine; the other was the 1909 model 18 h.-p. Straker-Squire. This showed a speed of over sixty miles an hour, and finished second in the final of the All-comers' Handicap.

Racing started punctually at 3 P.M. with the October Sweepstakes, which was won easily by Mr. W. Jochem's 48'6 h.-p. Mercédés though Mr. H. G. Nalder made a stern chase for the 7½ miles, but could never overhaul the Mercédés, which led from the start.

A little excitement prevailed in the first heat of the All-comers' Handicap, as the acting stewards of the meeting, Colonel H. C. L. Holden, Captain Dyke-Acland, and Mr. J. W. Orde would not let Mr. C. E. Whittaker drive in the race, as he was not on the registered list of competitors, nor had he had any practice on the track previously. The result was that though his car, Imperia Iona, should have run in this heat, it was allowed to run in the second heat to give him time to find another driver. This he succeeded in doing, and Mr. Graham-White steered the car in the second heat.

Seven cars therefore competed in the first heat of the All-comers', with Resta driving Mr. F. R. Fry's 59'6 h.-p. Mercédés (scratch), and Mr. R. Lascellas's 5 h.-p. Varsity the limit-marker. When Resta started the Varsity had nearly completed a lap, while the others, except Mr. J. Bouch-Hissey's Aster Queenie, held their order as regards handicap. The latter was going badly, so that Resta overtook him on the second lap after passing the fork. Mr. H. P. Martin gained the lead on the Cobham side, and though Resta overhauled his field rapidly, Martin held his advantage to the winning-post. Resta finished second, Robson, on Mr. Clement Hobson's Nagant-Hobson, third, and the Honble. L. Bruce (De Dietrich) fourth; these four qualifying for the final.

In the second heat, in which nine cars run, Mr. C. Hobson, on his 48'6 h.-p. Brasier, was scratch. He started badly, and broke a valve so had to retire at the first circuit. This was the best race of the day, as, though Mr. W. Jochem on his Mercédés got the lead as the cars entered the straight and won by 100 yards, the next four cars were all together, and changing their order up the straight itself. Twenty yards covered the second, Mr. O. S. Thomson (Austin), Mr. R. Fedden (Straker-Squire) third, Mr. L. Artex (Beeston Humber) fourth, and Mr. Nalder (Germain) fifth. Graham-White finished sixth, but appeared to be going badly.

For the final of the All-comers, the Straker-Squire held the lead until entering the straight, when the Mercédés overtook her, and won by 250 yards. The Straker-Squire finished second, twenty yards ahead of the Austin. This was the speediest race of the day, the winning Mercédés averaging seventy miles an hour from the standing start over the five and three-quarter miles.

Mr. A. V. Ebbiewhite, the starter, had no fewer than twenty-six competitors to despatch for the motor-cycle handicap, all the entrants coming to the post with the exception of Mr. F. H. Arnott (10sec.) and Mr. R. M. Brice (1min. 50sec). All the riders were collected on the hill at the finishing end of the straight, so as to facilitate the starting-up of their machines. No help in starting was allowed, so each competitor actually began the race on foot, running down the hill a few yards before leaping on his machine as the engine got going. An excellent race ensued, though Mr. G. Gibson and Mr. O. Clark soon established a lead, and were never overtaken, but the back-markers made great efforts to overtake the field. These two finished first and second, with Mr. R. J. Bell third, not far behind. The rest of the competitors finished in bunches of four and five, and gave the spectators a series of close finishes up the straight.

In the Autumn Handicap, for private competitors, which concluded the day's programme, the race developed into a duel between Mr. A. Van Hoboken and Mr. C. A. Bird, both driving different-powered Mercédés. The former was never overtaken, and won rather easily, Mr. Bird finishing some 200 yards behind the winner, and that distance ahead of Mr. Thompson.

For some years we have been promised a light car which should fulfil all the requirements of, say, a country doctor, and which should not cost more than 100 guineas, but alas! our hopes have not been realised up to the present. There are so many men now riding motor bicycles or tri-cars who would be only too ready to buy a light car if they could get one at a moderate figure. After all, a good modern tri-car, with two speed gear and sufficient power for all contingencies, costs at least £80, whilst a motor-bike and side car cost very little less. Both these types, however, have several disadvantages; for instance, they afford no protection in wet weather. Again, their comfort is not all that could be desired, whilst, in the case of the tri-car, there is very little sociability. As regards upkeep there is really not so much to choose as one would think. A good voiturette is very light on tyres, consumes very little petrol, and is an infinitely more satisfactory and comfortable vehicle, than the best tri-car or motor-bike made.

LOOKING back is not always a pleasant occupation, but those of us who were associated with the self-propelled vehicle in the early days of the industry, find a pleasure in recalling the past, and in comparing the old creeping stagers with the present-day fliers. And why decry the motor race? Why say in effect that motor manufacturers are insane? Is it not due to their efforts and to the experience they have gained as a result of racing contests that we owe the present high standard of safe and luxurious touring car?

Let it be understood that from a sporting point of view, reckless driving on the highways is condemned by all true motorists" and let it also be borne in mind that the responsible motorist, who loves his car, just as keenly as the horseman loves his favourite hunter, is equally concerned with the non-motorist in safetyguarding the rights of the roads. Bearing these facts in mind, one is better able to judge the value of racing test—the success of which has produced by gradual stages the touring car as we know it to-day. The control of the car is simple and effective. Its flexibility in the thickest of London traffic is marvellous, and this in itself is sufficient justification for the part English manufacturers have played in speed contests. Racing events have produced a safe and exceedingly satisfactory touring car, but they have done more than this. Speed has undoubtedly been added, but the evolution of the racing car has been the evolution of increased safety.

A contemporary raises the much discussed theme of petrol supply, and anyone who has interested himself in the question of its production, the means whereby it enters this country and the conditions under which it is distributed will know the very great part which this substance plays in determining the welfare or otherwise of the automobile industry. The price of petrol, probably more than that of any other material on the market, is independent of conditions of supply and demand, and is generally inflated to an extortionate degree. About three years ago petrol could be bought at 6d. per gallon—a year later the price had been put up to 1s. 4d., now it rests about 1s. per gallon. The petrol is distilled by a very lengthy and somewhat costly process from certain petroleums, the actual spirit we use over here being derived chiefly from Sumatra, whence it is conveyed and stored in special tanks at Thames Haven.

A certain scientist whose accomplishments have already given him very full claims to public recognitions, approached our contemporary recently and asked them to express an opinion upon a process he had discovered, whereby he is able practically to transform paraffin oil to petrol by a simple system of precipitation. They are at present engaged in closely investigating the claims made from the process, but, as is only reasonable, they observe a certain amount of secrecy as to the experiments which they are undertaking. At the time, however, they were asked to provide a quantity of paraffin oil, and this was purchased from a local oilshop in the neighbourhood of their offices. A hydrometer denoted that the specific gravity of the liquid was ·780. While the paraffin, to the volume of about a quart, was upon the table, a very small amount of a heavy liquid, in the proportion of about a teaspoonful to a pint off the paraffin, was poured into the paraffin, and at once a reaction occurred.

Certain peculiar things happened, which I am not at liberty to disclose. The bottle contained what appeared to be the same amount of paraffin as before, but under test was discovered to contain a far lighter liquid, which on the hydrometer was found to have a specific gravity of ·755. This liquid resembled the heavy spirit used in motor 'buses, had a less smoky flame than paraffin, and ignited more easily.

One of the most extraordinary substitutes for petrol as a fuel for automobiles must be considered carbon dioxide. An American, one John Carroll, of Philadelphia, is credited with the exploiting of the new fuel, and some idea of the revolutionary character of it may be gathered when it is stated that the engine of his car is 4½ inches high by 10½ inches wide, by 13½ inches long there being three cylinders of but 2 inches bore by 2 inches stroke. Yet the inventor claims that this diminutive engine will give off 100 h. p. upon the brake. The engine is provided with two pistons for each cylinder, the gas enters from below into the space between the pistons and the cylinders, and as the pistons move outwards they operate an overhead crankshaft by means of suitable levers. At present only an experimental carbon dioxide car is upon the road. The inventor claims that his engine cannot burn out or freeze, and that there is no tendency to heat. The cost of producing these gas cars, he states, is less than half that of building petrol cars, and the cost of upkeep is very low. Lubrication, owing to absence of heating, is shorn off its usual difficulties. Apart from all considerations as to whether the system is at all practical, the invention is certainly interesting, the more especially when it is known that a firm in this country is making strenuous endeavours to build a car on somewhat similar lines, using not carbon dioxide, but another gas in highly condensed form as fuel.

When motor contests were first organised, the palm of victory and the impetus to the trade were claimed by Continental manufacturers. Things have altered considerably since the first Tourist Trophy race in Manxland, and especially is this to be noticed in the manufacture of tyres. Tyres are expensive things to make and to buy. The motorist finds that tyres alone cost him anything from 1d. a mile upwards, and naturally he views the efforts of manufacturers to increase their reliability and durability with much interest. For the third year in succession, the all-British Dunlop has carried to victory the winner of the Tourist Trophy. Watson, on his winning Hutton, shod with the British Dunlop, had no tyre troubles, and the cars occupying second and third places were also fitted with the same make of tyre.

CHUKKUR.

Curious that there should almost invariably be five minutes' difference between a publican's watch and his clock. He goes by the one, and his customers have to go by the other.

The little girl admired her mother's dress, stroking it softly. "Isn't it pretty" said her mother. "It is silk. Do you know what silk is made from?"

"No, mamma.

"It comes from a little, insignificant worm."

"Do you mean father, mamma?"

The fashionable artist was painting the portrait of a none the less fashionable lady, and he noticed during the sittings she unceasingly screwed up her mouth to make it as small as possible.

"Don't worry about trifles," said the painter at last, out of patience. "I can leave your lips out altogether, if you wish it."

At the beginning of the term a Captain of Boats at an Oxford College was making his proselytising tour among the Freshmen, when he came on a youthful-looking man, who looked as if he might be induced to go through the thing. He button-holed him and urged him eloquently to take up rowing. "By the way," he added, "you are a Fresher, aren't you?" "Well, no," said the other; "as a matter of fact, I'm the latest thing in Dons."

As the brisk philanthropist thrust her fare into the cab driver's hand she saw that he was wet and cold after the half-hour of pouring rain. "Do you ever take anything when you get soaked through?" she asked.

"Yes ma'am," said the cabman, with humility. "I generally do."

"Wait here in the vestibule," commanded the philanthropist. She inserted her house key in the lock, opened the door, and vanished, to re-appear a moment later.

"Here," she said putting a small envelope in the man's outstretched hand. "These are two-grain quinine pills; you take two of them now and two more in half an hour."

The young man and the girl were standing outside the front door having a final chat after his evening call. He was leaning against the doorpost, talking in low tones. Presently the young lady looked around to discover her father in the doorway, clad in a dressing gown.

"Why, father, what in the world is the matter" she inquired.

"John," said the father, addressing himself to the young man, "you know I have never complained about your staying late, and I'm not going to complain of that now; but for goodness' sake stop leaning against the bell push and let the rest of the family get some sleep."

AN OLD HUNTING CLUB.

"A CLUB of good fellows we meet once a year,
When the leaves of the forest are yellow and sear;
By the motto that shines on each glass, it is shown,
We pledge in our cups the deserving alone."

So sang the late Mr. Egerton Warburton, the Cheshire hunting poet, of the old established Tarporley Hunt Club, with which several generations of the leading county families of Cheshire have been associated. This month (November) the walls of the Swan Hotel, Tarporley, the rendezvous of the Hunt, have again re-echoed to the voices of its members on the occasion of the annual gathering, which is the prelude to the hunting season proper in Cheshire. The history of the Club forms an engrossing story. The Tarporley Hunt was founded in the year 1762, when hare hunting was the sport for which the members assembled. But this sport was afterwards superseded by fox-hunting. Those who kept harriers brought out their packs in turn. Societies such as the Cycle in Wales had in the early part of the eighteenth century been favourite meeting places for the Jacobite gentry; but whatever were the politics of the founders of the Tarporley Club, it was evidently the love of hunting alone that brought them together; and from that day to this, difference of political opinion has never been known to interfere with the election of the members, or to disturb the harmony of the Club. Modern sportsmen will be interested in the original rules of the Club, which are amusingly quaint. The members agreed to meet at Tarporley twice annually, and it was stipulated that any member who absented himself must pay the sum of one guinea unless his excuse was allowed of by the sitting members. It was resolved that the uniform of the Club should be a blue frock, with plain yellow metalled buttons, scarlet velvet cape, and double-breasted scarlet flannel waistcoat, the coat sleeve to be cut and turned up one button. The members seem to have given much attention to sartorial matters, for in the following year they decided that the metal buttons should be changed for basket mohair ones, and it was provided that if any member did not appear in the strict uniform of the hunt he should be fined one guinea for every such offence. The saddle cloth, it was further ruled, was to be bound singly with blue, and the front of the bridle "lapt" with scarlet. In 1770, the question of uniform again cropped up, and the following changes were made:—The coat to be red unbound with a small frock sleeve, the latter without buttons, the cape to be of green velvet, the waistcoat to match in colour, and the red saddle cloth to be bound with green instead of blue. Adherence to these rules was enforced strictly. In 1766, we read, Mr. Crewe was fined for having his bridle "lapt" with red and blue; Mr. John Barry was fined for not having taken the binding off the button holes of his waistcoat; Mr. Whitworth was fined for having his saddle cloth bound with purple, and Lord Grosvenor was penalised for riding to cover with a white saddle cloth, and likewise for having his bridle "lapt" with white. His Lordship apparently was careless in these matters for two years later the following entry appears:—"Lord Grosvenor appearing two days out of uniform, both coat and waistcoat, pays for each day two guineas, and one guinea, for absenting himself one night without leave." The regulations for liquid refreshments were curious. In 1762 it was resolved:—"Three collar bumpers to be drank after dinner, and the same after supper; after they are drank every member may do as he pleases in regard to drinking."

"A CLUB of good fellows we meet once a year,

So sang the late Mr. Egerton Warburton, the Cheshire hunting poet, of the old established Tarporley Hunt Club, with which several generations of the leading county families of Cheshire have been associated. This month (November) the walls of the Swan Hotel, Tarporley, the rendezvous of the Hunt, have again re-echoed to the voices of its members on the occasion of the annual gathering, which is the prelude to the hunting season proper in Cheshire. The history of the Club forms an engrossing story. The Tarporley Hunt was founded in the year 1762, when hare hunting was the sport for which the members assembled. It was resolved that the uniform of the Club should be a blue frock, with plain yellow metalled buttons, scarlet velvet cape, and double-breasted scarlet flannel waistcoat, the coat sleeve to be cut and turned up one button. The members seem to have given much attention to sartorial matters, for in the following year they decided that the metal buttons should be changed for basket mohair ones, and it was provided that if any member did not appear in the strict uniform of the hunt he should be fined one guinea for every such offence. The saddle cloth, it was further ruled, was to be bound singly with blue, and the front of the bridle "lapt" with scarlet. Adherence to these rules was enforced strictly. In 1766, we read, Mr. Crewe was fined for having his bridle "lapt" with red and blue; Mr. John Barry was fined for not having taken the binding off the button holes of his waistcoat; Mr. Whitworth was fined for having his saddle cloth bound with purple, and Lord Grosvenor was penalised for riding to cover with a white saddle cloth, and likewise for having his bridle "lapt" with white. His Lordship apparently was careless in these matters for two years later the following entry appears:—"Lord Grosvenor appearing two days out of uniform, both coat and waistcoat, pays for each day two guineas, and one guinea, for absenting himself one night without leave." The regulations for liquid refreshments were curious. In 1762 it was resolved:—"Three collar bumpers to be drank after dinner, and the same after supper; after they are drank every member may do as he pleases in regard to drinking."

Seven years later this rule was amended as follows :—"Instead of three collar glasses only one shall be drank after dinner, except a fox is killed above ground, and then after the Lady Patroness, another collar glass shall be drank to Fox-hunting." The members, we gather, were not unanimous as to restrictions on gaming. In 1783 a resolution was carried to the effect that no cards or dice be allowed after the first toast after supper, each member offending against this rule to pay two dozen of claret. This regulation was carried, however, by a majority of only four, the President being counted as two. In the following year Mr. T. Brooke, it is recorded, contravened the rules of the Club by making a wager in the dining room of one guinea to half a crown with Sir Peter Warburton, and he was ordered to forfeit the wager. Marriages enabled the members to replenish their hunting wardrobes. One of the earliest rules of the Hunt was in these terms :—"If any member of this Society should marry, he is to present the Hunt with a pair of stiff-topped well stitched buckskin breeches each." Two years later it was provided that a member on entering the bonds of matrimony, instead of supplying breeches for every member should pay into the hands of the Secretary for the use of each member, one guinea to be spent in leather breeches. The subject of second marriages was considered in 1766 with the result that it was agreed that any member who took unto himself a wife a second time should give two pairs of leather breeches to every other member. Married men who were elected to the Hunt were required to pay £10 on admission by way of stock-purse, but bachelors were let off with six guineas. The following extracts are interesting :—"1782. November. Offley Crewe and Sir P. Warburton were found guilty of a most heinous offence in having crossed a hare's scut with a fox's brush, and fined one gallon of claret each a very light fine for such an offence." "1765, 4th November. Mr. John Barry having sent the foxhounds to a different place to what was ordered, and not meeting them himself at that place, was sent to Coventry, but returned upon giving six bottles of claret to the Hunt." From these quotations it will be seen that the records of the Tarporley Hunt Club form an interesting link with foxhunting in the days of our forefathers. The best traditions of the Hunt were never maintained more worthily than at the present time. The Hunt entertains the farmers lavishly at its annual steeplechase meeting, and by offering liberal prizes and in other directions does a most useful work in encouraging the breeding of horses in Cheshire. Small wonder that the famous green collar of the Tarporley Hunt is a passport to the hearts of Cheshire farmers.

Sporting & Athletic Notes.

We publish elsewhere in full the first entries for the Maiden Horse Plate, Calcutta Races four days and Tollygunge Steeplechases. The entries on the flat show a considerable improvement over former years but the jump events, both at Tollygunge and Calcutta, exhibit a most lamentable falling off. The chief interest as usual centres in the Cup and the question everyone is asking is "What will beat Fitzgrafton?"

It is interesting to note that the numbers of English and Australian horses engaged are exactly equal—12 of each, with one country-bred. The new comers as regards this event among the Australians are Bantock, Kaffirpan, Currandooley, Ebullition, Melbourne, Tangaroa, Uro, Wandin, and Absentee, and among the English Black Duke, Devereux, Retort, Galloping Girl, Auber, Black Wolf, Hunting Horn, Pelargonium and Mother Goose.

Currandooley is probably about the best of those among the Australians and his win in the April Handicap of the V. R. C. Meeting was a very good performance, 1¼ miles, in 2mins. 9¼secs., carrying 9st. 5lb. On the same day Absentee won over that distance at Rosehill in 2mins. 9secs. but carrying only 8st. 10lb. Currandooley was galloped too soon after landing and showed pretty poor form but he was thrown out as soon as the mistake was discovered and is now reported to be doing well. Another real good one among the new walers is Tangaroa who won a £280 handicap at the A. J. C. Meeting, 11 furlongs, in 2mins. 24½secs., carrying 8st. 11lb. He is, however, only a "pis-aller" in the race as Mr. Galstaun's first string is Misty Morn, who has come on wonderfully and on whom his owner builds very high hopes.

Among the English horses Mr. Apcar's new one, Auber, has, of course, the best performances to his credit but all over short distances and Retort and Devereux are likely to make a better show in the Cup if they run.

Watson had most of Mr. Apcar's string on slow work on Monday. Fitzgrafton went twice round the course, trot and canter. He is looking a bit lighter than he did this time last year and could do with a bit more condition preparatory to the severe training he must go through. Ballark is big and very full of himself and Seclusion and Dea are both also looking very well.

Wishart has arrived with a big string of 24 and is stabled up at 36, Old Ballygunge Circular Road where Mr. Rowan kept his lot last year. He has several jumpers including Mr. Holmes' new one, Mystic Circle and Betrayer. The big chestnut has apparently not yet struck his Australian form over fences and the spur marks in his sides are eloquent testimony to the difficulty experienced in schooling him, and he will have to improve a lot to be of any use.

Norton arrives this week with a big string of horses including Mr. Gutschke's Stockman who is reported a lot better than last season and it is to be hoped that he will strike form this year as it is time this sporting owner had a bit of luck. We hear that he has purchased a new one in England who will arrive shortly preceding his owner by a week or two but details are not yet to hand.

There was another very pleasant little meeting at Tollygunge on Saturday when a card of six races was successfully gone through. Mr. Evers, whose star is still in the ascendant, again scored the hat trick with Ungava, Meprise and Lollipop, but Mr. Barrow did not have the best of luck getting two seconds and a third. The fielders must have had a very enjoyable time as Ungava was the only favourite to get there and some very "hot things" came out stone cold in the finishes. There were only three started in the hurdle race and only one of them was in it as Ungava, the favourite, galloped right away from them and beat Dynamite with even greater ease than the previous week.

They made Peter favourite for the Ballygunge Bowl probably because he won a race at Tollygunge last summer as there was nothing else much to warrant it, and Moachin had him beaten at any part of the race, though coming up very wide on the outside, he only finished a short head in front. St. Victor once more ran badly as though he went off with a lead he allowed himself to be collared pretty quickly and ended up a pretty poor third. That Moachin started at 8 to 1 is evidence of the lack of perspicacity on the part of the public, as bar the untrustworthy St. Victor he was a long way the best and fittest looking horse of the lot and the owner made no secret that he was bound to run well.

Mr. Galstaun's selected was the public fancy for the Albert Stakes and both were well backed at 2 to 1 though the stable preferred Primrose. However they were both out of it as after a good deal of bumping about coming into the straight Meprise got the best of the deal and came in an easy winner from Lady Mana.

The Tum-Tum Stakes was supposed to be a good thing for Grisette but she twisted a shoe and couldn't gallop and a very handsome black mare, The Gem, galloped in a very easy winner by a length and a half.

Blix was favourite for the All Comers' Cup but 11st. 3lb. was too much for the small mare and Lollipop with 3st. less to carry got right away from them all at the flag fall and though Leading Lady and Blix both challenged him in the straight, he kept going and beat Leading Lady by a length.

The new starting gate was brought into requisition for the Hopeful Stakes and though it worked well it considerably disconcerted the favourite, Schoolboy, who backed away as it went up. However it probably did not affect the result at all as the winner, Maisie, was hardly ever out of a canter and won pulling up by six lengths.

We have to thank the compiler for a copy of the Indian Racing Record. This excellent guide to racing in India was first published in 1901 but was not continued during the intervening years, and its reappearance will be welcomed by punters and all connected with the Indian Turf. It is well arranged, the information it contains is reliable, clear and concise, while reference is easy—the Indian performances during 1907-08 of any horse or pony being presented at a glance. Altogether the volume is a useful adjunct to the sportsman's library, while its low price puts it within the reach of all classes.

In our Racing columns to-day we give full details of the performances of some of the horses so far entered for the Viceroy's Cup. The rest will be given next week.

Racing men in India will remember Dalkeith, the property of Mr. Farquharson of Ceylon. The old black has done no good in England, so his astute owner has decided to give him a chance of retrieving his lost laurels over sticks this winter. He may do fairly well at the game ; it is evident he has lost all taste for racing on the flat.

"The Horse in History," written by Mr. Basil Tozer and published by Messrs. Methuen, should appeal to all who take interest in equine matters. It is a charming idea to select a few of the famous horses in the history of mankind, and tell us about them in one compact volume, with which the chief fault to be found is that its excellently selected illustrations are not more numerous. in error in considering that either Flying Childers or Eclipse had real speed, as we know it nowadays. Since accurate time-keeping has been established on the Turf the pace at which the classic races have been run has continuously improved. Most of the present records have been made since 1900. The documentary evidence that Eclipse was never timed has been published lately in a monograph on that remarkable sire. He certainly never ran a mile in one minute, and he probably never ran it in two, and he would have been beaten out of sight by Caiman at Lingfield Park, when that speedy performer did the mile in 1min. 33secs. If it is said that his chief excellence was over a distance, will Mr. Tozer maintain that he could ever have done the Beacon Course under ten minutes. If not, what about the 9 minutes 54 seconds in which Ascetic's Silver won the Grand National in 1906, four miles 856 yards with thirty fences?

In his opinion that the end of the horse's reign is in sight, Mr. Tozer is probably more correct than most of his critics have cared to admit. The horse now is much like the sailing ship of the fifties, and for much the same reason. We can never do without him for pleasure or for sport. But he has been hopelessly beaten as a prosaic means of speedy and trustworthy locomotion. Mr. Tozer's pages are full of delightful stories of the horses of all ages, from the dawn of history down to the charger of Napoleon. If he would go a little further and take a material interest in the subject he has adorned so cleverly with his pen, he might collect the various skeletons and skins (which are authentic) of famous animals still preserved in England and other countries. The search is a fascinating one, and the reward no less picturesque. He might continue it by collecting those statues of well-known horses which are also known to have been careful portraits There is, for instance, the Duke of Wellington's horse, first modelled from Emilius. Boehm's magnificent statue of King Tom is at Mentmore. King Charles' horse in Whitehall is also a portrait. There is much of this work to be done and Mr. Tozer is evidently the man to do it.

We would draw the attention of our readers to the advertisement of the Calcutta Turf Club appearing further on, announcing extra races at the Tollygunge Steeplechases in January.

The Secunderabad Junior Polo Tournament ended on the 30th ultimo in a win for the 13th Hussars "A" team who beat the Royal Fusiliers by 6 goals to 3. Details further on.

The Calcutta Kennel Club hope to hold a Championship Show under English Kennel Club rules about the end of January. At present the difficulty seems to be to find an energetic sportsman to be Secretary of the show with sufficient leisure to undertake the detail and correspondence work. Should such a one be forthcoming there is no reason why a good show should not be run.

The Cawnpore Brush Company have sent us a copy of their interesting catalogue wherein every possible class of brush appears to be listed. Important extensions to the company's works, including the introduction of electric drives, have enabled them to enlarge their output and the catalogue under review indicates progress both in style and comprehensiveness. English experts supervise the manufacture of the brushes and the company maintains that high reputation they have established for the quality of their work.

A general Meeting of the clubs affiliated to the Bengal Hockey Association was held in the Y.M.C.A. Hall on Wednesday evening, Mr. E. T. Studd (C.F.C.) presiding. Amongst those present were:—Captain R. C. R. Hill, Lieutenant R. Bocquet, Mr. McGee, Mr. Rosser, Mr. Remfry and others. The meeting confirmed the regulations of the Association drafted by the Provisional Committee and subsequently approved at a general meeting. Captain Hill's proposal for confirming the rules was seconded by Mr. Rosser and carried nem con. It was then resolved to hold the next general meeting on Monday, the 16th instant, at 6-30 P.M., at the same place, for the election of Council for the next Hockey season.

Oxygen in sport has been the subject of some controversy at Home. Three weeks ago we published the opinions of various well known sportsmen, the majority of whom are against the practice. With regard to oxygen being given to horses opinions are again divergent, many holding that it is a species of doping. An interesting letter appears in our correspondence columns to-day and we invite comment from those of our readers interested in the subject.

We congratulate Messrs. Hall and Anderson, the leading store in Calcutta, on their catalogue for 1909. In its 300 pages will be found much to interest young and old of both sexes and all classes, and the list will be especially appreciated by residents in the mofussil who have not the opportunity of visiting the well-known premises in Chowringhee. Practically everything one may wish for can be provided and the goods in the 22 separate departments include the very latest and most up-to-date specialities. The catalogue is well turned out and the excellent illustrations are one of its big features.

Purchasing through the post becomes more in favour year by year. Americans many years ago recognised the advantage to be derived from this method of trading, but we are only just beginning to realise the enormous savings that are to be gained by dealing direct through the post with the great advertising firms who supply goods to the public at immense reductions from ordinary store prices.

This conviction was forced upon us on perusing the new catalogues received this mail from Mr. Edward O'Brien, Ltd., of Coventry, England, who is everywhere recognised to be the World's Largest Cycle Dealer.

Included among the lists that were sent to us was a Testimonial Booklet containing over 2,000 unsolicited letters of praise from people who have purchased bicycles from Mr. O'Brien by correspondence through the post. We notice that any high grade make of cycle can be obtained from Mr. O'Brien at pounds below the usual catalogue prices and he guarantees every machine to be brand new and supplied to makers' standard specification. Doubtless many of our readers are contemplating the purchase of a cycle this season, and we therefore would strongly advise them to write to Mr. O'Brien for full particulars and prices. "Coventry," England, we notice, is sufficient address.

Mr. Lionel Jacob's wire-haired foxterrier Jim the Penman, with his recent challenge win at Simla, is now a full-blown Champion, having won the three necessary certificates under three different judges to qualify for the title. Champion Jim is still a young dog not two years old, and his show career has been remarkably successful as he has accounted for three championships and some twenty-eight first prizes and specials at five shows under such good judges as Major Williamson, Dr. Martin, Mr. Bush, Major Impey and Mr. N. White. He is a quality terrier and therefore of the lasting sort, and was in better form at the last Simla Show than he had ever been previously exhibited. He was inclined to be a trifle two much on racing lines in his puppyhood, but has how filled out with maturity into a powerfully built little terrier who will always trouble the best. We believe it was a railway porter who classed turtles as "hinsects," but the inclusion of snails under the head of game seems still more far-fetched Yet this has been done in France by the Council of the Cote d'Or, which, anxious to preserve the choicest of all snails, namely, the Burgundian, has placed the escargot in the schedule of "game with horns that under pain of fine, no huntsman is to shoot, ensnare, or capture in traps" from 15th April to 15th June.

The influence of a tropical climate on Europeans is a question which, alas, obtrudes itself on our notice in this country with melancholy persistence. Most Anglo-Indians subscribe to the creed that we do not live in India—we exist—and more or less uncomfortably at that. There is a good deal of truth in such statements, usually made by the man with an uncomfortable feeling under his right waistcoat pocket, an irritable temper, a set of jumpy nerves and the other signs by which men profess to tell the Anglo-Indian at sight. There be some who spend considerably over a quarter of a century in India (and in the plains, not forgetting) who return Home bearing such slight indication of the ravages of the climate that they are almost regarded as frauds. They have not the yellow skin, the tender spot below the right ribs, and the general "dickey" symptoms popularly associated with the returned exile from the Shiny East. These are they who have adopted the requisite precautions, who have not eaten and drunken to excess, who have carefully selected their foods and have religiously stuck to exercise in some shape or form. They are the shining exceptions who prove the rule. Their number can be multiplied indefinitely, and to assist in such a desirable direction "Sanatogen" now appears on the scene and makes claims (vide advertisement further on) which are abundantly supported by high medical testimony and lengthy experience. We commend the advertisement to all whom it may concern; and, if the subject interests any of our readers, we suggest application to Messrs. Smith, Stanistreet and Company of Calcutta for a copy of "How to keep well in India," written by a doctor of many years' practice in this country. The firm stocks this wonderful preparation, "Sanatogen!" and answers all enquiries regarding it. Verb. sap.

On Saturday last, at St. Paul's Cathedral, Calcutta, Mr. Bruce Sinclair, the well-known local golfer, was married to Miss Elizabeth Gilmour Johnson Russell, of Moffat, N.B. We join their many friends in tendering the happy couple our hearty felicitations.

An exemplary punishment has been awarded to the two scoundrels—Winborn and Canham—who, by threats to murder Mr. J. B. Joel, attempted to extort money from Mrs. Joel. At the Old Bailey on the 22nd October, they were sentenced to five and three years' penal servitude.

The Grand Trunk Road between Delhi and Calcutta never fails to rouse the motorist or cyclist, or indeed any one who travels even a few hundred miles over it, to enthusiasm. Messrs. Stevens, Mitchell, Lenz, Burke, Foster Fraser, Dr. and Mrs. Workmen and other well-known pioneer cyclists have sung its praises in the records of their wanderings awheel. Motorists in recent years have, of course, joined in the chorus, the latest appreciation emanating from Mr. Robert L. Jefferson, F.R.G.S., who, in the course of a chatty article in a London paper to hand by this mail, says.—"The motor-car has given a zest to life in our great Indian Empire. Everybody who can afford it buys a car. Everybody who cannot afford it sighs for the time to come when the delights of automobilism will not be denied. The native princes are "whole hoggers" in the sport, and buy their cars not in mere ones or twos, but by the dozen at a time.

And the explanation is simple. India is an ideal country for motoring. The roads are splendid, the scenery glorious, and in the non-monsoon season the climate is just right for motoring enjoyment. In Bombay, Calcutta, and Madras, the moneyed population has seized upon the new locomotion with avidity, and where, less than five years ago, a motor-car was a novelty hundreds of cars are now careering about the streets.

Three powerful unions for the promotion and protection of motoring interests have their headquarters in Bombay, Calcutta, and Madras respectively; motor exhibitions are annually held in Calcutta and Bombay; reliability trials and gymkhanas are of frequent occurrence during the season, while motor tours on the great highways of the Empire are constantly being organised. India is indeed enthusiastic over the automobile.

The Indian life is necessarily of a lethargic character. The climate makes it so. No matter how full of energy the new-comer may be, a month or two suffices to knock the bottom out of his strenuousness, and he slackens off like all other Anglo-Indians. And here motoring comes as a godsend. It possesses just that amount of sport without violent exercise which makes it fascinating. It tends to keep one in the fresh air instead of lounging beneath the punkah, and this spells health in an enervating climate. Every motorist I have met in India declares that motoring has opned out a fresh interest and has made the Indian climate more tolerable.

When the motoring possibilities of India are better known, I fully anticipate that each "cold weather" will see an influx of motoring visitors. Europe is after all soon exhausted by the enthusiastic driver—and where can he motor outside Europe? India alone possesses passable roads, and to India I commend him.

Undoubtedly, the Grand Trunk Road should have the greatest attraction for the motorist. I have driven all over India, but I always remember my journey down the Grand Trunk as the most enjoyable of my tours in that country.

Anglo-Indians are very proud of "the Road." They declare it to be the finest highway in the world. Its engineering is magnificent, and its surface, except in one or two places, beyond comparison. In addition, it passes through a portion of India full of historical interest.

It is a very wonderful road, and its environs are crowded with interest. For the motorist I think it is incomparable, since owing to the distance-annihilating power of the modern automobile one can, with ordinary luck, be assured of first-class accommodation every day, except perhaps on the stretch across Bengal; but even there, the dâk bungalows are very passable. There is, in fact, no need to "rough it." India is, after all, a civilised country, and there is no man on earth who knows better how to make himself comfortable than the average Anglo-Indian.

And the motorist is heartily welcome. The authorities are, without exception, tolerant to the sport, and the natives, with very few exceptions, are extremely polite. The regulations governing motoring in India are of the lightest character, while the motoring societies already mentioned are doing their best to encourage the sport, at the same time opposing any attempt at ultra-restrictive legislation.

It would not, therefore, be surprising if, in the near future, India becomes a great motor-touring ground.

Rather more than a year ago—to be exact, on May 18, 1907—the Travel Exhibition was opened at the Royal Horticultural Hall, Westminster. Space was limited, so that the scope of the exhibition was restricted; the idea was so novel as to make it entirely experimental. There were those who foretold failure, but in spite of many handicaps the exhibition "caught on." It was not only interesting, but educative, and so great was its success that the promoters determined to extend their field.

The offspring of the Travel Exhibition is the World's Touring, Sport, Pastimes, and Travel Exhibition, which is to be opened at the Olympia next July. And of great interest to sportsmen at large does this most original exhibition promise to be and, doubtless, it will be a Mecca to the Anglo-Indian sportsman at home on leave next summer.

The Exhibition will place before the eyes of the student the implements necessary to every known sport, from the wild games of the Indian to the homely outfit of the cricketer. And it will explain the sporting and touring possibilities of the countries of the world. There are many men, who have travelled in most of the best known portions of the globe, who have hunted and fished there, and who are now in search of fresh woods and pastures new. The Sports and Pastimes Exhibition will help them in their search. For instance, take Java. Now, Java is practically unknown to the average traveller and sportsman. Yet the possibilities of Java are tremendous. And Java is but one place among many. It is the possibilities of such places that the Sport, Pastimes, and Travel Exhibition is partly designed to show.

Those parts of the world in which the hunter after big game or the fisherman after big and strange fish will most likely gratify his desire, will be duly shown at the Olympia next year. And as an aid to the traveller doubtful in making his choice the Cinematograph will play a big part. There will be four Cinematograph rooms running continuously throughout the day, and by their aid the curious visitor will be able to visit the "uttermost parts of the earth." The conditions of life and the conditions of sport in all parts of the globe will be presented realistically through their medium. And as proof of the fact that the scenes and description of other countries will be found absolutely correct at the Olympia next year, it need only be stated that up to the present no fewer than eight Governments have given their aid by providing pictures, paintings, and Cinematograph films.

The Exhibition promises to be of a peculiar interest to those who desire to visit any other country outside their own. Whether they are bent on going to the torrid zones or the "Regions of Perpetual Snow," they will find placed before them at the Olympia next year all the implements they are calculated to be in need of.

The grounds of the Olympia will be given over to various examples of camp life, arranged amidst appropriate scenery, and chiefly will the Exhibition be of interest to those keen on big game shooting and fishing in unusual places.

The Exhibition will show the implements used by those who have endeavoured to discover the North Pole, as well as of those who have penetrated into darkest Africa. The Cinematograph will switch the visitor from Australia to Canada, from Cairo to South Africa, and the exhibits will show him what he needs does he contemplate a shooting holiday in the Rockies or a month's fishing in the Highlands. There will be shown the trophies of courageous travellers in the Arctic and Antarctic regions, and the jungles of India or Africa places where civilisation leaves off with a jerk. In a word, the Exhibition promises to be a splendid school of instruction for the man who means to travel and to shoot, and a very real education for the man who stays at home.

It only remains to add that the Exhibition will be opened immediately after the Horse Show, and will run for one calendar month.

The tragic result of a dog's playfulness was evidenced the other day at Enniskillen. A man, on the way to a rabbit shoot, stopped to speak to a couple of friends and idiotically held his loaded gun by the barrels while the butt rested on the ground. His dogs were playing around him, and one of them, performing a favourite trick, suddenly jumped to snatch off its master's hat.

In falling after the leap the dog touched the trigger with the result that Frazer instantly fell dead at the feet of his friends, part of his head having been blown away.

A recent cub run with Sir Watkin Wynn's hounds at Malpas, in Cheshire, had a remarkable climax. A particularly lively cub was started, and led the pursuers towards Malpas, at the foot of which stands a disused waterworks. At this point the quarry suddenly vanished.

The leader of the pack returned again and again to a small aperture in the building, and at length it was concluded that Reynard had escaped through the long culvert, emptying several hundred yards distant. The water engineer, however, heard unfamiliar sounds from one of the wells. Searchlights were procured and lowered, when the fox was discovered clinging to the sides of the well at the water edge. Lassos were formed with hunting-crops, and, descending the well, the huntsman, assisted by Lord Cholmondeley, effected a capture, and the usual result followed.

London Week by Week.

Friday, 23*rd October* 1908.

A dull week withal: save for theatrical gup I have but little to put before you this week. There has been a shocking tragedy in Bloomsbury, the victim being a young and attractive member of the frail sisterhood, and the circumstances attending the murder are on all fours with those connected with the doing to death of the girl Emily Dimmock in Camden Town last year. The police, as in most crimes of the sort lately, are nonplussed and one would be sanguine indeed to hope for the arrest of the criminal with the faint finger marks and pieces of wire which are the only clues to work upon. The matter would present Mr. Sherlock Holmes with a subject for one of his clever flights into criminal romance, but to the London police it is feared it is but another item shortly to be added to the long list of undetected murders of the last three years.

But the subject is not attractive. Let me record the further doings of the insolent Mr. Victor Grayson, who, if he does not appear in a particularly edifying light, at least raises a smile by his sheer fatuity. I told you last week of the disorderly exhibition indulged in by this Socialist member of the House of Commons only a few days ago. The leniency then showed to this pale and moody looking Ishmael seems to have encouraged him to repeat his act of insolence the very next day when he interrupted the debate on the Licensing Bill with some hoarse and incoherent shouting. A violent scene ensued. The Chairman, with wonderful patience, endeavoured to restore order and bring Grayson to a sense of decency, what time members vociferously called him to order with ribald laughter and in scornful tone. At last the Prime Minister was summoned, Grayson was formally "named" and ejected and the assembly has been relieved of his presence for the remainder of the Session. This inexcusable affront to the dignity of Parliament has disfranchised his constituency meanwhile and the genuine unemployed have good cause to curse the advocacy which has undoubtedly done them harm.

Reference to the Licensing Bill naturally suggests beer and the Brewers' Exhibition now on at the Agricultural Hall; it is the thirtieth of the series and is without doubt Bung's best effort. One fails to see how legislation will ever affect the national popularity of malt liquors, and judged by what is here presented to us the trade itself does not think it will. Here may be seen the total improvements suggested by the experienc of the past with the high mechanical skill and scientific knowledge of the present. It is certainly not without interest to the general public for it testifies to the constant attention given to details, the struggle towards the ideal in method and manufacture, the improvements on improvements, and the change caused by never-ceasing effort in a great industry like this.

No business can stand still, it must either decay or go forward, but there is here the evidence of progress. Most of us eat and drink as a matter of course, and give little attention to the thought that may have been given to some detail that adds to our pleasure or comfort. The shape of a bottle, the mechanism of a stopper, the purity of a whisky, the lightness of a beer, may represent much in effort, but it is lost to those they benefit in the convenience or satisfaction they bring. In an exhibition like this we realise what it all may mean, for we see by contrast and illustration much we may not even have dreamt of before.

"High Spirits" are in future to be discouraged on the Stock Exchange: this week two members have been suspended for indulgence in some sort of horse play whereby a fellow member was knocked down and slightly injured. Henceforth slack times must not be passed in leapfrog, "touch," wrestling, umbrella and paper ball hockey, and the other forms of skylarking in which irrepressible members have hitherto specialised, while the time honoured smashing of top hats will, one supposes, ere long be relegated to the limbo of old English sports and pastimes. One reads that "Marathon races" have been much in vogue for the past few weeks. The "twenty-six-mile course" is carefully marked out by chairs and desks in the "House," and at a given signal the competitors tear round the course. The winner is rewarded with a coco-nut or a "certificate of merit."

Another amusement is known as "Tape throwing." Reels of paper tape used in the tape-machines are obtained, and then, holding one end, the reel is sent spinning up in the dome of the building. The object is to throw the reel over the railings in the dome, so that a long ribbon of paper is suspended in the air. One of the members usually makes a book, the betting being for and against the reel catching in the railings. Recently a playful member applied a match to a suspended ribbon of tape, to the consternation of sober, elderly members. How would this sort of thing take on in Clive Street, Mr. Editor?

Mrs. Flora Annie Steele's new book, "A Prince of Dreamers," is one of the best she has written. To thousands of people—out of India—she is regarded as an authority and a teacher; those who know their India are not prepared to go so far as this, but all of us can enjoy her books, in spite of their inaccuracies and minor defects, for she writes a really good story. Her latest work, I think, ranks with "The Potter's Thumb" and is certainly of more interest and merit than "On the Face of the Waters." It is a romance of the Court of Akbar, it is full of Oriental colour mystery and the true atmosphere of Eastern Courts; the story itself is of absorbing interest and the treatment thoroughly deserves the flattering recognition it has received at the hands of the reviewers.

Colonel Newnham-Davis is known personally or by reputation to practically all your readers; they will be pleased to read of the unqualified success of the new ballet he has written—"A Day in Paris"—and which was produced at the Empire for the first time on Monday night. It is, I think, quite the best ballet we have had for years, it is light, amusing, topical, and with Paris for a background it teems with interesting and appropriate action, superb colour effects, dexterous and magnificent dress design. The Artists' Ball, on which the curtain descends, is based on the rays of the Solar Spectrum and is a veritable prismatic pageant of colour. The piece describes how an English family saw the French capital. Five scenes in all are included in the series—five scenes of restless activity, with tireless dancers and clever mimes, the indefatigable Mr. Fred. Farren inspiring them all, and the very handsome and graceful Mdlle. Lydia as première danseuse.

"A Day in Paris" is full of good things. A dance by Miss B. Collier is one of them. Miss Collier has a really wonderful sense of the dramatic, and it will be a strange thing if this young dancer does not become celebrated. Les Sessouloff, too, are a remarkable pair of dancers. In the matter of music the piece is well handled by Mr. Cuthbert Clarke, who has composed and arranged the score, and the scenic background is in keeping with the subject chosen by the author.

"Paquita," the romantic ballet at the Alhambra, also makes a strong appeal to those who can appreciate art as distinct from commonplace effort. The ballet is presented in three scenes, which are widely diversified in character—a gipsy encampment in old Spain, a castle terrace, and la fete galante in the Ambassador's hall at the Alhambra. The latter was a scene of gorgeous Oriental magnificence, an appropriate setting to the corps de ballet dancing. This was charming in all the scenes, and though at times bizarre, it was always pleasing, even the motley collection of artistic tatterdemalions in the gipsy encampment appealing to one's sense of the picturesque. The central attraction was Mdlle. Britta, and on her first appearance she leaped into popularity.

comedy on slight materials. It is a satire aimed at literary aspirants to society and society high-fliers at literature and it is amusing, sparkling in parts, holds one's interest throughout, though it may be perhaps rather long drawn out. Lady Eppings' weakness is that she believes she is a born dramatist, and when she corners Paul Hughes, a popular "newly arrived" young author, with the design of reading her fifteen unacted plays to him, he attempts to escape from the terrible ordeal by the desperate measure of making love to her. But her ladyship is not averse to a mild flirtation. She keeps him dangling after her much against his will, for, as he at last shrewdly puts it, "You don't want me to kiss you; you only want me to want to kiss you, and you not to let me. There is nothing left for me to do but to go home and be a loving husband." And that is just the position. But in order to continue the flirtation Lady Epping writes a rather compromising letter to Hughes. Later she believes the plot of his new play is stolen from one of her own, because each is based upon "The Eternal Triangle," and a lawsuit results. But upon her unfortunate letter being brought into court she tears it up and withdraws her suit.

Miss Mary Moore's acting is really delicious; other notable successes in the cast are Messrs. Sam Sothern and Eric Lewis, Mrs. Sothern and Miss Grace Lane. The piece is playing to crowded houses.

The late Sir Henry Irving had one of his famous parts in "The Lyon's Mail," an old-fashioned melodrama founded on fact, the dual impersonations of Lesurgues and Dubosc being one of his finest achievements. But I dare say to most of your readers the play is quite well known. Very old-fashioned, with fearful theatrical, awe-inspiring asides, the play has its points—points of blood and a certain grim tension which fascinates. The end scene, where Dubosc, raving drunk, gloats over the scaffold and is in turn betrayed and taken, has real tragic feeling. It is the sort of thing the real tragedian finds irresistible.

It would be untrue to pretend that Mr. Irving was that, or that he has any of that power which made his father's impersonation so magnetic; indeed, it is power that he lacks. He is "following in the footsteps," though he is still somewhat behind; but has personality, a fine and interesting appearance, genuine technique, good diction, manner, charm, fascination, art. As yet he has not that gift, so rare, which alone makes the really great actor—power, that dominating presence, that spark of magneticism which hypnotises and overwhelms. None the less he gives a thoughtful, intelligent study of the two parts—one very well worth seeing, polished, sure, personal.

A fine performance was given by Mr. Frank Tyars as the father. Mr. Curtis, who played Joliquet, rather overdid it, and the robber gang were at times—but only at times—distinctly reminiscent of the pirate captain in "Peter Pan."

The revival of "Iolanthe" at the Savoy has been greeted with marked enthusiasm. Gilbert and Sullivan Opera withstand the attacks of time wonderfully. It is well over twenty years since "Iolanthe" was written, but although W. S. Gilbert directed his wit and satire against the follies of the time, his tilts at Lords and Commons seem as applicable to-day as when they earned their virgin laughter. And Sullivan's music, for all its familiarity, retains its freshness as well as Gilbert's wit. Mr. Rutland Barrington played his original part of the Earl of Mountararat—and those who know their Savoy will be able to imagine the reception he received, and the amount of rich humour he obtained from the character. Mr. Henry Lytton was again a delightful Strephon, and Miss Jessie Rose as Iolanthe, Miss Louie Rene as the Fairy Queen, and Miss Clara Dow as Phyllis, repeated their former successes. But, as usual, Mr. C. H. Workman was the popular favourite. His performance as the Lord Chancellor was a perfect gem of artistic comic acting. With voice and gesture and facial expression he got the essence of meaning out of every line.

The new play by Mr. Alfred Sutro, which Mr. George Alexander has arranged to produce at the St. James's Theatre on Wednesday evening, 11th November, has now been named "The Builder of Bridges."

The cast will include Mr. Alexander and Miss Irene Vanbrugh in the principal parts, and Mr. Dawson Milward, Mr. Harcourt Williams, Mr. William Farren, Mr. E. Vivian Reynolds, Miss Barbara Hannay, Miss Nina Sevening, and Miss Florence Hayden. The story of the play is laid in London at the present time.

Last Wednesday was "Trafalgar Day." Big crowds flocked to the Square to inspect the decorated column and the floral tributes massed around the base. The old signal—"England Expects, etc."—was flown and many wreaths were contributed by connections of the hero and some of his admirals, the decorations were in excellent taste and, as is meet and proper, they did not forget the foeman worthy of his genius against whom Nelson fought and won.

General Alexander Ross Elliott Hutchinson, who died at Stratford-on-Avon on Monday, in his 83rd year, had seen a large amount of service in India. Obtaining his first commission in 1843, he served through the Punjab campaign of 1848-49, taking part in the passage of the Chenab and the battle of Gujerat. During the Mutiny he was assistant political officer with the Nerbudda Field Force in the operations against Dhar in 1857, and commanded a force of two guns, a troop of cavalry, and two companies of infantry in operations against the rebel Rajah of Amghera, destroying the hill fort of Lall Ghur, and capturing the Rajah. He also served as political officer with the force under General Michel in August 1858, and was present at the action near Rajhghur. He was several times mentioned in despatches, and was rewarded with the brevet of major and the medal. He retired in March 1877, and was shortly after advanced to the rank of major-general.

An old Bombay man, Charles Stewart, formerly Presidency Postmaster, has just died at Thornton Heath in Surrey in his 87th year and was buried at Croydon on Wednesday last. One of his sons-in-law, Commander E. W. Petley, of the Calcutta Naval Volunteers, is possibly known to many in your town.

A NATURALIST'S VOYAGES.*

To those persons who are not scientific naturalists it might well seem that there is little more to be learnt regarding the animals and plants of the more accessible parts of the world, especially small islands which have been visited time after time by collectors and explorers. A greater mistake never existed, as is revealed by the first glance at the present fascinating volume when it will be seen that during three cruises of a private pleasure yacht the list of known birds was augmented by the discovery of something like a dozen new species, to say nothing of additions to the list of other groups.

Lord Crawford is the fortunate owner of the Valhalla, a yacht of 1,700 tons burden, which enjoys the distinction of being the only "ship-rigged" vessel of her class. His lordship likewise enjoys the distinction of being a Trustee of the British Museum. On the other hand, he suffers from certain physical disabilities, which render it inadvisable for him to face the rigours of an English winter. Accordingly, he is accustomed to spend the winter months on a more or less prolonged cruise in, so far as possible, "summer seas." A few years ago it was suggested by a fellow Trustee to her owner that such a splendid vessel as the Valhalla, might be advantageously utilised in collecting natural history specimens for the national museum. This suggestion was promptly acted upon; and, under the advice of Dr. P. L. Sclater, a promising young naturalist was appointed to act as collector during the very next voyage. That naturalist (who is now first assistant to the Director of the Government Zoological Gardens, near Cairo) is the author of the volume now before us; and no better proof of the satisfactory result of his selection as naturalist to the Valhalla could possibly be desired than the fact that Mr. Nicoll accompanied his patron in that capacity throughout three successive cruises.

During these three voyages something like 100,000 miles of ocean were traversed, and a correspondingly large number of islands and other interesting places visited. The first and longest voyage, which occupied the winter of 1902-03, comprised a complete circumnavigation of the African Continent, inclusive, during the outward course, of a detour to the Brazilian coast at Bahia.

On the way to that port a short visit was paid to Fernando de Noronha, the rocky island familiar by sight to passengers to South America, which is used as a convict station by the Brazilian Government. In consequence of this use, there is great difficulty in obtaining permission to land. Such permission was, however, granted to the Valhalla's party, and a day was accordingly devoted to a collecting expedition on the island.

"While we were at the Governor's House," writes Mr. Nicoll, in detailing his day's experiences, a bugle was sounded to summon the convicts. There were about two hundred of them, all under long sentences, most of them having been convicted of murder. One man, who was told off as guide to our party, was said to have committed seven murders and as he owned to five of them, I have no doubt that we were correctly informed.

"After their names had been called, the convicts dispersed for the night, about fifty being locked up in the gaol, and the rest going off to their own houses. Most of these men have wives and families, and, so far as we could judge their lives were not hard. They have to work three hours a day for the State, but the rest of the day they can spend as they like, though all have to appear when the bugle is sounded in front of the Governor's house."

At Bahia, Mr. Nicoll made his first acquaintance with live humming-birds, when he was surprised to find how frequently they perch; his previous impression, derived no doubt from books, being that these fairy-like creatures are almost constantly on the wing. It was at Bahia, also, although during the third and last voyage, that Mr. Nicoll and his fellow-naturalist, Mr. Meade Waldo, saw the so-called "sea-serpent." The author, however, takes the opportunity, apparently for the first time, of recording his opinion that the mysterious creature is not a reptile at all but a mammal. If this be so, "sea-serpent" will have to be replaced by some new designation. Mr. Nicoll believes that creatures of this nature are much more frequently seen than is commonly supposed to be the case; a number of persons being afraid to record the apparition on account of the ridicule, which generally follows narratives of this nature.

On South Trinidad, which had previously been visited on only three occasions by naturalists (one of the three visits being by Lord Crawford himself), Mr. Nicoll had the good fortune to discover a new kind of fern, which was in due course named in honour of the owner of the Valhalla. The great sight on this island appears, however, to be a valley filled to overflowing with tree-ferns:—

"The ferns were from twelve to twenty-five feet in height. Their stems were quite bare, but at the top a number of fern-like fronds grew at right angles to the stem. The tree-ferns at South Trinidad grow very close together, and owing to this fact and to the ground being strewn with boulders, walking was difficult."

Tristan da Iunka, which was the next island visited, yielded a new species of diving petrel. It appeared, however, that the flightless moorhen, which formed the most remarkable of the island's birds, was extinct. On the other hand, the party heard of the existence on the neighbouring Inaccessible Island of another flightless moorhen, which is almost certainly undescribed. Here then is a grand opportunity for another yacht-party to distinguish itself.

While at Cape Town the party made an excursion to Da sen Island to see the colony of jackass-penguins, a species which, by the way, derives its name from its ass-like bray. After breakfast on landing, the party set out for the sandy shore where most of the penguins congregate:—

"It was a truly remarkable sight. So far as the eye could see was an unending mass of penguins. Thousands upon thousands of the comical-looking birds were sitting close together along the sandy shore, while many more were arriving from the sea and walking solemnly up to join their companions. All were either in full moult or just beginning to cast their feathers. The moult of these birds is somewhat peculiar. The feathers of the back come off in large patches beginning from the tail, and the birds are then bare except for a coating of soft down, amongst which the new feathers make their appearance. . . . We walked amongst them without causing them much alarm, and they would not go into the sea unless they were very hard pressed, and then they remained, but a short time in the water."

In the full breeding season the number of penguins on the island is estimated at nine millions! The females make no nest, but deposit their two coarse-shelled white eggs in a hollow scooped out at the foot of an ice-plant, or in some natural depression.

In Tahiti the voyagers were much interested in the habits of the land-crabs, some of which have yellow and others bright blue claws, so that a vivid blaze of colour is produced as they run in hundreds across the mud-flats waving their uplifted pincers.

"At the least alarm they popped into their holes, from which they never strayed far during the day. When chased, a crab would often hurry into the wrong burrow, and be ejected immediately by the rightful owner; but the inhospitality, did not help one to watch them, owing to the speed with which they vanished ultimately under ground. If one stood quite still, they would reappear at the mouth of the burrow, waving their stalk-eyes in all directions on the lookout for danger."

Tahiti was visited during the third voyage; another notable event of which was a landing on Praslin Island in order to see the grove of double-cocoanut trees. These only grow in one small valley, and nowhere else in the world in a wild condition. The double-cocoanut, or "coco-de-mer;" was known for ages before its place if origin was ascertained; but when the Seychelles were discovered its home was revealed in this one narrow valley in Praslin. From the enormous bulk of the fruit it is practically certain that the coco-de-mer must be of very slow development, and Mr. Nicoll was told in Praslin that the growth occupies many years. The trees are less tall than ordinary cocoanuts, but have much larger and wider leaves. The "flesh" of the nuts is insipid.

The work is beautifully illustrated, and brightly written from start to finish; and although it has nothing to record in the way of striking new discovery, it is well worthy of a place in the bookcase of every one interested in natural ... and travel alongside books like Moseley's "Naturalist on the Challenger."

WHEN DEATH COMES UP THE WIND.

Through the green colonnades of Miramichi firs the morning light came down to the snow. Ah! how sharp and bright it came; and under its gleam, forms and trails that night had concealed turned clearly into definition. Looming blackly against the remotest ridge of the vast forest a bull moose stood, nostrils to the wind.

The large but sensitive muzzle inhaled each drifting current of air and tested it for the man-scent, but it was free, free as the giant sun-orb now risen above the fantastic tops of evergreen thickets.

Satisfied that nothing was near, the monster sought his breakfast, and of a certainty there was need for the meal to be ample. Seven feet to the maned ridge of his shoulders he measured, a king of his class. His huge palmated horns spread out to a width of far over fifty inches, and set upon head and shoulders of majestic proportions they made a trophy such as a hunter pictures in his dreams.

The massive, muscle-corded chest was covered with shiny black hair which extended over the sloping back and down the flanks, meeting the tawny tint of the belly in a sharp line. Legs of enormous length and iron endurance supported the colossal frame, ready at the slightest sign of danger to tear miles off the runways and throw them behind with the flying crust.

He was a royal specimen and with delicate taste he chose a royal meal from the sweet-smelling twigs of the tenderest birches. In dreamy contentment he browsed along the juicy sapling tips, unconscious that his great form was marked by a keen eye far, far off on a parallel slope.

The heart of the distant hunter thrilled at the bulk of the pasturing moose and he headed in its direction, hidden by the fringed curve of the friendly ridge. A half-hour's tramp brought the eager sportsman near his game, and crossing a clearing where the hemlock bluff slid down to the sere, frozen marsh, he could see him plainly where the fir slope rose skyward.

The range was still too great. Down went the man on his stomach, worming through the reeds across the marsh to a little low ridge, heavily timbered, that ran out like a spur toward the main one. Once in the thick cover, it was equal chances for man and beast.

Warily the brown serpent wound through the water growth where the new morn cast pink flushes on the open spots and turned grey stalks to mauve. He reached the spur and vanished in the thick aisles.

Meanwhile, the moose was breakfasting, and the voracious appetite which the crisp morning air had given him was somewhat appeased. The wind freshened to a blustery half-gale and the savory birch-tips batted his nose and ears. The wind had risen, perhaps that was why he stopped eating. Releasing the sapling he had bent, the huge bull looked about. His expanded nostrils went north, south, east and west. No man-scent reached them. Then the great ears listened. No sound. As far as his clear eye could see he searched each slope, but there was nothing. Below in the marsh near the old yarding-ground the wind was stormily shaking the weeds.

Yet some intuition prompted him, some secret air-spirit whispered him—to leave the birches and his meal. A last sniff and the moose turned suddenly over the crest and broke into a shambling run. The click of his cleft hoofs sounded out sharply as he went downward.

Skirting the beaver meadow, one of his favourite haunts in summer time, the forest monarch sped on to the shore of the well-known lake where the lily-pads he had cropped so often were dark blotches in the ice. On along its circular margin, out through scrubby swales he ran till the hemlock bluff came in view. Describing a half-circle the bull-moose neared it, mounted the length of a canopied alley and reached the top.

There he halted while the fine exultation of vigorous exercise ran through each artery and muscle. The quick pace had sharpened his half-satisfied hunger and over beyond the timbered spur ridge to his right he knew there were seedling birches, rich, tender and aromatic. He could almost think he smelled them and so he launched down the descent and out over the frozen marsh.

Almost across, he jerked to an abrupt stop with a quick breath of terror. There in the snow at his feet was the trail where something strange had wormed through and, oh!—at the same instant the dreaded man-scent filled his nostrils, coming down the wind—for he had circled below his pursuer.

A shuddering seized upon him and his limbs for a second remained paralyzed. Then, with a surge of shame at heart, the knotted muscles sprang to life and the vast bulk shot like an arrow down the marsh, up the slanting ascent and out on a shrouded runway, fleeing down the wind, urged by the horror he had almost stumbled on above. The stroke of his hoofs recovering from their spread grew to a staccato tune but the moose never paused.

He swept on down the wind from the terrifying scent. His antlers back, muzzle outstretched and eyes widely dilated, he crashed on and the smoke of his breathing hung in clouds after him.

Farther and farther from the menace he got, and crossing a second marsh he went up the silent, woody steep of the next ridge. Up through the defile his mighty shoulders brushed their way and low hanging twigs tapped his horns as he mounted. On the crest the runway opened straight into the sun and when the fiery glare filled his eyes with blindness the moose stopped. A ringing crack! broke near, and some stinging pain smote his chest with awful force, so awful that it threw him to his knees.

The red blood swelled to his nostrils, and the sense of ear and eye seemed failing, yet some vague stirring of the brain told him it was man. With the swift wilderness thought he half-twisted his body instead of rising and slid down the way he came and into the fir fringe at its base, where he staggered to his feet. The terrible pain was still in his breast and it almost forced him to his haunches at the first step, but, steeling every fibre, the brave old ranger started through the cover.

Another splitting crack! Something whistled through the thick boughs, scattering the twigs. It must have reached him, for he felt a sharp pain thrust from flank to flank. Another report came, another, another—a perfect fusillade. From blind instinct the bull dropped to his knees in the soft snow while the lead rained harmlessly above, and there, to his great surprise, a second moose-form flashed by him, thundering out along the ridge bottom and forth across the burnt limit in plain view of the man on the top of the slope.

Our stricken bull heard a succession of shots rung out again, but the invisible missiles did not slash down round him. No, they were aimed at the other fugitive bounding over the blasted area, disappearing in the swale shrubbery beyond. Wild with excitement the hunter dashed down on the trail. He thought this fleeing bull was the same one he had fired at first. Who would not? for he broke from the fringe where the first lay still, and plainly written in scarlet signs on the spotless snow along the trail out over the burned area was the truth that at least one bullet had reached its mark. Indeed, one had for the hunter had struck truly into the shoulder of this second bull as he crashed from the fringe.

In hot haste the man trailed mile, after mile all through the long afternoon and when night fell the track was still lying before and showing the stains more faintly, telling the bleeding had stopped. Sorely disappointed, the trailer gave it up and set his compass for the homeward path to camp.

Back in the fringe of tenebrous fir branches, the wounded monarch lay in the same spot. All the hours of the silent afternoon a stupor had deadened his senses and he knew nothing till the tingling frost air of evening waked him—waked him to a nameless fear, the fear of death. He thought of his folly, how in fleeing from one enemy he had blundered blindly into a second, but soon the thoughts of regret left him, since the nameless, growing horror chilled every sense.

For there in the lone heart of the Miramichi region, without strength enough left to raise a hoof to rend or swing the formidable antlers in his own defense, Death, in the form of a gigantic gray lynx, came up the wind.—Western Field.

OXYGEN APPLIED TO RACE HORSES.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE INDIAN FIELD."

SIR,—Professor Leonard Hill, of the London Hospital, has been experimenting with oxygen not only on human beings but also on horses. His experiments have proved so successful that he has patented an apparatus which will probably prove a boon to all owners of race horses. The apparatus consists of a mask stiffened below with hoops of cane, and confined round the horse's face with a strap; the mask is fitted with inspiratory and expiratory valves and is connected with a rubber breathing bag containing 3 c.f. of oxygen which is filled from a cylinder containing oxygen as required. The attached diagram will explain the arrangement better than a written description.

A Mask: B. Rubber bag 3 c.f. C. Oxygen Cylinder.
E. Inspiratory valve. D. Expiratory valve. F. Tap.

The following is an account of Professor Leonard Hill's experiments in his own words: "I have tried the above apparatus on several horses and they breathe with tranquillity.

"On the untrained or imperfectly trained horse or one out of condition oxygen will I am confident have a beneficial effect.

"I have found a heavy cart horse trotted up a hill after oxygen, which it usually walked up. The properly trained race horse probably is adequately oxygenated, and as excess has no effect on the living body, giving oxygen to it before a race will not help it. I found this to be the case in a trial between two perfectly trained race horses.

"There was seven minutes' interval between giving the oxygen and reaching the starting post and possibly this vitiated the result so I am anxious to obtain further tests. Oxygen ought to help your horses in India under the bad conditions (travelling by rail to places where the climatic conditions are different) you mention. I let the animals breathe the gas for ten or fifteen minutes. From observations on myself I believe the effect lasts some time if no exercise is taken. In the above test the horses had to trot half mile to the starting post. The gas should be given close to the starting gate, and as short a time before the race as possible.

"The horses in my test were so perfectly trained that they were not blown or distressed by the six-furlong race. The more the distress the better will oxygen act. After one gallop oxygen will get a horse fit for another. Giving oxygen (during training) before gallops may be helpful in enabling harder work to be given without damage. It may, I think, be possible to accelerate training by this method. Oxygen is not a stimulant and all it does is to insure the body not having too little.

"Too little means bad working of and toxic waste products in the body. Excess has no effect. Messrs. Siebe, Gorman and Co., 187, Westminster Bridge Road, make my apparatus."

From the above letter it would seem that oxygen will be very valuable in a racing stable in the following cases:—

(1) To shorten the period required for training.
(2) To revive a distressed horse after a race.
(3) To enable a horse to run twice on the same day.
(4) To ready a horse after a long train journey.

Another obvious use of oxygen is for polo.

In a tournament when a pony comes in blown what a blessing it would be to pull him out fresh for another chukker.

The apparatus is very portable, easily applied to even a fidgetty horse and cannot well get out of order.

I am at present experimenting and shall be glad to hear from anyone else who is interested in the subject.

BETTING: 7 to 4 agst. Pink 'Un, 6 to 1 Maranui, 8 to 1 Welcome Trist, 10 to 1 Enchanteur, 12 to 1 each Iolaire, Mother Goose, Bright Steel, Post Town, Waipuna and Tulkeroo, 25 to 1 each True Scot and Conge d'Eslire, 33 to 1 each Destinist and Bobby, 50 to 1 each Thackeray, Baw Bee, Jack Smith, Le Jeune and Lady Wilde, 100 to 1 each Emir and Woorooma, 200 to 1 Enchanted States.
The start was considerably delayed by Waipuna, Tulkeroo and Emir. Just before the barrier rose the positions were:—On the inside, Bright Steel, Pink 'Un, Baw Bee, Maranui and Iolaire; in the centre, Waipuna, Conge d'Eslire, Destinist, Post Town, Tulkeroo, Mother Goose and Jack Smith; on the outside Emir and Enchanted States. When the barrier rose Bright Steel and Pink 'Un shot off first, with Enchanted States and Emir last. Iolaire at once went to the front from Conge d'Eslire, Pink 'Un, Lady Wilde, True Scot, Destinist, Mother Goose and Enchanteur. Passing the judge's box Iolaire had a lead from Conge d'Eslire, True Scot, Lady Wilde, Mother Goose, Enchanteur, Destinist and Pink 'Un, the last being Woorooma, Enchanted States and Emir. Iolaire was still in front as the field swept out of the straight, the nearest of the others being Conge d'Eslire, True Scot, Enchanteur, Mother Goose, Destinist, Pink 'Un, Thackeray, Bright Steel, Waipuna, Bobby, Post Town, and Maranui, with Enchanted States and Emir the last pair. The order of the leaders at milepost was Iolaire, Conge d'Eslire, True Scot, Mother Goose, Destinist, Tulkeroo, Enchanteur and Thackeray. Mother Goose moved up to second place going along the back and was followed by Conge d'Eslire, True Scot, Pink 'Un (who was moving up), Post Town and Lady Wilde, with Emir absolutely last. Mother Goose and Iolaire were together at the far turn three lengths from Destinist, Post Town, Maraunl, Enchanteur and Conge d'Eslire. WHAT PEOPLE SAY OF IT.

From T. W. GEARY, JR. EXR. P., CALCUTTA, 30-5-95. "Just a line to inform you of the efficacy of your medicine. I had been a great sufferer from severe attacks of Diarrhœa and Dysentery for the past three and a half years, and had tried all kinds of Medicine, but only to give me relief for the time being. Only about a fortnight ago I heard of and tried your Catechu Mixture and I must say I found it a most wonderful medicine, for two or three doses have completely cured me. Thanks be to God and to your invaluable remedy, I am now as well as possible. You can make what use you like of this.

From MISS E. A. L., LUCKNOW. A friend of mine before going to Burma last year gave me a bottle of Catechu Mixture for the relief and cure of diarrhœa. As it has done me so much good, I will feel much obliged if you will send me a bottle of it.

From T. OTTER, ESQ., DISTRICT SURVEYOR, NELLORE.—Please send per V.-P. Parcel to be sent by Train addressed as below 2 bottles of Catechu.

I have to state that your medicines are very effectual and I have great faith in them. They are worth their weight in gold. You can make use of this statement as you please.

MRS. K. ELLIS, MEERUT.—Please send to my address 1 bottle Restringent Mixture and 1 bottle Catechu. Both these preparations are invaluable and I never will be without them.

Sport in England.

LONDON, Friday, 23rd October 1908.

NEWMARKET.

AUTUMN, dodging for a chance, put a chilled spoke in the season's wheel last Friday with an array of clouds ready for tapping; but the sun again got the best of it. For splendid weather, the Second October, like the First, was almost a record, for such conditions, the oldest inhabitants declare, have not been enjoyed since the days of the Merry Monarch, when chaises and waggons were the vogue. All conditions were favourable and good sport was had. Results:—

LINGFIELD.

A dull and uninviting morning on Saturday did not keep away sportsmen at home, and a strong attendance from London and Brighton was rewarded with a beautiful afternoon, warm enough for summer, with hardly a breath of air stirring. The fair sex, as usual, was strongly represented on the pretty lawn. It was a bookmakers' day, as may be imagined, for rarely have such plethoric fields turned out. Doubtless a great tribute to the meeting, but finding winners was like looking for the proverbial needle in the haystack, and in the interest of backers, it is fortunate that such an afternoon's sport should be phenomenal, with 94 horses running in four handicaps, and a grand total of 103 competitors in the six events. Results:—

GATWICK.

Winter has been long held at bay, but his stealthy, insidious advance has been suddenly pushed forward. The sun never had a chance at Gatwick on Tuesday, the sky being dull and grey, while those who had been carrying overcoats for some time past now gratefully put them on. By the time racing commenced a big attendance, reinforced from the neighbourhood, filled the stands. The rain could not have come at a more opportune time to freshen up the going, on which, the grass had been left a bit long, while fields were on the plethoric side. Results:—

The going was in excellent condition, good fields the rule, and sport spirited throughout. Results:—

NEWCASTLE.

The southerly breeze of Monday brought with it rain, but the wind veering to a more easterly quarter, the temperature was even chillier ; yet, threatening as were the conditions, and hazy the atmosphere, no watery visitation marred the opening stage of the meeting. The racing track, though yielding to the hoof, rode well according to the jockeys, and fields were of sufficient strength to keep interest in the proceedings well sustained. If there was a fault to find, it concerned the state of the betting, which was dull to a degree. Results :—

SANDOWN.

With the wind in the east it was a fine morning yesterday for those who were well wrapped up, and with a handy service of specials, the London brigade came down in force and made up a large attendance in every department, many of the principal patrons of the sport being noticeable in the members' enclosure. The course had been left long cut, and the recent rains had given it the happy touch 'twixt hard and soft, and though not of such plethoric proportions as at Lingfield and Gatwick, the fields were strong enough to keep interest well sustained. FOOTBALL.

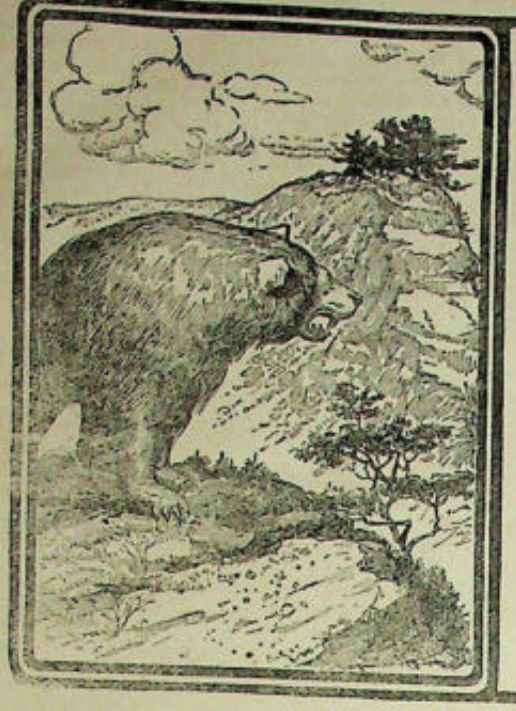
ASSOCIATION RULES.

F. A. CUP TIES.—There were several capital games in the second round of the F. A. Cup Qualifying Competition, played on Saturday, but there were not many surprises. Probably the best performance of the afternoon was that of Longfleet St. Mary's, who on their own ground at Poole, played a drawn game with Exeter City. The replay during the week at Exeter is almost certain to end in the amateurs being ousted from the competition. Croydon Common, who are gradually making their way in London professional football, were altogether too good for the 1st Grenadier Guards, who retired defeated by nine clear goals. The Depot Batt. R.E., holders of the Amateur Cup, were scarcely expected to overcome Bromley, especially as the latter were playing at home, but the civilians met a better side, and the soldiers thoroughly deserved their victory. Hounslow put up a good struggle against Barnet Alston, but the all-round strength of the latter enabled them to win, and it was just the extra bit of cleverness that gave Ilford a win by the odd goal in three against Barking, in a typical cup-tie encounter. Southend United were a bit too smart for Shoeburyness Garrison, and Hastings and St. Leonards, in defeating Tunbridge Wells Rangers, justified the predictions of the prophets. Shepherd's Bush won in comfortable style over Aylesbury, and Bradford, albeit they were not playing full strength, ran up a double-figure score against Denby Dale.



SOUTHERN LEAGUE.—The home clubs in the Southern League had a glorious time on Saturday. Nine games were played, and of the total 10 points for which the teams were striving, visiting elevens had to be content with one! Southampton were the only club playing on foreign soil to avert defeat, and in this case there was a division of the spoils at New Brompton. Crystal Palace curled up very badly at Swindon, their 4—0 defeat being their first reverse away from home. An eye will have to be kept on Northampton, who with only nine games played are but two points worse off than the Palace, and the 5—0 defeat of Leyton emphasises the fact that the Midlanders are a really good side, and that their sensational coup at Southampton was not the fluke that some would have us believe. The Queen's Park Rangers' forwards are evidently finding their shooting form, as they scored thrice against West Ham, and as on Monday last they popped on four goals against Coventry City they obtained in six days more than in their previous nine matches. There was plenty of rejoicing at Coventry, due to the fact that the City registered their first home win in the Southern League, and Watford were the victims. Millwall had a meritorious win over Reading. Luton deserved their success against Brentford, and Portsmouth picked up two points at Fratton Park from Brighton and Hove.

LEAGUE CHAMPIONS DEFEATED.—The most significant event in the First Division of the Football League on Saturday was the defeat of Manchester United. Seven games had previously been played for 13 points, one having been dropped at Bury, but at Aston Park the Mancestrians met their masters in the Villa, whose delightful footwork fully entitled them to all the honours of the game. Coupled with the downfall of the United was the extraordinary result at Bramall-lane, Everton beating Sheffield United by a margin of four goals. The Goodison Park team have so far played five away games, and won them all, with a good record of 15 against 3. There is not another club in either of the three big leagues with such a remarkable set of figures to its credit. Blackburn Rovers created a somewhat milder sensation by beating Sunderland at Roker Park. Sunderland had previously won all their home games. The two London clubs escaped defeat, and Woolwich Arsenal are to be congratulated on the smartness of their performance at Anfield-road. With the slightest shade of luck, they would have won. The Arsenal are now going along nicely, in spite of injured players and other misfortunes, and everybody is delighted to see them well in the middle of the table. Chelsea did not do so well as was hoped in taking part in a drawn game with Sheffield Wednesday, but it was only a determined rally that enabled them to avoid a reverse, for at one period in the first half they were two goals down. They finished very strongly, and with more precision in front of goal, they would have won.

THE SECOND DIVISION.—Saturday saw the Metropolitan Second Division clubs at their best. Each obtained two points, and the credit for the best performance must be given to Fulham. The Cottagers had to face Burnley at Turf Moor. The Cottagers were out to win, and the longer they played the better they got together, and the more convincing their display. This was their first victory of the season, the three previous games having been drawn. Clapton Orient have at last won a game, and hearty congratulations to them on their win over such an historic team as West Bromwich Albion. There was no semblance of good fortune about the victory, even though the solitary goal came from a penalty kick, for the Orient were much the smarter combination. Tottenham Hotspur suffered from the loss of V. J. Woodward in their game against Chesterfield, but an improvement in the closing stages provided a rattling good finish, and a good crop of goals, the home side running out easy winners at the finish. Glossop are still in a winning vein, and Grimsby Town showed that they have not forgotten how to find the net, for they overcame Bradford at Park Avenue. A striking incident in the afternoon's programme was Birmingham's first defeat in the competition, Oldham Athletic, who had only once previously won, beating the Midlanders by two clear goals. There is not now a club in the big leagues that has escaped defeat, nor is there one that has failed to win a match.

THE GAME IN SCOTLAND.—The Glasgow Cup seems destined to bring about a crisis in Scottish football. In the first round two Saturdays were taken up with the Celtic and Rangers tie ; in the semi-final two Saturdays and two week days were taken up with the Clyde and 3rd Lanark tie, while the final on Saturday, at Hampden Park, between Celtic and 3rd Lanark ended in a draw. At the close of the game the Glasgow Association met and fixed next Saturday for the re-play. These repeated draws have played havoc with the Scottish League fixtures, and a good instance of the harm they have done was seen this week when it was only on Thursday evening that Airdrieonians were informed they would meet Clyde in a League fixture on Saturday. After Airdrieonians' great victory over Rangers the previous week, and Clyde's good record this season of not yet having been defeated in a League game, the advertising of the match was delayed, and what was expected to be at least a 20,000 gate fell to £128 (stands included). Apart from this, every club has protested against the action of the Glasgow Association in not playing drawn games on week days, as in England, and this latest decision will no doubt rouse them to action. Even in Glasgow it is recognised that clubs outside of the city have good cause for complaint.

Twenty thousand spectators watched the final, and instead of being billed Celtic vs. 3rd Lanark, it would have been more correct to say Celtic vs. Brownlie, as all credit for the draw was due to the 3rd Lanark's goalkeeper. Brownlie is alone responsible for his club being in the final, as it took four days to settle the semi-final tie between Clyde and 3rd Lanark, and it is only fair to say that Clyde were the better team in every match. But Brownlie beat them every time. For drawing, 3rd Lanark deserve every credit, and it is no exaggeration to say that the game was looked upon as a walk over for Celtic, considering that within eight days 3rd Lanark were making their fourth appearance in a Cup tie.

"Excellence," Bombay.

The features of the day's League games were Queen's Park's first victory, and Kilmarnock's great display against Falkirk. At Greenock, Queen's looked like a winning team from the start, Morton never getting a chance to settle down. The amateurs tried a new centre in J. N. Russell, from Dundee, but his success was only partial. Dixon, the Ashfield recruit, scored both points for the Queen's, and his play throughout was very fine. When Templeton is on his game, Kilmarnock appear at their best, and against Falkirk the ex-Woolwich Arsenal man gave as fine an exhibition of football as has been seen in Ayrshire for a long time. His dodging, running, and shooting were delightful, and all three goals were the result of his cleverness.

Aberdeen retain their position at the head of the table and 17 points for 11 matches is the best record they have ever had. Considering that full points were extracted from such clubs as St. Mirren, Falkirk, and Airdrieonians, their position is merited. On Saturday they were at home to Hamilton Academicals, and although they were the superior team throughout, they had great difficulty in getting the better of Hamilton's new goalkeeper, Mason, late of Clyde.

Partick Thistle actually led St. Mirren, at Paisley, by two goals at half-time, but the end told a different tale, the Partick men falling away, and eventually being easy victims. Against Dundee, Hibernians were outclassed, while at Tannox Park, Rangers defeated Motherwell in a game that was always pleasant, but never exciting. Rangers tried their new centre, Smith, of Androssan, who created a favourable impression against Newcastle United recently. Considering his youth, he promises well. Cole, Hearts' outside left was in great form against Port Glasgow, scoring all three goals, and thus giving the Tynecastle team a much-needed lift in the table.

ENGLAND'S OLYMPIC WIN.—Sweden put up a plucky fight at the Stadium on Tuesday, but proved no match for the powerful United Kingdom amateur team, who qualified for the second round of the Olympic Association football tournament by 12 goals to 1.

It was a bright, fast game from start to finish, for what the Swedish players lacked in cleverness they made up in enthusiasm, and never seemed to tire. The outstanding men on the side were N. H. Lindman, at centre half, and O. Bengtsson, in goal. Lindman, a tall, fair-haired fellow, did the work of two other men, and it was chiefly through his attentions that Stapley only scored a couple of goals. Bengtsson, in goal, although beaten a dozen times, made some wonderful saves. One from Purnell in the second half got the greatest cheer of the match.

Sweden's weakest spot was their inside forwards. Both K. A. Anson and G. Bergstrom, the wingers, gave them some fine chances of scoring, but only one centre was taken advantage of.

Most of England's goals were scored as the result of delightful passing bouts, although, as is usually the case when one side is so vastly superior to the other, one or two of the points were a trifle lucky. Hawkes, for instance, claimed a goal with a shot from just over the half-way line that the goalkeeper did not see, and made no attempt to stop it.

Of course, in such a game it is difficult to judge the real merit of the English team, but it is safe to say that the side that beat Sweden yesterday will need little alteration for the amateur internationals. And they should also win the Olympic championship.

Goal scorers for England were: Purnell (4), Woodward (2), Hawkes (2), Stapley (2), Berry, and Chapman. Sweden's only goal was scored by K. Gustafsson early in the second half.

RUGBY RULES.

THE AUSTRALIANS' FIRST DEFEAT.—The utmost enthusiasm prevailed at Stradey Park, Llanelly, on Saturday, over the visit of the Australian tourists. The portion of the ground reserved for spectators was uncomfortably crowded. The Colonials placed one of their strongest sides in the field, who had to face a glaring sun. A penalty to Llanelly for "legs up" resulted in little ground being gained, and then the Welsh forwards, breaking away from the scrum, swept the ball past all opposition to the Australian full-back, who saved finely. A scrum followed, and from this Lloyd quickly passed to Arnold. Another short pass to Tom Williams saw opposition beaten. Williams, however, unselfishly transferred to Richards, who gained an unconverted corner try. Play was resumed at a great pace, and the keenness displayed being excessive, the referee cautioned players on both sides. Two penalties against the Colonials gained much ground for Llanelly. Carroll and Dix, by some clever passing, removed the pressure, and further relief was gained through a penalty against Llanelly. A loose kick by David Lloyd allowed Carroll to gather, and the wing-man went off at a great speed close to the touch-line. He cleverly drew the opposition, and then threw to McKivatt, who got over, the place kick failing. Off-side play by Arnold resulted in still another penalty. A desperate rush by the Llanelly forwards carried the ball over the goal-line, but a scrimmage was ordered outside. Llanelly were twice penalised. After some minutes' play in the Australians' "25," Tom Evans secured from a line-out, and gained a corner try. Harry Morgan converted. Just before the interval a fine run by T. Richards looked likely to result in a score when Harry Morgan effected a splendid tackle. Half-time:—Llanelly, 1 goal and 1 try (8 points); Australians, 1 try (3 points).

In the second half, Russell was given a hard chance by Woods, but knocked on. Unfairly putting the ball in the scrummage Llanelly nearly resulted in Carmichael kicking a penalty goal. Players on both sides were again cautioned. Play up to this stage had not been up to the standard anticipated, for the Australians had through the strong play of the home forwards been able to start but few passing movewhilst for this match Llanelly players had specially trained. Locally, before the match, a feeling of optimism prevailed over Llanelly's chances. Tom Evans started for Llanelly, ments. In heeling, Llanelly got the ball far oftener than the Australians, and therefore were able to take up the attack through their backs on a larger number of occasions than the Colonials. After some minutes' play in the Australians' ground, Dix made a fine but fruitless effort. The impetuous rushes of the Welsh forwards were magnificent, for time after time they carried the ball right on to their opponents' line, and it looked as if the Australians would be heavily defeated, when fine runs by Dix, McKivatt, and Russell rallied the Colonials. In the closing stages, Dr. Moran and Barnett made great attempts to cross from lines-out, only to be repulsed by Llanelly's sound tackling.

The play of the Llanelly forwards was great, for light though the pack is compared to the opposing eight, they secured the ball on an average quite five times to their opponents' three. The unexpected superiority of Llanelly in this department gained the victory. Result:—Llanelly (1 goal 1 try), 8 points; Australians (1 try), 3 points.

OXFORD UNIVERSITY vs. LONDON SCOTTISH.—This match, at Iffley Road, on Saturday, aroused keen interest, and the weather being favourable, the attendance was above the average. The three freshmen, Sloan, Poulton, and Casey, fully justified their choice, and the first named, who brought off some extremely fine kicks into touch, should make a very worthy successor to Davies at full back. Vassall, after an indifferent opening, played brilliantly, Gilray was good throughout, and during the first half came to his side's rescue on several occasions when they were in difficulties, while Martin, whose opportunities up till the interval were few and far between, did nearly all that was asked of him in his usual irresistible style. As to the visitors' backs, though both K. Thompson and Wade did much effective work, and Purves was at times prominent, they were quite powerless to cope with the brilliancy of the opposition. Their forwards, ably led by Geddes and West, were a well-balanced lot, packing well throughout and being often clever with their feet. It was the extra vigour and dash of the fresher Oxford forwards, for whom Roberts, Hodges, Blenkowe, and Houlder were most conspicuous, that finally turned the fray so much in favour of the Dark Blues.

Oxford's first try came from Martin, after a fine bout of passing, and then a poor kick by J. Thompson being well taken on the run by Poulton, the latter sprinted in. Just before the interval Wade broke well away, and sent in K. Thompson in a good position, Lindsay kicking a goal. At half-time Oxford thus led by 2 tries to a goal, the game, up to that point, having been a very evenly contested one.

On resuming, a brilliant run by Vassall enabled Hodges to cross the line. Martin followed suit as the result of perfect combination, and then Vassall overcame all opposition, cleverly jumping the full back, and Poulton, running half the length of the field, also got over. Roberts converted three of the place-kicks and Turner one. Further fine play by Sloan, who changed places with Vassall—hurt in jumping Thompson—Martin, Gilray, and Poulton ended in the latter scoring Oxford's last try. Just before the finish Martin was hurt, and retired, and Roberts took his place. Oxford thus won in brilliant fashion by 4 goals and 3 tries (29 points) to 1 goal (5 points).

CAMBRIDGE vs. GUYS.—The Cambridge University fifteen came to grief in their opening match at Honor Oak Park, Guy's Hospital beating them by four tries to three tries. Superior condition told against them in the end. In the first half, with the wind behind them, they penned Guy's, but half-time arrived with the Hospital men leading by two tries to one try.

Before the interval the Cambridge forwards could not get the ball, but afterwards they did much better, and often let out the ball to their halves. Campbell and Holloway, however, were weak, and Schofield, in the centre, spoiled McLeod, whose face began to wear a disgusted look. At one point Cambridge took the lead, but were worn down.

Godby, the old half, went full-back, but was not a success, his kicking being poor. It would be absurd to seriously judge a side on their first appearance, but yesterday's game left the strong impression that the Cambridge men will need to improve very much if they hope, as of course they do, to win the game with Oxford.

The tries for Guy's were obtained by Stokes (2), Medlock, and Hoby, and those for Cambridge by McLeod, Lely, and Holloway. It was by no means a bad match, and the finish was quite exciting.

OXFORD vs. MOSELEY.—The Dark Blues' Rugby fifteen won their second game of the season on the 21st instant, defeating Moseley by a goal and four tries (seventeen points) to one goal (five points).

Oxford's display was less brilliant than the one they gave against the Scots on Saturday, many passes being fumbled, but on the other hand one or two movements of an intricate nature were very cleverly executed.

Hodges opened the scoring for Oxford after hard work by Gilray. Roberts failed to convert. Then Martin scored with the assistance of Poulton, Tarr, and Gilray, but again no goal resulted.

Williamson scored the third try with a clever individual effort, but Turner failed to convert. At half-time the 'Varsity led by nine points to nil.

Early in the second half Moseley applied pressure, but without success, and they were again forced to act on the defensive, Gilray eventually scoring and Turner converting. Oxford's final try was the result of good work by Gilray and Tarr.

Moseley then made several fine efforts being eventually successful through Gerrard and James. The game finished with Moseley strongly on the offensive.

OTHER MATCHES.—London Hospital promise to prove very nearly the best side in the metropolis. They wiped out the Old Merchant Taylors on Saturday by 2 goals and 2 tries to a goal, and will take a lot of beating from any side. Palmer was in excellent form, and ought to be in the London fifteen against the Australians.

Richmond had, for them, a weird experience. They defeated the Royal Engineers by 7 goals and 5 tries to nothing. It sounds like a romance, but Richmond, with sound coaching and earnestness on the part of the men, might easily be made a good side.

Rosslyn Park tumbled over Guy's Hospital by 3 tries to a goal. That, with all respect to Rossiyn Park, suggests that Guy's are about to strike a bad patch in their history. The Sutton fifteen came to grief against the Old Millhillians, and I am afraid that the Western club, which contributed many players to the Gloucestershire fifteens in the old days, is not up to the former standard. More's the pity.

Lennox worked over the Marlborough Nomads, and the London Irish and St. Bartholomew's Hospital played a drawn game. The Irish have never quite taken the position in London Rugby they might and should have done. The Harlequins visited Bedford, and, despite their casualties, disposed of the home side, after an even fight up to the interval. The London Welsh, who do not seem quite up to the old point, were badly beaten at Portsmouth, but the United Services are a hard lot.

CRICKET.

FAREWELL DINNER TO RANJITSINGHJI.—A complimentary and farewell dinner was given to the Jam of Nawanagar in the Guildhall, Cambridge, last Monday night, when the leading figures in the world of cricket met to honour His Highness on the eve of his return to his Indian home. Viscount Cliden presided, and had the guest of the evening on his right. Amongst the 150 present were Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, Dr. W. G. Grace, Mr. C. B. Fry, Hon. F. S. Jackson, Lord Dalmeny, Mr. A. C. McLaren, Sir E. T. Candy, Mr. H. D. G. Leveson-Gower, Mr. Arthur Priestley, M.P., Mr. E. M. Grace, Mr. H. L. Simms, Mr. C. L. A Smith, the Mayor of Cambridge, (Mr. H. G. Whibley), Mr. Tom Hayward, Mr. A. A. Lilley, Mr. G Cox, Mr. J. Vine, Mr. E. Killick, Mr. E. Arnold, Mr. G. W. Beldam, Mr. S. Hargreave, Mr. J. T. Hearne, Colonel Kennedy, Mr. K. G. Macleod. Mr. W. Richards, Mr. A. F. Somerset, Mr. G. J. V. Weigall, the Master of Downing, etc., K. S. Dilawarsingh, K. S. Junninsingh, K. S. Raising, and K. S. Rapsing (brother and cousins of Ranji). The picturesquely-attired native servants of the Prince were in attendance on His Highness. Apologies of regret were intimated from, amongst others, Viscount Curzon, the Duke of Beaufort, Lord Harris, Hon. Alfred Lyttelton, Lord Morley, Mr. A. G. Steel, K.C., Lord Desborough, and Lord Hawke.

The Yorkshire captain, in his apology for absence, said "I have had the very great pleasure of being the guest of my friend the Jam Sahib in India, where he has given me the best of sport after big game. I yield to no one in my admiration for him as a cricketer, so I am doubly sorry I cannot be present to wish him bon voyage and express the sincere hope of all his friends that ere very long we may have the pleasure of welcoming him to England once more. I need scarcely say I am sure you will have a most enthusiastic gathering." The Vice-Chancellor of Cambridge University. (Canon Mason) wrote expressing his sense of what His Highness had done to promote the right and proper relationship between Indians and Englishmen. Telegrams expressing good wishes were read from "Sammy," "Reggie Spooner," "Jack Mason," "Stoddy," and from the Surrey County Cricket Club.

On the souvenir menu toast list was given "Ranji's" cricket record, which showed averages varying from 25·82 in 1893 to 87·57 in 1900. For Sussex the Jam Sahib has been top of the averages on eight occasions, including this season. In first-class matches for his county he has on fourteen occasions scored more than 200, his top performance being 285 in 1901, in which season he scored 3,065 runs in forty innings. This year he again came out top of the averages with 45·52, his best score being 200.

The toast of "Our Guest" was proposed by Mr. A. Priestley, M.P., who said that the cricketing career of him they knew best as Prince Ranji was common knowledge to every schoolboy in the Anglo-Saxon world, and to the many thousands who had been fascinated and charmed by the marvellous performances of his wizard hand. What was the key to this romantic career? The Jam came from our great Indian possession over twenty years ago as an ordinary English prince to this cultured seat of learning. What great gifts of nature were they which had enabled him in a few years not only to compete with, but to teach something to the greatest Englishmen at their own game? They knew he had a quick eye—(hear, hear)—at least, bowlers did. (Laughter.) They knew that he had a wonderfully subtle wrist. (Hear, hear.) But was that the whole secreth Possibly there was something else, something more than physical aptitude, for all men who reached pre-eminence possessed a power of determination, a concentration of effort, and a perseverance which alone placed them on the pinnacle of success which the few great achieved. (Hear, hear.) In season and out of season, whether successful or not, there was one motive power in his cricket that dominated everything else that he did, and that was he was playing for his side. (Hear, hear.) He was going back to assume duties of an imperative character, and he (Mr. Priestley) was satisfied that the qualities that had stood him in such good stead in the cricket field would be equally valuable to him in the administration of his great dependency. They and tens of thousands in England wished him God speed—(hear, hear)—in discharge of these responsibilities, long life, and a large measure of the happiness he had here provided for others. (Cheers.) The toast was received with musical honours.

His Highness the Jam, who was accorded a vociferous reception, devoted the greater part of his speech to the relationship between this country and India. The honour done him he regarded somewhat in the light of a second installation as Jam of Nawanagar, and all the more gratifying it was to him in that it was a voluntary act of the people of this country. He ventured to say that there were no finer set of men in India than the loyal educated chiefs. (Cheers.) A retired and very distinguished British general told him the other day that the existence of the ruling princes of India was now considered by the Indian Government as an essential feature of the government of that country. That feeling was creating a loyalty in India of which they had no conception. To Englishmen our King was a constitutional monarch. To Indians their Emperor was more than that—he was there by Divine right, and they would do any mortal thing for him.

(Hear, hear.) He looked to the future of Anglo-Indian relations optimistically and cheerfully; but if they were to pay their proper homage to their King it was only right that the Government of India should see that the authority of the Ruling Princes was respected, and that assistance should be given in making him respected. (Hear, hear.) He believed in the full justice and honesty of purpose of the British Government in India. There was not a service in the wide world which did its duty in a foreign land with a greater sense of justice than the military and civil servants of India, but where mistakes had been made—and no Government was perfect—he thought Cæsar might unbend and acknowledge his error. (Hear, hear.) When they read of the malcontents in England, might he not make an apology for the malcontents of India? (Hear, hear.)

BOXING.

OPENING OF THE SEASON AT THE N. S. CLUB.—Last Monday night was the first special show of the season at the National Sporting Club, Covent Garden, when, following the usual custom, the go-ahead executive had arranged a remarkably strong programme. As is invariably the case on these occasions, many prominent sportsmen lent distinction to the proceedings, while a number of other sports who usually require a deal of coaxing out of arm-chairs were noticed in the company.

The club executive in their earnest endeavour to place before the members and visitors a programme bristling with good things had succeeded in arranging at least three contests, any one of which would have been considered the leading feature on occasions. Among our heavy-weights Ian Hague, of Rotherham, has made such rapid progress that very high honours are considered by many to be within his reach. He on this occasion was matched to meet Charlie Wilson, of Notting Hill, an opponent fully capable of extending his man. They were boxing at catch-weights for £175 in a bout limited to ten rounds. Last April, it will be remembered, Wilson defeated Jack Scales in Paris, and a month later Hague also beat Scales at Sheffield. When the Yorkshireman followed up the latter success with a victory over Corporal Sunshine at headquarters, one could see that his friends had justification for their confidence.

It is some time since Digger Stanley (Fulham) has been seen in an important engagement, and much curiosity was evinced as to how he would fare in his 20 rounds match with Sam Keller (Mile End) at 8st. 2lb. for £110. The latter has shown such excellent form in America, and also since his return to this country, that he was expected to give his more experienced adversary a busy period in the ring. Stanley's list of successes is one of which he has reason to be proud, for they include victories over Owen Moran, the late George Dixon, Wally Morgan, Harry McDermott, Ike Bradley, Jimmy Walsh, to name only a few. Bradley he defeated as recently as March last.

I append full details of the Twenty Round Contest and the Ten Round turn between the big men of the Evening:—

TWENTY ROUNDS CONTEST.

Digger Stanley (Fulham) beat Sam Keller (Mile End).

Keller was seconded by Dai Dollings and Arthur Gutteridge, while Stanley had in his corner Sharkey, Johnson, and Bill Baxter. The stakes were £25 a side and the club purse.

Round 1.—They quickly got to work, and whilst Stanley tried the left, his opponent introduced the right smartly on the ribs. Clever footwork by the former served him, but equally fine headwork enabled Keller to evade punishment.

Round 2.—Both made the body the objective at this meeting, Keller in particular landing hard with each hand. On trying again, however, Stanley met him capitally by means of a right on the ear, only to receive in exchange a nasty half-arm jolt.

Round 3.—Rather inclined to leave himself open at times, Keller narrowly escaped a swinging right, yet he was able to keep his man on the move. A splendid straight left by Stanley, however, shook him up somewhat, and Keller found it necessary to lean for support on his man.

Round 4.—Stanley began to use a straight left to advantage, bringing it full in the face twice cleverly. Later both hands went to work, and it required all the powers of defence Keller possessed to prevent scoring. Coming to close range, the pair indulged in rather too much holding.

Round 5.—Nothing of note occurred during this period, the referee's voice being heard continually. Kidney punches were varied by an occasional attempt to land the right.

Round 6.—The pace the pair had travelled now began to tell, but Stanley was generally first. His blows had nothing like the power of his opponent's, for whenever the stronger visitations of Keller found a resting place they told.

Round 7.—By this period of the bout there could have been little separating the men, but Stanley introduced a nice left straight in the face that served him. Keller got in a right on the ribs just as the round closed.

Round 8.—Another uninteresting round this proved, for the men were repeatedly in holds. Keller came out the better in the few blows exchanged, for although once Stanley managed a clever left there was no power behind it.

Round 9.—Keller woke up a trifle now, and forced matters, but Stanley bided his time, and gauging his distance nicely, brought home both hands smartly on the head. Then Keller weaved in, and the left found the side of the jaw.

Round 10.—A nasty upper-cut by Keller proved the feature of this round, and did his opponent no good. The latter, however, stood his ground well, though palpably tiring. By half-way, honours appeared to be about easy.

Round 11.—Very early Stanley tried the right when good headwork served Keller. The round afterwards furnished a long spell of holding, both contestants being at fault.

Round 12.—Two capital straight lefts in the first half-minute set Stanley thinking, and coming together again Keller piled up for himself a long series of points. Repeating the movement just later, he went for his man in a style that gained for him a hearty round of applause. It was decidedly Keller's round.

Round 13.—Stanley's face began to show the visitations of Keller's deliveries, and he had obviously lost some of his sprightliness. Twice Keller troubled him with rights on the ribs, and the former was now ahead.

Round 14.—Keller followed his man round the ring, as the latter was inclined to take a breather. He, however, once brought the right across well, but was too low for the jaw.

Round 15.—Both became rather wild during this bout, until Keller settling down got in right and left on the neck. Stanley took matters rather easy towards the close, and the pair started holding again.

Round 16.—Keller started in hurricane style, but after introducing the left straight on the face, they were again in holds. Just before they took corners Stanley woke up and wiped off some of the score against him.

Round 17.—Keller was at his opponent immediately after leaving his corner, and drove him to the ropes by getting a persistent left to work. Then the old fault came into evidence, and what appeared like being a good round died out.

Round 18.—The contest went on with little variation, but as the round closed Keller's right and left went to work hard on the body, and served him well.

Round 19.—A succession of hard rights on Stanley's ribs marked the early periods. Stanley, however, came in nicely later with a straight drive on the jaw, only there was not sufficient power for it to have effect.

Round 20.—The round found each anxious to finish off the bout, and Keller missed a right that would have settled the business. At the end the verdict went to Stanley on points, the decision being well received.

TEN ROUNDS CONTEST.

Ian Hague (Mexborough) beat Charlie Wilson (Notting Hill).

A contest for £50 a side and the club purse of £75, in which Hague was seconded by Jack Scales, Law, Head, and Bill Baxter, those in Wilson's corner being Arthur Gutteridge, Jack Kingsland, Mike Coppola, and Johnson.

Round 1.—Wilson was obviously the better man at the start, and got to work with the left on the head two or three times. His opponent, however, retaliated splendidly, and getting the left home straight on the face, followed by planting the right on the jaw, and Wilson seemed done. Hague proved too slow to finish the bout, and the round ended.

Round 2.—Hague shaped well, and planted several nice lefts straight that caused trouble. Wilson was game, and though having to put up with a number of rights on the body, he himself lost a splendid chance of knocking out his man.

Round 3.—This was a rousing meeting. Wilson almost had his man "groggy" in the first seconds with a clipping swing but the ex-amateur was too wild to finish his work, and Hague gradually came round again.

Round 4.—A couple of wild swings by Hague marked the first seconds of this round. He missed the mark by a yard but a minute later Wilson was sent to the boards, and took seven seconds to regain his feet. Very weak now, the Londoner was again knocked down, with a terrific right-hander, and on this occasion he was six seconds before resuming.

Round 5.—Weight was telling its tale now. Nearly all the power had departed from Wilson's blows, and although Hague missed three chances, he at length won with a flush hit on the face, sending Wilson to the boards and out.

SECUNDERABAD JUNIOR TOURNAMENT.

FINAL.

13TH HUSSARS "A" TEAM vs. ROYAL FUSILIERS.—These teams met in the final on the 30th ultimo, the Hussars winning by 6 goals to 3. Colonel Cookson and the officers of the 29th Lancers were "At Home," and Mrs. Bimington gave away the cup to the winners.

First Chukker.—The Hussars pressed at the start and scored a goal. The Fusiliers got away with the ball on several occasions but failed in front of goal.

Second Chukker.—Twist took the ball down for Lockett to score the second goal for the Hussars, who did most of the attacking in this period. A foul against the cavalrymen was not taken advantage of.

Third Chukker.—The Fusiliers' chukker. After one unsuccessful attempt a goal was registered by Wilson. Opportunities were missed by the Royals and play ended in midfield.

Fourth Chukker.—Wilson got away but was ruled offside. Play then ruled up and down. Clarke fell and was badly shaken, and in the confusion the Hussars put on a goal.

Fifth Chukker.—Cope rushed the ball down and hit a goal for the Fusiliers, but thereafter the Hussars attacked for the rest of the period. Twist and Dangar each scored goals and Lockett was twice very near scoring.

Sixth Chukker.—The Fusiliers attacked but could not maintain the pressure. Dangar got away and hit a goal and just missed another, then the Fusiliers returned to the attack once more, and at length Wilson got through and put on another point. Final score: 13th Hussars 6 goals. Royal Fusiliers 3 goals.

THE DANGERS OF SPORT.

THE accident to Mr. Balfour while playing golf at St. Andrews links—an accident which might easily have had far more serious results than was happily the case—is a reminder that there is no form of sport without its attendant dangers. Most people have been apt to regard golfing accidents as being confined to the breakage of clubs, the removal of pieces of turf from the teeing ground, and so forth, but now a mishap to a statesman who looms large in the public eye (coupled with a few recorded cases of somewhat similar accident, affords sensational proof that far more serious risk must be encountered by those who indulge in this justly popular pastime.

In football the dangers of the game are so obvious that the public tends to overrate them, if anything, and a fatal accident at rare intervals occuring in the many tens of thousands of matches which are played each year is quite sufficient to make certain nervous people cry out against such a "brutal" sport. More rarely players meet their deaths upon the cricket field, while polo is notoriously as dangerous as fox-hunting, or even more so; but in all these sports players are content to take their chances. With golf it is another matter.

Men who have passed the age when any sort of violent exertion is neither pleasant nor desirable have come to regard gold as a safe outlet for such energies as they possess; yet now they find themselves faced with the hideous truth that they may lose something more than temper—perhaps even life itself—at the game.

The worst of it is that there is no absolutely safe refuge for those who would fain put the dangers of sport behind them. Croquet at a first glance may appear to offer the desired haven, but people have tripped over croquet hoops before now, and that with most unhappy results. Even ping-pong has, no doubt, its dark records, though these may not find their way into the public Press. It is so easy, in the excitement of the game, to fall over the cat and cut one's head open against the corner of the sideboard; and sprained ankles must have been fairly common. Perhaps such disaster had their share in driving the game out of fashion.

Then, again, there was diabolo—an even more short-lived craze. It was perhaps hardly popular among those who claimed to be considered sportsmen, but, at any rate, it seemed to provide for the young a pleasant change from soft-ball cricket and sand-castle building—children, by the way, have been overtaken by the tide and drowned while building sand-castles. Yet diabolo claimed its victims the heavy spool falling from a height having in several cases inflicted fatal injuries.

The moral of all this is that we must either make up our minds to take our lives in our hands when we indulge in sport, or we must devote ourselves to its sedentary forms. It is evidently in games where you move about that the danger comes in, but we do not remember to have heard of anyone receiving injuries of a fatal or even a serious nature while playing draughts, tiddledywinks, or beggar-my-neighbour. Still there is always an opponent's temper to be reckoned with, and, perhaps, bearing this in mind, games for one are the safest.

Patience, which has many attractive forms, and solitaire may be recommended as amusements to those who wish to avoid the element of danger in sport, but we doubt whether they will make any serious inroads on other recognised forms of recreation.

A Local Government Board official recently paid a business visit to a Midland town, and requested the cab driver to take him to a certain Councillor's residence. On arriving there he found it to be a small greengrocer's ship. Referring to his papers, he asked to be driven to one of the Aldermen. On arriving he noticed the name on the sign, underneath being the legend, "Tailor. Repairs neatly executed." "Surely this must be a mistake," he said. "No, sir," replied the cabman; "this is the Alderman's, and if ye goes to the Town Hall to-morrow ye'll see him a-sitting on the Bench along o' the other Magistrates." "Well, then," said the official, "drive me to the Mayor of the town." "I'm the Mayor, sir," replied the cabby.

Mother (solicitously): "I think, my child, that young man of yours is much too forward. You must sit on him."

Daughter: "Oh, I often do mamma, and he seems to like it."

" Look at that boy, I exclaimed.

Sherlock Holmes's keen gaze followed my own.

The urchin now sketched in pencil on the drawing-room wall. Now he carved his name on the piano.

Anon, laughing lightly, he spilled milk on a Louis Seize fauteuil.

" In heaven's name——" I cried.

" Calm yourself, my dear Watson," Sherlock Holmes interposed. " There is no need for interference here. Do you understand? That villa has been rented furnished for the season!"

Solution of Problem No. 449.

1 Q—B 8	B x B	2 B—R 7 (mate)

Problem No. 450.

Black—7 pieces.

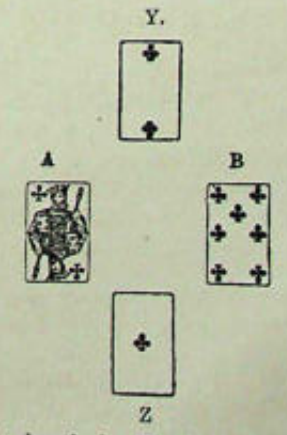
White—5 pieces.
White to play and mate in four moves.

Cards.

BRIDGE.

Solution to Problem No. 75.

Z will win and save the game if he can make four tricks in clubs and one in diamonds. If he goes into clubs at once, however, the adversaries will clear hearts, and he will then only make his clubs, after which A B must make three hearts (since A had not less than five originally), the ace of diamonds, and the ace and king of spades. Practically his only chance, therefore, is to make a trick in diamonds before disclosing his strength in clubs, and he should accordingly lead a small diamond to the queen at trick 2, in the hope that the ace is with B, or, if with A, that it will be held up. If the queen of diamonds wins he should then lead a small club, when if A holds an honor singly guarded he will probably put it on, and continue the heart lead. The finesse in clubs will then give Z the odd trick and game. The same result follows if the king and queen of clubs are both with B.



Problem No. 76.

Score : A, B, 0 ; Y, Z, 0. Z deals and declares hearts. Y's and Z's hands are as follows :—

Y's Hand (dummy) ; Hearts, 7, 3, 2 ; diamonds, 5, 4 ; clubs, 8, 6, 4, 2 ; spades, queen, 10, 9, 2.

Z's Hand (dealer) ; hearts, ace, queen, 8, 6, 5, 4 ; diamonds, ace, king, queen, 2 ; clubs, ace, 3 ; spades, 7.

The first trick is as follows :—

How ought Z to play the hand, and why?

THE YEAR'S RECORD OF A GREAT MUSEUM.

THE annual "Return" to Parliament (equivalent to the annual reports of minor institutions) of the British Museum always affords a mine of miscellaneous information in regard to a whole host of subjects, especially to those fortunate persons capable of reading between the lines; and the issue for 1907, which has been recently published affords no exception to the general rule. The public are, of course, capable of observing for themselves the additions and improvements made to the exhibition-series; but in regard to the enormous study or store series which forms the most important portion of the natural history departments, they have practically no means of knowing what they get for their money except from this "blue book." And a very cursory inspection will suffice to show that so far as Zoology is concerned, they get a very great deal for their expenditure; for out of a total of 75,804 specimens received during the year under review no less than 61,571 were acquired by presentation or bequest, while another thousand were obtained by exchange.

It is not, of course, to be supposed that, in most groups at any rate, anything more than a small fraction of this enormous series of specimens, represented species new to the collection. But for the requirements of modern methods of Zoological investigation it is essential to have very large series of specimens of every species from all portions of its range, in order to determine its local races and its limits of variation. Hence, these enormous yearly additions to the collection of Zoological specimens.

In the department of books perhaps the most notable addition is a collection of no less than seventy-one English volumes printed previous to the year 1640, one of these being printed by William Caxton at Westminster in 1481. This is an "Indulgence" issued on the authority of Pope Sixtus IV to one Johannes de Gigliis to collect money for the defence of Rhodes, and is one of the only two copies known to be extant.

Another purchase of exceptional interest is a large Latin Psalter, Hymnary, etc., with a partial Anglo-Saxon gloss, written in the south of England (possibly at Canterbury) in the latter part of the tenth century, and decorated with fine ornamental initials. It belonged successively to Archbishop Cranmer, Henry Fitz Alan, Earl of Arundel, and John, Lord Lumley, and was perhaps at one time in the Royal Library, in which Lord Lumley's collection was absorbed after his death in 1609.

Reference may also be made, as a "curio," to a wooden book, composed of eight tablets fastened together by silk cords, with writing in Greek of a grammatical character, of the third century on seven of the pages. This was found in Egypt, and was no doubt intended for school use.

Indian archæologists will be specially interested in a number of Sanskrit manuscripts written in the S'arada character, and for the most part probably dating from the sixteenth century.

Passing over the additions to the series of Egyptian and classical antiquities, we note under the heading of Asia, the gift by the Secretary of State for India in Council of a portion of an extremely valuable series of antiquities discovered by Dr. M. A. Stein in Chinese Turkestan during 1900-01, the remainder being assigned to the Calcutta and Lahore Museums. It comprises 250 objects of terra-cotta, stone, bronze, wood, glass, and textile ; the principal sites represented being Yangi-Arik, Togujai, Yotkan, Dandan-Uiliq, Niya, Endere, and Rawak-Vihara. The series dates from about the third to eighth century of our era, and includes statuettes, panel and fresco paintings, furniture, seals and Buddhist stucco reliefs.

In the department of coins and medals we may refer to the gift by the Government of Bombay of five silver "larins" or the fish-hook money of Western India from the Rahiagiri district of Bombay. We confess to complete ignorance of this strange medium of exchange, and should like to hear something about it from any of our readers who may be experts on the subject. The Government of the Central Provinces likewise figures in the list as the donor of a series of silver and copper coins of the Bamanis, the Arab Governors of Sind, the Moghul Emperors, and of modern Kashmir. A number of other Indian coins and medals were also presented during the year by private donors, among whom is Mr. Evelyn Grant Duff.

Among the donors to the Natural History collection occurs the name of the Prince of Wales, as having presented the skeleton of an Indian elephant obtained in Mysore during the recent tour of His Royal Highness in India. This reminds us that the only mounted specimen of the Indian elephant at present exhibited in the Museum to the public is a makhana brought home by His Majesty King Edward from his Indian tour (as Prince of Wales) in the seventies. Here, then, is a grand opportunity for one of the great Indian Princes to present to the Museum the complete skin, skull, and ivory of a really fine Indian tusker, which, when set up, would properly represent the species in the great national collection.

During the year, two complete okapi skins were presented to the Museum,—one by Major Powell Cotton and the other by Mr. Boyd Alexander—both of which are now mounted in the public galleries. The museum was also enriched by the gift of the collection made by the Alexander-Gosling expedition from Nigeria to the Nile—an expedition which will be ever memorable on account of the death of its two leaders, Captain Gosling and Captain Claude Alexander. Another important African collection made during the year is one from Mount Ruwenzori which proved to contain a number of new and interesting forms.

By the liberality of the Duke of Bedford a collector was dispatched to obtain mammals in Japan, Korea, etc., which resulted in the addition of a large series of skins to the collection, although none of these, as might have been expected represented really interesting new species ; the new forms being for the most part sub-species of mice, rats, voles, bats, and such like vermin, interesting enough to the specialist, but not appealing to the general public or the sportsman.

Perhaps the most important collection from Asia received during the year was one from North-Eastern China made and presented by Mr. F. W. Styan, a gentlemen engaged in commerce, who has for many years devoted the whole of his spare time to the interests of natural history. This collection, which has a very considerable cash value, includes something like 10,000 bird skins, but has not been thoroughly examined. As regards number of specimens, all other collections are, as usual, put into the shade by the addition to the insect collection, which this year reaches the enormous total of 37,600 items. How to keep this insect-collection up to date and in proper order in respect to names and classification is, we believe, a problem which causes much trouble and anxiety to the authorities of the Museum, and little wonder if it goes on increasing at this alarming rate !

To those conversant with Zoological progress, a survey of the Museum report will often reveal some of the investigations on which members of the staff are engaged. The items of specimens of charr from six different British lakes are, for instance, counterbalanced by the appearance of certain scientific articles on this group of fishes ; while a large augmentation of biting-flies is parallelled by a mass of new information concerning these troublesome insects, which has been recently published.

With this we take leave of this wonderful testimony to the interest taken by the British nation as a whole in natural history.

Sporting & Athletic Notes.

The Tollygunge Club wound up their season with a full card of six events on Saturday and some of the racing was extremely interesting, notably the Farewell Cup and the Alipore Cup, though the bend into the straight, always a source of danger when a big field is running owing to its sharp turn and nearly upright fence was responsible for an accident in each of these events.

Mr. Deakin when riding Nirvana in the Farewell Cup got a really bad cut across the shin and had to pull up and Mr. Levetus on Dynamite in the Alipur Cup hit his knee but was not so badly damaged. The first named misadventure probbably robbed Nirvana of a place as though she had lost the lead she was still running strong and most likely would have been "with them" at the finish. For some reason or other the Gordon's band was not in attendance and the afternoon lost something of its gaiety in their absence.

The Gurriah Plate was first set down for the delectation of the public and the three ponies starting, Primrose (Mr. Galstaun), Lady Mana (Mr. Barrow), and Meprise (Mr. Evers), were all well backed. Meprise made the running but was collared by Primrose in the straight and the two had a glorious tussle all the way home. Meanwhile, Lady Mana coming up easily, a bit wide on the outside seemed to have the measure of them both. Primrose, however, made a great effort at the finish and in the opinion of the judge just shoved her head in front at the end.

The Russa Plate was a very dull affair. Only Lady Gold and Maisie went to the post and though the former is no doubt much the better mare of the two and is looking gloriously fit, seven furlongs is not at all her game, and the lightly weighted Maisie galloped clean away from her and won very easily.

The Final Chase, was another race of the same sort. Of the probable starters Seditious had fallen in a school on Thursday, broken a leg and has been destroyed. Raffles who was boomed as the certain winner with the other out of the way was reported slightly lame as a result of the same school, Ruby was sold, Boolara had been playing Absolom tricks in the jungle with his owner and neither was keen on chasing and so on down the list till eventually only Matsumata and Moachim were left in, and the latter ran clean away from his big antagonist and won as he pleased.

The Farewell Cup however made up for the deficiencies of the other two races. Eight starters and six of them well fancied is pretty good for Tollygunge and the race itself was full of interest. Nirvana made the pace very hot followed by Tehee, Blix, Leading Lady, and then Lollipop waiting behind. Tehee passed the leader first and then Blix came alongside him. There was a bit of a jostle as they swung round the bend and Mr. Deakin got put on the rails and had to pull up as we described above. Blix and Tehee then went on, till Mr. Evers found an opening and cleverly brought Lollipop through just at the right moment and scored from Blix. Leading Lady came just too late to beat Tehee for third place. If the time of 1min. 44secs. is to be relied upon, it was an extraordinary fast race.

The Alipore Cup went one better with nine ponies running. Furlong and Ungava were favourities. Grey Granite as usual made the pace a hot one from Ziska, Dynamite, Kipper, and then Ungava passed Dynamite going round the top bend, the latter getting bumped on the rails. Furlong then came by them all with a wet sail and ran in an easy winner by a length. Kipper and Ungava could neither of them get up to Ziska and made a dead heat of it for third place, a length ahead of Dynamite.

Only three went out for the November Cup and Schoolboy with Mr. Galstaun up won very easily.

The hurdles were up on the course on Tuesday afternoon for the first time this season, but very little work was done. The most interesting school was done by Mallard (Alford) and Ballark (C. Hoyt). This pair went a mile over five flights at a good pace, about fourteen annas, and both fenced in splendid style. Belle Cole (Thomas) did three flights, but doesn't jump as if she liked the game at all, and after giving her jockey a very rocky passage over the first two finished up by refusing the last in very determined fashion and was only got over it at the second attempt. Mr. Bletsoe rode Lord Chester a mile over five flights and he fenced in his usual good style, but reefed a good deal as usual.

There is nothing doing on the track to write about yet, as the great majority of the animals here have recently come up and are only going slow at present. The last lot to arrive were Ramshaw's. He has a very choice string this year and should win a lot of races. Chivalry looks much improved, and Shamfight, Lovania, Fizz, Wakeful, Florrie, Nobleman, Not Yet and Chota are in tip-top form. Tommy Thomas came up in charge of the batch and The Bedouin arrived later with Byramjee's lot. Colin Barrett is going to ride for the stable again this year.

An English correspondent writes :—"There is ground for anticipating an early rearrangement of the King's racing affairs, which will involve the giving up of Egerton House, the most princely training establishment, perhaps, which has ever existed. In that case Marsh would be installed elsewhere as private trainer to His Majesty.

"Marsh has been at Egerton House for many years and it was from there he sent out Persimmon to win the Derby for his Royal employer (then Prince of Wales) and Diamond Jubilee to sweep the board of the classic races in 1900. Certain other owners have been privileged by the King to train at Egerton House, among them being the late Duke of Devonshire (who, however, some years before his death sent his horses to West Goodwin to be trained privately, and later became a patron of the Beckhampton stable), and Lord Wolverton, Mr. Arthur James, and Mr. J. W. Larnach, owner of the sensational 100 to 1 Derby winner Jeddah, whose stable companion Dieudonne started favourite but failed to stay the distance.

"Grafton House, the large, untenanted mansion opposite the avenue leading from the new station, will, no doubt, be Marsh's future residence. The place formerly belonged to Baron de Hirsch, who entertained lavishly when in residence. After his death it passed into the possession of Sir Ernest Cassel, but, excepting a few days in the Coronation year, when Sir Pertab Singh and other visitors from India, with their suites, occupied it, the mansion was long unused. Ultimately, Major-General Sir Stanley Clark, Equerry to the King acquired it, as it was locally hoped and understood, for His Majesty, and soon after this the Royal motor-cars and carriages and horses and some of the Royal servants were installed on the premises during race weeks, but save for this the place has been untenanted."

ANOTHER American racing invasion of the British Isles commenced late last month, when sixty-five horses were landed at Tilbury from the S.S. Minnehaha. They belong to well-known American sportsmen, who have been practically driven out of the States by the law passed by Governor Hughes prohibiting betting on race tracks.

Among the owners represented are Mr. August Belmont, chairman of the New York Jockey Club, and owner of Norman III., the winner of the 2,000 guineas, Mr. Whitney (whose father won the Derby with Volodyovoski), Mr. H. G. Duryea, and Mr. J. R. Keene.

Mr. Belmont's horses will be placed under the charge of Watson at Newmarket, but Mr. Whitney is taking his trainer from the States. His name is Joyner, and Ballaton Lodge, Newmarket, has been taken. Mr. Keene's horses will go to Beckhampton to be trained by S. Darling. Several of the horses will be sent to France to race.

The thoroughbreds included many of great value. The most famous is Colin, the property of Mr. J. R. Keene. He has never been beaten, and has won £36,000 in stake money in two years. It is not certain that he will stand training again, and if S. Darling thinks he cannot get the horse fit he will be sent to the stud.

AMONG our budget of English turf news to-day will be found details of the race for the Cambridgeshire Stakes. As will have been gleaned from our Special Telegram of the 29th ultimo, it was a huge surprise and yet another big English race this season went all in favour of the bookmakers. It was a regular debacle, so far as the fancied candidates were concerned; indeed, the race was more startling and disconcerting than the Cesarewitch. Marcovil, was one of those animals which was never even dreamed about as a debatable factor in connection with the race. Probably few people noticed that he was running at all, for he had not previously been seen on a racecourse this year. The circumstances surrounding his victory are in a way romantic. The horse used to belong to the late Duke of Devonshire, in whose colours he ran second to Polar Star for the Jubilee Stakes, and at the sale of his Grace's stud in the spring, Mr. Luscombe commissioned his trainer, Charles Waugh, to buy him for a stallion, simply because he was a fine, big horse, and was a son of Marco, who won the Cambridgeshire for Mr. Luscombe in 1895. Waugh got the horse for something between 900 and 1,000 guineas, which was considerably below the price which Mr. Luscombe was prepared to pay for him. In the circumstances, this gentleman instructed Waugh to train him, if he could. The horse's forelegs were, however, so bad that this appeared a task fraught with much difficulty and anxiety. Waugh, however, blistered him and formulated certain treatment which, as the sequel shows, has had beneficial results. Long prices have frequently been laid against winners of the Cambridgeshire, but never more than 50 to 1. These were the odds laid against the great Bendigo when he won in 1883, and similar odds were laid against the chance of Red Eagle in 1859 and Montargis in 1873. There have been several winners at 40 to 1, among the most notable being Georgic (1898), Gloriation (1887), Isonomy (1878), Gardevisure (1865), Eurydice (1858), and Sultan (1855).

OUR Poona correspondent writes:—The indignant little company of owners and punters who presented the W. I. T. C. with a petition during the Poona season with a view to "purging the Turf of its impurities" have met with what they surely must have expected. Cut and dried, the Secretary and his Stewards refuse to give their attention to a petition signed by others than owners and "beg to return" the result of doubtless many hours of careful study! Whether actually the names of defaulters appeared amongst the signatures or not, one could not reasonably have expected otherwise, as whatever occurred, inconsistent as it may have been, has already been passed over as satisfactory in the opinion of the executive and they cannot be asked to go back and reconsider. The labours of the petitioners are, however, not in vain. They have shewn that if things are not managed satisfactorily they are ready to take some measures which will give them their due. If the petition has been returned, supposedly unread, we may rest assured that a strict vigilance will be kept in future both in the actual races and in the betting ring. Rumours have been rife of late, and we hear of the formation of a mammoth company, financed by wealthy owners to build an opposition course on which the breath of scandal will never be allowed to blow. We hear of a demand being made to Government with the object of bringing the Gambling Act to bear on the ring at Mahaluxmi—but smoke rises in time, and I do not suppose we shall see much change on and after the twelfth.

THE race horse Milner II, imported by Joe Kendall, is for sale cheap—£200.

THE story of a guest, a gamekeeper, and a "tip" is told in a letter signed "An Owner of Shooting" published in The Times last month.

A gentleman, says the correspondent, was invited to a shoot in Scotland at two places close together, but immediately after he arrived at the first house he received a telegram calling him back to London. He, however, had one day's shooting, and before leaving for London that night he gave the head keeper £1, and asked him to send his gun, etc., to the other house.

On arriving at the second house the gentleman found that his gun had not arrived, "whereupon," continues the correspondent, "he wrote to the keeper asking him to forward it at once, and he received a reply stating that when he, the keeper, had received the other £4 to which he was 'entitled' the gun would be forwarded; meantime it was detained till payment was made." A letter to the keeper's master brought the reply that "he never interfered between his guests and his servants in the matter of tips," and the gentleman ascertained that the master "paid the keeper no wages, but left him to get what he could out of the guests."

THE Viceregal party had good sport during their three days shoot at Bikanir. The bag included 950 sandgrouse, 200 quail and 400 duck.

WE congratulate our good friends Messrs. Charles Lancaster and Co., the well-known English Gun and Rifle Manufacturers, on the award by the International Jury of the Franco-British Exhibition, of a Diploma for grand prize, Highest Honours for the exhibit of guns, rifles, etc.

IT is sometimes a wise man who knows his own dog. A good story, which has the merit of being true, is told of a gentleman who took his favourite to a show in England. The dog lived in the house and was a great pet. Soon after it was benched, the owner saw another exhibitor apparently walking his dog about. He was up in arms at once. "Why have you taken my dog off the bench?" he asked. "It is mine, not yours," was the reply. Explanations and comparisons followed, when it was found that there was a truly remarkable resemblance between the two animals. The sequel was still more amusing. A little later on the first gentleman found his wife seated, calmly feeding and petting the other man's dog, under the impression that it was her own favourite. We do not learn whether either took a prize, and if so, which. The unwary judge may confound one dog with another, but that is quite a different matter.

ALTHOUGH the Waterloo Cup Meeting does not begin until 17th February keen coursing men are already casting about for probable winners. The Countess of Sefton owns a promising bitch in Shady Girl (Strange Mystery—Slish); who won the Lytham Cup in great style. Her further performances will be watched with much interest. Great would be the rejoicing at Altcar if Lady Sefton won the blue riband. Silhouette, a litter sister to this bitch, was the runner-up in the final of the Waterloo Cup this year, being beaten, it will be remembered, by Mr. Hulton's Hallow Eve. If all accounts are true, Long Span, Sir R. W. Buchanan-Jardine's 1907 winner, will again have to be seriously reckoned with. Long Span had a terrible gruelling this year in his course with Royal Crest. They happened to be slipped on a particularly strong hare, and both were completely pumped. However, he managed to survive the next round, and it was not until the following day that he was knocked out in the semi-final by his own sister, the ultimate winner.

A NOT altogether dull time had two keepers at the London Zoo late last month.

The increasing chill in the air was the signal for transferring the more delicate tropical eagles and vultures from the summer open-air cages behind the refreshment rooms to the sheltered cages near the pelicans. The two Pondicherry vultures set the harpy an excellent example, both surrendering quietly.

The harpy was made of sterner stuff, however. He is one of the largest eagles in the gardens, and his talons are almost twice as large as a golden eagle's.

His leg is as thick as a young girl's wrist, his beak is like a razor, and his disposition is either "diabolical" or "plucky," according to whether you are evicting him from his cage yourself or watching someone else do it.

Two keepers, with brooms in their hands, entered his cage. The harpy elevated the extraordinary grey ruff that characterises him and attacked the keepers with great fury.

In an atmosphere of feathers the keepers fought the able-bodied harpy until, to the great bird's surprise, he found himself backed up into a corner, with a broom across his chest. He bit furiously at the broom, but an intrepid keeper gripped his wings from behind, and he was carried to his sheltered winter quarters giving vent to his temper in loud curious whistles.

Mr. Dunbar Brander, writing in the Indian Forester for November, draws attention to the falling-off in the size of tigers in the Central Provinces. "Roughly speaking," he says, "the Central Provinces may be divided into central districts and outlying districts. The central districts are those which are almost entirely surrounded by forests, typical of which are Mandla or Betul. The outlying districts are those which contain large tracts of cultivated ground bordering on their forest areas, typical of which are the Jubbulpore or Hoshangabad districts. No marked degeneration has been noticed in the central districts as yet, although a certain amount has probably taken place, as it is reasonable to suppose that the causes of degeneration in the outlying districts will in time equally effect the central district.

During the current year the following adult tigers were shot in the Hoshangabad district having the following dimensions :—

Do ...	8′ 0″	...	260 ,,
Male ...	8′ 11″	2′ 9″	383 ,,

The average of the six adult females works out to 8′ 1½″ in length and 265lbs. in weight. The only adult male shot was 8′ 11″ and weighed 383lbs. The measuring was done in straight line between pegs driven in at the tip of the nose and the tail, the weighing was carried out on a spring balance.

In comparing the above figures with those obtained in past years, I have attempted to select figures got from tigers shot in outlying districts as, for purposes of comparison, it is somewhat misleading to compare tigers from, for instance, a district like Mandla with those of Hoshangabad.

About seven years ago the average length and weight of an adult female was 8′ 5″ and the weight was 298lbs. Since then the degeneration is steady and gradual until the present year shows a loss of 3½″ in length and 33lbs. in weight. As regards males the degeneration is, quite as marked. We have got down from 9′ 2″ and 419lbs, to 8′ 11″ and 383lbs.

Several sportsmen who have had a long experience of the Provinces have noticed the same falling-off in size of the tigers from the outlying districts. The cause or causes are difficult to find, no explanation which I am able to put forward is altogether satisfactory. From old records and books of sport it is evident that the process of degeneration has been going on previous to the enormous increase of shooting in the last decade. We find in old records that tigers well over 10 feet were not so rare, and although doubts on the accuracy of many of these records may be entertained, it is impossible to reject them all. It may also be urged that measurements in former days were taken along the curves, but this, in a 10-feet tiger, would only reduce its lengths by 5″. The following, however, are a few of the modern conditions which strike me as possibly accelerating the degeneration. Shooting has increased to a remarkable degree especially in the outlying and accessible district. Generally speaking in these districts the tigers shot are not born and bred in the forests of the district, they are mostly wanderers which have come in from the central districts during the rains. It is reasonable to suppose that the younger and less powerful animals would be pushed out from the more favourable central districts, but this in itself does not fully explain the matter.

Tigers probably do not reach maturity until they are four years old, but for many years after, probably 10 or 15, they increase enormously in bulk and weight. These heavy old tigers are now getting scarce, and at a guess it is possible the average age of the tigers of the outlying districts has been reduced by one-fourth in the last ten years. If this is one of the chief causes of the degeneration noticed, we may expect the process to abate shortly. The question is one of general interest to sportsmen, and I trust some reader who has had more experience of the matter than I have, will give us the benefit of his views on the matter.

During the visit of the American Fleet to Perth, Western Australia, last September, Tom Burrows gave another extraordinary illustration of endurance club-swinging by beating his own record of 65 hrs. 20 mins., established at Adelaide last July and also a record of 63 hrs. just set up at Capetown by Frank Lloyd. Burrows kept on without cessation for 66 hrs. 3 mins., the odd minutes being devoted to an exhibition of electric fancy swinging. The performance was properly authenticated by a small army of watchers, of whom at least three were always present.

At the annual meeting of the Hounslow and Brentford Auxiliary of the Royal Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, Miss G. Cross, of Brentford, told an amusing story of canine sagacity on the part of a dog belonging to a friend. The animal was in the habit of going to a baker's once a week for a penny bun for its mistress, taking the money in its mouth. One day the attendant at the shop gave the dog its parcel as usual, but the animal opened it, and, finding it contained only a halfpenny bun, replaced it on the counter. This story appears entitled to the cake. Any advance on this ?

"J.P.B." writes as follows to an Edinburgh paper :—It has often been remarked how frequently tom cats in the country take to hunting on their own account as they advance in years. When living at an out-of-the-way farm in County Sligo (Ireland), I knew an extraordinary individual of the genus. Very few rats were seen alive about the farm during his life-time, though they were occasionally found lying dead, half disembowelled from the furious kicking of his powerful hind claws as he lay on his side and held the rat by the neck with his teeth. When summer came he used often to bring in a rabbit in the morning. Never an old buck or doe or an under-sized rabbit—I suspect he kept the very small ones for his own use—but well-grown young "graziers" seven or eight weeks old. But that was not the limit of his hunting. There was a spring down in the fields, which rarely became frozen, even in the severest winter, and to it came at night snipe and wild duck that had been frozen out at other places. I expect any snipe which "Jerome"—for that was the cat's name—caught he kept for himself also, but one dark winter's morning he appeared at the door struggling with something alive. The servant girl, who let him in screamed when he rushed past her, but she soon saw it was a duck he had by the neck, which he liberated as soon as he gained the interior of the kitchen. There were tame ducks in plenty in the farmyard, but this sagacious animal was able to recognise a wild one when he saw it—it was a finely plumed mallard. He must have sprung upon it while it was drinking at the small spring among the grass. A rabbit has no great strength, and can easily be throttled by a cat but a wild drake is a strong bird with immense wing power, and the cat must have dragged it nearly a quarter of a mile over the fields—a wonderful feat. After "Jerome" attained to middle life he began to stay away from home for periods, which grew gradually more extended. He would turn up after three or four weeks' absence, having evidently lost weight while away. Then one year in the late autumn he disappeared, and was never seen or heard of again.

Jack McAuliffe, well known in Indian boxing circles, has opened an Athletic and Boxing School at the Calcutta Concert Hall in Free School Street. The Gymnasium is well equipped and assisted by Paddy Gill, another well-known pugilist, McAuliffe imparts instruction in the noble art. On Saturday evening there is to be a boxing entertainment, the piece de resistance of which will be a contest between one of the pupils and Paddy Gill. Some of our readers may be interested in Gill's record. He began his boxing career in 1905 and besides being principal in many contests during the past four years, he ran a successful school in Bombay under the patronage of the Commissioner of Police and was boxing instructor to the Elphinstone College, the Cathedral Boys' School and Byculla Boys' School while in the western capital. Appended are his chief performances :—Beat Pte Hitchens, Connaught Rangers, in nine out rounds at Ahmednagar. Beat Pte. Glister, 93rd Highlanders, in Poona, knock out in one round. Beat Pte. Sinclair, Royal Scots, at Lanowli, knock in three rounds. Drew with Dave Wilson, Royal Scots, at Bombay, three rounds. Beat Alf. Stakes, Bombay, knock out. Beat Pte. Scriben in the preliminary round of the feather weights at the Poona Tournament in 1906, but lost on points to Lce.-Cpl. Martin of the East Surreys in the semi-finals. He also fought a six-round special contest at this tournament with Pte. Tucker of the Worcesters which ended in a draw. Drew with Driver Franklin of the R.H.A. at Lucknow six rounds. This year he has twice lost to Driver Samson, R.H.A., the first time in six rounds at Lucknow, and again at Mussoorie in fifteen rounds by a narrow margin of points. The last fight was for Rs. 500, presented by Mr. Geo. Leslie, proprietor of the Skating Rink. Gill was giving away 4lbs. in weight and his opponent had the advantage of height and reach. Gill's best weight is 8st. 8lb.

Winter is here: the "blustering railer" began to blow on us early in the week, Old Sol fled precipitately—we have not seen his face since—and, as I write, the glass near the window registers 35°. Last week women were walking about in the West End in cotton frocks! Also it is drizzling, and the light has been switched on since 10 o'clock this morning. A sharp hailstorm passed over the city at noon yesterday, Yarmouth reports the first snow of the season: in short we are in for it at last. The time has arrived when we can honestly envy you Calcutta folk on the threshold of your cold weather with its perfect climate, its genial sunshine, and the incessant feasting, gaiety, sport and merry-making which make the metropolis of India, for three months, perhaps one of the most attractive spots on earth. Here's to you and all your readers Mr. Editor, may you all have a record cold weather, and may you all be on the winner of the Viceroy's Cup at long odds.

But while one grumbles at present conditions and future prospects, a certain crumb of comfort may be extracted from the reflection that there are some with whom one would not care to change places next feast of Noel, to wit the three Suffragettes—two Pankhursts and one Drummond—who, declining to be bound over as a result of their attempts to incite the populace to riot, of which I informed you in my last letter, have been sent to jail and will spend Christmas in Holloway. After all there is something in the contemplation of the misfortunes of others which is not altogether distressing to most of us. The "dauntless three" made a brave stand at Bow Street for the first two days of the case. Christable Pankhurst enacted the rôle of Portia with much credit, she cross-examined M. P.'s, she gave as much trouble as she could, she said some smart things and some that were very silly, she impeded the business of the Court, she made an impassioned final speech and then broke down utterly and perorated in sobs and threats. As she sat weeping while the stony-hearted Mr. Curtis Bennett pronounced sentence she hardly filled the mind's eye as the bold and dashing leader of a determined and successful "rush" on the House of Commons. The trio have three months to mature their further plans, for we have their assurance that they will continue in their mischievous way the moment they are released. Meanwhile, they have supplied us with the latest mechanical toy, a screamingly funny thing which may be had everywhere off the kerb stone merchants. It represents a bobby running in a Suffragette and is worked with a tube and bulb attachment (on the old familiar jumping dog idea); you press the bulb and Robert gives a most ludicrous exhibition of running in an actively resisting female.

Your sporting readers will be charging me with purveying news more suitable for a ladies' paper than for the columns of a sporting journal, but kya kurega, as you say in your parts, the burning question of the eternal feminine has set the whole of England talking this week, there is hardly any other topic but their personal assaults, hootings, demonstrations, banners, battlecries and breakages. Two of them chained themselves to the grille in the House of Commons on Wednesday night and shouted; the grille had to be cut and the pieces with the shrieking suffragettes attached were bodily removed amidst an unseemly disturbance. A band of them attempted to rush the House, three climbed on to the base of the statue of Richard Cœur de Lion and harangued till the police swarmed up the pedestal and pulled them down. The Premier's speech at the opening of a bazaar in Highbury was wrecked by another yelling contingent. Wholesale arrests and subsequent imprisonment followed, everyone of them electing to go to jail rather than pay their fines!

Allusion to these troublesome young women reminds me of a suggestion made in one of the papers this week that Sir Ralph Littler might be removed from the Middlesex bench and given the appointment of Judge of a Suffragette Appeal Court, his recent scandalous judgments being in some quarters considered more fitted for the suffragette pest than for ordinary offenders. Certes the honour and dignity of the bench would seem to demand his removal. The travesty of the law that passes for justice at the Middlesex Sessions under his chairmanship is, I am glad to hear, to be shortly made the subject of Parliamentary enquiry. Time after time his positively ferocious sentences on unfortunate wretches whose only "Crime" has been petty pilfering of food for starving wives and families have disgusted the country. His latest performances of note were: (1) sentencing a labourer, aged twenty-one, for stealing 1*s.* worth of apples, to three years' penal servitude and two years' police supervision; and (2) awarding another labouring man, aged forty, twelve months' hard labour for stealing three eggs. What would be his idea of a punishment to fit the crime of removing a tooth-pick from a restaurant table I wonder!

Messrs. Leedham Bantock and P. J. Barron are the authors of the musical piece "The Belle of Brittany," now on at The Queens. Though it is on the time honoured lines and is not quite as humorous as it might be, it pleases and soothes, and though the story is not much there is talent in the lines and some of the more diverting situations. Moreover, it is charmingly staged and has a pleasant old-world setting, it is capitally played and the music, by Howard Talbot and Marie Horne, nearly throughout raises the spirits and makes for tunefulness. The scene is laid in Brittany. It is daffodil time at the beginning of the eighteenth century. The Marquis de St. Gautier, long absent, owes money to Poquelin, a rich miller. On the very date that the miller is to take possession of the family château of the Marquis, the Marquis comes on the scene again. As he has no money, he has to cudgel his brains to retain possession of his property. He determines that his son Raymond shall marry his rich ward Mdlle. Denise de la Vire, but on the day that Poquelin's beautiful daughter Babette—the Belle of Brittany—is to be married to a famous chef, she and Raymond meet and fall in love under the trysting tree, and the Marquis's plans fall to the ground. Finally, however, the miller presents the young couple with his claim on the château as a wedding present and there is the usual satisfactory ending. Miss Maude Darrell is Toinette, the pretty, and efficient maid-servant of the Marquis. Miss Ruth Vincent is Babette and has some nice songs provided for her. Mr. Geo. Graves as the Marquis and Mr. Walter Passmore as the chef supply the fun and there are many pretty ladies dainty and good to look upon. The piece has been well received.

Most satisfactory it is to note that the Light Brigade Charge Survivors' Relief Fund benefitted much by the unusually numerous and liberal response to the efforts of those who promoted the matinée at the Alhambra last Saturday. Rarely has Mr. Roberts provided a more attractive or abundant programme. Naturally, one of the most interesting items of the entertainment was Mrs. Clement Scott's spirited recitation of Tennyson's poem, the effect of which was enormously heightened by the presence of a number of the survivors of the famous charge and by the assistance lent by the buglers and drummers of the London Rifle Brigade. Among others who volunteered their aid—the list is too long to be given in its entirety—were Miss Ada Reeve, who gave in her daintiest and most bewitching style a couple of songs from that successful musical comedy "Butterflies;" Mr. Lauri de Frece, heard to the greatest advantage in "He'd Never Been on a Farm Before;" Mr. George Giddens, in a comic recitation entitled "Little Jim on Babies;" Mr. John Bardsley, to whose refined delivery of the Flower Song from "Carmen" the audience gave a particularly enthusiastic reception; Miss Ida Rene, a clever "diseuse" and Miss Marie Dainton, in a series of popular imitations. There was also a particularly hearty welcome awaiting Mr. Hubert Carter, who by his powerful acting in his own little piece, "Punchinello," at once captured the favour of everyone present. Success, in short, was from start to finish the prevailing note of the afternoon.

Viscount Tredegar, one of the survivors of the charge of the Light Brigade, was present at a dinner which he gave to the workmen on his estate, at Bassaleg, near Newport, on Saturday, in celebration of the fifty-fourth anniversary of the battle of Balaclava. Responding to the toast of his health, his Lordship reflected with sadness on the fact that there were now living only fifteen men and four officers out of the remnant of the six hundred.

If it would be an exaggeration to say, in the words of Sydney Carton, that Mr Martin Harvey's part in "The Only Way" is a far, far better thing than he has ever done, it is far, far the most popular thing he has ever done. The revival of Freeman Wills' dramatic version of "A Tale of Two Cities" is always a safe card for Mr Harvey to play. At last Monday night's revival—for a run of three weeks only—the play was as enthusiastically received as ever. It is fairly safe to say that a large proportion of the audience had followed the romantic, tragic story of Sydney Carton several times before, but they were still genuinely moved by it.

And this is not surprising since Mr. Harvey's strong individuality is so well suited by the part. Last

Mr. Somerset Maugham's brilliant comedy, "Lady Frederick," has delighted audiences at several theatres—first it was at the Court, next at the Garrick, then at the New, then at the Criterion, and finally at the Haymarket—and it says much for the wit and sparkle of the lines and the strength of the story and situations that the play has gone on attracting full houses for a whole year. On Monday night the piece reached its anniversary, the performance being the 415th of the run, and there was a large audience at the Haymarket to celebrate her charming Irish ladyship's first birthday. Miss Ethel Irving in the name part must win the hearts of all who see her, and Mr. C. M. Lonne gives a piece of acting that has not often been surpassed during 1908. Unfortunately the comedy must shortly be withdrawn, as arrangments have been made for Miss Irving to appear in a new play at the Haymarket; but it is to be revived later on.

"Old Drury" evidently manages to do something more than make both ends meet in these strenuous days; at the annual meeting of shareholders last week the profit on the past year's working was put down at something over £20,600, and a 10 per cent. dividend was declared. Yet there were on hand certain ungrateful curmudgeons of shareholders who pointed envious fingers at the salary of Mr. Arthus Collins, the managing director, and proposed that his £5,000 a year be reduced by half. Naturally, a hot debate ensued and it is good to hear the resolution was lost. "I have had to face," said Mr. Collins in reply, "the cheers and plaudits of my audience and the calumnies of those for whom I work. I have surmounted troubles which at times seemed almost unbearable; worked day and night, week in and week out, with one object before me—the success of Old Drury. (Cheers.) I have been bullied and annoyed in a manner no man has a right to be who endeavours to do his duty. My record lies before you in the balance-sheet. Have I earned your gratitude or your blame?" A swinging majority expressed their gratitude by throwing out the curmudgeons' amendment.

The Mansion House protest against erring motorists progresses. Last Tuesday, with the Lord Mayor in the chair, the necessity for fresh legislation was further discussed. Several important people took part in the discussion and all were agreed on the urgent necessity for new measures; the Duke of Northumberland, a "whole hogger," advocated the confiscation of cars for certain definite offences! I daresay "Chukker" will refer at greater length to the meeting in his Motor Notes.

A good many people in India, especially those who have business with the eminent Agents and Bankers, Messrs. Grindlay and Co., may be interested to hear that certain innovators who clamoured to have the good old name of Parliament Street changed into Whitehall have been defeated. Westminster's City Council polled Parliament Street, with the result that out of 135 occupiers, 50 flatly opposed the change, 24 are indifferent, and 60 give no opinion. But those occupiers who have business with foreign parts were hot against the inconvenience of the alteration. Sympathising with them, the Council on Thursday informed the L.C.C. that, in their opinion, Parliament Street, which has been Parliament Street since the roadway was cut a hundred and fifty year ago, should remain Parliament Street.

Among the fashionable marriages in India this cold weather will be that between Lord Charles Fitzmaurice and Lady Violet Elliot: as it has been definitely settled to take place about the end of the year the presumption is that it will be solemnised in the Calcutta Cathedral. The young couple are sure to be the recipients of an enormous number of presents; it is notified over here that "any letter sent to them to Lansdowne House will be duly forwarded."

Disciples of Dickens in India will learn with regret of the recent death of Mr. Joseph Charles Parkinson, one of Dickens's "young men" and a frequent contributor to Household Words during the editorship of the famous novelist. He died on Saturday at the age of seventy-five.

Mr. Parkinson, who married in 1867 Miss Alice Ann Elliot, daughter of Sir George Elliot, the first baronet, was formerly in the Inland Revenue Department. He played a prominent part in the movement to promote reform in workhouse infirmaries. In 1869, he visited Egypt, and described for the Daily News the opening of the Suez Canal. He had large interests in the Galician oilfields, and was chairman of the Wankowa-Brelikow Company.

REMINISCENCES OF SOME LEOPARD HUNTS.

IV.

The traveller journeying by train between Dhond and Manmar junction, if he be in the slightest degree observant, will notice with a considerable amount of surprise the peculiar conformation of the surrounding countries. This is by no means a local eccentricity but is prevalent throughout the Deccan. About a decade past destiny had ordained that a halt on the voyage of life should be made at an old-time cantonment, which, not much more than a century ago, formed part of the military arena that gave birth to our present-day Indian Empire. The country consisted of, what might aptly be termed, flat-topped islands scattered over the face of as rich a grain and grass yielding plain as the most pessimistic of agriculturists or hypercritical cavalry men could wish to experience, the whole forming an extensive tableland averaging about 2,000 feet above sea-level. The slopes of these insular plateaus were scored with ravines, the more important ones running well in towards the centre of each islet. These rifts were in most instances clothed with moderately dense scrub jungle—a bushy oasis amid the surrounding rumnah lands and cultivated areas. No more favourable or advantageous places of retreat could possibly be found to harbour felis pardus. From such sanctuaries foraging raids on the village herds could be planned and carried out with impunity. In the daytime, the marauder, safe in the bowels of some natural cave, or spread out under cover of a friendly ledge of rock, or again ensconced in the centre of some thorny thicket, would rest, secure from molestation at the hands of exasperated graziers.

When these depredations became so frequent as to cause appreciable loss to the owners of goats and cattle, the latent apathy of the ryot would be roused, and news would be brought in or forwarded to one or other of the sportsmen in the cantonment. Or it might be that during the tramp of an ordinary day's small game shooting the tell-tale pugs of a leopard would be discovered on the margin of some water hole, or not infrequently on the soft loam of the fields surrounding a village.

With the aid of a local inhabitant, the neighbourhood would be inspected most carefully and thoroughly, and live goats would be picketted in places where felis pardus, when on the prowl, could easily obtain a meal practically at his doorstep. The selection of sites for pegging out these baits was a matter of paramount importance. Frequently, the judicious choice of a locality would lead to success in place of failure. The spot chosen would be such an one that on the following morning when the lures were being visited, each could be seen from a distance of 200 yards or more.

In the event of a goat being slain this distant view would obivate the necessity of approaching through the bush in which the feline might reasonably be expected to be enjoying its siesta, with the accompanying risk or soaring it off before the beat had been organized.

If time did not admit of such a systematic plan being adopted, the ravines would be driven on the off-chance of "spots" being at home. When a kill was obtained the first step would be to determine in which direction the line of beaters should work. This point would of necessity depend entirely on the lie of the land. To attempt to force a leopard away from cover would undoubtedly result in the beast breaking through the beaters, with the possibility of leaving his claw marks on the body of some inoffensive villager en route. On the other hand the feline when suddenly roused by the din and clatter of the advancing line would instinctively make for the nearest place of safety. To the experienced sportsman the probable route that would be taken by the quarry could be judged, and in a narrow portion of this outlet the guns would be concealed. It would next become necessary to block all other paths of egress. This would be carried out by means of men placed in prominent positions from which the exits could be carefully guarded. A shout, cough, or the breaking of a dead branch, would be quite sufficient to turn the feline back into cover. As the work of these "stops" contributed mainly to the success or otherwise of the undertaking it was necessary to select them for their intelligence. It frequently so happened that the number of men required to bar all the lateral channels of escape amounted to such a large total that if employed in these positions the strength of the beating line would be so diminished as to seriously jeopardize the ultimate success of the enterprise. In such an instance inanimate "stops" would have to be substituted in the less important situations for the living article. Experience proved that a most efficacious plan was to spread a white puggri over the bushes. A leopard when suddenly faced with an apparition of this description would invariably turn tail and dive back into less dangerous paths. The most useful and important precaution to be taken in a beat is the one that is most frequently omitted. Two men, upon whom implicit reliance can be placed, should be posted 50 to 100 yards beyond the guns. When thus in pursuit of the larger carnivora it is probably once in five times that the quarry is dropped in its tracks. The loss of many lives is attributable to the omission of this most essential provision.

One bright morning a hunter, tired with the monotony of cantonment life, marched out bent on the slaughter of game, big or small. News was imparted to him on his journey of the whereabouts of a leopard. The information seemed to be genuine, so a move was made to the ravine wherein "spots" was reported to be in hiding. The drive had hardly commenced ere the thief was descried sneaking off to one flank. A long shot was essayed at about 200 yards with a ·577 rifle, but it was impossible to determine whether the bullet had taken effect, except that it produced no responsive growl on the part of the feline, and in a flash the latter had disappeared from sight.

From the direction in which the creature was moving when last seen it was judged that refuge had been taken in the adjoining gulley. The sportsman was carrying his ·577 loaded with copper-tubed projectiles, his attendant, a sepoy, was armed with an—8-bore shot gun charged with ball. The hunter and his orderly had just topped the crest separating the two ravines, and some way above the spot where the leopard was last viewed, when, of a sudden, a body comes hustling through the air and the retainer is felled instantly and disarmed. Next moment the feline, blind with abject fury, is stretched full length on his victim, tearing, biting and worrying, giving went to nerve-shattering snarls the while, a veritable picture of demoniacal passion. Immediate action was necessary, if the life of the prostrate man was to be saved. If aim were taken at the shoulder there was grave risk of the projectile carrying on and penetrating the fallen man's chest. The bullet was placed further back, and in less than a second, the hunter, an exceptionally powerful type of humanity, is hurled down to the ground, and the fiend incarnate claims yet another victim. At this critical period some of the beaters arrive on the scene, and in combination succeed with stout bludgeons in driving off this Belial in feline flesh. The situation was indeed perilous. The hunter had received a severe bite in the joint of the left elbow and numerous scratches from the poisoned claws of the leopard. But the orderly was discovered to be in a far sadder plight. Besides bleeding profusely from several gashes and teeth holes, one thigh bone had been shattered by the bullet, and the missile had entered the flesh of the other thigh, though it was impossible to tell on the spur of the moment the actual amount of damage committed.

It was a sorry and sorrowful cavalcade that wended its tedious way into cantonments during the early hours of the following morning, containing two men stricken nigh unto death.

To allow this giant cat to roam about the country in such a condition was quite out of the question. Having once tasted human blood, and in all probability being unable by reason of its wounds to levy toll from wild or tame animals, it would be forced by the pangs of hunger to continue its attacks on mortal man. The injuries inflicted called loudly for revenge.

To effect this object an expedition was arranged which included a brother in arms, his wife, and the writer. If the animal happened to be alive, the undertaking would be attended by more than the usual quantum of danger; for this reason every argument was brought to bear in the attempt to induce the female element of the party to stay in a reasonable frame of mind at home. Exhortations proved unavailing, and stronger measures were not within my power. There was no exact clue as to the whereabouts of felis pardus; in consequence the ravines had to be beaten on the chance of a surprise encounter. In one small gorge there happened to be no suitable trees in which the guns could remain concealed, so a position had to be taken up on the ground, in as favourable a situation as could be found. My fellow sportsman had to retire in no amiable frame of mind from this beat. The remembrances of promises, extorted how or when it matters not, never to risk a ground site when in pursuit of the slinking leopard were poured forth in a spirit almost amounting to lamentations. To restore peace a somewhat sullen retreat had to be endured, and I was left alone in my glory. A shouting from the beaters, far removed from the ordinary stereotyped call with intent to scare, shews that something unusual is in the wind. Muscles become rigid and nerves tense. A half clad dusky form suddenly appears from out the maze of bushes and a beckoning arm brings me off my rocky perch. The murderer in intention if not in reality has been discovered dead on the hill side. His carcase is one seething mass of maggots rendering a near approach from leeward impossible. A minute examination of the corpse was out of the question, but enough was discovered to verify the fact that the first shot fired at long range had found a billet in the beast's stomach, and that the second bullet had struck the creature in the loins, passing out on the further side. The apparently unprovoked assault was, therefore, wholly accounted for, and was no longer food for conjecture. Blood-poisoning of the left arm set in, but by means of careful nursing and sound medical treatment, the hunter pulled through without the loss of a limb, and the glad tidings that the foul traitor had met its dues seemed to put new life into the mangled body of the orderly. This is a common superstition among the natives. Should a man get mauled by a tiger or leopard recovery will be assured provided the beast is slain.

The velocity with which a comparatively light animal like a leopard comes through the air cannot readily be imagined. The ease with which it will fell a human being even of extraordinarily powerful build, by the sheer force of its own impetus would hardly be believed, yet there can be no doubt that the force of impact could it be accurately gauged would produce some quite unexpected statistics. Those who have had the misfortune to be taken unawares by a charging leopard will no doubt verify the accuracy of this statement.

Second Day, Thursday 12th November 1908.

AN interesting card of seven events was put through this afternoon and provided good sport. Accidents in the jump races, however, marred the proceedings. Shamrock, K. C. and Shahzada all fell in the Arab C.-B. Hurdles. Mr. Platt, who was riding Shamrock, was severely bruised and had to be conveyed to hospital; the others escaped with a shaking. Spot White, the favourite in the Pony Chase, fell at the last fence, broke a leg and had to be destroyed. The 5th Cavalry were "At Home" on the course and there was a large attendance.

LANG

NEW ·470 BORE.

VELOCITY 2,250ft. sec.

This cartridge as originally designed did not, in our opinion, come up to a sufficiently high standard, and in consequence our expert visited Messrs. Kynoch's Works, and in conjunction with their experts conducted a series of experiments extending over three weeks, ultimately designing the bullets now in use for this popular rifle.

LANG'S therefore confidently claim that in collaboration with Messrs. Kynoch they were the first to introduce the ·470, and as evidence submit the following extract from the Field, and illustration of the actual diagram made before the editor of that journal.

"FIELD," 23rd March 1907: ". . . . A very valuable advance has been achieved, and Messrs. Lang are to be congratulated on their enterprise in so promptly bringing forward a rifle and cartridges complying with the two most pressing demands in sporting rifles, viz., a weapon to take the place of the prohibited ·450, and a cartridge which shows an advance in flatness of trajectory, with a diminution of recoil and pressure."

THE BEST DIAGRAM made before the Editor of the "Field" with a Rifle of this bore.

7 Shots at 100 yards with Lang's ·470 Sporting Rifle.

A Remarkable Book ON THE Preservation of Health.

The French have a particularly happy phrase which, literally translated, means "The Joy of Living." It conjures up in the mind's eye a picture of buoyant health and happiness which appeals with particular force to the jaded Anglo-Indian. Yet there is no earthly reason why the residents in the Tropics should not share that exhilaration of well-being with our sprightly Gallic friends.

That is exactly what a physician long resident in India now comes forward to show in a timely and fascinating publication with the very tempting title "How to keep well in India," a title that will find a sympathetic echo in every heart from Calcutta to Bombay and from Peshawar to Madras.

How to keep well in India is so easy, too, if you only know how. And this the doctor proceeds to tell us in such a breezy style that after reading it we feel that we possess the master key to health.

The author plunges right into his subject by first telling us frankly that many make the fatal mistake of attempting to regulate life on the European plan. There is hope and cheer in the declaration that "it is absurd to suppose that the European cannot live and enjoy life in the Tropics."

After the quaint paradox that "your stomach is only half a stomach in India," he dwells upon the necessity for supplying the stomach with something rich in that element which goes to build up the nerve health and without which there can be no bodily health, viz., phosphorus. And it is equally essential, the writer says, "that we should supply this substance in an easily digestible form, for the stomach is, as we have heard, a low-power one."

"It is here," declares this medical authority, "the tonic food called Sanatogen comes in as an aid to diet. It is so easily digestible that patients in the acute stage of enteric fever are constantly being fed on it, and it administers the vitalising substance upon which the vital forces actually depend, and in such a manner that the hungry tissues can seize upon them and adapt them to their various needs."

There is the solution of the whole problem And then a grave note of warning is sounded by this expert. Digestive disorders are the frequent forerunners of enteric fever and dysentery. "In this connection," says the doctor, "it must never be forgotten that we live not on what we eat but on what we absorb."

After pointing out the special milk dangers in India, he says:—"In Sanatogen we have a substance which is milk and yet is better than milk. Milk," he observes, "consists roughly of Casein and water. The Casein or nitrogenous part is made the basis of this new nerve food Sanatogen, which is almost universally recognised by medical men as the scientific food."

"In Sanatogen," he goes on to say, "we have 25 per cent. of Casein combined with 5 per cent. of phosphorus, the combination supplying the most powerful known substance for both stimulating and feeding the nerves."

He proves conclusively that with its high nutritive value Sanatogen forms at once an almost perfect and complete diet for the low-power system of the average Anglo-Indian.

He quotes, amongst others, the testimony of the famous Dr. Ewald, of the University of Berlin, who declared after an extensive series of experiments with enteric patients treated with Sanatogen that: "The inference to be drawn from our experiments is that Sanatogen, on account of its ready absorption and its perfectly non-irritant character, may be used with great advantage for increasing the nutritive value of a given diet in all cases of physical weakness, as well as in the acute stages of all those maladies accompanied by rise of temperature, and particularly in enteric fever."

His graphic pen brings home to us most forcefully how Sanatogen is a better tonic than alcohol; how it is indispensable in low fever, Dysentery, Malarial Fevers, and he concludes with some most profitable advice which every Anglo-Indian should read, mark, learn, and inwardly digest.

His points are pregnant with significance To take only one of the many rich nuggets contained in this gold mine of information: "Don't be conquered by the debility which supervenes on most tropical ailments and allow yourself to drift into the 'interesting invalid' condition; you may be interesting to yourself but you will be but a bore to others."

And then he goes right on to tell us how to shake off the deadly debility.

"How to keep well in India" is absorbingly interesting throughout; plain, straightforward, and to the point. It should be in the hands of all desirous of knowing how to get well and keep well.

A limited number of specimen copies of this interesting booklet will be distributed free of charge and can be obtained from SMITH, STANISTREET & CO., CALCUTTA, who also stock Sanatogen.

THE GREAT EASTERN REMEDY.

The PLAGUE of INDIA is SKIN AFFECTIONS, such as Herpes, Scabies, Eczema, Scurvy, Rupia, Pustular Eruptions, Acne, Ringworm, Lichen, Scaldhead, Scaly Eruptions, Lepra, Elephantiasis, Freckles, Syphilitic Eruptions, &c., Boils, Blanes, Pimples, Blotches, Foul Ulcers, Indolent Tumours, Cancerous Tumours, &c., &c.; for these Dr. E. J. LAZARUS'S ESSENCE OF NEEM is the remedy.

The Baids and Hakeems of Hindustan have employed the MELIA AZADIRACHTA for very many centuries in the above diseases, and astonished the world by the wonderful cures they effected, but it was left for Dr. E. J. LAZARUS to make a preparation containing all the valuable therapeutic properties of the tree, in a PLEASANT, POTABLE and EFFICACIOUS FORM. We have a host of unscrupulous imitators [as indubitable proof of the value and efficacy of the above preparations] against whom we beg to caution our friends.

In bottles Rs. 2 each.

WHAT PEOPLE SAY OF IT.

From PANDIT KOILAS NATH SUKUL, Physician to H. H. Maharaja of Bulrampore:—"Anything that can be said in praise of your newly-invented 'Essence of Neem' is insufficient to describe its merit as a Purifier of Human Blood. I have much pleasure to let you know, that within the short space of the past six months I have given it ten different trials in some of the most obstinate skin diseases, three of which were advanced cases of Indian Leprosy, and your Essence has in all of them effected most admirable cures, the like of which I have never noticed during my practice of last twelve months."

From MRS. A. R. B., Allahabad:—"Please send me by return post six bottles more of your invaluable 'Essence of Neem'; it is doing me more good than all the Doctors have done for me."

From MR. B. L. D. A.:—"I am happy to said that the 'Neem' is doing a great deal of gooy to the patient and I think he will ask me to write in a day or two for some more."

Sport in England.

London, Friday, 30th October 1908.

SANDOWN.

Early on Friday morning it looked odds on a thick mist spoiling sport, as hardly a breath of air shook the tops of the trees in the plantation. However, after the first race had been run, the fog cleared and granted a glimpse of blue sky, while the light became much better as the afternoon wore on. The unpromising morning did not keep many folk at home, the attendance again proving both large and representative, many prominent sportsmen helping to fill the members' enclosure. 'Twas by no means a backers' day, the talent going down time after time. Results :—

Though very cold on Saturday, the air was more bracing and nipping and eager, with a suspicion of frost at the back of the north wind. The overnight rain had made the course almost perfect for cross country business, and the many who came down fell soft, one horse having to come back in the ambulance while unlucky H. Driscoll's injured knee-cap was due to Cross Question's bolting and brushing a tree stem. The meeting may be taken as commencing the winter season's work under National Hunt Rules, and that in brilliant fashion; and though the attendance was not so large as on Friday, it carried nearly the full strength of the "fences and hurdles" division who met to celebrate the occasion. Despite attractions elsewhere, the holiday-makers supplied staunch support, and were treated to a full and interesting afternoon's racing, which showed what a lot of horses had been prepared for the winter campaign. The number of recruits to the jumping game, including some expected tip-toppers, is stronger than ever, and the sport, which badly wanted brightening up, promises to afford a busier and better session.

Several incidents kept the excitement alive, and it is good to see that the Stewards have determined to deal with offenders in exemplary fashion. First of all both Hare and Mr. A. Anthony were reported for disobedience at the post in the Chertsey Selling Steeplechase. This is an action the amiable Mr. Coventry so seldom takes that the Stewards must have recognised the necessity thereof, and fined the culprits £5 apiece. Then Mr. Newton, the owner of Irish Poplin, reported Hare for having struck W. Bulteel with his whip, which proved a more serious complaint, for after having shone to great advantage in a magnificent finish, "Jimmy" was suspended for the day, and reported to the Stewards of the National Hunt. In the Park Handicap, which Veglo won easily by four lengths from Sweet Cecil, Mason, the rider of the last named, lodged a complaint against Cowley for foul riding, to general surprise. There did not appear the slightest ground for it, and the Stewards took this view, not only ordering the deposited "fiver" to be forfeited, but fining Mason £10 for making it, and his final win on Red Cloth must have come as a solace to "Tich's" ruffled feelings. After the Norbiton Handicap, in which Cross Question's bolting caused the accident to H. Driscoll, the Stewards showed themselves on the alert by pouncing on O'Brien, the rider of Sintram (second to Daffia), and cautioning him as to his future behaviour. From what was gathered from Mr. Coventry, Driscoll's smash seems to be rather serious but he received every attention in the snug little ambulance room. Result :—

STOCKTON.

This one-day meeting on the banks of the Tees met with a very fair measure of success on Saturday last, there being no counter-attraction to affect the attendance, and the enclosures were fairly well filled. The nor-easter that swept over the course from the Clevelands chilled one to the bone, but the day turned out fine after a very boisterous night, with much rain. Results :—

NEWMARKET.

Mud had replaced dust at Newmarket, and was certainly the the lesser of two evils, with such a strong easterly wind sweeping the open Heath. The gale, however, had one good effect in securing a fair morning, as it dispersed the rain-clouds and gave the sun a chance. Great-coats were grateful through the wintry temperature, and serviceable afterwards, as rain set in after the first race, and the afternoon was moist and unpleasant. The welcome news that His Majesty was to be present gave a lift to the day's doings, as Newmarket does not seem complete without him, but evidently the change in the weather had kept many at home, as a comparatively small gathering was present to welcome his arrival per motor car at a quarter past one. The general attendance, too, suffered considerably, as Tattersall's and the further enclosures were barely half-filled; in fact, those who stayed at home had the laugh on their side, as Newmarket Heath is not a desirable place on a wet day. The light was not good to begin with, but as the rain strengthened, a mist thickened on the Flat by the T. Y. C. starting post, and obscured the first stages of the running, till the horses came well into range. Better going could not have been desired, and finishes were for the most part close and exciting. The change from a mierably cold, wet and misty day to a soft, still, balmy afternoon, with frequent glimpses of sunshine, was most agreeable at Newmarket on Wednesday and made its beneficial effects early felt in rousing latent enthusiasm, and bringing people to the scratch who otherwise would have taken their racing at second hand.

The Birdcage and club enclosure looked more in keeping with the situation than on the previous day, while though not possibly by a half did the general muster approach the Cesarewitch record. As the afternoon wore on the weather improved, as did the local attendance, while the course, which can stand any amount of rain, was in a state that suited the mudlarks more than the "skimmers" of the turf, and fields averaged well. PLACE BETTING: Evens Cocksure II.; others at proportionate rates.

Won by three-parts of a length; half a length between second and third. Chandon was last.

Mist obscured the start and colours were for a long time indistinguishable, but the jockeys agreed in describing it as almost a perfect send-off. When it became possible to recognise colours Wheatear was leading from Cargill, Silver Heeled, and Monte Rosa, next coming the horse destined to play such a sensational part in the finish. Sir Archibald went well for a time, only to shut up in suspicious fashion when he should have been "screwing his courage to the sticking, point," and if Mr. Basset's horse has not become an artful dodger, he is being most wickedly calumniated. Reaching the Bushes Temeraire had joined Wheatear, but the grey soon afterwards began to swerve, and Marcovil catching the infection, he came across at a tangent from near the outside, which, of course, did his chance no good. Higgs dashed Land League down the hill and into the Dip almost precisely as he did last year, when by these tactics he stole the race from Malua, and it was when he headed Wheatear that the roar went up. "Land League wins!" He was on the far side, and the deceptiveness of the angle gave him what in relation to Marcovil was a fictitious prominence. Mr. Luscombe's horse took command in the Dip, and, finishing straight enough after his fit of swerving, he had the race won at every point up the hill. Succour, dead tired, struggled into third place behind Land League, and thus made his defeat harmless for those who had supported him each way, which, by the way, seemed a popular form of investment in his case.

We had luckily struck a vein of sunny weather, as the morning here yesterday would have done credit to summer, and had it not been for the carpet of autumn leaves we might well have imagined that racing was taking place on the July Course. A fair sprinkling of sportsmen were left to help fill Tattersall's and the further enclosures, while a large and representative muster of society was present to greet the King. It was a glorious day, indeed, bringing the Newmarket home people on to the Heath to their favourite pitch on the far rails. The going was excellent and fields for the most part plethoric, though little but local interest attached to the card. Results:—

FOOTBALL.

THE OLYMPIC FINAL.

THE Olympic Association football is now past history, and the lesson that has been driven home to the minds of those who have watched the series of games is that the easy ascendency of England in amateur football is over. We have acted the part of missionaries to Continental countries to some purpose. The teams that from time to time have left these shores to play in many lands have done excellent work. In addition to stimualting a keen desire for the pastime, they have shown how to play it properly, and now the pupils are rapidly becoming as clever and effective on the field as their mentors. One does not suggest that they have learned all that there is to be learned. There are still important points to be carefully studied, and improvements to be aimed at, but, judged as a whole, the form shown by Sweden, Holland, and Denmark has been most encouraging. The one great disappointment has been France, where the Association game has not been so sedulously fostered by the U. S. F. S. A. as it should have been, hence the crude displays against Denmark on Monday and Thursday respectively. Even France, however, is sensible of the need for the organisation of the Soccer game to be taken seriously in hand, and in the course of a year or two we may confidently look for a great improvement in the play of our nearest Continental neighbours.

Both Holland and Denmark have improved almost out of knowledge. These countries were met in the order named by the United Kingdom team, and while the F. A. side was the superior, it is just as certain that the home country had to play with desperate earnestness to win, and that especially with regard to the final tie they did not have the worst of the luck. The British team has been blamed, criticised, and more or less condemned for not showing more skill and combination. The lack of harmony both in design and

The change from a miserably cold, wet and misty day to a soft, still, balmy afternoon, with frequent glimpses of sunshine, was most agreeable at Newmarket on Wednesday and made its beneficial effects early felt in rousing latent enthusiasm, and bringing people to the scratch who otherwise would have taken their racing at second hand.

The Birdcage and club enclosure looked more in keeping with the situation than on the previous day, while though not possibly by a half did the general muster approach the Cesarewitch record. As the afternoon wore on the weather improved, as did the local attendance, while the course, which can stand any amount of rain, was in a state that suited the mudlarks more than the "skimmers" of the turf, and fields averaged well. (Winner trained by C. Waugh.)

BETTING: 3 to 1 agst. PLACE BETTING: Evens Cocksure II.; others at proportionate rates.

Won by three-parts of a length; half a length between second and third. Chandon was last.

Mist obscured the start and colours were for a long time indistinguishable, but the jockeys agreed in describing it as almost a perfect send-off. When it became possible to recognise colours Wheatear was leading from Cargill, Silver Heeled, and Monte Rosa, next coming the horse destined to play such a sensational part in the finish. Sir Archibald went well for a time, only to shut up in suspicious fashion when he should have been "screwing his courage to the sticking, point," and if Mr. Basset's horse has not become an artful dodger, he is being most wickedly calumniated. Reaching the Bushes Temeraire had joined Wheatear, but the grey soon afterwards began to swerve, and Marcovil catching the infection, he came across at a tangent from near the outside, which, of course, did his chance no good. Higgs dashed Land League down the hill and into the Dip almost precisely as he did last year, when by these tactics he stole the race from Malua, and it was when he headed Wheatear that the roar went up. "Land League wins!" He was on the far side, and the deceptiveness of the angle gave him what in relation to Marcovil was a fictitious prominence. Mr. Luscombe's horse took command in the Dip, and, finishing straight enough after his fit of swerving, he had the race won at every point up the hill. Succour, dead tired, struggled into third place behind Land League, and thus made his defeat harmless for those who had supported him each way, which, by the way, seemed a popular form of investment in his case.

We had luckily struck a vein of sunny weather, as the morning here yesterday would have done credit to summer, and had it not been for the carpet of autumn leaves we might well have imagined that racing was taking place on the July Course. A fair sprinkling of sportsmen were left to help fill Tattersall's and the further enclosures, while a large and representative muster of society was present to greet the King. It was a glorious day, indeed, bringing the Newmarket home people on to the Heath to their favourite pitch on the far rails. The going was excellent and fields for the most part plethoric, though little but local interest attached to the card. Results:—

FOOTBALL.

THE OLYMPIC FINAL.

THE Olympic Association football is now past history, and the lesson that has been driven home to the minds of those who have watched the series of games is that the easy ascendency of England in amateur football is over. We have acted the part of missionaries to Continental countries to some purpose. The teams that from time to time have left these shores to play in many lands have done excellent work. In addition to stimualting a keen desire for the pastime, they have shown how to play it properly, and now the pupils are rapidly becoming as clever and effective on the field as their mentors. One does not suggest that they have learned all that there is to be learned. There are still important points to be carefully studied, and improvements to be aimed at, but, judged as a whole, the form shown by Sweden, Holland, and Denmark has been most encouraging. The one great disappointment has been France, where the Association game has not been so sedulously fostered by the U. S. F. S. A. as it should have been, hence the crude displays against Denmark on Monday and Thursday respectively. Even France, however, is sensible of the need for the organisation of the Soccer game to be taken seriously in hand, and in the course of a year or two we may confidently look for a great improvement in the play of our nearest Continental neighbours.

Both Holland and Denmark have improved almost out of knowledge. These countries were met in the order named by the United Kingdom team, and while the F. A. side was the superior, it is just as certain that the home country had to play with desperate earnestness to win, and that especially with regard to the final tie they did not have the worst of the luck. The British team has been blamed, criticised, and more or less condemned for not showing more skill and combination. The lack of harmony both in design and execution on the part of the home forwards was disapointing but is not the explanation to be found in the fact that the opposition would not allow them to settle down? Saturday's match irresistibly reminded one of the F. A. Final in April last, when the ultra-scientific Newcastle players were rushed out of their usual game by the daring, dashing, and worrying movements of Wolverhampton Wanderers. There was no doubt on Saturday as to the individual cleverness of the British players. It is also just as certain that their knowledge of how to combine is very extensive, but they were not able to apply it because of the tactics deliberately and successfully adopted by the Danes. To put the whole matter in a nutshell, the British team played just as well as their opponents allowed them.

WINCHESTER.

Rifle and Pistol Cartridges

It's the careful and scientific manner in which Winchester cartridges are made and loaded which has earned for them a reputation for accuracy, reliability and uniformity which no other brands can approach. Winchester cartridge shells are carefully inspected before loading for size, length and conformity. All Winchester bullets are swaged by machinery which makes them exact in size, contour and density. Then the loading is done by automatic machinery which not only insures a uniform charge, buts seats the bullet in the shell so that its axis coincides with that of the shell; hence with that of the barrel of the arm. These are a few of the many reasons why Winchester cartridges in all calibers are the most satisfactory on the market.

The vigour and vim of the Danish team were refreshing in the extreme. They neither asked for quarter nor gave it. To them Association football is a manly game, in which players must expect hard knocks as well as give them. It is also to them a game in which success is to be found in ceaseless effort and well-directed activity. The outstanding feature of their play was the whole-hearted enthusiasm they put into their work. Their breaking-up methods were only possible to a side whose players were physically fit, and possessed unlimited pluck. It is true the Britishers won by two goals to love, but with a less capable custodian than Bailey, the Danes might easily have drawn the game. In the meantime hearty congratulations to Denmark and Holland, and a word of encouragement for the Swedes. They are all splendid sportsmen, and there is no doubt that the Olympic Association football contest has done a considerable amount of good in bringing representatives of the competing countries more closely together.

Southern League Games.

The home clubs in the Southern League almost monopolised the honours on Saturday, the only instance in which a visiting team won being in the game at Brighton where Exeter City triumphed over the Albion by the odd goal in three. This result is in the nature of a surprise, but it is not the only one that the Exonians have provided during their brief membership of the Southern League, and with a few more to their credit they will soon be regarded as the stormy petrel of the tournament. Two other home clubs had to be content with a division of the spoils. Luton drew with Plymouth Argyle, at Home Park, and the Pilgrims must account themselves fortunate they escaped defeat, for in the second half the visitors were much the better side. Southend United, whose programme is getting terribly congested, only five S. L. games having been played, as against the 14 of Crystal Palace, accomplished a smart performance in preserving their goal intact at Elm Park, and up to date they have a goal record of two to one in their favour. After a somewhat anxious time, Southampton appear to have again found the top of their form, a defeat for Millwall of 4—1, even at the Dell, being convincing enough as to the penetrating power of the Sotonian forwards and the solidity of the defence. And they must not make a slip. They cannot afford to, for Crystal Palace are in close attendance, ready to jump into premier place at the first opportunity. The Glaziers did not have anything to spare in their match at Sydenham against Portsmouth, the odd goal in five providing them with the two points, and the visitors would not have had more than they deserved if they had finished up with honours even. There was considerable rejoicing Upton Park way at West Ham's narrow victory over Northampton. It was something that was scarcely expected, and it was consequently the more appreciated. Brentford, too, immensely pleased their patrons by winning their second game in the tournament, and as they took the two points from so bustling, hard-playing a side as Swindon they should regain the confidence they had apparently lost, and begin a new and more prosperous career. Leyton, too, were in happy mood on their own ground, as New Brompton found to their cost, and Norwich City and Watford each sent their supporters away delighted with well-earned home victories.

League I.

The ten games in the First Division of the Football League on Saturday yielded only 26 goals, and the most emphatic win of the afternoon stands to the credit of Woolwich Arsenal, who defeated Bury by four goals to love. During the past month the Gunners have come along in wonderful style, and they have quite retrieved their poor, discouraging start. It is now some five weeks since they were on the losing side, and so rapidly have they climbed the League ladder that they are now eighth, a position they are certain to keep if they maintain the form they displayed against Bury. Chelsa had to take the field at Blackburn minus Hilsdon and Windridge, and lost by a couple of goals, but they played the prettier football, and would at least have drawn if they had not indulged in too much finesse. The forwards, well led by Humphreys, were superlatively clever in the open but lamentably weak in front of goal. It was a similar fault that brought about the downfall of the Villa at Goodison Park, for the visitors were the more artistic side, but Everton were the more thrusting, and won by three goals to one. Manchester United are not now showing form of the kind that last season enabled them to romp away from their rivals, and on Saturday they could not do better on their own ground than draw with Nottingham Forest, a club that is likely to occupy a prominent position as the season advances. It was a capital bit of work for Sheffield United to pull themselves together after their previous week's disheartening experience and return with a point from Leicester, and Middlesbrough must be well satisfied with the result of their journey out west, for they shared the honours with Bristol City. Newcastle United, who are running a neck and neck race for the leadership with Everton, were again successful at St. James' Park, Manchester City providing the opposition. Sheffield Wednesday just got home at Owlerton against Preston North End, and Sunderland placed the best performance of the afternoon to their credit by their win at Bradford against the City. The only other home club to go down was Notts County, who were beaten by Liverpool.

The Second Division.

The results in the second division of the Football League were not altogether in accordance with anticipations. In the first place Tottenham Hotspur, who have rapidly leaped into popular favour in their new sphere, did not lose at Glossop, and they had no more and no less than their deserts in halving the spoils with the North Derbyshire team. Clapton O. had the stiffest task of the three London clubs, for they had to face Birmingham at St. Andrew's, and they did this to such good purpose that they went down by merely a goal to love in a game that had few thrills, and furnished only a mediocre display of football. Reports to hand represent the match at Fulham between the home club and Bradford, both ex-Southern Leaguers, as of a most disappointing character. There was also a lack of energy and dash on both sides, and play was wofully dull and listless. The cottagers made no mistake about the result, but they were not 4 goals better than their opponents. Hull City gained a remarkable win at Chesterfield, and similar language fittingly describes Oldham Athletic's success at Gainsborough, the Trinitarians having to submit to a 4—1 reverse. Derby County obtained a valuable point as the result of their journey to Blackpool, but the home teams in the games not above referred to were all on the winning side, Grimsby Town's triumph by 3—0 over Wolverhampton Wanderers being one of the most significant of the afternoon.

England vs. Denmark.—England beat Denmark by 2 goals to 0 at the Stadium on Saturday, and so won the United Kingdom yet another "first" in the Olympic Games. As expected, the Danes put up a really good fight. They played hard, bustling football from start to finish, and at times the English goal had some very narrow escapes.

The ground was very slippery, an and the greasy ball made scientific football very difficult. This, perhaps, was the reason that the English players gave very few glimpses of the form expected of them. But it must not be forgotten that the Danish halves and backs were very little the inferior of the English defence. Indeed, Buchwald at left back, was very nearly the best man on the field.

England's first goal was rather a soft affair. Dreschel fisted out a shot from Purnell, and Chapman, dashing up, had no difficulty in sending the ball into the net. Denmark had one or two chances of equalising before the interval, but Bailey brought off some good saves from Neilson and Olinnagen.

Woodward scored the second point soon after the restart, after a nice run by the English forwards. S. E. Neilson had one glorious chance of reducing the English lead when left with only Bailey to beat at close quarters but this hero of the French match hit the side of the net.

On the whole Denmark hardly deserved to be beaten by two clear goals—2 to 1 would have been a better index to the play.

The Lord Mayor, who was accompanied by the Lady Mayoress and many City dignitaries, presented the medals at the close. In an excellent speech he said he was glad that our manly young fellows had won this Olympic trophy, and hoped they would retain it, and that if they were ever beaten he hoped they would as sportsmen asknowledge they lost to a better team. Among the other distinguished people present were Lord and Lady Desborough, Lord Roberts and Lady Eileen Roberts, and Mr. A. J. Balfour.

Oxford University vs. Corinthians.—The Corinthians took a strong team to Oxford on Saturday, whilst the University relied on the same team that had been selected to play at Tufnell Park last Wednesday. The Corinthians were the first to attack, and after Braddell had checked, Morgan Owen shot over the bar. Clarke then broke away for the 'Varsity, and a corner resulted. For a time Oxford had the best of matters. At length Harris broke away and getting a good opening compelled Appleton to clear. On both sides the backs played a very safe game, but a quarter of an hour from the start Corbett ran down and passed to Turner, who landed the ball in the net. The Corinthinas continued to attack, Turner, Birks, and Morgan Owen all sending in futile shots, and at half-time the Corinthians led by 1 goal to none.

The second half opened with an attack from the 'Varsity, and a long shot from Haine went outside. After this the visitors broke away, Foster and Harris compelling Appleton to clear. From this point the game went much in favour of the Corinthians, Corbett and Harris repeatedly getting away, and eventually Birks scored. There was a lack of combination amongst the Oxford forwards, and from a pass by Foster, Harris beat Appleton with a fast ground shot. Appleton had anything but an enviable time of it, chiefly owing to the weakness of Grisewod and Edwards. Braddell, on the other hand, played a very strong game. Another run by Corbett led up to a goal by Birks, but towards the close Oxford played up better, and Sayer experienced hard lines in hitting the post. They failed to break through the visitors' defence, however, and the Corinthians thus proved successful by four goals to none.

Glasgow Cup.—Replayed Final.

Celtic ...	2	Third Lanark ...	2

At Hampden Park.

For the second Saturday in succession Celtic and 3rd Lanark failed to decide who is to get possession of the Glasgow Cup. The 26,000 spectators (drawings £645) who witnessed Saturday's game at Hampden Park, had good value, and it is hard to say if the 3rd Lanark will ever get such a chance of becoming cup winners, as they held the Celtic at every point, and were decidedly unlucky, Celtic's equalising goal being helped through by one of their own backs. 3rd Lanark's improvement within the past month has been most marked, and particularly welcome to the shareholders, who issued circulars six weeks ago calling a meeting to consider if something could not be done to improve the club's position. The circular had its effect evidently, as since then the club has never lost a match, and the meeting was abandoned. Brownlie was again magnificent in goal, and 3rd have made a good capture in Hosie, an inside right, from Clydebank Juniors, and although not yet twenty years of age he played with a brilliance that was delightful. Celtic never got a chance to get settled, and the backs never appeared too safe. The game will be replayed on Wednesday.

The chief League games of the day were at Aberdeen and Ibrox Park. The visit of Dundee to the granite city is always an event, and with Dundee jealous of Aberdeen's noteworthy position in the League table it was little wonder that the gate was the biggest of the present season in Aberdeen—£345. The play, however, was unworthy of both teams, and in addition was marred by an unfortunate accident—Muir, Aberdeen's inside right, having his leg broken early in the game, and he had to be taken to the infirmary. Later in the first half Lennie was also injured, and was of little use during the remainder of play. That both sets of players were excited was evident from the start, and throughout the play was of a scrambling nature, although Aberdeen were always the more dangerous even when playing with nine men and a cripple.

The game at Ibrox between Rangers and Airdrieonians attracted another big crowd—18,000—and it was one of the fiercest matches seen in Glasgow this season. Rangers had full revenge for their defeat on the Airdrie ground a fortnight ago, and the feature of the day was the display of the Rangers' young centre, J. Smith, from Ardrossan, who scored both goals and throughout made the most of every chance. But for Duncan's fine goalkeeping Airdrieonians' defeat would have been heavier, although their forwards gave Rennie, Law, and Sharp a very hard time of it. In Law (late of Arbroath) at right back and J. Smith, at centre, Rangers have got hold of two sterling players, and more should be heard of them.

Queen's Park had hard lines in not getting full points at Kilmarnock, as on play they merited them. The game was a contrast in styles, Queen's favouring close and accurate passing, while Kilmarnock went in for the kick and rush style, and only Aitken's fine goalkeeping saved the home club.

Partick Thistle secured their first League victory at the expense of Hearts, on the Clyde's ground, at Shawfield. On play, Partick merited their win, and few will grudge them their victory, as the fact that their new ground is not yet ready, nor likely to be this year, forces them to go where there is a vacant ground, and their gates have been seriously affected thereby.

Clyde maintain their record of being the only undefeated club in Scotland, and Kirwan, late of Tottenham, is doing great work for them, and leading on an active set of young players with fine results. Motherwell were outclassed, and Clyde's win was easier than the score indicates.

At Edinburgh, Greenock Morton made a poor show against Hibernians; Port Glasgow divided the points with Hamilton Academicals mainly through want of a good centre; while at Falkirk, St. Mirren were a trifle lucky in securing one of the points, the home club losing good chances in the first half.

RUGBY RULES.

Australians vs. London.—Although several smart showers fell during the early hours, the afternoon proved fine, with the result that the attendance at Richmond on Saturday numbered some 8,000, and they were treated to a fast and interesting and at times exciting match, though the general quality of the play, particularly of the back play, fell far below expectations. The ground was in excellent order. The Australians, who lost the toss, played rather better against the wind than with it. They scored their only try of the match after fifteen minutes' play, and held the lead of 5 points thus secured to the end of a poor match in point of good play, though interest was maintained to the end, the issue being quite open until the referee sounded "no side."

The Australians kicked off, and had the better of the earlier play, thanks to their forwards being better together. Hickey was first prominent with a clever break through, but he held on too long, and spoiled a promising effort by a bad pass. Lyon put in a long kick down the field, which Carmichael misfielded, and London got into Australian territory. By a strong rush the Colonial forwards regained the lost ground. Some close play followed at the London "25," which ended in a bout of Australian passing breaking down. Lapage and Wilson seized the opening, and the ball was taken to the other end. Fortunately for the Australians Middleton had dropped back and saved their lines by fly-kicking into touch. A good kick by McKivatt relieved the pressure, but just after a quick pass by Sibree to Lapage almost ended in a score, Lapage being held on the line after a clever short run. Hickey made another fine burst through, but held on too long. McKivatt was at fault in the same way, but a score was not long delayed. Russell intercepted a poor pass to Lambert, and with a strong run scored far out 15 minutes after the start, Lyon failing in his tackle. Carmichael made a good, but unsuccessful effort to convert the try.

Carmichael made a very good reply to the drop-out, but a clever mark and kick by Lapage took London to the centre. The London forwards, who steadily improved as the game advanced, broke away in a good rush, which took the game to the Australian "25." A free kick against the Australians was taken by Evans, who failed at goal, while two passing bouts by the London backs, that were slowly and badly executed, were equally abortive. The Australians were penalised for off-side, and Carmichael misfielding Lapage's kick, London got right to the Australian line. Exciting play followed, and for a time the Australians were kept on the defensive. A cross-kick by Heale seemed likely to yield a score, the ball bouncing badly for Hickey. Wilson just failed to gather it, however, and a rare, if lucky, chance was lost. London kept up the pressure, and after the only bit of really good passing by the London backs, Lambert appeared to have scored a try far out, for after he had been held he took the ball out. It transpired, however, that the Australians had been penalised for not playing the ball—a fact that the crowd ought to have noted, for the London forwards followed up Lambert's very good, but unsuccessful, shot at goal. London had rather the better of the rest of the half, but there was no further scoring, and the sides crossed over with the Australians still leading by a try to nothing.

In the second half the wind was blowing slightly more down the field than in the first half, and hence was more in favour of the Australians than it had been of London. London, by good forward play, at once got to the Australian "25," but Russell sent them back by a good kick to the centre. Here the Australian forwards broke away New Zealand fashion, but a good bout of hand-to-hand passing was spoiled by a wild throw-forward at the London "25." Several bouts of Australian passing broke down through inaccurate handling, but the movements gained ground, and for a time London had the worst of the game. At length the London forwards rushed to the centre, where Heale spoiled a promising movement by knocking on. Hickey gathered the ball and kicked to Lyon, who replied into touch at the centre. The London forwards were now packing splendidly, however, and getting the ball.

The Australians were kept mainly on the defensive for some time, and one bout of passing must have ended in a score had Wilson passed to Lambert, who was quite unmarked and only twenty yards from the line. Following this incident the Australian forwards by good footwork relieved to the centre, Dr. Moran, who had received a severe injury to the muscles of his shoulder in the first half, but had pluckily played on, being conspicuous in the movement. Here more passing by the London backs lost further ground, while a good follow-up by Russell, who tackled Lyon near the London line, placed the Australians in an attacking position. Lapage cleverly intercepted a pass, however, and with Lambert in attendance he kicked past the Australian back and took the game right to the other end, the movement being only checked on the Australian line.

Fast play followed, of which the Australians had so much the better that they seemed likely to exercise their lead. They lost several chances by faulty passing, however, though Russell, after a break through by Wood, appeared to have scored. The ruling was "held up," and a "five yards" scrum was ordered. The London forwards relieved to their "25," and then by a good rush, well checked by Carmichael, took the game to the centre. The issue remained open to the end, but there was no further scoring, though Russell was only held on the line and Lambert and Lapage had a joint movement only checked at the Australian "25." A poor but exciting game thus ended:—Australians (1 try) 5 points; London 0 point.

Oxford University vs. O. M. T.'s.—The Dark Blues added another victory to their record on Saturday, when they defeated the Old Merchant Taylors in decisive fashion, Cunningham was back in the Oxford team, but Vassall, Williamson and Blencowe were all hors de combat, and Lagdon (Oriel) found a place for the first time. At the outset the Dark Blues gave their supporters a bit of a fright, as for the first ten minutes the visitors more than held their own; but when the Oxford forwards had settled down the superiority of the determined fashion, but they were no match for the remarkably clever combination of the Dark Blues, and their lines were crossed on no fewer than nine occasions. Gotley, who played half, as substitute for Williamson, did remarkably well, and in the last half-hour was quite brilliant. The old Rugby captain, Poulton, on the wing, displayed very much improved form, and looks like developing into a first-class player. At the start, the Oxford forwards rushed the ball away, and compelled the Old Boys to touch down, but following the kick-out the latter attacked strongly, and Parker, intercepting a pass of Martin's, ran clean through, and Raphael kicked a goal. Oxford gradually asserted themselves, and a try by Roberts inaugurated a long sequence of successes. Poulton followed suit, and just before the interval a clever bit of work by Hodges from a line out gained another try. All three place-kicks, however, failed, and ends were changed with the score 9—5 in Oxford's favour.

In the second half the Oxonians had matters practically all their own way, and what with the forwards carrying the scrums and the backs displaying splendid combination, the visitors did very little beyond defending their lines; but try as they would they were powerless against the combined forces of the Dark Blues, and although the latter's place kicking was of the most feeble description, they nevertheless ran up a further sequence of six tries, one of which was converted by Cunningham, and thus proved successful by a goal and eight tries (29 points) to a goal (5 points).

Cambridge University vs. Old Leysians.—There was the customary large attendance at the Old Leysians' match at Cambridge on Saturday. Cambridge were successful by a good large margin, but it can safely be said that it was the forwards who won the match. They always held the Leysians in check on the scrum, more often than not got the ball, and were smart in the lose, and all round, Lely, Purvis, Chapman, and Gimson were at the top of their form. If the forwards did well the two fresh halves, Ashcroft and Sutherland, playing in place of Holloway and Campbell, made the most of their opportunities, Sutherland, working the scrum, passed out very smartly, whilst Ashcroft made some nice openings. The three-quarters, although without Macleod, Pyman, and Coates, were always working well together, but T. A. Godby was a failure at back. The Old Leysians were not quite as strongly represented as they have been of recent years for this match, but they had a fair side out. C. Pinkham, the Caius "Fresher," played full-back for them, and time after time, brought opponents to the ground in a really surprising manner.

The first score came eight minutes after the start when Burton got going on the wing and punted into the centre, which enabled Wright, to sprint up and land over close to the posts. Gimson easily converted. No further points were registered for twenty-five minutes, at the expiration of which time Wright dropped a very neat goal. Following this Oulton missed a pass, and Bower, quickly seizing the opportunity, picked up splendidly, and eluding three opponents, got over close to the goal and again Gimson kicked between the posts.

Changing ends, the Leysians again attacked, Hoskin getting over at the corner. Mellor kicked a fine goal. The visitors being given offside in their own "25," Gimson took the kick and scored a fine penalty goal. Then followed unconverted tries by Burton, and Kennedy, and for some time the Light Blues kept up a hot attack. However the visitors made a last desperate effort, and by working up the field the forwards rushed the home defence, and Reid landed over at the corner, Miller again adding the major points. Final score:—Cambridge University, 2 placed goals, 1 dropped goal, 1 penalty goal, 2 tries (23 points); Old Leysians, 2 placed goals (10 points).

Old Alleynians vs. London Scottish.—Owing to the meeting of the 'Wallabies' and London at Richmond the Alleynians vs. Scottish game was played at Dulwich. And a truly remarkable game it was. The proceedings of the first half and the opening ten minutes of the second suggested that the Scots were in for a bad drubbing. Nine minutes from the commencement L. S. Manvell crossed for the homesters, Wright converting. A little later Garrett, who was in great form throughout, obtained another. The Alleynians continued to monopolise the play, and Garrett cleverly dropped a goal. The next item was a third try—also to Garrett, Wright again majorising. All this happened the while the Scots drew blank, the score at the interval being:—Alleynians, 3 goals (1 dropped) 1 try; Scottish, 0.

On the resumption the leaders maintained the mastery for some while. Then came a wonderful transformation. The Alleynians, feeling the effects of their earlier efforts seemingly, shot their bolt, and thereafter it was the Scots who filled the eye. Their forwards, playing with admirable dash did pretty well as they pleased, and the backs gave such admirable assistance that tries were put on at an alarming rate, Fraser, Doulton, Wade, Meikle, and Williamson each crossing. Lockhart converted on four occasions, the Cantab also dropping a goal. The Alleynians partially recovered nearing the end, but retired defeated, the final score being:—London Scottish, 5 goals (1 dropped), 1 try; Old Alleynians, 3 goals (1 dropped) 1 try.

Olympic Final.—Nobody who saw the Australians scramble home against London on Saturday and walk away from Cornwall at the Stadium on Monday could easily believe that they were watching the same lot of men. On Saturday—though they were playing a far stronger side than they were on Monday—the Australians lacked devil in this game they were possessed of many.

No doubt the great improvement of the side was very largely due to the substitution of McKivatt for Wood at half and McCabe for McKivatt at five-eighth. Wood is undoubtedly a very fine player on his day; but it has not been his day lately. His loss of form is quite easily accounted for, Wood has been suffering from lumbago, which, bad enough, in all conscience, in itself, has worried him mentally; which is worse.

McKivatt was much quicker in getting his three-quarter line moving yesterday than Wood was on Saturday; and McCabe showed himself a clever and extremely fast five-eighth.

One hardly expected to see a great performance by the Australians. It was thought, and reasonably, that if they couldn't take passes and show pace on comparatively fast stuff at Richmond, they would do little with a slippery ball on the wet Stadium ground. As it was, the Australians turned out sprinters, and the way they snapped up low, fast passes was just great.

Cornwall were disappointing. They were outplayed at all points of the game; the pace was too hot for them. Still, they should not have been beaten as easily as they were. Thirty-two points to 3—5 goals (one of them a penalty) and 3 tries to 1 try—was a little above the mark. The Australians were penalised twice quite near their own goal, and Cornwall should have scored a penalty-goal both times.

Just after half-time, too, a grand kick into touch by Jackett brought on a line-out three feet from the Australians' goal-line, and for the next eight minutes Cornwall looked as if they might score any second. They didn't bring it off, but it was only the continued strong and safe tackling of the Australians that just, and only just, kept them out.

In the thick of their defence, however, the Australians attacked. McKivatt started a passing movement not ten yards from his own goal-line—pretty cool, perhaps—and a magnificent movement right down the line ended in Carroll scoring a fine try.

Richards' try was a beauty. Coming along at full speed he jumped some four feet high, took the ball high above Jackett's head, and raced on between the posts, with no one, except three of his own side, within twenty yards of him. That was the plumb bit of work of the day; but all the Australian tries were fine ones, a mixture of brain and fast pace. The Cornwall try, which B. Solomon got, was the outcome of ripping good work; the Australians were caught napping for the second, and though Carmichael, who played a magnificent game all through, made a fine tackle, he was just too late.

Tries were scored by Hickey, McCabe, and Carroll (two each), and by Richards. Carmichael kicked a penalty-goal, and also converted four tries.

GOLF.

Ex-Champions at Gatwick.—Harry Vardon and J. H. Taylor, the famous ex-champions, contested on Saturday a couple of interesting matches on the golf links which has been laid out on the Gatwick racesourse. Play was by holes in the morning, when Vardon proved successful by 2 up and 1 to play, and by strokes in the afternoon, when the Totteridge man again secured the victory with a score of 69 as against Taylor's 78. In justice to Taylor, it should be stated that he was suffering from a severe cold. The weather conditions were not favourable for good golf. A strong, cold wind prevailed, and rain fell nearly all the morning. The course, too, was in a somewhat heavy condition, and the greens were dead. Both men played steady golf in the first round. Vardon began well by winning the first hole, but Taylor squared at the third. At the turn Vardon again led by 1 up, but he was brought back to all square at the tenth, where he was too strong with his run-up, and then missed his putt back. He secured the lead again at the short eleventh hole, where Taylor failed to carry the river guarding the green. From this point the Mid-Surrey man never got on terms with his opponent. He could only halve the next five holes, and, losing the seventeenth, where Vardon ran down a long putt, he was beaten on the match by 2 and 1.

The approximate scores were:—

VARDON.

TAYLOR.

Out	...	...	6 4 3 4 5 3 5 5 4—39	76
Home	...	...	5 5 4 5 3 4 3 5 3—37

The stroke competition in the afternoon was decided mainly for the purpose of creating a professional record for the green. Vardon's figures of 69 are likely to stand for a long time. Although there are no very formidable bunkers, the course is narrow, and the punishment for getting off the line is severe. With the exception of the seventh and sixteenth holes, Vardon played practically perfect golf. At the seventh he sliced his tee-shot, and then missed a holable putt. At the sixteenth, a short hole, measuring only ninety-five yards, he was in the bunker on the far side of green from the tee. Taylor was not playing his approach shots quite so well as usual, and he occasionally failed to gauge the strength of the greens. His worst hole was the last, where he sliced his drive into the hedge, lifted, and lost a stroke, and was then short of the green. The hole eventually cost him 7. Appended are the details of the cards:

The Amateur Championship.

The meeting of delegates of the twenty-four clubs concerned in the management of the amateur championship to consider the question of courses for that event has been called for Saturday, 7th November when it will be held at the Royal Caledonian Hotel, Edinburgh. A sub-committee, consisting of representatives of the Royal and Ancient, Honourable Company, Prestwick, Royal St. George's, Royal Liverpool, and Royal Blackheath clubs, has discussed the matter, and recommended that the status quo be preserved, i.e., that the championship continue to be limited to the St. Andrews, Prestwick, Muirfield, Hoylake, and Sandwich links. It is understood, however, that several fresh proposals will be made on Saturday week, varying from the selection of one further English course to the addition of five links to the rota, while there is ever a suggestion that the rota should be abolished, and a green selected from year to year.

BOXING.

Olympic Boxing.—The Olympic boxing contests were fought out on Tuesday at the Northampton Institute. The hall there was filled from early in the morning until the close of the contests for the five weights. In each case an Englishman proved successful. Indeed, no foreigner succeeded in getting into the second round.

Perhaps chief interest attached to the middle-weights, in which R. L. Baker, the Australian, was an entrant. Baker, it will be remembered, was prevented by illness from taking part in the English championships last year. Yesterday he reached the final round, and was only beaten by J. W. H. T. Douglas, the Essex amateur cricketer, after a great bout.

Both started cautiously, and honours were about even at the end of the first round. Baker opened the exchanges in the second round, but was sent to the boards with a right jolt. Subsequently he nearly had Douglas in difficulties, and at the end of the round was not much behind on points. Douglas tried several times to bring off his dreaded right-hand punch in the last round, but although unsuccessful in this, won on points.

The entries included seventeen from France, seven of whom took the ring, and only two of whom managed to stay the full three rounds. The form of the Frenchmen, as a fact, was disappointing, and, although that country has produced some good professionals, it is perfectly clear that there is a paucity of useful amateurs. Those who competed yesterday had plenty of pluck, but lacked science, while such a thing as ringcraft seemed, in their case, to be quite unknown.

Of the other foreign competitors V. Holberg, of Denmark, showed the best form. He has been seen before in England, and from the first, created a favourable impression. Holberg was very unlucky in his heat in the light-weights in having the decision given against him in his bout with Wells, who seemed to have the worst of matters in the regulation three rounds, and also in the extra round of two minutes which was ordered by the referee.

All the holders of English championships survived the first series—viz., H. Thomas (in the bantam-weights), T. Ringer (in the feather-weights), H. Holmes (in the light-weights), W. Child (in the middle-weights), and S. C. H. Evans (in the heavy-weights), but not one of them won a final heat. Results:—

Bantam-weight (8st. 4lb. and under).—Semi-finals: J. Condon (Lynn A. C.) beat W. Webb (St. Pancras B.C.); H. Thomas (Birmingham A.B.C.), a bye. Final: Thomas beat Condon.

Feather-weights (9st. and under).—Semi-finals: C. W. Morris (Polytechnic) beat H. Roddin (Scottish A.G.A.); R. K. Gunn (Gainsford A.C.) beat T. Ringer (Lynn A.C.). Final: Gunn beat Morris.

Heavy-weights (any weight.)—Semi-finals: S. C. H. Evans (Reading A.C.) beat F. Parks (Polytechnic); A. L. Oldman (City Police), a bye. Final: Oldman beat Evans.

Light-weights (10st. and under).—Semi-finals: F. Spiller (Gainsford A.C.) beat H. H. Johnson (Northampton Institute); F. Grace (Eton Mission), a bye. Final: Grace beat Spiller.

Middle-weights (11st. and under).—Semi-finals: J. W. H. T. Douglas (Belsize B.C.) beat R. C. Warnes (Gainsford A.C.); R. L Baker (Australia) beat W. Philo (Gainsford A.C.). Final: Douglas beat Baker.

BILLIARDS.

On the first four days of the first heat of 9,000 up in Messrs. Burroughes and Watts's handicap tournament in Soho-square Diggle scored 5,336 and Stevenson 4,863. On the last two days Stevenson made 4,137 to 2,080. As Diggle was in receipt of a thousand points start, Stevenson therefore won by 584. The champion won the match on Saturday night with a display eminently worthy of his reputation. In play with 294, he increased it to 349, and then adding 144, 306, 323, 148, and 119 unfinished, he passed Diggle at play, fell far below expectations. The ground was in excellent order. The Australians, who lost the toss, played rather better against the wind than with it. They scored their only try of the match after fifteen minutes' play, and held the lead of 5 points thus secured to the end of a poor match in point of good play, though interest was maintained to the end, the issue being quite open until the referee sounded "no side."

The Australians kicked off, and had the better of the earlier play, thanks to their forwards being better together. Hickey was first prominent with a clever break through, but he held on too long, and spoiled a promising effort by a bad pass. Lyon put in a long kick down the field, which Carmichael misfielded, and London got into Australian territory. By a strong rush the Colonial forwards regained the lost ground. Some close play followed at the London "25," which ended in a bout of Australian passing breaking down. Lapage and Wilson seized the opening, and the ball was taken to the other end. Fortunately for the Australians Middleton had dropped back and saved their lines by fly-kicking into touch. A good kick by McKivatt relieved the pressure, but just after a quick pass by Sibree to Lapage almost ended in a score, Lapage being held on the line after a clever short run. Hickey made another fine burst through, but held on too long. McKivatt was at fault in the same way, but a score was not long delayed. Russell intercepted a poor pass to Lambert, and with a strong run scored far out 15 minutes after the start, Lyon failing in his tackle. Carmichael made a good, but unsuccessful effort to convert the try.

Carmichael made a very good reply to the drop-out, but a clever mark and kick by Lapage took London to the centre. The London forwards, who steadily improved as the game advanced, broke away in a good rush, which took the game to the Australian "25." A free kick against the Australians was taken by Evans, who failed at goal, while two passing bouts by the London backs, that were slowly and badly executed, were equally abortive. The Australians were penalised for off-side, and Carmichael misfielding Lapage's kick, London got right to the Australian line. Exciting play followed, and for a time the Australians were kept on the defensive. A cross-kick by Heale seemed likely to yield a score, the ball bouncing badly for Hickey. Wilson just failed to gather it, however, and a rare, if lucky, chance was lost. London kept up the pressure, and after the only bit of really good passing by the London backs, Lambert appeared to have scored a try far out, for after he had been held he took the ball out. It transpired, however, that the Australians had been penalised for not playing the ball—a fact that the crowd ought to have noted, for the London forwards followed up Lambert's very good, but unsuccessful, shot at goal. London had rather the better of the rest of the half, but there was no further scoring, and the sides crossed over with the Australians still leading by a try to nothing.

In the second half the wind was blowing slightly more down the field than in the first half, and hence was more in favour of the Australians than it had been of London. London, by good forward play, at once got to the Australian "25," but Russell sent them back by a good kick to the centre. Here the Australian forwards broke away New Zealand fashion, but a good bout of hand-to-hand passing was spoiled by a wild throw-forward at the London "25." Several bouts of Australian passing broke down through inaccurate handling, but the movements gained ground, and for a time London had the worst of the game. At length the London forwards rushed to the centre, where Heale spoiled a promising movement by knocking-on. Hickey gathered the ball and kicked to Lyon, who replied into touch at the centre. The London forwards were now packing splendidly, however, and getting the ball.

The Australians were kept mainly on the defensive for some time, and one bout of passing must have ended in a score had Wilson passed to Lambert, who was quite unmarked and only twenty yards from the line. Following this incident the Australian forwards by good footwork relieved to the centre, Dr. Moran, who had received a severe injury to the muscles of his shoulder in the first half, but had pluckily played on, being conspicuous in the movement. Here more passing by the London backs lost further ground, while a good follow-up by Russell, who tackled Lyon near the London line, placed the Australians in an attacking position. Lapage cleverly intercepted a pass, however, and with Lambert in attendance he kicked past the Australian back and took the game right to the other end, the movement being only checked on the Australian line.

Fast play followed, of which the Australians had so much the better that they seemed likely to exercise their lead. They lost several chances by faulty passing, however, though Russell, after a break through by Wood, appeared to have scored. The ruling was "held up," and a "five yards" scrum was ordered. The London forwards relieved to their "25," and then by a good rush, well checked by Carmichael, took the game to the centre. The issue remained open to the end, but there was no further scoring, though Russell was only held on the line and Lambert and Lapage had a joint movement only checked at the Australian "25." A poor but exciting game thus ended:—Australians (1 try) 3 points; London 0 point.

Oxford University vs. O. M. T.'s.—The Dark Blues added another victory to their record on Saturday, when they defeated the Old Merchant Taylors in decisive fashion. Cunningham was back in the Oxford team, but Vassall, Williamson and Blencowe were all hors de combat, and Lagdon (Oriel) found a place for the first time. At the outset the Dark Blues gave their supporters a bit of a fright, as for the first ten minutes the visitors more than held their own; but when the Oxford forwards had settled down the superiority of the determined fashion, but they were no match for the remarkably clever combination of the Dark Blues, and their lines were crossed on no fewer than nine occasions. Gotley, who played half, as substitute for Williamson, did remarkably well, and in the last half-hour was quite brilliant. The old Rugby captain, Poulton, on the wing, displayed very much improved form, and looks like developing into a first-class player. At the start, the Oxford forwards rushed the ball away, and compelled the Old Boys to touch down, but following the kick-out the latter attacked strongly, and Parker, intercepting a pass of Martin's, ran clean through, and Raphael kicked a goal. Oxford gradually asserted themselves, and a try by Roberts inaugurated a long sequence of successes. Poulton followed suit, and just before the interval a clever bit of work by Hodges from a line out gained another try. All three place-kicks, however, failed, and ends were changed with the score 9–5 in Oxford's favour.

In the second half the Oxonians had matters practically all their own way, and what with the forwards carrying the scrums and the backs displaying splendid combination, the visitors did very little beyond defending their lines; but try as they would they were powerless against the combined forces of the Dark Blues, and although the latter's place kicking was of the most feeble description, they nevertheless ran up a further sequence of six tries, one of which was converted by Cunningham, and thus proved successful by a goal and eight tries (29 points) to a goal (5 points).

Cambridge University vs. Old Leysians.—There was the customary large attendance at the Old Leysians' match at Cambridge on Saturday. Cambridge were successful by a good large margin, but it can safely be said that it was the forwards who won the match. They always held the Leysians in check on the scrum, more often than not got the ball, and were smart in the lose, and all round, Lely, Purvis, Chapman, and Gimson were at the top of their form. If the forwards did well the two fresh halves, Ashcroft and Sutherland, playing in place of Holloway and Campbell, made the most of their opportunities, Sutherland, working the scrum, passed out very smartly, whilst Ashcroft made some nice openings. The three-quarters, although without Macleod, Pyman, and Coates, were always working well together, but T. A. Godby was a failure at back. The Old Leysians were not quite as strongly represented as they have been of recent years for this match, but they had a fair side out. C. Pinkham, the Caius "Fresher," played full-back for them, and time after time, brought opponents to the ground in a really surprising manner.

The first score came eight minutes after the start when Burton got going on the wing and punted into the centre, which enabled Wright, to sprint up and land over close to the posts. Gimson easily converted. No further points were registered for twenty-five minutes, at the expiration of which time Wright dropped a very neat goal. Following this Oulton missed a pass, and Bower, quickly seizing the opportunity, picked up splendidly, and eluding three opponents, got over close to the goal and again Gimson kicked between the posts.

Changing ends, the Leysians again attacked, Hoskin getting over at the corner. Mellor kicked a fine goal. The visitors being given offside in their own "25," Gimson took the kick and scored a fine penalty goal. Then followed unconverted tries by Burton, and Kennedy, and for some time the Light Blues kept up a hot attack. However the visitors made a last desperate effort, and by working up the field the forwards rushed the home defence, and Reid landed over at the corner, Miller again adding the major points. Final score:—Cambridge University, 2 placed goals, 1 dropped goal, 1 penalty goal, 2 tries (23 points); Old Leysians, 2 placed goals (10 points).

Old Alleynians vs. London Scottish.—Owing to the meeting of the 'Wallabies' and London at Richmond the Alleynians vs. Scottish game was played at Dulwich. And a truly remarkable game it was. The proceedings of the first half and the opening ten minutes of the second suggested that the Scots were in for a bad drubbing. Nine minutes from the commencement L. S. Manvell crossed for the homesters, Wright converting. A little later Garrett, who was in great form throughout, obtained another. The Alleynians continued to monopolise the play, and Garrett cleverly dropped a goal. The next item was a third try—also to Garrett, Wright again majorising. All this happened the while the Scots drew blank, the score at the interval being:—Alleynians, 3 goals (1 dropped) 1 try; Scottish, 0.

On the resumption the leaders maintained the mastery for some while. Then came a wonderful transformation. The Alleynians, feeling the effects of their earlier efforts seemingly, shot their bolt, and thereafter it was the Scots who filled the eye. Their forwards, playing with admirable dash did pretty well as they pleased, and the backs gave such admirable assistance that tries were put on at an alarming rate, Fraser, Doulton, Wade, Meikle, and Williamson each crossing. Lockhart converted on four occasions, the Cantab also dropping a goal. The Alleynians partially recovered nearing the end, but retired defeated, the final score being:—London Scottish, 5 goals (1 dropped), 1 try; Old Alleynians, 3 goals (1 dropped) 1 try.

Olympic Final.—Nobody who saw the Australians scramble home against London on Saturday and walk away from Cornwall at the Stadium on Monday could easily believe that they were watching the same lot of men. On Saturday—though they were playing a far stronger side than they were on Monday—the Australians lacked devil in this game they were possessed of many.

No doubt the great improvement of the side was very largely due to the substitution of McKivatt for Wood at half and McCabe for McKivatt at five-eighth. Wood is undoubtedly a very fine player on his day; but it has not been his day lately. His loss of form is quite easily accounted for, Wood has been suffering from lumbago, which, bad enough, in all conscience, in itself, has worried him mentally; which is worse.

McKivatt was much quicker in getting his three-quarter line moving yesterday than Wood was on Saturday; and McCabe showed himself a clever and extremely fast five-eighth.

One hardly expected to see a great performance by the Australians. It was thought, and reasonably, that if they couldn't take passes and show pace on comparatively fast stuff at Richmond, they would do little with a slippery ball on the wet Stadium ground. As it was, the Australians turned out sprinters, and the way they snapped up low, fast passes was just great.

The match at Thurston's in which Roberts conceded Harverson 4,000 in 18,000 ended on Saturday night in the victory of Harverson by 431. Roberts made breaks of 301 and 251.

Dawson's position in his match with Inman at the Soho-square saloon is apparently hopeless. Inman, who receives 2,000 points in 9,000, has steadily increased his lead, and at the interval yesterday, with just under 4,000 points to get, he possessed an overwhelming lead of 2,653. Inman played consistently well throughout the session, turning his unfinished item of 35 into 174 before breaking down. His next two items were 106 and 49 while Dawson scored 75, 46, and 61. Later Dawson, before breaking down at an easy loser, ran up a beautiful break of 127. POLO IN POONA.

THOUGH the actual season is over, Poona was provided with some sport during last week in the shape of a Polo Tourney on the American system for cups presented by Mrs. Alderson, wife of the General. To level up the teams, handicaps were framed, each quartette being plus or minus so many goals. That Poona is anxious and ready to support some sort of recreation was evident by the numbers that turned out to follow the games and quite a lively interest was shown.

First was the game between the R. F. A. No. 2 and Lincolns represented by Captains Furse, Purser, Duberly and Simons and Major Barlow, Captains Lucas, Buller and Cragg, respectively being plus and minus a goal. Scoring twice, the Lincolns were level at the end of the first chukker and eventually won easily by 8 goals to 3. The Mounted Infantry No. 1 then met the 12th Baluchis with Captains Bhuist, Porteous, Nicolls and Berry, and McCudden, Auret, Tate and Lake with 3 goals and scratch. The handicap proved too much for the Baluchis, each hitting a goal.

Last of Monday's games was between the 26th Cavalry No. 3 minus, and Sappers, plus, with Captains Popham, Collum, Ramwell and Risaldar Suraj Mahal Singh, and Colonel Russell, Majors Bremner, Twiss and Captain Layard. The Sappers scored 2 to 1 in the opening portion, and keeping up their dash won by 5 goals to 2.

Three more were played off on Wednesday when it was a pleasure to see General Alderson himself figuring in the Staff team and playing a great game.

First came the Mounted Infantry No. 2 and R. F. A. No. 1 each plus 4 teams being Majors Rolandson, Hasketh Smith Clements and Stormy, and Major Speeding, Captains Ramsden A.-D.-C., Wallace and Cree. Up to the last chukker the Artillery were well in front but in that the Mounted Infantry scored three times and secured a draw. In the extra time, however, the R. F. A. were first to open.

The Divisional Staff at scratch had a close game with the Miners at plus 5 Representatives were General Alderson, Majors Martin and Hocken and Cassim Shah, and Captains Shipwith, Richardson, Boring and Binney. At the last chukker the Miners were 1 ahead but the Staff then hitting 2 secured a win by 4 to 3.

Another close affair was that between the 26th Cavalry No. 1 and No. 2, each at scratch, represented by Moir, Summers, Mowatt and Jamadar Hukam Singh, and Majors Faunce, Chaytor, Johnson and Jamadar Rochan Singh. No. 1 equalised in the concluding period and then in extra time secured a win by 3 to 2.

More good play was witnessed on Friday when the second round began, three more ties being decided. The Mounted Infantry No. 1 met the 26th Cavalry No. 3 with the same sets of players. The Mounted Infantry were unable to increase their 3 goals start and despite their minus the Cavalry totalled 9 goals, a very hollow win.

The R. F. A. No. 1 with their 4 goals were unable to improve upon this during the game and the Baluchis had things all their own way increasing their handicap of 3 to 8 goals, whereas, the winners played a much improved game, the R. F. A. were distinctly out of luck.

There was only 1 goal hit in the meeting of the Divisional Staff and Sappers, handicapped at scratch and minus 1. This goal went to the Staff in the third chukker and they consequently won by a goal to minus one.

BALLYGUNGE C. C. vs. OFFICERS OF THE GARRISON.—Ballygunge, who were without a match on Saturday owing to some misunderstanding over their fixture with the Caledonians, scored their sixth consecutive win on Sunday last over a strong team of the Officers of the Garrison by 118 runs.

THE PASSING OF THE FREAK DOG.

SOME interesting remarks anent the disappearance of the "freak" dog are contributed to a London paper: we make the following extracts:—

The strongest bridge between any two classes in the animal kingdom is the friendship between men and dogs. Over it have travelled—and to-day travel—multitudes of thoughts and feelings which sweeten the course of life. We all know people who let their affection for dogs take the place of their proper human affections; but in general the friendship of dogs is pure gain to humanity. They are human, with differences. No other animal in the world is really at home within the circle of human companionship.

Much useless discussion is heard about the intelligence of animals, but it seems to me that the sentiment of the dog for man is much more wonderful than the cleverest things that the cleverest liars have attributed to dogs. My spaniel, who has a continuous mood of wretchedness, lasting sometimes for a month and more, when I am away, astonishes me more than if he could prophesy the day of my return. He knows me by many channels; he knows the sound of my voice, the sound of my footstep, even the sound of my bicycle bell, and he knows me by his sense of smell, which it is my firm impression conveys much more to him than identity.

THE "FANCY'S" LITTLE WAY.

The friendship of dogs is so real a thing that a dog-lover goes to a dog show with mixed feelings. He delights to see such glorious specimens of the race as, for instance, will be collected at the Crystal Palace show, but, at the same time, he nurtures a certain resentment against the "Fancy" which has made a semi-scientific sport of this human thing.

The "Fancy," which flourishes nowhere as in England, is a strange cult. It has Darwinian leanings—and, indeed, gave to Darwin half his examples and evidence. It is the apostle of unnatural selection. It produces pigeons with such feathers on their legs that they cannot walk; mice that scarcely keep their equilibrium; hens that appear to be on stilts. It has laid its sacrilegious hand on the dog.

The modern bulldog has the lower jaw so prolonged that his grip, which should be his strongest point, is weaker than any mongrel's. His legs, originally wide for strength, have been so straddled by the "Fancy" that the dog moves with difficulty. In some of the toy dogs that nose is held to be the most beautiful of which the nostrils are directed most upwards.

The fox-terrier, meant for earths and burrows, must now have legs proportionately as long and straight as his nose.

Even show retrievers are very far from that ideal reached the other day by Lord Rothschild's cow Dorothy, which was first in show points and also first in milking competitions. Too seldom does the winner on the bench become the best sporting dog. Few hounds are seen at the Kennel Club shows, and this is due in some measure to a natural reluctance among masters to allow an animal bred by sportsmen of great fame to fall under the influence of the ingenious fanciers whose last thought is utility. The great prize St. Bernards die of heart disease before half their term of life is up, and feather-weight Italian greyhounds shiver into their graves in spite of their great coats.

GOOD RESULTS OF SCIENTIFIC BREEDING.

Some of the tender and ttivated toys that yap at the Kennel Club shows are as unlike the dog of our affection as are those strange and grim dog vagrants that frighten the visitor to Constantinople, or the wandering pariahs that vex the outskirts of an Indian village. Yet the club is one of the most efficient and sensi...e institutions in the world; and our breeders have brought to great perfection almost all the imported dogs they have taken in hand. Our setters are now as good as, or better than, those of Spain; and neither America nor Newfoundland can compete with us in retrievers.

Again, the newly developed varieties are a real addition to the number of our friends. What animal could be of sweeter disposition or finer lines than the golden retrievers shown in public for the first time last year by Mr. Harcourt? The newly "fixed" white West Highland terriers, for which at this moment there is something of a rage, have most of the qualities that are proper to a dog. For these the scientific breeders, if not the "Fancy" proper, are to be thanked. If, after all, the mongrel is the most intelligent and faithful of all the species, it is still true that you can only get the perfect mongrel from the aristocrat whose points are fixed in history.

KENNEL CLUB IDEALS.

Year by year the Kennel Club drops affectations and insists more on adherence to nature. The freak dog is disappearing. The new era began when, to the horror of the "Fancy," the club forbade the clipping of the bull terrier's ears.

Every such institution, necessarily autocratic, must be abused. We all have our criticisms to make. It seems to me, for example, a mistake that no separate identity is permitted to the Sealyham terrier, who is to other terriers what the beagle—whose pedigree is incomparable—is to the hound. His points are distinctive and beautiful and his identity clear. No terrier is more terrier-like in build or character. But this is a small point.

The club is sensible, strong, and very English. It is regarded as a model all over the world, especially in America. Nevertheless some terrible crimes have been committed in its name. The bulldog, accepted by an ironical accident as typically English, is ruined. His nose is not meant to retreat between his eyes, as the "Fancy" at present demands, nor his underjaw to protrude and hook as the judges desire. In this case the prime principle has been neglected that the fixing of points should always be very closely correlated with the original use of the dog. If any freakishness is allowed, as in this most unhappy instance, a crime is committed against the worthiest friend of man.

SCENT THE HIGHEST ATTRIBUTE.

The show at the Crystal Palace is described as for "sporting and other dogs," and, in spite of the horde of pet dogs, sporting proclivities still come to the top, and much less unworthy tampering has been permitted with hounds, retrievers, and spaniels than with the "other dogs." But though the master attribute of all dogs is the power of scent, in the shows shape and coat must take first rank.

This power of scent is something more than a very fine sense. It moulds in a large degree the mind of the animal. The Osbaldestons and the great masters of hounds have always bred for "nose," and for this reason they and the owners of retrievers in the past have produced dogs of incomparable intelligence. No doubt the toy is clever, in some respects extraordinarily so. For craftiness nothing can cap that quite authentic tale of the toy spaniel who stole an egg every morning, and every morning made the big dog, his companion, eat up the fatal evidence of his guilt—the shell. But if the larger sense, the deeper fidelity, the higher capacity for friendship are what we seek in the dog, we should breed for these qualities with the same seriousness that the sportsman has done, with wonderful results, in order to obtain stamina and hunting qualities in hounds that should be "matched in mouth like bells." Of course, the dog should have "a form complete," as in White Melville's fine description; but he had too good an eye for a dog not to include among the other qualities—the straight legs, round feet, "and frigate-like ribs"—the "fashion and fling" that tell of the inner intelligence.

THE FRIEND OF MAN.

The hound, if we must take a special variety, stands for all dogs. The puppy which is "walked" by a villager apart from the pack develops at once his genius for friendship. His nature has nothing savage in it. The foxhound is perhaps—the bloodhound excepted—the least fierce of all varieties. It is only when he returns to primal ways and is carried away by the zest of the pack and the hunting scents that any rage possesses him. Nevertheless, he lives faster than other animals outside his species. For all dogs exhaust themselves. They breathe quickly; their energy is furious. The number of foot-pounds a collie, with his clamour on small occasion, fussiness," will lift in a morning's walk baffles arithmetic. In a day he touches the extremes of ecstasy and lethargy, and his genius for friendship has but a short course.

If dogs lived longer they would surely converse with yet more speaking gestures, movements, and sounds than those of the nose lifting our forearm from the knees, the slight but quick vibration of pleasure when we touch for a moment in the midst of work the half-slumberous form at our feet, or the dance of pleasure as the hat is taken from the peg. The dog is a great friend because self-negation—so strangely opposed to his physical energy—is as innate in his character as is self-interest in the cat's.

DOINGS IN DOGDOM.

The origin of the dog, and the beginning of his strange alliance with the human race, have been fruitful sources of discussion. His antiquity may be conceded without speculation. That our rude, cave-dwelling ancestors were associated with him is more than probable. His value as a guard to person and property, and his use in the chase, were recognised before the era of which history first takes cognisance. Considering the wide divergence of type say, between a toy terrier or a Griffon Bruxellois and a bloodhound or a Great Dane, it is not surprising that many people have advanced the theory that domestic dogs owe their origins to several wild sources, but latterly this idea has been abandoned by the best authorities, who lean mainly towards the wolf, although others favour the jackal. Certain characteristics are undoubtedly shared in common by wolves, jackals, and domestic dogs, and Mr. R. I. Pocock, of the Zoological Society's Gardens, considers that not only Canis lupus, but also the Indian wolf and three, perhaps four, species of jackals, have contributed their share towards building up the modern dog. When we discuss this question, however, we are going back many centuries, for on Egyptian monuments, dating back some three or five thousand years, are several varieties of dogs quite devoid of any lupine resemblance, thus proving that the process of intelligent selection had been exercised for some considerable period. Assyrian proverbs also speak of yellow, piebald, white, and black dogs.

Dr. Woods Hutchinson, in the current Contemporary, raises an interesting point as to the original association of dog with man. He suggests that, instead of man adopting the dog into his family, the dog adopted man into his pack. His reasoning for such a hypothesis is ingenious. A certain number of wolves or wild dogs found it more profitable to follow man in his hunting expeditions and let him do the killing, for their share of the entrails and waste parts of the animal, than it was to kill for themselves. In the course of his experience man discovered that it was easier to let the dogs follow and kill for him a wounded animal than to do so himself. However the friendship was first formed, there is the fact, as Maeterlinck beautifully expresses it, that "we are alone, absolutely alone, on this chance planet, and, amid all the forms of life that surround us, not one, excepting the dog, has made an alliance with us. A few creatures fear us, most are unaware of us, and not one loves us. But the dog has been drawn to us, into our world in which he was not born. How he came, Maeterlinck does not inquire. "The fact remains that he is there in our houses, as ancient, as rightly placed, as perfectly adapted to our habits as though he had appeared on this earth, such as he now is, at the same time as ourselves. We have not to gain his confidence or his friendship; he is born our friend; while his eyes are still closed, already he believes in us; even before his birth, he has given himself to man. . . . He is our intimate and nothing repels, whose ardent trust and love nothing can impair. He has solved, in an admirable and touching manner, the terrifying problem which human wisdom have to resolve if a Divine ace came to occupy our globe."

Certainly man has taken full advantage of the friendship extended to him by his four-footed dependent, whom he has turned to many and various uses. The keen sportsman will always have a delight in watching well-trained dogs at work in the field, whether they be foxhounds, harriers, beagles, or one of the varieties used on game. The differences between the two schools of shooting have frequently led to acrimonious disputes, without any satisfactory ending. Let it be conceded at once that the driven bird takes a lot of shooting. It is by no means child's-play when you are in a hot corner with the rocketing pheasants coming high and at a great pace. They are more difficult to hit then than is a bird getting up in front of you and going straight away. But there is many a good sportsman who cannot afford battue shooting, and who is content if he can work the fields with a couple of dogs and bring home a few brace of birds and a hare or two. Probably he is a better Nature-lover than the man at the butts. Anyhow, the work of an intelligent dog appeals to him with great force; it is almost as much pleasure to him as the actual shooting. A spaniel of some sort or other is always a handy fellow to have about; he is capable of going on all day, and he has an excellent heart. He will put the game up for you, and retrieve it when shot. His fine scenting powers make him good at finding runners, a quality which is much appreciated by the man who hates to think that a wounded bird may escape to die a lingering death. At home the spaniel is the best of companions, ready for anything, and much attached to his human belongings.

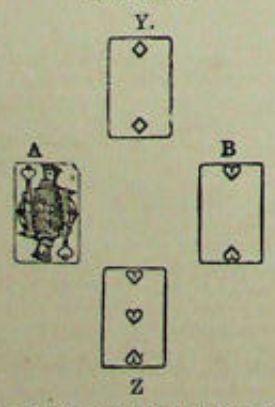
BRIDGE.

Solution to Problem No. 76.

If Z leads out ace, king of diamonds, and ruffs the third round in dummy, he will be able to finesse the queen of hearts; but unless the unseen diamonds lie three in one hand and four in the other, the adversaries will ruff higher than Y, and, even then, if the trump finesse fails, A may lead a fourth diamond for B to ruff. Z's best game, therefore, is to lead out the ace of trumps, followed by another. If the adverse trumps are evenly divided, he has then a certainty of winning the game, for Y can ruff Z's small diamond without danger of being over-ruffed. Again, if the king of trumps falls to the ace, the same result follows, for Z wins the second round with the queen, and then, going into diamonds, makes Y's trump separately, or forces the remaining winning trump with it.

Problem No. 77.



Score: A B, O; Y Z O. Z deals and leaves it to Y, who declares diamonds. Y's and Z's hands are as follows:

Y's hand (Dummy): Hearts, none; diamonds, ace, knave, 10, 9, 8, 2; clubs, knave, 9, 3; spades, ace, knave, 8, 7.

Z's hand (Dealer); Hearts, queen, knave, 10, 3; diamonds king; clubs, king, queen, 6, 5, 4, 2; spades, 6, 5.

The first trick is as follows:

MOTOR MEMS FROM ENGLAND.

ORIGINAL AND OTHERWISE.

A FEW days before the opening of the Olympia Motor Show last year a news agency circulated the statement that the F. I. A. T. Company of Turin had closed down their works. This statement was contradicted at the time as having no foundation. Unfortunately, the Birmingham Daily Post published the false news in good faith, and an action was brought against them by F. I. A. T. Company. This action came before the High Court, King's Bench Division, last week, and the F. I. A. T. Company agreed to settle the case on payment of £100 and costs, Mr. Eldon Bankes, K. C., on behalf of the defendants, withdrawing the statements made and expressing great regret at having published what was found on inquiry to be absolutely without foundation. The object of the F. I. A. T. Company in bringing the action was to counteract as far as possible the injury done to F. I. A. T. Motor (Limited), of England, and the F. I. A. T. Company of Turin rather than to obtain heavy damages for libel.

TO-DAY the position of the F. I. A. T. Company of Turin is stronger than ever, as the directorate, already a powerful one, was considerably strengthened at the annual meeting in August last by the addition of the chairman of the Bank of Italy and two directors of two other of the leading banks in Italy. This puts their financial status beyond all question. The company have had a most successful year, and have nearly 3,000 men at present employed at the factory. Large orders are in hand, but this will be no surprise to those who have witnessed the success of F. I. A. T. cars, the 15 h.-p. Fiat having been one of the most popular models bought by the public this year.

FINALITY in non-slip covers seems a long way off. A most ingenious right and left wheel cover has been designed by the Samson Rubber Company of Willesden. It consists of a combination of the grooved and studded tyre, but the studs are in the grooves, which are diagonal from right to left and left to right, according to which side wheels the covers are to be fitted. The racing type has the groove with the studs across the tread. The object of this system is to lessen the weight, 160 studs being used in place of 1,000, at the same time giving efficiency in non-slipping qualities. It is claimed for these covers that they are an absolute non-skid in all weathers, and never get hot, as their design and construction causes less road friction, and consequently longer life. They are being used on some of the Daimler hiring cars, and have run on these cars from 3,000 to 5,000 miles as their tyre life.

AT this season, when so many are contemplating new purchases of motor-cars, many becoming owners for the first time, it is a very appropriate moment for the issue of literary aids to motorists. Several new volumes have been published of these. "The Care of the Car, and how to Drive it," edited by Lord Montagu of Beaulieu and Mr. R. J. Mecredy, is a very useful and handy volume. It is useful, as it explains in everyday language, free from too technical expressions, the chief details in the driving and management of a motor-car, while the whole of its information is conveyed in 108 pp. of a small volume, handy for the pocket, at the reasonable price of one shilling. It is published by the "Car Illustrated" (Ltd.). Another useful work is the third edition of "The Encyclopædia of Motoring." This book, edited by Mr. R. J. Mecredy, contains full definitions of every term used in motoring, with special articles on roadside troubles, ignition, driving, the working of the internal combustion engine steam cars, etc. So full are its "definitions" that in many cases they extend to several pages for a single subject. In fact, the "Encyclopædia of Motoring" is a book no motorist should be without as it explains fully every part of a motor-car and its working value, with its why and wherefore clearly stated. This present edition is published by Mecredy, Percy, and Co. (Ltd.) contains 612 pages and the price is seven shillings and sixpence.

THE first practical result of the agitation against the use of racing cars on English roads is the exclusion of this class of car from the forthcoming motor-car show at Olympia which opens on 13th November. The Society of Motor Manufacturers and Traders has issued a notice forbidding the exhibition of any car built for racing at this show.

The committee of the society has added this rule to those already in force and the regulation will be strictly maintained.

The prohibition, moreover, extends even to notices in regard to racing cars.

Mr. Lionel H. Barnes, the secretary of the Highways Protection League, thinks the new regulation an excellent one.

"In the metropolitan area alone, from January to September, 1908," he pointed out, "the number of accidents caused by motor-cars in which personal injuries were received was 2,945, and 105 people were killed."

WITH the Lord Mayor in the chair, a Mansion House conference, called at the instance of the Road Union, considered on Tuesday afternoon the necessity for fresh legislation to deal with motor traffic.

The Duke of Northumberland, Lord Willoughby de Broke, Mr. Harold Cox, M.P., Mr. F. C. Mackinnon, M.P., and about 160 delegates from rural and district councils attended.

The Lord Mayor said that they were not opposing the motor industry, but legislation was needed. Accidents were too numerous and too close together. Roads should not be treated as railway tracks.

Men who drove motors should pass a qualifying examination before being licensed.

He himself, although not opposed to the abolishing of the speed limit—(cries of "No, no!")—would prosecute to the utmost limit the man who drove to the common danger.

There were circumstances in which even a pace of two miles an hour might be dangerous.

Improvements in road-making might lessen the dust nuisance, but what they wanted to protect was life and property.

Mr. Arthur Shadwell pointed out that the rural labouring people, who derived no benefit from motor traffic, suffered the most from its evils. Their rest was disturbed and their children endangered.

Moving a resolution calling on the Government for further legislation for the protection of the public, Mr. Harold Cox, M.P., said that the whole question was one of the speed, which ministered to the selfish pleasure of a number of very rich people.

Seconding the resolution, Lord Willoughby de Broke remarked that the trouble came through the inconsiderate motorists.

The Duke of Northumberland declared that it came as a great shock to him to see how selfish rich people could be, and how little they cared for the comfort of their poorer neighbours.

For certain definite offences, his Grace thought that cars should be confiscated for six months, "and let the owner come and shed a tear over it."

BULLETS IN SHOT GUNS.

Most shot guns will shoot fairly accurately with ball, if the bullets fit the bore properly, and they can be generally depended on at short ranges—say up to 40 or 50 yards. The lightness and handiness of shot guns, our familiarity with their use for quick shooting, such as is often required in thick jungle, gives them a great advantage over rifles of any kind. The nearer a smooth bore barrel approaches to a true cylinder, and the better the bullet fits it, the better the gun will shoot. A good cylinder barrel, such as we find in most good class guns in the present day, with a tight fitting ball, will shoot into a six inch circle every time at a hundred yards; but the ordinary shot gun of nominal 12 gauge which usually shoots a loose fitting 13 gauge, bullet, cannot be absolutely depended on for more than about half this range. Its shooting, however, can be very much improved by a greased linen patch sewn on to the bullet which should have a couple of thick greased wads behind it. The patch and the wads almost entirely do away with windage and it is really wonderful what a marked increase one finds in accuracy, for it is possible to group several shots in succession in a four inch ring at 50 yards.

The ordinary shot gun charge of 3 drams of black powder drives a 13 gauge bullet at about 11,000 feet per second initial velocity. No doubt gunmakers can recommend a good nitro powder for ball in shot guns and give such directions for loading as will insure greater muzzle velocity and increased accuracy, while with comparatively small recoil, less noise and smokelessness we should secure still greater advantages.

These remarks are the outcome of a further acquaintance with the spherical "Lethal" bullet, introduced to this country by Messrs. Lyon and Lyon, and which has raised ridges crossing each other (vide the illustration in their advertisement appearing elsewhere) which enable it to fit the bore comparatively tightly and should vastly increase the precision and utility of the shot gun from which they are fired. The ridges are easily rubbed off so that the "Lethal" bullet can be quite safely used in guns with the fullest choke barrels and with the intersecting steel plates embedded within the structure of the bullet it expands on impact equal to the conical express as used in rifles, with a charge of 3½ drams of Schultze or its equivalent in Ballistite.

We have experimented with cylindrical shaped bullets for shot guns for some years—it is perhaps over thirty years since they were introduced—but though they have on a few occasions given satisfactory results, further experience has by no means confirmed the favourable reception we were inclined to give them. The theory sounds good enough: they are intended to give the ordinary smooth bore shot gun all the power and a good deal of the range of a rifle of the same calibre, but in practice they are frequently found to keyhole or topple over in flight, while some of the examples of Belgian manufacture break up badly on impact even against thin skinned animals and seldom achieve what is claimed for them unless they enter a more than usually soft part even of such quarry. Also they have been known to break up dangerously while in flight, an instance having occurred at a tiger shoot in which we were taking part, when almost half of one of these hollow cylindrical projectiles flew off at a tangent and actually struck the machan on the right of the shooter who shot at a bear crossing rather less than midway between the two machans and at least thirty-five yards in front of both! The first bullet of this kind was brought out so many years ago that we have preserved but a faint recollection of its points, but we remember it had holes running through it in a longitudinal direction and these holes were spiral in form; the passage of the air through these holes was intended to give them a spin similar to that imparted by the grooves of the rifle. The McLeod bullet of 2½oz. weight, as advertised so far back as 1884, was of this pattern; in Sporting Firearms, Colonel F. Burgess, the well-known expert, has some remarks about it; he is no believer in the system. The most recent example of this bullet seen in India was, we think, the "rotary," which was ridged at the sides and had a sirocco-fan sort of arrangement in the central hollow which is said to impart the twist. Shortly after its appearance here we experimented with it, as did several friends, but want of opportunity prevented the completion of the series of tests we had planned. These we have since been able to make and we find the promise of accuracy which we had at first been led to expect was not satisfactorily fulfilled, while the breaking up on impact, the keyholing, etc., were also present in a marked degree. But even if the accuracy of the hollow cylindrical bullet had been all that was desired, its penetration is defective and its weight was certainly against it and the result was undue recoil and a possibility of putting too great a strain on the gun, especially the light built weapons in vogue now. This bullet therefore appears to us to exhibit many of the disadvantages of those tried in the early eighties. Many sportsmen tender the opinion that the flat surface of the head of the bullet and the various devices for giving it a rotary flight are quite opposed to the chances of obtaining accurate shooting and in this we are inclined to agree. Until something much better turns up we shall expect to see the "Lethal" expanding spherical one more than hold its own as the most popular and reliable for use in shot guns in India.

Sporting & Athletic Notes.

MATTERS are beginning to get interesting on the training track, and though slow "trot and canter" is still chiefly the order of the day, there has been a fair amount of pace work done and on Tuesday quite a number were sprinting. Arrivals have been numerous, Norton's and Byramjee's being the most important stables to come up since our last issue. The latter has taken the stables in old Ballygunge Road from which so many winners were trained in the days when Jack Perret occupied them and Smallman used to live with and ride for him. Byramjee is doing all his slow work on the Ballygunge maidan and only goes down to the race-course to gallop as he considers it too far for every day.

FITZGRAFTON still remains most fancied for the Cup in spite of the fact that he came off the course distinctly sore after his pace work on Tuesday. Blades has arrived, but Butters continues to ride the favourite at exercise, as under present circumstances it is naturally advisable to keep the weight off him as much as possible.

LONG TOM continues to go well and show no signs of lameness, and if he goes on in this way he will probably start in the Cup at a much shorter price than the Rs. 50,000 to Rs. 500 which has been laid Mr. Galstaun about him. It is still uncertain whether The Bedouin will be entered for the Cup, as though he has landed and is looking much better than could have been expected the time available for preparation is very short.

THE entries for Saturday are not too bad for a first extra, but there will be a good many non-starters and fields are likely to be on the small side. The figures are: Midget Pony Plate 12, Beginners' Plate 14, Welter Plate 15, Giant Pony Plate 8, Season's Maiden Horse Plate 11, Welter Pony Plate 14. It will probably be a favourite's day, as so many of them will be in the "not ready" stage that anything well supported by its stable must have a very big chance. On paper Eileen, Galloping Girl, Pincher, Naughty Boy, and Cheeky look winners of their respective events, but we shall see what condition they are in on Saturday.

THERE were only two schools done this Tuesday. Dea (Hoyt) and Seclusion (Alford) five flights—jumping strong—was the first. Betrayer out by himself with Thomas up the second. It was interesting to note that at last the big Australian took his jumps in good style—for the first time in India we believe—and if he is going to show us some of the form which he used to display "down under" he will be a formidable factor in the hurdle races this season.

WE learn that Mr. Artin Essayie, the well-known Western India race horse owner, died on the 19th instant.

MESSRS. CHAMPION AND CO. have arrived in Calcutta, and are at their old quarters at the Great Eastern Hotel.

MR. HARRY GOLDSPINK is also at the Great Eastern Hotel and several other well-known sportsmen have just arrived, including Colonel P. K. L. Beaver, Mr. Robert Boteler, Mr. E. J. Marshall and Major Leigh, the new official handicappes of the C.T.C.

WE publish in our turf columns to-day full details of the race for the Melbourne Cup.

OUR Shillong correspondent writes:—There are not many first entries for the Lower Assam Races which begin on the 24th November. For the Shillong Cup—a race worth Rs. 900—Mr. Bulmer's Ivy II, Mr. Holder's Topsy III and Dr. Flory's Vanity Fair are the only entrants at present. Mr. Bulmer has bought a new one—Magazine—for the Maiden Plate (worth Rs. 450) and there is not likely to be anything to beat her. Mr. Holder will be present with Topsy III, Glenlea and Repute and he is also taking down from Shillong Mr. P. L. Faulkner's Eileen Alannah. The Polo Races are likely to fill well. Mr. McArthur is sending down several ponies from Cachar in Mr. Pullen's charge, while Dr. Flory besides his own Revenue is running Mr. H. U. Baker's little countrybred, Hope Terry. There is, however, not likely to be anything to touch Ruth, Mr. Ernest Holder's splendid English mare.

BELOW is a long list of firms subscribing or presenting Cups in support of the Dibrugarh Race and Polo Meet for January 1909.

From the programme advertised elsewhere in our columns it will be seen that, thanks to the generous support of the Calcutta firms, the prizes and events generally, should attract sportsmen to this meet, which already promises to be a bumper one.

It has been decided by the Stewards to call certain races definitely after the names of certain firms, who have long been regular supporters of the meet:—

WE have just been favoured with a copy of Messrs. Manton and Company's latest catalogue of sporting requisites. A glance through its pages convinces us that the oldest established firm of gunmakers in Calcutta is as ever in the forefront in all matters concerning guns, rifles, revolvers, ammunition and other sporting and athletic specialities.

WHAT with the Olympic football and lacrosse at the Stadium within the past few days, the Olympic boxing competitions at Clerkenwell this week and the skating at Prince's Club, Knightsbridge, we have at last about got through the extraordinary programme of competitions that has made the present year a memorable one in the history of international athletics, writes the Country Gentleman. The football was in a measure disappointing. The Association eleven which represented England, and beat Denmark by two goals to one, including as it did five men who have taken part in important international matches, gave such a poor account of themselves that the crowd was provoked to a display of derision. England pulled the game out of the fire mainly by the aid of the goalkeeper. On Monday, too, Cornwall, last season's county champions in Rugby football, gave but a moderate exhibition against the visiting Australian team, and were easily defeated, though it is evident that the Colonials are a smarter combination than some were inclined to admit a few weeks previously. The lacrosse, however, was worthy of the occasion, and probably no English side has ever given a finer exhibition of this splendid and attractive game than that which narrowly lost to the Canadians on Saturday.

IT would be wrong and unreasonable to judge the success of the Olympic Games by a few individual results however. In many cases the competition failed to come up to the high standard expected. Some of the events failed to draw perfectly representative players or teams; and perhaps the interest began to fall off after that strenuous fortnight in July, when athletes, archers, gymnasts, cyclists, swimmers and wrestlers from all parts of the globe fought for supremacy day by day. But taken on the whole the great athletic festival this year, we think, will be voted an undoubted success, even by those keen Americans who, with the heat of argument still upon them, went back to their country and spread bitter tales of British lack of fair play. That regrettable final in the 400 metres, the pitiable accusation against our winning team in the tug-of-war, and one or two other minor incidents will doubtless linger longer in the memory than we should like, but after all they were the exceptions that proved the rule, and there are probably very few among those who watched the Olympic Games this year who are likely ever again to witness such a vast international gathering or so many brilliant performances at one meeting in this or any other country.

ENGLISHMEN have no reason to look back upon the Olympic contest with humiliation or regret. Our representatives came out with quite as much credit as had generally been expected. Their many grand achievements were recorded by athletes from our Colonies, notably Walker, the South African, in the 100 metres, and Kerr, the Canadian, in the 200—but let us at once acknowledge that as a body of athletes we saw none finer—and are scarcely likely to—than the team sent over by the United States, including the redoubtable Sheppard, who combines sprinting powers and stamina to a degree we have never seen equalled in one man; Smithson, extraordinary hurdler; the long and high jumpers, Irons and Porter; and Hayes, the winner if not the hero of the Marathon. It seems strange, indeed, that the representatives of a nation which had carried off so many of the honours and put up so many world's records should have been, apparently, the least satisfied that those responsible for the conduct of the Games were above suspicion and actuated by the highest principles of fair play and good sportsmanship. As one shrewd judge observed at the time of the incident, however, the impressions of our visitors will improve when the results are seen in a longer perspective than is yet possible. Already as the perspective has lengthened we believe that these impressions have become more favourable.

EVER since the fiasco connected with the Marathon race at the Olympic Games, endeavours have been made to bring together Hayes, the American who won on protest, and Pietri, who was first past the post. Rumour has it that the difficulties have now been surmounted and that the men are to meet on the 25th instant at Madison Square Garden, New York, to run over a distance of 42 kilometres for a prize of 500 dollars.

THE Indian Army have given a contract to Messrs. Wilkinson of Pall Mall for the supply of "Mars" oil for the treatment of soldiers' boots, saddlery, and other leather articles. This material is largely used in this country for waterproofing and preserving shooting, fishing and golf boots.

A GENERAL MEETING of the Calcutta Kennel Club will be held at the Royal Exchange, Clive Street, to-morrow evening at 5-30. It is hoped that a dog show may be held on the maidan about the end of January 1909.

THE Madras Gymkhana Golf Club recently referred the following two interesting points to the Rules of Golf Committee at St. Andrews :—

(1) On the course it is customary to employ a caddie and fore-caddie. In a stroke competition a player drove over a hedge, where he could not see his ball or the fore-caddie. The player sent forward his caddie to see how it was lying. When the player got up to his ball he found it just outside a ditch, and on questioning the caddie was told that the fore-caddie had lifted it out. Thinking this action had disqualified him, the player played the ball where it lay. The Club Committee decided that the player was not disqualified, and penalised him one stroke under rule 26, placing the fore-caddie, who according to rule 22 is not an agency outside the match, in an equal position with the caddie. Was the Committee's decision correct?

(2) The first tee is within a railed enclosure. A drove off and his ballstruck the rail and, rebounding, hit B before he could get out of the way. A claimed the hole. B objected on the ground that he had not commenced the game and was not in the match, relying on rule 2 :—"A match begins by each side playing a ball from the first teeing ground." Which contention is correct?

The decisions of the Rules of Golf Committee are as follows :—

(1) The decision of the Committee was incorrect. Rule 26 refers to moving a ball and not to lifting it. Assuming that the ball was placed in a position which conformed to Stroke Rule 10, it was immaterial whether the ball was lifted from the ditch by the player or his fore-caddie, and the penalty was two strokes. It has been ruled that teeing a ball includes dropping or placing it.

(2) The first paragraph of Rule 2 is merely a general description of how the game begins, as evidenced by the fact that there is no penalty clause. A's ball was in play and struck B who was his opponent. B therefore lost the hole under Rule 23, owing to the unfortunate accident described.

WITH the racing season now on it occurs to us to revert once again to the Ebberzine and Pass Cora veterinary specialities to which we alluded sometime ago. Pass Cora for the "noble animile," and more especially for the polo pony, and also for the dog, has been making big strides in popularity we are glad to be assured. Many of the best known men of the polo world are loud in their praises of it and leading kennel lights consider it wonderful stuff for mange and eczema. Scores of Masters of Hounds in England and many celebrated exhibitors now pin their faith to it and say so in testimonials which must be very soothing to the manufacturers. It is among the best of such lotions and it certainly seems the cheapest, for one powder, costing a shilling, makes a quart of lotion. Ebberzine and Pass Cora are not quack nostrums, they are the result of the experience and experiments of an eminent English vet.

THE Lancet of the 24th October contains a long and interesting article upon the manufacture of Lemco, Oxo and Nursing Oxo, and the huge cattle-rearing industry connected therewith.

The proprietors of the Lancet are to be congratulated on their initiative in dealing with such an important subject. Medical men must often regret that they have not the opportunity of visiting the vast Argentine cattle farms where these concentrated foods are prepared, and see with their own eyes the scrupulous care and scientific methods which are employed to ensure the maximum amount of dietetic efficiency being maintained. They will, therefore, be specially interested in reading the account of an expert eye-witness who has evidently been initiated into the innermost secrets of the business.

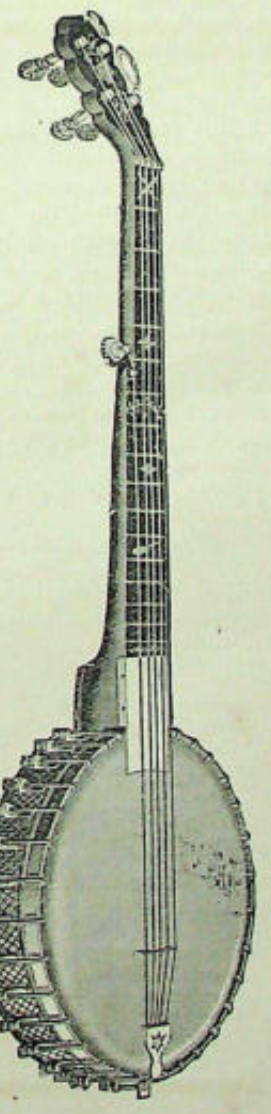
As is generally known, articles in the Lancet are written for the benefit of the medical profession and nurses, but this particular subject is of such interest, and the descriptive part has been handled so realistically, that the article in question is of real interest to the general public.

After dwelling upon the origin of Lemco, the researches of the celebrated Baron Justus von Liebig, and the formation in 1865 of the Liebig Company—the originators of the manufacture of concentrated beef foods—the Commissioner goes on to say :—"It is difficult to convey an adequate sense of the magnitude of the cattle farms situated upon the Liebig Company's property in the Argentine in Uruguay and Paraguay. Even a rapid round of all the estancias, without spending more than a day and a night at each, would occupy the best part of three months ; and the traveller would encounter, over the thousands of miles covered, a vast ocean of grass, ever being replenished by a congenial climate, studded by innumerable herds of cattle, each perhaps comprising from 2,000 to 4,000 head, and after some days he would begin to long for a change in the scene, for he would probably get satiated with the sight of so many cattle, albeit they are splendid beasts, whose sires are English pedigree bred. He would appreciate the curiously exhilarating and pure air ; the sense of real fatigue comes but rarely in spite of hard travelling. He would admire the marvellously healthy-looking condition and cleanly and picturesque appearance of the cattle, due to careful breeding and selection of stock, and above all to the fact that every moment of their life day and night is spent in the open air. The whole camp is, in short, one stupendous example of the open-air life. It not only supplies abundance of good pasture and water, but it provides a continual supply of fresh vitalised air which effectually guards the cattle from those diseases to which they are prone."

When the total acreage of the Lemco and Oxo farms is taken into account, coupled with the enormous herd feeding thereon, some conception of the grass-yielding value of the pasturage is gained. Apart from sheep, the stock of cattle at the present time is about 250,000, which are distributed over 1,250,000 acres of grass. On this estimate the allotment to each animal is about five acres of pasturage. The average daily amount of grass consumed by one animal is 88 pounds ; a herd of 250,000 would therefore consume per diem 22,000,000 pounds of grass, or approximately 10,000 tons. The yearly consumption of grass would thus mean not far short of 4,000,000 tons. These quantities are prodigious and they illustrate the increase which the land brings forth. Similarly, the annual amount of water consumed, based on the fact of one animal requiring 30 litres per day, would amount to 700,000,000 gallons per annum for the herd. These figures will convey some idea of the scale on which cattle farming is done in the Argentina and neighbouring States, but after all they refer only to the stock of one Company, which, however, is the largest stock held, as it is the finest bred, by an individual concern. Altogether the cattle population of the Argentina is nearly 26,000,000 and in the Uruguay over 6,000,000 head.

The Commissioner describes the processes of manufacture, and makes a special point of the scientific supervision which is exercised over every detail ; even the temperature at which Lemco and Oxo is prepared varies from day to day, with the age of the cattle, the season of the year, and the kind of pasture upon which they are reared. The details of veterinary inspection are most convincing, and the magnificent water supply described, diagrams being given comparing the volume of water in the River Uruguay with that in the Thames.

The article contains a number of analyses, which will be exceedingly interesting to the medical profession, and is illustrated with a number of photos of the country. Altogether the Lancet Commissioner gives a very interesting account of his 16,000 mile journey, and the article, which covers twelve pages in the Lancet, is of real educational value, and gives a clear idea of the dietetic properties of Lemco, Oxo and Nursing Oxo. The illustrations give just sufficient idea of the magnitude of the industry to make one realise that its greatness can really only be understood by those who have been fortunate enough to see the factories and farms for themselves.



MESSRS. LYON AND LYON have sent us a copy of their annual catalogue, a most interesting publication which we commend to the attention of all who shoot and fish. Well arranged, well printed and replete with good and moderately priced things, it is a compilation on which we heartily congratulate the firm.

AN interesting entertainment was given by Jack McAuliffe's Boxing and Athletic Club at the Calcutta Concert Hall on Saturday evening. McAuliffe opened the proceedings with a clever and scientific display of ball punching which he followed by an excellent exhibition of club swinging, and later showed that he had lost none of the science and cleverness which has earned him his reputation, when he sparred three rounds with one of his pupils. Our Poona correspondent writes:—The Aga Khan Hockey Tournament commenced in Poona on Tuesday, and has since then been followed with no little interest, though in importance it is by no means up to the one taking place annually in Bombay. No great support can be expected from the latter place, as their season does not start till February.

There were two games played on Tuesday on the Gymkhana ground, in one of which Tattersall's Club gave the Ammunition Factory of Kirkee a 5—1, beating. The majority of the racing fraternity are away, in fact there are but few left, but the Club seems to have got together quite a good team.

A very tight game was played between the Bishop's High School and Royal Engineers in which there was no scoring to within about a minute of full time. The School then got through and won a great fight.

Another close affair on Wednesday, however, could not be decided even after ten extra minutes each way. It was between the Lincolns "B" and R.F.A., Kirkee.

They replayed on Thursday when the Artillery won by 2—0. Peculiarly enough one of these was awarded without their being asked to hit it, owing to a foul. Friday saw the Northamptons beat the Royal Scots after a close struggle by 3—2.

The Indian Army Hockey Tournament at Bangalore has been won by the 95th Infantry who beat the 119th Infantry in the final game by 4 goals to one. Details further on.

London Week by Week.

Friday, 6th October 1908.

Very little, beyond the usual plentiful crop of murders, assaults, robberies, divorces and motor-car accidents, has happened since last I had the honour of addressing you. Untravelled Britishers regard India as a risky place to live in, with its ever recurring snakes in one's boots or bedding, its "ferocious doolies," its cholera morbus lurking in most foods, its earthquakes, fevers, perjurers. "Paythuns" bomb—adiers and all the other perils that make a returned healthy thirty years' exile almost a natural curiosity to them.

But the average home-returned Anglo-Indian's observations, when he takes his walks abroad or after he has put down his sensation-sodden newspaper lead him to return hearty thanks that each week end finds him unharmed in mind, body or estate. At least this is not unfrequently the spirit in which your "Vagrant" approaches this weekly budget of London's doings.

Our thanks are due to the Maily-Fist for having supplied a topic of conversation and the humour which has rescued the week from utter dullness. The question that is being asked by everyone (apropos of the remarkable revelations made by the German Emperor in the now famous interview) is: "Why did the Kaiser do it?" The net result of His Majesty's statements—that he prevented a Franco-Russian movement against Great Britain during the South African war and sent to her late Majesty Queen Victoria a plan to conquer the Boers drawn up by himself—is that the British people are puzzled at His Majety's protestations of friendship, the French and Russians are angry at the alleged plot being revealed, and the Germans, whose antagonism to Great Britain is well known are furious with their ruler for his conduct. The sequel came last Saturday with the resignation of the German Imperial Chancellor, Prince von Buelow.

But the Maily-Fist declined to accept the resignation and the Chancellor has agreed to remain. The affair, though serious enough in its international bearing, has an irresistibly comic side, showing in oft-quoted words of the Swedish statesman, Oxenstiern, "With how little wisdom is the world governed!" Here is the history of the "Kaiser-Buelow crisis" in brief:

British Press publishes long statement by the Kaiser in which he asserts his friendship for England, declares that he frustrated a Franco-Russian coalition against this country during the Boer war, and actually drew up a plan of campaign for the conquest of the South African Republics, which he sent to the British authorities. Shower of denials and recriminations from the countries concerned. Rage and mortification in Germany at the Kaiser's blundering disclosures.

Prince Buelow tenders his resignation.

The Prince persuaded to remain in office.

Official statement to the effect that the publication of the Emperor's remarks was due to a blunder of the German Foreign Office. Well, well, most of us still live and move and have our beer in in spite of all this pother.

Another subject for merriment has been the curious attitude adopted by the Chancellor of the Exchequer towards the very sensible proposal to substitute nickel coins for the bronze pennies and half pennies now in circulation. Trade would be disturbed, the public would be inconvenienced it is alleged! The nickel anna has been current in India for over a year, it is convenient, more cleanly than pice, lighter and has been so warmly welcomed that the Bombay Mint was for some time hard pressed to meet the enormous demands of the Indian public. It is now firmly established and is very popular among all classes of the population, according to my information. It has been a completely successful experiment; but over here it is jibbed at in high quarters. Really in quite a number of matters India gives the British Isles a lead. I am confirmed in this impression when I think of your excellent and expeditious V.-P. P., your telegraph and postal systems, cheap railway travelling, and other public and domestic conveniences. The post offices in my part of London open and close late, they shut down for business on Wednesdays at 2 P.M., they are closed all Sundays, the same applies to the Telegraph offices. It is impossible to buy a penny stamp or send a wire after 8 P.M. throughout the week or any how between 8 P.M. on Saturday and 8 A.M. on Monday. I am not living in the centre of Exmoor or the heart of the New Forest, as this condition of things might imply; a milestone almost opposite my domicile declares that I reside "2 miles from Whitehall!" The other day on important telegram from India arrived in London at 6-10 A.M., it reached me at 11-25 A.M. (per boy on bicycle) having taken 5 hours and 15 minutes to travel from Broad Street to my house—just 2¼ miles. The explanation was that "unless expressly desired by correspondents, messages were not delivered at night!" Nuff sed.

The Franco-British Exhibition at Shepherd's Bush opened its portals to the public for the last time on Saturday; the "White City" will, almost as soon as these lines are in print, be deserted and desolate, while its promoters decide on what is to be its fate—destruction or revival—needless to add the public vote for the latter in some shape or form. It has been a colossal success. Since its opening on the 14th May it has attracted several millions of visitors from all parts of England, France and the Continent; it has been admirably managed and has served its purpose in every respect. Certain statistics are before me. I read that of the amusements and side shows in the Exhibition grounds, the most popular has been the scenic railway, on which 2,800,000 persons have travelled.

Next in power of attractiveness appears to have been the Irish Village, which was visited by about 2,000,000 persons.

Between the Flip-flap and the boats there seems to have been little to choose—1,110,800 people ascended in the former, while 2,000 fewer people went for trips on the artificial waters.

No other amusement tempted as many as 1,000,000 persons to spend their sixpence, though 715,000 visited the Johnstown Flood in the three months during which it was open.

The Ceylon village and Indian show was perhaps the least popular and deservedly so: it was utterly unworthy of the place.

The energy displayed by the visitors to the White City is shown by the fact that only 25,000—an average of 1,000 a week—toured the grounds in the travelling chairs or rickshaws.

Mr. St. John Hankin, what time he was assistant editor of the Indian Daily News, might have been personally known to some of your readers; he has written a curtain raiser—"The Burglar Who Failed"—and had it produced at the Criterion. Mr. Hankin, who during his brief sojourn in Calcutta, was dubbed "Bunthorne" if I am not mistaken, can do really good work; he has given proof of it, but what useful purpose he expected to serve in turning out a playlet of this type one cannot conceive. It revolves round a sordid episode in which an absurd and drunken man servant turned burglar, is discoverd hiding, with burglarious intent under a bed; he is collared, lectured and pardoned by a muscular young girl of seventeen. It is dull and dismal, and the excuse that it passes the time is insufficient, seeing that it passes such a little time so dully.

Watching the really amazing performance of Bernardi, the quick-change artist at the Palace last Tuesday, it seemed to me he had almost succeeded in nullifying time. His average expenditure of that commodity in donning and doffing a complete costume is about three seconds. I saw him discard a woman's costume and put on a man's attire, run twenty feet during the two operations and timed him at just three seconds. The result is achieved by an exact planning out of every inch he has to traverse. He must be on a particular spot at a particular time. Everything depends on the precision of his judgment. The stage is marked out, and behind transparent scenery an army of assistants is waiting. One pulls off his wig, another his boots, while a third and fourth divest him of his dress. Two men hold his trousers ready for him, two more put on his coat and waistcoat, someone claps a wig on his head; others put on his gloves, thrust a stick in his hand, and button his boots. All the while Bernardi's nimble fingers are altering the appearance of his face, and he is rapidly rushing round the stage in full view of the audience. It is really startling and clever.

Bernardi in his forty minutes on the stage changes no fewer than fifty times. During that time he gives a conjuring entertainment, musical performances, comic turns, and a dancing performance a la Loie Fuller. In fact, he provides a complete music hall entertainment. All his changes, as above stated, are visible to the audience through transparent scenery. The handing of the garments and the putting on of others reminded me of the dressing I have often seen in Indian chummeries where a leisurely bearer or two, a punkah, a peg and a cigarette and other aids to adornment play prominent parts, but there the operation took usually over half an hour, here it is reduced to fractions of a second.

Madame Albani, since her return from her visit to India, has decided to follow the example of other great singers—Sims Reeves, Esther Palliser, John Coates and Ruth Vincent—and give the variety halls a turn. The famous prima donna commences a short season at the Glasgow Pavilion on the 7th proximo, and it is undoubtedly a good thing for the public and for the calls, though it may be that grand opera will ere long feel the effects of this kind of competition. At this rate I may shortly tell you of a performance of "Il Trovatore" at the Tivoli, coincident with the appearance of Mr. Harry Lauder at the Covent Garden Theatre of Varieties.

"The Boatswain's Mate," that very amusing one-act play by W. W. Jacobs and Herbert C. Sargent, was revived at Wyndham's on Saturday night in front of "The Early Worm." The part of George Benn, whose scheming to win the hand of comely and well-to-do Widow Waters provides the humour of the little piece, was capitally acted by Mr. Cecil Burt, and Miss Evelyn Vaudray as the widow, and Mr. J. A. Bentham as the amateur burglar, could hardly have been improved upon. As usual, the piece was productive of a great deal of laughter.

As for "The Early Worm," thanks largely to the acting of Mr. Weedon Grossmith, Mr. A. E. Matthews, Mr. Alfred Bishop, Mr. A. W. Baskcomb, and Miss Fanny Brough, who have settled down into their parts, the farce is even more amusing now than on the night of production, which is saying not a little. A full house on Saturday showed itself well pleased with what is altogether a very lively entertainment.

Miss Lena Ashwell, the Actress-Manageress of the Kingsway Theatre, was on Saturday, married to Dr. H. J. F. Simson, son of the late Mr. Robert Simson, of the Bengal Civil Service and a sportsman who will be remembered by the older generation of Bengal and Behar pigstickers and tiger slayers. The wedding was an exceedingly quiet one, indeed the announcement of the fact to her company after the evening performance took them completely by surprise. Sunday was devoted to honeymooning, on Monday "Miss Ashwell" was in her accustomed place at the theatre.

At Terry's Theatre, early in the week, Miss Andrews presented "Le Grand Soir," M. Leopold Kampf's strong three-act play, with the entire company from the Theatre des Arts, Paris.

There are some things in which we are ahead of France, even in the dramatic line. For instance, we raise our curtains fairly well to time. At least, we are not often more than a quarter of an hour late. But a French company does not seem to attach the same importance to the matter. Last night "Le Grand Soir" was announced to begin at a quarter to nine. As a matter of fact it did not begin until nearly half-past nine. And there were prolonged and dreary intervals between the acts. But, after all, the strength and conviction of the acting made amends for such trials.

"Le Grand Soir," telling powerfully how Anna, devoted with all her soul to the Nihilist cause, first prepares to break her vow to save her lover, and then allows her lover to go to his death that the Cause may be served was productive of some beautiful acting by Mdlle. Vera Sergine, who, human and strong, won the chief honours of a performance which held the audience from first to last. She was ably supported by M. Karl Roger, among others of a strong company.

Certain sections of the London press express pained surprise at the unfavourable reception accorded by the Bengalees to the King's proclamation to the Indian peoples. Could the writers of these articles but know the "England returned," the "Entrance fail" and the tramcar and College Square baboo as you know him the wonder would be short lived. I learn from Reuters' telegrams that in every quarter of your vast peninsula save Lower Bengal the Proclamation has been the signal for rejoicing, celebrating and congratulating. Apparently rumours were abroad that huge concessions were to be made to popular clamour, and the notion that the British Government was going down on its knees proved extremely popular. Hence the reaction, which is not made the less strong by the remembrance of Mr. Keir Hardie's words of hope and encouragement. The Bengalis are probably beginning to wonder if the member for Merthyr was worth crowning with flowers after all, even in a country where flowers are cheap.

Are we on the eve of a solution of the dust problem, shall we during the next twelve months see the ideal road we have longed and striven for, will the motorist cease from troubling in one important respect? The Borough Surveyor of Fulham says all this is in sight at last. I quote from his report:—

"It will in the near future be possible to make roads with a composite material that will be no more costly than the ordinary macadam road which will have an impervious surface and be dustless from the road material point of view."

The dull, heavy weather of the past few weeks has tested to the full the value of the dust-laying experiments made on roads in various parts of the country.

It is now possible to see what the experiments are worth, both from a road-user's and a ratepayer's point of view.

Experiments made near Paris show two things—that the life of a tarred road depends upon the weather, and that the treatment must be carried out each year on roads where the traffic is heavy. Altogether some twenty to thirty different processes of dust-laying have been tried in and around Paris, and in practically all of them tar was the principal component.

In one case tar was mixed with lime, in another with soap or caustic soda. Some of the inventors put the tar on hot, others cold; some sprayed the tar, others spread it. In all cases the experiments proved that effective dust-layers had been discovered; the only question remaining to be settled is which of the systems lasts the longest and costs the least. On one of the roads the tarring cost 1¼d. per square yard—a saving of 2¾d. on the old system. Perhaps the most interesting of all the experiments is to be found on the road between Paris and Versailles, where pitch macadam has shown excellent results so far.

If the borough surveyor's prophecy come true there should soon be an end to all dust on our roads, for hitherto it has been the cost of making roads dustless which has deterred many of the road authorities from taking steps to remove the present nuisance.

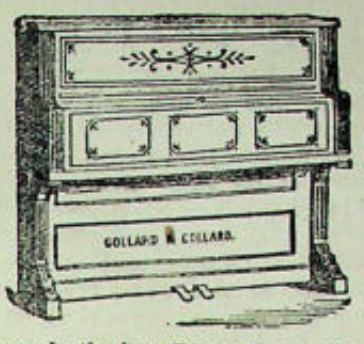
SHOOTING OVER DOGS.



THE STORY OF A TYPICAL DAY.

It has been so commonly said as to be generally believed that shooting over dogs has nowadays become an extinct sport, or if not, at least very much inferior to that which has superseded it. Both assumptions are wrong. There are grouse moors on which dogs are indispensable, and there are many partridge districts where there are not birds enough for a drive, but which afford good sport to one who is willing to hunt for them with a brace of good pointers or setters. He will have several forms of enjoyment independently of the satisfaction experienced in knocking over his birds. He has the excitement of finding them; the pleasure which he takes in seeing his dogs work; and last, but not least the evident delight manifested by his favourites, which at least doubles his own. To all these things the man at the butt is a stranger.

The only grouse shooting I have ever enjoyed has been over dogs, and that of a moderate kind. I was one of a party of three on a small moor in Perthshire, where our bag for a fortnight ranged from some twenty to thirty brace a day. Our best was twenty-nine brace, our lowest nineteen. We shot over a brace of pointers, and it was a pretty sight to see them at work a long way off. But I question whether dogs are not seen to the greatest advantage in partridge shooting, and as this article is specially in honour of the dog, I will skip August and go on to September at once. Some great authority has said that fully to enjoy shooting over dogs a man should go alone, and I am about, therefore, to give a brief description of a day (old style), such as I remember in my youth, when I went out alone, attended only by a man to mark and carry, and a favourite old Irish setter, who had sown his wild oats, which an Irish dog is usually a long time about. I started at half-past five, after a hasty breakfast in the kitchen, like Jane Austen's brother, and was on the ground by six o'clock.

I have to cross two or three meadows and some allotments before I reach the rising ground where I expect to find partridges, and out of a piece of potatoes a leveret jumps up, which I have the satisfaction of rolling over—a good augury for the day's sport—and having deposited him in Tom's capacious side-pocket, we resume our walk. Getting over one or two gaps, we find ourselves on the scene of action—a moderate-sized stubble field, bounded by rather high hedges, so that one couldn't well mark the birds, with a good field of turnips on one side. We had only advanced a few yards into the field when Rufus, the red Irish setter, began to seem anxious, and presently came to a dead stop, and then began to advance very cautiously. The birds were evidently on the move, and in another minute the covey rose about sixty yards off, and disappeared over the hedge to the left, into some grass fields, where the ground sank down again towards a little hollow. "We must bring 'em back, Tom," said I, "and you stand here, where you can't be seen, and mark them down." I got back over the hedge, and making a circuit so as to get well behind the birds, I let Rufus go. But the ground here was bare, and again they rose out of shot almost before the dog winded them. However, they went the right way, and I hurried back to Tom, who, I felt sure, must have seen them. When I came up to him his countenance, I think, must have resembled Napoleon's when he said, "I have them, then, at last these English." "They're in them tunnups, surr," he said, "right enough—about the middle—twelve on 'em." I was soon among them, and I never saw birds behave better. Luckily the "tunnups" spoken of by Tom, the marker, were white turnips, and not swedes, which hold the wet much longer, and at this hour of the morning would have been drenched with dew, and though I have known partridges drop into very wet cover at times they don't like it, and are more likely to pass over it when on the wing. However, I felt sure of them now, and my steady old dog, after quartering the ground once, comes to a capital point, his anxious eye and head turned a little on one side, with one fore paw doubled up, proclaiming them close at hand. I take a step forward and three birds rise, at which I get a right and left. But no picking them up until I have loaded again; for the rest must be close by, and Rufus knows very well that retrieving is not his business. However, I let him find them, and poke his nose among the feathers before moving on, and in another minute two more birds get up, of which, however, I only get one. The covey contained twelve birds, and there were still seven left in the turnips. They all got up in the same accommodating manner—two at a time, three at a time, and the rest one by one. I got three more, which made three brace so far. They were all fine, full-grown birds, hatched the first week in June, with the beginning of the horseshoe already visible, and all wild birds be it remembered.

The six birds which have gone away, may, perhaps, have taken to some of the hedgerows on the other side of the hill, and knowing their habits I felt pretty confident of getting another brace. Running down the slope towards the little hollow before mentioned was a very tall hedge of black and white thorn, mixed, quite ten or eleven feet from top to bottom, with a ditch on my side. Tom walked down the other side, and as soon as Rufus stood, which he soon did, gave the hedge a gentle poke with his stick, when out rose a fine bird, and flew straight up the hedge side, topping the tallest twigs about fifteen yards off.

There were no turnips here, but some very good reaped stubble and a small field of beans. A covey rose out of one of the stubbles just as I was getting over the hedge and separated, parts of them going away out of my beat, the other taking the direction of the beans. I beat one or two more stubble fields without finding, and then made my way to the beans, of which partridges are very fond. I thought it better to walk the beans by myself at first, as a man does much less harm to the crop than a dog running through them. So Tom and Rufus, much to their disgust, stood under the hedge while I marched in among the crackling bean stalks. The field was not very large and the crop was not very thick, and a brace of birds soon got up. One fell to the first barrel, the second went away apparently unhurt, but I watched him, and saw almost directly that he was going to tower, and he came down in the adjoining field, which, unluckily, was standing barley. I was going on to finish the beans first, when I suddenly became aware of a redfaced man in his shirt-sleeves, carrying a pitchfork, who evidently desired an interview. Of course I knew what was up. I had always shot over this ground without interruption or without asking leave. But this was a new tenant whom I had not seen before, and he did not know me; and, being the occupier of a small farm under an absent owner, stood very much upon his rights, and was dissatisfied at my taking French leave. He inquired in a gruff voice what right I had there "messing his beans about." I made the usual excuses, told him who I was, and so forth. But he did not come round all at once. "We niver see yer at no other time," he said; and this, I think, was at the root of his grievance. But hearing that I lived chiefly in London, he gradually thawed, and when I presented him with a brace of birds he lowered his pitchfork, and told me I could go where I liked, provided I would always give him a hare "at the feast." This tenure being settled, he became quite friendly, and looked on while I killed two more birds out of the beans, and then offered to help me look for the towered bird in the barley. After a long search this was picked up, and, it being then eleven o'clock, I adjourned for my second breakfast to a little roadside inn which stood about half a mile off. I rested there for about an hour in a cool parlour looking out on an old-fashioned garden, in which flowers, fruit, and vegetables all grew together "in sweet confusion." I smoked one pipe—had a pull at the beer of the house, which was fairly good, and, sending the boy home with the game, with instructions to appear at a given spot about four, with a donkey and a keg, two bottles of soda-water, and a whisky-flask, I resumed my tramp.

My afternoon beat was over ground where no regular keeper was employed, but which was well looked after by a friendly farmer. It was a nice light soil, and lay pretty high and dry. Between the cornfields and turnips there was large, old pasture fields, where Rufus could range almost as wide as if he was on the moors, full of tussocks, or tufts of coarse grass, which the birds loved well, and where Rufus enjoyed himself very much. I need not describe shot for shot. By the time the donkey appeared I had got five brace more. We sat down under a hedge on the cool, soft grass. Tom had the keg, with half a loaf and a huge lump of cheese. I had a whisky and soda, or shall we say two, with a captain's biscuit. Then a smoke, and then a start for the finish. The cool, soft evening breeze was just springing up; the birds were calling all round us; and then began what I used often to think was the "sweetest morsel" of the day, the hour and a half between four o'clock and half-past five or six. The scent has improved, and this is just the time to pick up some of the scattered birds in the grass, in the hedgerows, or by the brookside I did not care to disturb the stubble any more. But by looking up the likely corners and bits of outlying cover I add two and a half brace to the bag, and turn homewards with the happy consciousness of a well-spent day, with two hares and thirteen brace and a half of partridge—only two birds lost, and not a great many missed. So home, through that lovely September afternoon, so still, so bright, so cool, so green. Such are the delights of shooting over dogs, who share all your joys and sorrows, and are better company than many human beings.

BRIDGE QUERY.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE INDIAN FIELD."

SIR,—I should like to have your decision upon a Bridge argument.

On one side it is contended that the convention "weak and weak" or whatever it may be applies as regards the discard only when "no trumps" has been declared and that against an offensive trump declaration, a player whose convention is "weak and weak" is justified in using the first opportunity of discarding to play a card from the suit he wishes led back to him. The other side considers that under this convention the discard must be from the weakest suit trumps or "no trumps."

If this latter be correct, will you please let me know how a player must declare his convention if he wishes to discard from weak in "no trumps" but discard from the suit he wants led when an attacking trump has been declared.

CHICANE.

CALCUTTA, 30th November 1908.

["Weak and weak" indicates a discard from weakness whether with or without trumps. There is no conventional expression to cover the method of discard suggested—it would take too long!—ED.]

BEST LOAD FOR 12 BORE GUNS.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE INDIAN FIELD."

SIR,—Would any of your readeers who have used heavy 12 bore guns (8lb. to 9lb.) give their advice as to loads suited for this country!

Gun is to be used on very high flying duck which pass almost out of range of an ordinary 12 bore.

Makers advise 4½ to 5 drams No. 6 Black Powder, and 1½ oz. shot, but I notice no gunmaker in Calcutta advertises such cartridges.

"CASAN CAOLA."

MOTIHARI, 19th November 1908.

[Our correspondent has omitted to give any idea as to the length of the chamber of his gun. As he states that the makers advice is 4½ to 5 drams and 1½ oz. of shot we should certainly advise him to stick to this and also to wax his shot which, as he is doubtless aware, considerably increases its range.

The reason that no gunmakers in Calcutta advertise such cartridge is that the demand is small, but if he would look in any of the dealers lists he will find that the prices are quoted for 12 bore cartridges other than the 2½ inch cases and standard charges, and it is always possible to obtain any special ammunition he may require in Calcutta.—ED.]

First Day, Thursday, 19th November.

THE meeting which opened to-day will be historic as the first occasion on which a Viceroy of India has attended it. The cordial reception which Lord and Lady Minto received on their public arrival in Lucknow this morning is still fresh in one's mind, and every one was delighted that His Excellency, in the midst of his multifarious engagements, should have found time to attend the first day of the meeting. Lord Minto arrived by motor accompanied by Sir John Hewitt and the Government House party included Lady Violet Elliott, Lady Hewitt, Miss Hewitt, Colonel Victor Brooke, Mr. S. H. Butler, C.I.E., and the Viceroy's personal staff. The gathering on the course was exceedingly representative and included many visitors. The programme consisted of seven events, and the fields were exceptionally large. In the Novice Plate Winter, who was at first at sixes, was subsequently made a hot favourite at 5 to 4 on and needless to say, he won easily. Speculators had the same ill fortune in most of the other events, the bookmakers throughout exhibiting remarkable prescience. There were slight accidents in the Closed Chase and the Pony Hurdles, but fortunately both riders escaped without injury. The final event was won by The Point, an outsider. Hospitality was dispensed by the Oxfordshire Light Infantry and the staff and departments, and an excellent programme of music was played by the band of the 8th Rajputs. Results :—

Refuge Bay increased the distance between himself and his field, but was caught shortly after the 1 mile. At this stage Baron Athel came to grief, Cairnsmore, meanwhile, splendidly ridden, drew to the head of affairs. BETTING: 5 to 4 on Cheeky, 4 to 1 agst. Pantomine, 6 to 1 Clear Out and 10 to 1 the rest

Shortly after the start The Point went to the head of affairs, and although Cheeky made a game effort to draw level, won by one and a half lengths; a neck separated second and third. Time—52secs.

Second Day, Saturday, 21st November 1908.

IT was a gay and fashionably dressed throng which filled the grand stand and enclosure on the principal day of the meeting and exceptional demands were made on the accommodation for the numerous spectators present. The arrangements were, however all that could be desired, and there was an entire absence of crush or confusion, although the stand was filled to its utmost capacity during the decision of the Army Cup Race.

The Viceroy drove in State to the races, the route, along which extraordinary precautions had been taken, being viâ Clyde Road, Dilkusha Gardens, Grant Road and Outram Road, whence the procession proceeded across the British Cavalry Parade Ground to the half mile post and then down the course to the Grand Stand. The Viceregal carriage was escorted by a troop of the Royal Dragoons under the Command of Major Malins, D.S.O., and six Officers of the Dragoons. As His Excellency drove up a trumpeter sounded the Royal Salute, and the band played the National Anthem His Excellency was received by Sir John Hewett, Lieutenant-Governor of the United Provinces, General Sclater, Commanding the 8th (Lucknow) Division and the Patrons and Stewards. The Viceroy was accompanied by Lady Minto, Lady Violet Elliot, Lord Francis Scott, Colonel Dunlop Smith, and the other members of His Excellency's Staff.

The card consisted of six events, the fields in several cases being large. In the Stewards' Plate, thirteen went to the post. Clear Out was a hot favourite and won easily, the objection against the winner on the ground of incorrect description being overruled. Clear Out had raced in Australia under the name of Claribell, but was not so described in the card, and in opinion of the Stewards this was unnecessary as the meetings in Australia are not recognised here. There was a field of ten for the Arab Handicap. The wagering was keen, but Bay Middleton was a decided favourite and snatched an easy victory, well steered by Robinson. Two of the field of five came to grief in the Handicap Pony Chase, in which Pinfire, the favourite led throughout and won by two lengths, despite the challenge of Result II.

The much coveted Army Cup drew a field of nineteen. Veldt Cornet having scratched, and the animals included the Commander-in-Chief's Madrid. Little Exile, Pasha, Marengo and Mirdas had contested this race before, the last named being a hot favourite last year. The Munshi was heavily backed to win, and there was a great deal of money on Veto, Colonel, Saglawie and others The race is described below and it need only be said here that it was a magnificent spectacle, and that Hooded Falcon well deserved his victory.

A record was created by Captain Hodgson, of the Royal Fusiliers in securing the first and second places with Hooded Falcon and the Munshi. Hooded Falcon (late Mabhoot) won the Little Strangers' Selling Plate at Bombay in March last, when he became the property of Captain Hodgson. He was prepared for the Cup by Penton, and, although far from fit, was brought into condition. It was generally said that being a Persian animal, he could not win in the company of Arabs, but this prediction was falsified in the Cup Race.

There were small fields for the Calcutta Plate and the Giant Pony Handicap, which were won by Bucolic and Lady Vera.

The hospitality dispensed on the course was in keeping with Cup Day traditions. The Royal Dragoons, the Royal Artillery, the Durham Light Infantry, the 8th Rajputs and the R. A. M. C. were "at home," and the Viceroy was entertained by the Royals.

The traffic was usually large, and the arrangements were in the capable hands of Inspector Reich, who has recently succeeded to the post formerly held by Mr. Botting. There was no waiting for carriages, and the large gathering was able to get away after racing with the minimum of delay.

THE STEWARDS PLATE.—Rs. 1 00) to the winner, Rs. 300 to the second, and Rs. 200 to the third. A handicap for English and Australasian ponies 14-1 and under and C. B. Ponies 14-2 and under. 5 furlongs.

Ariel at one point appeared to hold a good position on the outside but soon dropped behind. Nagashi, Colonel, and Saglawe then showed out in front, but a little before the distance Hooded Falcon emerged from the ruck and passed the leaders fairly comfortably. The Munshi came up to the Hooded Falcon in the last few strides and attempted to wrest the lead, but the outsider was going at a cracking pace and resisting the challenge of the favourite, won on the post by one length; three-quarters of a length between second and third; a short neck between third and fourth. Our Teeth.—Has no one been struck by the fact that in spite of the regular daily cleansing of the teeth with tooth-powders and tooth-pastes, the teeth (and particularly the back teeth), frequently become decayed and hollow? And is not that a convincing proof that tooth-powders and tooth-pastes are completely inadequate means for cleaning the teeth? Our teeth are not so obliging as to decay only in places which can be conveniently reached with the tooth-brush. On the contrary, it is just in those localities which are difficult of access, such as the backs of the molar teeth, the interstices of the teeth, hollows and cracks, that causes of destruction of the teeth appear most frequently and are most probable. In consequence, if anyone wishes to preserve his teeth intact, that is to say to keep them healthy, this can be effected in one way only, by daily cleansing and rinsing the mouth and teeth with the liquid antiseptic dentifrice Odol. During the process of rinsing this preparation penetrates everywhere, reaching alike the cavities in the teeth, the interstices between them, and the backs of the molars, destroying bacteria wherever generated. This absolutely certain effect which Odol has been scientifically proved to possess is principally due to a peculiar property which causes it to be absorbed by the mucous membrane of the gums so that they become impregnated with it. The immense importance of this entirely new and unique property should be fully grasped; for whilst all other preparations for the cleansing and protection of the teeth are effective only during the moments of application, Odol leaves an antiseptic deposit on the surface of the mucous membrane and in the interstices of the teeth which continues to be effective for hours. In this manner a continuous antiseptic effect is produced, by means of which the whole oral cavity and the minutest recesses which it contains are completely freed from, and protected against, all fermenting processes and injurious bacteria. It follows that everyone who daily and regularly cleanses his mouth and teeth with Odol practises the most perfect hygiene of the mouth and teeth in accordance with modern scientific principles.

Third Day, Monday, 23rd November 1908.

The racing to-day formed a fitting climax to the Army Cup Meeting. The Viceroy was again present and was entertained to lunch on the racecourse by Raja Sir Tassadug Rasul Khan of Jehangirabad. Just over a hundred, including the leading members of Lucknow society, sat down and the lunch which was managed by Wutzler's, was of a most recherche description. The Raja was afterwards "At Home."

There was a card of seven events and owing to the judicious handicapping of Mr. R. L. Kindersley the issues were most open, this was fortunate as it enabled many to recoup their losses sustained on Cup Day. Several of the events furnished surprises, notably the Desert Handicap, which was annexed by Little Red Rat in splendid style, the Corinthian Plate in which Pinkie won after leading throughout, and the Alum Bagh Plate, in which Little Exile, who was a rank outsider, won comfortably.

The Viceroy left after the fifth race, and Lady Minto earlier in the afternoon. The meeting has been a signal success and Mr. E. S. Lane, the Secretary, and other officials concerned, are to be warmly congratulated on the result of their labours. Unlike last year, there has been no surfeit of racing, and on the other hand everyone has been well satisfied with the character of the sport. Lucknow, too, has received a great and memorable compliment in being visited by the Viceroy during the Autumn Race week. It will be long before the honour is forgotten. Results:—

Price, Rs. 3 per bottle.

From G. A. R., Bettiah, Champaran:—"I was suffering with diarrhœa, with which I was attacked nearly nine months ago, and all known remedies were greedily taken down by me, but to no avail, when as a last resource I tried your 'Essence of Papiya.' My digestive organs which were considerably deranged are now as right as possible; the distressing symptoms attendant on indigestion have now almost entirely left me and I heartily thank you for the preparation, which through the intervention of a Kind Providence you have successfully brought before the public."

From Mrs. E. L. M., Asansol, E. I. R.—"I had very bad Dyspepsia. My food used to turn rotten and sour in my stomach, and I used one bottle of Essence of Papiya and now I am sure I could digest a brick, it has thoroughly cured me of my Dyspepsia, hence I have so much confidence in your medicines. You certainly deserve credit for introducing such a medicine to poor suffering Dyspeptics."

You may certainly publish what I have said about your Papiya Essence.

From Mrs. Elizabeth Wagentreiber, Delhi:—"With much pleasure and many thanks I beg to acknowledge the benefit I derived from your far famed 'Essence of Papiya.' I suffered from Dyspepsia in a most painful form, and found great relief after taking the first two bottles, and continued to take four more. After the sixth I felt so much better that I left off taking it regularly, but if at any time, I feel the old pain and symptoms returning I immediately take another bottle of the Essence. I am now able to eat more and can change my diet without fear of what were to me most dreaded attacks of indigestion."

BETTING: 9 to 4 agst. Alawa, 3 to 1 Peru, 7 to 1 Mooltan, 14 to 1 Sir Aymer, 16 to 1 Lord Nolan, 20 to 1 Post Town, 25 to 1 each Tulkeroo and Dyed Garments, 33 to 1 King's Cross, 40 to 1 Delaware, 50 to 1 each Welcome Trist, Parsee, and Bobby, 100 to 1 each Pharos, Gaby, Jack Smith, Lady Wilde, and Delenda, 200 to 1 each Amir and Baw Bee, 300 to 1 Enchanted States.

When they took up their positions at the barrier on the inside were Peru, Sir Aymer, Jack Smith, and Bobby; in the centre Mooltan, Tulkeroo, Gaby, Welcome Trist, and Alawa; on the outside Pharos, Knox, and Dyed Garments. From a good start Peru, Bobby, Alawa, and Jack Smith were first to move. Then Jack Smith took up the running, and entering the course proper he had charge from Parsee, Knox, Alawa, Peru, Lady Wilde, Sir Aymer, and Baw Bee, with Delenda and Pharos were at the rear, while Dyed Garments fell, and interfered with Post Town and Enchanted States. Galloping past the mile and a half post, Jack Smith had drawn out three lengths ahead of Bobby, after whom came Parsee, Lady Wilde, Knox, Alawa, Peru, Mooltan, Tulkeroo, and Welcome Trist, whilst the last three were Delenda, Pharos and Gaby. Passing the judge's box the order was practically the same, with the field already strung out. Turning out of the straight Jack Smith was still bowling along three lengths ahead of Bobby, Lady Wilde, Parsee, Delaware, Knox, Alawa, Peru, Mooltan, Lord Nolan, Welcome Trist, Baw Bee and Sir Aymer. The pace increased as they swept along the river stretch, where Jack Smith had further increased his lead to four lengths. Parsee came next in front of a bunch consisting of Bobby, Delaware, Knox, Peru, Alawa, Welcome Trist and Mooltan. Passing the milepost Jack Smith was only a length ahead of Bobby, with Parsee, Knox, Lady Wilde, Delaware, Alawa, Peru, Mooltan, and Welcome Trist following in that order. Pharos was whipping in. Galloping along the back Delaware joined the leader and, Alawa, Mooltan, Tulkeroo, and Peru began to improve their positions. Racing past the sheds Delaware headed Jack Smith, the pair having as their nearest attendants Bobby, Lady Wilde, King's Cross, Alawa, Mooltan, Tulkeroo and Peru with Lord Nolan coming out of the ruck. Approaching the home turn Delaware forged ahead, and he led around the turn, a couple of lengths ahead of Mooltan, Alawa, Welcome Trist, Lord Nolan, and Tulkeroo. Delaware led into the straight from Mooltan, Alawa, Peru, Lord Nolan, and Tulkeroo. Below the distance Delaware failed, and Mooltan, Tulkeroo, and Lord Nolan passed him. At the distance Mooltan was just in advance of Delaware, Tulkeroo, Lord Nolan, and Alawa. Then Lord Nolan and Tulkeroo drew out, and a fine finish ended in a half-head win for Lord Nolan with Delaware two and a half lengths away third, Mooltan was a length further away fourth. Alawa was fifth, Welcome Trist sixth, Peru seventh, Sir Aymer eighth, Post Town ninth, Lady Wilde, Knox, and King's Cross next, with Delenda, Pharos, and Parsee the last three. Time—3mins. 28½secs.

THE TURF.

NEWMARKET.

MOST places seem to exploit their best points when one is saying good-bye to them, and the last glimpse we had of Newmarket, under an almost summer sky, was such as to leave pleasant memories of the glorious Heath, of which, unless the sportsman runs to the collar and the leash, he last Friday took a long farewell until the winter has resigned to spring. Notes of preparation for general departure were sounded on all sides yesterday morning, loads of luggage keeping the porters busy at the station, but following the staunch example set by His Majesty, the majority of the brilliant company that has occupied the Birdcage and the club enclosure sat and stood it out till the curtain fell on the eighth and last meeting of 1908. In the olden days, sportsmen parted not to meet again on the flat till Newthampton, but the gathering on St. Crispin's Common has only left a memory in the calendars of the past, and the jumping game bridges over the winter interval between. To the beauty of the weather we may ascribe the capital muster that assisted at a somewhat commonplace afternoon's sport, the various enclosures being well patronised, and the general attendance good. ALEXANDRA PARK.

Everybody cannot afford the leisure to go racing at headquarters, but despite the big issues at stake on the Heath, the day of small things nearer home came with a relish to the North London Division at their only meeting, the handily-situated, neat little Alexandra Park so ably and successfully conducted by Messrs. Pratt and Company. With nothing nearer in the North than Leicester, the meetings held here are a boon to the district, and everybody must have felt sorry that Saturday's was the last of the season. The weather was pleasantly mild for the time of year, and in the absence of wind, summer attire was warm enough; the course was in good condition, the only drawback being the mist, that thickened as the afternoon wore on. LINCOLN.

It proved a regular November day on the Carholme on Monday, the course being enveloped in mist during the whole of the day; in fact, the view of the racing was so much obscured that much in the way of reporting the races had to be taken at second-hand. The going was heavy, as might have been expected, the company—mainly comprising the local element—but moderate. Fields ruled well, however, and had the weather only been more propitious, in the way of light, the afternoon's racing would have been all the more enjoyable. Results:—

LIVERPOOL.

Under pleasant conditions, there is no more enjoyable venue than Aintree, with its grand course, powerful patronage, and capital class fields, and all three conditions were fulfilled on Wednesday. It was not until the sun had nearly reached the zenith that the fog lifted, leaving a beautiful bright afternoon behind; and it was not till sundown that it again began to encroach on the course. All the enclosures were well filled, and Lancashire sent its rank and fashion to swell the muster in the club enclosure. Results:—

On Friday we had another chilly, foggy night, and another bright sunny day, with the mist banished to the far corner of the course, and curtaining the first furlong or so of the near straight; the going on the top of the ground, and yet soft enough to cut clean under the hoofs; a good arrival list; and the Sefton Steeplechase only second in importance to the Grand National—the salient feature of an interesting card; such a combination of favourable conditions could not fail to attract sportsmen of every degree to Aintree. The attendance showed a considerable improvement on Wednesday's good muster, while the importance of the occasion from a cross-country point of view was shown by the preponderance of Irish padres, Father Toms, and Father O'Flynns—staunch sportsmen all, who, like our Devonshire parsons, are not ashamed of a Catholic taste where field sports are concerned, and annually give a Catholic countenance thereto at Altcar and Aintree. As usual, the fair sex was numerously represented, their bright costumes giving local colour to the paddock and club enclosure, and many prominent patrons of racing from North and South were included in the house parties that helped to fill the members' enclosure. After a good start Avarice, at a capital pace, led from Santeve Silent Lady, St. Clare, Flying Ilma, Wilkins Micawber, and Hayden, with Norman III next, in front of Back Answer and Crathorne, whilst Lischana brought up the rear behind Rockbourne. At the canal turn Avarice was clear of Billy the Verger Silent Lady, Santeve, Hayden, Flying Ilma, Wise Mason, and Wilkins Micawber, Rockbourne now being the whipper-in. Entering the straight Billy the Verger was beaten, and Silent Lady became second, Wise Mason third, Santeve fourth, and Crathorne fifth. FOOTBALL.

ASSOCIATION RULES.

SOME REMARKABLE RESULTS.—The leading leagues furnished some strange results on Saturday, and of these the most remarkable was the triumph of Brentford at Portsmouth, in the Southern League. The performance, sufficiently startling in itself, stands out the more prominently because not another club in the tournament won away from home, although three shared the points. There was not anything in the record of the Middlesex County Town representatives to suggest that they would be the first team to overcome Portsmouth at Fratton Park. On the contrary, with only one point from five away games, and that earned so far back as 2nd September, at Reading, and only two wins at Griffin Park from a similar number of games, there was every reason to suppose that Portsmouth would win in comfortable style. The success of Brentford by the odd goal in five must have been a severe shock to the 5,000 spectators. Another record also went by the board on Saturday. Southampton went to Southend to play the United with five wins and a draw from six away games to their credit. Brentford, Crystal Palace, Swindon, and Exeter City are among the teams whom Southampton had defeated, but the Sotonians met their Waterloo at Southend, the newcomers to the league thus giving further evidence of their all-round ability. Eight points from six matches, and a goal record in their favour of more than 2 to 1 is very satisfactory, and small wonder that there is just now considerable enthusiasm for the club at Southend.

Some of the other results are instructive. Exeter City should be content with the point they obtained on their own ground from Crystal Palace, for the latter, albeit they have not been so effective of late away from home, are a dangerous side. Their escape from defeat on Saturday has brought them on the same mark as Southampton with regard to points, but the latter have played a couple less games, and have also a superior goal average. Reading must be accounted to have done well to share the honours at Coventry, and Watford did less than was expected of them in failing to win on their own ground against Plymouth Argyle, a division of the points being forced by the latter. Six home clubs won outright, and the forwards were on such good behaviour that thirty-two goals were scored in the ten games in the tournament, and in only two instances did a team fail to find the net. Millwall won comfortably enough against Leyton, at North Greenwich, and West Ham United went under to New Brompton, at Gillingham. Luton suffered the heaviest reverse of the day at Swindon, only one of the five goals scored being credited to them, but there was not that difference between the teams that the score suggests. Northampton did not have anything to spare against Brighton, but Bristol Rovers easily won a most disappointing game with Norwich City out west.

FOOTBALL LEAGUE.—It is probably a long time since every club in the First Division of the Football League scored in the same afternoon. On Saturday there was a full list of games, and there was not a club that failed to obtain at least one legitimate goal. While in four cases visiting teams managed to effect a draw, Nottingham Forest are alone in having to lament defeat before their own supporters. There is no doubt as to the match-winning capabilities of Everton, and as Saturday's success was the sixth consecutive victory on foreign soil, a record was established for the club. It is extraordinary that a club should have given away only four goals in half a dozen away matches, and should at the same time have helped themselves to 17. As Liverpool, the near neighbours of the Goodison Park side, compelled Newcastle United to retire pointless, Everton are now well on top, and a continuance of their present form will keep them there. The critics will soon be asking the reason for the see-saw results at Aston Park, the Villa allowing Leicester Fosse to draw with them on Saturday. A game has not been lost on their own ground by Aston Villa but they have alternated draws with wins, and five matches have yielded them only seven points. There was a sensational result at Sunderland. Manchester had to take the field with a very much weakened side, and they were routed by the thrusting Wearsiders by six goals to one. What a fall is there, my masters, but it were absurd to attach particular importance to the result with so many regular members of the visiting team laid by for repairs.

Chelsea came dangerously near defeat on Saturday on their own ground from Bradford City, who are apparently well established at the bottom of the table. It emphasises how level a lot the League clubs are when the twentieth on the list is able to lead so admittedly strong a side as Chelsea until a few minutes before the finish. There was no fluke about it. The visitors played excellent football, and Chelsea were unable to obtain the equalising goal until the Bradford centre-half had left the field. The chief fault of Chelsea was a lack of finish on the part of the forwards, but they made some amends for their early ineffectiveness by their grim earnestness in the last twenty minutes. Woolwich Arsenal, about whom so many nice things are being written, may not be a great team on paper, but there is no doubt that the players are fully alive to what requires to be done, and they evidently know how to do it. Sheffield United may not have been exhibiting the best of form recently, but they played on Saturday in such a style that only a really first-class defence would have kept them at bay. Once the United got the ball into the net, but although the goal was allowed, there seems a consensus of opinion that Featherstone was yards offside. Incidents of this kind are galling, but referees are human, and consequently bound to make mistakes. It may be something happened that was not observed from the Press box, and that the referee would easily be able to justify his decision, but the verdict is that the United were credited with a goal they did not deserve. Playing sterling football in the second half, they soon equalised, and deserved to take the lead, but luck was not on their side, and they had to be content with a draw.

LEAGUE.—SECOND DIVISION.—The scoring in the Second Division of the League was not up to the average, the twenty clubs putting on an aggregate of only 25 goals, and eight teams failed to find the net. The results show that visiting elevens had a good time, for four won outright, and four shared the honours, leaving only a couple of home clubs with successes to their credit. It was a fine performance on the part of Fulham to go to Wolverhampton and win by a goal to love, especially as a fortnight earlier Gainsborough Trinity had been defeated on the same ground 4—0. Fulham, however, had the remembrance of their Burnley win to encourage them, and although on Saturday the forwards were not up to par, the defence was so solid that the Wolves could not break it down. Tottenham Hotspur did not altogether please their patrons in allowing Stockport County to take away a point from White Hart-lane. The Spurs should have won, but the men to whom scoring chances presented themselves were singularly inept, and as the Stockport attack was always held at bay, there was a goalless game. Clapton Orient had so much the better of the exchanges at Homerton in their match with Gainsborough Trinity that it is difficult to assign a reason why they did not win, except the stereotyped explanation that the forwards were not sufficiently determined near goal. Each side scored a couple of goals, but the Trinitarians were not value for the draw, and they may account themselves pretty fortunate. Birmingham, who led off as if they meant to waltz away from the other clubs, had their second reverse Leeds City, who are coming along pretty fast, defeating them by two clear goals. West Bromwich Albion go up into second place as a result of their win at Barnsley, but Derby County dropped a point they could ill afford to lose by permitting Chesterfield to play them to a draw at the Baseball Ground.

OXFORD UNIVERSITY vs. OLD MALVERNIANS.—For this match on the Iffley-road ground the 'Varsity relied on the same team that defeated Tunbridge Wells on Wednesday. The Old Boys had a fairly strong side, which included three of the Days and M. K. Foster, a younger brother of the Oxford Blues. The game opened at a good pace, and the Old Boys gained the first advantage, a corner well taken by Napier. For some minutes the game remained in the 'Varsity quarters, and S. H. Day passing to his brother, the latter centred well and Lowe scored after hitting the post. An individual effort by Jordan was frustrated by A. P. Day clearing his final shot, and on another occasion the Oxford centre held the ball too long and was deprived by Canny. The Old Boys played much better together than the 'Varsity, and were very dangerous, especially Lowe, in front of goal. A mis-kick by Bickersteth gave S. E. Day a chance of passing to Lowe, and the Malvernian captain put in a fine shot which Appleton saved. Just on the interval, Foster passed forward, and Braddell missing his kick, S. H. Day ran through and scored. At the interval the Old Boys led by 2 goals to 0.

The second half opened very evenly, neither team being able to claim the advantage for some time. Eventually, Clarke came through on his own and shot hard over. S. E. Day for the Malvernians put in a fine run, and then Jordan and Sayer combined in an attack upon the Old Boys' goal. Sayer took up a final pass and scored after the ball had hit the post. Immediately there was a welcome improvement in the 'Varsity play, but unfortunately Oxford could not drive their advantages home, whereas the Old Boys, thanks to their right wing, broke away, and S. H. Day, having tricked Braddell and Molineux, beat Appleton with a splendid left-foot shot. Exciting incidents followed at both ends. Then the brothers Day came through splendidly on the right wing, and S. H. Day again beat Appleton with a fine shot, and he added yet another through Braddell mis-kicking, the game ending in favour of Malvernians by 5 goals to 1.

CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY vs. CORINTHIANS.—The Corinthians' match is always regarded as one of the most important of the 'Varsity trial matches, especially when they can get together such a hot side as did duty on Saturday. C. C. Page was to have played, but missed his train, and J. W. Stretten, of Caius, took his place at back. Cambridge gave a highly creditable exhibition, winning by the odd goal in five. During the opening stages of the game both goals were visited, and after thirteen minutes' play the 'Varsity finished up a good run on the right wing by Edwards finding the net. After Mugliston had shone in keeping out the visitors' attack, Brisley and Edwards both missed goals. By this time the Corinthians were showing some pretty combination, which, however, was chiefly confined to the centre and right wing forwards. Corbett, on the extreme left, had had as yet very few chances. Both Blaker and S. S. Harris shot without effect. Nearly half an hour elapsed before the Corinthians equalised, when Blaker took a long shot which completely beat Whale. Another success quickly followed, a smart shot from Birks taking effect three miuntes later.

After the change of ends the 'Varsity made desperate efforts to get on equal terms, W. B. Harris twice getting dangerous, whilst Bache also sent wide. Twice the 'Varsity left sent the ball across the mouth of goal, and upon each occasion a Corinthian got there first. For twenty minutes the Light Blues had the best of matters, but could not score. Edwards, taking a pass from Bache, banged the ball into the net. The 'Varsity were now masters, and Edwards, who throughout played a fine game, swept down the field and shot straight and hard. Rowlandson stopped the shot, but it brought him to his knees, and before he could recover, Bache had dashed in and netted, the final score being:—Cambridge University, 3; Corinthians, 2.

For the first time for about two months there was a full Scottish League programme on Saturday, the Glasgow Cup having at last been got rid of. Naturally, after their great victory in the Glasgow Cup over Celtic on Wednesday, the crowd of the day—24,000—was at Ibrox to see how 3rd Lanark would do against Rangers. It has become quite evident that 3rd Lanark's poor show in their first five League games was due to want of training, and their four games against Clyde and three against Celtic have put them in good working form, the improvement shown in Wednesday and Saturday's matches being wonderful. Their victory against Celtic was the biggest set-back the Parkhead Club has had for years, and now a touch of panic exists, with the result that it is expected there will be several important changes. Already a new forward has been signed in Young, of Strathclyde, but there are other divisions also wanting new blood.

Brownlie's wonderful goalkeeping and the perseverance of the forwards allowed 3rd Lanark to divide the points with

.351 CALIBER HIGH POWER.

Before deciding upon a rifle for your next hunting trip, don't fail to investigate the merits of this new Winchester, which is reloaded by the recoil of the exploded cartridge. There is nothing complicated, cumbersome or freakish about it. It is a reliable, handy gun from butt to muzzle. The .351 Caliber High Power Cartridge which it shoots represents the latest development in powder and cartridge manufacture. Although small in size it develops tremendous velocity and energy, making it powerful enough for the largest game. This most modern type of cartridge also possesses the added advantage of economy. Owing to the comparatively small amount of metal used in the shell it costs much less than old style cartridges no more powerful.

Rangers. Although, they have only lost one League game out of eight, Rangers have never reached the standard expected of them, and every week there is always some division of the team disappointing. Saturday saw Sharp and the forwards off colour, and but for the excellent work of the Ibrox halves 3rd Lanark might have got full points. Third have got a well-set-up and youthful team, Sloan at right back, Fairfoul at right half, and Johnstone and Hosie forward being among the best in their positions in Scotland at present.

Clyde's record came to an end against Celtic, the Shawfield Club Meeting with their first League defeat of the season, after a game in which they had all the best of the play. Celtic will never get two points so luckily and for this they have to thank the Clyde forwards, who, after really splendid play in the outfield, lost chance after chance by miserable efforts at goal. Clyde fortunately know where they are weak, and expect to secure a new centre from either the Newcastle or Bristol district. The success of the Clyde and 3rd Lanark clubs this season has done much good to Glasgow football. With a really good team Clyde could have about the biggest following in Scotland, and with good management are moving rapidly in that direction. Saturday's crowd numbered 18,000, with £440 of gate money.

Aberdeen had a hard struggle to get a point at Tynecastle against Hearts, and it was evident that the previous week's tussle against Dundee had left its effects. Lennie turned out, but he was seen to be lame, and, although he played pluckily, a less experienced player might have given better results. Hearts are unable to get their front rank properly balanced and it must pain "Bobby" Walker to see the majority of his best efforts being wasted. The loss of the point to Aberdeen allows St. Mirren to take first place in the League table.

St. Mirren's ground being closed at present by order of the S.F.A. they had to meet Hibernians on Arthurlie's ground at Barrhead, and, everything considered the attendance was very good—5,000. Harry Ross, late of Fulham, turned out for the Paisley Club, and helped considerably to gain full points for them, although the game was never by any means a great one.

Queen's Park, having struck a winning vein, intend to take full advantage of it, and their decisive victory over Partick Thistle was due to their forwards. Led by R. S. M'Coll, they gave a pretty display, and Dixon, in centre, is proving a real good capture.

Good goalkeepers are seemingly plentiful in Scotland at present, and Hamilton Academicals have again to thank Mason (late of Clyde) for the division of the points against Airdrieonians. Kilmarnock, even without Templeton, who is on the injured list, are a hard lot to beat on their own ground, and against Port Glasgow they were always the aggressors. At Greenock, Morton and Falkirk divided the points after an uninteresting game, neither team showing to advantage in the attack.

RUGBY RULES.

Australians vs. Durham.—This, the first match of the Australians in the North of England, and the eleventh of the tour, was played under excellent conditions at Hartlepool on Saturday, and resulted in a decisive victory for the Colonials by 4 goals, 3 tries (29 points) to a dropped goal and a try (7 points). This, it may be added, is second only to the success over Cornwall in point of decisive character, the Cornishmen being beaten by 32 points to 3, though the number of tries scored in each match was 7. The victory, which was won by the backs, whose improvement in combined attack is most marked, was all the more meritorious because Saturday's match was the fourth hard game which the Australians have played in eight days, while, of course, they have had considerable travelling between the matches.

The Durham forwards gave an excellent display, and were in no way responsible for the defeat. The backs defended and kicked well, but were outpaced and out-manœuvred, though their combined attack was of very moderate quality, and, as a rule, very easily checked. The match was witnessed by some 7,000 spectators, and the gate was regarded as extremely good in view of the diminished popularity of rugby in Durham, and the counter-attractions in the district.

The Australians kicked off, and after the usual exchange of kicks, a well-executed bout of passing by the Australian backs, initated from a knock back at a line out, ended in Hickey almost scoring. Durham got to the other end by the best passing which the home backs showed in the whole game, Chapman throwing away a certain try by hesitating with the line at his mercy. Taylor's long and sure kicking repeatedly placed his side in a favourable position. Durham for a time had all the better of the game, but could not turn their advantage to scoring account. At length the Australians got away through the Durham backs falling to reply to a drop out, and twenty minutes after the start very pretty passing, again initated from a knock back, ended in Dix going straight in after drawing the defence on to Hickey. Carmichael kicked a goal. On resuming, Durham again attacked, but Carmichael gave relief with a fine kick, while Taylor was at fault just after in checking an Australian rush. Richards, who was in the van of the rush, picked up very cleverly and threw wide to Russell, who was quite unmarked, and had only to run to score, Carmichael kicked a second goal. Durham continued, however, to have the best of the game territorially, but could not score, though Taylor all but dropped a goal from a penalty. Following the drop out Carroll ran strongly down the touch-line and passing inwards to Richards, McKivatt crowned a good movement with a try. The kick at goal was disallowed, however, as Carmichael, the kicker, had "touched the ball when on the ground." Half time arrived with the Australians leading by 13 points to 0.

In the second half Durham at once attacked through strong forward play, and Ellwood dropped a fine goal at 35 yards range and close to the touch line. He got the ball from a kick in relief of one of the Australian backs. Following this Dix scored for the Australians after very clever passing, but Carmichael failed with the place kick. Carroll was next prominent, with a characteristic burst down the touch line. On nearing Ellwood he passed inward to Craig, who ran in quite unopposed for Carmichael to kick a good goal. Durham made a great effort after this, and after Chapman had been held on the line, the same player dashed over from a quick pass by Siveright. Taylor failed at goal. The Australians had the better of the succeeding play, and Russell scored a try after the best passing of the match, Dix making the opening in very clever fashion, while Russell scored his third try after McCabe and McKivatt had made the opening by very good combined play. Carmichael kicked a goal from the last try. Watson made one strong burst down the touch-line, but was unsupported, while just on time Ellwood nearly dropped a goal from a penalty. "No side" was then sounded with the score—Australians 4 goals, 3 tries (29 points); Durham 1 dropped goal, 1 try (7 points.)

Harlequins vs. Cambridge University.—The Harlequins were at home to Cambridge University on Saturday, at Wandsworth Common, and a fast and interesting game, witnessed by 3,000 spectators, resulted in a handsome win for the visitors by 22 points to 5. The Harlequins kicked off, and their forwards set to work with a will, considerably bustling the visitors, who touched down in the first couple of minutes. The Light Blues set up a hot attack on the home line after a fine punt by Godby, whose kicking was of splendid length, and of great assistance to his side. The Harlequins relieved to the "25," where Lambert broke away, but was pushed into touch by Burton. Hosken made another attempt to get through, but Batstone brought off a great tackle. A moment later Burton was brought down on the line by Lambert. First blood was drawn by Cambridge after twenty-five minutes' play. Wright getting over after beating the home backs cleverly. Atkinson goaled. From a scrum near the Cambridge quarter line, Sibree dribbed through, and just beating Atkinson in the race for the ball, scored a try, from which Lambert landed a goal. Cambridge quickly responded, Wright making a strong run and giving nicely to Burton, who scored a converted try. Again Lambert got going, but Burton brought him down finely. Half time:—Cambridge, 2 goals; Harlequins, 1 goal.

The Harlequins attacked for a quarter of an hour following the restart, and Cambridge seemed to be tiring. Their defence, however, was very sound, and the Harlequin backs could not get through. Then Cambridge rallied splendidly, and got down to the home line, where Wright scored, the kick failing. A moment later, Wright, doubling cleverly, gave Burton an opening, and the latter scored in the corner, Atkinson failing with the kick. The visiting three-quarters now displayed fine form, especially Wright and Burton, who played brilliantly throughout. After a long rush by the Cambridge forwards, Fiddian scored an unconverted try. Stoop and Lambert made desperate efforts to retaliate, but the Cambridge tackling was too sound. A beautiful bout of passing and re-passing half the length of the field by Godby and Wright took play to the home line, where Sutherland got possession, and apparently scored, but the referee ordered a scrum from which Wright sent Burton over with an unconverted try. Cambridge still pressing, Burton twice nearly scored again, but time came with the final score:—Cambridge University, 2 goals and 4 tries (22 points); Harlequins, 1 goal (5 points).

HOCKEY.

Olympic Hockey Final (England vs. Ireland).—The Olympic hockey final at the Stadium on Saturday attracted about 5,000 spectators, one of the largest crowds which have ever yet witnessed a hockey match; but this was due to the general cancellation of games round about the London district. England, who met Ireland in the final, won in the easiest of fashions by 8—1, though on the run of the play Ireland scarcely deserved to lose by such a heavy goal margin.

England's form was magnificent, every representative being a clever exponent, and from goal to forward there was not a weak spot. The dashing work of the English halves and forwards must have been an object-lesson to the Continental and British hockey players who looked on. The stick work, strategy, generalship, and combination were all first class, and it is probable that England never possessed a cleverer international combination. Ireland's weakness was at half, and the Irish forwards were provokingly slow in the circle, which enabled the quick English defenders to tackle and clear while the Irishmen looked on and wondered.

Excepting, perhaps, Noble, who did not touch his best form, all the Englishmen played well up to reputation, and the work of Pridmore, Shoveller, and Logan in the attack was exceedingly clever. Green and Rees did some smart wing work, the former has intimated his intention of retiring from further representative games, which will be a loss to his country. I have seen Ireland play infinitely better hockey than they did at the Stadium, but the wonderful defence set up by England must have been heartbreaking. The Irish halves and forwards were slow to "field" the ball, to get away and pass, and this was fatal against so fine a defence. Both teams were handicapped by the roughness of the Stadium turf, notably the Englishmen, who are so used to a level surface.

ATHLETICS.

Another Marathon.—The Bristol Marathon Race was run on Saturday in excellent weather. The men, to the number of 75—only five of the entrants did not complete—lined up on the Bristol Rovers' ground, half an hour before the start of the Rovers vs. Norwich City match. There were about 8,000 present at the ground, and before quitting it the men ran a lap and a quarter. Leaving the ground by a specially prepared exit in one corner, they crossed a field, an ash tip—this portion of the route was kept quite private—and then on to the main road for Stapleton. Here a great crowd had assembled, and J. S. Witcher, of the B.A.C., led the way through the village, but soon fell back, F. Lord taking the lead. At the fifth mile Lord was still going well with Beale (Polytechnic) and Edwards (Small Heath H.) close behind. This was the order at the village of Hambrook, but at Frampton Cotterell Beale got a little in front of the Polytechnic man. Webb, of Bath, was well in the van, but at his best at Winterbourne. Lord and Beale were practically level, and Wills, of Exeter, was 50 yards behind. They were now nearing the turning point, and a few had dropped out, while others were walking. At Bagstone Gate, which marked the turning point, 11¼ miles had been covered. Lord was first, 2secs. ahead of Beale. The Polytechnic man had done the distance in 1hr. 1min. Barrett (Polytechnic) was over 5mins. behind Beale, but then came Webb, Edwards, Norris (B.A.C.), Wills, and Mountney (Birchfield) in a bunch.

On the return journey the runners found the slowly-drying roads rather treacherous, and Wills gave up before very long. Then Beale, at Iron Acton, lost touch with Lord, and seemed to break up badly. He dropped out soon after, and Barrett came to the fore, but could not pass Lord. At Winterbourne the brilliant colours of the jerseys frightened a pony, who showed its resentment by throwing a lady out of the trap to which it was attached. Fortunately there was no injury to the lady. Lord increased his lead gradually after leaving Winterbourne, but on nearing Stapleton, Price, who had, on the out run, been in the "pack," caught up to him. Some little while before this, Price had put on a sudden dash, and he kept it up. Coming down the last hill through Stapleton, Price was fast overhauling the Polytechnic man. At this juncture Price was baulked by cyclists. Less than half a mile from the ground he passed Lord, amid cheers from the thousands of spectators at this point. He led the way over the private portion of the track on to the Rovers' ground, and when Lord came on was about 120 yards ahead. A lap and three-quarters was run on the ground, and Price was still 120 yards ahead when he reached the tape. He finished in good condition, and as far as that goes, so did Lord and Barrett. The other men came in a good distance apart, and in only one instance was a man beaten on the ground. Some of them put on a fine spurt at the finish, and but few of the first twenty showed signs of collapse. The standard times for the 22½ miles was originally fixed for 2hrs. 45mins., but this was subsequently extended by 5mins. The following were the positions and times of those within the standard:—

The placed men had to fight their way to get through the entrance to the ground, because of the huge crowd. The police had allowed the people to get too close to the entrance, and when the official cars reached there they blocked it.

ROWING.

'VARSITY COXSWAINLESS FOURS.

Oxford.—Under deightful conditions the third round of the Coxswainless Fours was decided on Friday afternoon, when there was a larger attendance than ever on the towing-path. The first heat was productive of a fine race between Christ Church and St. John's, and each in turn appeared to hold the trumph card, but "the house" shipped their opponents along the wall, and St. John's were never able to get on even terms again. In the other heat Magdalen rowed a winning race all through against Wadham. Details:—

Semi-Finals.

Heat 1: (Station 1) Christ Church 1.—F. E. Villiers (bow), 11st. 3lb.; W. A. Akers, 11st.; H. R. Barker, 12st.; C. A. Gladstone (stroke, steers), 10st. 6lb.—1. (2) St. John's.—A. W. Atkinson (bow, steers), 11st. 9lb.; E. D. Rose, 11st. 5½lb.; A. E. Kitchin, 13st 5½lb.; T. Harter (stroke), 10st. 12½—2. St. John's gained rapidly at the start, and were nearly a length in front at the Weir's bridge. From this point Christ Church improved, and coming out of the Gut there was little between them. Along the Green Bank, however, Christ Church drew right away, and despite a fine effort by St. John's along the Wall, they held their own to the end, and won by a bare length. Time—6mins. 33secs.

Heat 2: (Station 1) Magdalen 1.—W. G. Forrest, 15st. 5lb.; J. A. Gillan, 12st. 8lb.; A. G. Kerby, 13st. 7lb.; J. R. Somers-Smith (stroke, steers), 11st.—1. (2) Wadham—T. De C. Falle (bow, steers), 10st. 2lb.; R. H. Owen, 12st. 8lb.; P. R. Filleul, 11st. 6½lb.; G. W. Walker (stroke), 8st. 10lb.—2. Magdalen, much the heavier crew, gained rapidly up Iffley Reach, and came out of the Gut two lengths in front. Wadham made a good effort at the Willows, but failed to materially reduce the deficit, and Magdalen, going away again along the wall, won easily by three lengths and a half. Time—6mins. 27secs.

Final.

The final on Saturday, between Magdalen and Christ Church, excited a great amount of interest, and there was a large attendance. The conditions again being of a favourable disposition, the issue was in doubt right up to the finish. In Iffley Reach, Christ Church secured a lead of a quarter of a length, which was rubbed off by the fine steering of Magdalen through the Gut. Along the Green Bank they were as nearly as possible level, but on passing the Cherwell, Magdalen put in a very fine spurt, and after a splendid struggle were returned the winners by half a length. Details:—

(Station 1) Magdalen.—W. G. Forrest (bow), 10st. 5lb.; J. A. Gillan, 12st. 8lb.; A. G. Kerby, 13st. 7lb.; J. R. Somers-Smith (stroke, steers), 11st. 1

(Station 2) Christ Church.—F. E. Villiers (bow), 11st. 3lb.; W. A. Akers, 11st.; H. R. Barker, 12st.; C. A. Gladstone (stroke, steers), 10st. 6lb. 2

Cambridge.—With perfect weather again prevailing at Cambridge, there was a huge attendance for the semi-finals. Jesus and Trinity Hall were successful, but a comparison cannot be made of the times, as Jesus were only paddling for more than half of the course. While the Hall thoroughly deserve their victory, the margin would have been very much smaller had First Trinity steered anything like as well as their opponents—in fact, some people thought "First" might have won. They were certainly a good boat. Jesus were washing out extremely badly, keeping their oars covered for only half of the stroke. Details:—

Semi-Finals.

Heat 1: (Station 2) Trinity Hall.—D. C. R. Stuart (bow, steers), 11st. 2lb.; C. P. Cooke, 12st. 7lb.; P. A. Cooper, 12st. 10lb.; G. L. Thomson (stroke), 12st. 3lb.—1. (1) First Trinity—J. C. Warrington (bow, steers), 11st. 13lb.; J. B. Rosher, 13st 6lb.; H. G. Baynes, 14st. 3lb.; E. D. Clarke (stroke), 12st. 3lb.—2. This was a good race, but First Trinity, who have improved wonderfully, threw away what chances they may have possessed by bad steering. There was a desperate struggle for the lead at the start, and at the Little Ditch First Trinity were a yard or so to the good, but they lost at least six yards by bad steering round Grassy, and after this continued to row practically from one side of the river to the other. At the Red Grind the Hall were about three-quarters of a length up, and after a really good race won by between 25 and 30 yards. Time—10mins. 32secs.

Heat 2: (Station 1) Jesus.—H. C. Hudson (bow, steers), 11st. 7lb.; H. E. Swanston, 12st. 11lb.; J. Urquhart, 11st 11lb.; G. E. Fairbairn (stroke), 11st. 9lb.—1. (2) King's—N. G. White (bow), 10st. 10lb.; E. T. Bush, 11st. 3lb.; E. H. de Bunsen, 12st. 7lb.; A. Mansell Moulin (stroke, steers), 11st.—2. The holders had matters all their own way from the very first stroke. They were a length up at the Little Ditch and after being 50 yards to the good at the Red Grind settled down to a paddle and won by eighty yards. Time—10mins. 57secs.

Final.

Jesus and Trinity Hall put up an excellent race on Saturday, when the conditions were ideal. Jesus did not look like winning for a long time, but G. E. Fairbairn, the Blue, at stroke, used his head splendidly, and took them right away just at the right time. As a crew they were well together, but washed out very badly, especially bow and No. 3. Fairbairn showed great improvement from last year, and rowed a fine race, whilst Swanston (a younger brother of the old Blue) was distinctly promising.

The Hall did not row as well as on Friday, and were clearly over done, and Cooke and Cooper were "baked" at the Red Grind. Last year was the first success Jesus could record for twenty-six years, but they have now won the event.

A very even start was effected, but the Hall, rowing 38 to 34, soon began to make headway. At the Ditch they were about half a length to the good, which they had increased to quite a length and-a-half in the Gut. The spurts in the Plough Reach gave Jesus an advantage, and at the Red Grind the Hall were less than a length to the good. Once in the Long Reach, Fairbairn quickened to 36 and took his crew right away, being fully thirty yards ahead at the Bridge Then, in response to repeated cries from Stuart and Thomson, Hall made desperate efforts but too late, and Jesus, although steering badly, won by 20 yards. Time—10mins. 20secs.

BOXING.

BRITT BEAT SUMMERS.—Jimmy Britt beat Johnny Summers in the big light-weight boxing contest at Wonderland on Monday night, the verdict going to the American on points. The decision was a most unpopular one, most people in the hall thinking that Summers had won handsomely. The fight was for a purse of £400.

Summers, who weighs about 9st., is the light-weight champion of England. Britt, who is some 10lbs. heavier, claims to be the light-weight champion of the world, a title which is, however, disputed by Ganz and Nelson. The match was ten two-minute rounds, at catch-weights.

The men took the ring at ten minutes past ten. Britt was favourite, 2 to 1 being laid on the American.

Summers looked the better trained man of the two, but he was fine drawn, whilst Britt carried some little flesh in the face and body, but stripped fairly clean. Britt had a Stars and Stripes sash round his waist over red shorts, and Summers wore blue shorts. Summers had a slight advantage in height, but was the slighter man.

Summers boxed in the upright English way, Britt crouching. In the first round Summers had slightly the best of it, and drew blood with a straight left on the face.

There was some fast work in the second round, and blood was flowing freely from Britt's face. In the third round Summers got a good left flush in the face. There was a lot of clinching, but Britt did better work.

In the fourth round Britt forced the fighting, and there was nothing in it, although Summers seemed the fresher at the end of the round.

There was some heavy work in the fifth round, and a lot of clinching, the referee having repeatedly to separate the men. In the sixth round, Summers got in three blows full in the face without return, and Britt was bleeding from a cut over the eye. The seventh saw Britt holding, and in one of the clinches he jobbed Summers in the face with his elbow. Britt was hooted.

Britt did better in the eighth round, and got a heavy left and right on Summers's face, but still the Englishman was unmarked.

Summers got a left and right home in the ninth round, and there was a lot more clinching. In the last round, Britt tried hard for a knock-out, but certainly did not seem to have much the best of the mix-up. At the close, Summers's seconds carried him shoulder high to the corner, and the big crowd shouted themselves hoarse. There was a deep roar of indignation when the verdict was given, but, unfortunately, no disorder.

But the referee was right, in spite of the popular verdict. Britt depended mainly on boxing at close quarters, he hung on and punched oftener and harder than most people gave him credit for and as a result his in-fighting won him the victory.

BILLIARDS.

THE second heat in Messrs. Burroughes and Watts's handicap tournament in Soho-square ended on Saturday night in the victory of Inman by 2,544, 544 more than the points which Dawson was set to concede.

On the last day Dawson scored 1,492 to 1,164, but it was a matter of getting practice rather than making an "effort," for there was not the remotest chance of winning. The best breaks were 195, 140, 136, 113, 74, 97 and 82 unfinished by Inman, and 137, 132, 240, 253, 135 and 159 by the loser. The closing scores were: Inman (rec. 2,000), 9,000; Dawson, 6,456.

This week's heat is between Reece (rec. 1,500) and Harverson (rec. 2,000). It is noteworthy as being the first occasion on which Reece concedes the older man a start.

Stevenson and Harris obtained some experience of each other (the champion had not hitherto seen the new northern star) in last week's heat in Messrs. Burroughes and Watts's provincial tournament, the first prize in which (£100) is a certainty for Stevenson. The pair met at Manchester, and Stevenson, conceding 3,300 in 10,000, won by no fewer than 1,391.

At Thurston's saloon, in Leicester-square, Cook has just given A. F. Peall 500 points in 6,000 and a beating by 160 on an octangular table.

HYDERABAD TOURNAMENT.

THE FINAL.

29TH LANCERS vs. GOLCONDA.—The final game in the tournament, which at the request of H. H. the Nizam was regarded as a friendly match, was witnessed by a large gathering on the 16th instant, and proved another easy victory for Golconda.

First Chukker.—The 29th pressed at the start and Meynell scored the first goal, thereafter they were kept on the defensive and Golconda registered two points through Shah Mirza and Kader Beg.

Second Chukker.—A run by the 29th was followed by a a determined attack by Golconda and Osman scored. Exciting play in midfield closed the period.

Third Chukker.—Golconda pressed and Shah Mirza scored from a melee: a penalty against the 29th was followed by Golconda getting through once more.

Fourth Chukker.—Golconda put in a good combined run but failed in front of goal. Hamid next got away and hit the sixth goal. Cookson was then prominent for the 29th, but was stopped and again the Lancers' territory was invaded and another goal signalled. Marchant got away once but missed, and Golconda returning to the attack Kader Beg put through.

Fifth Chukker.—The 29th were kept hemmed in and Kader Beg and Shah Mirza both hit goals.

Sixth Chukker.—Shah Mirza opened with a splendid shot which was successful and shortly after the same player scored again. The 29th next attacked and Meynell got a goal. The chukker closed with the final score: Golconda 12 goals, 29th Lancers 2 goals. Teams:—

POLO IN POONA.

THE Alderson Polo Tournament on the American system was continued on Monday when, owing to a field day, the Lincolns were unable to turn out to play the 26th Cavalry No. 2 and only two games were played in consequence. Good numbers continue to turn out but both these games were rather one-sided.

First was that between the 26th Cavalry No. 1 (scratch) and 127th Baluchis (+3). At the end of the first chukker the Cavalry had drawn level, and from then there was never any doubt. Scoring twice in the next, four times in the third and once in the fourth, they came out easy winners by 10 goals to 3.

The other saw the R. F. A. No. 2 (+3) meet the M. I. (+4) and again the back markers easily made up the handicap. One chukker sufficed to place the Artillery in front, and putting in a goal in each of the two succeeding periods eventually won by 7 goals to 4.

On Wednesday again two games were decided, the first a battle royal between two of the best teams, the 26th Cavalry No. 3 (−1) and Divisional Staff Team (scratch). It was a very close game all through, the Cavalry equalising in the second chukker but being unable to do more before the final call of time. An extra period was allowed, and after four minutes' fast play the Cavalry at last put in the deciding point.

With a handicap of −1 as against +3, the Sappers nevertheless required no extra time to dispose of the Miners. They started by hitting 3 goals in the initial chukker, added a similar number in the third and with one in the fourth won by 6 goals to 3.

Three further games were concluded on Friday, the public continuing to take a keen interest. A splendid exhibition was given on the 26th Cavalry No. 1 meeting the Lincolns, scratch and −1. The Cavalry always had the upper hand and established themselves by hitting three goals in the first chukker. Only in the last did the Lincolns manage to get through, consequently losing by 5 goals to nil.

The Miners, (+3), and R. F. A. No. 1, (+4), made a good fight of it, the former drawing level in the first period. Each then scored once but in the end the Miners won by 7 goals to 5.

Thirdly the Sappers, (−1), and M. I. No. 2, (+4), met and the former gave another sterling display. They made up 4 goals in the first two chukkers, and in the third hit no less than 5, to which they added 3 in the fourth. The net result, therefore, was 11 goals to 4 in favour of the Sappers.

THE ROYAL DRAGOONS' TOURNAMENT.

THE above tournament for the Cup presented by the Royal Dragoons opened at the Mahomed Bagh ground, Lucknow, on the 18th instant, when two games in the first round were played. There was a large gathering of spectators, including His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor.

The first game was between the 60th King's Royal Rifles and 17th Lancers. It was rather a poor game, the Lancers had it all their own way and won by 10 goals to 1.

First Chukker.—The Lancers scored a goal.
Second Chukker.—The Lancers scored 3 goals.
Third Chukker.—Two more goals were signalled for the Lancers.
Fourth Chukker.—The Lancers scored twice.
Fifth Chukker.—The 60th Rifles scored their initial goal, and the Lancers 3.
Sixth Chukker.—The Lancers hit a goal, thus winning by 10 goals to 1. Teams:—

SECOND GAME.

The next game, between the 12th Lancers and "S" Battery, R. H. A., was a hard galloping game, the 12th Lancers eventually defeating their opponents by 6 goals to 4.

First Chukker.—The "S" Battery hit a goal at the onset and a goal was shortly after signalled for the Lancers.
Second Chukker.—The Lancers hit a goal.
Third Chukker.—A goal was obtained by the Lancers.
Fourth Chukker.—"S" Battery got on to the ball and scored, the Lancers then hit two goals.
Fifth Chukker.—The gunners made a goal.
Sixth Chukker.—The gunners scored, and the Lancers hit a goal just before the close, thus winning by 6 goals to 4 goals Teams:—

THE second day of the Royal Dragoons Polo Tournament on the 20th instant attracted a very large assembly, including His Excellency the Viceroy, His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor and their respective Staffs, and the Maharaja of Balrampur.

The first game was between the Royal Dragoons and the 9th Hodson's Horse. The game in the first two chukkers was very level and fast, but there was no score. In the third chukker the 9th Horse drew first blood, and on changing ends Colonel de Lisle put in a fine shot for the Dragoons which brought the teams level. The Hodson's Horse scored again in the fourth chukker, and were thus leading by two to one. In the 6th chukker the Royal Dragoons again equalised. As there was no further scoring, an extra chukker was played in which the Royals scored, and thus defeated the 9th Hodson's Horse by 3 goals to 2. Teams:—

The Durhams scored four goals in the first chukker, one in the second, one in the third, one in the fourth, one in the fifth and two in the sixth, making ten in all. The Gymkhana made one goal in the fourth and one in the fifth chukker. The Durhams thus won by 10 goals to 2. Teams:—

CRICKET IN CALCUTTA.

CALCUTTA C. C. vs. GORDON HIGHLANDERS.—Played on the 21st and 22nd instant, the Gordons, who are reputed to be one of the best military cricket teams in India, were beaten by 82 runs. Calcutta batted first: Turnbull, Lee and Drew made useful scores and the first century was signalled for the loss of four wickets. Quin and Ernsthausen stayed together and ran the score to 170 before Quin's wicket fell. The first day's play closed with the score 180 for 6 wickets. The next day Ernsthausen, who was 42 not out overnight, continued to score freely and was not beaten till he had put on 25 more runs. Pope was the only other to get into double figures and the innings closed for 237. The Gordons started badly and lost Fowke and Lockley for 14 runs. Carr then came in and played an excellent innings of 101, but the others could do nothing with the bowling of Twiss, Guise and Curtis-Hayward and the side was all out for 155. Calcutta went in again and lost four wickets for 126. Score :—

BALLYGUNGE C. C. UNDER 30. vs. OVER 30.—The matches arranged with the Calcutta Light Horse for Sunday last, having fallen through, owing to the inability of the latter to raise a team, Ballygunge fell back upon a contest between the Buddhas of the club and the Chokhras, a struggle in which the youths came off decidedly second best. Winning the toss, the ancients had first use of a by no means easy wicket, and for a time things went none too well, the seventh wicket falling with the total at 111, but at this point, a little more life was infused into the game, Skinner and Coulthard going for the bowling for all they were worth, and taking the score to 186 before they were parted. Then, however, the latter was bowled by Badham for 29 (rather a lucky effort, but still useful) but with Treadaway to assist him, Skinner went gaily on, until with his score at 102, he was caught at the wicket off a mis-hit. His was a characteristic innings, some of his short arm shots being really excellent; he was favoured with a certain amount of luck, but his knock on the whole was an excellent one. After his departure, the end soon came, the innings closing for 228, a much larger total than at one time seemed probable.

The Chokhras put up a miserable show against the bowling of Gould and White, and although there were plenty of "men" on the side capable of making runs, they were all out for 56, Shallow being top scorer with 15. Gould and White certainly bowled very well, but the collapse was none the less inexplicable—unless tiffin had something to do with it! White captured 4 for 21, Gould 4 for 28, and Jones 1 for 4 —all rather flattering figures; for Under 30, Badham with 5 for 66 did best. Scores :—

BALLYGUNGE C. C. vs. ST. XAVIERS' COLLEGE.—Ballygunge, who had out only a weak team, could only draw with St. Xaviers' College on Saturday last. The home team had first knock, and thanks to some vigorous hitting by Horncastle (59), Bocquet (not out 59), and Sherman (35), were able to declare their innings closed with the score at 149 for 5.

During the time remaining for play, the Boys, thanks mainly to a very steady 46 not out by Vaughan, and 13 extras, managed to put together 80 for 4 wickets; the Club bowling was weak in the extreme, and matters were not improved by the dropping of more than one easy catch. Scores :—

Hockey.

POONA DIVISIONAL TOURNAMENT.

THE following is the drawing for the Divisional Hockey Tournament which will commence at Poona on the 1st December 1908 :—

INDIAN ARMY TOURNAMENT.

95TH INFANTRY vs. 2ND RAJPUTS.—The tournament opened at Bangalore with this game on the 16th instant. The Rajputs pressed at the start and scored. They continued the attack for some time and then the Infantry got going and before the interval equalised. On changing ends the 95th attacked steadily and had the best of the play. Simpson after three unsuccessful shots, each of which missed by a few inches, at length put through and in spite of desperate efforts by the Rajputs the 95th kept them out and won by 2 goals to 1.

119TH INFANTRY vs. 75TH CARNATICS.—On the 17th instant these teams met and an uninteresting game ended in favour of the 119th Infantry The opening exchanges were slow but the 119th got away at last and scored. They continued to attack till half time. On resuming both goals were visited in turn till the 119th got away at the close of the game and registered another point thus winning by 2 goals to nil.

SEMI-FINAL.

95TH INFANTRY vs. 81ST PIONEERS.—Played on the 18th instant. The game in the first half was very evenly contested, both goals were visited in turn but neither team could get through and the interval arrived without score. Changing over the 95th attacked, obtained an abortive corner and, after some exciting skirmishes in front of the Pioneers' goal, opened their score. The 81st then took up the attack and looked like scoring but they were unable to drive it home and the 95th assuming the offensive once more scored another goal and won by 2 goals to nil.

119TH INFANTRY vs. 2ND Q. O. SAPPERS AND MINERS.—These teams met on the 19th instant, a one sided game ended in favour of the 119th who practically had matters all their own way throughout. They scored twice in the first half and opened the second period with another goal. Then the Sappers got a point, but the 119th put on two more before time was called and ran out victorious by 5 goals to 1.

FINAL.

95TH INFANTRY vs. 119TH INFANTRY.—The final game was played on the 21st instant and a large crowd of spectators witnessed a great struggle. Both goals were visited in turn at the start and then the 95th put in a combined run which ended in Comyn opening the score. The 95th returned to the attack but were repeatedly repulsed till just before the interval Comyn got through and scored again. On changing ends Simpson registered a goal for the 95th and a little later was hurt but continued to play on. The 95th still pressed and obtained a soft a goal the 119th custodian accidentally kicking the ball into the net. The 119th played up pluckily and scored but though they had the advantage for the rest of the game they were unable to wipe off any more of the goals scored against them and were thus beaten by 4 goals to 1. Colonel Fry congratulated the winners and Mrs. Fry handed them the Cup.

PAST AND PRESENT BRITISH CHAMPIONS.

ONE often wonders how British boxers of the past compare with those of the present. When one says British (because there is no doubt that the present American school of middle-weights and heavy-weights, with men like Burns, Langford, Johnson, O'Brien, Jim Sullivan, Alf. Kaufmann, Marvin, Hart, Mike Schreck, is undoubtedly a great one) one is led to say that even now the bantams, feather and light-weights compare favourably with our American cousins.

Curiously enough, even Americans have got to be very thankful to a black man for a good bit of what they have learnt, as they undoubtedly learnt a lot from the Australian school, with Peter Jackson practically at its head, though names like Jim Hall, Frank Slavin, young Griffo, etc., are not easily forgotten. Peter Jackson was very popular, for a black man, in America, and was engaged in one of the leading clubs there at a big salary. There is no doubt that the best modern-day fighters—no matter what nationality—have the advantage over some of the old-timers. Craft, modern fighting, and the present day rules are in their favour.

The system of training is now so much better, and owing to the big purses now given men can train for longer, procure better advice, and have more comforts—if a prize-fighter's training routine knows such a thing—for the present modern ideal training quarters were not known in old days, and great fighters of old days would probably turn in their grave if they heard of the big purses that even second and third rate men receive. Mace, one of the greatest fighters the world ever saw, is still alive to see this, and one cannot but sympathise with a man who, in his time, fought so wonderfully pluckily and well for next to nothing.

BRAIN WORK.

In boxing, as in all things where men strive to attain honour and meet in competition, brains will tell. Many will not hear of a boxer having brains. Tommy Burns in the boxing world, like Hackenschmidt in the wrestling world and Sandow in the strong-man business, has clearly demonstrated to us what brains will do. One wonders very often how much of Burns' success one could attribute to his brains. A lot more than most people think. He will talk to his man while fighting at his hardest, "guy" him, sneer at him, "kid" him, and fight him, all in the space of a couple of rounds, and with great effect.

Once, in a fight with Squires, when Burns was very badly shaken and knocked dazed, he (Burns) held on to Squires, and asked him when he was going to fight, and how much longer he wished to last before he (Burns) put him out. The bluff had the desired effect. Squires, never realising how badly he had shaken his man, never followed up his advantage.

One is glad to hear, there are bigger entries than ever for the British middle-weight and heavy-weight novices' competition, and we must still have hopes of procuring the championship. Tom Thomas, of Wales, is a very much better man than people think but is not as well known as he might be. In the heavy-weight division Hague, who scored a victory over the ex-amateur, Charles Wilson, of Notting Hill, has the making of a coming man. Wilson himself beat Moir, our present-day champion, a few years ago, but these paper records go for very little, as there is always a lapse of time for the improvement of one of the men, and the changes of weight and condition have to be taken into consideration. Hague, however, should have a future before him. Well over 13st., a big, powerful man, with the advantage of youth on his side, as he is only twenty-two, and being a plucky "Tyke" in the bargain, he has great natural advantages.

BETTER TRAINING SYSTEM WANTED.

A good, heavy, right-hand punch, and a straighter left than a good many heavy-weights in the present business are very valuable assets, but he has much to learn in ringcraft and perhaps in footwork; where Americans are always so wonderfully good he was most at fault. One never likes to criticise a winner, especially a good winner and a plucky one, and it is only in the hopes of a great future for him that these remarks are made.

In conclusion, somehow or other one would wish to see our men, when training for a big fight, better advised. An English heavy-weight in training, if he is a coming man, has no one to spar with and very few to teach him much. He is trained on the old-time rules—on the raw steak and walk-till-you-drop principle.

Nine times out of ten his trainers know less than the champion they are looking after, and talk more, and nothing was more pitiful than the example in the ring of Moir's seconds in his fight with Burns. Everyone told him something different and all at different times. Whatever chance the man had originally was spoilt, and once more that brain of Burns told greatly in his favour. He saw the Englishman in a highly nervous state, and played up to the part well. He walked about the ring as if he was going to spar; took off his clothes as if it was too much trouble to live, and then, when the fight had practically started and time had been called at the beginning of the first round, he turned round to his second, Ben Jordan, and said: "Say, just sponge my face." Moir would have been quite within his rights if he had sponged it for him, but, by this time already nervous, Burns's consummate and cool cheek had had the desired effect; the gunner (Moir) was only a machine. If we have learnt and forgotten, we must learn again.

The Horse.

THE INTELLIGENCE OF THE HORSE.

ONE of the curious things in connection with the horse is that there seems to be a certain class of people who look upon that most useful of animals with an eye that magnifies almost in as great a degree as does his own. Wonderful are the tales which travellers tell, but they are not nearly so wonderful as the tales that are told us about the sagacity, the fidelity, and the intelligence of the horse by his sentimental admirers.

How the horse should ever have gained the reputation for intelligence that he has is not easy to discover. It certainly cannot have originated from those who have been intimately connected with him, for their daily experience must have told them that stupidity rather than intelligence was his chief characteristic.

But, the advocate of the horse's intelligence asks us to consider how the horse can be taught tricks. See him in the circus—how admirably he performs his allotted tricks, scarcely ever making a mistake! See how he rarely misses his way, and now he remembers places! Granted, but memory is one thing and intelligence is another. Although it may be admitted that there can be no intelligence without memory, there can be memory without much intelligence. The idiot remembers who is kind to him and who is cruel to him, and who gives him the food he likes. He may even remember more than this, but that is about the limit of a horse's intelligence.

Intelligence means the capacity of reflection, it may be a limited capacity, but the capacity is there all the same. We see it in the dog, and especially in the sporting dog. Look, for example, at a pack of hounds when they come to a check, see how they spread themselves and go about their attempts to recover the line systematically; or watch good pointers or setters at work! Something more than memory is acting there, and it is something of which a horse has a very small share, if indeed he has any.

Captain Horace Hayes well says: "The proportion which the weight of the brain bears to that of the spinal cord is a fair guide to the intellectual capacity of any animal." The test seems to be borne out by practical everyday experience, for man comes out a long way in front of any of our domestic animals with a brain thirty-three times the weight of his spinal cord, whilst the dog, as we might expect comes out next, with his brain 5·14 times heavier than his spinal cord. Roughly, speaking this is about how one might have expected it to work out by what we know of the intelligence of man and of the dog. Such being the case we may fairly presume that the weight of other animals' brains in proportion to the weight of their spinal cord gives some sort of a clue to their intelligence. The cat comes next, as might be expected, with a brain weight of 3·75 times that of the spinal cord, and then we get a shock for the humble ass follows with 2·40, and the pig is fifth with 2·30. The horse's place is lowest but one in the scale with a brain weight of 2·27 times his spinal cord, or only ·9 more than the ox, which is admittedly on all sides "the stupid one of the party."

The position which the foregoing figures give to the horse in the scale of intelligence are such as a wide experience of him would lead one to expect. We hear a great deal about a horse's intelligence at times. Let us now give a few instances of a horse's stupidity, all of which are well authenticated. The first case is that of a hunter. He is thoroughbred and fifteen years old; a fine horse over a country, and the biggest fool for his inches within the three kingdoms. Let that horse have a week's or a fortnight's rest through frost or any other cause and become a little fresh, and his behaviour is unbearable. It is not that he "plays the ass" a bit in the exuberance of his spirits. He does more than that. Not only is the road scarcely capable of holding him, but he bucks and kicks till the inevitable happens, and he gets severely handled. Then he drops into his bridle and behaves himself as he can do—when he likes.

Now, if this horse was capable of "putting this and that together," he would know that his behaviour would end with a thrashing, for it has happened many times before. But his mind does not seem able to couple cause and effect together for more than a very limited time indeed. Besides which the horse ought to know that a day's hunting is a heavy strain upon him. Some highly nervous horses do recognise that fact, and we have seen one or two that broke into a profuse sweat as soon as they saw the man who usually rode them equipped for the chase. But in these cases the man was very heavy and they were over-weighted! Generally, a horse will take a great deal out of himself unnecessarily on the road to a hunting fixture if he is pretty fresh, and, good a memory as he has, he never seems to remember that he may and probably will want all his reserve of strength before the end of the day.

Then again, watch a horse that has been frightened by some familiar object! He will go past the terrible thing half a dozen times, and take no notice, and the next time he will go mad with fright. "That is due to his highly nervous temperament" it will be said, and such may at once be admitted, but the dog who has twice the intelligence of the horse puts some restraint upon himself when he is frightened. He has his nerves under control whilst the horse has not. One could not imagine a dog running amok as a horse does, regardless of all consequences. The horse's greatest mental trait is, perhaps, his sense of location. He never seems to forget a place he has called at or a road he has travelled. Everyone who has ridden much in the dark and in country by-ways has some tale to tell of a horse's power to find his way home under great difficulties.

Now, it has been said that the horse is easily taught certain tricks. These tricks he is taught by his greed, for, disguise it as we will, the horse is a greedy animal. As it was once well put by a lady, "a horse has a long memory and a long neck, and the way to his memory is by his neck." This is really an accurate summing up of the situation. If you want to teach a horse to do tricks in the circus there are only two ways—to give him pleasure or to give him pain, and the former is preferable for many reasons. So he gets the bit of sugar or the apple, and bearing in his memory that these good things follow on his doing certain actions he does them. The question—does a horse feel any gratitude to the man who is kind to him? is one which is not easily answered. Of course, he discriminates between the kind owner or groom and the brutal one, but we very much question whether gratitude of the same kind as the dog's enters into his composition. Certainly, affection for his master does not. We never knew a horse fret himself to death on the loss of his master; we have known more than one dog follow his master miles to the grave and come home, refusing to rest till an old coat was thrown to him. Such affection as this is quite beyond a horse, who, if he only gets his corn, does not seem to care much who gives it to him.

But, to return to the question of the horse's intelligence, would he submit to the mastery of man if he were intelligent. He has many times a man's strength; he is the master of the situation; yet he submits to untold indignities. An inexperienced rider rolls about on the saddle, bumps on to his neck at his fences, hauls at his mouth, and rule, he stands it all without making violent protest. Some in countless other ways contributes to his discomfort. As a horses there are, of course, which are practically unrideable by any but an exceptionally fine horseman, and even with exceptionally fine horsemen up they only go their own way. These, it should not be necessary to insist, are the really intelligent horses; they know their strength and how to use it. And, perhaps, it is because they approach these horses in intelligence that those which are known in stable language as "handful" always make the best hunters. Yet, the horse has sufficient intelligence to be a good servant to his master, and if he has not the sagacity of the dog, he, at any rate, has sufficient to enable him to perform his allotted task thoroughly and well. Though, then, we deprecate the exaggerated notions about his intelligence, we none the less admire him for the perseverance and the thoroughness with which he does his work, and have no hesitation in endorsing the opinion of the old school books of our youth, which informed us in large capitals that "the horse is the friend of Man."—The County Gentleman.

In comparison with the ·400/·360 the muzzle velocity of this new Cartridge is approximately 230 F.S. higher, and although the charge is increased the same low pressure, viz., 14 tons, is maintained. The increased velocity coupled with the extra weight of bullet and consequent greater striking energy gives one a rifle that has practically the stopping power of a ·450 or ·500 Black Powder Express, and is consequently an ideal weapon for deer stalking and for shooting heavier forms of non-dangerous game; moreover, in consequence of the importation of the ·303 into India being prohibited, it is well worthy the notice of Sportsmen in that country who desire to have a weapon in which is combined High Velocity, Flat Trajectory, Great Striking Energy, Minimum Recoil, and in which, through low pressure, a greater margin of safety is given and the risk of jamming reduced to a minimum.

THE YOUNG IDEA.

"Oh, it's simply preposterous!" expostulated Blake. "And on 'the First,' too! I regard 'the First' as a day sacred to serious shooting—not an outing for babies!"

He sent a glance, full of irritation, at the young Hedleys, who, with their backs to the hedge, stood waiting in the next field.

"It's too bad of Hedley," agreed Coulson. "This is one of his practical jokes, I suppose. Why, the girl's only thirteen, and the boy not much more!"

Blake fidgeted with his safety-bolt. "What the deuce can I do?" he reflected dolefully. Presently he went through the gate and approached the boy.

"You'll be very careful, won't you, George? he said in a troubled voice.

"Oh, yes!" answered the boy cheerfully.

"And you, Kathleen—you don't think it will tire you to carry a gun?"

"Oh, no, Mr. Blake; not at all."

Blake shrugged his shoulders helplessly. He felt he could do no more, and he left them, muttering unkind things about their inconsiderate father.

"What charge are you using, Kit?" asked the boy, when Blake was out of hearing.

"Twenty-six grains of Shultze and three-quarters of an ounce of number seven—chilled," was the girl's matter-of-fact answer as she slipped a couple of cartridges into her 28 bore. "Field loading; nice and tight," she added.

"Bet you my bag beats yours."
"So it ought—with a 20-bore."
"Give you five birds, then."
"Make it six, and I'm on."
"All right—for sixpence," agreed the boy.
"Come along!" called Blake, and the youngsters, with their guns tucked well under their shoulders and their eyes alert, went up the stubble at a good two paces ahead of their elders.

Half-way across the field a single brace of old birds got up with a whirr.

"My bird!" sang out the boy and girl in a breath. Bang went their guns, and the birds fell, clean shot, to their right barrels.

Coulson, next to the gtil, saw them drop while he was getting his gun to his shoulder; and before he had explained his slowness to himself, Kit had stopped a hare ten yards in front of him.

He turned and stared at her. She had already re-loaded and was carrying a spare cartridge between her teeth.

"Mark time!" cautioned George as the keeper wheeled. The girl's long, brown legs responded. Then, as they went on again, a big covey rose. Coulson, who was not going to be caught napping this time, got the leader, but, because of his hurry, missed another strong bird with his left. Blake, for similar reasons, wasted two cartridges on one bird. But the children waited until the young ones rose, and then each got in a deadly right and left.

Blake gave Coulson a look of astonishment. Coulson's look in response said, "Don't understand it" as plainly as looks can speak. The boy and girl, with sixpence at stake, kept their eyes fixed right ahead.

In the next field, a small covey, going fast down wind, crossed the line from Blake's end. Both he and Coulson shot behind the same bird. Kit knocked some feathers out of it, and George brought it down at forty yards. The rest flew wide.

"Wiped our eyes, by gad!" exclaimed Blake. Coulson couldn't say anything; he was staring open-mouthed.

Through gaps in a low quickset they passed into wurzel. George and Kit, as usual, a bit ahead, got all four barrels into some birds before the men had time to swing on.

"My bird!" one or the other would rap out each time anything got up, and the constant repetition of the words had the effect of flurrying the men.

The two small guns seemed, at times, to be keeping up a fusillade. It was not that game was more plentiful than usual, but because nothing escaped the youngsters' keen eyes. They "got on" at lightning speed. Even when a bird rose right under the muzzle of Blake's own gun, one of them would rob him of his shot before he could pull trigger.

"Nine brace and a half to me," nodded George to his sister as they paused to let the dogs work a patch of gorse.

"Eight and a half—only two behind," returned the girl evenly, as she bowed over the first rabbit that bolted. "Mind the dog!" she admolished Blake, who, seeing a movement in the gorse, had raised his gun.

"Awfully sorry!" he stammered, hardly knowing what he was saying.

"Never saw anything like it in my life!" admitted Coulson in an awestruck tone to his host when, a little later on, Kit took a snapshot across a reed-bed at a woodcock and bagged it.

"And to think I asked them to be careful!" confessed Blake in dismay.

But George was five birds ahead of his sister when they turned into the last field, and Kit, as they walked it up, felt her sixpence slipping away. In the further angle they flushed a single partridge, right ahead of them. Bang went the small bores, and, as the bird fell, Kit, for the first time, ran in.

"My bird!" she screamed.
"Bosh! I simply smothered him!" objected George.
"Prove it!" was the challenge.

Down the youngsters plumped with the bird between them, while Blake and Coulson came and stood over them in wonder. The keeper, full of professional excitement, craned forward expectantly. Kit extracted the pin that held her tam-o'-shanter, and began probing the bird with it. George, with a penknife, became similarly engaged.

"There you are!" he cried presently, exhibiting a black speck. "Number six! Knew I'd got him!"

But his exultation was short-lived. The next moment the girl held up gory fingers with a pellet between them.

"Number seven—my bird!" she exclaimed in triumph.

"A double hit, by Jove!" cried the astonished Blake. "I say—do you"—he looked from one to the other—"do you shoot—much?"

"Oh, yes," piped Kit. "Didn't father tell you? We perform in public. We're 'The Two Little Sure-Shots.' Didn't you know?"—London Opinion.

THE BALUCHISTAN NATURAL HISTORY SOCIETY.

PROCEEDINGS of a meeting of the Baluchistan Natural History Society held in the Quetta Museum and Library Building on Thursday, the 22nd October 1908.

Present. President:—The Hon'ble Sir Henry McMahon, K.C.I.E., C.S.I.

Vice-President:—Col. C. E. Peirse.

Members:—Mr. A. Anderson, Mr. W. G. Chapman, Mr. C. H. Dracott, Mr. A. A. Flynn, Mr. E. G. Foley, Major T. H. Goodwin, D.S.O., R.A.M.C., R. B. Diwan Jamiat Rai, K. S. A. D. Marker, Lieutenant F. A. McCamon, R.A.M.C., Mr. W. R. S. Porter, Mr. W. R. S. Shiakshaw Pherozshaw.

Visitors:—Archdeacon C. E. Gilmore, M. A.

Honorary Secretary:—Mr. J. W. N. Cumming.

Read letter from Mr. A. M. Anscomb, expressing regret at his inability to be present.

Read messages from Lieutenant S. J. Bhathina, I. M. S., and Dr. Otto, conveying their thanks to the Society for electing them as members.

The Hon'ble President placed before the meeting a list of a valuable collection of botanical specimens presented by the Baluchistan Forest Department to the Quetta Museum, and expressed the hope that members of the Society would endeavour to study them and add to the collection.

The Honorary Secretary intimated that he had received 100 copies of each of the following leaflets from the Imperial Entomologist, Agricultural Research Institute, Pusa:—

(1) "Collecting, Pinning, and Setting."
(2) "How to Rear Caterpillars that attack Crops."
(3) "Directions of sending Insect Specimens."

Resolved that the leaflets be distributed among members, the Hon'ble President expressing the hope that members would make good use of them and send in collections to the Museum.

Read letter, dated 7th October 1908, from the Honorary Secretary, Bombay Natural History Society, acknowledging receipt of specimens donated to that Society and promising a further communication. Resolved that the further communication be awaited. Red extracts from Burn's Monthly Magazine of September 1908 regarding the successful employment of antivenene and permanganate of potash in cases of snakebites, the former being most efficacious in Cobra bites and the latter in bites by the Krait, daboia bungarus and Echis Carinata. Mr. Chapman remarked that he had known vinegar (injected by hypodermic syringe) to be successfully employed in similar cases. Resolved that the extracts be recorded.

Read letter, dated 1st October 1908, from Colonel C. Swinhoe, of London, acknowledging receipt of the second parcel of butterflies and moths sent to him, stating that he was at work on them and promising to return duplicates when duly identified, types of new species, if any, being placed in the British Museum.

Resolved that the Museum be asked to send a further collection of butterflies and moths to Colonel Swinhoe for favour of identification, with the remark that the members of the Baluchistan Natural History Society are unanimous in thinking that types of new species should be placed in the British Museum, but consider it advisable that where duplicates are not forthcoming coloured illustrations of them should be furnished to the Society in lieu of the types.

The Honorary Secretary then placed before the meeting a list of specimens donated to the Museum and exhibited most of them, at the same time the more important being:—

1 pair of Markhor horns, presented by Mr. W. Shaw.
1 pair ditto (deformed) presented by Dewan Ganpat Rai, C.I.E.
1 young wolf presented by R. S. Basant Singh.
1 Jackal, 2 Foxes } obtained by purchase.
2 Pine (?) Martens from Ziarat and Quetta, presented by Captain A. D. G. Ramsay and Mr. Stranack.
1 Quetta Vole, obtained by purchase.
1 Stiff tailed Duck from Khushdil Khan, presented by Captain Boileau.
1 Spoonbill from Khusdil Khan, presented by Lieutenant P. L. Leared.
2 Hargitt's Scaly-bellied Green Woodpeckers from Ghazaband and Quetta, presented by Messrs. A. E. Bantock and B. H. Ford.
1 young nearly fully fledged Black-bellied Sand Grouse from Quetta, presented by Mr. A. E. Bantock.
Several snakes from Harnai and Bostan, presented by Mr. A. Flynn.

The Hon ble President congratulated the Society on the large number of donations made to the Museum and invited special attention to the two rare Martens, one of which he thought might be forwarded to the Bombay Natural History Society for favour of identification and return. He also reminded the members of the importance of securing further specimens of the Quetta Vole and praised the manner in which the snakes collected by Mr. Flynn had been bottled by him. In connection with the latter, the Honorary Secretary pointed out that these snakes had been preserved by Mr. Flynn in country spirits, each specimen being merely probed in two or three places with a large needle to admit the spirits, instead of being slit open longitudinally below as was frequently the practice.

The next item of business being the election of the new members, the following names were unanimously accepted:—

The Hon'ble Mrs. Williams, proposed by the Hon'ble Sir Henry McMahon and seconded by Mr. Cumming.

Captain J. D. Richmond, R.A.M.C., proposed by Major Goodwin and seconded by the Hon'ble Sir Henry McMahon.

Read letter, dated 6th October 1908, from the Honorary Secretary, Bombay Natural History Society, thanking the Baluchistan Branch for sending in the name of Mr. C. H. Dracott, for acceptance as a member of the Bombay Natural History Society.

There being no other members desirous of joining that Society, is was resolved that the letter be recorded.

In conclusion the following questions were discussed:—

(1) The best method of protecting clothing furs and skins from the ravages of Moth-Larvae.

(2) The advisability of fixing name—labels to trees on certain roads in Quetta.

As regards (1), the Hon'ble President mentioned that he had known of a root called "Khut" to have been used with great success, while the Honorary Secretary mentioned that the Russian tansy was strongly recommended by Montagu Brown.

Pepper corns were also suggested by Mr. Dracott.

As regards (2), the Hon'ble President promised to consider the matter.

J. W. N. CUMMING,
Honorary Secretary.

REVIVAL OF PROFESSIONAL SCULLING IN ENGLAND.

FOR some years professional sculling in England has been decidedly under a cloud so far as England is concerned. This state of things has been undoubtedly brought about by the shady tactics of its own professors, which has fairly sickened the most enthusiastic supporters of what should be one of the finest British sports.

The recent race over the Thames championship course between George Towns of Australia, who has won the world's championship twice and the championship of England on four occasions, and Ernest Barry, of Wandsworth, was not only one of the finest contests ever seen on the Thames, but, what is better still, the whole of the proceedings both before and during the race were of the most sportsmanlike character.

That the public appreciated this was shown by the immense attendance, for the banks of the river for the four and quarter miles between Putney and Mortlake were thickly packed by a most enthusiastic crowd.

Yet, strange to say, there was little betting, and Towns just started with the call, odds of 5 to 4 being laid on his chance. It should be stated, however, that this was the first match for money in which Barry has taken part, and, though he is fourteen years younger than the Australian and was reported to have done something exceedingly smart in practice, it was feared that his lack of experience would tell against him when pitted against such a veteran as Towns, who, although in his fortieth year, was said to be sculling in his best form.

Yet the youngster won was much by his excellent judgment as by his superior watermanship. He was content to allow Towns to take the lead in the early stages of the race, though just after completing the mile, when the Australian, who had got clear, came over to "wash" him, he showed such a burst of speed that Towns had to get back quickly into his own water to avoid losing the race on a foul.

The most interesting part of the struggle was when two miles had been covered. Then the Englishman had drawn up nearly level, but the Colonial shot away again in such a style that the race appeared to be all over. Then, however, commenced a struggle stern and grim. Inch by inch the young Englishman gained his lost lead until at three miles it became a question as to which of the pair would crack first.

Towns' friends were still confident that he would outstay his opponent, but Barry, putting a tremendous amount of power into his work, gradually wore the Australian down. The latter fought out the issue to the finish, but his efforts were futile, Barry regained the title for England with a bit to spare, by a couple of lengths, in 21 minutes 12½ seconds—the fastest time by 32 seconds a race has ever been rowed in a championship match.

After the race the opinion was freely expressed that the old time interest in English sculling would be resuscitated. That this opinion was well founded is proved by an announcement in The Sportsman to the effect that one of its readers has placed in their hands the sum of £500 to be competed for by professional scullers at as early a date as can be arranged. The donor, whose idea is to revive and improve English sculling, has perceived that the way to do that is not merely to pit Englishmen against one another but to invite the world at large to meet them in friendly rivalry.

He has placed the sum mentioned with the popular London sporting journal to arrange matters, and The Sportsman is already engaged in appointing a strong and representative committee of influential men, and amateur and professional scullers to guide the affair to the success it is hoped and believed it will achieve.

It is little less than amazing what a change of front has taken place as regards professional sculling in the old country since 1831. From that date to 1875, a succession of British scullers extending from C. Campbell to J. Sadler defied all attempts to lower their prestige. Then came E. Trickett, the Australian, and the end of British supremacy. Not since his victory over Sadler in 1876 has any British sculler been hailed champion of the world.

Subsequent matches in England could decide no more than what began to be called the championship of England. From 1877 to 1879 British scullers alone held this minor title. In turn R. W. Boyd, J. Higgins and W. Elliot figured as champions of England and then came E. Hanlon, Canada, who not only revolutionised the art of sculling but made all the best Englishmen look like hacks by comparison. Of the remaining fifteen contests decided since 1882, up to date, eight have been won by Englishmen and seven by foreigners. Not since 1898, exactly ten years ago, has any Englishman figured as champion of his own country.

W. A. Barry (Putney), a brother of the present champion, was the last to do so. He beat Towns in 23mins. 23secs., but had to play second fiddle to the Australian a few months later when Towns covered the course in 24mins. 2secs. He also beat James Wray, another Australian, who is now coaching Harvard University, in 1900, since when he has remained unchallenged.

Sporting & Athletic Notes.

The First Extra Meeting on Saturday opened the Calcutta racing season of 1908-09, a season which bids fair to outrival by far all its predecessors in length, keenness of competition and also in number and quality of horses engaged. Mr. Rowland Leigh, a licensed handicapper under Jockey Club Rules in England is with us and at the Fourth Extra Meeting on 19th December we shall have the first taste of his quality, as two items other than terms races appear on the card.

Mr. R. Boteler, who was for many years Official Handicapper and lately Clerk of the Scales to the C. T. C., is now a stipendiary steward and we are glad to note that his invaluable services these many years have at length been officially recognised.

Other new and interesting features of the meeting were the use for the first time of the new five and six-furlong course and the latest thing in starting gates. Mr. Hutchison has got the course in tip top condition and very fast, as the times put up on Saturday, by no means first-class horses show. The new gate worked well, quickly and silently, and though there were some very bad starts on Saturday the blame rests entirely on the unschooled condition of the horses and none can attach either to the working of the machine or the skill of Mr. Bates. There are only two of this type of apparatus at present out here and they will be used for all the five and six-furlong events, the old gates standing at the other posts. Next season, however, if it continues to work well we are promised the new style of starter throughout.

There is nothing very interesting or exciting to record about Saturday's racing, though fields were better than seemed probable, as an unusually large proportion of horses left in went to the post; and there was one, two, three betting in every race except the Giant Pony Plate. It was not a good day for backers, as only two favorites got home and in the first race they did not even get a run for their money, as Lorraine, who was equally fancied with Naughty Boy, could be neither persuaded nor driven to the gate and eventually Mr. Bates very rightly despatched the field without her. Naughty Boy, who carried most money is a very big 14-1, but looked fat and short of work and the much smaller but compact and better trained Cheeky had no difficulty in disposing of him at the finish. This was the first score for the Bombay contingent, who, if they go on as they have begun, look likely to have a good time this year. They followed this up by winning the next race with Mr. Goculdas' Galloping Girl, the Maiden Horse Plate with Jiji's Master Theo and Cheeky scored a double by annexing the Welter Pony Plate, the last event on the card!

Eight started in the Beginners' Plate and Singleton was made favourite, though he is not much to look at. Not Yet had the appearance of being in the hardest condition of any of them, but Galloping Girl, who came into the paddock without her number cloth, looked a long way the best class animal among the lot. She has a good record as a maiden, for last year she ran second seven times out of seven runs! They were, however, all long distance races and they say that neither her trainer nor owner fancied her at all over the five furlongs. Waterman was quickest out of the gate, but Galloping Girl was soon alongside and took the lead almost at once followed by Not Yet, Capsicum, and Sacricomar. The last named came up fast from the distance and just beat Not Yet by half a length for second place but could not get up to Galloping Girl, who ran on well under the whip and won by one and a half lengths.

The Midget Pony Plate drew 10 starters, an exceptionally large number in this class. Eileen was a very hot favorite at 2 to 1. The Point and then Echo, (who used to run here as Gyrtle) and Evening Herald, a smart mare belonging to Mr. Goculdas, next most backed. The latter is a real good one of whom we shall probably hear more, as this was her first race and had she not run very green and gone very wide coming down the straight she might easily have turned her three-quarter length defeat by The Point into a win. Eileen, the favourite, was away in front, Echo, Coin II. and then The Point next. Evening Herald came on the outside as they turned into the straight and ran very wide but managed to overhaul all the others except The Point. The latter ran on and won by half a length. Echo was placed third and Pantomime fourth.

The Season's Maiden Horse Plate gave the first favourite's win of the day. Master Theo started at 2 to 1 on and on paper and appearance seemed to be an any [illegible] certainty. When they were all in the paddock [illegible] looked to be the only one that was likely to [illegible] Mr. Jiji's horse gallop and after they turned o[illegible] price rapidly shortened from 30 to 1 down to 8 to 1 which was the starting figure. Bobbie was backed to some extent probably because he is in Mr. Apcar's stable and ridden by Blades. Master Theo allowed Mauvette to lead for a couple of furlongs and then went away to the front and won as he pleased. Sue headed the others from half way down the straight. Good Friday had a go at her but was beaten off for third place by one and a half lengths at the finish, the distance being just too far for her. This mare, by the way, should be pretty good over five furlongs as she ran third at this distance at Epsom as a two-year-old carrying 8st. 9lb. when the winner's time was 59½secs. Good Friday finished three and a half lengths behind the first horse on that occasion.

The last two races were Welter Plates for horses and ponies respectively. The horse race was supposed to be a pretty good thing for Pincher, though they say that Mr. Galstaun fancied his own mount Lefterin. Morino was pretty certain to run well on her Lucknow form, but 12st. 11lb. appeared to be too great a weight for the little mare and a three-year-old at that. However she rose superior to her mighty burden and ran away with the race the whole way. Andros was nearest to her, but she could have won by a good deal more than the half length that was the verdict if she had wanted to. Lefterin began to come through from the home turn and ran into third place—the favourite Pincher a badly beaten fourth.

CHEEKY and Naughty Boy were both pulled out again to go in the Welter Pony Plate and this time the public had lots to go upon to make a favourite and they got there all right with the former, who was never headed from the time the gate went up and beat her competitors this time by four lengths. The race was of a very scrambling nature. Piccaninny kicked at everything within reach at the post and ran all over the course after they got going. She came up on the outside and was nearly kept out of her place by Lady Mana. However she just got passed her at the end and beat Bandy Leg for third place by a head.

AFTER the races were over Captain H. L. Fraser's Idle was put for sale by auction. Speculation was rife as to whether he could be secured by one of our local G. R.'s It was not to be, however, as though Mr. Butler bought him for Rs. 1,700 he resold him a few minutes later for Rs. 2,000 to Mr. Charrington, buying on behalf of Mr. W. T. Miles.

THE entries for next Saturday are not at all bad and as they include very few duplicates we are likely to see big fields go out. The totals are as follows :—Club Plate 18, Lilliputian Plate 12, Criterion Plate 18, Pony Plate 15, Juvenile Plate 14, Fraser Plate 21. The most interesting race is the Juvenile Plate in which several of The Trials horses are engaged, notably Ebullition, Currandooley, Sham Fight, Tangaroa, Retort, Stirabout and the much talked of Bull Dog and a great deal of curiosity is aroused in the running of these animals. The distances are all five and six furlongs except the Club Plate which is a mile. There are some fair animals engaged in this race, notably Sue, Sugar Apple, Galloping Girl II. and Prince Lyon.

WE have schooling to record this week both at Tollygunge and on the track ; five horses have been out steeplechasing : Look Out (Mr. Charrington), Seclusion (Alford), and Dea (P. Morrison) in one lot and Mr. Holmes' pair, Mystic Circle and Marmalade III. Seclusion showed herself as always a pearl among jumpers and Look Out also went well, but Dea did not show good form and finished up by landing in the water jump. Marmalade III. went if anything better than last season and Mystic Circle is also a fine lepper, but jumped very big.

Only three lots went out over the hurdles on Tuesday afternoon. Foy (McNeilage) and Dangar (Alford) slowly over a couple of flights. Cracker (Alf. Hoyt) escorted a chestnut from Penton's stable called Girard over 5 hurdles, but the latter shaped very badly and gave Morrison a rocky ride. The last pair were Maisonette (Mr. Barrow) and Pneumatic (Alford) who schooled well at about three-quarter pace for a mile. Maisonette, who is a bit unfit, tired a little at the end and hit the last fence a bit.

THERE are a lot more arrivals to chronicle since our last number and pretty well all the old familiar faces may be seen out on the course again. Messrs. Champion and Co., Charles Harding, and Basch represent the book-making contingent who are most often out of a morning and Mumford, Bleach, Penton, Thomas, Bond and Scott are the recent additions among the trainers. J. D. Scott is not expected down for some days yet and has nothing entered for Saturday. Bond is not going to ride this time, in consequence of the bad smash he had at Poona, and has definitely joined the ranks of trainers only. He has charge of Captains Bingham and Barrett's horses and I hope he will soon get quite a large stable together as he knows as much about "the steeplechase animal, its needs and wishes" as most of them. Bray, Whally, Sutton and Rickaby are the latest comers among the jockeys. The last named, who is one of the old brigade having ridden in the days of Fred Archer, is out here for the first time and will no doubt still be able to give a wrinkle to some of our younger generation.

THAT young handsome horse, Volume, who was such a disappointment last season, is very full of himself and managed to dispose of the native boy who was working him on Saturday, but they say he has not yet shown any signs of galloping in his Colonial form and it is about time he got there again if he is ever to do anything in India.

REALM is another one who has lamentably failed to come up to expectations and has now put a crowner on his troubles by going lame and finishing his chances for some time to come.

THE most interesting item of intelligence regarding the Cup horses this week is the absence of Fitzgrafton from the track both on Tuesday and Wednesday mornings and as a consequence he has receded to 4 to 1 or even in some quarters 9 to 2 in the books, at which price his stable companion Mallard is also finding good support. Long Tom is doing some swimming in addition to pace work on the track, but they have not risked galloping him as yet.

IN a week or so we shall be able to judge if Fitzgrafton is sound enough to get to the post. Meanwhile the betting on the Trials and Viceroy's Cup is almost nil. Both punters and bookmakers seem to fight shy of betting on the Cup. The only betting at present in the Trials is 3 to 1 Stirabout and 6 to 1 bar 1, and on the Viceroy's Cup 10,000 to 3,000 is offered on the field.

THE public generally do not seem to be aware of the fact that luncheons are available for non members of the Calcutta Turf Club each race day in the luncheon room of the Grand Stand. We would draw attention to Messrs. Kellner and Co.'s notice appearing further on.

THE annual general meeting of the Calcutta Paperchases will be held at Golightly Hall, 12, Russell Street, on the 5th December.

OUR Bombay correspondent writes :—Ernest Day has arrived with eight thoroughbreds, which are stabled at Colonel Anderson's quarters. Up to the time of their despatch they had been in work, and are consequently well landed and with the exception of the Missel Thrush colt, are absolutely sound and a taking lot. They are the property of Lord Westbury and Mr. Ronald Farquharson.

It is likely that some of them will have been sold by the time this is in print, as I have seen more than one likely buyer having a look round. The most taking of them in my mind is a bay filly, Sofka, Go Lightly—Isinglass. She is almost a chestnut, very kind looking and cut very much on the lines of Paldy's Darling. She was foaled in 1906.

Another good looking one is Only John, foaled in the same year, The Only One—Little John. He is a very big one with plenty of lung room and should be a stayer.

Solar System calls for notice, foaled in 1905, Haply—Apollo. He is a dark bay and won a 500-pounder at Sandown beating good sprinters, but should stay according to his build. Nanette is a taking little filly, foaled in 1905, Tatters—Lauriscope. As a two-year-old she won over 5 furlongs and a mile and three furlongs. She will measure and is not unlike Silphoe, who, I believe, was in the same stable.

Foursome, Zarabanda—Macintosh, foaled in 1906, should win races for whoever buys her. She has a great girth, a game eye and the cut of a stayer. The others are a bay colt foaled in 1906, Beatitude—Missel Thursh, a sprinter whose wind trouble would go with tubing. Cupidity, foaled in 1906, Galaxy—Cupid, is a sprinter of perfect temper and a maiden. Sir Colin foaled in 1905, Christobel—Sir Edgar, a big made one who won a £100 race over a mile and third in another in a field of 20 which was run in 1min. 37½secs. Barna, a bay filly foaled in 1906, Flying Raven—Suspender, beat the famous Cinder King in Ireland.

They are a lot not likely to go begging for long.

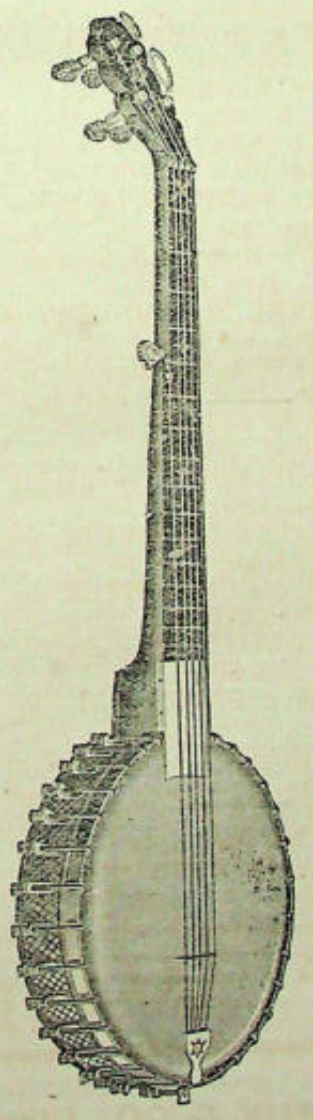
Our Poona correspondent writes :—Poona is just now enjoying a sort of second season, and amongst the festivities this week has been a most interesting regatta organised by Captain Paris. General and Mrs. Alderson were present at the Connaught Boat Club and five events were gone through, heats having been rowed previously.

First was the final of the pairs in which Moir and Captain Noake with Mrs. Smales cox beat the one composed of Purser, Captain Astley and Miss Humphries easily, over the quarter mile. A better race was seen in the Double Sculls for Ladies, the competitors being Mrs. Jackson and Mrs. Wilson with Captain Webster cox, and the Misses Hitchens with Williams cox. The latter boat led first but at the finish the others came with a burst and won by half a length.

The most interesting race of the day was the eights between Poona and Kirkee who were represented by :—Poona—Fanshaw, Powell, Moir, Cruickshank, Wilson, Layard, Noake, another and Mrs. Fanshaw cox. Kirkee—Major Leslie, Carlisle, Shute, Purser, Bonvet Atlay, Twiss, Paris and Mrs. Leslie cox. Poona led to half way when Kirkee drew level and in a great finish won by two feet. Finally the Log Race in which Captain Webster beat Captain Layard, they having to swim to logs and paddle them the remaining half distance.

OUR London Correspondent writes :—"Want of time prevents me dealing with the Ladies' Kennel Association Show this week ; I shall tell your readers something about it anon. It was a success and its outstanding (and to me most satisfactory feature) was the marked decline in the exhibits of toy dogs ; they seem to be going out of fashion.

At the last show 130 Pekingese were exhibited, but only eighty-one appeared in the cages at this show. Pomeranians only numbered forty-seven, and toy spaniels thirty-eight against many scores formerly.



The greatest decline was in the black and tan class, in which there were two exhibits compared with fifty-two last time.

Dachshunds were entered in larger numbers, and Japanese were also stronger, but the most noticeable improvement was in the larger dogs. Ten Great Danes and seventeen collies were exhibited. There were only two in each class last year. The terriers were numerous and distinctly classy.

I am inclined to think this show marks the advent of that smart little chap, the Australian terrier. The dog was imported from Australia a few years ago, but is as yet undistributed and very little known. But the stock in the country is now becoming considerable, and the demand much greater than the supply. The excellent class at the Northampton Institute yesterday will probably mark the regular appearance of the variety at the greater shows. It will not be the first time that ladies have been pioneers of new and popular dogs. The dog is almost always black and sandy in colour, the lighter patches being on the feet and face. The eyes give the impression of a black ring. It is small—about 10lb.—rough-haired, with very short legs, and equals or excels all known terriers in its capacity for killing rats with a single nip. There is little doubt that it will have a considerable vogue, and there is no question of its qualities being fixed and distinct and in every way typical of a terrier's breeding and pluck. It is also a most vigilant watch-dog.

We have been expecting it for some time; now it has come—the invasion of the running track by women. Female competition has existed for some time in most branches of sport—tennis, hockey, badminton, rowing, walking, and even polo. But till lately the "spare rib" hasn't tried conclusions with the Lord of Creation on the cinder path. Now she has arrived on the scene in the person of a Miss Ida Browne, of Bossington, near Parlock, who has for some time held a local reputation as a cyclist, walker, and follower of staghounds on foot. On the 8th November she took part in the 9½ miles Marathon race at Minehead and ran well up: she might have done better but for a sprained foot. She is of Scotch extraction and claims to be descended from the Doones who, in the seventeenth century, went into exile on Exmoor and provided Black with the materials for his famous novel "Lorna Doone." Be this as it may, Miss B. is certainly a stayer and has considerable dash of foot as well. We wonder if, at the next A.A.A. Championships any young women will figure among the entrants!

A case of revolting cruelty to a horse was decided last month at Lorient, in France, against a cinematograph company which has made a speciality of reproducing dramatic scenes. The company accepted for production a scenario which included an episode of a runaway horse throwing itself over a precipice, and some employés of the company were instructed to obtain pictures of such a scene. The men harnessed a horse to a light cart, drove it towards the edge of a cliff 300 feet high, and then flogged the animal until it dashed off in terror and threw itself over the cliff, while an operator cinematographed the scene! The photographer was acquitted, but the others concerned were fined 12*s.* each, that being the maximum penalty under French law for cruelty to animals!!

The Wilkinson Sword Co., Pall Mall, London, have been favoured by His Majesty the King with the order for the English Admiral's sword which His Majesty is presenting to the King of Sweden.

The Polo Tournament for the Cooper Allen Cup opened at Cawnpore on the 28th November when the 9th Hodson's Horse beat the 30th Lancers by 3 goals to 1. 30th Lancers: Walker, 1; Harbord, 2; Raymond, 3; Nath Singh, back. 9th Hodson's Horse: Vigors, 1; Fraser, 2; Rowcroft, 3; Atkinson, back. The same day two teams who have entered from Lucknow played off their tie at that city, the Durham L. I. represented by Captain Mathews, Mr. Turner, Major Luard and Captain Wallace back beating S. Batty R. H. A. represented by Captain Elliot, Messrs. Spencer Smith, Webber and Sanderson back by 6 goals to 1.

The Lucknow Polo Tournament for the Cup presented by the Royal Dragoons concluded on the 26th ultimo, when the 17th Lancers beat the Royal Dragoons in the final by 10 goals to 3.

Among the polo players who will probably take part in the Calcutta tournaments this winter will be Count Jean de Madre, a well-known performer in England, and General Pretum Singh, of Patiala fame.

The Annual General Meeting of the Calcutta Cricket Club was held at the Calcutta Turf Club, on Friday evening, the Hon. Mr. A. A. Apcar presiding. The accounts were passed and the following officers were elected for the season: President, The Hon. Mr. A. A. Apcar; Vice-President, Mr. C. P. Beachcroft; Captain, Mr. F. H. Stewart; Vice-Captain, Mr. S. C. B. Lee. Committee: The Hon. Mr. A. A. Apcar, C. P. Beachcroft, F. H. Stewart, H. V. Low, O. Turnbull and C. M. Pope. Honorary Secretary, Mr. C. M. Pope.

The local cricket matches at the week end have produced another crop of centuries. M. Quiterio, playing for the Customs vs. Calcutta scored 106, his third century this season. In the match Nattore's XI vs. Kumartoli, I. C. Purshotam and N. R. Mehta were not out 125 and 102, respectively, for Nattore. F. N. Reynolds made 113 not out for the Y.M.C.A. vs. the Bengal-Nagpur Railway on Saturday.

The Madras Cricket Club propose to hold an athletic meeting at Chepauk on the 18th, 19th and 20th February next. The following is the programme of events:—

100 Yards open, first prize Rs. 100 and second prize Rs. 50; Quarter Mile open, first prize Rs. 100 and second prize Rs. 50; 100 Yards, 120 Yards Hurdles, Quarter Mile, Half Mile, Half Mile Steeplechase, first and second prizes each Silver Cups; 220 Yards Handicap, first, second and third prizes Silver Cups; High Jump, Long Jump, Putting the Weight, Throwing the Cricket Ball, first prizes Silver Cups. The first two events are open to all comers. The 220 Yards Handicap is open only to members of the Madras Cricket Club. All other events are open to Officers of Regimental Messes, members of the 'Varsity and Public Schools and European Amateurs of any recognised Gymkhana Club. Entries close with the Honorary Secretary on Monday, 8th February, 1909.

Hayes, who won the Marathon Race at the stadium this year, and Dorando Pietri, the hero of the race, met in a specially arranged Marathon Race at Madison Gardens, New York, last Wednesday; the distance was 42 kilometres and a prize of 500 dollars was offered. We learn from Reuter that Dorando led all the way and beat Hayes at the finish by sixty yards. The result will be received with satisfaction, for it is matter of general opinion that Dorando, had he been left to himself, would have managed to crawl in first in the memorable race at the Olympic Games in July.

At a meeting of the Bengal Hockey Association held at the Y.M.C.A. building on Monday evening the following Council was elected.—

President: Mr. T. Thornhill. Vice-Presidents: Messrs. T. H. Richardson and P. R. Cadell. Council (1) Mr. E. Studd; (2) Mr. H. McGee; (3) Lieut. R. N. Bocquet; (4) Lieut. E. K. Twiss; (5) Mr. P. Clubs; (12) vacant Divisional Association; and (13) vacant Calcutta Referees' Association. Honorary Secretary: Mr. N. R. Bhattacharjee, 19, British Indian Street, and Honorary Treasurer: Mr. A. B. Rosser, 101, Clive Street.

We have to thank Messrs. Murray and Company, Limited, Lucknow, for a copy of the 108th edition of their catalogue which is one of the most complete general lists we have seen. A glance at its contents show us that practically everything connected with the household, including wines and provisions is listed, while most of our readers would find much to interest them in the departments devoted to travelling and camp requisites, sporting and athletic gear, harness, and saddlery. We congratulate this popular firm on an excellent a catalogue.

A telegram from Melbourne states that Australia has won the Davis Cup at Lawn Tennis, defeating America.

The Aga Khan Hockey Tournament at Poona was won by the Northamptons, who beat the Officers of the Indian Army by 3 goals to 1 in the final game on Tuesday last.

It is with much pleasure that one is able to draw attention to a very notable revival in sporting matters in Lucknow. Recently a Lucknow Football League was formed to play for a Cup generously presented by Kunwar Maharaj Singh, of Kapurthala, and now steps have been taken for starting a Lucknow Athletic Club. The Government on the recommendation of the Deputy Commissioner, Mr. L. M. Jopling, I.C.S., who has joined the Club as a member, has given a piece of ground in a central portion of the city, on which it is proposed to erect a pavilion with a few rooms for the use of members. Subsequently when the Canning College is removed to its new location, it is intended to apply to the Government for quarters in the present College and for the use of the fine College grounds. The proposed Club has met with hearty support on the part of the Talukdars of Oudh. That keen sportsman the Maharaja of Balrampur has given Rs. 2,000 and a sum of Rs. 1,000 each has been received from the Rajas of Mahmudabad and Jehangirabad, so that there should be little difficulty in raising the Rs. 15,000 required. Incidentally the new Athletic Club should have a powerful effect in improving the relations between Europeans and Indians.

London Week by Week.

London, Friday, 13th October 1908.

On the 9th instant, Monday, we celebrated two important events—the Lord Mayor's Show and the King's Birthday. It was a perfect day, sunny, dry and bracing, and the time honoured show, in which Sir George Wyatt Truscott in his gilt and painted coach, played the principal part, was in many respects more successful than most of recent years. The populace turned out in strength and smiled appreciatively on the richly dressed pageant, but there was no cheering, hardly a hand or a voice was raised, it was a more stolid crowd than I remember ever to have seen in India where the peoples usually assist at their tamashas with Oriental solemnity. Perhaps the large leaven of the unemployed noticeable in the crowds in a great measure accounted for this: to the hungry and homeless the sight of so much "fat capon-lined" humanity processhing in rich apparel is not calculated to raise much enthusiasm. In respect of the items embracing the Military, the Volunteers, the City Guilds, the business men's section, etc., the programme was much as usual, but the pageant part of it was novel and uncommonly good. It was a happy idea of the Lord Mayor's to invite the great authors of the Chaucer to Milton period to revisit London. The Canterbury Pilgrims—monk, friar, parson, shipman and the rest of the Chaucerian tale-tellers—were on hand; Caxton and a model of his press with attendant press men were there; scores of Shakesperian characters, all mounted, were on view; and so were the old time musicians. They were all correctly made up and made a magnificent blaze of colour and altogether artistic and interesting spectacle.

His Majesty spent his birthday at Sandringham, his day's programme including a look in at the meet of the hounds at Gayton Hall, Lord Romney's place. The streets in the West End were gay with bunting by day and bright with special illuminations by night. A perusal of the Birthday Honours list published on Monday does not disclose any item of special interest to India, save the K. C. B. to Lieutenant-General J. H. Woodhouse, now Governor of Bermuda, who saw service in Afghanistan. But, though the list contains no new peerages and only six new baronets and is withal shorter than usual, it is not without interest. Sir Edward Clarke becomes a member of the Privy Council by the kindly courtesy of his political opponents, and justice is thus done to his great forensic talent. The claims of science are acknowledged in the person of Mr. J. J. Thomson, whose work in determining the weight and nature of the electron has won him world-wide fame. Art is represented by that admirable sculptor Mr. G. J. Frampton, and medicine by Sir George Critchett, Mr. Jonathan Hutchinson, and Mr. Oliver. Admira Eardley-Wilmot is the only member of the Services who figures in the list, but his work at the Admiralty has amply justified this special distinction. There are many names present which serve to remind the public that in the modern British State a career is open to all with talent, and that all men can attain honour by their own efforts.

Once more the Suffragettes! Last Saturday they organised a weird parade through London streets: it was a beautifully laid scheme, but the police outwitted them very neatly. A gang of these released nuisances tricked themselves out in prison garb and marched to Holloway Jail with banners waving, brass bands braying and tag-rag and bobtail cheering or jeering in about equal volume. The intention was to march round the jail screaming encouragement to their sister offenders inside—those who were imprisoned last week—but they failed. All went well till they approached the jail when heartless bobbies, mounted and foot, switched them off into a side street and though they certainly executed the Walls of Jericho manœuvre, they were kept well out of ear shot of the jail which was but momentarily visible "through the' ouses in between." Meanwhile the brass instrument churned out the Marseillaise incessantly, though "Waltz me around again Willie" would have been far more appropriate. After a couple of circuits the discomfited ones gave up the attempt and retired amidst derisive cheering and much merriment on the part of the jail officers off duty, who, of course, looked on from the portals of Holloway Castle.

Mr. Punch is once more in trouble on the Continent, this time he has been confiscated in Austria because of Mr. Bernard Partridge's cartoon showing the Emperor as a hound in pursuit of the Sultan who is a hare. The German Emperor, dressed as a huntsman, is running with the hound, and in an aside assuring the hare that he is not doing it to hunt him, but just to save the Austrian Emperor from feeling lonely. But, of course, most of your readers have seen the picture. This constitutes lèse majesté. Trouble of this kind occurred during the Russo-Japanese war when the blacking brush was used on copies of Punch posted either to Russian subscribers or British residents. In 1843 Punch was kept out of France because of his cartoons on Louis Philippe. When the ban had been removed an article and a sketch by Thackeray revived it. The article, a skit on the King's parsimony, offered to open a subscription for him. Again his hostility to Napoleon III. was countered by the tearing out of the cartoons objected to.

But the most memorable case of exclusion was that of March 1892, when the German Emperor's wrath was aroused by a Sambourne cartoon, called "The Modern Alexander's Feast; or, the Power of Sound." The Emperor was forcing the Army Bill on the Reichstag, and Punch's candid references to his oratorical indiscretions annoyed the monarch greatly. For nearly forty years the paper had been taken at the German palaces, and it was said then that the Emperor William struck it off the list and forbade any member of the family to read it. But it was shortly afterwards restored to favour, and no foreign Court has since confiscated it until the Austrian incident just reported.

The Cullinan diamond, valued at £300,000, the gift of the Transvaal to the King, has been cut, polished and transformed in Amsterdam, and is again in London: it was formally presented to his Majesty on his birthday last Monday. Since the gem passed out of the custody of Scotland Yard in January it has been the object of ceaseless vigilance.

No fewer than seven detectives accompanied the representative of the Asscher firm (responsible for the cutting of the stone) from Amsterdam. On board the steamer the state cabin was allotted to the party, the members of which kept the closest guard possible. Upon arrival in London it was at once deposited in a place of safe keeping, and watched night and day until it was handed over to his Majesty. Only then did the responsibility of Messrs. Asscher cease. Doubtless these precautions were imperative, but the incident recalls the anecdote of the famous Kohinoor diamond which, wrapped in cotton wool, once reposed in a small tin box on an Indian Viceroy's dressing table and was put away by an old bearer who produced it on demand wondering at the Viceregal anxiety over this "chota tukra gilas!" But that was long ago. The Indian domestic of the old school is extinct and honesty is certainly not the strong point of his degenerate successor.

The fashion among many present day dramatists seems to be to dispense with a plot for their pieces. "Dolly Reforming Herself," by Mr. Arthur Henry Jones, is yet another example of this. It was produced at the Haymarket last week end and, though innocent of any real story or outstanding situation, it is so brilliantly written and so capitally acted that it kept a big audience in a state of continuous delight. The author has written one act which, while being really quite apart from the development—such as it is—of the play, is filled with such sparkling comedy as to go far towards making the whole piece a success. The third act, in short, is good enough to carry triumphantly the three remaining acts, which are little more than amusing and interesting. At bottom it is simply a stormy interview between husband and wife over the latter's bills—simply a domestic row, with the wife trying tears and endearments to wriggle out of an awkward corner. Mr. Jones has written the scene with rare humour, and a perfect sense of character. The idea is this as the result of a stirring sermon, several people make New Year resolutions. Henry Telfer resolves to abstain from swear words. His wife resolves to run no more into debt. And Captain Wentworth, notorious for his affairs with women, resolves to flirt no more. How each of them fail in their object makes the play. Captain Wentworth continues to make love to Mrs. Sturgess, the wife of a wearisome professor, whose pet theory is that the grey matter in the human brain makes free will impossible. But the affair makes no progress. Mr. Telfer makes a mountain out of what is really a molehill, and although the last act is supposed to take place a year after the first, the situation is very much the same as in the beginning. To Miss Ethel Irving falls a chance of showing her ability and, in a word, she is perfect. As the husband Mr. Robert Loraine was admirably suited with a congenial part; Miss Margaret Halstan, Messrs. Lowne, Chas. Maude and Lyall Swete had principal parts and filled them well.

Mr. Charles Fry, whose productions without stage scenery are always attractive to Shakspeare-lovers, inaugurated his fourteenth season this week with a matinée performance at the Court of "Cymbeline." Miss Olive Kennett took the part of Imogen. An audience of 10,000 enthusiastic admirers thronged the Albert Hall on Satuday to hear Madame Melba for the last time before her departure for the New York opera season, and an extended tour in Australia. The famous singer, who was in magnificent voice, had an overwhelming reception.

"The King's Hard Bargain," at the Court Theatre, is a crude one-act play and some of its parts are inadequately filled; but it does not fail to make an extraordinary impression and it is an undoubted triumph for Mr. Louis Calvert. It is written by Major W. P. Drury, part author of "The Flag Lieutenant;" he was an officer in the Marines and knowing well the manner of men who go down to the sea in ships, he shows them to us in his plays. In the little piece we see four unfortunate sailors fastened up, by accident, in a watertight compartment of a battleship that has been rammed and is sinking, without the faintest hope of any of those trapped creatures escaping. The "hard bargain" shows there an example of fortitude that saves at least his character. In the scenes that precede and follow the disaster we see that the fellow has a girl waiting for him at home. We learn, too, that he has a comrade with whom some unaccountable telepathy has existed, and we see that comrade, ashore, awaken—with all its awful horror expressed on his face—from a dream in which he saw the four men slowly dying in the dark iron prison at the bottom of the sea. The suggestions of mystery, of horror, of silent terror in the staring eyes and open mouth of the man who had had the vision were wonderful. Mr. Calvert is a really great actor.

"Indian gentlemen," as the papers describe them, have been figuring in print this week. Mr. Vincent Kitabji Khan (a Parsee) was last Saturday fined £15 at Woking for exceeding the motor-car speed limit: Mr. Victor Theodore Massey (a Bengali) has just been neatly swindled out of £350 by a variation of the moss grown confidence trick.

Our Aryan brother seems partial to these ludicrous aliases. Vincent Kitabji Khan, and Victor Theodore Massey are distinctly good, but not quite so precious as "Charlie" Bannerji who is numbered among the friends of a man I know in the City. The Bengali student in London is not quite so often an Indian prince as he used to be, he now aspires to the exclusiveness of Bohemia, haunts the cheap pubs, restaurants and music halls, rejects the top hat and frock coat of other days in favour of apparel distinctly sporting in style, whistles "Put me among the girls," and to those who know him on his native heath, he grows more bewilderingly interesting every day. The Bohemian Bannerji's ancestral bustee, I hear, is somewhere in Hatkola. I wonder what my city friend would think of "Charlie's" parental menage if he could but drop in on the family about Doorga Pooja time!

You will remember the O'Brien-Roche case in which that impetuous cricketer, Sir T. C. O'Brien, was charged by the Hon'ble Alexis Roche with slander in that Sir Timothy had called him a liar, thief and a swindler. The defendant attempted to interfere with a juror, by declaring that he would rather have a verdict of a farthing damages than a disagreement: he was charged with contempt of court and has just been fined £300, a result in which he has the sympathy of hundreds of friends.

Clubland was fluttered last week when in the course of the discussion on the Licensing Bill the clause regarding police inspection of clubs came before the House of Commons. The provision in the Bill is that "Any chief constable of police and any inspector or superintendent of police or officer of the like or superior rank, specially authorised for the purpose by the chief constable, but not in uniform, shall have power at any time to enter and inspect the premises of any club." Some breezy speeches were delivered, especially one by J. Ward, the gigantic ex-navvy, who, from the Labour benches, declared that everyone knew "it would be only the working men's club that would be inspected;" the clause was carried by 205 votes to 86.

And talking of clubs I must mention the latest, the Hobby Club, where one can be assured that many strange people and many strange ideas will meet. Viscount Molesworth and the Hon'ble George Scott have hit upon this novel idea. Assisted by an influential committee, they are negotiating for splendidly equipped premises in the West End of London as a home for the new Club. Men will be admitted as members; women as associates. All must have hobbies, and so far as the club is concerned they must be amateurs. The club will cater for hobbies in Science, Travel, Art, Sport, Curio-collecting, Psychical research, Carving, Metal work, Photography, Gardening, Book-collecting, China, and Objects d'art, and the recreations generally of busy men and women of position.

Nothing will be too important or too insignificant, too heavy or too light for study, interest, and debate; from old pewter to modern silver, from picture postcards to the oldest masterpieces, from the modern pianola to the ancient harp, from stamps to astronomy, from earthenware to rarest china, from humble daisies to the choicest exotic, from artificial séances to genuine psychical research.

An extensive library will be formed on all subjects. Intellectual salons will be held, at which men or women of similar tastes may confer and aid each other. Experts will be engaged to lecture and give advice. There will be a department where members and associates may sell, buy, or exchange their objets d'art.

WITH HAWKS AND HOUNDS IN INDIA.

IT is not often that one has the pleasure of following both hawks and hounds on one and the same day in this "Land of Regrets" and hope rose high, when six of us assembled, early one morning, to try our luck. Most of the country we were to beat over was under wheat, but here and there one came upon long stretches of barren sandy soil, with small bushes and sand hills, the haunts of gazelle and "houbara" bustard or even an occasional hare or fox, and then again a village tank or flooded field, frequently visited by duck and teal. We started well prepared for anything that might show itself from a gazelle to a teal. R's long dogs, Oko, Fly and Shea being held in readiness for the wily Chinkara (gazelle), a skulking jackal or fox, while I had out a pair of "Hodgson's Hawk Eagles" and a cast of peregrines; the former for hare and the latter for bustard, duck or teal.

It was a cloudy day, but that was just as well as the glare otherwise would have been well nigh unbearable. The six of us rode along in extended order, R. being on the extreme left, with the dogs, and next to him W., then G., next him P., then Mrs. W., and on the right of the line myself, with falconers, syces, a camel sowar with our breakfast and others filling in the gaps. We had covered a good deal of country without turning out a single quarry for either hawks or hounds and the order of the line was being broken and we ourselves getting slack, when three gazelles were suddenly viewed, moving through the fields at a great pace, a fine buck, a doe and a well-grown fawn. The hounds were at once slipped and away we went, but the gazelle had the lead and meant to keep it, but the soft ground was all against them, though the crops greatly in their favour, to hide them from the hounds and the only way we could keep the latter straight on the tracks was by hallooing them on and riding hard ahead ourselves.

We from our elevated positions on horseback could easily watch the little heads bobbing up and down over the wheat and were gaining rapidly when suddenly, the old buck stopped short, looked round and dashed away at right angles, bounding high into the air, as he sped. The hounds could now see him and changed their original course to follow him, leaving the doe and fawn to go their own way.

The wheat hindered the buck's progress not a little and the soft ground was holding him back, while we gained on him at every stride and seeing us catching up, he gave up "lepping" and began zig-zagging from side to side quite bamboozling the dogs, till coming to the edge of the fields he got on to hard ground and simply shot away, clearing a canal cutting at one bound and was a speck in the distance before the hounds were fairly out of the fields.

Having given both dogs and horses a rest, we again sallied forth beating every inch of cover we came to, in a long stretch of sandy ground with fields on either side and which afforded lovely cover for hares. However, nothing showed up till approaching a village, three duck were seen to drop in a bit of water, surrounded by bushes.

Both peregrines were unhooded and slipped and the young bird "Parachute" at once began ringing and found her pitch high above the pool, while the haggard at no time good at "waiting on" circled about some 50 yards over our heads. We rode up towards the duck, but they preferred to dodge about among the bushes to trusting to their wings, and finally had to be regularly hustled out of the bushes and made to fly. As they rose, down came "Parachute" like a ball from the heavens and struck the leading duck, a stunning blow, to earth but did not bind and while she made her point, the haggard "Vesta," who had unfortunately seen the mallard fall, though some distance away at the time came down and both falcons bound to the same bird, while the two remaining ducks made good their escape. So far we had not seen much fun, but anyway we had got a beginning and after all, the good country had only just been reached. The cook and camel sowar with the breakfast had gone on to select a nice place and prepare food and drink and as we were all getting ready by now to set to on anything in the eating line, we made tracks in the direction of the village, beating through several sugarcane fields en route in hopes of turning out a fox or a jack but none were at home to-day. We were not sorry to spot the old camel some distance off, with a white sheet spread over a bed, to do duty for a table, procured from a neighbouring village and other beds on either side to act for chairs.

While breakfast was being got ready I saw some sand grouse settle not far off, so took my gun and managed to get in a left and right as they got up and accounted for two. None of us needed a second bidding to tackle the good things the cook set before us, while Mrs. W. excelled herself in producing the most fragrant cups of tea, which was in great demand.

The dogs and horses also were given a small feed and after a rest and a smoke we again formed a line and beat over some more country including a succession of sugarcane fields, which the villagers informed us were a sure find for at least a couple of foxes, but, alas! yielded nothing more startling than a few reed warblers. Tracks of gazelle were, however, plentiful and we made sure of a run across a long stretch of open country, visible about a mile further on, so made for it and on the way there I added three more sandgrouse to the bag.

As we emerged from the cultivation a buck chink was spotted trotting along unconcernedly away from us, and some distance beyond him was to be seen a small herd of about eight, looking eagerly in our direction. Every now and again a doe would stamp her foot, wag her tail and go off in a succession of long graceful bounds and then again stand to have another look. The deer were still a good 300 yards ahead, but thoroughly roused and so it would be useless for us to attempt to get any nearer and as the hounds had viewed them, they were slipped while we walked slowly forward to let them get well away. The gazelle still gazed as if fascinated by the sight of the approaching hounds and loth to move, but finally when only a hundred yards separated dogs from deer, the latter started off with their usual bounds followed by a long trot, then some more bounds till the dogs began to get too near to be comfortable. Fly and Shea were both English greyhounds, the former a regular flier and the latter not so speedy but a better stayer, while Oko was a cross between an English greyhound and a Scotch deer hound. Though by no means a sluggard he was not in the same street for speed with Fly, but a marvellous stayer and simply indefatigable.

Fly waltzed away from the other two to begin with, and as she approached the herd, two buck broke away at right angles and gradually drew away, straight for where Mrs. W. and I were standing. The turn gave Shea and Oko an opening for a short cut and next instant all three dogs were running neck and neck and the deer some 50 yards ahead going quite at ease yet. Mrs. W. and I tried to head them back again, but they seemingly preferred rushing past us, to going back on the hounds. As they dashed past, Mrs. W. and I separated and got the hounds in between us, Fly having again taken the lead and away we went for all we were worth. Far ahead of us, could be seen a long stretch of wet ground, a slight overflow from a canal cutting and beyond that fields in which the wheat was only about a foot high. The "Chink" made straight for this and if we could only keep them straight, a kill would be almost a certainty, but could we? At the end of another mile positions had somewhat altered and Oko was now doing the running with Shea close behind; Mrs. W. and I still on either side of the two dogs, she on the right and I on the left, as we were now very nearly going back on the same line we had come before spotting the herd. When approaching the water, the gazelle showed signs of uneasiness and began to zig zag a little, so I yelled across to Mrs. W. to keep them from breaking away to our right, while I did the same to keep them off my left. All went well till we were within 20 yards of the wet mud, when the leading buck swerved to the left and in spite of all my howling and shouting and waving of arms, he dashed past within a few yards of my horse's nose, closely followed by the other one. This turn again gave the dogs another short cut, but they were rather too near the buck at the time to gain much by it. However, every few yards counted and away we all went again, edging back now into the original direction, whence the dogs had separated them from the herd. W. R. and G., who had been considerably handicapped by being at the other end of the line when the chase began and were consequently left far behind, now got their chance, for they were practically in front of the deer and looked as though they would head the "Chink" back on Mrs. W. and myself again, but the deer saw their danger ahead and again jinked to the right. So far, though we had covered a good bit of country, the various twists and turns had brought us back and forward almost over the same ground and we were within a few hundred yards still whence we had started. Fly and Shea showed signs of distress, particularly the former, but Oko still went strong, his long easy stride carrying him along without any apparent exertion.

The "Chink" too were none too easy in their minds and had long ago given up bounding, and had settled down to business, and the larger buck was beginning to show an inch or two of tongue.

We were on ideal ground for a gallop and now that the bucks' last right angle turn, had got them well with their backs to our line, there was nothing to stop them, and a good straight run into the jungle or fields miles ahead would be the finish. Here an unfortunate contre-temps spoiled everything. A skittish little doe, which had detached itself from the herd, came springing and "lepping" down from one side and seeing her husband perhaps and brother joined them, but finding them rather too slow for her taste and rather too closely pursued to be agreeable, bounded away to a side and kept on "lepping" high into the air and took Oko off the old buck and after her. We tried to call him back, but she was too tempting and near to leave alone and away he went after her.

Fly and Shea were now practically useless by themselves and every yard added to their distress. No longer was Fly a beautiful picture, every muscle straining and her back heading and unbending in graceful curves as she appeared to skim over the ground. A heavy lumbering canter with head down and mouth wide open, more of a staggering stumbling lollop than anything else. A collection of rather dense brushwood a little further on and the gazelle were "lost to view and hunters' ken," and though we followed for a couple of hundred yards further, no signs could we see, so pulled up and whistled up the dogs to give them a breather, and a few minutes later R. turned up with Oko who had evidently found the fresh doe too much for him and returned to the old trail. In the meantime, W., who had still kept well away on the left was now seen to gallop off on his own, away into some fields about 400 yards away, then come round towards us, describing a semi circle and as he came nearer, he waved and pointed in front of him. He was evidently bringing something back before him, but just there the crop was rather high and we looked in vain for sometime. But suddenly a pair of heads were seen bobbing above the wheat, and shortly after the same two buck again appeared in the open. The few minutes rest had done wonders for both dogs and horses and as the "Chink" showed up in the open Fly sighted them and was off like an arrow, closely followed by the other two dogs, Mrs. W., R., and myself. A terrific spurt brought Fly within 20 yards of the gazelle, but her former run had told and she visibly slackened off, and Oko once more shot forward and took up the running. Both the gazelle seemed very nearly, if not quite, as done up as were the dogs, and it seemed only a question of time now, and Oko we could rely on for staying a good while yet, but would he tackle alone was the question. We were once again heading for the same place we had first started the herd from. The "Chink" would break away at a tremendous pace for a few yards and then subside into a long trot and as the dogs overhauled them away they would go again, but both were showing a good deal of tongue and other signs of distress. Fly and Shea were both beginning to lag hopelessly and we noticed that whenever Oko got near the deer, he looked back for the other two, which did not look well for his tackling. Mrs. W. and myself appeared to be the two best mounted, so we kept near Oko and hallooed him on. The "Chink" were making straight for a line of fields directly in front of us, with Oko and ourselves on either side of the dog, not more than 20 yards or so behind, and Fly and Shea some 15 yards behind us again.

Would the deer take to the crops or not? If they do, they are done for at once, and if not, well it remains to be seen if in their present condition they could outstay Oko.

Up to the very edge of the field they went and at the very last second one changed his mind and shot off at right angles, running along a small drain on the edge of the field. Fly and Shea seemingly both took in the situation and the former put her last and very all into that final spurt, skimming along the base of a triangle of which the "Chink and Oko had covered two sides. I thought the "Chink's" last race was run and expected every second to see Fly run into him, step by step she gained, cutting across the buck's front till hardly three paces separated them, but dame fortune favoured the game little beast and he just forged ahead before Fly caught up his line and a small canal cutting a couple of yards beyond, did the rest for him as he was just able to clear it, while the dog had shot her bolt and now followed limply behind. Fly and Shea were both absolutely done, but Oko still had a little left in him, and while I wondered to myself whether I should gallop round and turn the deer, or let him go, after giving us such a splendid run, I saw him put on a final sprint and join two or three others that had turned up from goodness knows where, and as they went off together, we called off the dogs who were now nothing loth to stop. We found ourselves quite near where we had breakfasted, and while Mrs. W. who alone was up at the finish, held my horse, not that he required much holding, I got off and bathed the hounds' heads and mouths in a pool of water close by.

So ended one of the finest runs, if not quite the longest, it has ever been my good fortune to join in and as we rested both animals and ourselves and waited for the rest of the party to come up, one of my falconers, who had watched most of the proceedings from the breakfast place, where they had been left, informed me that we had flushed two houbara in our mad career after the buck and he had marked them down where they had settled. In the excitement we had quite forgotten the second buck, which had gone into the fields, but were told by some villagers later, that he had gone only a few yards and lain down in the field and they very nearly knocked him over the head with sticks, but fortunately he too escaped, to afford us another such run on some future day.

What actual distance we had covered would be impossible to judge, but it could not have been much under 10 miles, and the pace was, to say the least of it, brisk throughout and only one short check of about five minutes, if that.

Sending the dogs home, we went off after the houbara, but they had evidently run a long way after settling, for we never flushed them again, and as a couple of village tanks, were more or less on our way home, we decided to try for duck or teal.

On the first we found nothing, but the second produced a solitary teal. "Parachute" was again slipped and up she went to "wait on" a speck in the air, but to get the teal to leave the water was by no means an easy matter. A lot of village urchins came out to see the fun and as soon as they understood what we were driving at, joined in the fun with zest, and the wretched teal was bombarded from all sides by stones and earth, but nothing on earth would make it quit the security of the water, while the falcon sailed overhead.

The latter soon began to tire of circling aimlessly round and round so filled in time, by shooting at crows every now and again which promptly made for the village and either flew in through open doorways or among cattle, tethered to the walls of the village. A paddy bird, that had been lying low, thought he saw a good chance of getting away from the tank, while the peregrine was busy with crows, but as he rose, his white wings attracted the keen eyes of the falcon and she was after him in no time, and he just escaped by reaching a babul tree in time and simply hurling himself into the midst of the branches regardless of thorns and branches alike.

The teal did finally rise from the water, when the peregrine was taking a long circuit of the village and was a good way from the tank and so made good its escape.

A canter home was the next part of the programme and we all got back after our long and hard day's outing, thoroughly pleased with ourselves and everything in general, even though the actual bag was very small, to go over the day's events, between the whiffs our of after-dinner cigars and in our dreams that night.

TALKS BY THE WATERSIDE.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE INDIAN FIELD."

SIR,—One of the greatest joys of fishing is that there s always something fresh to learn. Even the old angler who fancies he knows a thing or two, will find himself well repaid, if he will be at the trouble of making friends with the local fishermen, and getting them to talk freely about their favourite sport. I have spent many a pleasant hour, sitting on the banks of the Yorkshire Ouse, and listening to the slow and deliberate words of wisdom which drop reluctantly from the lips of the silent North Country roach fishers. A man cannot devote all the leisure hours of his life to one particular fish, without learning a great deal about it.

Although anglers in India are some six thousand odd miles away from the roach of their native land, I will not apologize for telling them about some of the little tips I have picked up from these quiet and earnest Yorkshiremen; for it is not altogether impossible for a wrinkle learnt in England to serve one well in Hindustan.

The most valuable float tackle for shy fish in moving water, is undoubtably that clever combination of the float and ledger. A very small shot, say about No. 6, is bitten on to the line about 16 or 18 inches from the hook. On the gut above this shot runs freely a little cylinder of lead. This miniature ledger lies on the bottom and anchors the light quill float in the current. If the stream is strong a slightly heavier lead can substituted, but the distance from the lead to the float has nearly always to be a good deal more than the actual depth of the water, to allow of a certain degree of slant to the gut from the current, otherwise the float will be drawn below the surface. With this ledger float tackle one can successfully fish a fairly quick swim, and the quill can be of the ordinary small size, so that the slightest bite is detected at once. The gut draws quite freely through the lead as the latter lies on the bottom, so that every touch is telegraphed to the quill as freely as though the line were not weighted at all.

An excellent bait for all paste eating fish is a piece of three quarter boiled potato. The way to get pieces the right shape and size is to have a short bit of metal tube of the desired diameter, and with this, punch wads out of the sliced—up potato. Of course the swim must be ground-baited with potato in order to get the fish used to this particular form of food.

Potato is a very excellent kind of ground-bait to use in a current, as owing to its weight it sinks readily and stays where you want it. Gentles are a very undesirable hook bait for roach, because other kinds of fish notably gudgeon and "tommies," are liable to be attracted, to the detriment of the swim. Tommy is the Yorkshire name for the ruffe, a little fish of the perch family.

In high coloured water, paste is not a good bait, and one has perforce to fall back on gentle or worm, and take one's chance of being bothered with small fry. Most anglers use these last named baits for roach in winter, but there are some people on the contrary who use paste successfully all the year round.

The Yorkshire angler lays great stress on his rod being as light as possible; a man I was talking to lately told me that he had just had a new rod built for him, which was nearly 12 feet long, and weighed only 5 ounces. I am, I confess a little incredulous as to this story; it does not sound possible to get the requisite stiffness in a 12 foot rod, if it only weighs 5 ounces.

The line is very important, and is nearly always of the finest silk, plaited or twisted. The regular size for roach is very little thicker than stout sewing cotton, yet considerably stronger than its delicate appearance would lead one to expect. It is no uncommon thing for a roach fisher to hook a fat bream on his gossamer tackle, and in the subsequent fight it is by no means always the big fish which comes off victor.

The olive carp (barbus chrysopoma) is the Indian equivalent of the roach, and gives excellent sport on exactly the same sort of tackle. In Southern India and Ceylon, it is a very common fish being found almost everywhere, both in rivers and tanks. I remember watching natives fishing for "shani kendai" in the Adyar, near Madras. The float ledger tackle described above would be exactly the thing for these fish in that river, which at Saidapet is very like many an English roach stream in character.

I use to get capital sport with olive carp in Ceylon, using a light white cane roach rod and fine tackle. Pounders were quite common in the lakes of the Island Colony, and I got one or two up to a pound and a half in weight. Round about Madras on the contrary I never remember getting an olive carp of over the pound, and I used to catch a good lot of them.

"FLEUR-DE-LYS."

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE INDIAN FIELD."

SIR—The leader in your issue of the 26th instant is distinctly vague and gives one the idea that it has been written by an amateur and a badly informed one at that.

In the first place I hold that it is absolutely impossible for any cylinder bored gun to shoot as accurately as you state, viz., all shots in a 6 inch circle at 100 yards: at 50 yards this is most unusual and would be classed as a fluke. If what you state holds good, of what use is the large bore rifle? How often are they used over or even up to 100 yards? The 12 bore bullet has a tremendous smashing power so what would be the need of large bore rifles if it wasn't for the guarantee of accuracy these latter give?

Your next paragraph is, to say the least, humourous, where it states that the velocity of the 13 grain bullet to be 11,000 feet per second. I merely pause and trust it was a printer's error, as surely your scribe would not go so far wrong as this.

The story of the burst bullet is distinctly American, and should take its place with several "Fish" stories published by you from time to time.

One cannot condemn these new "Rotary" or "Destructive" cylindrical bullets entirely because they in very rare instances key-hole. (This difficulty is very often experienced in determining the correct charge for a rifle cartridge, the key-holing is chiefly due to the charge of powder not being quite sufficient or too severe to give a perfectly rotary movement to the bullet on its leaving the barrel.) These new bullets used in cartridges correctly loaded will, I am sure, satisfy the most particular. It is also not at all fair to compare the present day new cylindrical bullets with the results obtained with the Macleod bullet, there being no comparison between the two, the former only weigh $1\frac{1}{8}$ ozs. whereas the latter weighed $2\frac{1}{2}$ ozs.

I have tested the "Rotary" bullet and out of truly bored Choke or a Cylinder gun find that it gives perfect shooting up to 75 yards. A man would have to be a very bad shot to miss his mark at this distance. As regards the breaking up properties of this special pattern I had some very fine examples shown me which had been out out of tiger and bear, proving their efficacy.

The question of undue recoil raised against this cylindrical bullet is hardly fair: unfortunately I haven't a recoil gauge to test the actual weight but from long experience of shooting can safely say there is very little appreciable difference.

I have no wish nor is it my intention to detract from the merits of the Lethal bullet as it evidently answers its purpose to a certain extent, but cannot agree with the sweeping assertion you make that it ought to more than hold its own as the best for use with shot guns.

P.

[With reference to the above, we can assure our correspondent that the article in question was written by no amateur but by one well versed in ballistics and sport and the incident referred to of the breaking up of the Rotary bullet in flight was a personal experience of the writer when tiger shooting in Bengal. The 11,000 is, of course, a printer's error for 1,100. The Rotary bullet was put through a series of tests about two years ago by a sportsman in Bombay, with cartridges loaded with 4 drams of powder, which is the maximum charge for shot guns, but it was condemned on account of the keyholing and inaccuracy at a short range.—ED.]

MILK FOODS.

THESE nutritious articles of diet have their counterpart in quite a different department of food manufacture—milk foods. Doctors may differ on many points, but they are all agreed as to the importance of mother's milk in the rearing of the young.

Science, however, in this, as in other respects, runs nature pretty hard, and it is claimed that the "Allenburys'" Milk foods are the nearest approach to maternal milk that science has yet achieved. These foods, by their nutritious qualities, are declared to stimulate health and growth, and to be so free from noxious germs as to be safer than, as well as superior to, cow's milk. Moreover, they are graduated in such a manner as to furnish the maximum of nourishment that the child can digest, according to age. Materfamilias in a hurry has also the added pleasure of knowing that the milk foods are made instantly by the simple addition of hot water only. They are food not only for the frail or delicate infant but also for the robust and healthy child.

TESTIMONIAL FROM SIR SAMUEL BAKER,

Newton Abbot, Devon.

DEAR SIRS,—I have delayed my thanks as I wished to test the effects of Blair's Pills by a sufficient interval of time.
For ten years I had suffered acutely from Gout, and life had lost its attraction, owing to the uncertainty of health and the sudden visitation of the enemy, which prostrated me for months or weeks, according to the virulence of the attacks.
Blair's Pills have rendered me immense service, as I no longer fear an attack of Gout.

LONDON, Friday, 13th November 1908.

THE TURF.

FIGURES speak for themselves, and up to Friday night the exchequer of the Liverpool executive showed a considerable increase on last year, so that the approximation of the attendance has been correct, while with Saturday's muster a good one, we can heartily congratulate the executive on one of the most successful autumn meeting since that slashing mare Louise Victoria won the cup for Mr. Cartwright years back. The support which the meeting has received from patrician and plebeian alike proves the truth of the old adage that "good wine needs no bush," or, in the vernacular, that the public have always a due appreciation for first-class goods. The cold wind that dispersed the fog blew right into the front of the stands, and though the sun lent his bright countenance to the proceedings, the nipping and eager air made a great-coat indispensable for the first time during the meeting. The aristocratic influence was again sustained, and the Saturday half-holiday folk helped to make up a thoroughly representative muster. The programme was spiced by two events under National Hunt Rules, and this mixing has been one of the charms of the meeting, while assuring the patronage of the cross-country division. Results :—

LEICESTER.

Jack Frost is generally inimical to racing, but on Monday he came to the rescue in the Midlands as a friend in disguise, after engendering a fog that enshrouded the course at Oadby in the morning, when horses were awaiting their usual pipe-openers. A more perfect day, with a clear blue sky, bright sunshine, and just a crisp breeze, seldom tempted a votary afield at the kindred fascinations of hunting, coursing or racing. A good company assembled, and the members' enclosure was fairly well patronised. The going was good, and fields panned out well. Results :—

TO CONQUER MALARIA.

Words of wisdom from a Physician's Pen.

"Those who conquer Malaria conquer the tropics" is a proverb with which every resident in India is familiar. While in consequence of the onward march of scientific achievement, this disease, so depressing in its onset, so devitalising in its effect, and so disorganising in its result to the whole system is better understood than it used to be, it is still, unhappily, exceedingly prevalent and is likely to continue until the conditions which produce it have been banished.

Most people know that while Malaria may take various forms it is due to a specific germ or microbe, which destroys the red corpuscles by which the oxygen of the air is carried by the blood to every part of the body to burn up its impurities. The destruction of these corpuscles produces the marked symptoms so characteristic of the disease,—the pale, sallow, earthy complexion, the mental and physical lassitude, the depression, the morbid thoughts and feelings, the aching muscles and the tender joints.

Bad as is all this, the result of Anaemia or poverty of the blood, as it is commonly called, which makes life a burden to the sufferer, it may go considerably farther until it produces that wasted and dangerous condition of the system Doctors call "Cachexia"

For long, Quinine has been the sheet anchor of the physician, and in the acute stages it generally answers admirably, but in the later stages something else must be employed to destroy the effects wrought by the microbes.

Happily, in this conquest of the hosts of the disease germs which invade the body under the banner of Malaria the physician has been presented with a weapon as potent over them as the modern machine gun is potent against the old flint lock gun.

This weapon is Sanatogen, one of the most powerful restoratives and vitalising agents ever given to the world. Its remarkable properties are due to its two constituents Casein, the solid portion of pure, new milk, and Glycero-phosphate of Soda, a preparation containing phosphorus in the precise form in which it exists in the body. Phosphorus, as every one knows, is not only as a physician has written "intimately associated with the health of the system, and is indispensable for the discharge of the functions of the nervous centres," but is also "absolutely essential to the growth of what physiologists term the cells of the body—the microscopic bricks of which the human edifice is constructed." This cell growth is greatly interfered with in Malaria, and a supply of phosphorus which is easily absorbed by the depleted system is urgently necessary to restore it to its standard activity. Nothing does this so well as Sanatogen, as nothing so rapidly restores the vitality of the blood as this preparation, which is prescribed by over ten thousand physicians in the world because no secret has ever been made of its constituents and they realise its overwhelming value in rousing the functions of the body to do their duty.

How rapidly Sanatogen restores the blood after Anaemia may be judged from the fact that one eminent physician records that the red blood corpuscles in a patient increased eighty thousand per cubic milli-metre in a week, and the percentage of red colouring matter in them advanced from 61 per cent. to 62·5 per cent., while another patient, who was unable to take any solid food and was losing weight rapidly so improved in a fortnight that the red corpuscles increased two hundred thousand per cubic milli-metre, their red colouring matter from 48 per cent. to 52 per cent., and she was able to resume her household duties, completely cured of the terrible melancholia from which she was suffering.

Children are especially liable to Malaria and its pernicious after-effects which may delay their development and stunt their growth. When given Sanatogen they rapidly improve. One child who at three years old, in consequence of Malaria, weighed only half a pound more than it did when it was a year and a half, was given a small quantity of Sanatogen daily, and its weight at once began to go up half a pound a week.

Just as Malaria causes wasting in children it makes adults prematurely old, in consequence of the depression of the vitality of the system. This condition is rapidly cured by Sanatogen which removes the prematurely old look and soon substitutes for the feeble will and listless spirit a healthy interest in normal pursuits.

An exceedingly interesting pamphlet on the subject of Malaria has been written by a physician who had a wide experience of it in India. In order to give this momentous publication "Malaria, its Causes and Effects" the widest publicity, the proprietors of the copyright have instructed Messrs. Smith, Stanistreet & Co., Calcutta, to distribute a limited number of copies free of charge, to anyone who may feel interested in it, and will send them a postcard mentioning the "Indian Field."

Sanatogen, by the way, may be obtained direct from Messrs. Smith, Stanistreet & Co., Calcutta, and at all chemists, etc.

Dr. E. J. Lazarus's ESSENCE OF CHIRETTA,

In Bottles Re. 1-8, 2-8 and 4.

WHAT PEOPLE SAY OF IT.

From Mr. W.—Dear Sirs,—"I suffered from Liver complaint in its most aggravated form pain in the side, shoulder-blade and stomach; vomiting after every meal, excessive acidity in the stomach, constipated bowels and extreme debility FOR TEN YEARS, I tried all the known remedies without success and had given up hope, when as a last resource I tried your 'Essence of Chiretta.' I have taken it for some time and am now nearly quite well. Pain in the side nearly gone, in the shoulder-blade entirely so. No vomiting, little or no acidity in the stomach, bowels relaxed, no debility, being now a stronger and better man than I have been for years."

H. James Rainey, Esq., of Koolnah, Jessore, writes:—"Having derived a deal of benefit from the use of your 'Essence of Chiretta' (combined with VERY SMALL doses of Quinine) both as prophylactic and anti periodic for intermittent fevers of malarious type, which would not yield to the usual remedies employed, and which disease is very prevalent in the Districts of Lower Bengal, in particular those parts bordering on the Soonderbun, I think it incumbent on me to acquaint you thereof pro bono publico. You are welcome to give this letter all the publicity you may deem necessary in order that this excellent remedy of yours may become generally known."

From J. A. Farrell, Mooltan.—"Your Chiretta has already done me a WORLD amount of good. I had an enlargement of the spleen and fever for 9 months which reduced me to a mere skeleton. The fever I got rid of with your Antiperiodic Pills in 3 days; and the spleen I let be—thinking it could do me no harm. In this I was greatly mistaken, my complexion became as yellow as gold. Seeing your Chiretta I determined to use some of it, and see what good it did me. I have used it for about a week and already the colour is coming to my cheek and the TAN (through continued fever) has left my face. For the climate of India there is no medicine so good, for a Tonic, &c., as your "Essence of Chiretta." This is only an addition to the valuable testimonials you have so well earned through the Chiretta."

The frost was white on moorland and hill, and was tingeing the forest bough on Tuesday morning, until the rime turned to dew in blazing hot sunshine—a grand day. It was a good job that the day was bright, as the frost did not totally disappear till midday, and the going had got hard. Monday set an excellent precedent in the way of attendance, which was followed to good effect, as, though the muster is never of huge proportions since the venue was shifted by the Nonconformists from the common, it has its flow and ebb, and has been on the flood on both days, the meeting being pretty well patronised by the neighbouring sportsmen. Many London metallicians after Monday's settling took the meeting on their way to Derby, and the rings on both sides of the course were well filled. As the afternoon wore on the mist thickened, and little could be seen of the top end.

FOOTBALL.

ASSOCIATION RULES.

THE LEAGUES.—The forwards in the principal leagues were in a fairly aggressive mood on Saturday, the scoring being above the average. The lead was taken by the Second Division clubs, the ten games in this competition yielding 35 goals, nine matches in the Southern League provided 30 goals, and the ten in the First Division of the Football League 28, seven of the clubs in the latter tournament failing to find the net. There were only three clubs in the Second Division that were unable to push home their attacks, while in the Southern League, Millwall and Brentford have the unenviable distinction of sharing the inability to at least once capture their opponents' goal. In the Southern League four of the clubs shared the honours, four home teams won outright, and one visiting eleven proved successful. In the First Division of the Football League there was not a drawn game, and visiting sides had a fair share of the spoils, as four clubs were beaten before their own supporters, and six home clubs each added a couple of points to their total. In the Second Division things ran a nearly normal course, seven home teams winning, two losing, and one match was drawn.

There was a fair crop of surprises, and the most staggering of them was the defeat of the Crystal Palace on their own ground by Northampton. It appears the special mission of the Cobblers this season is to be the stormy petrel of the Southern League, for a month ago they went to Southampton, and inflicted the first defeat of the season on the Sotonians. This performance was startling, and it was generally voted a fluke, but it will have to be regarded in a different light in view of their latest achievement.

SOUTHERN LEAGUES.—Two London games in the Southern League concluded in favour of the home side, in accordance with anticipations, but the margin at Boleyn Castle was too narrow to be at all comfortable for West Ham, and a little more smartness in front of the posts would have enabled Millwall to retire with a point in their possession. Play was not up to the standard it should have been, as excitement ran too high, and there was a lot of spasmodic forward work on both sides. At Park Royal the Rangers gave probably their best display of the season. The defence was sound, and the forwards incisive, the only fault to be found with them being the slowness of the inside men to snap up really good opportunities. Brentford worked hard, but were beaten on their merits, as most teams will be when the Royalists are in the mood in which their neighbours found them on Saturday. Reference has been made to the failure of the Palace to gain the upper hand of Northampton, and although one does not like to adversely criticise a keeper who is so consistently safe as Johnson, there is no doubt that a couple of mistakes were made by the Palace goalkeeper which should not have been, and each led up to a score for Northampton. The most decisive win of the afternoon was placed to the credit of Luton, who took the liberty of running up the largest goal total registered against Portsmouth this season, and incidentally scored five goal in one afternoon for the first time in the present tournament. The result flatters the Lutonians, who were on their own ground, there not being more than a couple of goals between the sides. The Luton forwards seized upon their chances, especially Moody, who performed the "hat trick," but the Portsmouth forwards were most erratic in front of goal, and the result of 5—1 must drive home to their minds the paramount importance of shooting hard and straight.

Swindon are such a greatly improved side, and Plymouth Argyle have been so lacking in those match-winning qualities that formerly characterised them, that the draw of the railway centre club at Home Park was not surprising. A glance at the table shows wherein lies the weakness of the Argyle—the forwards cannot score goals. Only twice in ten games have more than one goal been notched, but so sound has been the defence that only once has two goals been obtained against it. Norwich should, on their recent home performances, have sent Watford away from the Nest without a point, but the Herts representatives played a dogged, determined game, and went away happy in the possession of the first point that has fallen to their lot in an away match this season. Bristol Rovers were partially successful at Reading, where last season they lost by five clear goals, and New Brompton also improved on their previous appearance at Brighton, a 3—0 defeat being converted into a draw of one goal each. Southampton did not do exactly as they pleased with Coventry, who are slowly but surely justifying their selection. It was a moral triumph—this kind of success does not count when the tables are finally made up—to run the Sotonians to a goal at the Delft and this should give the Midlanders more confidence in their future engagements.

THE LEAGUE.—DIVISION I.—Chelsea provided the sensation of the afternoon by beating the champions on their own ground at Clayton. It is true that the victory is robbed of some of its significance by the fact that such stalwarts as Burgess, Roberts, and J. Turnbull were missing from the ranks of the United, but other teams have met the Mancestrians when the latter have not had their full strength, and have not conquered them. Saturday's was the sixth home game of the United in the tournament, and of the previous five four were won and the fifth drawn, Nottingham Forest taking a point away a fortnight ago. Chelsea have now gone one better, and the victory was all the more acceptable because the United have almost invariably had the best of matters in their encounters with the Pensioners. This was Chelsea's second away success this season, their previous win being at Bramall-lane on 19th September. Woolwich Arsenal have now lost more home than away matches, the defeat inflicted upon them at Plumstead by Aston Villa being their third reverse before their own supporters whereas they have only twice gone under on foreign soil, and each time by the odd goal in three. One does not care to explain away defeat, but the Arsenal did not deserve to lose. One does not know that they were entitled to the two points as the game went, but it would have been a fair reflex of the play if a point had been in possession of each team at the close. It is cold comfort for the Gunners that they are no worse off than from the corresponding fixture last season.

While one was prepared for a win for Nottingham Forest at Leicester—one did not anticipate they would succeed by three clear goals. This was the first game in which Leicester failed to score since 5th September, when they were beaten 2—0 at Newcastle. It was the second time that the Forest scored three goals without response in an away match, their previous victims being Blackburn Rovers, who on Saturday maintained their remarkable away form—they have yet to lose their initial game off Ewood Park—by scoring twice at Bradford and themselves preserving a clean sheet. Bristol City had a much-needed win, and as it was gained over so well-placed a side as Liverpool one hopes that the tide has turned in favour of the Westerners, who are in a by no means favourable position, with only ten points from a dozen games. Sheffield Wednesday, even with advantage of ground, did not have anything to spare against Middlesbrough, but Preston North End, at Deepdale, gained an unexpectedly easy victory over Manchester City, a 3—0 win being sufficiently emphatic to make one ask in all soberness whether the Prestonians have run into that form which enabled them so easily overcome Chelsea, or whether it is merely another meteoric performance. Newcastle did neither more nor less than was predicted of them in overcoming Bury, and Everton continued their victorious career at the expense of Sunderland, who followed up their 6—1 win of a week previous by a 4—0 defeat at Goodison Park. Notts County, the inconsistent, showed Sheffield United that on occasions they can play match-winning football at Laceopolis, and the United had to return empty-handed from a ground that last season provided them with a couple of points.

THE LEAGUE.—DIVISION II.—Oldham Athletic did not repeat their last season's success at Craven Cottage, but they did not fail for lack of effort. The Oldham players have come on wonderfully of late, ten goals to one in their last three games being irrefragable evidence in support of this statement. Fulham, however, were out to win, and it is well they were, for the visitors played a bold, dashing, determined game, and the home men had to employ all their skill and resource, and show plenty of grit, to scrape through by the odd goals in five after an exciting second half. It is worthy of note that Fulham have not suffered defeat in their last ten games, and they are now two points behind West Bromwich Albion and Birmingham, with a game in hand as against the latter, and two as against the Albion. Tottenham Hotspur did not equal expectations. In no previous game had more than one goal been scored against them, but Saturday saw their defence thrice pierced at the Hawthorns, and the Throstles were unquestionably the superior side. Clapton Orient fared no better at Grimsby than they have at other grounds, and the players will really have to bestir themselves if they intend to be spared a weary struggle in the latter half of the season. Of the other games, the most significant result was Bradford's defeat of Bolton Wanderers at Burnden Park. Glossop always had the measure of Derby County, on the North Derbyshire ground, and Stockport County had no difficulty in mastering Hull at Edgeley Park. Wolverhampton Wanderers put up their biggest score of the season at Burnley but Birmingham only just got through at St. Andrew's against Barnsley, and the ex-First Leaguers have fallen off so much that a continuance of present form will see them dropping down the table.

SCARCELY KNOWN FACT.

DANGEROUS FOES OF OUR HEALTH UNVEILED.

Most people are ignorant that the destruction of the teeth is principally due to the action of microscopically small organisms (named bacteria) in the mouth. It is to be regretted that this fact, so extraordinarily important to health, is not generally realised. The family doctor should explain to his patients, the teacher to his pupils, and the parents to their children that care must be continually bestowed upon the mouth so that these microscopic creatures may not effect their work of destruction.

Microscopic Picture of Mouth Bacteria, all most dangerous to health.

The teeth are of superlative importance in the preservation of health, so that it is one of the first duties of life to know how the teeth may be preserved. The teeth must be cleaned morning and evening with the antiseptic liquid dentifrice Odol, so that the microscopic organism may not be able to develop Odol is the first and only preparation for cleansing the mouth and teeth which exercises its antiseptic powers not only during the few moments of application but continuously for some hours afterwards. Odol, as has been scientifically proved, penetrates the interstices of the teeth and the mucous membrane of the mouth, to a certain extent impregnating them, and thus securing a safeguard and preservative for the teeth such as no other dentifrice can provide, not even approximately.

SCOTTISH LEAGUE GAMES.

THE great improvement shown by 3rd Lanark and Queen's Park in their recent matches has done both clubs a great amount of good financially, and when they met on Cathkin Park on Saturday they had the biggest League crowd of the day in Scotland watching them—17,000, with drawings amounting to £416. From a spectators' point of view it was a rare struggle, and if the amateurs had had R. S. McColl, who was injured in Wednesday's unemployed benefit match, in the team, they would almost certainly have got two points instead of one. Queen's Park during the past three weeks have played as pretty football as in their best days, but the usual difficulties are already creeping up, Scottish and English agents having an eye on more than one of the team, and, as one of their directors remarked on Saturday; "They are never sure of what team they will turn out." On Saturday it was the usual story, Brownlie's goalkeeping saving the 3rd from defeat, and the two goals he lost, scored by Bowie and Paul, were of the unsaveable order.

Against Morton, Rangers tried more changes, Stark, the ex-Chelsea half-back, being played at centre-half, Murray, late of Aberdeen, at centre forward, and McPherson, late of Liverpool, inside right. Stark, all things considered, did well, but wants more training. Bennett reappeared after his illness, and, along with McPherson, made the most effective wing on the field. From the outset Morton were never in the picture, and with Murray scoring three goals and Bennett and McPherson two each, it was hardly surprising that in the panic among the Morton team Thomson at left back should score against his own side, thus giving Rangers victory by 8 goals to nil.

By their victory over Falkirk, and St. Mirren's defeat of Airdrieonians, the Aberdeen team go once more to the top of the table. Aberdeen were thoroughly worthy of their win, with their great left wing—O'Hagan and Lennie—deserving most of the honour. Their combination and tricky work fairly beat the Falkirk backs, who had a sore time of it watching them.

St. Mirren went down to Airdrieonians when they looked easy winners, but on their own ground Airdrieonians can do remarkable things, as Rangers and Celtic have found to their cost. For the most of their success Airdrie have to thank Hunter, their centre, one of the speediest in Scotland, and one who rarely makes a mistake at goal. When Airdrie equalised St. Mirren collapsed, and the home club in the last quarter of an hour did as they liked, St. Mirren losing two points which they should have won.

Hibernians had Hearts as their guests, before 11,000 people. No matter how poorly both teams may be doing during the season, they always rise to the occasion in this match. The hero of Saturday's game was Bobby Walker, who scored the only goal and gave Hearts two points, of which the Hibs fully deserved one. Both teams failed at close quarters, the shooting of the Hibernians being poor, and it was particularly unfortunate considering the fine display of their backs and halves.

In addition to ground difficulties, Partick Thistle have also team difficulties, and against Celtic they were handicapped rather severely. Celtic's task was an easy one, and the feature of the game was the play of McMenemy, who scored all three goals, at inside right.

Kilmarnock gave further proof that on their own ground they can give the best a hard struggle, and Clyde are the latest to find it out, the Glasgow team meeting with their second defeat of the season. Templeton reappeared for Kilmarnock, and had a big say in the victory.

Dundee had no difficulty in getting full points at Port Glasgow, and it was as well the northern men got some satisfaction out of their journey, as the gate money only amounted to £69—the poorest of the day in Scotland. Hamilton Academicals have yet to secure their first League victory, but even that misfortune does not place them at the foot of the table, as their fixture against Motherwell brought their number of drawn games up to seven.

St. Mirren club has been invited by the Bass Charity Cup Committee to play against Chelsea at Stamford Bridge, London, on Easter Monday, 12th April, for the possession of Lord Burton's handsome cup. The winners hold the cup for a year, and St. Mirren have accepted the invitation.

RUGBY RULES.

AUSTRALIANS vs. CHESHIRE.—The Australian team continued their victorious career on Saturday when at Birkenhead Park they met and defeated Cheshire by 57 points to 3—a score singularly enough, by which the All Blacks defeated the Cestrians a year or two ago. The Colonials were rather erratic at starting, and threw away several chances, but once they had settled down they gave the home side few opportunities, and the game was almost a succession of try scoring and goal kicking, Carmichael actually goaling on six occasions in nine attempts.

There were 4,000 people present when Carroll kicked off for the Colonials. Cheshire early pressed, and Kendall nearly got through, but was grassed. Then the Australians attacked, but their finishing work was poor for a long time, erratic passing spoiling several chances. Eventually a scrum was formed on the Cheshire lines, and McKevitt got over, Carmichael converting. Afterwards, for a long time Cheshire were almost swamped. McKevitt made a dashing run, which led to Carroll getting a try, which Carmichael failed to improve upon. Kendall and Hartley put in a fine run for Cheshire, but at the finish the pass went astray. The Colonials were penalised, but the kick at goal failed, and McCue afterwards charged down Cubbin's kick and easily crossed the Cheshire line. Carmichael converted, and just before the interval Prentice put on another try, the Colonials crossing over with a lead of 19 points to nil.

Soon after the interval Russell marked, and Carmichael kicked a goal. Russell was again prominent with a run and a try, and the Colonials now led by 27 points to nil. Cheshire made a rally, and MacSymon put in a fine run, being unlucky in being bored into touch when he seemed certain to score. Carroll crossed again for the Colonials, and Carmichael converted once more. Cheshire were not done with, and Bowman ran through at the corner, but Davidson could not convert from such a position. The Australians afterwards had decidedly the better of the play, their speed and cleverness proving too much for the Cestrians. Dix crossed again, Carmichael converting with a grand kick, and the Australians won by 6 goals (one from a mark), 3 tries (37 points), to 1 try (3 points).

LONDON SCOTTISH vs. RICHMOND.—In this match at Richmond on Saturday, the home side, who had not defeated the Scottish for three years, proved successful by 2 gaols (one penalty) and a try (11 points) to a try (3 points). In spite of the favourable conditions, the match produced a poor and "scrambling" game, in which neither side did their abilities justice, the play of the Scottish backs being particularly disappointing. Their passing was of the poorest possible quality, and afforded Richmond many opportunities of converting defence into attack. Both half-backs were slow, while the three-quarters, as a line and individually, failed signally. The Scottish forwards made several good rushes, but no more than held their own in general play. The Richmond backs were very moderate in combination, but showed greater individual opportunism than did the Scottish. It was to this fact that the success of Richmond was mainly due.

In the first half, though playing against the wind the Scottish had much the better of the first fifteen minutes' play. Walter made several strong runs, one of which yielded a try by Moir, after a well-timed pass on the line. Wade failed with the easy place. Fast play followed, both backs in turn gaining ground by strong rushes. Richmond gradually attained the ascendancy, however, and play for the last twenty minutes of the first half was mainly in Scottish territory. Wilson ran in under the posts after some good passing, and Limpenny kicked a goal. Richmond continued to have the better of the game, and Limpenny kicked a very fine goal from a penalty close to the touch-line and some 35 yards out. A second kick was allowed because the Scottish had charged prematurely. At half-time Richmond led by 8 points to 3.

The second half saw no improvement in the play. The Scottish had rather the better of the game, but the backs could not take their chances. After fifteen minutes' play, Ireland intercepted a slow Scottish pass and got clear. He easily outpaced Paterson, and after running three-parts of the length of the field, scored a try, which Wright-Nooth failed to convert. Both sides had several chances after this, but could not turn them to scoring account. A poor game thus ended in a win for Richmond by 11 points to 5.

CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY vs. WEST OF SCOTLAND.—A very large crowd assembled at Cambridge yesterday to witness the match with West of Scotland. Since Cambridge (without K. G. Macleod) lost to London Hospital, they have improved considerably, and should put up a good fight against the Australians on Saturday. Yesterday the West of Scotland gave them a good game during the opening stage, but after changing ends Cambridge outplayed the Scottish team, and won by 40 points to 3. F. C. Pyman was unable to turn out, and the Magdalene Blue, T. A. Goodby, took his place. C. C. Watson, the Rugby Freshman, was given a first trial, and R. B. Firth, the King's Senior, was also given a trial at half.

The visitors kicked off, and the 'Varsity at once pressed. Macleod passed, and Watson got over in less than three minutes. The latter then broke through the scrum, but Simpson saved the situation by a good kick into touch. For some little time the West were in the home territory, when some splendid scrums were formed, and at one time the visitors looked like breaking through. At length Macleod kicked right up, and all the three-quarters got passing, with the result that Wright worked over. Soon afterwards Macleod put in a long run, and passed to Watson. Fiddian being enabled to score; Macleod added the extra points. Play was for some time confined to neutral quarters till just before changing ends, when despite Goodby missing his pass, the 'Varsity got right up, and Macleod scored, Atkinson converting. Half-time:—Cambridge, 2 goals and 2 tries (16 points); West of Scotland, 0.

Immediately on resuming, Macleod enabled Watson to score, and within the first five minutes Wright crossed the line. For a few minutes the visitors held their own. Cambridge got off side, and from a free kick the Scottish captain, Tennert, kicked a penalty goal. Purvis was next to score, and then an interval of nearly ten minutes passed before Cambridge again scored. Macleod and Wright were playing a grand game, their passing being very fine, and tries were secured by Wright, Watson, and Wright in the order named. Wright finished up by dropping a grand goal. Result:—Cambridge University, 4 goals (1 dropped) and 7 tries (40 points); West of Scotland, 1 penalty goal (3 points).

AUSTRALIANS vs. LONDON.—The Australians played one of the curious games that we have learned to expect from them at Blackheath on Thursday against London. For the first twenty minutes London had a heap the best of the match, and had their three-quarters shown anything like real good form must have been over more than twice in spite of the fine defence which the Australians always produce.

The London forwards were great for the first half of the first half. They were quicker on the ball than the Australians, backed each other up perfectly, and, "ma certes," how they did push! Bar the first twenty minutes and another ten in the second half, the forward play was about equal. Both sides played so well that the other could do nothing very big.

What made the big difference in the scores—the Australians won by 4 goals (1 penalty) and 2 tries to a try, 24 points to 3—was undoubtedly the work of McKivatt and McCabe. McKivatt opened up the game for his back line with the greatest brain, no two movements starting the same way. McCabe was full of pace and cunning too, and he managed to go wonderfully straight, in spite of the way they tried to mark him.

The unfortunate Carroll, the fastest three-quarter on the field, was starved again for some unaccountable reason or fluke. Somehow the ball never seems to be put along his way, except as a last resource.

London were on the attack from the word "Go!" and after a fine rush by their forwards Palmer was nearly in. London then had a good chance to score from a free-kick for offside, and two minutes later Palmer all but scored after a clipping side-step run in which he beat four of them.

McCabe scored the first try for Australia after pretty work and Carmichael kicked a magnificent goal. The Australians were all over it after this, and a great effort of McKivatt's ended in a pass to Barrett, who scored easily. Carmichael converted with a shot that bisected the angle.

Ten minutes after the second half commenced Russell scored from a passing movement all along the line: Carmichael could not judge the kick right against a puzzling wind, but the score was 13—0, good enough. The next try fell to Craig after sound work, and Carmichael converted with a wonderful shot.

Then London scored their only try. Beating the Australians in the rough, they scored after five minutes' hard pressing, Lloyd getting in the right-hand corner. The shot was a beast, and Evans failed at it.

The next score was from a penalty, given against Sibree for offside; and he was offside, too. Carmichael took the kick, of course, and it was a bit of man's work. By the way, it is interesting to note that the Australians had twice as many penalties given against them as London did; and that every penalty given was an absolutely right decision.

The last try was scored a minute before time was called, and it was rather a lucky one. Lyon failed to gather a ball that kicked in a more than awkward manner, and Griffin was quick enough to seize his chance. Carmichael did not convert, so the game ended 24—3.

OTHER RUGBY MATCHES.—The Dark Blue XV., who are by many people considered to be the strongest club side in the country, made their first appearance in London on Saturday, and defeated the Harlequins by 28 points to 8. Forward—except during the first ten minutes, when they appeared to be taken by surprise, and in the last ten minutes, when they were pumped out—the Harlequins held their own, but behind the "scrum" the Londoners were outclassed, the passing of the Oxford backs being as brilliant as has been witnessed in this country for many a day. Twice in the course of the match the ball travelled right along the three-quarter line and back again the reverse way, each man handling the ball twice before the try was scored. On another occasion the Harlequin defence was cleverly drawn to one side of the ground while the attack developed on the other. If only the forwards would do a little more genuine "scrum" work, instead of all attempting to emulate the deeds of that brilliant opportunist G. D. Roberts, these Oxford men would be a great side. Even as it is, their backs make them more than a good one.

Meanwhile Cambridge go on improving, and their defeat of Blackheath on Saturday was a most meritorious performance. They have now a really good pack, and when their back division has been finally decided upon they should turn out a good and useful 'Varsity XV.

POLO.

BREEDING POLO PONIES.—At a council meeting of the Polo and Riding Pony Society, it was announced that the King had honoured the society by registering two stallions in the Highland section of the Stud Book. Among those present at the meeting were Mr. C. Howard Taylor (president), Viscount Valentia (chairman of the Hurlingham Polo Committee), Mr. C. D. Miller (Rochampton Club), Mr. Tresham Gilbey, Mr. A. M. Tree, Colonel Sanders Darley, Rev. D. B. Montefiore, etc., with the secretary, Mr. A. B. Charlton.

Much interest was aroused by the announcement that the Editing Committee had received several promises of support from representative polo-players in respect to the new scheme for presenting brood mares to farmers. Mr. Montefiore stated that the applications lodged were sufficient to indicate a genuine demand for mares suitable for breeding purposes. Four mares had been actually leased out, the lessees signing the society's agreement acknowledging its ownership, and intimating their willingness to comply with the conditions as to service. The future measure of success of the scheme now modestly launched—to encourage the farmers to breed the best type of polo pony—must of necessity depend upon the support extended to the movement by polo-players. The society guaranteed to find a home for their favourite mares under conditions providing they would be stinted to suitable sires. Polo-players were thereby helping in a practical manner the objects of the society, which would benefit by the enhanced interest of members and the annual rents arising from each location, these in turn being applied to further encouraging the farmers in whose hands the mares were placed, as the society proposed to provide at the 1909 show a class for polo brood mares, the property of tenant farmers.

Arrangements having been made for the annual London show, which will be held on 12th and 13th March. Mr. C. D. Miller reported that the Rochampton Polo Club would again offer facilities for a summer show at Rochampton, and suggested 11th June as a suitable date. As regards the Royal Agricultural Society of England, it was resolved to offer towards their polo pony classes the sum of £50 and two gold medals for the best stallion and mare exhibited. It was resolved, on the motion of the chairman, to approach the other spring shows with a view to joint action so as to secure to their members attending these exhibitions the advantages of reduced fares now enjoyed by subscribers to the Royal Agricultural Society. Some important notice of motions for discussion were handed in, Mr. Tresham Gilbey proposing that the owner of any pony shown in one class shall not be allowed to remove the shoes of that pony for the purpose of showing in another class. Mr. Dunbar Kelly proposes that, after the 1909 show, no height limit shall be imposed on any of the young stock classes. After this the council adjourned till their meeting on 15th December.

ATHLETICS.

CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY vs. RANELAGH H.—The Light Blues had their first match on Saturday, being opposed to the Ranelagh H. over the home course. Since last year A. H. Pearson and C. J. C. Pratt have gone down, and the only Blues in residence this season are E. C. Forman, G. N. Selby-Lowndes, and F. G. Swan. The former, who was first home against Oxford twelve months ago, was unable to turn out on Saturday, and Swan was away in London, seeking medical advice. Although Selby-Lowndes turned out, he was stale from his exertions on the running track on the two previous afternoons, and did not go the whole course. Did not finish:—G. N. Selby-Lowndes and ... A. Cooper, C.U., and E. B. Reed, R.H.

Except for a cutting wind, the surroundings were favourable, and the going was not heavy. Loveless, who turned out at the last moment, brought off a surprise, finishing first. He hails from Wellington, and won the Freshmen's match last year, but was not much heard of afterwards. On Saturday he showed up well, and should be in the running for his Blue. At the start Gavin and Linnott cut out the work, and after travelling several fields drew right away. Loveless was meanwhile occupying third place, and when two-thirds of the distance had been travelled he went after the leaders, and a mile and a half from home forged ahead. On the home road Linnott made a big effort, and overtook the Pembroke man when within a quarter of a mile from home. The effort, however, probably lost him the race, as he was unable to respond to Loveless's final efforts, and the latter came away and won easily. Gavin was gaining fast on the Ranelagh man at the finish. The Cambridge placings were:—1, 3, 4, 6 and 7; and they won by 15 points scoring 21 points to their opponents' 34.

CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY H. AND H. H. vs. RANELAGH H. H.—Whilst the first teams were competing at Cambridge the second teams contested a match over the Ranelagh 7 miles course. Although the home club supplied the first man home, it had to experience defeat by 24 points, one less than the 'Varsity team won by last year. F. G. Swan turned out for the Light Blues, but in reality only had a steady spin, as he came to town to consult a specialist with regard to a leg trouble. The course lay from the Green Man, across the Heath to the Windmill to Beverly Brook, along to the Dismal Swamp, through the fields to Cæsar's Camp, back past the Windmill, thence on the road home. The Light Blues were well in front at the Windmill, the leaders being Carver and Newton, followed by Whittingbeck, who took second place at Cæsar's Camp, where the lead had been secured by Winterbotham. Soon after the latter gave way to Whittingbeck, who was never afterwards headed, and won by about 75 yards. Officials:—Starter and timekeeper, Mr. H. Hewitt Griffin; judges, Messrs. W. Hastings, P. OXFORD FRESHMAN'S SPORTS.—On Saturday at Oxford in favourable weather these sports were concluded. G. E. Putman, a Rhodes scholar from Kansas, accomplished a fine performance in throwing the hammer 143ft. 5in., beating all freshmen records. Anderson was unexpectedly beaten in the 100 yards race by Chavasse, a brother of the blue, but he won the quarter-mile after a good race. Unfortunately there was no one to oppose Anderson in the 120 yards hurdle race, and he walked over in 18-4/5secs., so that no opportunity was afforded of judging of his school reputation. Appended are the results:—

100 Yards Race: F. B. Chavasse (Liverpool and Balliol), 1; A. H. Stuart (Merchiston and University). Won by inches. Time—11-1/5secs.

WINCHESTER

.405 Caliber, Big Bore High Power Rifles.

It's safer, when you are going after big game, to use a rifle whose power to kill you can always depend on. The Winchester .405 caliber Model 1895 rifle is at all ranges the most powerful made, a statement borne out by the following comparison: The remaining energy at 200 yards of a bullet shot by the .405 is greater than the muzzle energy of a bullet shot from the .45-70-405, which for many years was considered the most powerful rifle for big game hunting. The .405 is designed to use the Winchester .405 caliber cartridge, whose high velocity and 300-grain mushrooming bullet makes it particularly effective against all kinds of big game. Winchester rifles, with Winchester cartridges, each made for the other, are invaluable to all successful hunters.

CAMBRIDGE FRESHMEN'S SPORTS.—More perfect surroundings have never prevailed for athletics at this time of the year than was the case yesterday, when the concluding instalment of the Freshmen's sports were decided. Several meritorious performances were accomplished. Chief honours were again carried off by the young Yorkshireman, P. J. Baker. He had run twice before, winning the Queens' 500 yards strangers race, while on Tuesday he put up a Freshman's record for the mile, which he won in 4mins. 35-2/5secs. He turned out yesterday in the half-mile, which he won easily in 2mins. 0-3/5secs. time never approached by a "Fresher." One of the previous best times for a new hand was four years ago, when President Just did 2mins. 3-4/5secs. An old ex president and one of the best 'Varsity half-milers—the Rev. W. Workman—was present yesterday, and was, with others, much impressed by Baker's running. H. R. Ragg was seen to advantage in the sprint, and G. F. Elmslie did a very good performance at the hurdles. He has won both jumps, can sprint, played half-back in the Freshmen's Rugby match, and has been tried in the Trial Eights, so he must be regarded as a very promising all-round sport.

Officials:—Judges: Messrs T. H. Just (Trinity) and A. C. B. Bellerby (Emmanuel); referee, Rev. J. H. Gray (Queens'); starter, Dan Hayward; timekeeper, J. Newton Digby. Details:—

GOLF.

AMATEUR GOLF CHAMPIONSHIP.—The meeting of the delegates of the clubs governing the Amateur Golf Championship was held at Edinburgh on the 7th November under the chairmanship of Mr. A. R. Patterson, of the Honourable Company of Edinburgh Golfers. Fifteen of the twenty-four clubs were represented.

The meeting was held primarily for the consideration of the question as to the advisability of extending or limiting the rota of amateur championship greens.

The special committee which was appointed to consider the matter recommended that no change be made, but, after discussing the recommendation, the delegates decided that the present rota be abolished, and that the clubs governing the amateur championship should annually meet to select a green on which the championship should be played two years later. It was agreed that this be regarded merely as the personal opinion of the delegates, and not meantime to be binding on their clubs.

The question will be brought up for final discussion at the annual meeting, which will be held during the championship week next May at Muirfield.

The committee also recommended that no player shall be eligible to enter for the championship unless his handicap in a recognised club has been scratch, or below scratch, since the 1st of January of the year of the meeting, and that each competitor must enter through his club secretary, and that the committee of the council of the club must approve of the entry. This recommendation was adopted, and will come into force next year.

JAMES BRAID vs. HARRY VARDON.—After leading nearly all the way Harry Vardon was defeated by James Braid, the open champion, in a 36 holes match on the Wallasey Club's extended course, near Liverpool, on Saturday by two holes. Braid was off his short game in the first round, at the end of which he was three down. In the afternoon he was two down with five to play, but a splendid finish enabled him to win.

Indifferent approaching and putting cost Braid the first and third holes, and he was thus early two down. Vardon had so far been putting like his old self, but subsequently his short game deteriorated. Braid, however, lost chances on the greens. He squared at the tenth, but promptly dropped behind again, and, losing the last two holes, was three down on the round. The scores were:—

Out: 5 4 5 5 5 4 5 3 4—10. Home: 3 6 3 6 4 4 3 5 6—40.—80.

Vardon.

Out: 4 4 4 5 6 4 5 2 5—39. Home: 4 5 3 6 4 3 4 4 4—37.—76.

In the afternoon Braid won the first two holes, but he turned one down and was two down at the thirteenth. He secured the fourteenth and squared at the sixteenth with a par 3. Vardon played the last two holes indifferently, and losing both, he was beaten. Thus Braid did not obtain the lead until 35 holes had been played, and then he kept it. The second round scores were:—

Braid.

Out: 4 4 4 4 5 5 4 3 5—Home: 4 5 3 5 4 3 3 4 4—35.—73.

Vardon.

OXFORDS UNIVERSITY vs. WOKING.—Oxford University played their first match of the team no Sautrday, and defeated the Woking Club, at Woking ,by 63 points to 53. An original system of counting which was adopted accounts for the prodigality of the points. 10 was allowed for each individual game, in addition to 1 for every hole up credited to the winner. Thus a success by 4 and 3 counted 14 points. The leading Oxford men played particularly well, J. A. Robertson-Burham beating F. H. Mitchell, and C. V. L. Hooman defeating B. Darwin. The Hon'ble Denys Finch-Hatton halved with T. Mansfield Hunter. Details:—

ROWING.

MANY CHANGES IN OXFORD EIGHTS.—The Trial Eights underwent considerable alteration yesterday, for although in No. 2 the only change was the substitution of Woolley, one of the Wadham four, for Akers at 2, in No. 1 only Hislop, Kempe, and Cambell kept their places. Fisher was transferred from 7 to bow, vice Lee; the two Eton Freshmen, Garton and Harter, went to 6 and stroke respectively, displacing Graham and Higgins; and Ayrton (Trinity) superseded Burrage. The president and the secretary shared the coaching, and accompanied the crews a couple of journey to Iffley and back, a stroke of 25 per minute being the general rate. THE ROYAL DRAGOONS' TOURNAMENT.

THE semi-finals of the above Tournament took place on the Mohamed Bagh Club ground, Lucknow, on the 24th instant. The games were between the 17th Lancers and 12th Lancers, the 17th winning by 7 goals to one, and the Royal Dragoons and Durham Light Infantry in which the Royal Dragoons won by four goals to three.

The opening game, despite the disparity between the scores, was a fast contest, the 17th being much surer on the ball and making very long hits.

First Chukker.—The 17th Lancers had things their own Away and scored two goals.

Second Chukker.—Even play, no score.

Third Chukker.—Two goals were hit by the 17th Lancers.

Fourth Chukker.—No score.

Fifth Chukker.—The 12th played up and scored their first goal.

Sixth Chukker.—The 17th attacked almost throughout, and scored three goals. The 17th Lancers thus winning by seven goals to one.

Teams:—

17TH LANCERS.		12TH LANCERS.

Capt. Melvill	2	Mr. Styles	2
Mr. H. B. Turner	3	Mr. Nicholas	3
Capt. Lockett	4	Mr. Wood	4

ROYAL DRAGOONS vs. DURHAM L. I.—This was a very fast and even game. The Durhams led at the start, but subsequently the Dragoons pulled themselves together, and after a keenly contested game, won by the narrow margin of four goals to three.

First Chukker.—No score, fast up and down play.

Second Chukker.—The Durhams scored a goal.

Third Chukker.—The Durhams confined play to the Royals' end and scored two goals.

Fourth Chukker.—The Dragoons played well together, and obtained two goals in quick succesion.

Fifth Chukker.—The Dragoons scored one goal.

Sixth Chukker.—The play was exceedingly fast. The Durhams tried hard to score, but without success. Then just towards the close the Royals shot a goal amidst much applause. There was no further scoring, the Royal Dragoons thus winning by four goals to three by the Durham Light Infantry. Teams:—

FINAL.

The final game in the above Tournament took place on the 26th instant between the Royal Dragoons and the 17th Lancers before a large gathering of spectators, including a party from Government House. It was rather a sensational game, for in a few seconds from the start the Lancers scored two goals. There was up and down play for a while, and the Lancers obtained two more goals in the opening Chukker. The Lancers scored freely until the end of the third Chukker, after which the Royals woke up and made an effort, but the Lancers had secured too big a lead, and eventually won the game and the Tournament by ten goals to three.

The Cup was presented by Mrs. deLisle amidst cheers. It was a magnificent trophy bearing the inscription "Lucknow Autumn Polo Cup presented by the Royal Dragoons, 1907."

The ground throughout has played very well, and the Tournament has been a great success, for which credit is due to Lieutenant Atkinson, Honorary Secretary, and to Mr. Houston, who was in charge of the ground. The final was the last of the functions connected with the Army Cup week.

First Chukker.—The Lancers scored four goals.

Second Chukker.—The Lancers opened with one goal. The Dragoons ran down the ground and shot for goal, but the hit went wide. Up and down play, no further score. Score; Lancers, 4 goals; Royals, nil.

Third Chukker.—The Lancers scored three goals, one of which was hit through by deLisle in an attempt to send the ball across the goal mouth and clear. Score: Lancers, 8 goals; Royals, nil.

Fourth Chukker.—The Lancers just missed scoring, then Miles, of the Dragoons, took the ball half way up the ground and shot the first goal for the Royals. The Royals, who were pressing very hard, had two shots in succession at their opponents' goal which went wide, but the third effort proved successful. Score: Lancer, 8 goals; Royals, 2 goals.

Fifth Chukker.—A very good Chukker. Both teams attacked alternately. The Lancers got through first, and the Dragoons immediately retaliated. Score: Lancers, 9 goals; Royals, 3 goals.

Sixth Chukker.—Very good fast up and down play. Towards the end of the Chukker the Lancers scored. The 17th Lancers thus proved victorious by 10 goals to 3 goals by the Royal Dragoons. Teams as before.

Umpires:—Major Luard and Mr. Tod.

POLO IN POONA.

CONTINUING with the Alderson Polo Tournament on Saturday in Poona, two games were played off, in the first of which the Lincolns easily beat the M. I. No. 1. The former were handicapped minus three and the latter plus three, but this by means sufficed. In the four chukkers respectively the Lincolns scored two, four, two and three goals to the M. I. nil, so that the result read in the former's favour by eight goals to three.

A much closer affair was the other and a capital exhibition between two teams on scratch, the 26th Cavalry No. 2 and the Divisional Staff. The Cavalry had quite as much of the game as did their opponents, but their shooting was defective. One goal in the first two and the last chukkers left the Staff winners by three goals to nil. It was a fast game throughout and the Staff seemed to hold the advantage in mounts.

Three more games were played on Monday and the opening one was a most exciting one, being very close and productive of some fine play. It was between the Lincolns and the 26th Cavalry No. 3 with minus two and minus one. The Cavalry began well by hitting a goal in each of the first two chukkers, being plus one to minus two. In the third the Lincolns through a foul hit their only goal and, with the fourth chukker blank, the Cavalry ran out winners.

Another fairly close game was the one between the R. F. A No. 2 and the Baluchis, each plus three. In the first the Baluchis hit two goals to their opponents' one, but the R. F. A. made up for this in the next. Play continued very even, but the Artillery got through again in the two remaining chukkers and consequently won by seven goals to five.

Lastly the Divisional Staff met the M. I. No. 2, and though the former had the better of the exchanges some more good play was seen all round. In the first two periods the Staff made up three of the four goals start they were conceding. In the third they scored twice and placed themselves ahead, to further establish their superiority by putting through three in the last few minutes. The final score was eight goals to four in favour of the Staff.

A large number turned out on Wednesday to witness three further games, one of which was between two teams that have shown the best form, the 26th Cavalry No. 1 and the Sappers. The first was between the Baluchis and Miners, both plus three and was of rather an uneven nature. In the first few minutes the Baluchis had the better of exchanges and were first to score, but this state of things did not last. Subsequent play saw the Miners distinctly superior and by scoring seven times ran out hollow winners by ten goals to four.

The bonne bouche followed, and in it the Sappers undoubtedly had none too much of the luck. The Cavalry were better mounted and must be given the credit of deserving their win. Only towards the end could the Sappers score and wipe off their minus point, the Cavalry having notched two from scratch and putting in two more. The 26th consequently won by [redacted] goals to nil.

Thirdly a game in which the M. I No. 1, plus three, suffered from bad shooting against the R. F. A. No. 1, plus four. The M. I. failing to score and the R. F. A. putting in three, ran out by seven goals to three.

There was only one game on Friday, between the M. I Nos. and 2, which was very closely contested. Each scored a goal in the first, No 1 in the second and in the third No 2 equalised. In the last each scored and the score stood three all, but, with their plus 4 as against plus three, the No. 2 totalled seven goals to six and won.

"I noticed, Ella, that you were eating your pudding far too fast. There was once a little boy who choked through doing that; before he had finished his pudding, even." "And what did they do with the rest of the pudding, Aunty?"

"Poor John! he was a kind and forbearing husband!" sobbed John's widow, on the return from the funeral. "Yes," said a sympathizing neighbour, "but it's for the best. You must try and comfort yourself that your husband is at peace at last."

"I engaged the rooms for my holiday," he said, "because the landlady wrote me that they overlooked a superb garden of 200 acres, richly adorned with statuary, where I was at liberty to promenade" "Well?" he inquired. "It was a cemetery," he said, bitterly.

CRICKET IN CALCUTTA.

CALCUTTA C. C. vs. CUSTOMS.—Played on the 28th and 29th instant. The Customs went in first and at the end of the first day's play had scored 232 for 5 wickets. Quiterio not out 66, Cadell 53, C. Barlow 38 and Stevens 23 were the chief contributors. Resuming on Sunday Quiterio and H. Barlow scored fast and when Barlow's wicket fell McCready joined Quiterio. Both batted well: Quiterio was bowled by Guise after compiling 106 (his third century this season), a faultless innings save for one difficult chance on the leg side. McCready's not out 50 was an excellent display. With 8 wickets down for 368 the innings was declared closed and Calcutta went in. They made a poor beginning, for five wickets fell with the score at 74. Guise batted well and was not out l.-w.-b. for 64. After his departure 70 runs were added by the others, of whom Slater (27), Twiss (20), were the highest scorers. Calcutta were all out for 194, the Customs thus winning by 174 runs. Scores:—

GOLF IN BOMBAY.

ST. ANDREW'S MEDAL.—This competition—two rounds of the course—was played on the 25th and 27th ultimo. Two medals were to be competed for—a gold medal for the Senior class and a silver medal for the Junior class,—and in addition a prize was given for the best handicap score returned.

Twenty-six entered and on the first day Mr. C. A. Russ led in the senior division with a score of 40, and Mr. L. Barraclough and P. W. Cresswell with 48 each were the best of the juniors. Mr. Russ did not maintain his form on the second day and Messrs. Roberts and England tied for the gold medal and will have to play it off. Mr. J. H. IS GOLF A GAME OR A SCIENC ?

IN many ways we in England are slaves to the thought of the men who went before, observes Mr. P. A. Vaile in a home paper. We are far too much inclined to accept without question the existing condition of affairs without analysing for ourselves. This is especially noticeable in golf, and in no department of the game is it more pronounced than in the drive.

I do not propose to harass my readers with a learned dissertation as to which hand takes the club away from the ball, and when the left wrist begins to turn under. That has been done so often and so fully. I want in this article to address myself to one particular point in connection with the golfing swing, a point of the utmost importance, yet one which is always erroneously stated in books, even in the latest and most renowned.

Practically every golf book tells the reader that at the top of his swing his weight must be on his right foot. Now this teaching is wrong. It may sound almost rash to thus set up one's opinion against the great ones of the golfing world, but, strange to say, they by their actions support my statement. In fact, they lay down one thing and do another.

If we look at the instantaneous photographs of Harry Vardon we can see quite clearly that at the top of his swing his weight is at least equally divided. As a matter of fact, it is generally more on the left than on the right.

If we look at the posed photographs of James Braid, illustrating the letter press of "Advanced Golf," we see his weight clearly on the right. If we look at the instantaneous photographs of the famous player, taken when playing his stroke naturally, we see just as clearly and unmistakably that the weight is on the left. Roleson, the brilliant young golfer whose sudden jump into fame at Mid-Surrey will be fresh in my reader's minds, seems to put most of his weight on the left at the top of his swing. George Duncan, the famous young Hanger Hill professional, certainly does so.

THE FATAL SWAY.

All good instructors are very pronounced in their instructions to players not to sway. Swaying is the act of drawing the body back as one raises the club, and it is generally considered fatal to good driving, although there are many players who drive well in spite of it; but it is hard to tell how much better they might drive if they played in better form.

Harry Vardon says that if a player desires to obtain the best results he must not sway an inch. He is most emphatic and positive in his instructions about this. Now it is quite easy for anyone of a scientific and inquiring turn of mind to absolutely decide this question for himself. Let him take his stand with some object against his side which renders it impossible for him to get back an inch further from the hole. A projecting arm from a wall will do, as it will not interfere in any way with one's swing. Being now so placed that swaying is impossible nothing will be left to one but to obtain the swing by pure loin torsion, in simpler language, by merely twisting the body. If anyone can do this and still keep the greater portion of his weight on the right foot, he must, I think, be very peculiarly shaped.

An ultra-scientific golf student, and I know there are many such, may carry this experiment still further, and by the simplest of mechanical means ascertain the exact pressure in pounds avoirdupois that there is on each foot.

Golf is a game that calls for a high degree of mechanical accuracy. The ball is probably the smallest ball played with. The striking surface of the club is probably the smallest ball-smiting implement we have in field sports or games, and the ball is a very long way out of the line of sight, which is a most important factor in obtaining accuracy in aim.

A COMFORT DENIED.

Whether it be striking a billiard ball, shooting with a gun, a bow, or a catapult aiming with a stone or a ball, or playing a billiard ball, we instinctively try to get the eye as much in a line with the ball and the objective as we possibly can.

In golf, the game which leaves us the least possible margin of error, we are denied this comfort, and must of necessity play our drive with the ball farther away from us than in any other ball game.

Besides preventing swaying, the proper adjustment of the weight at the top of the swing has another important effect on the drive. It stands to reason that if the player's weight is on his left foot, he cannot pull away off his drive as do so many who put their weight on the right.

The position that players are in to-day so far as regards this question is that they will find me in direct contradiction of the letter press of the leading books, and they must choose between following that or accepting my statement of the proper way to play the stroke, backed up by their own experiments, and the wonderful corroborative testimony of instantaneous photographs of such famous players as Braid, Vardon, and Duncan; and, needless to say, when one is confidently advancing such an apparently revolutionary doctrine, such corroboration is very valuable, for as all golfers, especially those who have the inner knowledge of things, understand, this is essentially a case where deeds speak louder than words.

For years it has been taken as an accepted fact that a rough ball, that is, a pimply or a dimply one, flies better than a smooth one. It is asserted that it gets a better grip on the air than a plain ball. It unquestionably does, and is therefore probably more retarded in its flight than a plain ball, but the roughness of its surface gives the club a greater grip on it than it could get on a plain ball. This is probably where the advantage claimed comes in and not in any superior "flying" powers possessed by "pimples" or "dimples."

Hockey.

AGA KHAN TOURNAMENT.

IN connection with the Aga Khan Hockey Tournament in Poona, the concluding game of last week was that between the Lincolns "A" and Leicesters. It was a finished exhibition of the game all the way and a close fight which might have easily ended otherwise at any moment. Being the first to open, the Leicesters soon added a second, but before half time arrived the Lincolns got through. The game was in a most interesting condition and play was very fast but neither could do any further damage and the score was left as before, in favour of the Leicesters by two goals to one.

On Monday the Leicesters met their doom at the hands of the King's Royal Rifles. It was as interesting a game as the former, neither being able to keep up the pressure long on the other goal. The Rifles showed no end of dash and once getting the advantage worried the opposition out of reducing it. They ran out eventually by two goals to one.

Continuing on Tuesday, yet another close and fast game was played, this being between the Indian Army Officers and the Northamptons "B" team. After fifteen minutes' play the Officers opened their account and crossed over in the lead. Shortly after resuming, however, the Northamptons equalised, only for the Officers to score again a few minutes before full time. They thus won by two goals to one.

The Northamptons "A" met the R. F. A. on Wednesday when the former had a fairly easy time of it. Some manœuvres had been indulged in by the latter regiment during the day, but anyhow the Northamptons showed themselves the cleverer. Four goals were hit by them and they ran out easy winners as the Artillery failed to get through at all.

A very fair game was played on Thursday between the Bishop's High School and Tattersall's Club. They were pretty well matched, but the school-boys had decidedly the better, however, and won in the end by two goals to nil.

A great game was seen on Friday when the Indian Army Officers met the King's Royal Rifles. It was a spirited game from start to finish, both staying out well. The Officers seemed rather the cleverer with their sticks and just squeezed home winners by a goal to nil.

The Kennel.

DISTEMPER DOWNED.

AT a recent meeting of the Ladies' Kennel Association of Massachusetts, Mr. Moore gave the following interesting lecture of a new cure for distemper.

I am here to-day to tell you of a cure for distemper which differs from other cures inasmuch as it does what it purports to do, and to tell you how it operates, and something further in the way of rational treatment of the dog during the progress of this disease. It may be necessary to lay before you as briefly as may be, some details that while they may not of themselves interest you, are still necessarily told you in order to make clear the working of the remedy. I propose to strip my talk of all possible technical detail.

In all infectious diseases we may declare as a fact that so far as the treatment of them goes, any attempt at specific medication by drugs, herbs, etc., is worse than useless. There is no possibility of successful specific treatment. The best that can be done by the drug or herb method is to treat a case symptomatically and all veterinarians and kennel men know with what sort of success this meets in distemper.

It is of no use to reduce a moderate fever by means of acetanalid, phenacetin or some other febrifuge and have the cause of the fever still existing and active. There is nothing gained by stimulation when by the very act of stimulation, the glands of the body are forced to absorb at a faster rate the toxins which are constantly being elaborated by the cause, i.e., the germ. It is of no use in intestinal flushing to restrain intestinal activity when the cause of that activity exists unabated. Does there exist a drug so potent and yet so harmless to the life force of the animal that it can go into the circulation and as a drug, meet and kill the germ? Is there a drug that can stimulate the physiologic activity to the extent of inducing an increase in the number and power of leucocytes sufficient to exterminate the germ? There are no such drugs. Nearly all the drugs in the pharmacopoeia have been tried and those who know and who give expression to a perfectly honest opinion, all say we are unable to cope with this disease.

Distemper is an acute infectious disease caused by a microbe. This microbe, so harmful when left to its own devices, we have isolated and by proper handling can transform into a most beneficent agent. The period of incubation in this disease varies greatly, running from a few days to several months. The onset may be gradual and the symptoms presented in the earlier stages rather closely resemble those of measles in the human being. Later, as the disease progresses, thee symptoms change and give us a clinical picture of typhoid as we observe it in human kind. In the beginning of the disorder, loss of appetite, a peculiar cough, and catarrhal symptoms are manifest. The lymphatic system shows involvement by exhibition of enlarged glands in various parts of the body. The cough with which we are all familiar sounds as if the animal were trying to expel some foreign substance from the throat. This is a peculiarly constant symptom of the early stages of the disease. Dogs of all ages are subject to distemper. One attack usually confers immunity, although any animal may have a second attack.

Pus formation in the intestinal lymphatics and in other parts of the body is usually found. Pneumonia and cardiac disorders are common complications, as are multiple neuritis, chorea and paralysis common sequelae. The mortality rate has always, under the older methods of treatment, been very high. So high that this disease has been the discouragement of the breeder and the despair of the veterinarian. With our treatment the mortality rate is almost nil. The diagnosis of distemper in typical cases is easy to one of experience and there should be no difficulty in recognizing the disease early enough to insure the most favourable results from proper treatment.

In cases where the resistance of the animal to infection is high a spontaneous cure may be effected even when labouring under the disadvantage of highly improper treatment and disregard of care in diet. The number of animals that have this strong power of resistance is very small, hence the high death rate.

The procedure so strongly advocated by many, of forced feeding, cannot be too severely criticized, as owing to the activities of this peculiar germ, the digestive functions are disturbed to a great extreme and the transformation of food into a nutrient material is not possible in any quantity and a poisonous decomposing material is the result; unless, indeed, the other horn of the dilemma is encountered, namely, the passing along of the food in an almost entirely unchanged condition, which serves only to irritate mechanically the inflamed digestive apparatus and naturally depresses the dog instead of giving strength.

The treatment of the animal has been purely symptomatic by one class, the more scientific one, and empiric by those who form another class, namely, those who have "something good for distemper." In a dog of sufficient natural defensive power the spontaneous recovery is effected through the substances of the blood, which have been named by Sir A. E. Wright, opsonins. These substances cannot be seen through the microscope nor demonstrated as yet chemically, but by a series of biologic tests can be clearly demonstrated and their activity measured. The opsonins are stimulated or increased in quantity by the infection in an animal whose defensive powers are high. The opsonic power in dogs is high in relation to most infective germs, but low indeed toward the germ of distemper, hence dogs take this disease readily and combat it poorly unless assisted by injection of a bacterin to increase this power. A bacterin is a solution of dead germ. That is, dead germs in a solution composed of salt and water.

How do the opsonins act and where they are found are things we will discuss to-day. It will be necessary for me to recall to your minds some simple facts about blood. Blood, the most elastic tissue of the body, may for our purpose to-day be said to consist of three parts—the red corpuscle, of which there are about three million in a drop of blood; the white, of which there are about 7,000 in the same quantity, and the colourless fluid in which they both float, called plasma. We will dismiss from our thoughts the red corpuscle, after stating that it is to these that the red colour of the blood is due. The white corpuscle, that most interesting thing to physiologists and physio-pathologists, we must consider in order to know of the action of opsonins. The white corpuscle is called a leucocyte, or, from its most widely advertised function, a phagocyte. The whitecells, or phagocytes, possess power of independent movement or locomotion. They pass along in the blood stream to a point where they are needed in the bodily economics and then in a most marvellous way they pierce the wall of the vessel and by a magic transcending that of man, pass through, leaving no opening to mark the place of exit. This is done by the cell in this way; the cell first gravitates to the spot at which it is to pass through the wall of the blood vessel and then the shape of the cell begins to change by the appearance of a projecting finger or point on one side of the cell. At the extremity this point is exceedingly fine and pierces the cell wall as would a fine needle (if such could be passed through the inter-spaces of the tissue), and when once the point of this finger, or foot as it is called, has passed through the wall, the leucocyte appears to flow through the little channel it has thus formed. Whenever on its journey it encounters a germ or minute foreign substance which is acceptable to it, it attacks the germ and engulfs it, literally wrapping itself around it, and in a short time, if viewed through the microscope, the germ would be seen inside the body of the white cell.

I will draw on the board figures to represent the white corpuscle, the red corpuscle and the pseudopodium or false foot by means of which the white corpuscle performs its ambulatory acts. I will also indicate the way the white corpuscle looks after it has devoured the germ. After looking at these drawings, you will have no difficulty in recognizing these bodies in the microscope which Dr. Millar will get ready for you and through which you may view specimens which he has prepared, showing what I have just mentioned.

I can imagine you thinking "What about the way this remedy cures distemper?" I will tell you presently. I have determined by careful tests the exact dosage necessary to attain best results for all ages and weights of dogs. We prepare the bacterin carefully, it being necessary that every dose be absolutely sterile and in order to prepare it as it should be, the greatest care is necessary and most exact attention to minte details.

Your dog is ill with distemper. Take a phial of his toxin, shake it well and draw it carefully into a clean hypodermic syringe; exhaust all air in the syringe, and pinching up a fold of skin in any part of the body where the circulation of blood is abundant, inject the whole dose beneath the skin. For a short time in most dogs there will be no change observable (negative phase), but in two or three days the animal will show a wonderful, and, indeed, an almost unbelievable improvement. You all know the prostration and misery of a dog "down with distemper." With this method of treatment used early in the disease he never gets down; he is up and lively during the entire period of the difficulty. It should be borne in mind, however, that while the animal seems well, he is not, and should be treated as a sick dog until the eight weeks which constitute the normal run of distemper are past. Do not feed anything but very light diet in the first two or three weeks of this disease; pure, fresh milk, milk toast, eggnog, and not much of this. He will take no harm from the lack of food during the period of fever. Your veterinarian will instruct you in this matter and suggest adjunct treatment.

The dog when taken ill with distemper takes on all the processes of infection; the feeble phagocytic power of the blood offers but slight hope of recovery if left to its own resources. As mentioned before, the opsonic content of the dog's blood is low toward this germ and impetus from some external sources is needed if the animal is to throw off the disease. By way of illustration, let us suppose that in a given case examination of the white corpuscles of the dog's blood shows that in one hundred phagocytes, there has been an average ingestion of one-half germ; that is, for every two phagocytes, there has been one germ devoured.

This would indicate that the opsonic content of the blood was low and the probability of the dog waging a successful battle with the disease is very remote. We give him a dose, selected with due regard to the age and weight of the dog, of our bacterin, and from fifty-six to seventy-two hours later we make another examination of the blood. We will then find an average of six or seven germs in each phagocyte, and the reason of the dog's change for the better is perfectly clear to all. When we consider the number of phagocytes in the blood, it will readily be seen that the extermination of the germ when the opsonic content is high, goes on at a very rapid rate.

This sounds too good to be true, almost like a fairy tale; but it is true—absolutely. We have treated hundreds of dogs and we know. Our tests have covered about three years, so you will see we have not published in haste. Since the New York dog show, we have treated, free of all expense, nearly two hundred and fifty dogs ill of distemper. We want every one to know of this great thing for dogs. It is now really true that every dog has his day, for it is an assured fact that the day of the dog has come. The importance of this remedy to breeders and fanciers, I leave to your imagination. It is hard to realize at once. The suffering it will save the animals is something I like to dwell on. It is a glad era for the dog.

Some of the veterinarians into whose hands we have placed this agent have declared that we are too conservative; that our insistance upon getting the dog in the early stage is unnecessary; that it will do wonders for far-advanced cases. It will. I have abundant evidence of that. But consider—all dogs do not possess the same vitality; some may succumb to what others could stand without difficulty. Why wait until they are very sick? Why not treat them early and have a well dog, and let him enjoy his run of distemper? Some dogs must necessarily die of distemper. Human beings die of whooping cough, measles and other diseases not accounted as a fatal type. Dogs that are inbred, those that inherit some defect or have some other underlying disease, may die, but the number of these will be very small.

New Clerk: I notice some of these barrels of apples are marked X and some Z. Are they different kinds?

Dealer: No; same kind but differently packed. Some customers want a barrel opened at the bottom and some at the top.

The small boy was explaining matters to his sister, and the subject was art. "Why do artists always sign their name at the bottom of their pictures?" queried the girl. This for the moment stumped the boy, but he came out of it all right. "So that people may know which is the top of the picture and which the bottom," was the triumphant reply.

STRAY NOTES.

The announcement that there has been secured for the London Zoological Gardens a specimen of a rare variety of bird of paradise recalls the fact that Dr. Alfred Russell Wallace, the eminent scientist, is connected with the introduction of these birds to England. It is now more than forty years since he took home from the East for the society two examples of the lesser birds of paradise, the first exhibited alive in England. Stuffed specimens had, however, been shown long before in various museums, and somewhere in the 'thirties of the nineteenth century the Princess Augusta had one alive for a short time at Windsor.

From time to time other examples were exhibited at Regent's Park, including the larger bird of paradise, with yellow plumes, and the red bird of paradise, so named from the rich ruby tint of its plumes. The red bird is rarer than those which were first exhibited, and it is confined to the single island of Waigiow; but there is a general agreement in form and habits.

The king bird of paradise was imported in 1904, and two males were purchased for the collection. These well deserve the name of living jewels; the back glows with ruby red, and a band of metallic green divides the yellow of the throat from the satiny white of the underparts. These were the first shown in any public collection.

The average man, if he had a bird's appetite, would devour from thirty to thirty-one pounds of food a day, which would be a tax upon the larder. Recent experiments have proved that the average bird manages to eat about one-fifth his own weight daily with ease, if he can get so much food, and in a wild state, though the bird has to hunt for his daily provender, he is eating a large part of the time during the day, and manages to get his full rations. The smaller the bird, the more voracious seems to be its appetite and its power of absorption. A German scientist recently kept a canary under observation for a month. The little creature weighed only 16 grammes, but in the course of a month it managed to eat 512 grammes weight of food; that is, about thirty-two times its own weight. The bird must, therefore, have eaten its own weight in food every day. An ordinary man with a canary's appetite would consume 150 pounds of food a day. But the canary is an extreme case. The ordinary bird in good health will be satisfied with one-fifth of its weight a day by way of food.

For the 28th time in the last 53 years William U. Cake, a linoleum printer, of Trenton, New Jersey, is shedding his skin as a snake does. Instead of periodical casting aside of the cuticle, Cake is likely to shed his skin at any time.

Cake has been afflicted with this skin-shedding malady since childhood. First he is taken with a chill, then the skin dries up, cracks, and peels off entirely within two weeks. During this period he suffers agony because of itching. But as soon as the skin has been shed Cake is all right again. He has several children, but none of them has manifested any symptoms of skin-shedding.

Specialists have treated Cake many times, but none of them has ever done him any good. The nearest they have got to his disease is to call it "Dermatitis exfoliatina."

The longest interval that Cake remembers in which the malady did not manifest itself was nine years, but his skin generally comes off once in two years. A few years ago he had a severe attack of influenza, and his physician prescribed belladonna. His skin came off three times within the next 14 weeks.

Cake enjoys good health except for this strange malady. He is now in the hands of physicians, who hope that they may discover what the disease is.

The success which has attended a recent attempt to rear nightjars in captivity may be the prelude to many other interesting experiments in that direction. There are places where it might be desirable to encourage such useful species by artificial means, although in the South of England at any rate nightjars in a wild state are quite common enough. On the Sussex Downs this summer they have been extraordinarily plentiful, and the wild weather of the autumn tempted them to make a much later stay than usual. The bird, when unmolested, shows an utter disregard for the presence of man, and the occurrence of a specimen in the heart of London this summer was an interesting circumstance. Since the introduction of electric light into our big country towns the nightjar has learned how to profit by the fact that an arc-lamp is an attraction which moths and other night-flying insects cannot resist. One may therefore occasionally see the strange sight of a nightjar hawking round these lamps as soon as they are lighted on a summer's evening, and even the incandescent gas lamps are sometimes made use of in the same way. Few birds are so useful as the nightjar, for, although they doubtless destroy a number of harmless insects they also devour a huge quantity of moths and other small fry that are harmful to the gardener and the agriculturist. The nightjar's names are legion, some of the best known being night-hawk, fern-owl, goatsucker, puckeridge, and razor-grinder.

The mason-fly is an interesting insect found in New Zealand Its method of providing food for its larvæ is to capture a spider and, after laying an egg, seal him up with clay in any crevice or opening that may seem suitable. All sorts of places are chosen, and some bad gun accidents, it is said, have occurred through these flies choosing the guns for their nests and sealing the barrels half way up with solid clay.

THE FINAL REPORT.

It is a refreshing thing nowadays to meet with a man who is wrapped up, heart and soul, in his work, who is willing to devote every scrape of his mental and physical energy to the accomplishment of the task set before him in life by fate and circumstance.

Such a man was Richard Strachan, journalist, and although at the age of twenty-five he was only second reporter on the staff of the Birmingham Argus, no one had the least doubt that in the final accomplishment of his destiny he would fill an editorial chair. He had no doubt of it himself, and he certainly worked hard enough to justify the utmost optimism.

If especial accuracy was required in any report for the Argus, Strachan was despatched; if it was a case where promptitude was of value, the same man was sent; if a thing wanted writing up with especial taste and tact, Strachan again. He would be head of his department the first day that it should be vacated by his senior, a man who had filled the position for twenty years.

When, on the night of 22nd November, the terrible explosion occurred at Messrs. Kylloch's Gunpowder Mills, Strachan was first on the spot of all the Birmingham journalists. Indeed, he was there before the Fire Brigade, and distanced the Ambulance Corps by an easy half-mile. The disaster occurred at half-past eleven, on a dark, foggy night. The journalist heard the detonation just as he was turning into bed, and in less than ten minutes he had got out his motor cycle, and was scorching towards the scene of the catastrophe.

Whilst the doctors were collecting into sacks the fragments of the four unfortunate men who had been blown to atoms, Strachan was hunting the half-frenzied manager round the grounds, and dragging from him as much information as a crazy man might be expected to give. When the bodies were ready for conveyance to the ambulances, at a quarter-past one, he was seated on a half-wrecked wall, completing his account of the disaster by the light of the entrance lamp, writing up the affair in his usual superior style. Details too gruesome to appear in print were elided or hinted at most delicately; every bit of real pathos, and there was plenty of it, was seized upon. There was a splendid piece of description at the beginning of the sensations produced by that eerie night of search for the ghastly fragments of the dead, a description that deserved to be incorporated in something more lasting than the columns of a provincial daily. But Strachan had barely finished the concluding paragraph of his account, when the second explosion took place.

He was thrown from his seat on the wall, his lower limbs battered in a way that will not bear description, and the came to himself to find a doctor bending over his body, which was shortened in a curiously fantastic manner. For a moment he regarded himself in a half-dazed, unrecognising way; then his hand wandered towards his breast pocket, and finally he brought out his pad of scribbling paper.

"Anyone else hurt, beside me?" he questioned, in rather low, but very clear, tones.

"Three others," returned the medico briefly raising a gory hand in a gesture that enjoined silence.

"You might write it—somebody," suggested Strachan, waving the pad and pencil rather aimlessly towards the one or two bystanders. "It's got to go in before three o'clock."

Then, as some one took the things from his hand, he closed his eyes, and began to dictate.

"About half-past one another detonation occurred in one of the sheds at the south-east corner of the works," he said. "Fortunately the results of this were not so disastrous as of the first. Three men were seriously injured, and one killed."

"There is no one killed," interrupted the doctor, busy picking up arteries. Strachan did not regard the correction.

"One killed," he repeated. "A young journalist named, Strachan." Then he opened his eyes.

"That's all," he said.

And his report was found accurate, as usual.

They were discussing a certain authoress at dinner, and an accepted wit raised a laugh by remarking, "Well, her hair's red, even if her books are not." The mild young man in the corner made a mental note of the sally for future use, and at another dinner party shortly afterwards he carefully guided the conversation into literary channels. Fortunately, someone mentioned the desired name and he triumphantly called out, "Well, she's got red hair, even if her books haven't.

WHEN KNIGHTS WERE BOLD.

THE London Comedy Company opened their season at the Grand Opera House on Saturday night when they presented the farcical Comedy "When Knights were Bold." Mr. Ward's Company had won golden opinions in the South and in the Western Presidency town, and Calcutta assembled in force last Saturday to judge whether their performance fulfilled their promise. The house was packed from stalls to gallery and the audience was uproariously appreciative. Comus reigned supreme throughout the evening. It was soon evident to those present that their expectations were to be realised and the general opinion at the close of the performance was that the company was one of the strongest that has visited "The Ditch" for many years. The ovation they received and the boisterous enthusiasm at the close must have been gratifying to Mr. Ward and the other members of his talented company. It certainly showed that the Calcutta public is really capable of appreciating good worth. Charles Marlowe (Miss H. Jay) the author of "When Knights were Bold" seems to have borrowed the main spring for her very amusing play from Mark Twain's Yankee at the Court of King Arthur. Sir Guy de Vere dreams himself back 700 years and in Act II finds his friends and servants in the dresses of the twelfth century, with ideas and manners to match. His Jewish friend Isaacson of the Stock Exchange is the prey of every one: The Dean of Beechwood has become Peter the Monk: Sir Guy's aunt and cousins are a prioress and novices and they and all the servants loudly demand the burning of Isaacson as a heretic at the stake. The humour at some stages is rather of the knock-about order, as when Sir Guy "goes for" his mailed adversary, Sir Brian Ballymote, with his fists and bangs him into astounded submission; but on the whole the play is cleverly written and was very cleverly played, particularly by Mr. Ward, who as Sir Guy de Vere was of course the soul of the piece and kept the house in roars of laughter throughout. He was ably supported by Miss Grace Palotta whose impersonation of the romantic Lady Rowena was a finished and graceful performance. Where all were good 'tis difficult to single out individuals, but we may say a special word of praise for Mr. William Beattie and Miss Rose Musgrave, who as Isaacson and his daughter were excellent, and Mr. Reginald Wykeham who scored a big success as the Dean of Beachwood. Other parts were well played by the Misses Celia Ghiloni, Kate Rawson and Ruby Baxter and Messrs. Robert Greig, W. S. Ryott, Arthur Eldred and H. H. Wallace. The piece was well staged, the scenery and properties being exact replicas of those in the original production at Wyndham's.

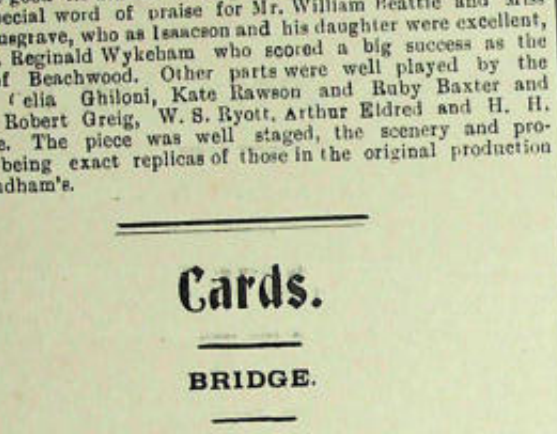
Solution to Problem No. 77.

SOLUTION.

Z must sacrifice his king of trumps, and lead out the ace and another. He cannot be blocked in clubs unless the ace is doubly guarded, which is unlikely, as there are only four against him, and if he can clear the suit before spades are led he will win the game (assuming a normal distribution of the adverse trumps). Now, if he plays himself in with the king of trumps, instead of leading the ace, he is bound to lead a heart or a club and to show strength in these suits is just the way to drive the opponents into spades. It is better, therefore, to give up the slightly increased chance of dropping the queen of trumps, and take out two rounds at once. If a spade is led through Y, B may not care to return the suit.

Problem No. 78.

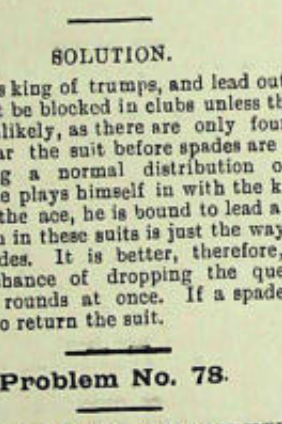
BRIDGE PROBLEM AND SOLUTION.



Score: A B, 0; Y Z, 24. Z deals, and declares clubs. Y's and Z's hands are as follow:—

Y's Hand (Dummy).—Hearts, king, queen, 3; diamonds, 9, 8, 6, 5; clubs, king, queen, 2; spades, ace, knave, 9.

Z's Hand (Dealer).—Hearts, 7, 6; diamonds, 10, 4; clubs, ace, 10, 9, 4, 3; spades, queen, 5, 4, 2.



The first three tricks are as follow:—

Trick 1. Trick 2.

Tricks: A B, 0; Y Z, 1; Tricks: A B, 0; Y Z, 2.

Trick 3.

Tricks: A B, 0; Y Z, 3.

How ought the dealer to go on with the hand, and why?

THE STANLEY SHOW.

LONDON, Friday, 13th November 1908

WITH the Stanley Show, which is held during the last week in November, we shall have an opportunity of reviewing the progress the year has seen in the design and equipment of cycles. We may affirm with a fair amount of assurance that there will be nothing sensationally startling at the popular Islington show. There was a time when every year witnessed the arrival of a batch of new ideas, some of them marking a distinct forward step, and all of them entitled to respect. But nowadays we have arrived at finality in cycle design, so at least they tell us, and if there are any good novelties at the show you can be sure they apply only to details. Well, there is room in that direction for development. Brakework, wheel adjustments, gear cases, are to my mind points where there is room for improvement, and it is possible to compile a lengthy list of them.

We shall have the usual fine show of leading cycles at the Stanley. There are one or two absentees, of which the Rudge-Whitworth is a prominent example, but an exhibition can be styled representative of the English trade when it includes the Humber, Raleigh, Premier, Rover, Sunbeam, Triumph, Singer, Star, James, New Hudson, Dursley Pedersen, Sparkbrook, and Enfield. Some of the exhibits will have a special interest for the rider who is keen enough to watch the annual development of the bicycle. The Rover people are fitting a new detachable back rim brake, the feature of which is that on the release of a small spring the whole of the brake work can be taken from the back, thus facilitating changing of tyres. This seems to be a good idea. One of the most irritating things about the machine nowadays is the difficulty of handling the tyres, owing to the manner the brake stirrup encloses the tyre and rim, and if this device proves practical it means a distinct advance. Appreciating the requirements of club men, the company are placing two special road racers on the market. One is the popular, which is listed at £6 10s., fitted with coaster hub and brake, flat mudguards, and speed tyres, and there is a similar model costing £7 7s., which is fitted with wood rims and super speed tyres. The racing model has been reduced to £8 8s., and we may now see it popularised among all classes of track exponents, especially in view of its great success this year at the Olympic Games, the championships, and elsewhere.

The Enfield Company will have a very attractive stand. Some of the models are fitted with brakework of entirely new design, and one imagines there has been a move in the right direction. On the handle-bar stem there is clipped a detachable lug carrying a projection, at the end of which is another lug bored parallel with the handle-bar, and carrying a solid spindle which projects beyond both ends of the former. On to this spindle the rolling levers, to which the brake toggles are attached, swing, and the whole fitment appears at first sight like two levers in one piece, and is neat accordingly. The clips are attached to the frame in a neat style, and both back and front stirrups can be removed from position by slight hand pressure. In the Riche Duplex girder models the endeavour to improve the appearance of the brakework has been developed, the rod of the front brake being concealed and the stirrups both back and front of special design. Fitted to some of the models is a new bath gear case, in which the makers have aimed at the qualities of oil and dust proof, easy detachability, and fitting. The Triumph Company seem to have made some further improvements in their Imperial model, which is their finest production. All the exclusive features (and the Triumph is noted for the number of patent specialities it controls) are embodied. For instance, there is the eccentric bracket for chain adjustment, by means of which the adjustment may be made by one simple operation, and there is no need to soil the hands in doing so. Then there is the patent band brake, which is a hand-applied brake (from an inverted lever), with the band operating on the groved drum fitted to the rear hub. By a special method of construction this band is quite flexible, so that drag or friction is obviated—a common fault in many types.

The Lea-Francis machine is not a popular-priced one, and if you want a cheap cycle you must look elsewhere, but it is always worth the closest inspection, for its designers have a knack of introducing one or two good improvements in detail per annum. This year they have a new crown, a departure from the practice of a completely plated crown. This latter has become a tradition among manufacturers from the days when the box crown was introduced, and it justified itself as indicating the machines fitted with that improvement. In this new model, instead of plating the whole crown, a plated top is fitted, and by this means the line of black is not broken. Carrying out this policy of beauty, without gaudiness, the Lea-Francis machines have all the brake and similar rods enamelled, instead of plated. At a distance these enamelled rods are practically invisible, and the machine no longer looks as if it is festooned with rods and wires. The process adds a good deal to the cost of the machine, so I am told, though it is not clear why, but it adds equally to its appearance. But the chief Lea-Francis innovation this year is the new pedal, which is as much as something like 11oz. lighter than the standard type—a saving in weight of 40 per cent. The body of the pedal is made of aluminium and the tabular centre of the same material. It is fitted with rubber studs, which can be reversed after wear, and the net result is a comfortable rubber pedal at the weight of the rat-trap type. The steel portions, such as the pin, cone, and cups for the ball bearings, are treated by the "Coslett" anti-rusting process, so that the whole pedal is practically impervious to rust. This in itself is a great consideration, for, while it is easy to keep handle-bar plating in good condition, it is impossible to do so with the average pedal, owing to the awkwardness and inacessibility of the plated parts. Apparently a series of severe tests leaves no doubt about the strength and wearing qualities of this new pedal.

No revolutionary changes seem to have been made in the Raleigh models, but several detail improvements are embodied, this applying to brakework and mudguard attachments. The box fork crown on the cheaper models has been re-designed, and is now made with a slight slope of the shoulders, which means an improvement in appearance. The front fork on all models is D section at the crown, and is gradually modified to round at the bottom. This gives greater lateral stiffness without unnecessary weight, and has the effect of absorbing vibration to a noticeable extent. The real improvements in Raleighs are hardly visible to the eye, but every process in the works during the past few months has been the subject of special attention, and it will be found that every component part is better made and finished.

Rudge-Whitworth, will not be at the Stanley, but as their new models will be on view at the London and provincial depots it is not out of place to refer to some of the new season's innovations. The main feature is the celluloid covering applied to the plated parts. This covering prevents the ingress of rust, and so obviates the bugbear most feared by the cyclist who takes a proper pride in his mount. It seems to have been done very thoroughly. The cranks, for instance, are completely enveloped, with the exception of the locking nut on the chain wheel side. The pedals are treated in the same way, and in the handle-bar there is a cleverly arranged extension of the covering right to the ends, with a corrugated grip which forms a part of the bar itself. There are improvements in detail in most of the models, particularly in brakework, and it is safe to say these popular machines will gain further ground in the field of public favour.

CHUKKUR.

It was the children's tea-time, and the maid was waiting on them, when one of the little ones began teasing her about her sweetheart. The servant blushed, but denied that she had one. "Then where does Tom come in?" asked the mistress, who had overheard the conversation. Before the maid could reply another of the children chimed in with information, "Oh, Tom comes in through the side gate."

The congregation of a certain church in the States "down South" grew seriously less each Sunday until at last the parson announced that smoking would be allowed during the service and cigars would be given away free. The place was crowded to suffocation, testing the record of any smoking concert. The next Sunday the church was empty—the parson's wife had bought the cigars.

PROGRESS IN MILITARY SMALL ARMS.

LEADERS in our most important daily papers, and other things as well, are indications of a growing public uneasiness regarding our service rifle. As success in war is directly dependent on the thorough efficiency of the infantry arm, it would be well to endeavour to compare impartially our own service rifle with those of the other Powers, and then ask ourselves whether or no the time has come to make a sweeping change.

Fire at individuals, beyond about 600 yards, is practically valueless from a military point of view. From 600 yards onwards, fire effect is entirely obtained by sweeping the ground occupied by the enemy with a continual stream of bullets. The flatter the trajectory of the rifle, the wider will be the zones at all ranges, in which the bullets are travelling so near the ground that a man is liable to be hit. In short, the flatter the trajectory, the more men will be hit by the stream of bullets which is sweeping over the ground they occupy. So much is clear enough. But now come the conditions which make a very high velocity combined with a bullet of good weight, extremely hard to secure. The rifle must be light and handy. The ammunition must weigh as little as possible, so that the soldier may be able to carry a good number of cartridges. Recoil must not be severe. The magazine system must be simple and effective, while the bolt locking arrangements must be strong enough to withstand the strain of occasional abnormal pressures.

It will be readily seen that most of these attributes are in direct opposition to high velocity. The modern military rifle is a doctrine of compromise. The Americans have tried to get high velocity combined with a heavy bullet, in a ·30 calibre. In a sense they have succeeded; for the short Springfield shoots a 220 grain bullet with a muzzle speed some 300 feet per second higher than our own rifle of slightly larger bore, shoots a 215 grain. But what is the cost? These fine results have to be paid for, and the Americans pay for their high velocity, with having to endure extremely severe recoil. The standard of shooting of an army using a kicking rifle will always, ceteris paribus, be inferior to that of forces armed with rifles whose recoil is slight. Undoubtedly the Americans have made a great mistake, and we have no reason to envy them their weapon.

The Germans have a rifle of slightly larger calibre than ours; but they have secured the velocity which they realised was indispensable by lightening their bullet and giving it a sharp point.

This sharp point causes the bullet to lose its high starting velocity more slowly than it would had it been shaped like our own blunt nosed Lee Enfield one: but the Germans have to pay for their high velocity like the Americans, though not in recoil, for the light weight of the bullet prevents the recoil from being severe. The penalty for the Germans is range. No bullet which is unduly light for its diameter, no matter how sharply pointed, can compete with a projectile of good sectional density at long ranges. Thus at extreme distances we find our own rifle decidedly more effective than the German small arm with its new ammunition.

What is evidently required is a rifle which will shoot a comparatively heavy, sharp-pointed bullet with a very high velocity. How are we to attain this without the objectionable feature of severe recoil? The answer to this question is pretty obvious, we must have a smaller bore. Most of us have used a Mannlicher, and know that in this rifle we have the high velocity bullet of good sectional density, and slight recoil; it is only in a smaller bore than ·303 that we can collect all the good points we want together. Very possibly it may prove undesirable to go as small as ·256, and ·280 may prove a more useful size. That ·303 is too large has long been apparent to many of our most expert riflemen.

With regard to wounds, doctors are more or less agreed that there is practically nothing to choose between the wounds inflicted by ·303, ·276, and ·256 rifles. The worst wounds are those made at short and very long ranges. In the former case the high striking velocity is the cause, creating a certain disruptive effect; in the latter the unsteadiness of the bullet's spin makes it liable to turn sideways on striking, thus inflicting large irregular shaped wounds.

The extremely high velocities of the future will no doubt cause bullets to give the disruptive effect noted above, at longer ranges than has hitherto been the case.

The bolt of our rifle has been unmercifully criticised, and no doubt it is a thoroughly bad one theoretically. It has, however, done very creditably in practice. Nothing, however, can make a bolt supported at the rear as rigid and solid as one having the locking lugs close up to the base of the cartridge. If we eventually adopt a rifle having higher working pressures than the very moderate ones of our present arm, we shall have undoubtedly to adopt a decidedly stronger form of bolt than the one we have now. For the low ballistics of the present service ammunition, it serves well enough.

No doubt we shall have to be content for a long time with ammunition loaded with light sharp pointed bullets in imitation of the Germans; but rifle shooting has become enormously more popular of late years, and so the man in the street has a certain amount of knowledge of what a military rifle ought to be able to do. People are beginning to realise that the new short rifle is not the extraordinary weapon that it was at first credited with being. Should this feeling of dissatisfaction become general, the advent of a new rifle would be hurried on by several years. The need for change would be more comfortably made apparent thus, than by having to send our troops against an enemy more efficiently armed than themselves.

Sporting & Athletic Notes.

Saturday's racing was a considerable improvement on the previous week in every respect, size of fields, quality of horses, closeness of finishes, and attendance of public. There was no little disappointment felt that Stirabout did not run in the Juvenile Plate for everyone was anxious to see last year's Trials winner racing again to judge if he had retained any of his old form; Master Theo's absence from either of his events was also deplored as he was bound to have been well up in the five furlongs and it would have been interesting to see what he can do against better class horses than he has had to meet hitherto. It was on the whole distinctly a favourite's day as, though Lady Lomond paid the whacking big dividend of Rs. 777 on the toto and was unwritten in the Books, three absolute "dead certs" got there all right and the other two winners were both uncommonly well backed.

The afternoon began with the small Pony Race and after the experts had decided that Devon was too fat and short of work to be given a chance it was apparent that it would be, as the previous week, a tussle between The Point and Evening Herald. The latter was by the terms of the race in 7lb. better with the other than when he beat her before, which made it look more than ever a good thing for him, but in spite of this the mare had a big crowd of supporters. They argued that the race at the first extra was also her first run—she would have come on a lot since that and would not again give away lengths in running all over the straight, further she had had an abscess in her jaw lanced and would be much better in consequence, and so they backed her to within a shade of the same odds as the favourite. The Point starting at 6 to 4 and Evening Herald at 5 to 2. However, despite all the theories and although the second named did not go so waywardly, the two ponies pretty accurately reproduced their relative form, The Point winning by one and a half lengths as against three-quarter length the time before.

The Criterion Plate was a big upset. Mr. Galstaun had great confidence in old Dulcimer and the public as usual followed his lead with enthusiasm. The horse opened at twos but all the money at this price was quickly snapped up by the stable and they were still backing him at 6 to 4 on at the finish. Prince Lyon and Vespasia were the only other ones for whom much support was forthcoming. However, they were all wrong, as Dulcimer couldn't stay it out. Vespasia ran all over the course in the straight. Prince Lyon apparently left his effort till just too late and the complete outsider, Lady Lomond, beat him by a short head in 1min. 2⅘secs., two-fifth seconds slower than Vespasia's time for the same race last season, when she carried home 3lb. less, but on, if anything, not quite so fast a course. The winner is an English mare who never did much at home, but who won in Bombay in 1907 carrying 8st. 2lb. over 5 furlongs in 1min. 3secs., beating Vocalist 8st. 12lb.

The Juvenile Plate, of course, aroused the chief interest of the day. Ebullition, who on paper form ought to have been able to win easily, was favourite and Sham Fight, with a big stable commission on, opened at 2 to 1 and was steadily backed at 6 to 4. Tangaroa, despite her Colonial form and good appearance, was left alone as she was reported unready. Bull Dog, who is supposed to be a real good horse, gave us no show of his quality as he was badly left and cantered in behind everything, and the race was between Ebullition and Sham Fight, the latter getting the verdict very easily. Tangaroa went very well for 3 furlongs but eased up as soon as he was caught. Mr. A. A. Apcar offered Rs. 15,000, and later, they say, Rs. 20,000 for the winner after the race but Mr. Ramshaw on behalf of the owner refused the bid.

The Horse Plate was a gift for Chivalry who, though he has not been able to get as far as 6 furlongs in first class company, was much too good for what he had to meet and, in spite of an almost theatrical flying start by Jolly Abbot through which the grey got a lead of nearly 15 lengths, the big chestnut caught him in 3 furlongs and soon had him settled. Jolly Abbot curled up very soon and though he and Chivalry were out a long way ahead of anything else even past the distance, he did not even finish in the first four. Metal Boy and Jackeroo got second and third.

In the Pony Plate no one would look further than Cheeky, last week's winner. Hughie, a great big 14-2 who is never likely to measure again, was thought to be the greatest danger, but he was a bit on the fat side. Lorraine and Chippy Norton were the only others out of the fourteen starters to be backed at all. Cheeky's price was 6 to 4, and though she brought it off all right she gave her supporters some exciting moments at the finish when after seeming to have shot her bolt she kept going on and Chippy Norton being unable to sustain his effort just got beaten by a neck.

The Club Plate was the last item on the programme. Lachlan, a soft looking beast, was favourite but Sacricomar (own brother to Sacristan they say) appeared much the best of the lot, every inch a race horse big and well made, and the writer would have picked Sue as she appeared in the paddock as good enough for a place. However the little mare never showed up in the race at all but the big horse did not belie his looks and won in great style from the honest Galloping Girl II. who thus added another to her many seconds.

There has been a good deal of schooling these last few days both at Tollygunge and over the track hurdles. At Tollygunge on Sunday, Raffles (Mr. Barrow), Bandy Leg (Alford), Emerald (Mr. Tanner), S. Odille (Randall), Loch Lily (Alford), Lord Chester (Mr. Levetus), Tired Tim (Captain Hill), Moachim (Mr. Tanner), Spinnet (Alford) and Dangar (Alford) were those out. Bandy Leg tried to stop at his first few fences and had to be ridden into them. Tired Tim refused, and Dangar went round by himself. Spinnet performed in the best style of anything on the ground. On Tuesday Kipling (Mr. Evers), Captain Carrington (Randall), Chassepot (Randall), Mystic Circle (Morrison), Lord D. (Native), Marmalade III. (Thomas), Little Dolly (C. Hoyt), Belle Cole (Thomas), Companion (Morison), Lady Mana (Randall), Lily II. (Alford), Raffles (Alford), Bandy Leg (Mr. Barrow), Reha (Mr. Corbett), Pink 'Un (Mr. Barrow), and Grey Wolf (Mr. B[illegible] all schooled over the hurdles. Kipli[ng] from among the whole crowd, his ju[mping] superb. Chassepot landed on top of th[e] and came a cropper and Belle Cole refuse[d] pulled up. All the others went round [safely] Marmalade III., who only went half a mile, [was] in the same good style as he showed us last season.

The entries for the Third Extra are by no means bad and there are some real good horses running. The numbers are Maiden Horse Plate, 22; December Plate, 16; Corinthian Plate, 12; Hurdle Race. 8; Peel Plate, 14; Harrison Plate, 12.

The following is the latest betting on the Viceroy's Cup and Trials:—

Trials.			Viceroy's Cup.
Win.		Place.	Win.		Place.
4	Stirabout	1	3	Fitzgrafton	1
5	Tangaroa	1½	4	Mallard	⅘
5	Sham Fight	1	8	Misty Morn	2
6	Wisebird	1½	8	Wandin	2
8	Wandin	2	8	Ballark	1½
10	Retort	2	12	Bedouin	3
			20 to 100 others.

In spite of all rumours Fitzgrafton seems to be going as well as ever and the public will not be stalled off but are backing him freely to win with Mallard and Ballark for places. They seem to think the Hon'ble A. A. Apcar must win with one of the three.

Several outsiders have been backed for small amounts but the bulk of the money is always for Hon'ble Mr. Apcar's stable.

We regret to hear that Mr. Justice Brett was thrown from his horse while out riding on the racecourse on Tuesday morning and broke his left arm. The fractured limb has been set and it is expected that his Lordship will be well enough to attend Court in a few days.

There was a meeting of the Paperchase Club on Saturday and the first chase of the season will be run to-morrow, Friday, starting from the Screw Pines on the Monsoon Ride at 7-30 A.M. There is to be a pony average cup this year presented by Mr. J. Hutchison so it is hoped that the competition in this class will be keener than usual. There was a good deal of discussion about the Hunter Races and the following resolution was passed:—

"That the sense of this meeting is opposed generally to flat races for paperchase horses and ponies and wholly against any flat race for this class of a shorter distance than the R. C."

Messrs. Dudley Myers, Turner, Deakin, Stokes, Allen, Ballantyne, and Dr. Forsyth were elected members of the Committee.

Mr. J.H. Allen has once more undertaken to make the courses and in response to an appeal for "young blood" Mr. Stephen has come forward to assist him.

The annual Polo tournament for the Challenge Cup presented by H. H. the Maharaja of Holkar was played at Indore during the last week in November. Five teams entered. In the first game the 1st Central India Horse beat the Raja of Rutlam's team by 4 goals to 3. The second tie was between the 3rd Skinner's Horse and the 2nd Central India Horse, the latter winning by 5 goals to 3. The 1st Central India Horse next met Bhopal and an excellent game was witnessed. Bhopal were expected to win but Colonel Cotgrave and his team were at the top of their form. The last chukker closed with the score level but in the extra period with widened goals the Central India Horse scored again and won by 4 goals to 3. The final game was played on the 28th ultimo between the 1st and 2nd Central India Horse. The game was very level the 1st Regiment eventually winning by 4 goals to 3.

With the near approach of Christmas, the season of present giving, there must be many who find difficult to choose suitable gifts for friends. A fountain pen is always an acceptable present, and when the pen is a "Swan" there can be no doubt as to its welcome. The Swan Fountain Pen has earned for itself the highest reputation. Its system is simple and sure, it is clean and always ready for work, it does not scratch, blot, or wear out, further it may be had in all qualities, and is stocked by all stationers and jewellers and importers.

After all "WHITE HORSE" WHISKY IS THE BEST.

THE final entries for the Viceroy's Cup are but two in number—Long Tom and The Bedouin. Both are doing well, but their chances are at present not much fancied. We publish their previous performances further on.

OF late years there has been a growing slackness in the matter of dress in the hunting field and it is gratifying to note that several Masters of Hounds have followed Lord Rothschild's example and requested their supporters to give the matter their more careful attention with, we hear, most excellent results.

There are few who will deny that a well turned out "field" in pink adds a dignity to the Sport of Kings that is but its due.

With the paperchase season just upon us perhaps we might be permitted to respectfully suggest that we might take a leaf from the book of our fellow countrymen who hunt the paper further East.

We once were taken out to see a Paper Hunt near Shanghai and were greatly surprised to see quite a number of men turned out in tall hat, pink coat, white breeches and top boots.

On enquiry we learnt that this was the badge of the hard rider and no one was allowed to sport the pink until he had won a hunt; with the result that the right to do so was greatly coveted.

Why should we not introduce something of the kind into our paperchasing? Think how it would please our Aryan brother over whose crops we ride to see a topper concertina—ed.

If adopted, however, it would have the good effect of giving our paperchase field a smart appearance.

THE Polo Tournament for the Cooper Allen Cup was continued at Cawnpore on the 30th ultimo when two more games were played. In the first game the 1st Royal Dragoon Subalterns beat the Wiltshire Subalterns by 7 goals to nil and in the second the 60th Rifles beat the Cameronians by 6 goals to one. The semi-finals were played on the 2nd instant. The 9th Hodson's Horse beat the Royal Dragoons in the opening game by 5 goals to 3 after a great struggle. Captain Rowcroft who played for the 9th, was brought down and had to be removed to hospital in an unconscious state, but recovered later and was reported to be doing well. The second game between the Durham Light Infantry and the 60th Rifles was very level, the Durhams eventually winning by 4 goals to 1. The final tie was played on the 4th instant before a large assembly including Sir John and Lady Hewett. Messrs. Cooper Allen were "at home." The teams were:—9th Hodson's Horse, represented by Viggro, Mr. Fraser, Daffadar Futteh Mahomed and Mr. Atkinson (back) and the Durham Light Infantry, represented by Captain Matthews, Mr. Turner, Major Luard and Captain Wallace (back). Umpires were Major Gordon and Captain Pollock of The the Lieutenant-Governor's staff.

The Durhams pressed at the start and put on 6 goals in the first three chukkers. Play then became more even and each team scored two goals, the Durhams thus winning by 8 goals to 2. Mrs. Ledgard handed the cup to the winners.

IN our weekly review of English sport this week will be found reports of the Rugby matches between the Australians and the Varsities, and of the race for the Colquhoun sculls. Our motor news this week deals with the big show at Olympia; "Chukker" will probably conclude his remarks on the subject next mail.

AT the Brooklands motor track on the 18th November F. Newton, driving the Napier-Samson the reverse way of the course, beat the short-distance 90 h.p. record made by himself on 30th October last, by travelling at the rate of nearly 120 miles an hour. He also lowered the flying half-mile time to 15·083 secs., a speed rate of 119·34 miles an hour.

In this ride Newton made his final appearance on a race track, and it will be admitted that no finer driver has ever been seen. He will carry with him the esteem of his antagonists and the best wishes of those who have witnessed his wonderful work at the wheel.

THE Dewar Shield Open Hockey Tournament was concluded at Jhansi on the 28th November, when the 33rd Punjabis beat the 6th Jats by 4 goals to nil.

SINCE the Amateur Athletic Association has thought it worth while to answer the charges of unfair and discreditable action brought against British officials at the Olympic Games by certain persons who accompanied the American team, we are glad that the Association has spoken plainly. Such phrases as "This is absolutely untrue," "The statement is a deliberate lie," "This is a disgraceful falsehood," which occur in the A.A.A's statements constitute the only fit and proper way of meeting the grotesque inventions of these American "sportsmen." Why does America send such people to represent her? Of course, we all know the little boy who invariably cries when he is beaten in any game and bellows "It wasn't fair! you cheated!" But we do not encourage him or send him abroad to represent English athletes. And yet we cannot help laughing at some of the American tales. Perhaps the funniest of all is that put forward by a San Francisco paper, namely, that the A.A.U. of the United States will punish the British A.A.A. by breaking off athletic relations, the truth being that the former body has repeatedly asked to be allowed to enter into a working agreement with the latter and has always met with a polite refusal!

WE congratulate our good friends Messrs. Cooke and Kelvey, the well-known Jewellers and Watch and Clockmakers of Calcutta, Simla and Lahore, who have received intimation that they have been awarded the Grand Prix for their exhibit of watches and jewels (the only one of its kind from India) at the Franco-British Exhibition of 1908, in conjunction with the collective exhibit of the British Horological Institute.

The cockney angler has some curious ideas on "Sport." The other day, in an up-Thames fishing competition, the competitors were placed ten yards apart and extended something like 4 miles! At the end of the day some one lifted the first prize with a catch of 8lbs. The idea of fishing for a prize of any sort is anathema; but to toil all day, grabbing all kinds and sizes, in order to come out top-weight, and in order to be rewarded with the presentation of two half-crowns done up in paper, or a plated mug with one's name on it, is repellent to a degree and contrary to all ideas of true sport.

IT may not be generally known that in Sable Island, off the coast of Nova Scotia, troops of wild horses are to be found roaming about. The original stock is believed to have landed from a Spanish wreck early in the sixteenth century, though in the opinion of some their introduction took place at a later period. Sable Island is an accumulation of loose sand, forming a pair of ridges united at the two ends and enclosing a shallow lake. There are tracts of grass in places as well as pools of fresh water.

ONLY the other day the prospective use of the gyroscope to overcome the discomforts and disadvantages due to ships rolling in a heavy sea was being discussed at home. It is now stated that a really effective billiard table has been invented upon which it will be possible to play billiards on the vasty deep without suffering any inconvenience from the vibration of the engines or the rise and fall of the bosom of the ocean. What a boon to voyagers—a few "hundreds up" in mid-Atlantic, some games of pool when half-way down to the Cape, a little snooker between 'Frisco and Yokohama! Billiard tables, of course, have previously been erected which presented tolerably accurate surface-level for the game on comparatively smooth water, such as the big navigable rivers in certain parts of the world, but the fascinating pastime has not been possible hitherto on the high seas. One large shipping company is now making the experiment, however, and if it meets with the success hoped for, the inventors of the marine billiard table will truly have earned fame and fortune in the eyes of those who travel far and frequently from one part of the world to another.

THE 1st P. V. R. Hockey Cup Tournament begins at Lahore on the 2nd January. It is open to the following teams in the Punjab, and North West Frontier Province:—British Regimental teams, Brigade teams, Royal Artillery, composite teams of officers of native corps from the same station.

OUR Bombay correspondent writes:—Bombay is at present enjoying another visit from one of the best known billiard exponents in the person of Mr. Weiss, the Australian champion. he gave his first exhibition game on Thursday, conceding Mr. Carnall, one of our best amateurs, 700 points in 1,000. As is usual in these cases, the amateur went all to pieces and failed to show any of his true form so that the start was insufficient by 88 points. It being the professional's first game since his journey, he was not seen absolutely at his best, but nevertheless his all-round play engaged the attention of all present. After the big breaks put up fairly recently by Stevenson and Inman one feels a bit blasé, but as this player's style is different from either of them one can watch him with no little degree of interest. His play is more that of the ordinary amateur, he makes few strokes that are not seen daily in a billiard room, but of course with far more accuracy and judgment. He averaged 15 on the whole, and his best breaks were 22, 58, 48, 119, 56 twice, 37, 67, 72, 46, 31, 45, 21 and 50 unfinished. Exactly when he will be in Calcutta is yet uncertain, but it's a shade of odds he will be with you about Xmas, after giving us a taste of the arc oval table.

London Week by Week.

London, Friday, 20th November 1908.

Our State guests this week are their Majesties the King and Queen of Sweden, and they are receiving a particularly warm welcome everywhere they go. On arrival at Portsmouth last Monday they were met by the Prince of Wales and saluted by an imposing Fleet. After the presentation of an address their Majesties journeyed to Windsor (more address) and were received by King Edward and Queen Alexandra and conducted to the Castle. Since then, hosts and guests have had a strenuous and, of course, pleasant time. Proceedings began with a day's shooting in Windsor Great Park, the royal visitor acquitting himself fairly well; it is as a tennis player he more particularly shines I am told. Then they were present at the opening of the new museum at Eton College, and next we Londoners had a glimpse of them when the Guildhall was visited in State, and subsequently when they drove in procession through the city. Since then receptions, dinners, balls and varied divertisement have filled in three busy days.

The ceremony at Eton College was brilliant and impressive. The great public school has just been materially extended in respect of a museum, a library and a memorial hall, the latter to commemorate the loyalty of the many old Etonians who fell in the South African war. The King's talk to the boys was quite a remarkable exhortation and testified to the keen interest his Majesty has always taken in the school which lies under the shadow of Windsor Castle. Earnestly he reminded them of the high traditions now in their keeping, pointing to the example of the brave men whose names the new memorial will hand down.

The pother between the Kaiser, his Chancellor, and the German press over the now historic interview terminates in the submission of the first named and the victory of Prince Buelow: this robs us of a topic in this deadly dull time. The Chancellor remains in office and the Emperor having agreed with the point of view put forward by the Chancellor, the personal intrusion of the "Maily-Fist" in the conduct of public affairs may be expected to cease. Constitutional procedure will, it is hoped, take its normal course in future, for which relief much thanks. But the comic papers will have a distinct grievance, for this curtailment of the German Emperor's field of action will probably rob some of them of furlongs of copy and square acres of pictures.

You hear the National Anthem played in India as often in the month as anywhere else in the world I make no doubt: your military readers particularly will be pleased to hear that an interesting change is henceforth to be made in it — at the special desire of the King who, having often noted its "dirge-like" tempo, has determined to have it played faster. To be precise the time is to be increased from "crotchet=60 to crotchet=84", and this in future is to be the rule on all music cards in the possession of Army Units. I remember to have heard it reeled off with remarkable celerity at the conclusion of Indian Volunteer parades when thirsty citizen soldiers have been impatient to broach the liquid comforts inseparable from the success of a big muster in some corps, and I have been played out of the Theatre Royal to the tune accelerated to the verge of jig time; it is quite possible that ere long you may find a tendency to quicken up to "crotchet=40", especially at the close of a long, long Indian day in June.

A little bit of scandal. Once again a Thames-side cottage that has already been a feature of three famous society domestic ruptures is to form a background to a society divorce. The case, which has already passed the preliminary stages, is the petition for divorce filed by Clara Elizabeth Taylor Stirling, a former "Cosy Corner Girl" in "The Earl and the Girl," against her husband, John Alexander Stirling, a wealthy Scottish landowner and a former member of the Guards, of Kippendovie Lodge and Kippenross House, Dunblane, Perthshire. Mrs. Stirling names in connection with the case a society woman of great charm and beauty, and in a cross-petition the husband names a well-known peer. The person mentioned by the husband is a former old friend of his, the two having been schoolfellows together at Eton, and afterwards were in the Guards together. The lady named by the wife comes of a family of beautiful sisters. Counsel are busy preparing the case, which has been set down for hearing on 19th January. It is expected that at least a full week will be required for the hearing of both suits.

I daresay (after due allowance has been made for the scare-head telegram and the other American methods now so generally adopted by the London press), His Highness the Bengalee Baboo is making himself disagreeable and disliked in your parts. And, by the way, over here journalists seem oblivious to the fact that India is a continent of many climates, physical features, peoples, languages and religions; for a disturbance in a Lower Bengal village, a riot in the student quarters of Calcutta or some filthy statue tarring outrage in the Central Provinces is dealt with as if the whole peninsula were implicated. I quite appreciate the fact that the recent unpleasantness in which your revered Lieutenant-Governor, a Maharaja, an American Y. M. C. A. official, a Bengalee and a revolver loaded with damaged cartridges played prominent parts, was deplorable and as a sign of the times significant. But it need not have been made the subject of humorous reference in the House of Commons I think. I quote from the D. T.: Mr. Cox: May I ask the Under-Secretary for India whether his Majesty's Government desire to make any public acknowledgment of the courageous and patriotic conduct of the Maharaja of Burdwan in helping to save the life of the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal?

Mr. Buchanan: I am sure his Majesty's Government—and I think I may add this House—fully appreciate and admire the brave conduct of the Maharaja of Burdwan; but we think that the Maharaja himself will feel that his heroic conduct, combined with its public acknowledgment here, is its own best reward. (Cheers.) That good sportsman and enlightened landlord, the Maharaj Adhiraj, who interposed his ample person between the gubernatorial presence and the weapon that would not go off will possibly complain that he ought to be saved from his friends.

Except for such theatres as hold abnormally strong attractions, the falling off in the support of the public, which was first noticeable in the last week of October, has continued, and during this week has been, if anything, still more accentuated. It is a regular occurrence to find business falling off in the theatres from the end of November to about the middle of January, but occasionally the drop comes earlier, and this year, as well as last, must go into the list of the unproductive late autumns. The fortunate managers are those who had good plays to please the public during last summer. They simply coined money then, and they are in a frame of mind to accept patiently the slump that has now arrived for so many that are not in the same happy position.

It was chiefly for the vigorous drama of the last act that "The Builders," a new play by Norah Keith, produced at the Criterion Theatre, deserved the cordial reception extended to it. The production is of a topical nature, since the moral it points is that a woman's duty—even a very clever woman's duty—lies at home, not at political meetings. Adrian White, K.C., has won a great law case, and by the sheer weight of his eloquence restored a slandered woman's honour and gained for her the custody of her child. The barrister's wife is too busy advocating "women's rights" to give him much of her company; on the very evening of his great triumph she leaves him to address one of her pet meetings. Lonely and childless, he finds consolation in the society of Mrs. Cray, the lady his skill as a barrister had served to clear in the eyes of the world. Unconsciously their friendship ripens into love; but when Mrs. Cray finds that Mrs. White, with all her cranks, at the bottom of her heart has a deep love for her husband, she sacrifices herself that the life of the man she loves and the life of his wife shall not be spoiled. When he declares his passion she lies away her character, declaring that she has been the guilty woman that the world once believed her. So he, his ideal destroyed, leaves her and goes home—let us hope—to his wife.

The play is not satisfying. It is sketchy—drawn with firm lines but lacking light and shade—an outlined impression rather than a completed picture. But one big interest the production possessed—the appearance of an actress hitherto almost unknown to West End theatre-goers, who showed herself the possessor of considerable powers as an emotional actress. This was Miss Evelyn D'Alroy, who played the part of Mrs. Cray. She never underacted; she was just natural. She brought to the character beauty, a fine sincerity, and a convincing force. Mr. Aubrey Smith had some strong moments as Adrian White, but in his case, as in the cases of Mr. A. E. George, Miss Maude Millett and Miss Vane Featherstone, it was probably due to the often stilted style of the dialogue rather than to the fault of the actor that he did not make the character very real.

In "The Builder of Bridges," which was produced at the St. James' Theatre last night, Mr. Sutro has sacrificed reality and reason that the curtain may fall upon an unnatural reunion instead of a logical parting. The consequence is that the play's chance of popularity has been greatly increased, while its artistic worth has been proportionately diminished.

A man is faced by a woman whom he believes to have heartlessly betrayed him; he believes her to be devoid of honour and truth. He has all the reasons that he could possibly have for thinking her a creature without a heart, capable of the vilest deeds. "Lies, lies, lies!" he cries to her passionate protestations of love. But when she tells him that when first she set out to betray him—to win his heart with every intention of breaking it—she wrote on the back of her portrait the reality of her love before carefully pasting the portrait to its frame, he at once seizes upon the portrait, finds the words actually written on the back, and, hey presto! all his doubts have vanished, and he clasps her in his arms! Surely a weak and dispiriting ending.

And the play had been so strong and plausible until then. It is true that the lack of sympathy in the character of the lady presumed to be the heroine had been a blot upon it. But each act had had its human note, each scene had been well-knit and filled with the best kind of Sutro dialogue.

Mr. George Alexander, if at times a little artificial, played with fine effect as Thursfield, Mr. Dawson Milvard was capital as the weak-willed Arnold Faringay, and if Miss Irene Vanbrugh could not win much sympathy for Dorothy Faringay, she scored heavily in her emotional scenes. Miss Florence Haydon and Mr. William Farren each represented a finely-drawn character study, and Mr. E. Harcourt Williams and Mr. E. Vivian Reynolds were also seen to advantage.

An extremely badly balanced and long drawn out piece is "A Bridge Tangle" by Mesdames Frank Wright and Caleb Porter, now playing to poor houses at The Court Theatre. It bristles with cheap cynicism, dull dialogue, amateurish stage craft and conduces to depression. The story is the very old one of the very young, very innocent—oh, so innocent!—very pretty girl, who finds herself suddenly taken from a simple country home to the gilded chambers of "society"—the Marie Corelli kind of society—whose gods are bridge and scandal and dress and illicit love. And there the pure young girl wins the heart of the familiar handsome, charming, middle-aged, blase lady-killer. And he at once loses his heart to the chit of a girl, throws over his old, sinful companions, wins her love, and determines to live a new and pure life. Of course, there are complications. Mignon—that is the innocent's name—is induced to play bridge, and never having handled a card, not unnaturally loses £100, which Lord Baintree—that is the name of the lady-killer—pays for her. Hence the title, we suppose; but really the incident is quite a side issue. Then there is Lady Derham, a married woman we need hardly add, who has been Lord Baintree's mistress She does her best to keep her lover, but, although she has made many sacrifices for him, he throws her over with little sign of remorse, and as she leaves him half-fainting and with her wild, passionate words of love and grief still ringing in his ears, he calls for Mignon and proposes. Any man with common decency would have waited an hour or two. And Lord Baintree is evidently intended by the authoresses to be quite a noble fellow!

Mr. Frank Cooper played with polish as Lord Baintree but it was not a strong part. Miss Gertrude Kingston, almost succeeded in being convincing as Lady Derham, Miss Phyllis Embury was pretty and sufficiently unsophisticated as Mignon—although had the other characters not told us otherwise we should have supposed the girl's age to be nearer fifteen than eighteen—and Mr Arthur Wontner gave a clever little study as Mignon's boyish sweetheart.

Incidentally the theatre world stands in danger of getting into a muddle with all this bridge work. Three new plays in quick succession during the week have been named respectively—"The Builders," "The Builder of Bridges," and "A Bridge Tangle." One can imagine the position of the unhappy dramatic critic who has to carry these things about in his head!

The appearance of an actual bishop on an actual stage is not a matter of everyday happening, and last Friday looks like making history. The Coleridge poem recited by Bishop Boyd Carpenter, of Ripon, was such a pronounced success that we may look forward with confidence to further episcopal débuts; but the new stage Carpenter will take a lot of beating.

The theatre dinner, if it becomes established, should be popular; it has, one is relieved to note, "the approval of actor managers." Like other ideas emanating from Paris, it is good, though, perhaps, not entirely new. In Germany die Speisehalle has long been a notable feature of several prominent theatres, and in America roof-garden restaurants have been in vogue for years. In London, too, the combination of a theatre and salle á manger is provided in at least one instance—that of the Criterion Theatre and Criterion Restaurant, which lie side by side and are intercommunicable. So far as the majority of the London theatres are concerned, the institution of a dining hall actually within the theatre premises is impracticable, chiefly because of the difficulty of finding the room, and the prohibitive value of land even where expansion is architecturally possible. The fact that most of the London playhouses lie within a few minutes' walk or drive of the best hotels does not quite touch the question. There can be no doubt that if it were possible to obtain the same standard of excellence, both in feeding and accommodation, within a place of entertainment as outside it, the majority of theatre-goers would prefer to avoid the trouble of making a second journey after their meal when in search of amusement, especially in wet or wintry weather.

Three means of bringing about the suggested improvement readily occur to mind. The first would be the construction of a dining hall and kitchens beneath the theatre, or in the form of a garden restaurant on the roof. The subterranean dining-room is already the feature of at least one popular London hotel. On the other hand, a roof restaurant built partially, if not entirely of glass, and capable of being made as snug in winter as cool in summer, would probably commend itself more to the average theatre-goer. Failing these two schemes, it would still be possible for a number of playhouses to extend their premises by the purchase and reconstruction of neighbouring buildings.

Lydia Thompson, the burlesque actress whose stage career extended to fifty-two years, died last Wednesday, aged seventy-three. Some old playgoers in India will have kindly recollections of her I have no doubt. During the palmy days of burlesque she was one of its brightest and most charming exponents. Her earliest appearance was as a dancer at the old Her Majesty's Theatre as far back as 1852, and she held her position as one of the leading favourites of the lighter stage for nearly half a century.

Among her most memorable performances will be recalled that of Robinson Crusoe, in which she was associated with Mr. Willie Edouin, the well-known comedian. Her last appearance was as late as 1904 as Duchess of Albuquerque in "A Queen's Romance" at the Imperial.

When will English girls take to heart the lessons which the "marriages" of their countrywomen with natives of India nearly always set before them. These revolting unions, with their tale of deceit, astounding effrontery, heartlessness and cruelty on the one side, and ignorant, wicked infatuation on the other, are exposed time after time in the English press, yet the Hindoo or Mohamedan visitor to this country has little difficulty in finding victims. There is a typical case, just heard in the Divorce Court. Venugopal Chetty—a Madrasee—in 1889, while studying for the Indian Civil Service, "married" a young English girl of decent family. The following month he sailed for India and there the matter ended. After years of entreaty on her side and promises on his, Venugopal Chetty, described as "an Indian Judge," declares he has married in his own caste and when legal proceedings are taken his defence includes the following points:—

1. He is unable to bear the expense of coming to England to fetch his wife.
2. There are several important "part heard" cases pending in his Sessions Court at Chinglepore, Madras.
3. He was not lawfully married to his wife.
4. A Hindoo domiciled in India cannot lawfully marry one who is not a Hindoo.
5. By Hindoo law a plurality of wives is allowed.

The case occupied some time and legal witnesses, with Indian experience, having been examined as to Hindoo matrimonial law, the Court took time to consider its judgment.

Mohamedan art and life is having a neat little show to itself in London just now. Turkey, India, Persia, Egypt, Morocco and Spain are represented, and in the collection there are many rich and valuable treasures. Naturally, the Indian exhibits were specially attractive to your scribe—the carpets, fabrics, ceramics, brassware, carving, embroidery—and great beauty and completeness were their outstanding features. I cannot say so much for the antique armour and weapons. I have seen much better collections in private houses in the East. These certainly did not justify the reverence it is customary to bestow on that art. The sword blades, excellent in temper, watering and inlay of gold or silver, were heavy and cumbrous in design for the most part, but the shields were really fine. Have you ever noticed how small these Indian shields are—obviously intended for hand to hand mounted contests—and how absurdly small the sword handles are? An average Britisher can never get his hand comfortably into the grip of a native tulwar.

Fishing.

JACK.

The Pike or Jack, as he is more commonly called, is a fish that will give you good sport, when time is hanging heavily on your hands, which so constantly happens when on a fishing excursion in hopes of salmon or trout, owing to a cloudless sky, or perhaps the darkly coloured water, you know it is absolutely useless to expect a run, however deftly you may throw your fly. The jack as a rule is not so particular as his more classy brethren and will make a square meal almost at any time and nearly always when the water is slightly discoloured. This voracious fish cannot be said to be exquisite in shape as the underjaw, protruding as it does, gives him an almost diabolical appearance. The body is long with small hard scales, the back is greenish gold, gradually shading away to a creamy white on the belly, with yellowish spots on the sides, the fins and tails are purplish, marked with dark wavy lines, and the bright yellow eyes are so placed in their sockets that he can see what is passing above him without any movement of the head. The mouth is very large and square, thickly studded with sharp teeth. In the shape of diet this fish will gorge almost anything that comes within reach of his capacious jaws. On one occasion, when I was skating on a very clear sheet of ice, my attention was attracted by a slowly moving object underneath. On careful examination this turned out to be a pike whose weight I guessed to be at the time about 10 to 12 pounds. He was vainly endeavouring to swallow one of his own species, which he had seized by the middle of the back, and which was more than half his own size. A week after this, when the ice had broken up, the lake keeper brought me a jack weighing twelve pounds, which he had found floating on the lake, and was under the impression that the lake had been poisoned, a not unusual occurrence I much regret to say in some parts of the country. Twice, when I was a boy at my home in Yorkshire, where we had a beck running through the garden, the trout were poisoned with chloride of lime, a truly dastardly trick. I cut the jack open and found many undigested large bones and could only presume that this was the same jack I had seen under the ice whose voracity had met with its just reward. Many sportsmen are of the opinion that jack eat rats, but this I do not believe. I have cut many open but so far have failed to find even the tail of a rat. At the same time I believe it is authentic that pike will gorge waterfowl, and this should certainly tend to improve the flavour of their flesh, which is more or less of a not very appetising kind by itself after the fish has attained 3 pounds in weight, but is vastly improved when spiced and baked with onions.

Jack are found in rivers, canals, lakes and even small ponds. They are in season from July to March. About the beginning of April they resort to quiet spots, such as creeks and ditches, for the purpose of spawning. During the time they are in season they frequent shady places amid rocks, the edges of whirlpools, under partially soaked overhanging stumps of trees, or hide beneath the buttresses of bridges, where one so often sees the water ouzel singing to his mate, the next being hidden in a crevice, hardly discernible from the partially dried up clinging creepers. Spinning for pike is the most scientific and interesting method of attempting to lure them, and I decided on a day's sport of this description. I had been trying my luck for salmon for one whole week and had not even seen one break the water. I had noticed in my wanderings along the river banks, one or two likely spots for pike which were said to be plentiful and to run to a large size.

Starting before daybreak, I soon found myself at the chosen spot for commencing operations. Having fixed a fairly strong gimp trace with four swivels on to my line I attached a ring mounted Devon spinner as a flashy attractive looking bait. With this I made several unavailing attempts to lure the prey from his haunts. It was indeed a lovely spot for a pike to be lying, an over-hanging bush giving the necessary cover, with rocky abutments on either side of the river. I was preparing to hie me to another place, when, as I was withdrawing the spinner, it was suddenly, violently seized, my first thought was that I had fouled a stump, but a second jerk told me I had hooked. A wrench or two and he immediately commenced to sulk. I had undoubtedly hooked a large salmon and not the jack I was looking for. Coax him as I would, he would not move from his hiding place. I was not going to chance having my line snapped, so taking a small leaden disc from my waistcoat pocket, I slipped it by means of the slot in it on to the line, then lifting the point of the rod it slid quickly downwards on to the nose of my fish. In a second he was off with a frantic rush and being careful to keep the line taut I dashed along the bank. Again he sulked and I pursued the same tactics with a disc. This time I could feel he was not so strong as before and after a time checked him more strongly and in ten minutes time brought him up to the gaff. But he was not done with yet, the moment he saw me he made one more dash for freedom, but his strength was exhausted and bringing him to the bank once more I placed the gaff speedily in his panting gill. He was a fine male salmon of 16½lbs. and in the pink of condition. Many of my readers will have visited Bala Lake in North Wales and those who have not done so should do so when opportunity offers. What a delightful spot it is for an August holiday and what pike does that lake hold! I arrived there on a beautiful morning at the end of August 1899. The rippling water looked glorious in the rising sun, the surface broken only by the westerly breeze, it was a truly ideal day for Jack-fishing. Making arrangements at the well-known excellent hostelry for some refreshment to be sent down to the boat which was to be in readiness in an hour's time, I prepared my rod for a day's trolling, which is the usual method in this district for killing the pike. I selected a very bright blue and silver phantom about 4½ inches in length which I attached to an ordinary Thames Pike Flight, in such a manner that the bottom triangle of hooks were at the tail, the reversed hook in line with the vent, two triangles of hooks along the sides and the top hook downwards through the lips. This turned out to be a most luring bait. I had been trolling scarcely quarter of an hour when I hooked a three pounder. Truly not much of a catch, but enough to give one confidence for further exertion if exertion should be needed, for trolling generally speaking is a delightfully lazy sport, where you can sit and smoke and bask in the sunshine all day. Within half an hour with the same bait, I had placed a seven pounder in my creel, but the crowning sport of the day was yet to come. The sky was rapidly becoming flecked with ominous looking clouds and so I bade the boatman row me in the direction of the landing stage, as I was suspicious of a thunderstorm. Nearing it I commenced to reel up when yet another jerk fairly staggered me. This time I had hooked something large. The boatman, in a state of excitement, ceased rowing and the jack manœuvred the boat, first to starboard and then to the port side. By the feel of him I could tell that this fish had fairly pouched the bait and it only remained for me to be patient with him and at the same time prevent him from snapping me with an extra heavy downward plunge. For one half hour we played the game and then I thought I had him "beat." All around me now on the hitherto calm lake, were little rings caused by the intermittent heavy drops of rain and I recognized the fact that I was in for a shower-bath, if not quick to secure my catch. At that moment he seemed to put all his remaining energy into one despairing effort to free himself from his prickly foe and my feet slipping from under me I disappeared head first into the lake to receive a bath of a very different kind to the one I had calculated on. Nevertheless I did not lose my presence of mind but held on stoutly to the rod with the one hand whilst I grasped the gunwhale of the boat with the other. My boatman being a born fisherman, seized the rod from me, the fish was of more importance than I, and I quickly clambered into the boat feeling ignominious, but cooler. Within a few minutes, the jack was with me and getting back to the hostelry, with all speed we weighed him to find he turned the scale at 18 pounds 12 ounces, the largest fish to date of the season. I found the patent pike disgorger a most useful instrument on this occasion. Although trolling was at one time considered the highest form of the art of jack-fishing I am of opinion that there is more sport to be obtained from spinning, for having hooked your fish, you may have to follow him either along the bank, or in the water nearly up to the tops of your waders, never knowing when you may unwarily place your foot in an unseen hole and be precipitated into unknown depths and thus the angler has not always the better side of the argument. The narration of the ducking I received in Bala Lake recalls to my mind, an episode which occurred at a certain seaside place in Essex not a hundred miles from Walton, a few years ago. I was partaking of a little light refreshment with a piscatorial acquaintance who had asked a visitor to kindly hold his rod, while he himself appeased the cravings of the inner man. As we were returning we saw the holder of his rod, plunge into the waves, in the excitement of a bite, or possibly an overdose of Aqua vitæ. With wonderful alacrity the owner of the rod seized a long boat hook hanging near by, for the purpose of life-saving, with the intention, as I thought, of hooking his man, but not a bit of it. With a huge lunge for the rod which the tide was fast carrying away, he exclaimed "What a clumsy fellow, that rod cost me half-a-crown only this morning." If at some future date any of my readers should find themselves in the vicinity of Corwen, which is only twelve miles from Bala Lake, I would advise them to take a trip in the motor-car, which leaves that station daily for a village in the mountains called Pont-y Voylos. Five miles from this secluded spot, far removed from the usual haunts of man, is a magnificent lake about a mile in circumference and five hundred yards broad at the widest part. I have been told that the jack are splendid in this lake and quite different in flavour from the ordinary muddy fish. I cannot vouch for the truth of the statement, but I do know that the mountain trout are unbeatable in taste. I have visited this spot on four or five occasions and have always returned with a well filled creel. My picnics have been in the months of June and July and at these times the most killing flies were the Partridge Hackle, March Brown, Coch-y-Bonddhu Grouse and Gray Drake. In the autumn I should think it would be advisable to try the August Dun and the Palmers, but all fishermen know that they should be guided mostly by the flies observable on the water at the particular time of the year.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE INDIAN FIELD."

Sir,—Referring to your issue of 15th October in which you comment on my decision to withdraw Napier cars from all dangerous competitions, your article rather suggests inconsistency on my part, but I am afraid I do not agree with you. I have raced the Napier cars in the past because so many people seemed to believe that foreign racing successes made superior, foreign motor cars; they also said British cars could not go fast, it therefore seemed to be necessary both in the interests of the Napier car and in the interests of the whole British trade that such suggestions should be exploded and destroyed and the result has been that the Napier car has had most unparalleled racing success, defeating for speed and hill climbing motor cars of nearly all sizes and of every well-known make. It is now, however, admitted, at any rate in this country, that the racing Napier is ahead of the foreigners and therefore it appeared to me time to withdraw, but I wanted to be perfectly fair, and if after a year or two the British public allow racing to continue and find that foreigners are carrying off all the laurels, then I would like to feel free, so that if at the request of those interested in motoring in this country it is necessary for the Napier to again race to hold up the reputation of Great Britian that they will ask the Napier to do it. As a matter of fact, much as I deplore it, I have to admit the fact that other British cars have not successfully on the racing field held up the honour of Great Britain. Mr. M. S. Napier undoubtedly has and I would therefore like to do nothing that would tie his hands if desired by the British public that he should stand forth as champion for Great Britian.

The following from a sporting medical officer in the Central Provinces on Saturday last is the latest :—

. . . . . I missed one of the chances of my life shooting at a huge Tiger the other day from cartridges loaded with the cylinder bullets. I had a splendid view of him at 20 yards or so but was disgusted to find the bullet dropped quite 8 inches and was ineffective. On returning to the Bungalow I tested a few from 25 yards, with the result that I found that not only are they inaccurate at that range, but two out of six reached the paper target broad side on.

In future I shall use nothing but the "Lethal" etc.

TESTIMONIAL FROM SIR SAMUEL BAKER,
THE FAMOUS NILE EXPLORER.

Newton Abbot, Devon.

DEAR SIRS,—I have delayed my thanks as I wished to test the effects of Blair's Pills by a sufficient interval of time.

For ten years I had suffered acutely from Gout, and life had lost its attraction, owing to the uncertainty of health and the sudden visitation of the enemy, which prostrated me for months or weeks, according to the virulence of the attacks.

Blair's Pills have rendered me immense service, as I no longer fear an attack of Gout.

Odol is the first and only preparation for cleansing the mouth and teeth which absolutely counteracts the causes of microbic fermentation. While all other preparations are effective only during the few moments of application, the antiseptic and refreshing power of Odol continues gently but persistently for hours afterwards. This absolutely certain effect, scientifically proved, is principally due to an entirely new and unique property of the preparation which causes it to penetrate the interstices of the teeth and the mucous membrane of the mouth, to a certain extent impregnating them, and thus securing an after effect lasting for hours, which no other mouth-wash can produce, not even approximately.

Owing to this characteristic, peculiar only to Odol, the whole oral cavity, to its minutest recesses, is completely freed from and protected against all fermenting processes and injurious bacteria.

An army captain, on returning home from India brought with him a goodly stock of souvenirs. Among them was a pair of laughing jackasses, which he entrusted to one of the sailors, Tom Pinch. Alas, the unaccustomed shipboard life did not agree with the creatures, and, in spite of all Tom's care, they pined and finally died. When he discovered the catastrophe, Tom was in despair. "I daren't tell the captain?" "Don't shirk it, mate," said his pal. "Break it to him gently. You'll find it'll be all right." The advice seemed sound, and Tom sought the gallant captain. "'Scuse me, sir," he said, "You know them things below—what you call larfin' jackasses? Well, sir, they ain' got nuffin to larf at this morning."

THE TURF.

DERBY.

Rain fell heavily for the biggest part of Friday night, with a swish in the wind that made one doubtful as to how Saturday would turn out. As the sun gained power the day improved, and the weather was as it should be under a well-ordered chart, viz., rain in the wee sma' hours, and sunshine for sportsmen. The going had got a bit heavy under the conditions, a fact that gave the mudlarks a chance, and led to a topsy turveydom in the form on the top of the ground. The charter of good fields and big attendances was upheld to the finish, and most of the brilliant company who had assisted at one of the most successful meetings ever held here remained to see the curtain fall, while with the market day contingent putting in a bit of sport to finish with, the attendance all round was a bumper. The care had been sensibly curtailed to half a dozen events, enough for the most exigent, as fields were plethoric throughout. Results:—

The racing forces, separated on Friday by the clashing of the concluding day's sport at Derby and the opening of Mr. Fowler's fixture, joined issue at Lingfield on Saturday. The attendance, therefore, was greatly swelled, and the proceedings as far as Tattersall's ring went were characterised by more animation. Backers, however, had much the worst of the deal. After a heavy night's rain, which rendered the going heavier and in a more sodden state, it became patent that winners would be extremely difficult to find, and the draw would play its usual important part. FOLKESTONE.

The attendance yesterday was an excellent one, the various enclosures being well filled, as the South Coast contributed a strong contingent towards the muster. With good going, big fields, and close finishes, a capital afternoon's sport was afforded, though not from a backer's point of view, as, except in one instance, the "talent" were very wide of the mark indeed.

WINCHESTER .33 CALIBER

A New Large Caliber High Power Rifle.

Big game hunters who have advocated a large caliber high power rifle will find in the Winchester .33 caliber a gun that will meet their requirements. The popular and reliable Model 1886 rifle has been adapted to handle this new cartridge, which is large enough and powerful enough to kill any big game known. The Winchester .33 caliber belongs to the high power smokeless powder class of cartridges, having high velocity and flat trajectory, and it develops great striking energy and penetrating power. The .33 caliber bullet weighs 200 grains. Soft pointed bullets used in this cartridge have special upsetting or mushrooming qualities, owing to their high velocity. This makes the Winchester .33 caliber a particularly desirable cartridge for big game shooting, as mushrooming bullets of this size have terrific killing power.

FOOTBALL.

THE LEAGUES.

Saturday was not a happy day for the top clubs in the big leagues. In the Southern League both Southampton and Crystal Palace were defeated, in the First Division of the Football League the best that the three top clubs could do was to draw, and in the Second Division two of the first three shared points, while Birmingham, who are second, had a decisive drubbing at Tottenham. In the Southern League, home clubs did exceedingly well, for seven won and the other three shared the honours, but in the Football League only two First Division clubs won at home, three lost, and five games were drawn. In the lower division visiting clubs were not so successful, only one winning outright, but four each gained a point, and the other five games were won by clubs playing before their own supporters. The goal-scoring was scarcely up to the average except in the Second Division of the League, and here the ten games produced 36, as against 25 in the First Division and 26 in the Southern League. It is a curious fact that not a goal was scored in the three S.L. drawn games.

The most significant results in Saturday's Southern League games were the defeats of Southampton at Bristol, and of the Crystal Palace at New Brompton. Neither was in accordance with comparative form, which is now in a greater tangle than ever. Southampton, who have not given away more than a couple of goals this season away from the Dell, and have obtained 11 of a possible 14 points on foreign soil, were metaphorically smothered at Bristol. They had their share of the game, but the forwards had no idea of how to finish, whereas the Rovers were always on the alert, with the result that the Sotonians were defeated 4—1. At New Brompton there was practically no difference between the teams, the Palace being always as good as their opponents, but the latter obtained the odd goal in three, and thus secured the points. The visitors deserved to draw on the run of the game, and yet New Brompton did not win because luck ran their way, but because a couple of chances were snapped up. The downfall of the leaders brings Northampton into greater prominence. They got through in comfortable style against Brentford, although the latter are now playing a much better game. With 19 points from 13 games, Northampton are lying third, three points behind Southampton, who have played two more games, and only one point worse off than Crystal Palace, who have played four more games. With the Sotonians and the Palace falling off somewhat in their form, the race for the leadership assumes a much more open character with Northampton going so strongly.

While none of the other results may truly be described as startling, they were not all in accordance with expectation. The draw between Southend United and West Ham United was certainly contrary to form. The Hammers had not earned a point in the tournament away from home, and in the only two games they had played on their own ground Southend had beaten Millwall 3—0 and Southampton 2—0. It appeared any odds on West Ham going under, but they did not, a fierce, scrambling, and not altogether pleasant game being rather in their favour. Watford were deemed clever enough to repeat last season's success over Reading, but poor shooting was the cause of their failure to do so, as the play ran very much in their favour. Leyton cannot yet clear the groove of misfortune in which they have been moving for some time, and Coventry City fixed them in it just a bit more securely. Exeter City are doing extremely well just now, and it was a meritorious performance to overcome Luton, for the latter are now playing well, albeit they are disappointing away from home. Plymouth Argyle obtained a much-needed point at Norwich, one that the latter could ill-afford to lose, but Swindon had a fruitless journey to Portsmouth, the latter giving one of their best displays in the present tournament. Millwall, who have been consistently winning at North Greenwich, were always masters of the situation in their game with Brighton and Hove, but the exchanges were not exactly of an exhilarating character.

The most noteworthy performance in the Football League on Saturday, was the success of Woolwich Arsenal at Nottingham against the Forest. I do not suppose that anybody anticipated a win for the Gunners, especially as their forward line was of a non-representative character. One does not overlook that in their three previous away engagements the Arsenal had drawn at Ayresome Park, Anfield-road, and Bramall-lane, and that Nottingham Forest have been recently showing better football away than on their own ground, but those who have had opportunities of watching both teams were agreed that the Arsenal would probably go under. They did not, and confounded the prophets. The reports that have come through show that the win was deserved, because the visitors the more readily adapted themselves to the conditions. Having obtained the lead, the defence did the rest, and I heartily congratulate the team on their second away win this season, the previous one having been so far back as 7th September, when Everton were beaten 3—0 at Goodison Park.

There was a tremendous crowd at Stamford Bridge, to watch the struggle for points between Chelsea and Everton. The latter were expected to win by most of the critics because of their unbroken series of victories from 19th September to 7th November inclusive. Eight matches were played during that time, and all were won, with a goal record of 28 against 8. Nay more, Everton had played six away League matches, and had won them all, with a goal aggregate of 17 to 4. As against this, Chelsea in their last four home games had lost one, won one, and drawn two. What happened at Chelsea shows that records are not always a trustworthy guide. Both teams were out to win, and both sets of players were in grim earnest. It was a great game, and worthy of the teams and the occasion. A draw was, in my opinion, a proper result. The chief feature of the game was the work of the inside forwards on each side, Hilsdon being especially conspicuous, and the defensive work of Balmer and Harris for the visitors. Less selfishness on the part of Fairgray would make him a much more effective wing player.

Bristol City are entitled to considerable credit for their 2—1 win at Bury. The latter have been going so poorly that the Citizens were thought to have a chance to get a point, but they did better than was anticipated, and the victory gives them a welcome lift in the table. The defeat of Blackburn Rovers at Ewood Park by Manchester United is significant, because it suggests that the Mancestrians are returning once more to form after a month during which not a win was placed to their credit. Aston Villa sadly disappointed their supporters by permitting Notts County to walk off with a point, and Middlesbrough stopped Manchester City's run of home successes by playing the Hyde-road brigade to a goalless draw, this result being similar to that at Bradford, where the City had Sheffield Wednesday as their opponents. Sunderland had to work hard for their victory over Leicester Fosse, and Liverpool did not have anything to spare against Preston North End, at Anfield-road.

There were two dramatic results in the Second Division of the League, and of these the more striking was the decisive defeat of Birmingham by Tottenham by four goals to love. This is the third time this season that the 'Spurs have obtained four goals in one afternoon, and they now have the best goal average in this division. The result of the game must have been a shock to Birmingham, whose defence had only on two previous occasions this season been defeated twice in a match. The secret of Tottenham's brilliance forward was the reinstatement of V. J. Woodward in the centre, because it was not alone that he did a great deal himself, but he made so many opportunities for others, and kept his wings going in masterly style. The second dramatic result was at Derby, where the County, whose forwards had been most disappointing, came out of their shell with a vengeance, and chalked up five goals against Stockport County, the latter being unable to respond.

The match between Clapton Orient and Fulham at Homerton proved a big attraction, and the Orient did slightly better than was anticipated. There is no doubt that Fulham are a more scientific side than the Orient, and the latter apparently are conscious of the fact, for from the start they adopted tactics, which had the happiest results from their point of view. They would not allow Fulham to settle down. They kept them on the run, and consequently exchanges were pretty evenly divided. It was a capital game, one of the best seen on the Homerton ground, with the balance in favour of Orient in the first half and Fulham in the second. The Cottagers are now in a satisfactory position, for with two games in hand they are only two points behind the leaders. Bradford are on good terms with themselves for having played Wolverhampton Wanderers to a draw, at the Molineux Grounds, and Bolton Wanderers brought themselves once more into the running by a win at Chesterfield. The defeat of Glossop at Blackpool may have far-reaching effects, for the North Derbyshire team looked like soon getting on terms with the leaders. The emphatic wins of Oldham and Leeds City emphasise that both clubs have now really settled down, and the top clubs will not now have a walk-over when they meet them.

NEW CRUSADERS vs. CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY.—The meeting of these elevens at Sidcup attracted 1,000 spectators. Consequent on the recent rain, the ground was somewhat treacherous, but the teams were superior to the conditions, and provided some capital football. The 'Varsity were undoubtedly the better side, and well entitled to the victory. Nevertheless the final score is scarcely indicative of the run of the play. There was an element of luck about more than one of the victors' goals, whilst with a little more of that commodity the vanquished might have claimed more than one point. Cambridge secured the first goal in a rather remarkable manner, the ball cannoning off the bar on to the back of Adams and into goal. A few minutes later Joseph, in dealing with a shot by Prest, managed to deflect the leather into the net. The third goal, credited to Squire, was the sequel to really good work by the Cambridge forwards, whilst when Edwards notched number four the defence was also properly beaten. Half-time: Cambridge University, 4; New Crusaders, 0.

The Crusaders had not been too well served at left half-back thus far, and on changing over it was observed that A. S. Farnfield was operating in that position, the alteration effecting a distinct improvement in the general play of the team. Eventually, however, Brisley took the ball down nicely, and giving a timely pass to Edwards, the latter scored. The succeeding play favoured the Crusaders. For a while the defenders—with Drew prominent—held their ground, but towards the end H. V. Farnfield received from his brother, "A. S.," and scored. Result:—Cambridge University, 5; New Crusaders, 1.

CASUALS vs. OXFORD UNIVERSITY.—In a game which alternately favoured both sides, the Oxonians defeated the Casuals at Tufnell Park on Saturday by a clear goal. Oxford just deserved to win, the forwards showing better combination, whilst the defence was very sound. Individually W. C. Jordan and E. Hain did well in the attack, and G. H. Norris did several clever things in goal. The Casuals' defence was somewhat disorganised through the absence of S. L. King, and at the last minute M. Morgan-Owen turned out to fill the vacancy at inside right through J. Simonds being transferred to the defence. There was plenty of excitement in the opening exchanges, Oxford attacking strongly. The Casuals' backs, however, cleared, and the forwards getting down, Norris was severely tested by Howell-Jones and Turner. For a time the play continued fairly even, but after thirty-five minutes the Oxonians' efforts met with success, as Jordan, from a fast centre by Maples, easily scored at close quarters. At the interval Oxford University led by 1 goal to 0.

On the resumption the visitors attacked for a time, Maples and Sayers forcing corners in quick succession. The Casuals, however, gradually gained the upper hand, and several times an equalising goal looked imminent, through Norris coming out and leaving an open goal. In failing light the game became difficult to follow. Neither side, however, appeared to relax their efforts. Result:—Oxford University, 1; Casuals, 0.

RUGBY RULES.

AUSTRALIANS vs. CAMBRIDGE.—Cambridge played a great game against the Australians on Saturday at Cambridge, and were really unlucky to be beaten by 1 goal and 2 tries (11 points) to a goal and a dropped goal (9 points). The 'Varsity were certainly unlucky to lose a game in which luck played a large part. Quite a lot of things out of the common happened.

The most important was the Australians' third try, when Richards knocked on as he and Atkinson jumped for the ball; Richards got there after the knock-on, and Dix scored splendidly after the rush just by the posts. In the Australians' second try Richards, after a fine run, kicked across the left wing, and the ball bounded very nastily for Wright, who presented Carrol with an easy try. Godby had the mortification of seeing the ball bound left into touch instead of right, into the open, after he had kicked over Carmichael's head and had a clear run to the line.

Pyman dropped a top-hole goal, but an opponent just got a touch; and Wright was most unlucky not to score in the right-hand corner five minutes before time. Atkinson, too, missed a penalty that he would have scored off five times out of six. Again, McLeod failed with his drop-kicks, and several of his most brilliant attempts did not come off. For these attempts McLeod has been severely criticised, and, moreover, blamed, for selffishness.

Cambridge might have won, and played miles above anything that they have shown this year. But the Australians did win, and no tribute to their powers can be much bigger than the general verdict after the match.

The Australians made alterations from their back formation which, on the whole, were not for the better. Their forwards played a fine game, and they needed to. On the whole tour they have not found an opposition pack as strong and as fit as themselves. As a rule they have been able to do almost as they liked in the last quarter of an hour; but on Saturday Cambridge were the fitter forward side of the two at the finish, and the Australians needed all their grit—and they've plenty of that—to stick the last fifteen minutes at top speed.

The huge improvement of the Cambridge forwards seems inexplicable to many. But what if the only Daniell had them all last week, and was teaching them with honeyed words? The improvement is then more understandable.

An extra word must be said for Richards' game on Saturday. If there is a better forward playing he must be something a bit extra. Lely played a fine hard game for Cambridge, and kept his side together by precept and example.

GLASGOW ACADEMICALS vs. LONDON SCOTTISH.—Despite the wretched weather, a very interesting game was seen at Richmond, on Saturday. The London Scottish came back to their old form, and the backs handled the slippery ball cleverly. London Scottish deserved their win, although the margin between the team was not so great as the score might suggest. The Academicals played a very vigorous game, and had their three-quarters taken full advantage of all the chances afforded them in the first half, they must have won. A great mistake was made in the "starving" of McGovatt, who had little opportunity of using his exceptional pace in attack. Once or twice in tackling his speed was very useful to him. There was little to choose between the forwards, but the London Scottish pack was more clever with their feet. Walter and Purves played the best game of the three-quarters, Lockhart being quick at feeding them and clever with his long punts into touch.

The London Scottish goal had a narrow escape from a free kick, and then the Academical threes made several good runs. A big rush by the home forwards resulted in West scoring. Lockhart failing with the place. Following good forward play Purves added a try. Then Lockhart opened up the play and Buchanan, after a good run, passed to Whitworth, who scored, and this time Lockhart converted. McGovatt was next nearly in for the Glasgow men, just being pushed into touch in the nick of time. Just afterwards the ball came out from a scramble, and Drysdale gathered cleverly and scored Warren's place-kick hit the upright. Interval :—London Scottish. 1 goal and 2 tries (11 points); Academicals, 1 try (3 points).

The second half was chiefly notable for a series of determined, but unsuccessful, rushes towards each goal, and the game ended :—London Scottish, 1 goal and 2 tries (11 points); Glasgow Academicals, 1 try (3 points).

GUY'S vs. LONDON WELSH.—At Honor Oak Park, on Saturday, Guy's were always the better side, but the eventual scoring was almost even. Guy's held the upper hand all through forward. The Hospital have a fine pack this year, untiring, fast, and all workers. After about fifteen minutes a period of scrambling play close on the Welsh line ended in Mullins gaining a try, and Stokes converted. Harding was very prominent after this, and made one fine run down the field, passing to Maddocks when tackled. The latter cleared a host of opponents, and planted the ball beneath the posts, Harding converting. Half-time.—Guy's, 1 goal (5 point); London Welsh, 1 goal (5 points).

On resuming, Stranach, a very powerful Hospital forward, got away, but was pushed into touch. Then the Welsh pack came away, but they kicked too far, and Glendinning drove them back with some huge punts. Passing by the Guy's backs set Stokes and Stringer going, but each attack was frustrated by fine tackling. The game waxed fast and furious and over anxiety on the part of the Welsh was their downfall. Stokes putting the Hospital three points up with a fine penalty goal. Play swung to the other end, where Vivian passed to Maddocks, who, unmarked and right in front of the posts, dropped goal. Again the Hospital returned to the attack, and, passing grandly, Stringer finished a delightful movement by romping over with an unconverted try. Result :—Guy's, 2 goals (1 penalty) and 1 try (11 points); London Welsh, 2 goals (dropped) (9 points).

CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY vs. EDINBURGH ACADEMICALS.—The Light Blues, although suffering from the after-effects of their Saturday's game against the Australians, outclassed the Edinburgh Academicals at Cambridge yesterday. The visitors never got together. Cambridge only made one alteration, C. M. Gold displacing Hosken, and although he may be given another trial is hardly of the class of the Old Leysian. K. G. Macleod had a great afternoon. He played with the opposition, and beat them all the afternoon by different methods each time. Macleod put a climax to it by forcing his way through the whole pack, and his record for the afternoon was 7 tries and 4 goals.

Only six minutes had elapsed when the scoring started, Macleod receiving from Godby, but Atkinson failed with the kick. Some time later Macleod received from Pyman, who made the opening, feigned passing to Wright, and landed under the posts. Macleod converted. For a very brief space the visitors pressed, but the home forwards relieved, and Macleod taking the ball on the right crossed over on the left with an unconverted try. Half-time :—Cambridge, 1 goal and 2 tries (11 points); Academicals, 0.

Two converted tries followed quickly after half-time. Gold registered the first and Macleod the second, the international and Morton adding the extra points. Next some good general passing enabled Gold to secure an unconverted try at the corner flag, and then followed three tries by Macleod, two of which he converted. The first was secured by a good movement behind the scrum, and in the second he forced his way through the pack, while the third was the result of some clever combination with Wright. The last try was secured by Pyman. Result :—Cambridge University, 5 goals 5 tries (40 points); Edinburgh Academicals, 0.

AUSTRALIANS vs. OXFORD.—The Australians played an utterly different game at Oxford yesterday from the one they showed at Cambridge last Saturday, and, showing pace, power, and brain all through, beat Oxford decisively by 3 goals (1 penalty) and 2 tries to 1 try—19 points to 3.

The difference in form is rather bewildering at first sight, but in the Australians' games "there is more in it than meets the eye," as the man said who was hit on the nose by a brick. Last Saturday Moran was playing with a damaged shoulder, and was, practically, a passenger, and Griffin was laid out a few minutes after the start. Moreover, the Australians were holding Cambridge a bit too cheap before the match, and the fact that they very nearly got beaten reminded them that training is a rather big essential to success.

Again, Hickey was anything but a success as stand-off half on Saturday; he could not take the passes. The substitution of Ward Prentice proved a great move. He took passes cleverly, and played a fine individual game, as well as knitting the back line together. The two new comers into the side, Burge and Gavin—the latter a very tall person, about 6ft. 3in.—were both in form, and, apparently, in fine condition.

Oxford were a great disappointment, both to those who have followed them all the year and to those who went to see them, expecting, from their great reputation, that they would give the Australians a terrific game, and as likely as not beat them. The trouble was forward. Oxford did not get the ball more than three times out of the scrum, and their halves and three-quarters never had a proper chance.

The last try, which was started by Martin and finished up by Vassall, was a topping piece of work, but Oxford only looked really dangerous on two other occasions.

The 'Varsity held their own in the first quarter of an hour, but after that they were not in it. The first try was scored after twenty-two minutes, and looked rather a soft one. McKivatt feigned to start a passing movement, and then, dodging round the blind side of the scrum, ran in as he liked. Carmichael failed to convert.

A few minutes later Dix got away at a great pace, and passed to Carroll, who had only to run in with the ball; but, as he missed it, he didn't. Just before half-time Tarr was penalised for lying on the ball, and Carmichael scored a penalty goal.

The Australians started at a great pace in the second half, and after a passing movement right across from McKivatt to Russell the latter put it back to Prentice, who scored. Carmichael missed the shot.

Afterwards McKivatt scored between the posts, after fairly tricking the defence, and Russell got in in the corner from a very pretty passing movement right along the line. Carmichael converted both tries.

Unfortunately, not long before time, Middleton and Roberts got mixed up from a line-out, and Middleton hit Roberts hard in the face, under the right eye. Mr. A. O. Jones, who was referee, at once ordered Middleton off the field; and rightly, of course. Vassall's try was scored just before time, and after Cunningham's shot, which was abortive, Jones blew the long whistle.

ROWING.

THE COLQUHOUN SCULLS.—It was generally expected that the final of the 57th race for the Cambridge University Colquhoun Sculls would be a walk-over for Fairbairn, but such was not the case. The fine standard of sculling which has been in evidence at Cambridge during the past few years was fully maintained, Fairbairn, the young Australian, getting over in time that has only three or four times been beaten, and which has never been beaten without the assistance of the wind. The competitors yesterday had a head wind most of the way, which makes the performance all the more creditable. Last year Fairbairn was defeated in his heat by E. W. Powell, the winner, but has improved very considerably since then.

Of recent years the feature of the event has been that almost unknown men have been runners-up, and this year was no exception. Every credit must, of course, be given to Fairbairn, but Swanston also must be justly proud of himself. He has only recently jumped into the forefront of Cambridge rowing, and his fine performance on Friday is all the more remarkable as he had never done any serious sculling before a fortnight ago. Had O. H. Carver (last year's runner-up) been in residence this term he would have had to have gone all the way to beat these two.

First Station.—G. E. Fairbairn (Jesus), 11st. 5lb ... 1
Second Station.—H. E. Swanston (Jesus), 12st. 11lb 2

The umpire (Mr. L. H. K. Bushe Fox) gave the competitors a good start, but Fairbairn, the more experienced man, was the quicker off, and settling down he sculled two strokes a minute quicker than his opponent. He sent his boat along at a splendid pace, and reaching the Little Ditch in 1min. 18secs., it was seen that he would not be a long way off record. Swanston, however, was two lengths in the rear, and did not look like pressing the Blue, taking 1min. 45secs. to this point. In the Gut and Plough Reach, Fairbairn continued to gain by better sculling, as both were steering well. Arriving at the Red Grind in 4mins. 32secs, Fairbairn held an advantage of forty-five yards, and the race looked over; but Swanston had to be accounted for. No sooner had he entered the Long Reach than he spurted splendidly, and reduced the gap somewhat. After passing the Willows he spurted again, and kept it up to the finish. Fairbairn put all he knew into it, but his opponent went up gradually stroke by stroke, and after a fine finish Fairbairn won by 30 yards. Time—7mins. 58secs. "Bossy" Phelps steered the winner, whilst Alf Parsons assisted the loser over the course.

George Eric Fairbairn is a member of the famous Australian rowing family. He is a son of Mr. Tom Fairbairn, who, however, was only at Jesus for one or two terms, and did not gain prominence as an oar. He is, of course, a nephew of Messrs. Steve, George, and Tom Fairbairn, all famous Jesus oarsmen. The first-named rowed for Cambridge in 1882, 1883, 1886, and 1887, whilst the last two were Trial Eight caps. Eric Fairbairn was born at Melbourne only twenty years ago, and was educated at Eton; but did not commence rowing until he took up residence at Jesus College three years ago. As a Freshman he rowed in the First Lent boat which went "Head of the River," and the following June was in the second May boat, which ascended five places. Last year he jumped rapidly into prominence. He rowed bow in the winning four and bow in the winning Trial Eight before Christmas, and then, after a hard fight with E. S. Hornidge, gained the No. 2 seat against Oxford. In the May term he won the Lowe double sculls, and rowed No. 7 in the Jesus crew. He was left out of the Cambridge boat for the Olympic Regatta, but was afterwards picked with P. Verdon to represent England in the pairs, but was defeated. A few weeks ago he stroked the Jesus four to victory, showing very improved form.

H. E. Swanston, son of Mr. A. J. Swanston, of Bourne End, is a brother of A. W. Swanston, who rowed for Cambridge in 1898, and was afterwards killed in the South African War. At Loretto he played Rugby at half-back with T. H. Godby, and has quite recently come out as an oarsman, having won four oars in two terms, and being considered one of the most promising of the young Cambridge oarsmen. He has had very little experience as a sculler, but on Friday covered himself with glory.

ATHLETICS.

THE FURLONG CHAMPIONSHIP.—Originally, a match which was decided at the Higginshaw Grounds, Oldham, on Saturday, was intended to be a three-cornered sweepstakes. The contestants were, at the outset, A. B. Postle (Australian), E. R. Day (Dublin), and W. Growcott (Bunbury), who were articled to run 220 yards on level terms for £100 a corner. Unfortunately, however, Postle wrenched the muscles of his thigh badly at the Stadium, and withdrew, paying £25 forfeit. Day and Growcott decided to go on with the race, and both had gone into special training, the former being looked after by Bob Jackson, and Growcott by Allen Ellis.

The weather, though threatening, was fine, but the track, a straight one, had suffered from the rain of the last few days, and was naturally in a heavy condition. This nullified the probability of any record being broken.

There were 2,000 people present, and Day was installed a hot favourite at 5 to 1 on. Jack Hepplethwaite got the men away to an excellent start. After going 50 yards the favourite had established a lead of half a yard, and at 200 yards he had increased his advantage to three yards. The race was now practically a gift for the Irishman. Growcott, however, did not give up. On the other hand, he persevered gamely, but failed to get on terms with Day, who eventually won by about four yards. The winner's time was 21⅗secs.

'VARSITY CROSS-COUNTRY RACES.—At Oxford, on Saturday, over the usual seven miles course, the Oxford University Hare and Hounds beat the first team of the Thames Hare and Hounds by 25 points with the lower score of 15 points to the Thames team's 40.

The first six were:—J. F. Worsley (Magdalen College, Oxford), time—41mins. 3secs., 1; A. W. Cleames (Magdalen), 41mins. 8secs., 2; M. G. Haigh (New College), 41mins. 24secs., 3; A. Chandler (Hertford), 41mins. 45secs., 4; A. M. Brown (Oriel), 41mins. 50secs., 5; J. W. Sainsbury (Thames), 42mins., 6. It was only in the last half-mile that Worsley drew away and won by twenty yards.

At cambridge, over the seven miles course, the Town and County Harriers beat the Cambridge University Hare and Hounds by 7 points, with 24 points to 31. The first three were: W. Gavin (Trinity, Cambridge), 39mins. 44secs., 1; G. F. Page(Town and County), 39mins. 51secs., 2; E .A. Mallows (Town and County), 40mins. 5secs., 3. Neither side was fully represented.

At Addiscombe, in an eighteen miles Marathon race promoted by the Herne Hill Harriers, seven competitors won silver medals by running the distance under two hours, and seven others won bronze medals by running the distance under two and a quarter hours. The first four were: J. Minns, time—1hr. 46mins. 27secs., 1; E. W. Lloyd, 1hr. 49mins. 56secs., 2; E. C. Barry, 1hr. 56mins. 3secs., 3; S. Ledwod, 1hr. 56mins. 41secs., 4.

Olympic Amenities.—In a detailed reply to the attacks made upon the management of the Olympic Games, the Amateur Athletic Association issues a pamphlet to-day giving a categorical denial to the statements made by the Hon. J. B McCabe and Mr. J. E. Sullivan (the president of the American Athletic Union).

Most of the attacks were made in the Boston Globe, and others were made in a pamphlet published by Mr. Gustavus T. Kirby, one of the American members of the Comite d' Honneur. Mr. Kirby gives in detail a conversation which he alleges he had with Mr. David Scott Duncan, the referee in the 400 metres race.

In the reply of the A.A.A., Mr. Duncan, in a signed statement, says he had no conversation whatever after or before the decision to re-run the race with any of the American officials.

Statements from the umpires.—Dr. M. J. Bulger, Messrs. Harry Goble, A. R. Badger, D. Basan—and also of the judges—Messrs. P. L. Fisher, C. Pennycook, and E. W. Parry—are also printed. A point is made of the following:—

Mr. McCabe's statement concludes with the following—"After the Marathon, spectators would yell every day: 'Who won the Marathon? Dorando. Who got the prize? America.' To this we need only reply that the Marathon Race took place on the last day but one of the Games, and the phrase 'every day' is quite in keeping with the other untrue and unfair charges."

A further statement appears in the San Francisco Chronicle, amongst other papers, dated 28th August, in which it stated:—"The A.A.U. of the United States will break off athletic relations with the British A.A.A. because of the spirit shown by the Britons towards the American athletes in the Olympic Games. This action will be taken following a mail vote. It is almost unanimously in favour of severing connection with the British organisation. As soon as Bartow S. Weeks returns from abroad a meeting will be held and final action taken." To this it is sufficient to say that, although the A.A.U. of America have repeatedly asked to enter into a working agreement with the A.A.A., the latter body have always respectfully declined. There are, therefore, no athletic relations to break off. Signed on behalf of the general committee of the Amateur Athletic Association.

T. M. Abraham,
E. B. Holmes,
Percy L. Fisher,
Honorary Secretary.

Perhaps the A.A.A. owed it to its dignity to enter its reply, but perhaps also the matter was one in which "least said soonest mended would better have applied. After all, there is nothing new in the pamphlet, only, of course, it is official. R.I.P.

GOLF.

Oxford University vs. Sunningdale.—Some very fine play was witnessed at Sunningdale on Saturday. The teams were ten a side. Of the ten individual matches, four were halved, and the whole contest ended in a tie, each side scoring 3 points. The Oxonians were led by J. A. Robertson-Durham, but he failed to produce anything like his true form against H. S. Colt, who gained the easiest of victories by 7 up and 6 to play. C. V. L. Hooman, the Dark Blue captain, had a great game with N. F. Hunter. The players were all square at the turn and at the twelfth hole. Hooman eventually became dormy 1, but with his approach to the home hole he found the bunker on the far side of the green. Hunter won the hole, and thus halved the match. One of the most remarkable performances was that accomplished by P. de Putron. His opponent, W. P. Tindal-Atkinson played a magnificent game going out. He equalled the amateur record for the first 9 holes by reaching the turn in 33. He did the tenth hole in 4, and then led by 6 up. From this point, however, De Putron made a splendid fight. He got back hole after hole, and eventually halved the match. Details:—

Cambridge University vs. Northwood.—At Northwood on Saturday the home club defeated Cambridge University by 5½ matches to ½. The Northwood team included two old Light Blue captains in Geoffrey Hoffman and M. T. Allen. Hoffman, after losing the first hole, went right away from the present Cambridge captain, B. Hammond Chambers, and won by 6 and 5. Hammond Chambers was not playing well. Allen and E. S. Ulyat were never more than a hole apart. The latter generally had the lead going out, while Allen was in front during the greater part of the homeward journey. He was dormy at the seventeenth, but he lost the last hole, so that the round was halved. A. E. Williams and the Cambridge secretary, C. L. Macdona, provided another close struggle. The former had to get down a by no means easy putt to win on the home green. E. C. Lee and T. McNeill were fairly evenly matched during the greater part of the outward journey, but Lee came home in the fine score of 37, and finished the match at the fourteenth hole by laying his second shot stone dead. E. R. Campbell and A. Dane had a somewhat remarkable match. Campbell stood 5 down at the turn, but eventually proved successful by 2 holes. Details:—

BILLIARDS.

The Season's Big Breaks.—Everything points to this season being exceptionally fruitful of big breaks, thanks in a great measure to Stevenson's phenomenal form. The present campaign is as yet scarcely two months old, yet the high-water mark of the fifth century has already been exceeded on nine occasions. Of these, Stevenson claims the extraordinarily large proportion of seven, Dawson and Reece sharing the remaining two. Here is the list compiled to date:—

H. W. Stevenson.

v. J. Harris, at Burroughes and Watt's, 11th Nov.	733
v. C. Harverson, at Glasgow, 30th Sept. ...	644
v. E. Diggle, at Manchester, 3rd Nov.	632
v. T. Aiken, at Newcastle, 12th Oct.	618
v. T. Aiken, at Southampton, 19th Sept. ...	564
v E. Diggle, at Manchester, 7th Nov.	557
v. C. Harverson, at Glasgow, 29th Sept. ...	549

T. Reece.

v. T. Aiken, at Edinburgh, 10th Oct.	604

C. Dawson.

v. J. Mack, at Thurston's, 6th Oct.	565

The Billiard Association.—At a special general meeting of the B.A., held at Anderton's Hotel on Saturday, the following resolution was proposed by Colonel S. R. Atkinson and seconded by Mr. R. Topping:—"That neither professional members nor billiard-table manufacturers be entitled to vote at annual general meetings or special general meetings." This was carried by 131 votes to 10.

The Tournament.—The heat between H. W. Stevenson (scratch) and J. Harris (rec. 3,000) was continued at the Soho-square Hall on Saturday afternoon. Stevenson's chief breaks were 135 from 130 unfinished), 108, 45, 97, 55, 56, 70, 48, 161 and 71; Harris making 46 and 42. Interval scores: Stevenson (in play), 8,251; Harris, 6,717. Stevenson, of course, won quite easily. In the evening he made breaks of 164, 70, 181 and 63. Harris's best were 97, 61, 55, 117 and 52, the result being: Stevenson, 9,000; J. Harris, 7,413.

John Roberts vs. M. Inman.—This match of 18,000-up, Inman with 4,000 start, was resumed at Leicester-square on Saturday afternoon. Roberts made breaks of 88, 51, 54, 53, 94, 56, 96 and 78 (unfinished). To Inman's 85, 108, 83, 43, 61, 61 and 144. Interval scores: Inman, 17,383; Roberts (in play), 17,250. In the evening Inman made 309 (222 off the red), 54 and 167. Roberts made 80, 40, 83, 179, 97 and 78, the closing scores being: Inman, 18,000; Roberts, 17,810.

Hunting.

THE BOMBAY HUNT.

The official opening of the Bombay Hunting Season took place on Thursday when there was a meet at the Kennels at Santa Cruz, though it is not the first time hounds have been out; they having effected a kill last week when aired by the Master and Whips.

On this occasion there were about fifty out, including half a dozen ladies, Mrs. Beatty, Mrs. Rumboll Mrs. Priestley, Mrs. Turner Green, Mrs Meyer and Mrs. Kirby. It is positively chilly just now in the early morning and as a cold breeze was blowing in the bargain one had reason to expect a good morning's sport. Two very fair runs were enjoyed but the pace was surprisingly slow. As soon as possible a move was made for the brickfields at the White House and a jack soon put up. Along the treacherous melon ground there were several empty saddles and some sport in the catching of the stray gees who again experienced no little difficulty at the swollen Calena Tank. The quarry led us back towards Santa Cruz station where a fine long run was indulged in as far as the Bandra Creek where he was pulled down before he could gain the creek. The brush was presented to Mrs. Meyer by the Master.

Usually fruitful, the Sahar coverts were tried as there was time to spare. It came up to expectations as hounds soon gave tongue and were off after another jack. A fine run was practicable across rice fields as far as a deep nullah, which was crossed. After this there was more good going over grass fields. The quarry turned sharp away from the Backwater which was very deep and gave some trouble before he was turned out of the Market Gardens where he tried to hide. He made off for the Barracks but turned again towards Sahar and eventually he saved his brush.

POLO IN POONA.

The Aldersot Polo Tournament was continued with on Monday in Poona when three further games were played. Though it was rather one-sided, the one between the 26th Cavalry, Nos. 1 and 3, was undoubtedly the best in the matter of skill. In the first chukker the No. 1 made up their point start and went one a head, hit another in the second, and three in the third. In the fourth they hit one more and just at the end of it No. 3 hit their only goal through a penalty. The No. 1 team therefore won by seven goals to two.

A fairly close thing was it between the Sappers and Lincolns, minus one and plus two respectively. One in the first and two in the second placed the Sappers level, but in the third the Lincolns went ahead with a goal from an off-side. The last chukker was consequently keenly followed, but the Sappers showed their superiority by pressing throughout and getting through three times. The gross score at the finish was five goals to three in favour of the Sappers.

Thirdly a still closer affair between the Miners and R. F. A., No. 2, each plus three. The R. F. A. commenced well by pressing hard and scoring, but the second was up and down, the Miners equalising, only for the R. F. A. again to place themselves ahead. In the third the Artillery pressed but were repulsed and in the end the Miners drew level. The last chukker was void of scoring and with the scores standing two all extra time was played. The Miners were first to hit a goal and thus won by six goals to five in all.

Owing to the Baluchis being engaged in the Hockey Tournament, there were only two games on Wednesday, both rather one-sided. In the first the 26th Cavalry met the M. I. No. 1, scratch and plus three. It was a comparative walk-over for the Cavalry who made up two goals in the first chukker, and by hitting four in the second went ahead. In the third they hit another and wound up with four in the last, so that they eventually ran out by a gross score of eleven to three.

A closer affair was that between the R. F. A., Nos. 1 and 2, plus three and four. The No. 1 drew level in the first chukker, and with two to one were a head in the second. In the fourth they put in one more and won by a total of seven goals to five.

Three games were played again on Friday and all three ended as usual in the victory of two Cavalry teams and the Staff. The first saw the Cavalry No. 3 meet the Miners minus 1 and plus 3. After a blank chukker, the Cavalry made up three goals in the second and drew level in the third. In the fourth they had matters pretty well all their own way and scored three tjmes. They thus won by 6 goals to 3.

The Divisional Staff with scratch met the Lincolns plus 2. The Lincolns began well by adding one to their start in the first, but in the second the Staff scored twice. The third was blank with the Lincolns still a head, but in the fourth the Staff put on the finishing touches by hitting four to one, and thus ran out winners by 7 goals to 4.

In the third game the Cavalry No. 2 had an easy time of it with the Sappers, scratch and minus one. In the first chukker the Cavalry put in two, but in the second the Sappers hit two te one. After that, however, the Cavalry had the upper hand to the finish, hitting two goals in each of the next two chukkers. They therefore won by 7 goals to 1.

CRICKET IN CALCUTTA.

CALCUTTA vs. BALLYGUNGE.—Played on the Calcutta ground on the 5th and 6th instant. Calcutta batted first and began badly, losing three wickets for 6 runs. Lee and Fowke took the score to 48 when Lee wascaught, Turnbull made 10, and Fowke was caught when the score had reached 84. Quin and Drew batted well and carried the total to 108 before they were separated. Twiss joined Drew and when stumps were drawn for the day the score was 159 for 7 wickets. On Sunday Drew continued to play well and made 53 before he was bowled: the remaining wickets produced a few runs and the innings closed for 195. Ballygunge opened with White and Bocquet, the latter was bowled when he had scored 10, and Shallow joined White and they made 93 before Twiss dismissed White. Shallow, Frost and Yeoman were out with the score at 126 Skinner and Horncastle put on 26 more before the former was caught, Mytton did not score, but Sherman and Horncastle batted well and knocked off the runs, the innings eventually closing for 208, leaving Ballygunge victorious by 13 runs. Calcutta went in again and made 97 for the loss of one wicket.

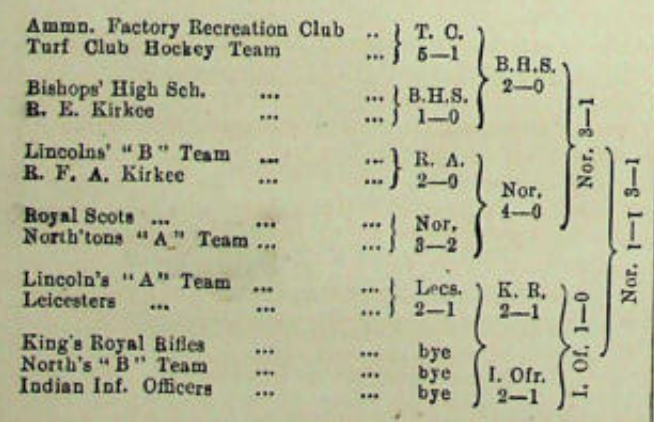
AGA KHAN TOURNAMENT.



THE second of the semi-finals was played on Saturday in connection with the Aga Khan Hockey Tournament in Poona. It lay between the Bishop's High School and the Northamptons. Gamely as the youngsters played up to the end of a fast game they could never quite hold their own. The Northamptons played a sound game in all departments and never shewed signs of falling off, eventually winning by 3 goals to 1.

On Monday the final between the Indian Army Officers and the Northamptons was played before a very large number and a fine game was seen. It was very fast and most exciting throughout as each scored once and then neither could get through again. Five extra minutes were played each way but this did not decide it and the match was left over for the next day.

The replay on Tuesday was followed with the keenest of interest and the game itself fully came up to expectations in the matter of skill. It was again well contested and though the Northamptons won by a margin of 3 goals to 1 it was all they could do to win as on the play the officers had as much of the play.

Before presenting the Cup, Mrs. Alderson made a very fitting speech in which she complimented the winners and runners up on the fine exhibitions they had given, also the others on the sportsmanlike manner in which they had fought for supremacy. The win of the Northamptons was particularly popular as they have but recently come to Poona. It has been most successful affair in every way and Lieut Bremner has to be congratulated on his management.

The following are full results :—

POONA DIVISIONAL TOURNAMENT.

ON Wednesday the Divisional Hockey Tournament, open to teams from the Indian Army, began, two games being played. In one the 114th Mahrattas beat the 127th Baluchis by 2 goals to nil. The 3rd Sappers and Miners, in the other, beat the 109th Infantry by the same margin.

Two more games were played on Thursday, both of which proved fast and not without some excitement, on the Gymkhana ground. In the first, the winners of last year's Tournament, the 103rd Mahrattas, met the 107th Pioneers and beat them by 5 goals to 2, mainly through superior shooting.

The second was between the 64th Pioneers from Belgaum and the 116th Mahrattas. This was rather a one-sided affair, the Pioneers winning by 4 goals to nil.

Only one game was played on Friday when the 66th Punjabis met the 3rd Sappers and Miners. It was a very one-sided affair as the former won easily by 5 goals to nil.

THE OLYMPIA SHOW.

LAST Saturday the doors of Olympia were opened wide to admit the public to view the seventh International Exhibition of Motor-cars and Accessories.

As year after year goes by the ingenuity of man seems to be able to cope with the difficulties that arise. So it is with this display at Olympia. For here are staged a large number of motor-carriages, each improved from the experience of the past and with additional detail refinements to meet future criticism. Removable wheel and rims to minimise the labour of tyre changing, mechanically operated pumps for cars to save the human effort for tyre inflation, cars that change gear automatically to the speed of the engine as the Norfolk, a new electric battery so that the re-charge can be carried in a bottle called the Float ignition battery, saving the necessity of electric station charging, anti-dazzling lamps that brightly illuminate the road without blinding the meeting drivers of vehicles or pedestrians, are a few of the novelties to meet past difficulties.

Engines, too, are to be seen, showing a variety of methods to produce the energy that man has applied to drive the self-propelled vehicle. Steam, electricity, and petrol are all shown harnessed for the use of the motor-car. Each furnishes several devices in the method of its use, and this exhibition shows a greater variety of engines than any previous collection of self-propelled carriages.

Great Britain naturally furnishes the greater number of motor-cars staged, but France, Germany, Italy, Holland, Switzerland, Belgium, and the United States of America vie with each other and the Mother Country in the excellence of their exhibits. The variety is somewhat bewildering, as there are no fewer than 120 different makes of cars staged. This year cars about 15 h.p. seem to preponderate, but the smaller cars, as the miniature Martini voiturette, with tiny four-cylinder engine, show, for example, a great improvement in construction and design.

The show, as usual, is divided into two chief sections. In the main hall and annexe are housed pleasure and touring cars of every description, from the handsome little 14-16 h.p. Straker-Squire runabout to the powerful six-cylinder monsters to be seen; from lordly limousines priced at over £1,000 to cars for the moderate motorist priced at £200 or thereabouts. The exhibition is productive of several new departures and developments in construction. Naturally, after the storm and stress of August and September, and the great outburst against the "four inch" race, backed up by a section of the general press, the "four-inch" type of engine is sure to excite attention. We had almost learned to classify manufacturers according to horse power, but now this is impossible, for a visit to many of the stands of the leading firms shows that these higher-powered firms, as one had almost termed them, were now bent on capturing the low-powered market. There is also a decided improvement in the body class, and judging from the number of landaulettes shown this type of vehicle is very popular. For years we had it dinned into our ears that English body designers were not in the same class as the French, but surely no one will deny that the present show reveals immense strides in this direction. A body built to the order of the Duke of Northumberland is as fine as any work to be seen at the Palais Royal; and there are many others in the show which can vie with the best work turned out by the Continental body maker. The gallery is not the least interesting feature of the motor show. Space, of course, is very limited, but the organising committee of the S.M.M.T. are to be congratulated upon the splendid way they have endeavoured to meet the wishes and requirements of all their members.

Mr. H. M. Hobson controls such a large share of so many cars, to say nothing of the Jenatzy tyre, Pognon plugs, and Claudel-Hobson carburettor, that it is difficult to know what to first review. In the first place there is the Nagant-Hobson car, which made such a successful debut on the Brooklands track this year, and at the Ostend and Boulogne racing week. There is the Decauville, which, with Panhard, is about the oldest French motor-car manufacturer in the Exhibition; and, finally, there is Delahaye, whose catalogue this year is the finest piece of art-work in its illustrations that has been produced by any motor-car manufacturer this season. Of the Nagant-Hobson exhibited on Stand No. 40, there is a very nice 14-18 h.p. chassis, which, with its curved frame and tiny gear-box, contains all the latest and best motor-car practice. It has a very powerful engine, and fitted with a Claudel-Hobson carburettor should prove a very economical car in its upkeep. There is also a 35-40 h.p. Nagant-Hobson, fitted with a special coupe landaulette body by Kellner, of Paris, which aroused much admiration among the lady visitors to the Exhibition. Decauvilles are staged in the 12-16 h.p. and the 16-20 h.p. models, fitted with dual ignitions and Pognon plugs. These magneto Pognon plugs, by-the-by, are now the same price as the ordinary ones, and are also guaranteed for twelve months. With regard to the Delahaye, after interviewing Mr. Hobson on Stand No. 40, one has to cross diagonally the length of the main hall, for in the opposite corner the Delahaye stand is situated—Stand No. 88. Three models are staged here. Of these a new one to many will be the 12-16 h.p. four-cylinder Delahaye. It is staged with a polished show chassis, and also with a limousine body, suitable for touring or town work. The models shown have four speeds and a very neat gear-box, but the Delahaye taxi model, which is a similar chassis and engine, has only three speeds. Both have live axle drive. An 18-24 h.p. phaeton and a 25-35 h.p. landaulette are also staged on the Delahaye stand. These are the chain-driven models, and their handsome coach work adds to the attraction of the stand.

Four complete cars are being exhibited on the Lanchester Motor Company's stand, two 28 h.p. six-cylinder cars, fitted with limousine and landaulette bodies, one 28 h.p. six-cylinder open touring car, and one 20 h.p. four-cylinder landaulette. Lanchester cars are so distinctive in their features that it comes upon the visitor as somewhat of a shock to find two of these cars fitted with wheel-steering and foot-control instead of the usual Lanchester tiller and single-lever left-hand control. It is certainly extraordinary how every motor-car maker, however original his first design may have been, is pushed eventually into what may be termed standard practice. It must be understood, however, that the wheel-steered Lanchester car has not been designed to supersede in any way their popular tiller system, but has only been placed upon the market to meet the views of those customers who are unaccustomed to using their left-hand instead of their right for their changing speed and brake levers, having learnt to drive on cars of more general accepted practice. These wheel-steering cars are the 25 h.p. landaulette and the 28 h.p. limousine, which, with its canopy and glass screen, gives ample seating accommodation in its body for six passengers. Lanchesters are always comfortable riding cars, and this limousine is no exception to the rule. Both these two carriages have a gate change through a lever acting upon the epicycle gearing, so beyond the difference of the actual hand change-gear there are no mechanical alterations in the well-known Lanchester system. The 28 h.p. touring car, which is staged, has the usual Lanchester tiller steering. In this car the company have endeavoured to find the correct place for the chauffeur when the owner is driving himself. This has been solved by placing a seat facing sideways low down in the foot-space by the front passenger.

The Daimler Exhibit was very interesting, and their Italian-built car attracted a good deal of attention. The Societa Anonima Officine De Luca-Daimler, whose works are at Naples, is an offspring of The Daimler Motor Company (1904), Limited, and constructs motors and chassis to the designs and under the guidance of the parent Company.

The Daimler Company are Sole Concessionaires for the sale of this Italian-built car, and as they stock spare parts and are able to effect prompt repairs purchasers of De Luca vehicles are as well placed in these respects as are owners of Daimler carriages.

By arrangement, The Officine De Luca-Daimler is the only manufacturing concern in Italy who will be able to supply engines similar to those constructed in England by the Daimler Company under Mr. Knight's patent, and on Stand No. 49 is found a complete chassis fitted with a motor of this type of 22 h.p. (Royal Automobile Club rating). This engine is of the four-cylinder type, bore 96 m/m, stroke 130 m/m; it is cooled on the thermo-syphon system, and is fitted with high tension magneto ignition. Following Continental practice, the De Luca-Company are fitting their chassis with radiators of the honeycomb type, and low straight dash-boards. The chassis is constructed of pressed steel with tubular cross members, and the transmission provides for four forward speeds (one direct) and one reverse. A live axle is fitted. The wheels are of the detachable wire type.

Two complete carriages, of types which for some time past the Company have been supplying with most satisfactory results, are also shown. These are :—

(1). 20 h.p. (R.A.C. Rating) side entrance phæton painted blue with black mouldings and fine red lines; blue leather upholstery and brass fittings. The car is fitted with high tension accumulator and magneto ignitions, Cape Cart Hood and glass screen.

To complete the exhibit there is a 22 h.p. sectional engine of the new type built under Mr. Knight's patent, which is sure to attract attention, as from it one can readily render count of the actual operation of the moving parts of the new motor.

THE WALLABIES' TOUR.

THE Australian team of Rugby footballers which is now touring Great Britian continues to build up a fine record. So far the Colonials have played in sixteen matches in all but one of which they have come out victors. The only reverse they have experienced was in their seventh fixture, which was against Llanelly which fifteen succeeded in lowering the colours of the Colonials by a goal and a try, to one try, or eight points to three. In all their matches the Cornstalks have registered a total of 284 points against 62, a fine performance.

The latest victims of the invaders are the University teams of Oxford and Cambridge. The latter were the first to oppose the visitors and they made such a fine fight, only being beaten by two points, the final scores reading: Australia 1 goal and 2 tries, Cambridge University 2 goals, that it was thought the Wallabies would most likely be beaten when they met the dark blues, as the latter, who have gone through all their matches this season with flying colours, were considered superior to the Cantabs. To the surprise of the record crowd which witnessed the game, however, the Oxonians were much more easily disposed of than the light blues.

Although the Australians were responsible for much clever play, and the Oxford backs gave occasional glimpses of their undoubted abilities as a division, the eagerly anticipated match must be described as a disappointing one. The Oxford forwards failed signally, and were beaten for the ball practically throughout, the result being that the backs had few opportunities, and never really approached their customary standard. Against comparatively weak back divisions the Oxford backs have scored many tries, even in matches in which the Oxford forwards have failed to hold their own.

In the game under notice, however, the opposition was of a very different kind. The attack of the Australian backs was clever and accurate, most of the movements being admirably executed, and in consequence the University backs were kept mainly on the defensive, and became to some extent more or less demoralised. Then the soundness of the Australian defence did not tend to increase the confidence of the Oxford backs in themselves.

Still the Australians would certainly not have won by such a large margin, but for the complete failure of the Oxford forwards to get the ball, and their ability to compensate for this defect by their dash and pace in the loose. Oxford were, in fact, very badly beaten forward, and hence the decisive character of the reverse.

The Colonial backs played with great confidence, and were ever ready to initiate attack from all sorts of positions. Unfortunately the display of the Wallabies was marked by many examples of the same sort of unfair play for which they were so frequently penalised at Cambridge. These offences included handling the ball in the scrums and obstruction or interference in many forms. In all they were penalised for such offences on fifteen occasions, while the centre three-quarters were undoubtedly inclined to obstruct the opposing centres after passing to their wing, with a view to increasing the latter's chance of scoring. These disagreeable incidents and the obstructions for which the penalties were granted, were of the most palpable kind, and at Oxford, where the game is always fair, a very bad impression was made.

Such tactics were all the more regrettable, as when the men chose to play the game, they proved that they were both clever in adapting themselves to circumstances, and opportune in turning defensive movements into attack. It is a great pity that such a clever side cannot play more to the book.

It was during the second half of their match against Oxford that the Australians showed to the best advantage. Heading cleverly the forwards had all the best of the scrummages. In ten minutes no fewer than three tries were scored, two after brilliant bouts of passing. Oxford fought pluckily against these overwhelming odds, and never gave up. Their perseverance brought its reward, for after the referee had despatched one of the Australian forwards from the field, a handling movement between Martin, Tarr, and Vassall ended in the latter getting over after a brilliant individual dash. This was practically the only occasion on which the Oxford backs had shown up in the attack. Unfortunately it was too late to do any good.

The finish of the Oxford match brought the results of the Australians' tour up to fifteen wins out of sixteen matches as follows :—

Sporting & Athletic Notes.

Saturday's racing will chiefly be remembered for the sad accident to Ballark, who broke his off fore in the hurdle race and had to be shot. This good black by Wallace (a Melbourne Cup winner) out of Danae, was only seven years old and fit and sound as a bell and, a consistent tryer, he probably had several seasons of success before him as a jumper to top his excellent record on the flat. He has only been put over fences this year for the first time and this was his very first hurdle race ; he shaped really well and the mischance which terminated his career could not in any way be held to be his fault. Betrayer, who was leading at the time, tried to get at the hurdle by the seven furlong post, jumped the wing and was followed by Dea, who was on his inside. Ballark got over the hurdle but swerved on to the rails. He then tried to jump them but was too close, the rail broke and the horse rolled over breaking his off fore between the shoulder and the elbow joint. This unlucky fatality threw a gloom over the afternoon, as in addition to the fact that the public were very hard hit over the race—they had backed Ballark freely even at 2 to 1 on—but every true sportsmen present could not but feel unhappy at the loss of such a good horse. With the three best in the race out of the way Foy was left to fight out the finish with Mystic Circle and being a bit the fitter of the two the former just won. The time of the race was as might be expected pretty bad—10 seconds worse than Mallard's last year !

Kipling was a steady favourite for the Corinthian Plate, and Mother Goose, Bantock and Galloping Girl were all well backed, then later a lot of money came on for Fizz and the colt was quickly brought down to 2 to 1. There was a good race of it as Galloping Girl caught and headed Fizz, who was leading about 50 yards from home, but the latter came again gamely and they finished level. As they are both youngsters the trainers agreed to divide in preference to running it off. Jackeroo ran a much improved horse in the race; as though pretty useful over a mile no one would have given him the credit of being able to run third in a round the course on terms. Long Tom ran his first and probably his last race since his resurrection, as he pulled up dead lame after the gallop.

The December Plate aroused the most interest of anything in the day, as there were some real good ones engaged in it, including Fitzgrafton, Stirabout, etc. Tangaroa, who stood at fours at one time, found many friends, though the stable is reported to have had only a little on, as they were not too confident of his chances. He won, however, very easily in spite of a gallant attempt on the part of Lovania. Fitzgrafton ran well and finished fifth, but walked out of the unsaddling enclosure very lame. Tangaroa's time, 1min. 28secs., was the same as Stirabout's for the race last season.

The Maiden Horse Plate was a gift for Master Theo, especially with his stable companion, Sacricomar and Not Yet, the only two who might have troubled him, out of the way. In this race Mr. Apcar's Bobbie blundered and almost came down by the five-furlong post. Blades got a nasty fall and with pretty well the whole field galloping over him was lucky to escape with a bad shaking and some ugly bruises. The Rooster, who just beat Sue for third place, is a horse worth noticing ; he came up very fast at the finish and would probably have done better still over another furlong.

The two pony races were the last items on the programme. In the 14-2 lot Russley Rose was a hot favorite and Cheeky well backed, but they were both out of it and Yankee Boy and Wakeful repeated their last year's performance of running first and second and in almost the same time—17⅗secs. against 17⅖secs. The small pony event was an easy victory for Evening Herald on whom A. Hoyt adopted different tactics from the week before and going straight out to the front was never headed. Bonita II put up a much better performance than at the Second Extra and ran second. P. Morrison was called up by the Stewards for an explanation of his riding of her on the two occasions and was cautioned.

Not content with chasing on Friday morning, some of the hunters were out jumping at Tollygunge again on Sunday. The details of the schools are as follows : Dynamite (Mr. Bletsoe) gave a lead to Ruling Passion (Mr. Tremearne) over four fences of the pony course at a fair pace, both going well.

Then Spinnet (Mr. Bletsoe) and Moachin (Butlin) did the whole round of the horse course taking the big fence by Moore's Avenue twice. They went pretty fast and though the gray tired a bit at the finish both jumped well with the exception of the second fence which Spinnet ran right through. Loch Lily (Butlin) and Bandy Leg (Sutton) galloped a real cracker round the pony course, and the improvement in Mr. Stokes' mare from last season was very noticeable.

Musette (Mr. Charrington), Daugar (McNeilage) and Pneumatic (Alford) did a good school over the horse course and then Mr. Corbett took Reha over four on his own. Mr. Hutchison was "At Home" to tea to his friends after the schooling. It would not be a bad idea by the way if the C.T.C. were to make arrangements by which drinks and tea were procurable at Tollygunge on Sunday afternoons as it is thirsty work and a long way to the nearest available refreshment. The bundobust would give much satisfaction to the important portion of the racing community known as owners, trainers, jockeys and press.

The sale of Mr. Rowan's and other horses at Cook's on Thursday last was very well attended, but as was to be expected in these times of bad trade depression all-round very poor prices. Sir Ulric fetched the highest figure, as he was knocked down for Rs. 1,050. The purchaser, we understand, is a new owner and proposes to put the horse in for hurdle races and he should do well at the game, as though he is possibly a bit too straight in front he is in other respects just the cut of a jumper and looks as if he could both carry weight and stay. Sir Roland sold for Rs. 1,000 and has gone into Ramshaw's stable, where he is being used to lead The Bedouin in his work. Rosette was bought by Brigadier-General Elliott for about Rs. 800. The new owner may succeed in getting the mare's disqualification removed in which case she is a wonderfully cheap purchase, being a real first-class pony and in any case is well worth the money paid as a trapper or polo pony, for which game she is well suited and should make quickly. Mr. Corbett bought Trustee and had him out paperchasing on Friday.

There has been a good deal of fluctuation in the betting market for the Cup and Trials since our last issue. After their victories at the Second and Third Extras, respectively, Sham Fight and Tangaroa have both been backed for several thousand each way ; it should be a very fine race between the pair. Both stables are pretty confident of success. Some say that Tangaroa shuts up when tackled, but there is no proof of this and a horse that can run furlongs in 2mins. 24½secs. with 8-11 up as Mr. Galstaun's champion last April, when he a £280 race at the A. J. C. meeting is not to be despised. Both animals are looking fit and well and it will be a great fight between the two—probably the finest Trials to watch that we have seen for many years. Of the others Wandin, The Bedouin and Uro have also been backed for a fair amount of money.

Fitzgrafton pulled up so lame after the December Plate on Saturday that everybody was frightened of him and at the close of the day's racing he was on offer at 6 to 1 and 7 to 1 without finding takers, and we hear that business was actually done at tens, though there is no confirmation of this. On Sunday, however, the old horse was walking about quite sound and has been working as usual, all this week up to now, but not moving too well, with the result that he shortened up again rapidly. Then, however, came a change, a big commission went on Misty Morn, and at the time of writing these notes Mr. Galstaun's horse stands at 7 to 2, Mallard at fours, Fitzgrafton at 9 to 2. There have also been some big bets about The Bedouin and Devereux. Mr. Thaddeus' horse did a good gallop for a mile with Not Yet and Sham Fight on Wednesday.

The entries for next Saturday are A1, the extra races having filled particularly well. Canning Plate 45 (6 furlongs, horses) and Charnock Plate (6 furlongs, small ponies) 17. These are both handicaps as is also the Cornwallis Plate (1½ miles) with 27 entries and everyone is keen to see what success will attend Mr. Leigh's first essay here. The programme also comprises a hurdle race handicap for ponies (15 entries), The Fort Plate (5 furlongs, 17 entries) and the Wellesley Plate (1¼ miles, 21 entries). The Canning Plate will probably be divided, making a card of 7 items, and it will provide as interesting a day's racing as could be wished for. Nearly all the best horses in Calcutta are engaged either in the Fort Plate or the Wellesley Plate, and in the latter Misty Morn, Oakton and Hunting Horn among the Cup horses are down for their first run this season. Mr. Galstaun's pair Tangaroa and Misty Morn will both be carrying the same weight and everyone will be keen to see which is the better of the two.

There was a fair amount of work over the hurdles on Tuesday afternoon, Cracker (A. Hoyt), Lamrock (Sutton) and Betrayer (Thomas) each went by himself, the last named fencing much more carefully. Bucolic also was out alone, and gave Mumford a very rough ride over the flights, finishing by sitting down and depositing his jockey at the third. Little Dolly (C. Hoyt), Redshot (Sutton) and Spec (P. Morrison) did a good school and then Lady Mana (Randall), Lily II. (Sutton), Queen of Gems (Butler) and Gerard (P. Morrison) went together. Queen of Gems did not perform very well and stopped at the 5 furlongs. Gerard stopped at the very first and gave Morrison a bad fall, which resulted in a displaced knee cap and the other pair did not take the last couple in very good style. Idle did the round with Thomas up in his usual good form.

The Connell Cup Polo Tournament began at Allahabad on the 14th instant, when the Allahabad Gymkhana "A" team beat the "B" team by six goals to one.

The Bombay National History Society have recently brought out a second edition of Poisonous Terrestrial Snakes of our British Dominions by Major F. Wall, I.M.S. Thirty-nine different species of poisonous snakes are described in a manner whereby the uninitiated may readily recognise them, the effects produced by the bite, and the localities in which each species is found. The first edition of some 3,000 copies having been exhausted it was decided by the Committee of the Society to have the book brought up to date and Major Wall having kindly agreed to do so the present edition is the result. Major Wall has gone carefully through all the articles and added to them where necessary, any recent information. Since the first edition was published five new poisonous snakes have been added to the British Indian list and these have been incorporated in the present edition. The book should be of great value to District and Medical Officers, Dispensaries and Local Boards, Municipalities, etc.; it is profusely illustrated and the low price, Rs. 2 per copy, makes it accessible to all.

Only five teams are likely to take part in the Indian Polo Association Championship Tournament which begins in Calcutta on the 21st instant; these are the Viceroy's Staff, the Gordon Highlanders, Calcutta "A" and "B" teams and the 15th Hussars, from Muttra, who are the only outside entry.

The reported battue of 8,000 Elephants on the Congo has not gained ready credence. Eight thousand kathis in a ring fence, sounds too tall an order altogether. Mr. Selous has been interviewed on the subject and among other things he said :—

"In my opinion there is not the remotest possibility of the elephant becoming extinct in Africa."

"I read the Reuter despatch from Mombasa with great interest and some surpise. It states that 8,000 elephants have been rounded up by hunters in the Lado Enclave; that these men are shooting the male elephants; and that at Entebbe, in four months, two hunters have made £5,000 out of their trip.

"Frankly, I have never seen or heard of a herd of 8,000 elephants. The largest herds rarely number 400. I cannot understand the motive in shooting male in preference to cow elephants. Ivory from the bull elephant is inferior. Bull tusks fetch about 12s. a pound and a pair might realise £100, but cow tusks realise a guinea a pound and sell for considerably more the pair.

"Wherever the British flag flies in Africa, north and south of the Zambesi, the elephant is protected. In Uganda a big game license for a year costs £50. Its holder may shoot only two elephants in that period, and the number of other animals he may shoot are scheduled. Similar schedules are used in Rhodesia.

"Taking South Africa as a whole, there has been no decrease in elephants during the last twenty-five years. They are no more likely to become extinct than is the giraffe."

"Dorando" at New York, on the 25th ultimo, made no mistake, the officials made no mistake, and he achieved a fine victory—this time not of the unsatisfying "Moral" order—in that he beat the Yankee Hayes in about ten minutes faster time than he put up in the Olympic Marathon. Hayes was fairly and squarely beaten on his merits, by sixty yards; and as the judges were American, it is to be presumed we shall hear no talk of unfairness. The course was ten laps to the mile, Dorando Pietri (to call him by his full name) led from end to end and finished with a magnificent sprint in 2 hours 44 minutes 20⅘ secs. His Olympic time was 2 hours 54 minutes 46⅘ secs.

The race was one to live long in the memories of those who witnessed the struggle. It was one long fight from start to finish, and although beaten, Hayes was not disgraced. He had met a better man, and all are agreed that Dorando won upon his merits.

For days prior to the race seats at the great Madison Square Gardens had sold like wildfire, and Americans and Italians united in a desire to see their men battle for supremacy. The whole of the available space was packed with a cheering, excited, but good-tempered crowd, 12,000 being quite a moderate computation of the number of those who were present.

Only half a lap separated the men at the finish of the thrilling contest, but not once throughout the entire distance of 26 miles 385 yards did America's representative succeed in catching or passing Italy's hope.

Dorando was out to make the pace, and he succeeded in his endeavour.

He sprang away with the lead, and he held it despite every effort made by his opponent.

Hayes sprinted desperately again and again, but Dorando was watching him closely. He answered spurt with spurt, and was always capable of stalling off every challenge.

The men ran mile after mile round the track almost neck and neck, but Dorando was always slightly in the lead, if only by a foot, which margin separated the two when twenty-five miles had been completed.

Hayes then made a desperate effort to overtake the Italian, but it was in vain.

Dorando sprang ahead amid a scene of almost indescribable excitement, and then amid the cheers of his compatriots began to draw steadily away.

First there was a yard separating the men, then five, then twenty-five, and Dorando finally sprinted home the winner by sixty yards in 2 hours 44 minutes 20⅘ sec.

Hayes was utterly exhausted, but he staggered past the winning-post in 2 hours 45 minutes 5⅕ sec.

Exhausted as Hayes was, Dorando was equally as bad. He had run himself right out to the last ounce, and he was almost fainting when he stopped.

He was at once overwhelmed with congratulations and five minutes later, after refreshing himself with a draught of Chianti, had almost recovered.

The Divisional Hockey Tournament at Poona ended in a win for the 64th Pioneers, who beat the 66th Punjabis by 2 goals to 1.

The "Wallabies" after defeating Somerset by 8 points to nil, and Lancashire by 4 tries to 2, were beaten by Wales on Saturday last by 9 points to 6. This is the second reverse the Australian Rugby Amateurs have met with during their tour. Llanelly beating them by 8 points to 3. The Inter 'Varsity Rugby match on Saturday ended in a draw, the score being 5 points each.

Further particulars to be obtained of Mr. McAuliffe at 44, Free School Street, Calcutta.

The cricket match between the Madras C.C. and Rangoon having fallen through and Ceylon being unable to send a team to Madras, two three-day matches will be played during Xmas week—the first between the Madras C.C. and the Mofussil, and the other between Presidency teams representing Europeans and Indians.

The Madras Gymkhana Horse Show will be held on the Island on the 4th, 5th and 6th February next.

Prince Ranjit Singhji having spent an uncommonly good time in England this summer,—cricketing, fishing, shooting and motoring, is now on his way back to India, presumably to turn his attention (or what portion thereof not claimed by sport) to the management of his State. He should arrive about the time these lines are in print. He brings with him the two Sussex amateurs, Messrs. H. L. Simms and C. L. A. Smith, whose visit is, we believe, purely in quest of sport. In an official capacity he is attended by Mr. A. C. MacLaren and Mr. G. N. Foster, the first-named as his secretary, and the old Oxonian as prospective tutor to some of the Jam Sahib's near relations at Nawanagar. Mr. MacLaren will shortly return, for he will be wanted for the Test Matches, and he is still as good as most front rank cricketers when wanted for big occasions.

For the first time for forty-one years the London Zoo has a pair of walruses on view. Two young specimens, each about 5 feet long, arrived from Greenland on the 23rd ultimo and when seen by our London correspondent were looking the picture of misery and venting their sorrow in pathetic groans, the while their Dundreary whiskered faces provoked all beholders to laughter.

Ben Thoroughgood, of Newcastle, champion sculler of Australia, upheld his title on the 21st November by defeating by three lengths, George Whelch, of Akaroa, New Zealand, who had challenged him. There was a stake of £200 a side. The race was over the Raymond terrace course on the Hunter River. The local man was a hot favourite. The race was rowed practically in slack water just on the turn of the tide. Thoroughgood got away first and stayed in the lead throughout. When 100 yards had been covered he was three-quarters of a length in front, and at a quarter of a mile he had an advantage of two lengths. The styles of the men were a distinct contrast. Thoroughgood pulled a long easy stroke, which propelled the boat smoothly and easily. Whelch dipped strongly, but midway in the stroke seemed to give a lift, which alternately lifted and then buried the boat in the water. After every stroke there was perceptible slackening in the motion of the boat. Thoroughgood maintained the lead. The New Zealander spurted time after time, but each occasion the local sculler drew away. The first mile was done in 6 minutes and two miles in about 13 minutes. During the last half mile the New Zealander made a series of spurts, but without perceptible effect. Both men passed the judge sprinting. The time for the three miles was 20 min. 35 sec., which cannot be considered fast.

Our Bombay correspondent writes:—On Saturday the W.I.T.C. served up a card of seven events for the first day of the season and a very fair sized crowd turned out to enjoy the sport. Some alterations since last year were noticeable in the enclosures and the initiation of C.T.C. methods meets with a considerable amount of indignation. To begin with, there is a barrier across the front of the Grand Stand cutting the general public off from the half of it nearest the winning post, which is now further than ever away. At the back of the stand there is a rail completely cutting that same part of it off, with an alley way to an entrance of its own and an inlet to the paddock which keeps members from "rubbing shoulders" with those who are not blessed with membership. Apart from this exclusion, the public are in such a position now that in the case of a close finish they are unable to more than guess the result till numbers go up.

On entering the main enclosure one finds the foundations of a new erection to the left, which we are told is to be a Totalisator on a more pretentious scale than heretofore and to be run by the Club itself. The Books look upon it with a certain amount of awe, but I do not think there is much to fear, though it will, of course, get quite a bit of support.

The "Second" is blessed with more than double the layers of the "First," where there were half a dozen fairly besieged all through. They had a better time of it than their customers and more competition will produce more proportionate betting.

Turning to the various events, the first was one division of the Novice Plate in which Raffles was made a warmish favourite from Diamond King, who ran far below his gallop, and Hullo, the only one of which could even get a place. Tamim jumped out in front, closely followed by Brussels, Good Morning and Hullo. This continued to the straight, where Brussels caught the leader and had the race in hand, over a length being between each of the first three. Bray rode the winner, he only being here for a few days before he leaves for Calcutta.

This upset was followed by another less severe in the second division, when Amani was favourite from Sanjakdhar, Orby, Afreed and Light in a field of fourteen again. Sanjakdhar made the early running from Amani, Selection and Light. In the straight all looked over when Amani came up, but Heeroo getting to work on Light won a close finish. Sanjakdhar kept his place from a late run by Fritz.

The Trial Plate had a dangerous one in Fantom scratched, leaving Salanic a seeming moral. He was backed to odds on from Vedas and Great Power, but, considering his wins in Poona, cannot be quite ready, though Fisher's finish was not impressing. It was a good start, the first two in the betting being in front. Before a furlong Vedas went away, and, with Melsom riding a nice waiting race, soon led by five lengths. Salanic made a palpably useless effort which only got him within three lengths. Saree put in a fast finish, beating Great Power for a "shop."

Next the December Plate for the big ones, Gunner, in favour of whom Alruna was scratched, being odds on from Peria Doray. Gunner lost no time in getting to the head of affairs, followed by Peria Doray, Vocalist and Child's Guide. At the distance the front two were level and it was soon evident Peria Doray was going the stronger. He shot out opposite the Stand to win by nearly two lengths, Chevalier and Ashanti Gold passing Vocalist.

The seven-furlong Arab Plate with sixteen runners was perhaps the worst upset of the day. Dhafer being thought good in preferance to Safoog of his stable, Colaba and Chungiz also fancied. Lofan made all the running from Changiz, Dhafer and Mannlicher. At the bend Colaba came wide to be the recipient of a bump from Lofan, who also considerably interfered with Dhafer when he came in on the rails. Colaba and Safoog put in fast finishes, but the former just missed Lofan. An objection for that bump at the bend was lodged, but overruled.

An open affair won the little Arab Plate with Happy Land and Hishan better fancied than Murzook and Zari. Happy Land made the running from Hishan, who passed him at the distance. Here Zari and Real Blood came and the former, well handled by Oomer Khan, wore Hishan down.

Lastly the Auction Plate when it was surprising to see Plassey at such fair odds, till the start, when he fell to evens, owing to support for Muddaries, Sahoon and Lailan. Sahoon cut out the pace from Muddaries, Lailan and Plassey to the bend, where Lailan came into the lead with Osborne and Plassey closing. Soon after the distance Plassey came up and eventually got home by half a length. They were lucky to have to pay nothing to buy him in.

Our Bombay correspondent writes :—It was a good idea when Mr. Weiss's second exhibition of Billiards in Bombay consisted of three games, in which he conceded 200 in 300. He was seen in very consistent form, being very deadly in his pots, though those present were rather ultra-enthusiastic when applauding even almost palpable flukes. His fancy strokes quite "caught on" again, it being more effective to the simple amateur mind when the balls travel through a sort of avenue of wine glasses.

To revert to the games, Mr. Johnson was the first victim, though with a bit of luck he would have won as, though not nervous, he did not reproduce his real form. He averaged 6 and a bit to 23 by Weiss, who had to follow 115 with 69 at the very end to win, as at one time Johnson only had 35 to make with Weiss at 107. The 115 was a good all-round bit of play and he was going so well that it seemed like Johnson not having another chance. At 98 the balls were touching and were replaced, Weiss claiming that the new rule which forces one to go on and first play off the cushion had not yet come into force. Johnson then promised to run out but failed at 21 and eventually lost by 11.

Mr. Hargreaves made a game bid and only lost by 22, Weiss improving his average by two. Each game produced a century, in this one 122. It was free of blemish to the end when in running through the red for a cannon it came back and kissed. 37, 49, 29, 27 and 13 unfinished were the minor items which won him the game, Hargreaves making 16, 14 and 13 twice.

A very slow beginning to the third, against Mr. Avery, produced a fine finish warming up till Weiss averaged 15. The best was 22 by Avery and only after a number of insignificant efforts did Weiss compile 133. At the hundred he made a distinct fluke off the red, which just missed going down. He broke down at 30 when within seven of game, and with 25 and 10 Avery won.

Weiss's attempt to keep up the public interest in his billiards by giving Mr. Hargreaves 450 in 750 with a 50 break was not a success from a "gate money" point of view. The game itself was novel and interesting as Hargreaves ran the professional to within 26 points.

The amateur made good headway as a start owing to the other being unable to reach a 50 for some time, several times breaking down at between 25 and 40. At last a run of 137 went to his credit and two visits later 123 after missing a screw in-off and fluking the red down, 55 on top of this took him to his points at the interval.

After this he put on 86 and then 139, his biggest up to then, by very attractive all-round play. A still bigger effort, 174, was a delightful bit of nursing bringing the alternate pot and cannon game into use. With Hargreaves dangerously near, 724, Weiss ran out with a 50 unfinished.

On Friday night Weiss gave Louth 750 in 1,000 at Byculla but won easily. Louth was clean off his game but not Weiss, who made one particularly good break of 150, of which 51 was off the red.

The final game in connection with the Harris Cricket Challenge Shield came off last week end between the Fort and Proprietary High School and New High School. During the last six years the former have now won five times, this being the fifth which they pulled off by a margin of seven wickets. For school cricket, the scoring was tall, the New High first making 165, Irani 23, Daruvala 32 and Palwanker not out 61. To this the Fort replied with 215, Khan 51, Writer 59 and Driver 50. The New High then put put up 124, Vans not out 22, Daruvala 27, Palwanker 21, leaving the Fort 75 to win, which cost them three wickets, Contractor 24, Shroff 21 and Khan not out 24.

London Week by Week.

Friday, 27th November 1908.

An angry uproar marked the final debate in the House of Commons on the Licensing Bill. But the measure was passed by a Government majority of 237 and when it was taken to the Lords it formally passed its first reading without discussion. It has been decided by the Unionist Peers and by a very large majority to reject the bill without a second reading and there is much speculation in and out of the trade as to what course Government will take in such event. The threat that if the bill is rejected the Government will greatly increase license duties can only be criticised from a general point of view in the absence of a definite scheme. But it is said that the Chancellor of the Exchequer—whose airy reference several months ago to the necessity of "robbing hen-roosts" to provide for next year's heavy national obligations has not been forgotten—is considering the imposition of considerably increased license duties. In the meantime, publicans —and sinners—await results with interest.

Perhaps Reuter has kept you au courant with the progress of the Abruzzi-Elkins matrimonial puzzle. The matter is, perhaps, of little general interest in itself, but the surrounding details are quaint, and have already got on the nerves of millions of newspaper readers, most of whom must be heartily sick of the rumours and counter rumours, the assertions, denials and speculations attending it. One needs be a very earnest student of very modern history in order to know the various dates at which the Abruzzi-Elkins engagement has been broken off, renewed, or denounced as a figment of the journalistic brain. It is, indeed, fortunate that only two people are vitally interested in the matter—namely, the Duke and Miss Elkins, and to do them justice they do not wish to make any appeal for public sympathy. They must, indeed, wonder, like Mr. Crummles, how these things get into the papers.

The facts, as far as one can gather them from various authoritative sources, are as follows : (1) There was never any engagement between Miss Elkins and the Duke of the Abruzzi ; (2) it has been definitely and finally broken off ; but (3) it may be renewed if the situation should alter for the better. That seems to make the thing quite as clear as we have any right to expect, and I hope that these statements, all of which are equally reliable, will do something to stop the gossiping which has been going on, and which has been a cause of considerable annoyance to the parties most concerned.

The luckless London ratepayer is tried to the utmost limit of endurance. The reflection occurs to me when I peruse the latest statement regarding the £300,000 loss on the L. C. C. steamers ; to this prodigious amount have the rates been "milked" over this disastrous, idiotic speculation, so one learns from the recently published accountant's report. The accounts cover the period from 1st April 1905 to 31st March 1907. The total amount expended on capital account to 31st March 1907, as shown by the published accounts, was £301,080 12s. 4d.—viz., boats, coal hulks, and moorings, £216,018 5s. 1d.; piers, £85,062 7s. 3d. The repayment of the debt in respect of this expenditure is being spread over a period of twenty-five years. The debt had been reduced at 31st March 1907 to £277,556 1s. 4d., by proceeds of sales of old materials £290 10s. 3d., and by annual instalments in repayment of the debt charged against the net revenue of the undertaking and provided out of the rates £23,234 0s. 9d.

The loss on working for the two years. Preliminary expenses up to 31st March 1905 was £49,566 5s. 8d. To this must be added : £214 2s. 9d., and net interest on purchase money for piers acquired from the accountants. The undertaking having been abandoned by the Council, the ultimate loss, on working, upkeep, realisation of assets, and interest on the debt, will, in their opinion, amount to at least £300,000. How's that for a cheerful little sum for the contemplation of the ratepayer.?

Last Monday Lord Ripon, of Ilbert Bill memory, the mention of whose name, I am told, still incites the "brutal planter" to lurid language, was entertained at lunch at the Savoy by the Eighty Club. The Prime Minister and several members of the Cabinet were present, and after tiffin Mr. Asquith proposed the health of the guest, Lord Ripon replied and Mr. Birrell proposed the Lord Chancellor's health. There seems to have been a good many shafts of wit let loose, judging by the parenthetical "laughter" and "applause" with which the reports are liberally besprinkled.

I read that the Lyceum pantomime this year is to be essentially a fairy entertainment for children. "Little Red Riding Hood" it is and the leading part will be played by quite a mite of a girl, and every effort made to appeal successfully to the tastes of the young people. There is to be a good fairy (Miss Eva Kelland) and there is to be an evil spirit (Mr. S. Major Jones), and it is almost superfluous to say that the struggle between the two will be of the fiercest. The latter is to have the help and advice of an extremely clever and cunning satellite, to be impersonated by Mr. Espinosa, almost as great an adept in changing his disguises as Fregoli himself. He it is who appears in the semblance of for instance, the Wolf, who pays Little Red Riding Hood a visit ; of a scarecrow, a toy Punch, and a serpent. In each of these characters Mr. Espinosa is to have a typically appropriate dance, and, if report speaks truly, the children may look forward to an exceptional treat in the case of the scarecrow episode.

The principal comic figure in the pantomime is a certain Baron Levinski. For this part an engagement has been made with Mr. Julian Rose, an American raconteur, who some little time ago appeared for a few weeks at one of the West End halls. Mr. Rose, it appears, brings with him a fund of anecdote and of droll sayings which may be expected to fit in admirably with the sprit of pantomime. Two other comedians are Messrs. Forman and Fannan, whose acrobatic feats are reputed to be particularly wonderful. In the story Margery Daw plays a prominent part, and for that Miss Frances Cameron, an American actress who has won for herself no small success as the heroine of "The Merry Widow" in the United States, has been secured. Further, there is Mr. J. D. Hunter as Dame Trot ; and last, but by no means least, mention has to be made of Miss Dorothy Craske, who since last year has been studying hard the arts both of singing and of pantomime and who should certainly succeed as Prince Charming.

At one time Mr. Tree seriously entertained the project of himself playing the part of the Stranger in the promised production of Hauptmann's "dream-poem," "Hannele," to be presented by the new society calling itself the Afternoon Theatre at His Majesty's for a series of matinees, starting on Tuesday, 8th December. Realising, however, the enormous strain entailed by appearing in eleven performances each week, Mr. Tree has now definitely abandoned the idea. The character, consequently, which is in reality that of Christ, will be sustained by Mr. Henry Ainley, while, as previously stated, Miss Marie Löhr has been selected for the title-rôle. "Hannele" is to be preceded on each occasion by a one-act play, named "Emily," by Miss Margaret Mack, with Miss Sydney Fairbrother in the leading part.

Meanwhile, rehearsals are in daily progress of "Pinkie and the Fairies," the new fairy-play written by Mr. Graham Robertson, and composed by Mr. Frederic Norton, which is to be the Christmas attraction at His Majesty's. It will be produced there on the evening of Saturday, 19th December.

The Alhambra has just presented us with a startling and charming novelty. It was Paris that conceived the idea of reproducing the best known works of the best known authors, as interpreted by the best known actors and actresses, through the medium of the cinematograph. It has been left to the Alhambra to introduce last Monday this novel idea to London—a decided score for that famous house of varieties.

First of all there was "The Red Hand," described as "a morbid drama in eleven tableaux," and decidedly morbid it was ; also decidedly thrilling. By means of the clearest pictures was shown Paris in its night aspect, taverns and the supper rooms, the resorts of criminals, the fashionable restaurants, and all of these were connected with a thrilling story, embracing wrongful accusation, murder, and blackmail. The principals who acted for the pictures were M. Severin, M. Max Dearby, Mlle. Mistinguette, and Mlle. Napier Kowska.

Then came "L'Arlesienne," based on Daudet's novel. This told a simple tragic story of a country youth's love for a girl who was not all she ought to have been, and his subsequent suicide. Finally the picture showed "The Murder of the Duke of Guise," in which the chief characters where played by M. Le Bargy, M. Albert Lambert, and Mdlle. Gabrielle Robinne. It was all very grim and all very realistic. And in each case the wonderful facial expression and the power of the acting of the famous Parisian players who had come before the cameras was made to tell. The subtleties of great French actors, in short, are placed before Londoners by means of the cinematograph again, a decided score for the Alhambra.

"The Corsican Brothers" has been revived at the Adelphi by Mr. Martin Harvey and will run to the end of his season a fortnight hence. It is being enthusiastically received and in the dual rôle of the Brothers dei Franchei Mr. Harvey appeals to his audiences as strongly as ever. With two exceptions the cast remains as before ; Chateau-Renaud is now played by Mr. W. Haviland instead of Vincent Sternroyd, and Miss Coleridge is replaced by Miss Maud Hoffman in the part of Emelie de Lesparre.

Miss Lena Ashwell continues to produce plays by unknown authors. "Diana of Dobson's" certainly justified her judgment, so, in a measure did "The Sway Boat," but "Grit," her latest, at the Kingsway Theatre, is not going to be a big success I am told. It is a four-act play by Herman Chilton and it certainly is not an artistic triumph, though, like the Curate's egg, it is "good in parts." The characters are dimly defined and irrelevant, the construction is faulty, and it does not ring true ; it must, however, be admitted that it is by no means lacking in good and witty lines and moreover it has the conventional happy ending so beloved of the B. P.

The mainspring of the play is our old friend the eccentric will. Sir Thomas Ransome leaves his fortune equally divided between a humble carpenter and the daughter of an old friend upon condition that the pair marry. And because the former desires the money to help the poor among whom he has lived, and because the latter knows that by consenting to the marriage she can save her family from ruin, the humble British mechanic and the blue-blooded aristocrat are joined together in holy matrimony.

You can guess the end, just as last night's audience guessed it before the first act was five minutes old. According to all the rules of mechanical drama the pair must eventually learn to love each other. To arrive at this satisfactory state of affairs takes exactly seven months. Up till then the carpenter—who in the meantime has become quite a presentable gentleman—has religiously "known his place." Husband and wife have been formal friends—nothing more, although in his heart he loves her devotedly. But after some trouble occasioned by the lady's former youthful sweetheart—who eventually kills whatever love she had for him by forcing his way into her room late at night—the ex-carpenter comes to her with the startling statement that he has found a later will leaving all the money to her. And she is so affected by the nobility of his conduct in not burning the will, and in proposing to go back to his bench again, that she herself burns it, and then literally throws herself in his arms.

The Morning Post Columns were black-edged last Wednesday and the flag over the palatial offices in the Strand was flying at half mast—a great journalist as well as a great newspaper proprietor, Lord Glenesk, was dead. He was a Borthwick and the family has been long connected with the paper, though their dynasty has been shorter than that of the Walters of the Times, and the last years of Lord Glenesk's life were clouded by the fact that the third generation was extinct before the second.

Yet a Borthwick was at the editorial desk of the Morning Post in days when a newspaper office differed from present conditions as a wooden frigate differs from a modern cruiser. Borthwick the first had but a short reign, from 1850 to 1852, when he dropped in harness, his last leader appearing the day before his death. Therefore Borthwick the second came to the desk in time to experience those good old days when even the editor might have, through some hitch in the mechanism, to take his turn at working "the mangle" which slowly printed the page from the flat surface of type.

Two good soldiers, Indian veterans both, have died this week. General Sir Godfrey Clark, K.C.V.O., C.B., Groom in Waiting to the King and Commandant of the 3rd Battalion of the Rifle Brigade, passed away in London at the age of 74. During his service he was Military Secretary to the Governor of Bombay (1863-1867), Military Secretary Madras (1876-1878), Adjutant-General, Madras. He saw a good deal of active service, before he took up a Staff appointment, and after his retirement from India he commanded the Belfast district and finally retired in 1902. There are a few of his relatives and descendants still in India, I think. The other veteran was Major-General W. Clive Justice, C.M.G., aged 75. He served in the Mutiny and afterwards saw extensive staff service in India ere he took up the Jamaica and Ceylon Commands.

De mortuis nil I suppose I must remember when alluding to the recent and rather sudden death of Sir Ralph Littler, K.C., Chairman of the Middlesex Quarter Sessions. It is, however, certain that hundreds of criminals and thousands of people who regarded with abhorrence his theory and practice of long and terribly severe sentences will not be moved to tears over the announcement of his demise. Sir Ralph Littler had a theory that short sentences in the case of recidivist criminals were "a cruel kindness," and he supported his theory with a heavy hand. Sentences of penal servitude for petty theft were not uncommon in his court (I instanced one of them in a recent letter) and he did not restrain his contempt for the "deluded sentimentalists," his critics. Yet withal he was a very kindly man, and as fine a specimen of an English gentleman sportsman and old time athlete as one could discover in a day's march.

At the time of his last illness he was proceeding against a weekly journal for an alleged libel, and some of his recent sentences were the subject of questions in the House of Commons.

A GREAT EMU DRIVE.

The following account of the great emu drive at Callandoon, Goondiwindi, on the Queensland border, recently appeared in the Sydney Argus :—

There was movement on the station a few days ago at Callandoon, when an exciting event took place in the shape of a second emu drive, caused by the desire to exterminate the birds on account of the damage done by them.

Like those well-known words of "Banjo" Paterson's "All the tried and noted riders from the stations far and near had mustered to the homestead," where the various riders criticised mounts, exchanged greetings, and a considerable amount of good-natured chaff.

A glorious morning, scarcely a cloud in the sky, and a balmy fragrance made the riders eager for the fray, and the horses champ their bits, so, after girths had been tightened and lengths adjusted, off we went.

Our road led out to the camp of the emu men, now well known as Emu Jack and Colin Campbell, where we were to assemble, inspect the yard, and receive our places and instructions.

The country was green, and freshened by recent rains, the going was heavy. But as we brushed through scented sandalwood scrub and rode beneath the dew-sparking boxwoods on the plain, we felt that gaite de coeur only caused by the feel of a good mount, and so the time passed till we neared the Coomoran sliprails, where we received a hearty welcome from our hosts.

Lunch was next the order of the day, and, when that repast was finished, and horses watered at a beautiful sheet of water, we rode to the yard which was strongly constructed of stout posts about 7ft. high, and with two widths of netting securely fixed on four wires, tightly strained ; it was circular, about two chains by one chain, and in one corner of the paddock towards which the wily "Jack" knew the birds ran when disturbed. On one side a wire fence ran round the paddock corner, while from the other side a wing of hessian was stretched out through the timber for about a mile, and of this the birds were extremely frightened.

All was now ready, so with our leaders we set off to place in various positions our party, which consisted of between 30 and 40 horsemen. The plan of campaign was to post riders out from the wing through the paddock, then sweep the birds round from the timber into the plain between the wing and the wire fence, with the flying brigade behind and towards the yards.

The culling out was heavy, and the front riders who had received careful orders, were not to make too much noise till required. Then the best mounted set off with "Emu

Jack" towards the end of the paddock, which was several miles long.

Away in the distance a faint noise is heard, and now we know the chase is started in earnest.

Here they come spreading from the light timber on the plain, and drawing towards the yard, and behind the crack of whips and the shouting proclaim everyone to stand to his post.

"Close in!" "Look out!" Emus for miles!" Now a wonderful panorama—a sight of a lifetime—presents itself and here they come in earnest, with the horsemen thundering behind, the frightened wallabies and startled kangaroos scuttling from our road, while the cockatoos chattering fly screaming away towards the heavy timber.

Gradually the horsemen close in. Whips are ringing, shouts echo and echo again as a few emus break away. Now they are nearing the wing, and a glorious gallop rings Lindsay Gordon's grands words—"Hard behind them in the timber. Harder still across the heath. Close behind them through the ti-tree scrub we dashed"—through my brain, as with pulses beating, all the horsemen in mad excitement thunder on.

Once in the timber the birds, now greatly frightened rush towards the yard and amidst a perfect pandemonium the riders close in, when a few break away through the wire fence into the next paddock.

"Keep back! Keep back!" yells Emu Jack."

"Hold hard there; give them time!" Crash! bang! over the fallen tree trunks, nearer the terrified birds. "Come on!" "Come on!" "Now we have them!" "Look out there!" "Get back Harry!" Hey whoop, until at last they're in the yard, where, some of the more active horsemen fling themselves at the gateway, and draw up the netting gate.

What a sight! Round and round the yard, and into the netting dash the birds in their vain endeavours to once more gain their freedom. But, alas! 'tis their end.

Great old cockbirds with coloured wattles, and great strength of limb, crash over the younger birds, trampling them down, and at several places the yard is strained to its utmost till it almost bursts, while all round it we are posted, and with stout bluegum waddies slash the birds on the head, which is their most vulnerable spot, from off the netting, and so relieve the tension.

Some of the more exhausted now fall, and over them surge a sea of living emus, with a stray marsupial or two, feathers are flying and hoarse cries resounding through the air.

"Volunteers in the yard?" The more reckless clamber in and wage mortal combat with the unfortunate emus. Strength and science here tell, as only on the head kills, so while older men, who have married, "and aren't as young as we were, you know," hang over the yard with bludgeons, the bolder dare the now infuriated birds, and with telling blows gradually thin out the yard, till only a few are left kicking and struggling in their death agonies.

And, how they can kick! Some of the dare devils who faced the birds will carry to their graves the bruises and gashes they have received from the powerful legs and spurs of the birds of the plains.

A count is next decided on, and after some considerable time we know that 490 emus have met their doom, and will spread the cursed prickly pear no more.

After a rest and some refreshment we once more wend our way to the homestead, all now elated and in high spirits, and several who fancy their mounts dash off in a friendly flutter, while those on the slower horses curse their luck and hope for better blood next time.

Callandoon to the fore! Lammermore wins! Elected! By Jove! Mi Mi in front! Here comes the grey! So tempus fugit till we reach the last gate.

Once more we part company and say good bye and good luck, but few, if any will ever forget the exciting ride and the memorable "drive," said to be the most successful ever taken part in Queensland, and probably in Australia.

LANG

NEW ·470 BORE.

VELOCITY 2,250ft. sec.

This cart-ligeas originally designed did not, in our opinion, come up to a sufficiently high standard, and in consequence our expert visited Messrs. Kynoch's Works, and in conjunction with their experts conducted a series of experiments extending over three weeks, ultimately designing the bullets now in use for this popular rifle.

LANG'S therefore confidently claim that in collaboration with Messrs. Kynoch they were the first to introduce the ·470, and as evidence submit the following extract from the Field, and illustration of the actual diagram made before the editor of that journal.

"FIELD," 23rd March 1907: ". . . . A very valuable advance has been achieved, and Messrs. Lang are to be congratulated on their enterprise in so promptly bringing forward a rifle and cartridges complying with the two most pressing demands in sporting rifles, viz., a weapon to take the place of the prohibited ·450, and a cartridge which shows an advance in flatness of trajectory, with a piminution of recoil and pressure."

7 Shots at 100 yards with Lang's ·470 Sporting Rifle.

Full particulars on application.

Price From 20 GUINEAS.

THE ART OF LIVING.

STRIKING ADVICE OF A MEDICAL SCIENTIST.

Dr. Andrew Wilson, the distinguished authority on hygienic science and health questions is evidently a believer in Thomas Carlye's doctrine that there is no utility in pointing out misfortune unless you at the same time indicate the remedy.

In that remarkable little book, "The Art of Living," just issued from the press, Dr. Wilson not only points out "our first duty to ourselves is to check illness at the outset," but he follows up this admonition with the more welcome information how we are to do it. He, so to speak, says, "You have the evil of ill-health to fight. Now, here's the weapon to fight it with. Strike for freedom." For example, he says: "Suppose a person has run down—feels languid and is easily tired. If he neglects this warning—for all such signs and symptoms are Nature's warning to us—the possibility is that he will pass further afield into the great lone land of disease.

"Can he do anything to save himself from such a disastrous result? In the vast majority of cases he can restore his vigour." How? "Probably he will be advised to take a tonic. This in the main is good advice. Unfortunately, the number of tonics is legion but if there exists any preparation which can combine in itself the properties of a tonic and restorative, and which at the same time can contribute to the nourishment and building up of the enfeebled body, it is evident such an agent must prove of the utmost value to everybody. I have found such a tonic and restorative in the preparation know as Sanatogen."

And Dr. Wilson proceeds: "Recovering from an attack of influenza and suffering from the severe weakness incidental to that ailment, Sanatogen was brought under my notice, I gave it a fair trial, and the results were all that could have been desired. In a short time my appetite improved, the weakness was conquered, and, without the use of any other medicine or preparation, I was restored to health."

"Sanatogen," he tells us, "combines two distinct elements—one tonic and the other nutritive.' Further, it is no "secret" remedy, for, as he pertinently observes, "its composition is well known; otherwise medical men would not prescribe it."

What the tonic and nutritive elements of Sanatogen are, and how they effect so much good, Dr. Wilson describes in simple, convincing terms.

The whole passage is too long to quote but one important remark of the writer may be given—namely, that one of the principal elements of Sanatogen "represents the substance which actually forms a very important, if not the most important constituent of our brain and nervous system." How, through regenerating the nervous system, Sanatogen restores the functions of the digestive organs, and by rebuilding the tissues compensates the wear and tear of latter day life, how it does away with the need of stimulants and cures the sick by the natural method of making the body strong enough to drive out disease. All this, in the delightful style of Dr. Wilson's language, makes engrossing and pleasant, as well as instructive reading to the Anglo-Indian.

This last contribution of his to the literature of health may certainly be calculated to carry joyful news to the ailing and weary and to all residents in tropical countries.

A limited number of complete specimen copies of "The Art of Living," by Dr. Andrew Wilson, will be distributed free of charge. A copy can be obtained from Messrs. Smith Stanistreet and Co., Calcutta, who also stock Sanatogen.

Sanatogen, by the way, is used in the Royal Family, and can be obtained from all chemists.

WHAT PEOPLE SAY OF IT.

From PANDIT KOILAS NATH SUKUL, Physician to H. H. Maharaja of Bulrampore:—"Anything that can be said in praise of your newly-invented 'Essence of Neem' is insufficient to describe its merit as a Purifier of Human Blood. I have much pleasure to let you know, that within the short space of the past six months I have given it ten different trials in some of the most obstinate skin diseases, three of which were advanced cases of Indian Leprosy, and your Essence has in all of them effected most admirable cures, the like of which I have never noticed during my practice of last twelve months."

From MRS. A. R. B., Allahabad:—"Please send me by return post six bottles more of your invaluable 'Essence of Neem'; it is doing me more good than all the Doctors have done for me."

From MR. B. L. D. A.:—"I am happy to say that the 'Neem' is doing a great deal of good to the patient and I think he will ask me to write in a day or two for some more."

PLAYING CARDS FOR CLUB & MESSES.

GOODALL'S NEW "LINETTE" PLAYING CARDS.

These Cards are made with a finely grooved surface, which facilitates the dealing and minimises the possibility of misdeals.

In various floral designs or with plain backs. Per dozen packs Rs. 9-0 Per pack Re. 1-0

Special quotations for larger quantities.

De la Rue's "Pneumatic" Playing Cards.—

The Fronts of the "Pneumatic" Playing Cards are highly finished, whilst the Backs are minutely grooved or indented all over the surface, so as to provide an air-space between the cards, and a roughened surface which acts as a resistance for the thumb in dealing. This prevents misdeals, as the cards slide off one by one and can be dealt with the greatest ease and rapidity.

The present ordinary method of cleaning the teeth and mouth with tooth-powders and tooth-pastes is completely mistaken. Mistaken, that is to say, if anyone wishes to have sound teeth, and it must be imagined that this is the real aim of all care of the teeth. But anyone who wishes to keep his teeth sound and whole should clearly understand that it will be necessary for him to accustom himself to cleansing his mouth and teeth with antiseptic fluid. Cleaning the teeth with tooth-powders and tooth-pastes can never protect them from microbes; and that for the simple reason that the very localities which are most liable to attack, the backs of the molars, fissures in the teeth, and interstices between them, are the places which are not purified by tooth-powders and tooth-pastes. In consequence, the mischief being once set up proceeds on its way uninterruptedly. But a fluid can penetrate everywhere, and when it is antiseptic it destroys all the enemies which attack the teeth. The dentifrice Odol is one that has a practical antiseptic effect, that is to say, it is a preparation that arrests all bacterial and fermentation processes which attack them. The certain disinfection of the mouth and teeth resulting from the use of Odol is especially due to a remarkable property which this preparation alone possesses and which causes it to be absorbed by the surface of the mucous membrane and in the hollows of the teeth, so that it here deposits a store of antiseptic matter whose action continues for some hours. By regular cleansing with Odol, healthy teeth are kept absolutely intact, and teeth already impaired are preserved from further destruction. For this reason Odol must certainly be regarded as the best of all known preparations for cleansing the mouth and teeth.
