TO MOTORISTS

THE BEST OILS FOR MOTOR CARS.

Wilburine for cylinders ... Rs. 6-8 per gallon Tin. | Valvoline for bearings etc. ... Rs. 5-0 per gallon Tin.

Extract from the "Autocar."

LUBRICATING OILS.—[2422]—It may be instructive to your numerous readers to have the experiences of a motor car experimentalist on the behaviour of lubricating oils for motor work. In the first onset I tried various sorts of oils, all of which left deposits of carbon and gumming matter in the cylinders and valves. These deposits are serious drawbacks, not only to the working of the pistons and valves, but also interfere with the proper sparking at the ignition plugs. I then tried the Valvoline Oil Co.'s oils, using "Wilburine" for the cylinders and "Valvoline" for the bearings, etc.; these being quite pure mineral oils, no deposits either of carbon or gumming matter were left. Every time the pistons, etc., have been examined they were quite bright, clean and well lubricated. The valves also keep in good condition and require very little regrinding. I have been quite free from sparking troubles since using the above lubricants. Any dust that alights on the working parts is easily wiped off, whereas with other oils dirt stuck fast through gumming.

Very much smaller quantities of these oils ("Wilburine" and "Valvoline") about one-third to one-quarter, are required, which more than balances the extra first cost. The wearing surfaces are besides in a magnificent condition. These advantages —viz., high-class lubrication, freedom from deposit in cylinders, gum in bearings, absence of sparking troubles, are too important to be neglected by any motorist.

There is a tendency to use various greases, instead of oils. Engineers have over and over again proved that greases give much greater frictional losses than oils; with motor car engines and bearings the lubricant that gives the least possible friction is the best.

I have referred to the advantages the motorist gets. I will mention another advantage these oils have to those whom the motorist passes, viz., the absence of the fried-fish-shop smell so often noted. Several persons have been very much struck by the absence of smell: even when the car has been standing for some time with the engines running, no trace of offensive odour has been apparent to the bystanders.

I mention these experiences, having no interest in the Valvoline Oil Co., that others may be benefited and save themselves trouble and their neighbours some annoyance.

BITS AND BITTING.

A FORENSIC discussion in one of the London courts a few weeks ago was the means of making known the rather original views held by a certain learned lawyer on the subject of bits. The said lawyer was defending a firm of coal merchants who were sued by a carman for the loss of his horse: the coal merchant's horse had run away and, rushing into the horse driven by the plaintiff, had inflicted such injuries that it became necessary to destroy it: and the case, turning on the question whether the bolting horse was under control or not the bit, an ordinary snaffle, was produced in court. Then the argument began. Plaintiff's counsel urged that the horse ought to have been driven in a curb: the learned judge, having sketched an adventure of his own in the saddle wherein he owed his life to the circumstance that the runaway he rode was pulled up with a curb, admitted that a curb would be much safer for horses driven in the London street (the delinquent's coal cart horse had had a load of two tons behind him which should have answered for his sobriety of demeanour without the additional restraint of a curb, but this animal made light of his load when he felt moved to bolt. Defendants' counsel would not hear of the restraining merits claimed for the curb: with a daring that can only be explained by supposing that he was blind or unobservant to a degree almost phenomenal, he urged that "a curb bit was much more likely to irritate a horse and make it run away." Whereto the Judge, who modestly claimed to be "something of an expert in the matter" pointed out for the enlightenment of the gentleman before him a curb could be used quite easily without hurting the horse. To this the learned counsel could only respond that railway companies and others whose horses draw heavy loads did not use curbs. Wherein he was quite right, but wherefore he assigned a wrong reason: a curb, it is hardly necessary to observe, is not used with heavy draught horses or indeed with any draught horse from which hard work is demanded simply because a snaffle takes less out of him. We must not perhaps accept the pleadings of a barrister in court as accurately representing his own private opinions, but the idea that a curb irritates a horse and provokes him to bolt is too novel to escape notice: if the gentleman had urged that the tackle provoked the horse to fight he would have been much nearer the mark.

It is a curious fact and one that says much for the ability of the first man who made bits for horses, that during the period bits have been used on horses, commonly supposed to be about 4,000 years, there should have been so little change in the general style and principle of the appliance. Archæology has familiarised us with the wooden bit, which in all probability succeeded the raw hide halter among civilised nations: with the plain unhinged bronze snaffle and with the jointed bronze snaffle which succeeded it, and having arrived at this improvement we have arrived at the direct ancestral source of the modern snaffle. A species of curb was used by the Romans who may or may not have invented it: and the earliest pelham is considered to be the bit in vogue during the Merovingean and Carlovingean epochs. Shoes only excepted, it is probable that more ingenuity has been squandered on new and improved bits than n any other article of horse equipment. Safety tirrups and bars run the bits close we daresay, ut the number of bits invented or devised ears no relation to the number whose peculiarities re immortalized by the patent rolls, for the simple eason that it is an easier matter to give practical rial to a bit designed for a specific purpose than t is to thoroughly test a safety stirrup. Whence he manifest failures are decently and quietly nterred and only those which seem likely to chieve any popularity receive the honours even f "provisional" patent.

A glance into any harness maker's sanctum in London, shows how many abortive appliances have disappointed the hopes of the maker: and a vast number of bits are made, also, which do not present sufficient of originality or novelty to qualify them for protection by patent. Any first-class saddler has in stock probably a hundred patterns of curb, varying from the simple short cheeked, low port hunting bit to the fancy price of ironmongery based upon the Hungarian high port roller mouth bit. The varieties in riding bits and driving bits are extraordinary: and perhaps we shall not go far wrong if we suggest that like the artificial flies which are made to suit men and not fish, this variety of bit is made to suit men and not horses. Every form of equine iniquity has been catered for and some of the commonest offences can be successfully kept under control by a judicious arrangement of tackle.

There remain some, however, which have not, and never can be, corrected by bit: the fault lies deeper than in the horse's mouth and the remedy must be sought elswhere than in the saddler's shop. We have, for example, never yet, discovered the bit which would make an excitable intemperate horse quiet and pleasant to ride in company: we have one animal in mind which was the most delightful hack in the world, and that with a chain snaffle in his mouth, on the road alone or with one other horse: but in company, among other horses with hounds or paper chasing, a gag snaffle combined with a chiffney bit would not hold him. As for pullers, we have known many horses which always contentedly rested the weight of their heads against a snaffle, until their muzzles were on a level with their knees, if allowed, but which could be made to carry themselves properly on a curb of the lighest, and most of us have had or ridden horses which punished themselves cruelly by pulling on the curb and would conduct themselves with the most exemplary coolness on the snaffle.

A comfortable ride is to be obtained rather through study of temperament than through the ingenuity of bits; but it goes without saying that there are some tricks which can be controlled if they cannot be cured by suitable tackle. Stargazing and boring are the most obvious habits that occur to mind in this connection; but we have found short martingale and standing gear which prevents stargazing has a decided tendency to make the horse pull: he acquires the habit of straining against the tackle and the pulling habit once learned is frequently difficult to correct. We once suffered much from a pony which had acquired the disagreeable habit of stiffening his neck and head to the rigidity of a block of wood when the spirit moved him to refuse a jump: no bit that the resources of an up-country station and cantonment could lend, had the least influence upon him: but eventually it was found that a sharp cut of the short held whip along his neck was a certain corrective: it had the effect of distracting his attention at the crucial moment when he was required to answer the rein and face a fence.

The chief difference between modern bits and those of past generations lies in the greater humanity of the present-day contrivances. We have put away all the instruments of torture which horsemasters of a century or more ago delighted in and which are to be seen figured in their treatises on horsemanship: and if the science of horse breaking is also gone, to be preserved as little more than a curiosity in the Parisian haute ecole, our horses are as fully under our control and held so by milder methods than were the horses of our great grandfathers. Native taste still clings to instruments often of horrible severity: but even the conservative oriental in his desire to follow European methods seems to be gradually discarding the barbarous bits which old hands may remember as having been at one time universal.

He was a young Scotch railway porter, and had been married two years. He was a model husband, and every Saturday night after his work was over had regularly handed his wife the twenty silver shillings that represented his week's wage. Then there came a Saturday when there was a trifling deficiency. The wife, like a good cotswoman, counted over the coins and remarked: "Jock, hoo's this? There's saxpence short: ye've nae but given me nineteen and saxpence." "True Jean," replied the porter; "ye see 'twas like this. As I was leevin' the station I met Sandy Mactavish, and he said, 'Jock, laddie, it's a cauld, bitter nicht, and I'm thinkin' we'd be the better of a wee glass whisky.' And so we had the whisky, and bang went Sandy's saxpence; and then, as I couldna be behindhand, we had another, and bang went my saxpence." "Weel, Jock," said Jean, evidently relieved "I'm glad it's no waur. I was fearin', laddie, ye micht be leadin' a double life."

The Bay of Monaco presented an animated appearance on the 5th April when enormous crowds gathered on the sea-front and terraces of Monte Carlo to witness the first of a series of motor-boat races, which, it is said, are to become an annual event at the Rivieras. The bay was crowded with fine yachts, including Mr. Gordon Bennett's Lysistrate, which followed the cruising races to render aid in case of accident, Mrs. Goelet's Nahama, the Prince of Monaco's yacht the Princess Alice, and two French torpedo-boats, which had been sent to watch the trials for the Government, besides a crowd of smaller yachts and with one or two exceptions, all the eighty motor-boats competing or forming part of the exhibition. Two events were raced off. One was a cruise of sixty-five kilometres, from here to Antibes and back, for motor-boats of less than 6m. 50cm. measurement, and the other a race twelve times round a hexagonal course, amounting in distance to about 150 kilometres, for boats measuring less than eight metres.

The first of these excited the greatest interest as it brought together a group of the keenest and best known competitors, including two Mercèdes craft driven by Jellineck Mercèdes and L. Charley, Mr. Richard Brasier's Trèfle à Quatre, and Mr. S. F. Edge's Napier Minor. M. Rochet Schneider's curiosity, the Poupoule, proved a non-starter. A fine start was made for the race, the boats dashing off in a sheet of foam. The contest seemed to lie between the Napier Minor and the Trèfle à Quatre, when an exciting accident occurred which put the former out of the running. The boat was seen suddenly to slacken speed: then flames appeared, and the whole boat seemed on fire. Help soon arrived, and with chemical fire extinguishers the danger was subdued. The cause was the water-cooled exhaust, which was used to ensure silent running, becoming red hot, and causing the trouble. The other boats exhaust into the open air with the noise of a sawmill. The winner was the Trèfle à Quatre, and the Mercèdes boats second and third. The official times have not yet reached us, but the winner made one round of the course, twelve kilometres and a half, in seventeen minutes. The weather conditions were about as perfect as they are ever likely to be on an open coast. There was hardly any wind, and the wind more than the actual sea is undoubtedly the one thing most disastrous to a high-speed motor launch.

After the racing there was a dinner at the New Sporting Club, Monte Carlo, at which the leading residents and all connected with the Motor-boat Exhibition were present. M. Camille Blanc in a speech thanked the Prince and all the sportsmen of various nationalities who had helped to make the first Motor-boat Exhibition so complete a success, Baron de Zuylen, in the name of the Automobile Club of France, congratulated the promoters of the Exhibition on the fine impetus given to a new industry; and Mr. Roger Wallace, Chairman of the British Automobile Club, stated that the interest taken by all Englishmen in this new development must bring them into still closer and more friendly relation with their French neighbours. The Prince of Monaco held a large official reception at the Palace later in the evening.

A good shoot was recently brought off in the Nepal Terai. The party consisted of six guns, General Sir Bindon Blood, Colonel Ellis, R. E., Mr. J. S. Campbell, I. C. S., Captain Morris, A.-D.-C., Khan Bahadur Mangal Khan and Khan Bahadur Bala Khan, the two last named being the well-known sporting brothers of Sherpur in Pilibhit. The bag was eight tigers, a bear, a few deer and a great number of quail. One of the tigers was of the remarkable length of 10ft. 8in. The measurement was made four times with great care, and can be fully attested by all the members of the party. It was taken immediately after the animal's death, with a new 50 feet tape, in the usual manner, from tip of nose to tip of tail, following all curves. Some other dimensions of this tiger were: length of body 7ft. 2in.; length of tail 3ft. 6in.; girth 4ft. 3in.; from wither to toe 4ft. 4in. A tigress 9ft. 1in. long, probably the mate of the big tiger, was also shot.

If the measurement of this tiger (10ft. 8in) is correct—and we see no reason to doubt it—the record 10ft. 7in. standing to the credit of Colonel Evans Gordon, formerly Superintendent of the Cooch Behar State, has been beaten by an inch. The other measurements are interesting. The Ramshai Hat tiger (Colonel Gordon's) was 7ft. in body, this one 7ft. 2in.; Colonel Gordon's tiger girthed 56½in. as against 51in. in this specimen, the former taped 3ft. 4in. from shoulder to pad—the latter 4ft. 4in. The Nepal tiger would appear to have been leaner as well as longer than the big Ramshai Hat bagh. This brute weighed 491lbs.; unfortunately the Nepal tiger was not weighed.

Captain Groyme Griffith met with a nasty accident at Mahableshwar whilst practising at tent-pegging on the 28th instant. He was knocked down from his horse, getting a severe concussion on the brain and breaking a rib. He is doing well.

"The last place in Great Britain where the Great Auk was seen was St. Kilda," observes a writer in Bird Notes and News, "and I have very little doubt that, if there had been a Bird Protection Society in those days, we should have the Great Auk with us now." These words were spoken at the Annual Meeting of the Society for the Protection of Birds, by MacLeod of MacLeod, when dealing with the threatened extinction of the St. Kilda wren.

The story of the auk belongs to a different chapter in the history of vanished and vanishing birds from that in which the little wren figures. For the wren is an entirely local variety, confined to one small island; and it is patent to everyone that, since its persecution has become a matter of profit, it must either be protected, and that quickly, or it must disappear. No such apprehension was entertained for the Great Auk; it inhabited a wide range of country, and it existed in enormous numbers. Unfortunately, it was so unused to man in its seaboard homes that it had no fear of him: neither had it wing-power to escape him. Consequently, as soon as their main haunts were discovered, the birds were easily butchered by the boat-load for food, and, when not needed for food, were done to death for "sport," or slaughtered wholesale for their feathers and the bodies used for fuel. Before naturalists realized what was happening, the Great Auk had been blotted out of existence for ever. It is said that, fifty or sixty years ago, one of the last of its race—the last seen in Britain—visited the Isle of St. Kilda, formerly one of the breeding places of its kind. The inhabitants, not knowing what to make of the strange creature, promptly captured and tethered it. During the night its wild cries made clear to their minds that it was a witch, and, by unanimous verdict, the last Auk was stoned to death.

Another of the world's birds, once plentiful, is the Passenger Pigeon of North America. Less than a hundred years ago it nested in colonies measured by miles in length, and, in one case, forty miles in extent; and it flew in flocks reckoned by millions. The bird was harmless, living chiefly on acorns and beech-nuts; but was slaughtered with utter wantonness, being attacked with guns and clubs and suffocated with sulphur in its nesting-places, so that wagon-loads of bodies were easily procured, to be sold at a cent a piece, and droves of hogs fed on those which the hunters did not trouble to pick up. "To-day," says the author of the Audubon leaflet on the subject, "the passenger pigeon is so rare that the sight of one individual is an event to be chronicled."

The Egrets of Florida, slaughtered without even the excuse of serving for human food, form a further chapter in the melancholy record of bird life which goes to show that no species, however abundant, can withstand the greed and ruthlessness of man. The Egrets of other lands, and the Birds of Paradise, will probably be the next to disappear. A scarcer plume-bird, the Emu, existing only in comparatively small numbers and in one region, is apparently nearing extermination, its plumes and eggs both being in request.

Turning from these prominent examples to the persecution of birds in Great Britain—slain, not for food nor for sport, nor to fill the bags of the plume hunters, but simply because they are rare—we have been confronted of late with a longer chronicle than usual of rare species seen and collected, including an Avocet in Suffolk and Bitterns in Somerset and Northants. Sir Edward Grey referred, at the Society's Meeting, to the case of the Waxwings, rare and beautiful visitants, several of whom have been observed in different parts of Great Britain this winter. In Craigellachie (the name be honoured!) two pairs were seen and suffered to depart unharmed; others have been trapped and shot in England and Scotland, and now grace the glass hearses of collectors. "What matter!" says the collector; "the waxwing would not stay to nest—let us bag him while we may." Yet the story is the same with regard to Hoopoe and Oriole, birds which have bred in England, and might do so again, if unmolested.

Mr. Lionel Cust, in a letter to the Times, suggests that, in order to put a check on this detestable craze, ornithologists should draw up a list of our rarest birds, and obtain an Act of Parliament making all such birds, alive or dead, Crown property. Even this would not meet the case of birds locally rare—such as the Green Woodpecker recently shot in Northumberland, because it is almost never seen there. One thing, however, is clear. Before the arrival of the Society's millennium, hoped for by Sir Edward Grey, when many would go forth to see a rare bird, but none to shoot it, the last rarity among British breeding birds will be entombed in the St. Amant, the winner of the Two Thousand Guineas, seems to be a bad-tempered quadruped. "Vigilant," in The Sportsman, commenting on the rather poor show he made in the Biennial Stakes at the Newmarket Craven Meeting, writes :—

"St. Amant appears to have developed a will of his own, and the cause of his defeat yesterday is said to be that he does not like racing. However, the colt went all right for six furlongs, by which time all his opponents, except His Majesty, were beaten, but when asked to go out and tackle Lord Derby's colt he declined. What St. Amant did instead was to open his mouth, and, dodging the strokes of Maher's whip on His Majesty, to make for Maher's leg. For the last furlong his one aim seemed to be not to win his race, but to take a piece out of Maher's thigh. It may appear to a horse that the simplest way of winning races is to pull back those in front with his teeth, but if St. Amant is to win the Derby he will have to be taught that he must do it with his legs and his heart, and not with his mouth. In the Two Thousand Guineas St. Amant ran in blinkers."

It is our melancholy duty to record two accidents while after big game last week. Mr. Todd, the Irrigation Engineer, while shooting at Chanda, was pounced on from behind by a tiger, and very severely mauled; the brute getting clear away after inflicting the wounds. Lieutenant T. S. Johnson, 67th Punjabi, died at Saugor from the effects of a mauling by a tiger which also escaped.

In Calcutta, the other day, a Bengalee medical "ee-shtudent" gave the following answer to the question, What is Pasteurised milk? "Pasteurised milk, Sar, is the lacteal beverage of female bovine that has entirely had the pastures for its foodings."

Appended was the betting on the Derby the day the last-received English mail left London :—

A small but precocious child was heard to ring up on her father's telephone. Wondering what she wanted, her mother listened, and heard this: "Are you there? Put me on to Heaven, please; I want to say my prayers."

More bullet-resisting breastplates! This one hails from St. Petersburg, where experiments have been carried out on a chest-protector which is said to resist steel as well as bullets. The breastplate, which is the invention of an Italian subject named Giorgiamo, is made of a soft elastic material, and is about a centimetre (·0393in.) thick, weighing 4lbs. Experiments with the breastplate were commenced by shots being fired at eight planks, each an inch thick, and placed one on the top of the other. The shots penetrated every one. Next a sheet of steel, 2in. in thickness, was set up, and likewise pierced by the shots. Bullets, however, that were fired at the breastplate remained in it, and were flattened, without penetrating or even denting the inner surface. Not only ordinary bullets, but even explosive bullets, remained in the breastplate without damaging it. The third experiment was made with a steel bayonet and Circassian dagger and sword of Damascus steel. The bayonet and dagger broke without cutting the breastplate, while the sabre simply made a dent on the outside of the fabric.

Sydney is at present deeply interesting itself in the question of whether a dogfish can by any means be turned into an opal. The question has arisen owing to the discovery at White Cliffs, some 35ft. underground, of what is either a dogfish or an opal, or both. It is 3ft. 6in. long, and has all the external appearance of a fish, but with veins of opal running spirally in the body and horizontally about the head. Dents appear in the head, which may or may not mark the eyes and gills of the fish. While some geologists declare that it is nothing more than a piece of opalised wood of unusual shape, basing their opinion on the fact that fish and flesh will not opalise and that the sea has never covered the White Cliffs district, others, as one might have expected, hold a diametrically opposite view on all points. The fish or opal is shortly to be sent to London to be submitted to a thorough scientific investigation.

A schoolboy possessing some of the natural qualifications of a sportsman was, says the American Field, requested recently by his admiring teacher, who thought the boy above his classmates in intelligence, to write an essay on ducks. The youth readily assented, and this is what he wrote :—"The duck is a low, heavy-set bird, composed mostly of meat and feathers. He is a mighty poor singer, having a hoarse voice, caused by getting so many frogs in his neck. He likes the water, and carries a toy ballon in his stomach to keep him from sinking. The duck has only two legs, and they are set back so far under his running-gear by Nature that she came pretty near missing his body. Some ducks when they get big have curls on their tails, and are called drakes. Drakes don't have to set or hatch, but just loaf, go swimming and eating. If I was a duck I'd rather be a drake every time."

Mr. W. Hawkins, the well-known New Zealand horse-shipper and the genial lessee of "Kia Ora," that equine Mecca in Garden Reach, Calcutta, is leaving for New Zealand at once with all his pockets full of orders for polo ponies, trotters, chasers and racers for numerous clients in India and Burma. Besides these he will, as usual, bring up a big shipment of horses for Government and a very special lot of cattle from the best Jersey Stock. He will be back again in November.

Details of the sale of the late Sir J. Blundell Maple's horses are to hand this week. The sale occupied two days, thirty-six lots being offered on the first day and twenty-two youngsters on the second. Some keen competition was witnessed for several of the animals, but a number of bargains were also secured. The thirty-six lots realised an aggregate sum of nearly 12,000gs, which was no doubt considered highly satisfactory. Captain Forester paid 4,600gs. for Queen's Holiday (3yrs), winner of five good races last year; Newsboy went to Mr. W. T. Robinson (for Mr. Kerne) for 3,500gs.; and the French-bred Nabot, for whom Sir John gave 2,500gs. after running third in the Cambridgeshire, was knocked down to Mr. F. W. Lambton for 1,900gs. Simony went to Lord Charles Montague for 2,600gs. Nun Superior to Mr. G. Faber for 3,100gs. and several others reached four figures. Four lots were knocked down to Mr. Creet who, it is believed, was acting for Mr. Galstaun, the Calcutta owner. Our readers may find somewhat of interest in the following details :—

We publish reports of the last two days' racing at Wellington and the first day of the Rangoon Spring Meeting. The strike of bookmakers, alluded to in our last issue, was not complete, after all, as in the end three firms by arrangement stood up, and saved the public from the horrors of the tote an investment on which in one instance actually landed holders of winning tickets with a loss. Regina bolted in the Larrikin Plate, dashed into the rails, threw her jockey and stunned him, and charging into the crowd killed a Burman spectator.

Mr. Hyder, a conspicuous Rangoon turfite, came by a nasty accident just before the spring meeting opened. He was riding Lalla Rookh at walking exercise when she stumbled, and Hyder, being thrown, broke one of his wrists.

Bendigo, the mighty son of Ben Battle—Hasty Girl, died last week, aged twenty-four. He did not particularly distinguish himself as a two-year old, and he did not run in the Derby of 1883, St. Blaise's year; but that year, ridden by H. Luke, he won the Cambridgeshire in the french grey and violet cap of Mr. H. T. Barclay. In 1885 he won the Lincolnshire Handicap and the Hardwicke Stakes; the following year the Eclipse Stakes (the year of its foundation) with Tom Cannon up, and in 1887 he won the Jubilee Stakes and the Champion Stakes at Newmarket.

Athletic Notes.

THE Calcutta Golf Club are holding a Bogey competition which began on the 2nd, and will run on till the 31st instant.

We publish this week the usual tables giving the results of the polo, football, hockey tournaments held during the past year and the centuries made at cricket from 1st of May 1903 to 30th April 1904.

The Simla Cricket Programme for the ensuing season is beginning to take definite shape. There will probably be matches with the Black Watch on the 19th and 20th May; with the Outstations on the 25th and 27th May; Civil versus Military on the 9th and 10th June; and Bhurtpur, 16th and 17th June. The match Civil versus Military will be open to all India; intending players should send their names to the Honorary Secretary of the Simla Cricket Club.

The Honorary Secretary of the Burma Athletic Association is apparently not a popular individual in some quarters. "Mouthpiece" writes thus to the Rangoon Times concerning him :—

"SIR,—Will you kindly inform me when the Honorary Secretary of the B. A. A. intends calling a general meeting? As far as I can remember there is a rule to the effect that a general meeting of the Association must be held by the 1st of April each year, and here we are nearly at the end of the month without an announcement or hint of any kind, as to when the meeting to be held. It strikes me very forcibly that our Association is nothing more or less than a fiasco, and that the members of the Committee allow the Honorary Secretary to do just as he pleases. I would suggest that at the general meeting, whenever it is to be held, it be proposed to ask the present Honorary Secretary to resign and appoint another in his place, who will take more interest in the Association than our present man. Besides, I think it would be as well to appoint a more go-ahead Committee who would conduct business in a more methodical way than is being done at present."

We are not surprised to read this, our own experience as Honorary Secretary of the B. P. A. A. and other Athletic bodies having taught us to associate this gentlemen from ordinary business artesy and sporting instinct.

In attempting to drown a dog in the Thames at rossness last month a man lost his life. By a grim te the dog escaped.

Webb, the man in question, who lived at Abbey ood, tied a rope round the animal's neck and eighting it threw the dog from a boat. He was ndeavouring to keep it under water with a pole hen he overbalanced himself, fell overboard, and as drowned. The dog reached the shore in safety.

The Army Temperance Association Sports of the 8th Battery, R. F. A., came off successfully in Banalore on the 28th April. The only notable performance was by Sergeant Pain in throwing the icket ball. The winning throw by this Non-Commissioned Officer covered 110 yards. This is six ards short of the Indian record made by Mr. P. E. lunket, at the Dehra Dun Forest School Sports 1886.

Our Bangalore correspondent writes:—A successful racquet tournament was lately concluded—r rather all but concluded—at the United Service lub, and it is probale that this competition is nly the fore-runner of other, and more pretenious ones. Bangalore has many good racquet layers at present, and these include the British esident, the General Officer Commanding—who y the way has a son representing Cheltenham at ueen's Club this year at the early age of fourcen (!)—the A.A.G., the D.A.A.G., and very many fficers of the Garrison. By far the strongest ocal player is Colonel Jones, Military Secretary to he Mysore Government, and it is doubtful whether player could be found in India to beat him at resent. Captain Robertson, R.E., is also very trong and there are numerous others who shape vell. The tournament, which has been in progress, vas primarily promoted by General Nixon, C.B., who is as keen as a racquet player as he is in the ricket field. Curious it is that Sir James Bourdillon, the head of the civil authority, is likewise good t both these games, and it goes without saying that good sportsmen are popular as administrator, and Bangalore is lucky indeed in those who represent he Civil and Military authority respectively. With egard to the late tournament, it produced very air entries and more than fair play, but still better esults may be hoped for at the next competition of he sort, as owing to it being the leave season the egimental pairs were not really representative. The Carabineers, for instance, have strong represenatives in Captain Monerieff and Mr. Kennard, who were both away. As it was the R.E. carried ll before them, and with eight officers in Bangaore, entered two pairs for the tournament. There were several ladies' luncheons at the United Service Club, and the plucky way in which the fair sex faced the mid-day heat to watch the games was emarkable. Captain Robertson, R.E., who as Secretary had all the trouble of arranging the ournament on his shoulders, deserves both thanks nd congratulations. It may be remarked that General Nixon hopes shortly to organise a tournaent open to the whole of Southern India, or at east the Madras Command, and if a suggestion night be made, such a tournament would come in very appropriately during the race week in the arly days of July. Details will be found in our Racquet Column.

We are very glad to see that our friends, the Gramophone and Typewriter, Limited, whose advertisement appears in to-day's issue, have succeeded in getting an injunction against Fleming and Company, restraining them from using the Gramophone and Typewriter, Limited, trade mark nd advertising Gramophones for sale.

The members' Annual Tennis Tournament of the Caledonia A. Club is being held now and has reached the semi-final stage. Last year's winner, E. O. Elliot, is in the running, but as H. Chandler, J. F. Wilson and W. J. A. Morrow all are handicapped it remains to be seen whether he can come through victorious. The final will be played on Friday at 5 P.M. o'clock.

Seventeen teams have entered for the Aga Khan Hockey Tournament which commences at Bombay on Monday next. The drawing took place last Monday night when the Royal Scots were drawn to meet the York and Lancashires in the first round, all the others getting byes. The other teams entered are the Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders, Cathedral Old Boys "A," The Cheshire Regiment, R. A., Colaba, 76th Company, R. G. A. (Karachi), Elphinstone College, Bombay Gymkhana, 2nd East Lancashires, Grant Medical College, Education Society, Cathedral Old Boys "B," The Customs, Poona Gymkhana, Pioneer Club, Elphinstone High School Old Boys. Two matches will be played each day, the final being fixed for the 20th instant.

The Indian Field Shikar Book.

MORE PRESS OPINIONS.

For the cyclist, the athlete, and the gourmand Mr. W. S. Burke of The Indian Field has already catered, and he has now turned his attention to the requirements of the man with the gun and the rod, under the belief that a necessity exists for a small and handy compilation for the special behoof of the sportsman; a book that will enable him to readily identify his game, understand its habits, and afford a means of comparison between his own trophies, in the shape of horns or skins, and existing records. Without laying any claim to originality, Mr. Burke has succeeded in compiling a very compact and useful little volume, of handy dimensions, and replete with just the kind of information likely to be of service to those for whom the book is intended.

In the section devoted to "Big Game" we find information on all sorts and conditions of animals—from the tiger to the crocodile; from the hog to the hare. These are all conveniently divided into classes, each species being identified. The scientific, in addition to the vernacular, names are given, habitat indicated, and descriptions, average measurements and record measurement all carefully set out. With the records are given the names of those who shot the specimens, and, when obtainable, the localities whence they were obtained. Sections of the book are devoted to land and water game birds, and a special section is devoted to tank-fishing and angling. With this latter section no records are given. Mr. Burke seems to us to have missed an excellent opportunity; but perhaps it is just as well that he did so.

Of general information,—likely to be of service to the budding Nimrod with his initial aspirations yet unsatisfied—there is a good selection, put together in a concise and useful form. Chapters on camp equipment and furniture, guns, rifles and ammunition, hints on rod and tackle, a Conveyance Directory to the principal shooting centres, list of dâk bungalows, the game and fishing regulations of the various Provinces, are all included in the scheme of the book, while the "Shikar Wrinkles" will be of special value to the novice, for this section comprises the gravy of a hundred personal experiences, and the hints range from the treatment of snake-bite to the manufacture of arsenical soap.

A useful feature of the publication is the "Registers" for big and small game, and for fish. These are ruled for entries under the various headings, giving spaces for full information on all points as to dates, localities, descriptions, and, when necessary, measurements. The projector of his little work has tried—as many literary men have tried—to fill a "void." He has succeeded, and the "Indian Field Shikar Book" should find a place among the baggage of every sportman.—The Empress.

The above is the title of a small book just published by Mr. W. S. Burke, Editor and Proprietor of The Indian Field. It has been compiled with a view to enabling the sportsman to obtain, without trouble or delay, reliable information about any one of the hundred and one points on which one may want information either during a sporting trip or when one is making all the inevitable bandobast without which in these days no shooting trip can be successful.

All, or at any rate very nearly all, of the information it contains can be found elsewhere, but one's library when out on shikar has to be of the smallest, and in no other book that we know of is there to be found so much general information likely to be useful to the man out on shikar.

It contains a chapter on Big Game in which are given the Latin and vernacular names, habitat, description, habits, average size, record measurements, and other useful details. Similar details are given for small game and birds, while much attention has been given to the river, estuarial and tank sporting fish. The best seasons for fishing and the most likely tackle and bait have not been omitted.

Next will be found a chapter on Camp Equipment, on which the success and pleasure of a shooting trip so greatly depends. The author, however, rightly points out that it is beyond the scope of the book to enter at length into any review of the numerous matters embraced under Camp Equipment, and limits himself to dealing with the main things which are absolutely necessary for comfort and convenience.

To our mind the most useful chapter in the book is the one on Guns, Rifles and Ammunition. Here can be found, at a glance, the charges for most of the ordinary sporting rifles with details of their muzzle energy and striking velocity. Tables are given for reducing drachms to grains, and showing how many cartridges a given quantity of powder will load with grain and drachm loads. The number of pellets per oz. of the various sizes of shot forms another table often useful to have at hand. The chapter also contains much other general information, some of which cannot fail to be very commonly useful.

The chapter on Routes to Shooting Grounds is in our opinion too condensed to be of much practical value, though the lists of dâk bungalows may well come in handy during a shooting trip. Another chapter deals briefly with various "shikar wrinkles" in connection with various articles from boots to sandflies, while measures to be taken in case of snake-bite meet with considerable attention.

The Game Laws in force in the different parts of India are usefully introduced, and the book is made complete by game registers for big and small game as well as fish.—The Indian Forester.

We have just gone through that most interesting book, the "Indian Field Shikar Book," and we have only one grievance against it, namely, that it was not published when we were stationed in different game districts, but was delayed till we became domiciled in Calcutta City where the only game consists of the humble pariah, billee, and crow whose indentification is of less importance than a ready and effective means for their destruction. The Shikar Book is admirably compiled and bears the mark of the practical sportsman on every page, while the concise hints regarding weapons, outfit and how to take care of one's self are as welcome as they are comprehensive. The book is one that no sportsman should be without, and the genial author, Mr. W. S. Burke, deserves the best at the hands of the fraternity. We only trust the book has paid him as well as it will pay the man who invests five dibs in it. —The Scots Advertiser.

Sportsmen in India will welcome the publication of the "Indian Field Shikar Book," a copy of which has recently reached us from the compiler, Mr. W. S. Burke. The necessity for a small cyclopædia of this sort has long been felt by sportsmen, for with its aid it becomes an easy matter to identify game, understand its habits, know when, how, and where to get it, etc. The identification of a single specimen frequently necessitates reference to the several standard books on sport and natural history, which means either the possession of a library of expensive volumes or delay in getting enquiries answered. The object of the "Indian Field Shikar Book" is to supply this want by placing in the hands of Indian sportsmen all this information, concisely compiled and arranged for easy reference. The publishers are Messrs. Thacker, Spink and Co., of Calcutta. The cost is Rs. 5 per copy.—Times of India.

London Week by Week.

London, Friday, 15th April 1904.

We are now in possession of the text of the documents which constitute the Anglo-French agreement signed in London on this day week. To say that the details of the agreement have had a mixed reception is to verge on truism. Most of the French papers think that England gets more than she gives, and many of our papers opine that France gets more than she gives: which, unless each nation were satisfied that it had got the best of the bargain, is no doubt the most satisfactory frame of mind. Spain does not seem quite pleased with the way Moroccan interests have been dealt with by the High Contracting Parties who have omitted to consult her. Germany professes gratification, but some German papers want to know how France can reconcile the removal of possible sources of friction with England with her alliance with Russia. The Russian journals approve the agreement as tending to strengthen the position of France and make her therefore a stronger ally. Italy is pleased, and truly there is no particular reason why she should be much interested one way or the other. Canada is not quite satisfied with the Newfoundland arrangement, but of course that long standing difficulty bulks large in the Dominion's eye, and Nigerian and Siamese boundary questions are microscopically small. Many who speak with knowledge on the matter hold the Egyptian settlement the most satisfactory and important feature of the whole agreement: but then most of these have personal knowledge of Egypt and none of other regions affected. The general feeling so far as one can probe it is that if we have lost anything it is worth losing for the sake of having placed so many important subjects of dispute on the shelf for good and all.

Sunshine, tempered unpleasantly with cold north-west winds, has been vouchsafed us since Easter. London is filling up and people were beginning to drive in the park of an afternoon: the authorities speedily put a stop to any nonsense of that sort, for as soon as the place ceased to be deserted they got to work and tore up the road from Hyde Park corner to the French Embassy. Parliament reassembled on Tuesday and after the merest reminder of Chinese Labour got to work on the Navy estimates. Chinese Labour is likely to go to the wall now: the unspeakable wickedness of the Indian Government in conducting "invasions" and "massacres" on its own account promises exceedingly well as an effective successor to "Slavery." Sir H. J. S. Cotton has been assiduously preparing the public mind for noble opposition rage by a series of singularly futile letters to the Times.

Mr. Ronald Macdonald's Romantic Costume Play in Four Acts yclept "The Sword of the King" is one of those things no fellow can understand. If it had been the obscure text of musical comedy well and good: many times, laughing at the unconscious humour of the proceeding, I caught myself wondering where was the orchestra and the chorus. As it stands the piece is an astounding mixture of melodramatic absurdity and foolishness. The period in 1685-8, Acts I, II, and IV occur at Drayton Manor and Act III at Royston Chase: and the whole business hinges on the circumstance that Phillippa Drayton (Miss Ida Molesworth) masquerading as a man once rendered Willam of Orange good service: therefore he presented Phillippa with his sword, whose return with any request shall ensure a favorable response. The burlesque atmosphere set in early: curtain rises on a room with a bed in it: saving the bed it might be a sort of household committee room whither people adjourn when they have got any talking to do. After much conversation with many persons, Phillippa gets rid of them and, in a curtained recess, changes her riding habit for a pretty, modern "Nighty;" she has an uncomfortable habit of talking aloud to herself while she undresses, has Phillippa; but we excuse that. The window is open. Hoofs without. Edward Royston's upper man appears at the window: he is flying from enemies, but pulls up to stand on his saddle and embrace the lady of his love through the window. The horse is in such a hurry to continue flight that it moves on and leaves Edward (Mr. Bess Webster) hanging to the window sill. He screams in fashion unheroic, lest he fall, and at last scrambles in. More hoofs in the distance: pursuers at hand, perilous situation of Edward: woman's wit: Edward popped into Phillippa's bed, boots and all crowned with the night cap of Betty the maid. Enter search party to be easily put off by Phillippa's transparent whoppers. The bathos of these proceedings kept the horse giggling, but an unfortunate attempt at realism dissipated the last attempt of good manners to take the thing seriously. Sir Michael Drayton, anxious to disguise his daughter's lover, takes him aside to cut his hair: and the noise made it so obvious that he used a pair of garden shears in need of oiling that people laughed till they were tired. The next act produces Phillippa in breeches: she is to lead a company of soldiers vice her brother Philip who, as a parson, cannot, much to Sir Michael's annoyance. Beyond this point the action grows bustling but vague in its purpose: there is a little incident at the end of Act III, which, did it come earlier in its dramatic strength, might materially help the play. William commutes Edward's death sentence to banishment, and Phillippa breaks the sword he gave her and restores him half in return for half-keeping his promise: but Act IV soon threw us back into the atmosphere of comic opera gone astray. It is said that "The Sword of the King" succeeded in America: if that be true America's sense of humour must be atrophied in the theatre.

I do not much care for "Saturday to Monday" the "Irresponsible Comedy" which was produced last night at the St. James's. It is amusing, but while it amuses, it offends. Lord Culvert (Mr. Alexander) is the offender: to befool three plain and unattractive women into the idea that another man is in love with each one of them may be irresponsible comedy, but it does not seem to be very good taste. It is the less pardonable, for I cannot, for the life of me, see how Mrs. Wendover (Miss Lilian Braithwaite) could be won by such doings on Culvert's part. A disappointing play: Act I gave promise of infinite possibilities in the unexpected arrival at Mrs. W's river side cottage of half-a-dozen uncongenial guests to spend the week end with her who wanted Lord Culvert all to herself. There is plenty of good dialogue and lively business in the play, but that deceit of vicarious love making spoils it.

The piece so neatly named "The Duchess of Silliecrankie or the Earl and the Cherry Girl on their Cingularlee Entangled Honeyman," which now follows a Maid from School, at Terry's, is a musical farce, if there be such a thing. As a skit on the incoherence of musical comedy plot it is not wholly successful being itself incoherent. The piece is a series of burlesques. Miss Kitty Loftus, as the Duchess, takes off Miss Marie Illington in My Lady of Rosedale. Mr. Dallas Welford brought down the house with his Houdini business: he crawls, chained, under a table and reappears eventually so loaded with (property) fetters he seems buried in them. Mr. Morris Harvey is Arthur Roberts, Sir Charles Wyndham, Mr. Beerbohm Tree and half-a-dozen others in turn. Go to Terry's in lightsome mood and you will be delighted: if in critical temper better go to see something less riotously nonsensical.

La Poupée was revived at the Prince of Wales' on Tuesday. Mr. Norman Salmon resumed his old part as Father Maxima and Mr. C. Wibrow his as Baron Chanterelle in which he was as amusing as of yore. Mr. Willie Edouin too came back as Hilarious, the toymaker, and was, if possible, better than my recollection of him. We were all interested to see how Miss Edna May would succeed as Alesia: it was no easy task she undertook for Miss Jessie Huddlestone's automatics in the earlier part of the play and her powerful acting later are fresh in the minds of all who saw her. The new Alesia does uncommonly well, and scored quite a triumph. Mr. Roland Cunningham was Lancelot the Monk, and he too laboured under the disadvantage of comparison with an actor, Mr. Courtice Pounds, whose name is identified with the part: he was more than acceptable however. The piece went well and was received with great enthusiasm.

Mr. J. H. Leigh revived "The Two Gentlemen of Verona" at the Court Theatre on Friday night. "Interesting" is the word to describe it. The play is not one that stirs you very deeply, but those who are fond of Shakespeare find that it appeals to them. The actors stick very closely to the text and manage with the simplest scenery, this being the correct method of presenting Shakesperian drama according to modern acceptance. The piece was well acted by a very even cast, but it does not call for lengthy notice. Much more important to the many headed was the re-appearance of Dan Leno at the Pavilion on Monday night: he has been resting since the pantomime season, and when he appeared in petticoats and grey corkscrew curls, a packed house gave him a tremendous oration. He had to make a speech, and set the house in a roar by hinting at a "trapeze act" in the new business he is considering.

The Kendals are at the Notting Hill Coronet Theatre for a time with that ancient favourite a Scrap of Paper, Still Waters Run Deep and the Elder Miss Blossom. The Coronet continues to holds its head above other suburban houses, though I see Mr. Millard has taken the Cardinal to the Borough, and Mr. George Edwards' Company is at the Camden with the Toreador. There are two new pieces billed for to-morrow night: Mr. Lewis Waller produces Miss Elizabeth's Prisoner at the Imperial, and The Wheat King appears at the Apollo. The latter is a dramatised version of Norris's novel "The Pet" and deals with the sensation and enormities of new American "Corners" in food stuffs.

The dramatic world is still much concerned with the strife between theatres and music halls. A suggestive contribution to the matter in dispute was made by Mr. Sidney Dark in his address to the O.P. Club at the Criterion on Sunday night. He pointed out that if the music halls were trenching on the domain of theatres, much more are the Theatres tresspassing on the ground once considered the property of the Halls. The position of Theatre Managers take up is illogical because fifty per cent. of the theatres in London are now drawing big houses with musical comedy which, everyone admits, is plotless variety show and nothing else. Mr. Cecil Raleigh urged the parties concerned to renounce legal proceedings and unite in an endeavour to procure a change in the law which should give both sides freedom of action. Certain it is that it is mighty hard nowadays to distinguish between musical comedy and variety show, when a piece remains "on" for a year or more and at the end has, by dint of new songs, new features, and new business, become practically unrecognisable as itself at the start.

World" is over: and if it has done nothing else it served as a capital advertisement for the replica recently painted and now on view in Bond Street. The Royal Water Colour Society's Exhibition is open in Pall Mall, and being its centenary show is a stronger one than usual: being exceptionally strong all round, there is nothing that stands out very conspicuously unless I mention Mr. Sargent's Venetian sketches which remain in mind when other pictures fade in a large undistinguishable blue. The New English Art Club's 32nd exhibition is a good one: Mr. Sargent is here represented by Spanish drawings, but I like these less than the water colours in Pall Mall. Mr. Furse's "Timber Haulers," team of four drawing a timber waggon over as rough road, is perhaps as good as any picture in the Exhibition. Then is there the twelfth exhibition of the London Sketch Club at the Dore Gallery: the merit of several of the pictures here remind one that it is possible to draw and paint exceedingly well without achieving fame or even public notice. At the Dowdeswell Gallery is a display of Mons. Monod's crayon drawings, chiefly of the female form more or less divine and admirable portraits. Mr. J. M. Swan, the animal painter, has a "one man show" of his own at the Fine Art Society's. Tigers, leopards and their kind are Mr. Swan's strong suit, and I found this collection of drawings and studies particularly interesting: there is a quality of alertness and vitality about Mr Swan's drawings that appeals to me, and many of his drawings betray wonderful aptitude in seizing attitude and characteristic movement or pose. I have not yet been to the Calvert Exhibition at the Carfax Gallery: Edward Calvert is a painter almost forgotten of this age, though I believe he was a man of light and leading forty or fifty years ago: Life is short and shows are many.

The Army Council have issued an Order announcing the establishment of an official monthly journal, "The Army Journal of the British Empire," which will deal with military matters of interest to the Empire. The Order invites contributions and says frankly they wont be paid for: but that prizes will be granted from time to time for essays and articles on special subjects. Civilians may contribute as well as soldiers, but as "the right will be reserved of inserting summaries or extracts from articles submitted," I should doubt a little whether essays or articles that might prove saleable elsewhere will find their way in overwhelming numbers to the chief of the general staff War Office, 68, Victoria Street, S. W. I gave the editor's address in case any of your readers may want it.

Various items: The influential deputation of people opposed to the coal tax, which waited upon Mr. Austen Chamberlain on Tuesday, enjoyed a two hours' interview with him, but fail to bring him over to their way of thinking, and the coal tax remains: I misdoubt me but that Mr. Chamberlain with his budget to introduce next week wishes that his predecessor had retired or ever he threw away the registration shilling on corn. Dr. B. Laquer, of Wiesbaden, a nerve specialist, has arrived at the conclusion that the literary diet of patients suffering from nervous maladies is a most important matter: he particularly recommends the administration of humorous literature as Dickens, J. K. Jerome and Mark Twain; but suppose the patient hasn't any sense of humour. What then? The Cunard Company is going to build one of its new transatlantic liners with turbine machinery by way of experiment. The meeting of the old Aquarium shareholders last Friday was distinctly animated. Mr. Josiah Ritchie was charged with having taken £1,000 or £1,200 as commission out of the profits without the knowledge of the shareholders, and also with having bought shares when he knew that a sale of the property was probable. Mr. Ritchie vigorously defended himself and his proceedings and so far as one can gather will be left to keep what he got. A vote of thanks was refused by the meeting, but probably he can dispense with that. There is to be a great Fancy Dress Ball at the Albert Hall on 31st May in aid of the Charing Cross Hospital. Miss Francis Power Cable proves to have been one of the numerous people who dreaded living burial. She made her will null and void should Dr. Hadwen, a friend of hers, fail to fulfil her "strict and solemn charge" to completely and thoroughly sever the arteries of her neck and windpipe that her revival in the grave should be impossible. It was done. The lady's wish that she should be carried to the cemetery in one of her own carriages driven by her own coachman "at his usual pace" was also observed, and no doubt her injunction that no mourning should be worn was also obeyed. The London County Council is about to borrow another five millions to spend on housing of the working classes, purchase electrification of tramways, lunatic asylums and main drainage. It is to be an issue of 3 per cent. stock and is offered at 90: which awakens reflections on the opinions held of the L. C. C.' extensive liabilities. Their last issue of 3 per cents.—£5,000,000—was eagerly subscribed at 95½. A copy of the Ency. Brit. has been sold for £20 at a book auction; £8 less than the irreducible minimum as advertised a few months ago. A much needed street bye-law will come into force on 1st May: under this it is made an offence to drive a van so covered in that the driver cannot see on either side of him. Having regard to the number of collisions which arise from vandrivers being blinkered as they too often now are, the wonder is the bye-law was not made sooner. There is some prospect of measures being taken to clear the Parks of the horribly dirty vagrants who spend the night on the seats there. It has been suggested that the Park-keepers should be empowered to prevent dirty and verminous tramps from entering the Park at all.

A PADRE AWHEEL.

THE Rev. Frederick Hastings, who used to be (and is now for all we know) the minister of Tolmers Square Congregational Church, London, is a gentleman whose advocacy of the wheel at times brings his writings dangerously near rabid enthusiasm. Yet, though "The Cycling Parson's" literary style is somewhat behind that of "The Walking Parson," whose "Tramps" we had the pleasure of reviewing in these columns some time ago, he is a shrewd observer and in the course of his "Spins" he has seen and learned much, and he sets before us the cream thereof in many chatty and interesting chapters. Pottering about England he has come into contact with hundreds of interesting things, explored very many charming nooks, "done" as many historical places, talked with celebrities and quaint characters, dropped on some curious customs and ferreted out many little matters of local or general interest and the result he places before as in this record of his "Spins." Indeed he seems to have cycled so continuously that one cannot help wondering how he managed to find time for the more serious duties of his calling. He has ridden much on the Continent of Europe, too, and has rambled awheel over a good part of Australia: his chapters dealing with experiences on these trips are perhaps the most interesting in the book. The illustrations are abundant and uniformly good, the get up of the volume smart and attractive.

Shikar.

THE RHINO AND THE 8-BORE.

THERE is not a shikar story but has its reminiscent prototype. For instance, the common or garden, Jones will deliver himself of a sambhur hunt at some small latitude, therefore, (I use the word advisedly), the ubiquitous Brown, who is rather oftener than not a volitional athlete of no insignificant calibre will: with a prefatory: "You know I had a very similar experience" flounder incontinently into a sambhur hunt the same as Jones', of course, but only on the other side of the street! Similarly I fully expect that the little adventure which I am about to relate for the beguilement of sportsmen, will, after a lingual evolution more complex than I dare describe, experience regeneration in some fertile brain, not one wit less reminiscent than that of the aforesaid Brown. One more illuminating comment by way of explanation, Sir, and I will to my tale: My preface has been prompted purely from personal motives, and is the emotional outburst of long-suffering humanity. I am the above mentioned 'Garden Jones" warmest sympathiser.

We were camped on the River Athi in British East Africa. The Taru Desert, fever-stricken Kibwezi, and the Kiu Hills, where the rhinoceros roamed at will, had been left far behind and now we looked over to where the ramparts of the great Athi Plains frowned down upon us. Those bleak heights once topped, we were on the greatest shooting ground in the world. Meanwhile here we lay on the near bank of the river with its thickly wooded banks marking a verdant course through undulating prairie land and parched scrub covered plains. In some places the stream narrowed down to a few feet and babbled musically over the smooth black boulders, and then the long waving prairie grass came down to the very edge of the water to meet it, so that you knew not where the gurgling rivulet lay till you stood in the favourite reed-bed of some absent lion. Here came the other denizens of the forest to quench their thirst and here also the tender fawn fell a victim to the maw of the tougher carnivora. Then the bank would rise suddenly, the stream broaden out into noble dimensions gliding on noiselessly and a faint ripple would mark the spot where lay the snout of the cadaverous "croc" and our green tents lay above just such a spot as this. The stretch of country on both banks of the river teemed with game. It was cool to lie in the long grass with the water running beside you, and none knew or appreciated this more than the Rhino. But scant rest did we give him. Times were easy, and we hunted all day and every day and such adventures and hairbreadth escapes as those river banks have witnessed might well be the envy of a Marryatt an Anstey, or a Ballantyne.

There were half a dozen white men and some five score and fifty blacks in camp. Among the whites was a dear old doctor, a great shikari and one whose travels had led him on many a carriboo trail in that land of marvels and millionaires and of star-spangled banners that we all wot of. I shall call him the Doctor. Next we had the hero of this storyette: a beardless youth, an engineer by profession and an enthusiast whose good fortune it had been to have been brought up in the Great Grey City, and to have never had aught to tell of a live Rhino save a zoological reminiscence. Him I shall call "S." Lastly there was I. As my story centres round the three I have mentioned only, the other whites in camp shall be nameless. "S." had a passion for sport: a wild uncontrollable, and, as we shall see, an unwise desire to kill. It was his first taste of sport and I may say, first experience with sporting rifles.

A bird snarer, whom we had in camp with us, came back one morning from the river, and said he had seen two Rhinos some short distance from camp near the banks of the river. "S." heard the news and was frantic to be off at once, and do the animal to death. "But," he said, "I shall ask the Doctor for his 8-bore as I believe Rhinos take a lot of hitting." I said I believed they did but I had always had a contempt for big bore weapons and said he had better use his ·450 Express which was just as good and leave the Doctor to nurse his 8-bore. But, of course, he knew so much more than I did in these matters. "I don't mean to take any risks," he said. So I held my peace, and soon the Doctor's great octagonal cut barrel was resting heavily on "S.'s" shoulder as we tramped down towards the spot indicated by our informant. I carried a ·450 Express, while my gun-bearer had my ·303 and a goodly supply of ammunition.

We had gone about half a mile when the bird-snarer held up his hand, and we stopped. Then creeping into the long grass the black disappeared from sight and we waited patiently. We were close to the river bank at one of these spots were the stream narrowed. All round was high grass over the top of which we could just see the trees on the bank. The black returned stealthily and told us that one Rhino had made off, but there was still one some little distance further up lying down. We got our weapons down to our hips and moved forward cautiously, as I knew by experience what it was to come suddenly upon a sleeping Rhino. Step by step we picked our way through the long grass making as little noise as possible. "S." was leading next to the guide his heavy piece in his hand and his neck craned forward listening intently for the crackling of the undergrowth which we knew must come sooner or later.

Suddenly the guide stopped short, and dropped to the ground. We had come to the edge of a small clearing on the bank, and there not thirty yards off, standing three-quarters on, was a fine Rhino which from the long sharp horns on the snout I knew to be a female. She had been startled, and was standing up with her nose in the air sniffing and blowing. That she had not seen us was evident, and seeing there was no time to lose, as the beast might discover us any minute I touched "S." on the arm, and told him to fire. It was too late, however: the next moment the animal had swung round, and with head down snorting her loudest charged for the thin screen of grass behind which "S." was standing. Knowing that it would be fatal to fire while the grass remained between us and the Rhino who was coming down with a tremendous rush, and that our only hope lay in getting into the open, I clutched "S." by the arm, and sprang into the clearing. I was just in time for the next second the great body had crashed through the grass, and I felt what a narrow escape we had had, for nothing could have withstood that frightful rush. She would not be long in finding our whereabouts however so retreating to the trees as fast as we could I shouted to "S." to let her have it as she broke cover. I had hardly finished speaking when the Rhino dashed into the open and "S." who had had time to collect his senses, threw his huge rifle to his shoulder and the next instant there was a deafening discharge, a great cloud of smoke enveloped everything, and poor "S." went sprawling on his back a good six feet from where he had fired, while the murderous 8-bore lay peacefully at my feet!

It was all the work of a moment, and the situation had clearly become trebly anxious. I knew not whether the Rhino had been hit, for the cloud of smoke still hovered in the still air, and if the shot had gone wide then the Rhino would, without a doubt, return. I had hardly summed up the situation when I heard a terrible snorting, and there through the smoke I could see a huge body cleaving its way and making straight for the spot near the river where "S." still lay stunned. I raised my ·450, and fired, less in the hope of killing the beast than of diverting its fatal course, as I could scarcely see through the smoke, and I had no time to choose a vital spot. There was a short snort, the beast stopped, and I knew I had hit her. The next minute, however, she had swerved to her right and dashed on passing the bush near where "S." was lying, and plunging into the shallow water made for the opposite bank. Reaching it she stood for a minute, and running up I let her have the second barrel behind the shoulder she lurched forward and then began spinning round and round. My boys seeing this and knowing it was a sign that she was mortally wounded, set up a shout and dashed across the stream to give the beast her coup de grace; but she heard the noise and regaining herself with a mighty effort staggered on and was soon lost to sight in the forest. I knew she had not far to go and thinking I could follow her at my leisure sent one of the boys to mark her down, and then turned to see how "S." had fared. He was conscious, but the shock of the explosion had stunned him and it was some time before I could get him to talk. A drop of brandy from my flask however, revived him, and he sat up feeling very sore and dazed and clearly quite unfit for further sport that day; so I decided to see him safely back to camp. Needless to say we did not discuss the merits of the ·8-bore on the journey, but I have reason to believe that "S." carried the remembrance of that Rhino hunt with him for many a day.

We got back safely and had some refreshments. "S." was lying on a stretcher I sat and smoked beside him, while the Doctor bent over a torn coat which he was patching with canvas, a grim smile hovering below his iron grey moustache the while. Suddenly there was a great noise in camp, and one of the boys rushed in to say that they had followed the Rhino for over a mile when she had suddenly lurched to the edge of the river and thrusting her snout into the water had expired. The horns were brought in next day, and many a sjambok made out of the worthy creature's skin. So endeth my tale and "S.'s" first and last experience with an 8-bore.

CHONDO: A SAMBAR PARADISE.

AT certain lucky intervals, few and far between in these degenerate times, it is sometimes the lot of the prowling shikari to happen on a secluded corner, some overlooked nook, whither game finding sanctuary, have retreated and live in peace, their numbers steadily increasing until they recall the memories of those good old times long ago, before the present era of cheap guns and rapidly contracting hunting grounds.

Not long ago it was the writer's fortune to find himself by chance in such a favoured spot

Setting out over the hills accompanied by one of my own men and a couple of the aborigines carrying the day's provender, I had set myself the task of exploring a certain very remote hill-top rejoicing together with its surrounding forests in the name of Chondo.

Long before, prior to the afforestation of these tracts and the herding of the jungle men into certain fixed village sites, Chondo had supported its little aboriginal hamlet—a rude collection of temporary huts hard by the little clearing of nomad or dya cultivation that used to return such rich crops of the hill grains known as kutki, kodu, etc. The water-supply was afforded by a tiny spring or jhira as is so often seen in these mountains, where a rude sort of well, crossed and re-crossed by timbers driven into its sides, gave the climber access to the scanty supply of the precious fluid; the fluid itself being scooped up laboriously in a half cocoanut shell, as it oozed capriciously from the surrounding rock.

The sun had not long been above the horizon when we, who had started from the valley below by the light of a waning moon, stood close to the highest point of Chondo.

Smothering the ground that had once been cultivated, was a dense mass of small leafless coppice, undergrown and almost choked itself by that horrible jungle plant the bandhar, whose rough, raspberry—plant-like growth is so unpleasant to push one's way through.

On every side the mountain sank away, clothed with harsh yellow grass, to the edges of the basalt cliffs encircling the hills around: below these short cliffs came a succession of slopes clothed with yet green and thick jungle and leading down into high-lying little valleys, the streams draining these valleys at length, dropping in their turn over the lower strata of basaltic precipices and seeking the level of the main valley system of these mountains.

When one stands amid such solitudes and the mind grasps the enormous extent of ground and covert stretching for miles around, the great difficulties attending successful hunting in these hills becomes fully impressed on the visitor.

There is such a vast selection of hiding places, even for such large and conspicuous animals as bison and sambar. In every direction lies a panorama of gorge on gorge mountain on mountain, cliff piled on cliff, the whole smoothered in an almost all-pervading forest of jungly growth. Almost within the reach of a good shout lies another series of knoll-covered mountain tops—but between us and it, all unseen, gapes a cavernous gulch some 1,500 feet in depth.

It is during the late rains and early part of the cold weather that the sambar repair to the higher plateaux and tops, such as that of Chondo, and the now dried soil is seen to be impressed with thousand of hoof-tracks of the big deer. On the more favourite spots almost every handy tree trunk stands red and frayed where the stags, their horns itching to be clear of the drying "velvet," have played sore havoc with the soft bark. In all directions well-worn paths or "samba ladders" lead plunging through the copsewood down to the lower grounds. A particularly irritating fly known as the Dhins is responsible for this migration that has filled the high ground with all these traces; for it renders the lower lying forests almost unbearable to everything that lives, during the monsoon season.

With the exodus of this fly, however, which is synchronous with the drying up of the jungle, the deer descend once more to the level of the big lower valleys, and haunt the more densely forested terraces, that rise from them. Knowing this, it was not long ere our survey of the top of Chondo was completed, and we were on our way off the hill. From its northern side three long steep spurs, jutting out like great headlands, descend to the valley of the Upper Sipna, and we chose the centre one of these as our route. Pushing through a dense mass of bandhar and tiwas coppice, a long and almost precipitous grass slope led us to the spur below, and we entered the higher portion of the teak forests. To either side fell deep ravines from which rose the sound of bird-life, and the whoops of langur monkeys as they made their way over the tree tops. Otherwise a deserted appearance pervaded these higher gullies. The grass became longer: the carpeting of dried and fallen teak leaves deeper and noisier under foot. Thus we descended for about a thousand feet.

The trees now thinned out and we found ourselves approching a steeper fall. Close to the left rose a shady gular tree on the slope of yellow grass, and as we approached it a sudden rush of heavy animals brought the rifle swiftly to the "ready" as we ran hastily to the edge. Away to the right a ponderous galloping was to be heard, as some beast hurriedly entered the sheltering jungle. Far down the slopes in front a large dark object had just halted. It had its head turned back over its shoulder and gazed up at us, its huge broad ears held intently still. A sambar hind! "Whee onk! Dhánk! rings from the grass closer to us, and a young stag, his budding horns just beginning to sprout, sticks his yellow-lined tail up into the air and rushes down hill with those wonderful, long, sure-footed bounds so peculiar to his kind. Quite a family party it was then that we had disturbed under the gular tree's shade; and one of the highest-lying on the hills no doubt.

Far below us the valley of the Sipna was to be seen, pent in between its encircling bluffs. Along the foot of these silent guardian-like precipices lay a succession of strips of heavy green jungle. In the centre of the broad glen the whitened and boulder-strewn dry bed of the river peeped out here and there. It was there that I had arranged to meet a dozen of the hill men, who, intent on securing the sambar venison that they coveted had given me information of this secluded spot—where, said they, the deer were congregated like sheep in a fold. "Pay us nothing, sahib!" they had insisted, patting their stomachs by way of illustration—"but shoot us a sambar, and we will work for you all day!"

So it was here that a halt was called, and under the deep shade cast by a heavy clump of bamboos the tiffin basket displayed its cheering contents. Down by a neighbouring pool my orderly was dispensing a light repast among the appreciative beaters: to each a handful of parched gram, and a piece of raw brown sugar or gúr—a little attention to their inner men that goes far in ensuring a successful beat.

As for the sportsman, his sense of contentment was complete. To recline in the shade, one's hunger appeased,—and with a good cheroot as a digestive, to gaze through lowered lids at the grandeur of the wild surroundings, down the forest-arched vista of the shingly river, or away to the distant amphitheatre of lonely hills, and to lend one's self a willing captive to the thrall of mother Nature—that was surely a luxury unknown to unhappy mortals mid the "madding crowd"! No kind of trouble could find one here. Those petty trivialities, such powerful factors in the outer and bustling world, would fall from one's mind at one glimpse of those glorious solitudes. The man vainly seeking repose from carking care would surely find it here. The great solemn woods impress one with the feeling that one's petty human frettings are all too small. They imbue one with a leaning towards fatalism.

All very "improving" thoughts no doubt—but the cheroot has come to an end, and my Korku friends are hinting at making a move. This lotus-eating must come to an end, and men, driven—impelled—by one or another of his irresistible impulses, must be up and doing.

Not knowing the ground himself, the sportsman must needs place himself and his fortunes in the hands of what local talent he may find; so to-day I found myself trudging along behind a little black Korku, who, axe on shoulder, brushed his way through the yellow grass towards the base of the cliff-encircled bluffs lying back from the river. And soon enough it became evident that the little man knew what he was about. Our narrow path shortly gave way to some open glades in the denser teak jungle, where the feathery foliage of a lot of aola trees (Emblica officinalis) dotted the ground, laden with heavy crops of their acid berries; and the surrounding grass was seen to be trampled almost away by the sambar which visited them during their nocturnal wanderings.

In many places the trampled and dusty earth gave witness of this spot being the chosen arena of the truculent stags, and all the saplings round about had been rubbed to pieces by their horns. A short distance away a deep cut tributary ravine gave approach to a long terraced hillside that was smothered in shady woods The whole aspect of the place indeed would have indicated to even a half-trained eye the fact that it was an ideal haunt of Cervus unicolor; and one felt instinctively that those bosky dells held something good. The height to which a neighbouring tree-trunk was scored with deep horn-gashes showed incidentally that a stag of uncommon size had his home somewhere near.

My own man I had left with the beaters to keep them up to their work, so the small aborigine and I began climbing towards the post that would command the best position whence to mark a startled beast. Up a long spur we toiled, under the now scorching rays of a February sun, crackling in an unavoidable way the deep carpeting of fallen teak leaves. At the débouchure of a transverse ravine the jungle man was posted in a tree; and myself climbing higher up, and finally settling on a point that gave the best view up and down hill. Here I seated myself, in shade, marking my position by a whistle that was answered by my scout in the tree down below.

The surrounding slopes were very thickly covered with jungle. Only here and there a glimpse might be caught of the ground through the maze of mingled stems and bamboos. One's whole attention in such places has to be centred on the locating of an animal's line of advance by the sounds of his feet in the tell-tale leaves—after which one must endeavour to cut that line, and await his coming and one's luck at the nod of fortune. It is seldom indeed—especially in the case of but a single rifle to watch the large extent of such approaches—that a deer is ever driven up to the watcher's post.

After the usual lengthy wait, the distant sounds of the rousers of the game came wafting along the hill sides. The "beat" had begun. It came along slowly.

After a long time there arose that excited yelling that tells of animals afoot; followed by other signs that whatever they were they had broken back. Then silence, then again, after a still longer period, on came the beaters once more.

A full hour had I sat there when a tremendous though still distant howling broke on my ears; and a faint crashing in the leaves some hundreds of yards to my front was heard. On it came growing louder and louder. It seemed to be making for a point half way between the treed scout and my post. I seized the rifle, rose, and ran to place myself on the line; and as I reached the spot on which I had determined, was nearly knocked over by a big hind sambar that came racing through the bamboos right on top of me! Conk! Dhánk! Bhaunk! burst out a perfect hurricane of barks and bellings as the biggest lot of sambar I have ever seen together dashed past, around me; out of which I vainly endeavoured to pick the stag. Next moment the jungle had closed behind them, there was a furious heavy galloping, and they had gone. Perplexed and chagrined I was preparing to follow them on the chance of pushing them out on some open space or spur—when there came the crackling of leaves in the bamboo clump below. Again I ran forward and halted. A huge dark shape was coming swiftly through the shady forest: it halted: then it came on: then it halted again. A glint of filtered sun light fell on such a huge tree-like horn that my heart seemed all at once to cease beating. I had found him then, the stag, the record head, for which I had been looking all those weary years! Here he came at last! First a poked-out muzzle, then—such a head! then the cautious hesitating, wary, leary old fellow himself!

Instantly the ivory bead rested on his shoulder—the ·400 bore cordite rifle held in the grip of anxiety, almost of despair—a stunning sharp report—up rears the huge brute convulsively; up, and up, then smash comes his enormous bulk on the hillside.

* * * * * *

He was the biggest sambar I ever bagged. Forty-five and a half inches; very massive; and an immense spread of horn. Many a long day have I done in the jungle, and many more I hope to do—but when shall I see his like again!

Four stags and a lot of hinds had broken back in that single beat, besides the big herd that came past me. And the Korkus swore that almost any of the other many favourite grounds in the valley would yield full as many deer when beaten properly. Since that day I have not visited Chondo. But it is there still, as good as ever; and I am keeping it up my sleeve as a shoot to be indulged in at rare intervals. And, as a great treat, I may take a friend there—under an oath—a terrible oath—of inviolable secrecy; for Chondo is a paradise, and a paradise it must remain.

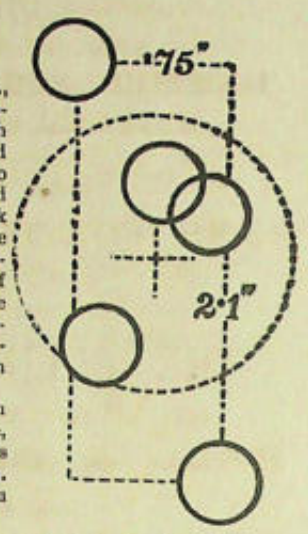
"SPECIAL No. 2." ·450 Bore.

CORDITE RIFLES



FOR BIG GAME.

Average Velocity 2,171ft. per second.

Striking Energy Equals an 8-bore Firing Black Powder.

The Special No. 2 gives a pressure of about 13 tons compared with 16 to 18 of the original ·450 Cordite Cartridge, consequently there is a greater margin of safety, and the risk of jamming is reduced to a minimum.

"THE FIELD,"
9th May, 1903.

"Messrs. Joseph Lang & Son, Ld., have been very prompt in submitting for our notice a rifle which has been chambered and regulated for firing the new No. 2 nitro cartridge.....A thoroughly sound and well turned out piece of work .....maximum of strength and ease of extraction. Very high velocities.....most marvellous run of uniformity. In fact, it would be extremely difficult to find an instance where equally well authenticated experiments have shown such satisfactory readings.".

Five shots at 100 yards with the new No. 2 Nitro Cartridge, fired in a LANG Rifle. Centres of shot holes fell within 2·1 in. by ·75 in. Average deviation from point of mean impact ·7 in.

"THE FIELD." A fine piece of shooting.

"A target made at 100 yards, which is in our possession, contains a group of five shots with a distance of 1in. between the centres of the highest and lowest perforations and $\frac{13}{16}$ths of an inch between those on the extream right and left."

"EL. OBEID."

"With reference to the ·450 Cordite Rifle you made me, I am very pleased with it. It is extremely accurate, and, although heavier than the ordinary ·450 Express taking black powder, the difference in weight is not sufficient to prevent an ordinary European carrying it himself all day in a hot climate. For these reasons it is often the only rifle I take with me out shooting, and have killed with it Lion, Koodoo, Waterbuck, Hartebeest, etc."

LONDON, Friday, 15th April 1904.

THE TURF.

NEWMARKET CRAVEN MEETING.

THE first of the gatherings at headquarters commenced on the 12th instant pleasant weather Only a moderate company assembled. Sport, however, proved of interest throughout, and there were one or two surprises, notably the defeat of the Derby candidate, St. Amant, in the Biennial Stakes. Maher did remarably well in the saddle. G. Edwards and G. Blackwell sent out wo winners each, the last-named trainer enabling Sir J. Miller to score twice in succession.

A sale of such magnitude and importance as that on the 13th instant when the first draft of horses in training the property of the late Sir J. Blundell Maple were submitted at Park Paddocks is very far from an every-day occurrence, and it served to attract a good many people to Newmarket who would not have journeyed thither to witness the racing alone. There was naturally a representative attendance at the ringside, but the proceedings are so exhaustively dealt with elsewhere in these columns that it will suffice to remark here that prices ruled good though Newsboy at 3,500 guineas went dirt cheap, as he might well win the Kempton Park Jubilee Stakes. The weather underwent a variety of changes during the night. A heavy thunderstorm broke over the town in the early hours, the deluge being of considerable duration, whilst a dull, threatening morning gave place to a gusty, boisterous afternoon—pleasant enough by reason of the atmosphere being mild and springlike. The rain had a most beneficial effect upon the going freshening up the herbage—which in the vicinity of the roads had been white with dust a few hours previously—and rendering the turf springy and yielding.

It was like a summer's day to-day and suggestive of July rather than April, the solar rays being positively hot. The wind had dried up the surface of the ground somewhat, and the course was a little dusty in places, but the sport, with a couple of exceptions, ruled brisk, whilst the defeat of Henry the First in the Craven Stakes renders the Derby situation singularly open.

Are the only successful "SAFETY" for men.

A "wrench" is due to the foot being momentarily held fast through the ordinary stirrup adhering to the boot or the stiffness of a safety bar. SCOTLAND vs. ENGLAND.—This match, the last of the international series, was played at Celtic Park, Glasgow, on the 9th instant, the representatives of the rose being victorious by a goal to nil.

The game began at twenty-eight minutes to four. Scotland lost the toss, and Brown kicked off with the home team facing the powerful wind. The going was treacherous, but the Scots made an excellent start, Crompton repelling the initial burst and Burgess following with a series of brilliant clearances. Indeed, in the opening stages the sterling defence of Burgess provided the leading feature, and, in turn, he stopped Walker, Brown, and Orr. England made a few spurts on the left wing, but Blackburn finished none too well, once heading behind rather tamely. A longish shot from Wilkinson's left foot had scarcely sufficient pace to seriously trouble McBride, who also easily cleared a slow ground shot by Crompton. Although there was not too much method among their forwards, England began to have a larger share of the game, and from a finely-placed corner by Blackburn, Woodward and Bloomer both made good efforts to score, the latter heading the ball very cleverly when close up. A further corner, conceded by Jackson, was followed by a good shot by Wolstenholme, and for some time the Everton half-back was very conspicuous for the skilful manner in which he aided the attack by his sound playing. Unfortunately for England, Raisbeck and Robertson, to say nothing of Jackson and Watson, defended so cleverly at this time that the inside forwards could make but little impression. On the other hand the Scottish front line had a better understanding, and their open methods often betokened danger. Some of Templeton's work on the extreme left was of a very high class, but he quite failed to appreciate the vigorous tackling and daring rushes of Crompton. Robertson, fed his opponents splendidly, but Niblo once spoiled a pretty movement by slowness at the crucial moment, while Orr, with a fine opportunity to score, slipped in front of goal and shot wide of the mark. This was a narrow escape for England, whose defence was experiencing a trying time. Burgess only stopped a rush by Niblo with difficulty, while Leake, with a brilliant effort, dropped back and checked Walker. A little later, Brown dashed away clear of the English half-backs, and again a score for Scotland seemed likely. Burgess, however, rather badly tripped the home centre, just outside the penalty area, this being the only blot on the Mancunian's brilliant display. It was distinctly hard lines for Scotland, for, although the resultant free kick led to a hot attack on the English goal, nothing more tangible than dangerous shots by Templeton and Robertson ensued. Scotland were by no means having all the game, for, at the other end, Wilkinson tried a shot which went wide, while Rutherford was smartly robbed by Jackson, who dashed across the field at a great pace. Some offside decisions against Scotland's right wing rather upset the home attack for a while, but eventually a brilliant concerted movement by Orr and Templeton was followed by Baddeley's great save, which was generally regarded as one of the finest things the Wolverhampton man has ever done. Templeton shot with terrific force from a narrow angle, and the manner in which Baddeley faced round and caught the ball was quite sensational, the chief merit laying in the skilful manner in which he anticipated the shot. Scotland returned to the attack, and Brown, who was playing a rather individual game, was pulled up by Burgess when close to goal. Promising play by the English left come to nought, owing mainly to the fine tacking of Jackson, who was worthily filling the place of McCombie. Once Harris looked like getting clean through, but he became entangled with an opponent, and both went sprawling in the mud. Hereabouts the English right wing—hitherto very quiet—began to be a little assertive, and, following a centre by Rutherford, Wilkinson shot wide. Scotland retaliated with a dashing attack, Walker first tricking Burgess, and Templeton ultimately forcing a corner off Crompton. Orr headed over the bar, and then Niblo appeared to lose a good chance on receiving from Templeton. The sun was now shining powerfully, and, although having to face this as well as the wind, Scotland continued to put up the more dangerous attacks. Crompton was jeered by the crowd for his severe tackling of Templeton, and once the latter seemed rather badly hurt in the back. As the interval approached, the English forwards improved considerably and arrived at a much better understanding. Woodward obtained greater freedom and made some pretty passes. One of these to Rutherford led to Raisbeck conceding a corner, following which Scotland's goal was heavily assailed. Wilkinson, Blackburn, and Wolstenholme being among those to trouble McBride. A combined run by Bloomer, Harris, and Blackburn came to nothin, owing to the last-named, who was giving a curiously uneven display, being robbed in simple fashion. England finished the first period in much better style than they began it, and at the half-time the state of the game was:—

Scotland	...	Love
England	...	Love

When a resumption was made after thirteen minutes' rest, it was noticed that Niblo and Templeton had changed places in the Scottish team—a policy that was not justified by result The wind dropped a little, but was still very strong and England played better against it than they had done with the elements in their favour. They displayed a cohesive excellence that had hitherto been lacking, while Scotland's previous affort had a tiring effect on the home team, whose defence had lost much of its sureness. An early misunderstanding between Watson and Jackson nearly let the English right wing through, but as was the case in the first half, most of the English attacks came from the left. There was now more danger in England's aggressive movements. Woodward, Harris, and Blackburn combining well, and the Cantab often making some splended passes. Again Jackson and Raisbeck defended in great style, but Watson became very shaky. At the other end Burgess checked a Scottish attack by passing back to Baddeley, and Niblo once tricked Crompton and centred to Walker, who was finely pulled up by Wilkinson. The Little Sheffielder, was doing any amount of good work at centre half, making many neat passes along the ground to the forwards, who were quick to accept them. With Raisbeck at this stage playing further back and apparently anxious about Watson, Woodward had more room in which to move, and once the Tottonian had the hardest of hard lines a swift cross shot from the left foot striking the bottom of an upright without going into the net. Despite England's great improvement, Baddeley was by no means idle, for Walker tested him with a good shot after beating several opponents in a tricky run, and he also had to save a header from Brown. A pass by Leake went astray and was promptly taken up by Orr, the latter leading a spirited attack. England again had a look in and Raisbeck showed splendid judgment in heading a corner when Harris was about to shoot from short range. Blackburn, Leake, and Woodward indulged in a passing run, the amateur finally testing McBride. At length, after the second half had been in progress nineteen minutes, Bloomer scored the only goal of the match. The Derby County man, who had not played a very prominent part up to this point, was quick to seize his opportunity, but the goal was mainly due to a bad blunder by Watson. Harris and Blackburn had taken the ball along nicely, and from the latter's centre Watson appeared certain to clear He missed his kick completely, and Bloomer, with a clear opening, sent in a characteristic shot, the pace and direction of which gave McBride no possiable chance. An almost painful silence impressed one with the fact that the crowd took its disappointment very much to heart, but the Scottish players buckled to and made a gallant effort to get on terms. A one-handed save by Baddeley from Walker appeared a trifle lucky, the ball bouncing from the goalkeeper's hand to the cross-bar. A shot by Niblo was also cleared, while Orr just missed the mark through being tackled by Crompton when taking his aim. The Scottish attack was not long sustained, for England again assumed the upper hand and were unquestionably the better side in the closing stages. Harris shot against the side of the net, a further bad mistake by Watson gave Rutherford a chance. The latter was too slow, however, and allowed McBride to come out and secure the ball. Crompton followed a dropping shot on to the cross-bar by bringing down Niblo, strenuous appeals being made by Scotland for a penalty kick, but all in vain. Up to the finish Raisbeck was the hero of the Scottish defence, and it was mainly due to his intellectual play that England did not score again. As is happened, Bloomer's goal—"cheap" as it undoubtedly was—made history, England at length breaking through her spell of ill-success against the representatives of the Thistle.

COUNTRY CHAMPIONSHIP.

KENT vs. DURHAM.—At Blackheath on Saturday, the 9th inst. Kent defeated Durham, the holders, by the narrow margin of two points. Winning the toss, the Durham captain naturally elected to take advantage of a stiffish breeze, and Hartley accordingly kicked off, Cox making a neat return. From the line out the visitors at once attacked, Taylor putting into Gibson's hands, but from the latter's punt the home forwards came away, and Hill, charging down a kick by Horsley and Elliott, in addition, mulling, Durham were placed on the defensive. Soon Livesay opened up, O'Brien, Dillon, and Morgan handling until Elliott, running across, held the little Welshman. However, led by Auton and Bradley, the Northern scrummagers, by a series of short rushes, won their way to the centre, and then Horsley, getting possession, kicked over the Kentish line. From the drop out the Cantab found touch nicely in the home "25" and from the ensuing "scrum" Taylor tried to force his way through, but Dillon checked, and Gibson touched down. Still Durham kept up the pressure O'Brien once saving cleverly after Gibson had been collared and lost possession in a Durham rush. After Elliott had failed with a drop, Knaggs passed out to Cox, who, in turn, gave to Taylor, and the latter presented Elliott with a distinct chance, but he failed to take hold. Taylor next essayed a drop, which was wide, following which two penalties against Joicey for "picking out" enabled Kent to make progress, and, thanks to sterling work by Scott, Hill, Hartley, and Rodgers, they advanced to the centre. A moment later Livesay had an opening but he could not break through, and, a fine run by Dillon, who transferred to O'Brien, was also cut short, the Guy's Hospita man being surely tackled by Taylor. From the next pack Morgan, with the ball at his feet, had a great opportunity, but before he could profit by it Clarkson deliberately held him, for which offence the referee awarded a penalty. Rogers took the shot, the ball travelling a few feet wide. At this stage the Kent forwards were repeatedly getting the ball in the pack. When his side was hotly pressed Knaggs was penalised for offside tactics, Rogers again shooting a foot or so outside the mark. After a temporary incursion into the Southern territory by Bradley, Knaggs, and Summerscales, the home scrummagers came away almost to the line, and only the determined collaring turned them back. Subsequently the visitors, headed by Auton and Bradley, rushed away, and getting through the three-quarters, Gibson only just saved the situation by running into touch at the corner flag. By some loose play the game swung over to the other corner, where Hogarth at length succeeded in scrambling over The place was entrusted to Taylor, who missed adding the full points. On resuming Joicey soon got hold, and Knaggs, Taylor, Elliott and Clarkson participated in a combined movement, cut short by the last-named knocking on the final pass. Hartley got mauled in a line out, but was soon able to resume. Kent now held the upper hand, but the defence was too safe, and at half-time the score stood.

Durham	One try
Kent	Nothing

On resuming, the first incident of note was the giving of a free against a Durham forward for offside, Rogers putting in a strong kick, which was neutralised by Horsley's clever return. From a pack at mid-field Livesay threw to Dillon, and the latter passed and ran clear until Gibson stayed his progress, not, however, before he had parted to Joicey, the half, in turn, being bowled over by Dillon, Carter next headed a dangerous rush, but again Dillon barred the way, and though Brown dribbled to neutral quarters, the Dunelmians in the loose resumed their aggressive tactics, and Elliott looked certain to get in, but fortunately for the Hop County he was dispossessed near the line, the ball being eventually kicked dead. In this mellee McEvedy was injured and retired, Newbold being taken out of the "scrum" to assist behind. Immediately afterwards Rogers came away with the ball at his feet, but after beating Horsely he had the mortification of seeing the leather roll out of bounds. With the return of McEvedy the home country, encouraged by partisan cheers, took up the attack, O'Brien made his mark favourably, but the wind diverted Rogers's shot for goal. Subsequently, from some loose exchanges near the centre, Taylor and Coran strongly, and the Sunderland man sent Clarkson in with a try, rather wide, which Taylor could not improve upon. With Durham holding a 6 points' lead, the home fifteen for a few minutes were obviously disheartened, but, soon "bucking up," Livesay, just outside the "25," set O'Brien and Dillon in motion. The Harlequin speedily transferred to Morgan, who, swerving past Horsely, got across, and then, dodging three or four opponents, safely grounded near the posts, amidst tremendous cheering. The place was an easy one, and Rogers, making no mistake, reduced the Kentish deficit to a single point. Restarting, Gowans Carter, R. Elliott having been foiled in a sturdy assault, Rogers again came through a loose pack with the ball at his toes. He managed to pick up whilst on the run, and gave Cave the chance to score, which he promptly accepted. It was a great effort on the part of the Heathen, and deserved to the full the recognition it received. Although Rogers failed to convert, it proved a winning score, as Kent quite held their own during the remaining ten minutes, during which period Dillon got "crocked" and Hartley did a clever piece of saving. At the sound of the final whistle the scores were :—

RACQUETS.

PUBLIC SCHOOLS CHAMPIONSHIP.

FIRST ROUND.

The championship of racquets among the public schools is always a highly popular event, and it was by no means surprising therefore, to find the gathering in the first court at the Queen's Club West Kensington, W., densely packed with interested and enthusiastic spectators when this season's competition opened on the 12th. The youthful element, of course, largely predominated, but there were also several ladies present, while among the gentlemen in attendance who have own renown in the athletic world in the past were: Messrs A. G. Steel, A. J. Webbe H K. Foster, W. H. Patterson, C. E. Horner C. H Wild, F. B. Wilson, Vane Pennell, F. H. Browning, E. B. Noel, C. R. Durant, Malcolm Roberts, R. H. Montmorency, H. M. Leaf, H. L. Doherty, H. S. Mahony, and C. J. B. Marriott. Thirteen schools entered for the championship this year, one more than last spring. Radley having dropped out while Haileybury and Rossall came in; Clifton, Malvern, Marlborough, Charterhouse, Winchester Harrow, and Rugby were all enabled to include old choices, and Rugby and Winchester proved especialy fortunate in still having the assistance of both the boys who played last season. At the last moment, Charterhouse had to substitute E. de Neufville for C. A. L Payne, who is down with influenza. Wellington, Harrow (the holders), and Rugby receive byes, and the five matches comprising the first round all turned out extremely one-sided affairs. Malvern, Eton, and Marlborough secured love victories, but, taken all round, the form displayed hardly came up to expectation. Foster, after a slow start, did better later on, and the Eton pair had little to beat in Rossall. Astor, however possesses an extremely useful service. On the day's play, Marlborough and Winchester probably created the best impression. The duties of umpires and referee were divided during the afternoon between Messrs. Noel, Durant, Montmorency. Browning, and Leaf, and Holden and Dooley marked the games. Details:

Wellington college (H Broughan and G. C. Drysdall) a bye.

Malvern College (G. N. Foster and A. P Day) beat Clifton College (A. H Crew and G. T. C. Watt) by four games to love (15—10, 18—13, 15—1, and 15—6) 63 aces to 37.

Day started, and, after five small hands, the Cliftonians drew ahead with runs of two and three. Foster at length got in, and mainly by an effective drop service, made it "6 all," and even pegging ensued until Clifton led at 10—8. Foster than went to game with a sequence of seven (six by service), but on resuming Clifton, thanks to some excellent returns by Watt, more than held their own for a long time. The game was set to five at "13 all," and Foster, putting out Crew with a beautiful smash, ran out (four by service) At the third meeting, Foster went clean away with hands of five and six, and, Crew only scoring once for Clifton, the Malvern pair took the third game at 15—1. On starting again, Foster displayed his best form, after Clifton had the advantage at four love. Serving splendidly, Foster made a sequence of twelve, and won the match at 15—6. Time, 33mins.

Eton College (J. J. Astor and J. Steel) beat Rossall School (J. N G. Johnson and F. H. Mugliston) by four games to love (15—8, 15—3, 15—4, and 15—0), 60 aces to 15.

The Etonians had the advantage in size and throughout quite outclassed their rivals. Steel's first hand realised eight, and, although the Rossalians each contributed three, Astor went out at 15—8. Resuming, Astor made his sequence to seventeen (fourteen by service), and the Light Blues easily secured the second game. The two subsequent meetings saw Astor carry everything before him, and he scored all the necessary thirty aces himself, making sequences of fourteen and fifteen, twenty-five in all by service. Time, 17mins.

Marlborough College (H. M. Butterworth and W. G. M. Pound) beat Cheltenham College (A. G. N. Belfield and A. L. E. Nixon) by four games to love (15—0, 15—7, 15—3, and 15—5), 60 aces to 15.

The Marlborough boys, who were both taller than their opponents, carried all before them at the start, and made the first a love game, the principal features being sequences of five by Pound and seven by Butterworth, all mainly by service. At the second meeting Cheltenham did better, but still could not cope with the superior class of the Marlburians, for whom Butterworth was continually prominent. The latter made runs of five twice, and Marlborough took the second game at 15—7. Butterworth and Pound practically did as they liked the third meeting, while at the fourth the best thing done for Cheltenham was a hand of four by Belfield. Time, half an hour.

Carterhouse School (J. N. Buchanan and E. de Neufville) beat Tonbridge School (N. L. Colley and W. M. Heald) by four games to one (15—8, 15—10, 15—9, 9—15, and 15—7) 69 aces to 44.

Neufville opened in brilliant fashion, and at his third hand ran out at 15—8, with a sequence of eleven (six by service). Continuing Neufville went to five love, but subsequently Tonbridge thanks to capital work by Colley, offered a stubborn resistance and were only beaten at 15—10. The third meeting saw the pair well-matched for a long time, and Tonbridge once led at 8—6. Buchanan soon drew level, and Neufville ran out at 15—9 with a sequence of five. Colley and Heald made a grand effort to improve their position on resuming runs of five coming from the latter and four by the former, and, the Carthusians, getting a bit slack, they lost the fourth game by 9—15. The fifth game was called "6 all" and "7 all," but then the Charterhouse pair went away and secured the match at 15—7. Time, 40 min.

Winchester College (Hon. C. N. Bruce and E. L. Wright) beat Haileybury College (G. N Bignell and S. Buckley) by four games to one (15—1, 15—7, 11—15, 15—2, and 15—6), 71 aces to 31.

Runs of ten by Bruce (nine by service) and five by at Wright enabled Winchester to take the opening game at 15—1, while the second saw Wright tack on ten aces—all by service. Haileybury pulled up a little, but were beaten again. On resuming, the Wykehamists led at 10—8, but then Buckley got in a fine run of six, and pulled the third game out of the fire. Runs of seven by Wright and six by Bruce marked the opening of the fourth game, which Winchester captured at 15—2, while the latter pair won the fifth and decider after a series of very fine rallies, in which Bignell distinguished himself. Time, 29 minutes.

Harrow School (holders) (L. M. McLean and St. J. F. Wolton) bye.

Rugby School (K. M. Agnew and K. Powell) a bye.

SECOND ROUND.

The continuation of the Public School Racquets Championship, on the 13th instant, attracted one of the largest crowds ever seen in the gallery of the first court at the Queen's Club, West Kensington, W. Every coign of vantage was occupied by an enthusiastic spectator, and all the onlookers followed the play with the most intense interest. Several ladies graced the proceedings with their presence, and among the many gentlemen distinguished in the world of athletics in attendance were noticed Messrs. A. J. Webbe, H. K. Foster, W. I. Foster, E. W. Bury, R. H. Montmorency, E. B. Noel, H. M. Leaf, W. H. G. Price, C. R. Durant, F. Dames Longworth, C. B. Wild, W. J. H. Curwen, H. S. Mahony, M. C Kemp, Malcolm Roberts, E. H. Leaf, M. J. G. Ritchie, and C. J. B Marriott. Four matches were set for decision in the second round and all these resulted pretty much in accordance with anticipations excepting the final one. Malvern, for whom G. N Foster displayed splendid form, beat Wellington a love match, Eton were outclassed by the very fine Marlborough pair; Winchester experienced little difficulty in disposing of the hard hitting Charterhouse couple (also a love match) but it came as a surprise when it was seen that Harrow could not hold their own with Rugby, the dark blues failing to win a single game Harrow had held the Championship for the last two years and last spring defeated Rugby in the final by four games to two. Yesterday, however, the Rugby pair, both of whom represented the School last season, played brilliant racquets and beat their opponents at all points. Agnew was especially good and he has a capital partner in Powell, the latter a left-handed player possessing a decidedly useful service. Messrs. Webbe, H. K Foster, Noel, H. M. Leaf, Dames Longworth and Durant shared the umpire and referee duties and the games played under perfect conditions as regards light were marked alternately by Dooley and Holden. Details.

Malvern College (G. N. Foster and A. P. Day) beat Wellington College (H. Broughan and G. C. Drysdall) by four games to love (15—5, 15—8, 15—5, and 18—13), 63 aces to 31 (Foster 34, Day 29, Drysdall 17, and Broughan 14)

Day started, but Wellington forged ahead first, only to find Foster immediately draw level by service at 3 all. Small hands followed, until Wellington led at 5—4, and then Foster scored thrice and Day ran out with a sequence of eight (seven by service). Resuming, Day increased his run by five (four service) and by small hands the Malvernian reached 10 love before Drysdall got in and contributed a nice sequence of six (five by service). Broughan made it 8—10, but Foster in two hands contributed the remaining five aces and Malvern were two games up At the third meeting the Malvernians led at 7—5 after fifteen small hands, but then Foster, serving excellently, scored six, and, following four more innings, Malvern took the third game. Wellington played up pluckily on continuing, Day obtained a good lead at 5—1, but Broughan and Drysdall gradually drew up and possessed the advantage at 13—10. Foster equalised, and the game was set to five at "13 all" Foster increased his sequence of three to seven, and Day secured the remaining ace, Malvern winning the match by four games to love. Time—38mins.

Marlborough College (H. M. Butterworth and W. G. M. Pound) beat Eton College (J. J. Astor and J. Steel) by four games to one (15—5, 15—7, 15—12, 15—18, and 15—9), 75 aces to 51 (Pound 39, Butterworth 36, Astor 31 and Steel 20)

Unproductive hands by Astor and Butterworth marked the commencement, but then the letter took a strong lead for Marlborough with a sequence of six. Pound made it 10 love, but the Etonians replied well and reduced their deficit by half. They got no further, however, for subsequently Pound, by means of effective out-serving, compiled a run of four and won the first game for the Marlburians. On resuming Marlborough soon took a good lead at 7—2, but then Astor drew level, only to see Pound go right out with a fine hand of eight (six by service.) The Etonians made a gallant effort at the third meeting, and runs of six and four by Astor enabled the light blues to be well ahead at 12—7. Butterworth at length get in and ran out with a sequence of seven. A great struggle ensued in the fourth game, which, after twenty-one small hands, was set to five of "13 all." Butterworth went to 2 love, and then Steel ran out with a sequence of five (four by service.) On continuing Pound with six and Butterworth with four, soon opened out a strong advantage and the Etonians were never able to get on terms. Time—15mins.

Winchester College (Honbls. C. N. Bruce and E. L. Wright) beat Charterhouse School (J. N. Buchanan and E. de Neufville) by four games to love (15—12, 15—8, 15—12, and 15—7.) 60 aces to 39 (Wright 37, Bruce 23, Neufville 28, and Buchanan 11.)

Wright second hand produced six (five by service) and Bruce made it 11—2 in favour of the Wykehamists. Neufville, then drew up, mainly by hard serving with a sequence of seven only to see Wright go out at his next innings. The Carthusians were level at five in the second game, but subsequently Winchester forged right away. Wright doing a lot of capital serving. At the third meeting Charterhouse, thanks to splendid work by Neufville, kept their opponents on the stretch, and once led at 9—5. Wright at length got going and went to 13—9 with a sequence of six, while Bruce won the game at 15—12 by means of a great kill stroke in the corner. On resuming, a run of seven by Bruce was responded to by five from Neufville. Wright followed with five, and then went out a 15—7. Time—36mins.

Rugby School (K. M. Agnew and K. Powell) beat Harrow School (holders) (L. M. McLean and St. J. F. Wolton) by four games to love (15—4, 15—7, 15—8, and 15—4), 60 aces to 30 (Agnew 35, Powell 25, McLean and Wolton 10 each.)

McLean started with one, but Agnew soon equalised, and subsequently Rugby were always in front. Hands generally ruled small, and the light blues took the first game at 15—4. Harrow did better on resuming, but a sequence of six by Agnew placed Rugby well ahead again, while later on the same player made the second game practically safe with another run of half a dozen. At the third meeting Harrow once led at 7—4, but then Agnew registered seven and ran out again with three Seven hands resulted in "1 all" being called in the fourth game and subsequently the Harrovians never got another chance Agnew put on four and his partner went right out with a brilliant sequence of ten (six by service). Time—35mins.

SEMI-FINAL ROUN.

The gallery in the first court at the Queen's Club, West Kensington, W., was again crowded to excess yesterday afternoon, when the semi-final round of the Public Schools Racquets Championship came up for decision. Interested and enthusiastic spectators occupied every inch of space from which a view of the proceedings could be obtained, and among those present were noticed Rev. L. J. Percival, Major Lyon, Messrs. E. T. Gurdon, M. C. Kemp, J. R. Mason, A. J. Webbe, H. K. Foster, W. L. Foster, G. J. V. Weigall, F. B. Wilson, R. H. de Montmoreney, Vane Pannell, F. H. Browing, F. Dames Longworth, E. B. Noel, C. R. Durant, Malcolm Roberts, E. C. Bambridge, and C. J. B. Marriott. The four schools left in were Malvern, Marlborough, Winchester and Rugby, and somewhat contrary to expectations, the match between the first-named pairs resulted in a love triumph for the Malvernians. G. H. Foster played magnificent racquets, and quite out-classed the other three players, both at serving and knowledge of the game. Day seconded his first string excellently, but Pound proved a disappointed partner for Butterworth. A great surprise was caused when Winchester rather easily beat Rugby, who defeated the last holders, Harrow, on Wednesday. Rugby started off at a tremendous pace, but failed to sustain the effort, Agnew especially being off colour. Wright was in splendid form, but Bruce probably gave the most stylish exhibition of the day. Messrs. Dames Longworth, H. K. Foster, Kemp, Webbe, and Browning undertook the official duties, and Dooley and Holden marked and called the scores. Details:—

Malvern College (G. N. Foster and A. P Day) beat Marlborough College (H. M. Butterworth and W. G. M. Pound) by four games to love (18—16, 15—9, 15—9 and 15—6), 63 aces to 40 (The aces were scored by Foster 37, Day 26, Butterworth 23, and Pound 17.)

Day failed at the opening but three by Butterworth and a single by his partner enabled Marlborough to soon lead at 4—0. Foster then got in and compiled a sequence of eleven (five by service) before being put out by Pound. Splendid work by Butterworth enabled Marlborough to gradually creep up, and the game was set to five at 13 all. Butterworth and Pound went to 3 love, but Foster equalised, and Day ran out at 18—16. Nine small hands at the second meeting saw Marlborough well ahead at 6—2, but Foster's brilliant efforts speedily equalised matters, while soon afterwards the same player went to 11—9 with a sequence of five, leaving Day to go out with four. Continuing, Day made his run to nine, but four by Butterworth and three by Pound (all the seven but one by service) carried Marlborough to 7—5. Subsequently Malvern went clean away and took the third game at 15—9. Six barren hands marked the beginning of the fourth game, but, following a couple of fine scoring services by Foster, the Malvern second string got in and put in a splendid sequence of eight. Small hands followed, and eventually Foster ran out at 15—6, and Malvern won the match by four games to love. Time—40mins.

Winchester College (Hon'ble C. N. Bruce and E. L. Wright) beat Rugby School (K. M. Agnew and K. Powell) by four games to two (3—15, 15—12, 15—5, 15—2, 3—15 and 15—8), 66 aces to 57, (Wright 36, Bruce 30, Agnew 10, and Powell 17).

Agnew commenced brilliantly with a sequence of eight (five by service) at his first hand, Winchester having no luck and Rugby took the opening game easily. Continuing to display admirable form, Rugby reached 7 love at the second meeting, but then Winchester, who had been hitting much too high, settled down, and a fine sequence of nine by Wright carried the Dark Blues to the front. Bruce made it 12—7, and after some small hands Wright went out and equalised the game. Rugby seemed all abroad during the succeeding two games, which Winchester won at 15—5 and 15—2, the features being runs of six and four by Wright five and four by Bruce, but when all seemed nearly lost Rugby, chiefly through Pounds effective left-handed serving, pulled up a bit, and secured the fifth game at 15—8, Pound contributing a sequence of six in this. On resuming small hands were the order until the maker called "6 all," and then Bruce took the lead with a hand of three. A similar number came from Wright, and then a further run of three by Bruce carried Winchester into the final with a victory by four games to to two. Time—55mins.

Unfortunately for the success of the ten-mile flat and seven-mile walking championships at Rochdale, on Saturday, the weather was most unpropitious. Rain fell all the morning, and though the afternoon opened fine a heavy snowstorm fell before the close of the proceedings. The attendance naturally suffered, and the gate-money amounted to only a little over £30. A strong wind blew dead up the back straight, and this, of course, militated against good times. Of the twenty-six entrants in the ten-mile championship, all but three, viz., S. H. Day (Birchfield), J. W. Daniel (Rochdale), and T. Hossack (Crewe) turned out, but the event was a one-man affair all through. No one could live with Shrubb, who dropped Butterfield at a mile, and at five miles and a half had lapped everybody else in the race. He won finally by 600 yards, a distance which he could easily increase. The time was 54min 30⅘secs, the slowest accomplished in the race for the past seven years Naturally, Shrubb's hollow win robbed the race of much of its interest, but there was a rousing battle for second honours, in which Roberts just failed to beat Butterfield by a yard. J. D. Marsh, the Salford veteran did an excellent performance in finishing fourth, and his form since January has been of a very fine order indeed. The standard was fixed at 56mins 30secs., and only half a dozen got within this time, whilst only two competitors qualified for the smaller bronze token for getting within 58min. and outside the standard. There were two absentees from the twenty entrants in the walk, these being Learby, a local man, and George Deyermond the Irishman, who won the two-mile championship a few years ago. Butler, the holder, though not very well competed, but was hopelessly out of it from the start and retired early on. The winner, G. E. Larner, of Brighton won in magnificent style in 54mins. 57⅘secs. a time which has only been beaten four times previously in the race. The performance speaks volumes for Larner's ability, and, as he walks with the utmost fairness, he should retain his new honour for some years. All the first four beat the standard time of 57mins 30secs., and seven got within the secondary standard of 59mins. Altogether, the gathering was, despite the weather, a pronounced success, for the entries were record ones and the arrangements excellent. Details.

GOLF.

EDINBURGH ACADEMICALS vs. FETTESIAN-LORETTONIANS.—Two years ago a successful inter-club match, under the above title brought together strong teams and, following upon the F. L. meeting at Muirfield on Friday, Saturday was to have been devoted to a second match between teams of old pupils of Edinburgh Academy on one hand, and of the two great Scottish public schools on the other. Each set of players boasted an ex-amateur champion, and several players of note, and the match would have been of exceptional interest had not storm of wind, rain, and snow, which swept across the South of Scotland, been so pronounced at Gullane, as to bring play to an end with the eleven singles played. In these the Balfour-Melvilles, father and sons, were somewhat badly beaten, and though B. N. Johnston beat the F. L. medallist of the previous day, J. P. Joff, and J. T Gillespie, the Scottish Rugby half-back, and A. G. Tait won from their strong opponents. The Accademicals finished ten holes down, the register being.

BARRISTERS AT PLAY.—The first match between the barristers of England and Ireland was played on the Formby links. The members of the Irish Bar are in large force on Dollymount and Portmarnock, and in response to the invitation of the English Bar a very powerful team was brought together, the Hon'ble E. Gibson (Dollymount record holder), and Boyd, an ex-Irish champion, being in the number. The match was a great success, and although England won over both singles and foursomes, the result reflects credit on the Irishmen, who have not the same immense field to draw upon. The weather in the morning was stormy, but in the afternoon there was little wind.

GYMNASTICS.

INTERNATIONAL GYMNASTICS.

The championship competitions took place at Newport on Saturday in the presence of a large crowd, which followed with the closest interest the different items. The competitors were teams representing England, Scotland, and Wales. Ireland did not send a team this year, and Wales, the youngest of the gymnastic association had to draw upon the famous Newport club for five out of six of its team. The judges were Messrs. E. Rogers (England), W. Miller (Scotland), and H. A. Huxtable (Wales.) England took the lead on the horizontal bar by 4 points over Scotland, Wales being a long way in arrear. On the rings England advanced 2 points, whilst Wales fell still further behind. In the rope-climbing, Scotland, the holders of the championship, gradually gained on England, and in the end won by just under 5 points. Wales made her best show on the rope, only being slightly behind Scotland. Scores :—

BOXING.

THE NATIONAL SPORTING CLUB.

The Easter holidays over, boxing was resumed at headquarters on the 11th instant, where Manager Bettinson put forward a long programme of events with a fifteen-round contest between Young Jim Hook, a son of the once well-known feather-weight, Bill Hook, and Sapper Morgan three times light-weight champion of the Army as the chief attraction. The card also contained a six round bout between Charley Oliver, of Shoreditch, and Darkey Berwicke, of Camberwell, a couple of "trials" and a competition open to novices at any weight. Additional interest was centtesed in the last-named event owing to the fact that two soldiers, Pte. McLaughlin, of the Irish Guards, and Pte. Casling, of the 2nd Grenadiers, who had met in a final at Aldershot on Friday night were among the number entered. At the display referred to the men fought out the final, and, following a final battle, McLaughlin gained the vote of the referee after a disagreemnet on the part of the judges. Last night the two had again to contest the decider at headquarters, the soldier proving themselves the better of the eight selected to do battle. This time the officials were not called upon, as Casling, landing a rare thump on the mark, defeated his opponent in the second round. Berwicke gained a somewhat unexpected victory over Oliver, as after the last-named had nearly put his man out of court in the opening round, he himself succumbed in the second. Hook and Morgan were matched for fifteen rounds at 10st, stakes of £25 aside being as issue, in addition to a purse given by the management of the National. Scaling at eight o'clock Morgan went 9st 11lbs to the 9st 12lbs of his opponent. Nearly of the same height the men offered a contrast in the matter of build, Morgan, who started favourite at 6 to 4, being of the loosely framed order, with Hook muscular and shapely put together. A neat and skilful contest, fought out on clever and for quite a time on particularly cautious lines, the affair, if rather slow during the early stages, was always full for interest. Hook, who has his father's style even to a feint, relied chiefly on a straight left, while Morgan was more robust with hard and effective two-handed work. As stated, Morgan opened favourite, and for the first half-dozen rounds he showed to slight advantage. Hook, who had so far made little use of himself, then became more aggressive and, improving in his boxing, he drew on his opponent, with the result at the end of the twelfth round it was a case of even money. The further Hook went the better he boxed, and showing excellent generalship and sound defence, he retained his form to the end and scored a popular and hard-earned victory.

The officials were : Referee, Mr John H. Douglas ; judges for the competition, Messrs G. N. Hall-Say and E. Zerega ; time-keeper, Mr. W. Fulcher ; and M.C. Mr. Bettinson.

FIFTEEN ROUND CONTEST.

Jim Hook (Billingsgate) beat Sapper Morgan (light-weight champion of the Army).—The soldier had behind him Bill Baxter and Dick Dean, while Hook's wants were seen to by George Cunningham, Arthur Guttridge, and his uncle, Jim Hook. A good deal of caution was exercised on both sides, neither man at the start appearing in the least inclined to throw a chance away. Feinting and dodging in and out of distance were the order, and only once in the first round did the men exchange blows of any weight or effect. Facing each other again Hook drove the lef on the face, and later in a rally Morgan put both hands on the head, while just as the gong went he landed hard on the body. Morgan was more aggressive when they came together for the third time, and, putting a fair amount of power behind his blows, he scored on both head and body. The next two rounds were contested on similar lines: in fact, the fighting did not commence until the sixth. Hook here made more use of himself, while Morgan who had shown perhaps to slight advantage, adopted some peculiar tactics in the way of "low diving" Frequently he ducked as the other man came in until his head was on a level with Hook's knees, and in this way he twice narrowly escaped committing a foul. In the eight round, or at least half way throught, Morgan crowded in a lot of useful work after he had got ruled by reason of a flush left that Hook put on the mouth The soldier delived with considerable power, especially on the body, but Hook made up for some lost ground by boxing better in the ninth round than he had done so far during the contest. Hitting straight and clean he got home some very fine lefts on the face, and once Morgan came to his knees The soldier was quickly on his feet again, slashing away left and right, while Hook once more brought the left into play. Twice Morgan just missed the point, and then feeling the effects, no doubt, of his hard work, he slowed down somewhat. Hook, on the other hand, kept pegging away at the head, landing and showing a clever defence. In the last two rounds Morgan tried all he knew to get the right home, but Hook was equal to the occasion, and at the end of a close set-to the verdict went his way.

Polo.

CHEAPENING POLO PONIES.

THE Honorary Secretary of the Indian Polo Association has forwarded the following contribution to the discussion now going on anent this matter :—

General Haig's proposals for reducing the price of polo ponies will be read with the greatest interest by a large majority of polo players in India, who will be grateful to him for the immense amount of trouble he has taken in grappling with a very difficult and, apparently, a very burning question.

Personally, I see no necessity for the introduction of rules on the subject. That, however, is not to the point : the question requires a solution, and a discussion has been invited in which I hope many will join.

The proposals as they stand at present will have an unduly harsh effect on two main classes of players, those who want to sell their ponies and those who want to keep them. This has been well pointed out by "Watchman" in the Pioneer. The first class consists of those men of slender means who are only able to exist as tournament players by purchasing raw ponies, training them, and, eventually, selling them to rich men at a considerable profit. It is, I believe, a very large class; nearly all polo playing regiments in the Indian Army, as well as a good many in the English Army who have regimental polo clubs, may be said to belong to it. The second class is a smaller one, but it is by no means unimportant, it deserves encouragement and it will be harder hit even than the first, for it consists of those men who buy raw ponies, train them themselves and then keep them.

It will be impossible to frame rules which are deliberately intended to reduce the price of ponies, and which will at the same time satisfy the first class. Nevertheless, it would be a pity to put too heavy a handicap on players, whose horsemanship alone provides the means for indulging in a useful though expensive game. I venture, therefore, to suggest the following slight alteration to General Haig's proposals, which I think will soften the blow to the first class, and entirely satisfy the second :—

RULES.

I. All ponies at present in possession of regiments, clubs or individual players to be registered on some date to be fixed hereafter and a descriptive list sent to the Honorary Secretary, I P. A. These ponies will belong to Class D for the rest of their existence.

II. All ponies bought or otherwise acquired, after the above fixed date, will be classed as follows :—

Class A. All ponies that have not played in any open tournament.

Class B. All ponies that have played in any open tournament but have not changed owners since their entry into this class. All ponies of Class A shall be considered to belong to Class B from the first moment of their playing in any open tournament; and the names and calendar numbers of such ponies shall be sent to the Honorary Secretaty, I. P. A., for registration immediately after the final tie of such tournament.

Class C. All ponies of Class B shall belong to Class C immediately they change owners, and it shall be the duty of both buyer and seller to inform the Honorary Secretary, I. P. A, of the change of class. In other words a pony can never lose his maiden as Class B, so long as he remains the property of the owner, who originally played him in his first open tournament.

III. No pony that is sold by his owner to a member of the same regiment, to which he belongs, or of the same combination of units, allowed to play in an open tournament as a regiment, shall be considered to have changed owners.

IV. Not more than eighteen ponies shall be played by any team in any open tournament ; all of these may belong to Class A., B. or D., but not more than six shall belong to Class C, except in the championship tournament which shall have no restrictions as to class of ponies.

V. The purchase of Class B ponies by a regiment during the first 12 months after its arrival in India shall not involve their removal to Class C but no regiment shall be eligible to compete in any tournament held out of the "command" during its first year of service in India.

VI. For purposes of these rules an "open" tournament shall be defined as follows :—"An open tournament is a tournament in which teams may compete irrespectively of the locality where they reside, or are quartered, and in which there are no restrictions as to seniority in army rank or to polo experience of players."

I hope that these proposals, if they come into force as rules, will have a tendency to encourage all players to buy raw ponies and train them themselves.

Rule I is practically the same as General Haig's, but I have suggested that all present existing polo ponies in India shall be put in a class by themselves, and have called it Class D. This will obviate any inconvenience in the future as the class will eventually die out.

Rule II. In Class A I have omitted the word "untrained" which occurs in General Haig's rule and added the word "open" before tournament. This will enable players to train polo ponies, play them in closed tournaments and so command a reasonable price for them. It will not be so high a price as they can obtain now, but should be sufficient to enable them to keep up their tournament polo.

My suggestions for Classes B and C are made to enable a player to keep his good ponies and to continue playing them in all sorts of tournaments. Rule III will make it possible to keep good polo ponies in a regiment. Most officers of the Indian Army have to sell their polo ponies when they go Home on furlough, and they would rather sell them in their own regiments than outside. It is only the few very exceptional ponies that will in future command high prices under these rules: a tolerably good pony of Class B, whose purchase involves registration in Class C, will fetch nothing, but a regiment will always be glad to give a reasonable figure for a tolerably good pony that can remain in Class B.

Rule IV is much the same as General Haig's. I have enlarged it to include all open tournaments. In do not think there is any necessity for allowing more than eighteen ponies even in the championship ; but I think it will be very difficult to make any restrictions as to class in the latter.

Rule V is the same as General Haig's but the wording has been changed to suit my other alterations.

Rule VI. The question "What is an open tournament ?" came up at the meeting of the I. P. A. at Meerut last month, and it was decided that no definition was necessary. In drawing up a proposed rule for the removal of a pony from Class A to Class B, I felt that the expression "any tournament," which occurs in General Haig's rule would be too severe on players who wish and are even obliged to sell their ponies. I, therefore, tried to make a list of tournaments which no pony could play in without losing "A" classification. It is beyond my power to make a satisfactory list, so I have used the expression "open tournament" and endeavoured to define it. It is for others to say whether the definition will answer the purpose.

"One swallow does not make a summer." There are many "yarns" as poor anglers are asked to swallow—I mean real yarns—but the following is true ; it appeared in the Gentlemen's Magazine, 1738:—"A boy having swallowed a fish-hook, endeavoured to pull it with the line, but without effect, as it was last. Surgeons could give him no assistance, until making as small hole in a leaden bullet ; the line being put through it, he swallowed it, which running down the line, by its weight loosened the hook from its hold, which was then drawn up with ease."

CYCLING AND MOTORING AT HOME

LONDON, Friday, 15th April 1904.

THE dull and damp days which we have experienced since the advent of the new year have had a most depressing effect upon the cycle and motor industry. However, the long looked for termination of incessant rains and floods arrived at Easter, and "Old Sol" spread his cheerful countenance over the face of the land. More bicycles and motors will be required this year than ever, and reports from all parts of the country are to the effect that both agents and manufacturers have entered a period of renewed prosperity. Favourable weather is the only thing needed to level matters up.

The annual general meeting of the Cyclists' Touring Club was held recently at Westminster, when it was reported that the received subscriptions for 1903 were 33,314. To this be added the candidates for January, 437, February, 685, March, 744, April, 716, May, 935, June, 964, July, 997, August, 1,208, September, 1,208, October, 418, November, 177, December, 76, and the life members (including 18 honorary) 193, when the total for the year ending 31st December will be found to be 42,141. This total represents a decrease upon the total for 1902 of 3,067, which is in a way regarded as satisfactory, because the decline in 1903 was only half that for 1902.

The cycle racing season was inauguarated all over the United Kingdom at Easter under not very favourable circumstances, a stiff wind—that bugbear of the racing man—hampering the riders, together with frequent heavy showers, which somewhat interfered with the programme in many cases However, good sport was the order, and big gates the rule, at practically all the meetings. At Canning Town, Bardgatt, an American rider, won the professional match very easily At the same venue, Reed won the Amateur Scratch race. Some exciting racing was witnessed at Carmarthen, Janson beating Casey, the Putney rider. After a great set-to at Herne Hill, little Wills succumbed in his match with Edmonds and Appleton, who rode a tandem. A coming man in Draper secured a double event at the Putney meeting, winning both the half-mile and one-mile. Leon Meredith, the Paddington rider, scored at Burnley, and Benyon, the Chester crack, won the five miles scratch at the same meeting. A surprise was in store at the Anerley meeting, where Buck defeated champion Reed, who for once was caught napping Reed, however, won the ten miles scratch race. In Dublin, the Agents' Cup was won by E. Martin, J. Martin was second, and the world's champion prize-winner, J. J. Condon, occupied third place.

The experience of travelling through the country on a speedy high-grade motor bicycle is not one to be readily forgotten. There is so much to be seen on the country roads. It is probably the least expensive form of holiday-making, and one which gives the most genuine pleasure. To those riders who are going touring, a good machine and an ample luggage-carrier at least two essentials towards an enjoyable motor trip. In transporting luggage from place to place the motor cyclist undoubtedly has an estimable advantage as compared with his brother of the pedal-propelled machine.

He can explore the country fully equiped with everything necessary towards his comfort without, of course, incurring the bodily fatigue of the ordinary bicycle not to speak of propelling the extra weight and even then traversing only about half the distance as compared with the mechanical machine. A most important equipment, and one which no motorist should fail to carry in his kit, is the tyre-repairing out fit. After all, where would the motor tourist be with a punctured tyre and no means of effecting a repair? An outfit specially designed and made for the use of motor cyclist is the Dunlop. It contains everything necessary for mending a puncture in any form. With the splendid materials, all of Dunlop manufacture, a repair can be accomplished in a rapid and effectual manner. It is sold at 1s. 6d., and procurable of all cycle and motor depôts.

There has recently been placed on the market in England an invention for automatically recording the speed of a motor car. It consists of a clock that shows the time, and also moves a wheel on which are arranged raised letters and figures, representing minutes, seconds, hours, days, and months. Over this wheel a tape is unwound from a "drum" and removed on another drum. Every 55 yards the car travels a hammer falls on the tape. The tape is marked off spaces by the tape wheel, one for every 55 yards, and the time being impressed at the same moment, a simple calculation gives the pace travelled.

For example, if a quarter-mile is covered, and the time recorded is one minute, the pace is 15 miles an hour. When the car is at rest, the hammer and movement of the tape stops, the duration of the stop being indicated when the car starts again. The recording tape is, of course, removable, and its record is absolute proof of disputed speed in a police-court case. There is another side, too, to the invention; for any excess of the legal limit is at once signalled by a bell—easily heard by policemen as well as passengers. And, as a warning is given beforehand there will be no excuse for breaking the law. The inventor is Richard Paulson, of Brighton, and he is in hopes of the Government taking it up and making it compulsory on every car.

Trembler coils are coming into such extensive use that the question is often asked: has the trembler coil any advantage over the ordinary make-and-break system? Many of the motor dealers state the trembler coil is immeasureably superior in every way to other methods of spark production, mainly on account of the smaller consumption of current, greater ease of starting, and more regular firing at low speeds. It should be remebered, however, that against the make-and-break system a trembler coil has two points where the current is interrupted; whereas the make-and break has only one point on the primary current, and consequently is less liable to give trouble. The management of a "buzzer" coil, too, is a far more difficult task than the manipulation of a plain make-and-break, and if the adjustment of a trembler coil is not very carefully done the motor will not run at all well. The trembler coil no doubt has its advantages in the case of a car, but for use on motor cycles the non-tremble coil is more than likely to hold its own for some time to come.

THE BEIGHTON CUP.

THIRD ROUND.

HORNETS vs. BALLYGUNGE.—The Calcutta ground was the venue of this match last Saturday. The Hornets played a very good game and won by four goals to one. The Hornets were first away and rushing down forced a corner: nothing came of it and the ball was taken away by Ballygunge. Yackjee relieved and the Hornets once more attacked. Mabert putting through. They continued to press and before the interval Apcar had scored twice. After half time the Ballygunge forwards showed improved form and getting away with a good run Zimmermann found the net. They attacked again and the game was better contested. Shortly before time, however, the Hornets took the ball down and L. Rosser scored their fourth goal. Teams:—

SEEBPORE COLLEGE vs. CUSTOMS.—These teams met on the Dalhousie ground last Saturday, a good game resulting in a win for the Engineering College by three goals to one. The first half was not particularly exciting as play ruled up and down and the interval arrived without either side having scored. On changing ends the Engineers played in their best form. They immediately took the ball down and Ansell put through. On restarting they again got away and Ansell once more found the net, after an unsuccessful attempt by Nyss; Seebpore continued to press and it was not long before a third goal was added to their credit, Ansell again being responsible. Just before time the Customs put in a fine run and McCready scored their only goal. Teams:—

The late General Pearson was a great believer in early trials. Before the flat season commenced, he invariably knew the worth of his young stock. By no means a heavy bettor, the general did not like to make a mistake when he did put his "stuff" down, and whenever a youngster was about to be tried he would say to the jockey—"Don't ride him too gingerly; let him know what the prickers mean."

An interesting trial took place in March, 1866. Mr. Sutton and General Pearson believed they had a very smart filly in their stable. Achievement was the animal, and a seven-year-old mare named Grisette was to be the tell-tale. The distance chosen was half a mile and a hundred yards. Grisette was only conceding the two year-old 10lb, but the youngster won in a canter by some six lengths.

Achievement's debut was made at the Newmarket Craven Meeting. Run over the last half-mile of the B.C., the Beacon Stakes seemed a suitable race for the filly's first effort.

"What a certainty!" exclaimed Mr. Sutton, as the trial winner cantered past the post some few lengths in front of Verulam, who could not extend her. "The best two-year-old I ever tried in my life!"

During the season Achievement ran thirteen times, proving victorious on eleven occasions. Among the many "cracks" she defeated were Hermit, Fripponnier and Marksman.

In the first of the above two matches the second game was well contested, but in the other two Major Hayes, getting in some useful services, had easy victories.

The other match proved exciting, but Colonel Stevens pulled up his points and gained a well-deserved win.

GYMKHANA AT DARJEELING.

Saturday, 30th April 1904.

ANOTHER Gymkhana advertised to take place last Saturday was, owing to the threatening aspect of the weather, rather sparsely attended. The officers of the Royal Fusiliers at Lebong do not appear to go in much for the Gymkhanas so that the bulk of the entries are left to those who go down from Darjeeling; and these are small in numbers unless the afternoon happens to be exceptionally fine. Mrs. Elliott scored two wins and Miss McNamara one, and as these two ladies appear to be the only ones in the running for the special season prizes, the results of their endeavours are being watched with much interest. Some excellent prizes were distributed by Mrs. Walsh at the conclusion of the Gymkhana, and which were worthy of better entries. The following are the particulars :—

1 T EVENT.—For gentlemen. Cut a banging potatoe jump a hurdle, take a ring and a peg, all with sword. Gentlemen to supply their own swords.

Mr W. H. Edwards's 00110013 (winner) : Captain Rennie, second. Also competed Messrs. Wyvill, A. Power and A. Price.

2ND EVENT.—For Ladies. Pickpocket Race Three stakes will be placed in a row, on each stake there will be a handkerchief. Ladies to snatch one handkerchief at a time and, returning to Grand Stand, place it in a basket. First to place three handkerchiefs in basket to be the winner.

Mrs Elliott won this event from Miss. M. Namara, Miss Power and Miss George.

3RD EVENT.—Ladies Nomination. Thread the Needle Race. Gentleman to ride to lady with a thread, lady to thread a needle. Gentleman to ride back to starting point with needle threaded.

Mr. and Mrs. W. Harold Edwards were successful here, Mr. A. Power and Mrs. Elliott being a close second. The unsuccessful competitors were Mr. A. Price and Miss. Birch, Mr. Bullard and Miss McNamara, Mr. Wyvill and Mrs. Duncan, Mr. Mytton and Miss Power, and Captain Rennie and Miss Bainbridge.

4TH EVENT.—Polo and Tennis Affinity Race. Ladies and gentlemen in pairs. Gentlemen to hit a polo ball round the course through two goals and round two posts, and finish through first goal Ladies to accompany gentlemen balancing a tennis ball on a racquet If lady drops her ball, gentleman must dismount and hand it to her First pair through final goal, the gentleman having hit a goal and the lady with a tennis ball balanced on racquet, winner. After the start no lady may touch her tennis ball with anything but her racquet.

Miss McNamara and Captain Rennie secured this event, Mr. A Power and Miss Power being second. Mr. W. H. Edwards and Mrs. Elliott failing.

5TH EVENT.—The "Artists" Stakes. For Ladies and Gentlemen in pairs. Gentlemen to ride up to Grand Stand with a sealed envelope containing the name of an animal, this he will hand to a lady and retire five yards. The lady will draw on Black Board the animal named in envelope. As soon as he recognises the animal, gentleman will ride back to post and report its name Gentleman reporting correctly in quickest time to be winner.

This most amusing event was won by Mrs Elliott and Mr. Power with a sketch of a Giraffe, the unsuccessful competitors being Mr. H. Mytton and Miss Power, Captain Rennie and Miss Bainbridge, Mr. Wyvill and Miss McNamara, Mr. W. H. Edwards and Mrs. Duncan, and Mr. A. Price and Mrs. Birch. Some of the gentlemen were dense enough to mistake a cat for a rat, a hippopotomus for a beetle, a swan for a duck, etc.

6TH EVENT.—The Whippet Stakes. Open to soldiers of the Garrison. Competitors to stand at one end of the ground and whistle to their dogs at the other. Handicap.

Prizes, Rs. 5, 3 and 2. Distributed by the officers to the winners.

Monday, 2nd May 1904.

The Flower Show of this year took place in most inauspicious weather, but this did not seem to have any effect on the number of visitors, for the large hall of the Rink, where the Show was held, was crowded from the opening to the close. H. H. the Lieutenant-Governor and Lady Fraser were present, and nearly all the planters in the district, the D.-H. Railway running a special train for the occasion. Mr. Morganstin carried off the coveted Lieutenant-Governor's prize with a really artistic arrangement. The principal ladies' prize was won by Mrs. Maidlow with an admirable decoration of orchids, ferns and iris. Mrs. Hartless' decoration of orchids from Chatterjee's, which secured the second prize, was also much admired. As a matter of fact these table decorations were quite a feature of the Show, nearly all showing most exquisite taste in arrangement and style. The display of vegetables and fruit was very good, and shows what can be raised here in spite of the usually moist conditions Mr. Stolke had some fine exhibits, for which he was well rewarded.

Mr Searight and Mr. Hartless have worked hard to make the Show a success, and that it was an improvement on previous years is due in no small measure to their exertions. The following were the prize-winners in the flowers divisions :—

Travel and Adventure.

HIMALAYAN PLAYGROUNDS.

THREE circumstances combine to give a certain topical interest to Himalayan climbing. Mr Douglas Freshfield lately published the complete account of his exploration in most unfavourable weather, of the glaciers of Kanchenjunga; a recent Alpine Journal furnishes important particulars of the claim of Dr. and Mrs. Bullock-Workman to have established a world's record for high altitudes in that range: and a British expedition has been threading Himalayan passes on its way to Lhasa. We may well be reminded, not merely of the good work done by a few enterprising travellers, but also of the magnitude of our ignorance concerning the snow peaks on our long Indian frontier and of the difficulties in the way of any great extension of our knowledge of them. There are those, no doubt, who regard the Himalayas as the natural playground of India, and who wonder why the adventurous Anglo-Indian does not attack Mount Everest as eagerly as the adventurous Englishman attacked Mount Blanc and the Matterhorn. There may be many reasons why he does not, but there is one reason which is unanswerable. He is not allowed to do so. Mount Everest is in Nepaul, and neither Anglo-Indians nor any other Europeans are permitted to travel there. Sir Joseph Hooker did, rather more than half a century ago, get within fifty miles of the mountain; but the road he took has since been closed to white men, and it is not in Nepaul alone that exploration by Europeans is impossible. The mountains byond Kashmir towards Hunza and Chitral are at present unapproachable by European travellers, and we are also rigorously excluded from the range that runs along the northern frontier of Bhutan. Such knowledge as we have of the topography of these districts is mainly derived from the native explorers in the Secret Service and they, though they go to and from among mountains, surveying and measuring them to the best of their ability, are hardly mountaineers in the Alpine Club sense of the word. Roughly speaking, the available climbing centres have been the Karakorams and Sikkim—that little wedge of territory between Bhutan and Nepaul. The two districts, as Mr. Freshfield points out are as far apart as the Gross Glockner in Carinthia and Mont Perdu—in the Pyrenees. In both districts alike a certain amount of progress has recently been made. In the latter, as has been said, Mr. Freshfield made the tour of Kanchenjunga; while in the former Dr. and Mrs. Bullock-Workman attained to a height of 23,394ft.

To a certain extent, no doubt, the progress of Himalayan climbing had been delayed by the facts that comparatively few of the expeditions that have travelled among them have been composed of experienced climbers, and that the Indian Government has not always encouraged climbing even on the part of its surveyors. According to Mr. Freshfield the self-styled "Indian mountaineers" who write letters to the papers about Himalayan exploration frequently do not know one end of an ice-axe from the other; while Dr. Norman Collie has related the treatment meted out to Mr. W. H Johnson, the surveyor who did actually delight in climbing for climbing's sake, and endeavoured, though unsuccessfully, to organise a Himalayan Alpine Club. While waiting for permission to enter Turkestan he climbed three peaks —those marked in the map as E 57 (21,757ft.), E 58 (21,971ft.), and E 61 (23,890ft). It was a fine performance, though there is reason to believe that there was some error in the measurement of the last-named summit; but the Political Department reprimanded Mr Johnson for making the journey, with the result that he retired from the British service and entered that of the Maharajah of Kashmir. Chiefly for these reasons serious attempts to scale important Himalayan peaks have until recently been rare. The earliest seems to have been that of Captain Gerard, in the Spiti district, who attained a height (trigonometrically measured) of 19,400ft. in 1818, and made a first ascent of an unnamed peak of 20,400ft ten years later. Sir Joseph Hooker did not beat this record, his highest point being only 18,890ft. Then came the brothers Schlagintweit, the first travellers who brought to the Himalaas a knowledge of snowcraft acquired in the Alps. Their highest point, on the slopes of Kemet or Ibi Gamin, was 22 359ft.—a record which, on the assumption generally made that Mr. Johnson was mistaken about E 61, held the field for a considerable number of years. The date of Mr. Johnson's principal climbs was 1865, and, after that, little of note was done until Mr. Graham's expedition of 1883. His claim to have climbed Kabru (24,015ft.), has been the subject of somewhat animated controversy, but is supported by Mr. Douglas Freshfield, who was lately in the neigbourhood of Kabru. Sir Martin Conway followed in 1892, and climbed Pioneer Peak (22,600ft.), which he claimed as a record on the ground that Mr. Graham's ascent was not sufficiently well attested. No such elevation was attained in the expedition of 1895, in which Dr. Norman Collie accompanied the late A. F. Mummery or in Mr. Freshfield's remarkable tour; but Dr. and Mrs. Bullock-Workman have done better. Their objective was a peak of 24,486ft. They attacked it from a camp pitched at 19,365ft., but had to turn back without reaching the summit, the actual altitude attained being determined barometrically at 23,294ft., which constitutes a record in the opinion of some controversialists.

As to the future of Himalayan climbing it is almost equally to be sanguine and despondent. The political considerations which limit mountaineering enterprise in that part of the world will, no doubt, be ultimately removed. But there is no immediate prospect of their removal; and they are by no means the only difficulties which climbers have to encounter. The country to be traversed before the high altitudes can be reached is not as a rule agreeable. Major Waddell has described how one of his own expeditions led him through a forest infested by leeches which attacked him fiercely, almost as mosquitoes might. In a country in which there are not only no inns, but no inhabitants, the problem of supplies is necessarily grave and it is the graver, because of the nature of the rations required by the coolies by whom the supplies have to be carried. They insist upon rice, which is a bulky article of food, and they are reluctant and timorous mountaineers, liable to mountain sickness, and blind to the advantages of beginning the day's work at an early hour. To start about ten o'clock, after a leisurely hot breakfast, is their ideal, and they are disposed to mutiny or desert when the sahib interferes autocratically with their luxurious habits. Of such material the climber can obviously make but little. By degrees, however, the material may improve or better material may become available. Picked Gurkhas, if the military authorities would allow it, might, be trained, at any rate, to the level of good Alpine porters and there are some excellent men among the native explorers already alluded to. Their help, already to a certain extent procurable, should eventually do much to diminish the obstacles in the climber's path, with the result that the question of the accessibility of the giants of the Himalayas will not be very different in kind from the question of the accessibility of the major peaks, if not of the Alps, at least of the Andes and the Caucasus. They have dangers of their own, due mainly to the greater frequency of avalanches, but these are dangers which the experienced climber will know how to minimise if he cannot altogther avoid them, and, for the rest, the question will be mainly one of mountain sickness. The efficacy of that bar to the very highest altitudes can only be tested by experiment. The experience so far acquired justifies no certain inference It is a fact, however, that mountain sickness tends to become less formidable as mountaineers gradually learn to train themselves and to economise their energies. At one time an attack of the malady was a usual incident of an ascent of Mont Blanc, but Zurbriggen did not suffer from it on Aconcagua, which is 8,000ft. higher than Mont Blanc. On grounds such as these Mr. Freshfield and other climbers have based a prediction that Kanchenjunga itself will not always remain a virgin summit. Time will show, and our belief is that time will give the verdict in its favour.—The Field.

"THE FINE YOUNG BENGAL GENTLEMAN."

Air.—The fine Old English Gentleman.

THE other day, while looking through an old volume of The India Sporting Review, dated June, 1845, we came across the following effusion: "Young Bengal" sixty years ago seems to have been much as we find him in the present year of grace.

I'll sing you a new song, made by a whimsical old cock,
Of the fine young Bengal Gentleman all from the parent stock;
A different "genus homo" altogether from his dad—
Be he Moosulman or Hindu—is this enlightened lad:
The fine young Bengal Gentleman all of the present day.

Paternity sports cotton hose to keep his old shanks warm,
In boots and breeks "enlightened" doth now encase his form,
And turbans, too, give place to hats and caps of various name;
But whatever change externals show the inner man's the same
Of this fine young Bengal Gentleman all of the present day.

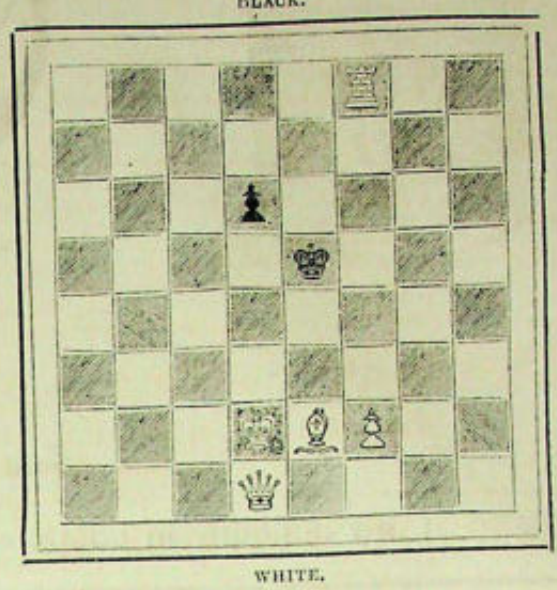
'Tis nuts to see him in the field, when on pig-sticking bent—
He with the line the cover beats on doughty deeds intent;
Instead of driving out the boar for his mounted friends to ride,
He coolly shoots him, and commits in this wise suis-cide:
Does the fine young Bengal Sportsman all of the present day.

The dresses and the vanities of the Christians to assume,
Is easy, and 'twere easy too for their virtues to find room;
But the binding of the work alone doth catch our young friend's eye—
The gem that sparkles bright within he idly passes by:
Does the fine young Bengal Gentleman all of the present time.

In one respect he differs, too, from his ancestors of old,
For they were finished gentlemen, as he needs scarce be told;
To poor and rich alike polite, and courteous in style,
'Neath natural urbanity they ever hid each wile:
Did the fine old Bengal Gentleman all of the olden time.

Now none can tax our rising youth with any such deceit,
At Cover side or on Race Course, or wherever be the meet;
The modesty of merit's missed—though merit may be there;
And where the polished sires had blushed, the enlightened sons but stare:
Like fine young Bengal Gentleman all of the present day.

Sir Joseph Hawley was occasionally very out-spoken. Not long before his death the Jockey Club had rejected some of his proposals for the amelioration of the Turf. At dinner that evening Sir Joseph, in his wrath, proclaimed that the senate was composed of rogues and fools.



"And under which category do I come?" inquired a well-known baronet, still living.

"Upon my soul," was the rejoinder, "I think you're about half and half."

(a) This looks premature. Black's game is not sufficiently developed for a successful attack. (b) We should have preferred exchanging Queens. (c) Much better than checking at R 5, as White now threatens Kt to K B 4 with telling effect. (d) To prevent Black posting his Bishop at K 3. (e) Had he played B to K 3, White could have taken B with B, and in answer to K takes B checked with the Kt at K B 4, winning a piece. (f) Threatening Kt to Kt 3 and P to Kt 5, after which Black's game is hopeless.

SOLUTION TO DOUBLE DUMMY PROBLEM NO. 17.

1. A leads Heart 2; X puts on K; won by B.
2. B leads Diamond Q; Z puts on 5 (covering with K would be fatal); won by B.
3. B leads Heart 10; won by X.
4. X leads Club 4; Z puts on 2; won by A.

The only way of succeeding is by forcing A to win thegtrick.

5. A leads Heart 4; won by B.
6. B leads Diamond 2; Z puts on 6; X trumps; won by X.
7. X leads Club Ace; won by X.
8. X leads Clubs 7; A discards Spade 4; won by Z.
9. Z leads Club 8; A discards Spade 10; won by Z.

At this trick, A is in a fix; any way the result is the same.

At Baden-Baden, some twenty-five years ago, the Great International St. Leger was secured by double Zero, a colt through whose veins coursed some of the stoutest of Yorkshire blood. Closely related to the celebrated Voltigeur on his sire's side, and claiming kinship with another winner of the great Doncaster event through his dam's pedigree, it was only fitting that he should win this St. Leger, and maintain the family reputation for staying.

Olive, the dam of Double Zero, went through a series of adventures before becoming a stud matron Her first appearance on the Turf was in a selling race at Brighton, where she failed to score, and was claimed by Count Stephen Batthyany, who despatched her to Hungary. In the course of a few months Olive was purchased by a Mr. F. Andre, and then the Austrian-German War of 1866 broke out.

Shortly afterwards, her new owner rode the mare in the battle of Oswieczum, in Gallicia, when, chancing to get separated from his company, he was pursued by a picket of Austrian Lancers. To avoid capture, Andre rode to the banks of the Vistula, and although the water lay fully twenty feet below, the gallant animal jumped fearlessly. Horse and rider were separated by the impact, but both escaped the Austrian shots, though Olive, on losing sight of her master—who was making for the German shore—swam back to her foreign home.

Though captured by the Austrians, it was impossible for any of them to ride such a high-spirited animal, and she was constanly changing owners until she was eventually purchased by Count Lemberg, then well known in Leicestershire as a bold horseman. The count ran Olive in a hurdle race, and then tried her with the hounds, but she was quite unmanageable, and was sent to the stud Believing her to be barren, the count gave her to Prince Louis Rohan, in whose paddocks Olive foaled Double Zero.

THE BEST OILS FOR MOTOR CARS.

Wilburine for cylinders .. Rs. 6-8 per gallon Tin. | Valvoline for Bearings, etc. ... Rs. 5-0 per gallon Tin.

Extract from the "Autocar."

LUBRICATING OILS.—[2422]—It may be instructive to your numerous readers to have the experiences of a motor car experimentalist on the behaviour of lubricating oils for motor work. In the first onset I tried various sorts of oils, all of which left deposits of carbon and gumming matter in the cylinders and valves. These deposits are serious drawbacks, not only to the working of the pistons and valves, but also interfere with the proper sparking at the ignition plugs. I then tried the Valvoline Oil Co.'s oils, using "Wilburine" for the cylinders and "Valvoline" for the bearings, etc.; these being quite pure mineral oils, no deposits either of carbon or gumming matter were left. Every time the pistons, etc., have been examined they were quite bright, clean and well lubricated. The valves also keep in good condition and require very little regrinding. I have been quite free from sparking troubles since using the above lubricants. Any dust that alights on the working parts is easily wiped off, whereas with other oils dirt stuck fast through gumming.

Very much smaller quantities of these oils ("Wilburine" and "Valvoline") about one-third to one-quarter, are required, which more than balances the extra first cost. The wearing surfaces are besides in a magnificent condition. These advantages —viz., high-class lubrication, freedom from deposit in cylinders, gum in bearings, absence of sparking troubles, are too important to be neglected by any motorist.

There is a tendency to use various greases, instead of oils. Engineers have over and over again proved that greases give much greater frictional losses than oils; with motor car engines and bearings the lubricant that gives the least possible friction is the best.

I have referred to the advantages the motorist gets. I will mention another advantage these oils have to those whom the motorist passes, viz., the absence of the fried-fish-shop smell so often noted. Several persons have been very much struck by the absence of smell; even when the car has been standing for some time with the engines running, no trace of offensive odour has been apparent to the bystanders.

I mention these experiences, having no interest in the Valvoline Oil Co., that others may be benefited and save themselves trouble and their neighbours some annoyance.

SOME MOTOR CAR MATTERS.

SPEAKING at a meeting of the Council of the Hunters' Improvement Society during the show week, Sir Walter Gilbey expressed the reassuring belief that the motor car so far from undermining the position of the carriage horse and the hack would ere long be productive of good results. In that famous horse-breeder's opinion the improvement of motor cars and the advocacy of motorists is calculated to stimulate a spirit of rivalry among horsemen with the consequence that more attention will be paid to the carriage horse and the hack. And he said, what no sane man will deny, that while ladies were conscious that they look better on horseback than they do in motor car, smothered in protective garments against dust and wind, they are not likely to renounce the saddle for the motor: the same cogent argument holds good in respect of the well turned out carriage. The invention of a machine that does not tire, can be taken out day after day without hurt and which boasts a decreasing disposition to break down at inconvenient and unexpected junctures, has admittedly gained great headway in England among those who can afford the expensive luxury of a first-class car: but we do not observe that carriage horses have become appreciably cheaper nor that they are any easier to obtain than they were five years ago; nor are there any indications that carriage horse breeding is otherwise than in an increasingly flourishing state as witness the "record" tale of entries for the recent show of the Hackney Horse Society in London. The increasing popularity of the motor car, it is true, is imposing fresh obligations upon horse owners and obliging a higher standard of education and manners among horses for use by road. We noticed in a recent home paper a case in which a county court judge, in deciding a question of horse warranty, held that the familiar clause "quiet to ride and drive" must now and hereafter receive a broader construction: he ruled that a horse so warranted must be one who preserves his self-control and equanimity in the face of the rushing motor car and the electric tram car. Though our sympathies are entirely with the horse who hates the rushing mystery that seems about to sweep him off the face of the earth, we cannot fail to recognise the justice of that county court judge's new definition of "quiet to ride and drive." If the motor car, as it certainly appears to be, is becoming weekly more numerous in the country roads of England as in English towns, then it is manifest that a horse which will not face a common object of the roadside, is not warrantable as quiet. Heretofore, as advertisements of horses for sale have shown us, sellers have made a point of the fact when an animal has been schooled to endure these terrors: but not a little trouble has arisen through the circumstance that the horse with perhaps pardonable narrowness of mind, accepts the motor car as an admissible incident of town work and street scenery, but will none of it in the country road. It is a little curious that the same horse should regard the machine from two diametrically opposite points of view accordingly as he encounters it in town or country, but the fact remains that he does. We may account for it by supposing that one abomination more or less counts for nothing in the whirl and chaos of street traffic as seen by the equine eye, while anything so overwhelming in its aggression and so out of harmony with peaceful surroundings is objectionable to equine standards of propriety in the country. Whatever the explanation, many disputes have arisen over the conduct of horses which, warranted and proved indifferent to the motor in the town, have demonstrated in the country an antipathy to the same, ruinous to shafts, and shattering to nerves.

It is many months now since the rabid anti-motor spokesman committed diatribes and floods of invective and warning to print. The violent hostility awakened by the last motor car Act has subsided into gloomy resignation and the motor car man has responded to this more indulgent attitude by getting himself fined with less frequency than was his wont. His less common appearance before the bench may perhaps be due to the greater elasticity now allowed him in the matter of speed; or it may be due to a conscience suffering from a number plate shrieking his identity in four-inch letters fore and aft: or both these factors may be operative in keeping him within the law. A judicious tendency to recognise the corrective influence of the press was made manifest at the General Meeting of the Automobile Club held on 10th March. The Earl of Shrewsbury moved a resolution to the effect that nobody engaged in the motor car trade and no journalist should be eligible for a seat on the Club Committee. That motion was promptly rejected: we do not know how many journalists are members of the club, but the "trade" is strongly represented and the circumstance that the motor car interest has its own journals—very well conducted journals too—will explain the rejection. Another motion to the effect that it is a violation of club etiquette for any member of a club to discuss any affairs of his club and especially of his committee in the press met the same fate. Now, such a motion as this latter would in any ordinary social club, be carried without a dissentient voice if it occurred to anybody that it was necessary to bring it forward. An ordinary club is a private body and the members would be justly irate if its private affairs were made public property by a member from whatever motive. The Automobile Club, however, stands upon a widely different footing: it is a social club to the extent that it has a club house of its own and is conducted by the orthodox machinery, but its functions are entirely distinct from the functions of an ordinary club. It has appointed itself the ruling body of the motor car interest: it has asserted a certain authority and its authority exercised with a discretion all acknowledge as eminently praiseworthy and in the public interest has been accepted by motorists. It is, as far as conditions of such widely dissimilar interests allow, what the Jockey Club is to the English Turf and, in less degree, what the Cyclists' Touring Club is to the cyclist. Under such conditions of responsibility-self-assumed, the Automobile Club can hardly claim that the proceedings of its committee or of itself as a club should be conducted with the privacy respected in the proceedings of the Bachelors, the "Rag" or any other club of kindred character. The motion that aimed at making an offence—in criminal code of clubs—of giving publicity to the committee's proceedings was a radical error and it was properly defeated. If the Automobile Club elected to make over its authority to the Motor Union of Great Britain, nobody could complain if it followed up the step by claiming the right to reticence as to its subsequent doings: but a ruling body which denied the right of all and sundry to criticise in these days is an impossibility.

Sporting Notes.

FURTHER reports of the Rangoon Spring Meeting appear in our Turf columns to-day. The second day's racing was much marred by torrential rain which came down as the proceedings opened, and had more than a little to say to some of the results, causing a few falls—luckily unattended by serious damage and being responsible for some upsets, notably in the Rangoon Derby, in which the street corner tip, Forlorn Hope, having been left at the post, the winner turned up in High Flyer, who served up a big surprise and the big totalisator dividend of Rs. 171 per five-rupee ticket. It was not by any means a favourite's day and messieurs les bookies ought to have had a good day; though it is quite possible that they would deny the soft impeachment.

Apropos of bookmakers we may as well throw a little more light on the difference of opinion between them and the Stewards which led to the "strike" alluded to in our last issue. The fact that the Stewards tried to put the screw on in the shape of an enhanced fee, that the books in a body decided to stand down, and that three firms eventually did pay might sound as if that astute body had practically acknowledged defeat. Not so, however; they seldom or ever give in when once they have taken a stand, and in this instance they scored hugely over the Stewards as thus: Ten bookmakers refused to pay Rs. 300 each per day, and the Stewards remaining firm in their decision to take that amount or none, the bookies arranged for three of their number to bet and the rest chipped in on the "share and share alike" principle. Hence we found Messrs. Goldspink, Coutts and Chard betting for the ten, the Club losing Rs. 1,600 a day and the three bookies still raking in all the money there was to be taken from the public. Sagacious Stewards; simple bookies!

On the third they there was more boiling over of pots on some of the little things the public were so sweet on: for instance the success of Chitsway in the Indo-Burma Handicap was an unmitigated surprise to the general body of backers and a very welcome windfall to the two enterprising punters who had taken a ticket each on the horse's chance in the totalisator and drew therefrom Rs. 310 each. On the day the Tote dividends were good, and again the bookmakers, as represented by "the dauntless three," raked in the public money in the busiest manner possible from start to finish.

The racing has shown one thing, and that is the urgent need of very careful attention to the course, which, in addition to being badly drained, has a sharp and dangerous turn which, in the opinion of many, was the direct cause of the fatal accidents connected with the first day's racing. These and other matters will doubtless be taken up in due course; meanwhile the Stewards are to be congratulated on the results of their enterprise in respect of the new stands and other improvements.

The Burman jockey, who was thrown on the first day when Regina bolted in the Larrikin Plate, succumbed to his injuries we are sorry to hear.

The Beresford Cup Polo Tournament (Simla) has been postponed until the 6th June. Entries will now be received up to the 30th May.

In our issue of date we publish the programme of the Mussoorie Races, which are to be held on the 9th and 11th June. The second entries close on the 20th instant and the final entries on the 4th June. There are six races of Rs. 200 on the first day and seven of a similar value on the second. The programme has been carefully framed and ought to attract good entries.

We remind owners and trainers that the first entries for the Mysore Races close on the 15th instant.

First entries for the Civil Service and Army Cups are published in our Turf columns to-day. The Civil Service has drawn nine, among which we find Bess, Idle Bell, Housemaid II., Not Yet and Don John. The Army Cup has drawn no less than thirty-seven, most of which are of the usual unknown quantity class. Second entries for both races close on the 1st July.

Besides reports of the racing at Rangoon, our Turf Columns this week contain details of the Darjeeling and Ootacamund Meetings, and the Second Open Gymkhana at Meerut.

Mr. R. S. Sievier has brought an action against Sir James Duke, Bart., arising out of some words spoken by the latter at the Raleigh Club. The case was to come off at the end of last month.

According to "Ranger" of the T. S. and D. News, Londoners are to be provided with a new social club on the lines of Ranelagh and Hurlingham, a large estate just ripe for development having been bought by a wealthy syndicate with a view to providing for sportsmen and women amusement similar to that to be had at the London clubs named, with the additional attraction of being in a pleasant part of Surrey. The park is between Mitcham and Sutton, not far from the Epsom coaching road, and already plans have been drawn up for the provision of polo, tennis and croquet grounds, while a considerable space will be set apart as an enclosure in which driving competitions, horse and dog shows, and other out-door gatherings can be had without interference with other sections of sport. Should all go well, the park will be one of the most pleasant resorts within driving distance of London, for its natural attractions are great. The district is a rapidly growing one, development during the last few years having been enormous.

Nothing gives greater pleasure than the tempering of justice with mercy, and turfites of all classes will be glad to hear that the Jockey Club have seen fit to withdraw the "warning-off" ban so far as Rickaby and Lester Rieff are concerned. In the case of the latter, this is not, perhaps, a matter of much moment, for, owing to his weight, race-riding meant a life of severe deprivation, and, having settled down as a farmer in California, he is not in the least likely to wish to return to England even were it known that his license would be restored to him. But with Rickaby the case is altogether different. During his period of "rustication" he remained faithful to Newmarket, and the notification that he is at liberty to use the famous Heath again doubtless means that at no very distant date he will be allowed once more to follow his vocation. All who admire good horsemanship will hope that such may be the case.

Now that Russia and Japan are at war matter of the best type of cavalry horse comes up for the discussion in a fresh and potent form, for the reason that it is possible, from the magnitude of the interests involved and affected directly and indirectly, that much of the Eastern world may be set by the ears. It is known that Japan has few horses. It is not so long ago that there were only a few thousands in that collection of islands. Russia, on the other hand, owns an enormous number of horses, not many of them large, but most of them well suited to the uses of the soldiers who ride them. Indeed it has been said that the much-dreaded Cossack troops of Russia have been made by their mounts, not their mounts by their riders. The Cossacks are known as among the most mobile troops in the world. This is a point which should be remembered in this discussion. Here is another bearing along much the same line.

When Oom Paul made up his mind that some day or other he would send an ultimatum to the British suzerain he wisely set about the preliminary mobilization of his troops. From Australia and elsewhere small thorough-bread stallions were procured in large numbers. These were mated with the Basuto and other native pony mares and the resulting remounts surprised the world with the rapidity with which they transported their rather heavy riders from point to point. It cost the British nation blood and treasure to learn the lesson, and the result is well worth noting. On demand of Lord Roberts some 40,000 horses were purchased for British troops in South Africa. These were not heavy horses. They were wanted strong-backed, short-legged, wiry, compactly built and standing between 14-1 and 15 hands. Many such animals were found in Hungary, Russia and the United States. Of course many larger horses were also bought, but the main demand was for these small animals.

The reasons advanced were that small horses of wiry nature can get over as much ground as larger ones and do it on less food and with less trouble. As military evolutions must now be performed it is hard to keep the forage trains up with the forward line of march. The foot soldier, not being well accustomed to the saddle, gets on and off a small horse more easily than a tall one. Other reasons for the preferment of such small horses might be named, but these are sufficient to show why the change has overtaken the demand for army horses and why the aims of governments have also been transferred from the production of the large to the small.

The most recent effort toward the breeding of these horses is reported from the United Kingdom, where it has been announced that the best possible way in which to produce the required sort is believed to be mating thoroughbred stallions with pony mares, that is mares really belonging to the pony breeds, the Welsh, Exmoor and the like. It is announced that by such unions a small wiry animal will be bred that in the field will get over all the ground required, that will do it on little carried food, find a living for itself almost wherever placed and be easy to mount and dismount from, standing much hardship and preserving a great degree of health at all times.

To breed such animals from the native ponies of South Africa operations have already been begun. Inquiries have already been ordered renewed in the Canadian Northwest. Hundreds of Texas, Montana, Wyoming and Colorado ponies bought during the Boer rebellion are still in use in the Transvaal and Orange River colonies. They seem to have survived unscathed where heavier and softer-bred animals died by the score. Britain evidently means to breed some of the same sort for itself.

Our London Sporting Letter this week gives full details of the Great Metropolitan and City and Suburban Stakes. During the running for the former race, when some seven furlongs from home, St. Patrick's Day struck into another competitor and fell, the result being that Grey Tick and Induction also came to grief. Grey Tick unfortunately fractured a leg and was subsequently shot. The three jockeys, Madden, McIntyre, and Benson, happily escaped injury, the first-named returning on a motor car. The death of Grey Tick is undoubtedly a serious loss to Mr. W. Bass. The horse was purchased early last year for the purpose of leading Sceptre in her exercise, and by doing work with the famous filly improved sufficiently to credit Mr. Bass with the Cesarewitch.

We learn from an American exchange that Arthur Redfern, the highest-paid jockey in America last season, will ride in England next year. At the end of this racing season in America he will make a visit to England and France with his parents. Redfern was offered a large salary to go to England to ride this season, but declined it, as he was under contract with the late Mr. W. C. Whitney, and then followed the E. R. Thomas contract.

We have to thank the Editor of The Polo Annual for a copy of that most useful compilation.

The Lucknow Open Gymkhana fell through.

We recommend such of our readers as are in need of horses, and who can take advantage of the opportunity, to visit Messrs. Milton and Company's stables and look over the shipments recently landed ex steamer Gracchus. The shippers are Messrs. G. Meeke and L. Glance, and our old friend Mr. Oscar Batters, who has not visited the Shiny East for many moons.

The second Gymkhana at Simla, on the 7th instant, attracted a large gathering, Lady Ampthill also being present. There were five events, proceedings opening with the Pony Race, for which there were six entries. Captain Liverton's Cronje won, but was disqualified, and the race awarded to Major Tod's Ayraki. The Wand Race was run off in three heats; the finals provided a close finish between Mrs. McLeod and Mrs. Crocker, the latter winning with Miss Ibbetson third. Twelve couples entered for the Skilful Amazon Competition, which was most exciting. Colonel Read and Mrs. Carnduff beating Captain McConaghey and Mrs. Vandaleur after four runs in the final seat. The Not-at-home Stakes, for which there were ten couples, was won by Captain Courage and Mrs. Morgan. The Marketing Stakes brought the proceedings to a close. Fourteen couples competed, Mr. and Mrs. Carnduff being successful.

The Mahableshwar Polo Tournament was concluded on the 5th instant. In the first round the 29th Lancers beat the 93rd Highlanders by three goals and one subsidiary to one goal and one subsidiary. In the second round the 29th Lancers were beaten by the 33rd Queen's Light Cavalry by six goals to nil and the Government House team, playing a man short, defeated the Baroda team. The finals resulted in a win for the 33rd Light Cavalry, who beat the Government House team.

The Darjeeling Sky Races just over provided one of those pleasant little gatherings so well known in our hill retreat. The racing was excellent and a very fair class of ponies competed; everything went with a swing, no hitch of any sort occurring. In other years this meeting has been strongly supported by the regiment in garrison at Lebong; but this year, owing to the regiment being under orders for home, and having in consequence disposed of all their ponies, they were not able to help with the entries. On the other hand, the Dooars contingent, who very seldom put in an appearance, this time sent half a dozen handy gees and we are glad to see that they appropriated some of the spoils with the aid of Bluebell and the evergreen Arab Commissioner.

Mr. Price's Energy stands out as the champion pony of the meeting, and the way she beat her field in the Kinchinjunga Plate with the solid weight of 12st. on her back, stamps her as a very useful animal indeed. The course was put into nice going order and there was not a single spill all through, although part of the first day's racing was carried out in heavy rain. There was very little wagering all through the meeting and the totalisator returns were very small indeed. The bookmaker present told us that his field money on one of the races was the grand total of Rs. 41! There was rather a poor attendance on the first day; but it was up to the average on the second. Full details of the racing will be found in our Turf columns.

The Lahore Hunt wound up their season with a Point to Point race which teemed with exciting incidents and which was won by Captain W. E. B. Smith on Rover. He was followed home by Miss Collen, who thus secured the Ladies' Prize. Then came the Hunt dinner, which was a most successful feast.

Jockeys Bennett and Carter, now in Australia, are expected back in India in August.

With the object of giving owners a chance of making final selections for the big Mysore meeting, it has been arranged to have three extra days' racing at Bangalore on the 28th instant and 4th and 11th June.

Bob Vinall again acts as starter to the Mysore Races, and Mr. Cursetji Dhunjishaw handicaps.

Dignum and Watson, the trainers, are expected back in India next month. On dit the latter has remarried.

The announcement that a 10ft. 8in. tiger had been shot has, naturally, aroused the interest of sportsmen all over India, especially in view of the fact that it is the record. It has also once again raised the question as to the proper method of measurement—the tip to tip between perpendiculars, or the tip to tip over the curves of the body. "Solid Lead," writing to the Pioneer, says:—

"The paragraph further states, that the measurement was made 'in the usual manner from tip of the nose to tip of the tail following all curves.' This may be the usual method of measuring tigers in the Terai, but is not the one ordinarily adopted in the Central Provinces, where the measurement is usually made between two uprights placed at the tip of the nose and the tip of the tail. The measurements given from the two methods when applied to the same tiger usually show a difference of about five inches, but if the tape be closely pressed to the back of the tiger throughout his length when measuring along the curves, a greater difference will appear. The 10ft. 8in. tiger shot in the Terai, if measured between uprights would not exceed 10ft. 3in. in length. It is a matter of regret that sportsmen have not definitely adopted one method of measurement. There is no doubt that by measuring between uprights there is less scope for inaccuracy, and for this reason it is preferable. The tiger should be placed so as to give the maximum measurement between two vertical sticks held touching the tip of the nose and the tip of the tail. If several persons, measure the same tiger in this method the results will not differ by half an inch, whereas, if they measure following the curves, differences of several inches will appear."

[Quite so, but who is to lay down the rule? Both methods of measurement have adherents, about equally divided let us say; or if opinions preponderate either way probably the "over the curves" will be found to be more numerous; for it is only in human nature for a sportsman to give his trophies the benefit of as many inches as he can, and when he finds that by measuring over the curves his tiger tapes a few inches more than if he measured him between perpendiculars why it's 10 to 1 he will reject the latter method. It is, we are convinced, one of those points on which there never will be agreement, for wherever the "personal equation" comes in there must always be differences.—Ed., I. F.]

Sailing men always thought that Mr. Vanderbilt was well equipped with the two magnificent steam yachts that he has at present in American waters; but yachting creation is to be "licked" with the new twin-screw vessel Warrior that is being completed for him just now at the famous yard of the Ailsa Shipbuilding Company at Troon. She is Watson designed, and as she lies in the dock receiving her finishing touches, she is as fine a specimen of a boat as could be dreamed of. Schooner-rigged, with a massive funnel, her graceful clipper bow is surmounted by the figure of an ancient warrior clad in mail and carrying over his shoulder a gleaming double-edged sword. The boat has a fine sheer, and there is a great overhang aft. When the vessel is delivered Mr. Vanderbilt will have a yacht that cost him close upon £100,000. She has on board all the latest appliances provided for the safety and good working of ships, and for securing the comfort of those who go to sea in them. Magnificent apartments are being fitted for Mr. and Mrs. Vanderbilt, and the guests will find their quarters palatial. The Warrior's draught is about 15ft. aft, and her crew will number forty. Her annual cost, to say nothing about renewals and repairs, docking, etc., will amount to over £30,000. The Warrior is to go to Norway, and will afterwards cruise in European waters before being brought to America. Mr. Vanderbilt, who is now in England, takes great interest in the shaping of his new ship, on which an army of workmen are now engaged, including a batch of specially-hired French cabinet-makers, who are sumptuously arranging the cabin walls and upholstering the yacht.

Androcles and his lion are nowhere, writes a Paris correspondent. The record has been beaten by the sick tigress and M. Dramard, the "vet" of Mr. Bostock's menagerie in Paris. The tigress's own name is Paris. She has a husband named Depew. And Mr. Depew is a jealous husband, so jealous that he has given her a dreadful mauling because of some flirtations with a neighbour. From this barbarous behaviour of his, it is clear that Stripes has not yet acclimatised himself to the moral atmosphere of Paris. When Stripes does that, Stripes will become more of a philosopher. Well, Madame Stripes had to be surgically treated. It was no easy matter. Chloroform was out of the question. No tiger ever yet has been chloroformed. [Yes, in the Calcutta 300 years ago.—Ed.] For all one knows it might have taken all the chloroform in Paris to put Madame Stripes to sleep. She had to be lassooed. Eight men assisted in the process. Among them was the tamer, Mr. Miller, whom she nearly killed a few days ago. The abscess in the left paw was opened. A bad wound in the shin bone was dressed. Madame Stripes groaned a little. To keep her quiet they gave her a chunk of wood to play with. It became weak as a straw in her awful mouth while the "vet" exercised his skill on her vast limb, with all its fearful "symmetry." "Did he who made the lamb make thee?" Certainly. The "sinews," of her heart relaxed, and at last Madame Stripes, turning her great head round, tried to lick with her tongue the operator's hand. The paw has been poulticed and bandaged. The patient is getting on most satisfactorily. And she takes her milk (milk!) diet like a Christian.

The aims and objects of the Society for the Protection of Birds should appeal to every sportsman and reader of The Indian Field. We have before pointed out that practical sympathy need in no way clash with the operations of the shooter of feathered game, and if any there be who harbour doubts on this head they have only to ask for a statement from the Honorary Secretary in India of the Society's objects. In this connection we invite attention to a letter from Mr. William Jesse which appears in our Correspondence columns, and commend, to the practical support of our readers, the appeal which he makes in the concluding paragraph thereof.

The Calcutta Clay Pigeon Club opened its season on the 8th instant. There was a fair muster of members, most of whom seemed to think the trap was an improvement on the hand flingers hitherto in use. It is probable the traps will be adopted.

When the King was in Portugal last year he offered a prize of a silver salver to be shot for at the principal pigeon shooting club. This year the cup has been won by the King of Portugal, who is a first-class shot, and King Edward has sent a congratulatory telegram to his Royal brother.

Athletic Notes.

THE Honorary Secretary of the Calcutta Football League has favoured us with a copy of the Handbook for the current year. It is priced at four annas per copy, and for that modest outlay the man interested in football generally and the League in particular gets a large amount of useful and interesting information comprising, among other things, the League rules, results of the competitions since 1898, laws of the game, plan of the field and the League fixtures for the season about to begin.

A regatta will be held on the lake at Ootacamund on the 23rd May, entries closing on the 16th instant. The list of events include Men's Pairs (Lady cox), Mixed Pairs (Lady cox), Men's Pairs (Lady cox), Mixed Fours Double Sculls (Lady cox), Mixed Double Sculls, a Sculling Race and a Bath Tub Race. Major Bagnall is the Sub-Secretary.

Mr. M. Mertig, the energetic Joint Honorary Secretary of the Calcuttta Revolver Club, went home this week on a short holiday; Mr. J. E. Vallance, his fellow "Joint," carries on the Secretaryship alone during his absence.

The annual general meeting of the Colombo Rowing Club was held at the Boat House, Slave Island, on the 22nd instaat. Mr. V. A. Julius presided, and others present were:—

Messrs. D. M. Hanna (Honorary, Secretary), F. M. Simpson, W. C. Macready, C. W. Horsfall, H. S. Dix, J. G. Garratt, A. L. Hine Haycock, and E. R. Porteous (Honorary Treasurer).

The minutes of the last meeting were read and confirmed. The Treasurer then submitted the statement of accounts which was duly passed, and it was agreed to pay off Rs. 500 of the loans still due on account of the new Boat House. On the receipts side of the accounts for 1903, the balance brought forward from 1902 was Rs. 1,277·19, entrance fees Rs. 260, subscription Rs. 250, sale of refreshments Rs. 311·40—total Rs. 2,098·59. Against this wages, upkeep and repairs took up Rs. 1,072·55, water, light, etc., Rs. 59·94, cost of refreshments Rs. 212·03, stationery and postage Rs. 62·05, Madras visit (payment to the C.C.C.) Rs. 13·85, cost of Regatta 1903, Rs. 69·05, and balance carried forward Rs. 609·12—total Rs. 2,098·59. The new Boat House account came up to Rs. 1,500.

Mr. G. Hathorn and Mr. V. A. Julius were re-elected President and Captain, respectively; Mr. H. S. Dix was elected Honorary Secretary in place of Mr. D. M. Hanna, resigned; and Mr. E. R. Porteous was elected Honorary Treasurer. The following were re-elected to serve on the Committee:—Messrs. G. H. Garratt, A. A. Hankey, F. M. Simpson and E. R. Williams (re-elected) and Messrs. D. M. Hanna and F. R. Watson in place of Messrs W. T. Highton and John Scott who have left Colombo.

Our Bombay Correspondent writes:—Another six weeks will see the opening of the cricket season in Bombay, and as far as the Gymkhana are concerned, the prospects are none too rosy. During the past month or so quite a number of well-known local players have gone on leave to Europe, and as far as I can see at present new players of promise are conspicuous by their absence. In past years we have been able to rely on the British regiment stationed here to supply two or three good players, but the Cheshires do not appear to have any good cricketing officers in Bombay, while further losses to local cricket have resulted from the departure for the north of the 117th Maharatta Infantry. Captain McDonald and Mr. F. St. George Gratwicke have arranged an excellent list of fixtures for both the first and second elevens of the Gymkhana, and no pains have been spared to get the playing pitch in good condition. Last season, it will be remembered, very few matches were played on the new pitch owing to the way in which the water used to stand about on it. In the interval, however, every effort has been made to effect a remedy, and there is every prospect of success. Your readers have already been made acquainted with the dates of the annual matches between the Presidency and Parsees. The chances of the Europeans being able to put a strong eleven in the field are very remote, but one cannot tell what will happen between now and August. I would rather, therefo e, defer any remarks on this matter until a later date, when I hope to be able to allude to a rosier state of things than exists at present.

The chief interest in Bombay is now centered in the forthcoming Aga Khan Hockey Tournament, which will be in full swing before this note appears in print. The teams entered this year number seventeen—four less than last year—and followers of the game are looking forward to some exciting encounters. The Gymkhana have entered a team, and its chances of success though not good are not hopeless. When the season opened it looked as if they would be able to put a fairly decent team in the field, but this anticipation has not been justified by results. From among the large number of men who are members of the Gymkhana, I am certain a good team could be drawn. But what does really happen? The same eleven can never be got together for two matches in succession, the Committee are always making the mistake of chopping and changing men about from one position to another, and the result is defeat upon defeat—even schoolboys who have only just started the game beat them. A night or two since I went down to see the Gymkhana play the Grant Medical College, and was very disappointed with their miserable exhibition. The College won by six goals to one—on their play they deserved to have won by more. The Gymkhana will possibly beat the R. G. A., against whom they are drawn, but I much doubt if they will get much further in the rounds. As to the coming tournament, the present holders, the Cathedral School Old Boys, should just about win. They show plenty of combination, are fast, and will be trained up to the minute.

The yachting season is now fast drawing to a close, but interest in the weekly races, held by the Royal Bombay Yacht Club, continues to be well sustained. Saturday's races were sailed in a fresh to a light breeze from the north-west. The "A" class yachts sailed a course of between thirteen and fourteen miles, the race being won by Melody, who got the better of Sapphire by 35 seconds, the finishing times being as follows:—

Football in Calcutta has begun already. Last Saturday Dalhousie, on their own ground, met and defeated a Calcutta F. C. team, composed entirely of recruits, by no less than six goals to one.

The Y. M. C. A. journeyed to Chinsurah and played a game against the local club, with whom they made a draw of it of a goal each.

A "boxing" match, we see, has been arranged between Brophy and Tully, and it is to come off in Madras. ! Patrons of the noble art in Calcutta, who have had time to get over their disappointments in respect of these boxers, will smile and wish their fellow sportsmen all the enjoyment they can get out of the treat in store for them.

The Lord Provost of Glasgow, Sir John Ure Primrose, is a strong advocate of amateurism in football, and feels strongly that the Queen's Park, Scotland'sonly leading amateur team, is often in sad straits for young blood to maintain the supply of players as the older members drop out and vacancies occur. With the object of fostering the Association game in the schools, he called a meeting of head masters of secondary schools, which he maintains ought to be the feeders of amateur senior teams, and this meeting was held in the Municipal Chambers, Glasgow. Sir John presided. His lordship, however, did not get so much support as he expected. Most of those present represented schools in which Rugby has for generations been the traditional school game, and they saw difficulties in inducing their pupils to take up the other code. This feeling was also expressed in the letters read from the head masters of such schools as Fettes and Edinburgh Academy; but Dr. Kerr, of Allan Glens' School, and other head masters gave the scheme their heartiest approval. and, indeed, all the head masters were united in approving the idea that any attempt to raise the status of the Association game was deserving of encouragement. Although no great step forward was taken, the result of the meeting should be for the good of the game, the Q. P. representatives carrying away with them several suggestions worthy of their consideration.

Winchester easily won the Public Schools' Racquets Championship at Queen's Club, West Kensington. Malvern were defeated in the final match by four games to love, as will be seen from the full report given in our London Sporting Letter.

Jack McAuliffe's recent boxing show in Rangoon was successfully brought through, though the house was discouragingly small. Bert Delaney's artistic and clever ball punching turn opened the card and was succeeded by a few sparring exhibitions of more or less merit. Then came the ten rounds between Burridge and McGuinness; but as Burridge had to retire in the first round owing to a dislocated thumb, the spectators were disappointed. The exhibition between McAuliffe and Delaney began well, but got no further than the second round, in which Delaney was disqualified for persistent holding.

The Rev. A. N. Cooper, the Vicar of Filey, who has achieved some notable feats of pedestrianism, and is known as "The Walking Parson," whose interesting book was reviewed some time ago in the columns of The Indian Field, left York for France on the 12th ultimo. He proposes to walk to Andorra, a small and quaint Republic between the French department of Ariego and the Spanish province of Lerida. Mr. Cooper in 1887 walked to Rome, a distance of 743 miles. He has travelled on foot across Ireland, from Hamburg to Paris, across Belgium and through Spain and he has also walked to Budapest, Monte Carlo, and Venice. The vicar usually covers about 30 miles a day, and his tramps form the subject of interesting lectures, which he delivers to the members of his congregation.

The Calcutta Golf Club has arranged for the annual competition for the St. Andrew's Silver Tankard to take place on the 13th and 14th instant.

We commend to the attention of Calcutta footballers the special article by "Touch," which will be found further on.

Messrs. John Dewar and Sons, Limited, have just received, through their Head Office at Perth, further substantial orders from His Majesty the King for their famous Scotch whiskies, which is continued proof of His Majesty's satisfaction with the well-known "Dewar" Brand, and evidence, if such were needed, of Royal connoisseurship in such matters.

The final game in the Beighton Hockey Cup Tournament, played on the Rangers' ground last night, resulted in a win for the Hornets who beat the United Service by two goals to nil. Details in our Hockey column.

London, Friday, 22nd April 1904.

IT is interesting to watch the trend of opinion in Russia and Germany concerning the Anglo-French Agreement. There seems an increasing tendency in the Russian papers to regard the strengthening ties between England and France as helpful to trail the wings of the German eagle, if I may borrow the falconer's phrase. Germany, if her papers represent her true feeling, eyes the agreement with a dismay she knows she ought to conceal while doubting her ability to veil her chagrin. It is curious how the press of the various Powers turn with unanimity to Germany with a how-do-you-like-it sort of expression. Russians talk of an Anglo-Russian agreement—still with an eye on Germany! but the time for that is surely not the present.

After four weeks of troublesome work the ill-fated submarine has been raised and towed into Portsmouth Harbour. The inquest has been held and a verdict of accidental drowning returned. Practically all the evidence given was that of Captain Bacon. He said that the whole injury was confined to the top of the conning tower, and the only breakage would have been through the hole between the water-tight lid and the part of the tower bent down all round the hole through which the optical tube was fitted: that such a leak could easily have been stopped and that three hours would have been required to fill the vessel through the leak. The bodies of all the crew were found at their stations, that of Mr. Mansergh, the officer commanding, being in the conning tower; and from this circumstance the witness concluded that every man on board fell stunned by the impact of the collision and lay stunned until the rising water drowned them where they lay.

This was Captain Bacon's view of the circumstances under which the collision actually occurred. "About 1-45 P.M.," he said, "I signalled A1 to attack a cruiser about four miles to the south of the Nab. I saw her dive in that direction. From an examination of the top of the conning tower and reports from the divers who examined the bottom of the Berwick Castle, as well as from the direction of the cruiser, I concluded that the submarine was steering south." The Berwick Castle was steering about south-east, and therefore coming up on the starboard quarter of the submarine. The submarine is fitted with an optical tube which gives a view equal to the naked eye. She was also fitted with an electrical apparatus to allow the whole of the horizon to be surveyed. The Berwick Castle was going about nine knots and the submarine about six knots. Under these conditions unless the tube had been revolved so as to be on the beam of the submarine the Berwick Castle would not have been sighted until about 150 feet off. The submarine had the choice of doing two things—(1) of blowing out her tanks, starboarding her helm, and risking a grazing collision on the surface; (2) diving underneath the bottom of the Berwick Castle. The latter was undoubtedly chosen. If the Berwick Castle were sighted 150 feet off, and allowing five seconds for the captain of the submarine to make up his mind, the boat would have struck in exactly the position she was on the top of her conning tower, which was 25 feet below the surface. Had she had about three more seconds, she would have passed clear under the bottom of the Berwick Castle.

Surgeon W. B. Maurice, R. N., answered the question which presented itself to everyone: he thought that the collision would produce sufficient concussion to render all the crew unconscious, they being in a confined space. It may be remarked that notwithstanding their prolonged submersion the bodies were easily identified: for some obscure reason decomposition had been singularly slow.

The extreme swiftness of the Petropavlovsk's sinking gave rise to much discussion: an "authentic account" of the disaster from Petersburg on Saturday told us that it was due to an explosion of the boilers which re-acted on the magazines with the result that huge holes were torn in the hull: this account says that it is officially denied that the Japs had anything to do with the disaster. The Russian General Staff opines that the vessel touched one of the defending mines, and other accounts give us to understand that when the Japanese lured the Russian fleet out of Port Arthur, their destroyers went in and sowed the entrance with mines: and yet other accounts attribute the loss to submarines employed by Japan. The drowning of Vassili Verestchagin, the great Russian painter who was on board the Petropavlovsk, is something more than a Russian loss: he was the most mercilessly truthful among the great artists of Europe.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer made his Budget speech on Tuesday night, and he is pronounced a bold statesman or a creeping cowardly huckster of makeshifts, or anything between as party glasses colour the speaker's vision. The majority seem to think it a straightforward and business-like bit of steering through a rather difficult channel buoyed by Mr. Balfour on the one hand and Mr. Joseph Chamberlain on the other. A penny on the income tax is its most objectionable feature: a shilling per pound on foreign cigarettes its best; but then I pay income tax and I hate cigarettes. It was plain to see that Mr. Austen Chamberlain deplored the loss of the Registration shilling on corn: the loss had been greater than was anticipated. Never was tax removed for less reason nor with less advantage to them that did the removing.

The Government's new Licensing Bill, which was brought and read on Wednesday, does not seem to satisfy anybody. The United Kingdom Alliance condemns it because it curtails the power of the local licensing authorities and enhances the authority of quarter sessions: and because it will strengthen the position of license holders. The National Temperance Federation protests because the bill's "obvious purpose is to meet the demands of the liquor trade to check reduction:" because it disapproves the scheme of compensation and because it curtails the power of local justices. Some license holders, so far as their views have been ascertained, object because the proposed tax would fall on small "pubs" while the richer escaped: others approve the bill as more favourable to their trade than they dared hope: which last I apprehend is reason enough to set the teetotalers screaming.

O these Humanitarians! Their latest freak has been to ask Lord Selborne to allow them to take photographs of boys in the Navy being birched. That they may from such photographs produce pictures wherewith to placard the walls of London and the chief sea ports. They say frankly, these delicately organised beings, that their view is to arouse public opinion on the enormity of caning bad boys. Lord Selborne's answer to this amazing appeal has not transpired, but I suspect it was brief. What would satisfy public opinion would be the appointment of some robust old dame to address the tenderest spots of these faddist idiots with a slipper. Is there any country in the world which would tolerate such rampant idiocy as we do?

After seeing Mr. R. C. Carton's original three-act comedy, "The Rich Mrs. Repton," at the Duke of York's, one can only deplore the omission of providence to furnish this commonplace world with an adequate supply of Mrs. Reptons. Mrs. Repton (Miss Compton) is a widow of matrimonial experience and vast wealth: she is a sort of minor providence with a pardonable bias in favour of good-looking young bachelors: to the end that she may the better promote the welfare of poor but deserving bachelors, she turns part of her London house into a club where her protégés do congregate: and when any gentleman is hard up or wants his new play acted or his sick aunt (or was it sister) sent to Madeira, there is Mrs. Repton cool, calm and slow, but a very present helper. There is a telephone from the Clubroom to her boudoir: and when a member wants advice or help he resorts to that invaluable telephone: and never in vain. It is Mrs. Repton's original comedy with Lord Charles Dorchester that provides the main spring of the play. Lord Charles (Mr. A. E. Mathews) is engaged to Nora Lamonby (Miss Dora Barton), but as he is head over ears in debt, Miss Lamonby's parents feel a pardonable diffidence about sanctioning their marriage. Lord Charles has got a bookie to lay enormous odds against a horse, and if only that horse can pull off the race two months hence, all will be well (copyright phrase). Meantime his duns are many and pressing, can he hold out? What is he to do to keep them off? Consult Mrs. Repton is the obvious step. Mrs. Repton consulted, reflects. She has it! She will dish the duns. She gives out that Lord Charles is engaged to her: thus the duns are held in check till that horse (good old horse!) wins and puts Lord Charles on his financial feet again. The necessary wickedness is supplied by Mr. and Mrs. Fitzroy Marrack (Mr. Dawson Milward and Miss Florence Sinclair) who plot to blackmail Lord Charles in his flat one night: but what chance has wickedness against the ubiquitous and indefatigable Mrs Repton? None. That minor providence was in the next room and overheard all they said: I, for one, was not a bit surprised when she walked in and knocked the Marrack plot sideways. Excuse slang: Mrs. Repton deals rather extensively in—metaphor—and it comes naturally in describing her doings. The piece was very well acted by all concerned. The Bishop of Droneminster (Mr. Charles Allan) who comes on in Act III to expose Mrs. Repton's part (she divorced her brutal No. 1 and ran away with her rich No. 11), did not impress me as a fair example of the episcopal bench: but that is the playwright's fault. Miss Sinclair was very good as the lady blackmailer and Miss Compton as you may guess was perfectly suited with Mrs. Repton's part.

There is verve and go in "Miss Elizabeth's Prisoner" produced at the Imperial on Monday. This "Romantic Comedy" is a dramatised version of an American novel and the epoch is the disturbed time which followed the Declaration of Independence: thus we have an atmosphere thunder charged to work in. The whole action takes place at Philipse Manor near New York and occupies an afternoon and evening and another afternoon a week later: three acts. Captain Harry Peyton Mr. Lewis Waller), a British officer, has gone over to the American side. Wanting a horse he requisitions Miss Elizabeth Philipse's favourite and pays for it in notes: when Miss Elizabeth tears up those notes we foresee trouble for Peyton. It soon comes: she has a bullying lover named Colden, Major in the New Jersey Volunteers (Mr. Norman McKinnel): she does not care much for him, but if he will kill Peyton she will fulfil her promise. Exit Colden blood thirstily. Sound of hoofs without: it is Miss Elizabeth's own horse which has bolted home carrying Peyton wounded and helpless. Miss Elizabeth eagerly takes him in to keep as a prisoner guest till she can surrender him to the British to be hanged as a deserter. In Act II Peyton has so far recovered that he recognises his hostess' sinister intentions and realises that his only chance is to appeal to her affections: he makes love to her and does it for all he is worth: so successfully that when Colden returns, she hides Peyton and says he has escaped. A wretched old marplot, Mr. Valentine (Mr. E. Lyall Swete, joint author of the play), intrudes, and upsets a very progressive love making by telling Elizabeth that Peyton only makes love to her to secure his own safety: he certainly began business to that intent, but by the end of the week he is really in love: so is she. She humiliates Peyton and lets him go as he is now able to ride, then she regrets it and sends her servants to bring him back tied up. Colden is at Philipse Manor when they return with him and his conduct to the man tied and helpless is that of a first class "howler." Elizabeth frees Peyton: then there is a row which is stopped by the sound of approaching troops outside. Colden has time to rejoice in the prospect of seeing Peyton hanged by the new Jersey Volunteers, but of course the men turn out to be Peyton's selected Rebels (or Lee's Light Horse). Exit Colden hurriedly, to let Peyton and Elizabeth come to an understanding. The piece was rapturously received. Miss Grace Lane played up to Mr. Waller, and I have not seen her so well suited with a part for a long time. Mr. Waller was—Mr. Waller—the brave, careless soldier with a touch of swagger is the man he does best; and the excitement of the business kept the audience agog all through. One novelty be noted: Black Sam and Cuff, Miss Philipse's niggers, were played by coloured actors: and very well they did it.

"The Wheat King," also versioned from an American novel, appeared at Apollo on Saturday also. The interest of the play centres on Curtis Jadwin's neglect of Mrs. Jadwin in favour of business. He is a Chicago man and though wealthy has been tempted to try and make a "corner" in wheat. He buys up all the wheat in the world and runs it up to famine prices: fortune Immense, Incalculable, looms ahead: but he forgot one thing, and really the thing was so obvious I wonder his office boy did not point it out. He forgot that more wheat would grow: it grew and Mr. Jadwin was "broke:" being broke, business ceased to interest and he turned to his neglected wife (Miss Esme Beringer) who takes him to her heart again. The least satisfactory scene in the play is that which shows us "The Pit" in Chicago: it might have been a political meeting dissolved in fisticuffs: or a mob dealing with a Welsher: or anything else chaotic and rowdy. Of course it may be a true representation of the Chicago wheat market, but of that I am not qualified to speak. Mr. Murray Carson was convincing as Jadwin, save in this scene: and Miss Beringer made every point an interesting and playable part gave her. There are no other characters particularly worth mentioning, but they two easily sustained the action. The play is very well received.

The Mermaid Society produced Congreve's "Way of the World" at the Court last week for a few nights. The performance was chiefly noteworthy for Miss Ethel Irving's admirable acting as Millamant. The Arm of the Law which has been played to full houses at the Garrick comes off early next month to make way for Mr. W. S. Gilbert's. "The Fairy's Dilemma" which the author describes as an Original Domestic Pantomine: whatever it be we may be quite sure of its originalty. "The Darling of the Gods" is now on the boards of the Hammersmith Theatre as well as His Majesty's. The Kendals seem to be making a suburban tour as they are at the Camden Theatre this week. Sir Henry Irving has revived Tennyson's "Becket" at Newcastle.

The private detective has never enjoyed a good name and the result of the now notorious Pollard case will be to make it a good deal worse. The trial compelled by intervention of the King's Proctor revealed a state of things one can only describe as startling. Mrs. Pollard had separated from her husband who ill-used her and wanted a divorce: Slater's agency, the much advertised, was requested to help, and it was proved that Slater's agents entrapped Pollard into visiting Jersey, plied him with drink and procured commission by him of the offence desired: then wired home to headquarters the expressive word "victory." Headquarters, however, thought the campaign had been conducted on lines a shade too reckless and did not care to face it out in court: but, still anxious to oblige, Mrs. Pollard engaged a shoddy solicitor named Osborn to undertake the collection of "evidence" against Mr. Pollard. Armed with Mr. Pollard's photograph and a supply of cheap old scandals, Osborne went to Plymouth and eventually found a woman of the street who for a consideration consented to "identify" Pollard as one of her clients: and on such evidence it was that Mrs. Pollard obtained the decree nisi which was yesterday revoked.

Various items: Mr. Brodrick's Fourth Army Corps passed plainlessly away on Tuesday after inspection by Lord Grenfell on Wimbledon Common. The deceased Army Corps was twelve months and eighteen days old. Primrose Day was less widely observed than usual yesterday if I may trust my own observation: it struck me that the number of button holes sported in the street was a good deal below last and previous year's displays. A Royal Commission has been appointed to enquire into the alleged prevalence of breaches or neglect of the law relating to the Church of England. A strong deputation on Wednesday waited on the Local Government Board to pray for legislation on behalf of the oyster: it is desired to secure sanitary surroundings for the oyster who, it was eloquently pointed out, is more sinned against than sinning. Remove the contamination which haunts the oyster's dwelling and himself will become pure and above reproach: Mr. Grant Lawson was sympathetic. On the same day Lord Londonderry received a deputation which seeks support to found a National Museum for Wales, Lord Londonderry was sympathetic: not encouraging but he has a partner, Mr. Jorkins--otherwise the Treasury. He would do his best with Mr. Jorkins if the committee would frame a definite scheme—but Mr. Jorkins is notoriously very hard to move from the beaten track. Dr. Jules Rehns of the Pasteur Institute claims to have cured completely a mild case of external cancer by the use of radium; and the success which has followed the application of radium to much graver cases shows that it has a curative effect and that it may prove a valuable remedy. Atkinson, the famous bonesetter, died on Saturday. A "vet" by profession he turned his attention to the human subject and disdaining diplomas made a great and deserved reputation as a bonesetter: he was only fifty years of age. Three notable figures in Sir Henry Thomson, Mr. John Coleman and "Self Help Smiles" have also passed away since I last wrote. Miss de Keyser's private hospital for officers who have to undergo operations, will open next Monday at 9, Grosvenor Gardens as "King Edward VII's Hospitals." Miss de Keyser is the lady whose name will be familiar to you in connection with wounded officers from South Africa.

AMERICAN HORNED GAME.

THIS, the latest, addition to that admirable series, the "American Sportsman's Library" fully maintains the high level attained by its predecessors, and will be found teeming with interest alike to sportsmen and naturalists of all nations; while its low price puts it easily within reach of all readers. In heading our review "American Horned Game" we desire to emphasize the fact that this volume contains an account of all the true hollow-horned ruminants (Bovidæ) found from one extremity to the other of the great American continent. The prongbuck, or "antelope," stands apart from these by the annual shedding and replacement of its horns, as well as by their bifurcate character, while the deer are, of course, broadly distinguished by carrying antlers instead of horns properly socalled.

In spite of the multiplication by many American writers of so-called species out of what are really nothing more than local races or colour-phases, it is not a little remarkable (although it had been often insisted upon) that America really possesses but four species of true hollow-horned ruminants, namely the musk-ox, the bison, the big-horn sheep, and the white, or Rocky Mountain, goat. The first three of these have, or had in the epoch immediately antecedent to the present one very near relatives in the northern ports of the Old World; the Kamchatkan and East Siberian wild sheep and the extinct musk-ox of Northern Asia and Europe being, in our view, specifically identical with their New World representatives. The white goat, on the other hand, appeared to have no very close relative in the Eastern Hemisphere, although it is probably not very far removed from the serows of the Himalayas and other parts of Asia.

None of these four ruminants, it should be observed, have ever succeeded in gaining an entrance into Central or South America; a fact which may be taken as an indication of the comparatively late date of their arrival in the New World, which they doubtless reached by way of the neighbourhood of Behring Strait, when there was free land communication in this region between the two hemispheres. Now all these mammals, together with horses, many kinds of deer, the mammoth, and the camel tribe, which are, or were, common to the Eastern and the Western Hemispheres, are creatures capable of withstanding a great degree of cold. This will indicate not only that when the ancestors of these groups entered the New World from the Old (or, in some instances possibly, vice versâ, the migration took place in high latitude, when the temperature was probably at least as low as it is at the present day; but it also serves to show why the great majority of the hollow-horned ruminants of the Old World, such as giraffs, okapis, and antelopes (of which a number of types now restricted to Africa and Syria formerly abounded in India, China, and Europe) were never able to reach America. They could not, as a matter of fact, withstand the rigorous climate of the line of communication between the two continents. Why certain more boreal types of Old World hollow-horned ruminants, such as the saiga antelope, and the Mongolian and Przewalski's gazelles, were likewise barred from travelling eastward across the tract now sundered by Behring Strait, is a question which does not admit of such a ready answer. Possibly these creatures were of less roving habits; at any rate we must take it that for some, doubtless sufficient, reason they never did pass into the Western Hemisphere, which is thus strangely contrasted with the opposite side of the globe by its paucity in species of hollow-horned ruminants. What, however, it lacked in regard to species, it fully made up by the enormous number of individuals of some of these species it does, or rather did, possess.

It is of these species that the present volume tells in bright and attractive style, the history; a history which in the case of the bison has been already narrated many times before, but which, on account of its sadness and interest, will well stand at east another repetition.

Not that the story of the bison, as here unfolded by that excellent sportsman, raconteur, and field-naturalist, George Bird Grinnell, is by any means to be regarded as mere réchauffée of the efforts of his predecessors. On the contrary, such a brilliant writer would not be himself had he not much that is new and interesting to tell us even with regard to such a hackneyed subject as the extermination of the American bison, or 'buffalo;' this new matter being derived either from his own personal experiences, or from those of others who have hitherto been but little before the public.

To one point in connection with the bison, we very briefly refer, but in the main our remarks will be chiefly confined to the musk-ox, as being a much less well-known animal.

The point in question is "the popular but erroneous belief that the buffalo performed extensive migrations in spring and fall. This is not true. There were, unquestionably, certain seasonal movements east and west, and north and south yet these movements were never very extended, and constituted nothing more than the very general shiftings which are made by many ruminants between a summer and a winter range. Throughout the country lying between the Saskatchewan and the Missouri River, the buffalo, in summer, moved close to the mountains and even into the foot-hills; and at the coming of winter, with its snows and its bitter winds they moved to the eastward again, seeking the lower ground and such shelter as the ravines and buttes and timbered river valleys of the prairie might afford."

The musk-ox and its hunting are treated of by the Editor of the Series, Mr. Caspar Whitney, who was himself one of the earlier sportsmen to brave the hardships inseparable from a trip into the Barren Grounds in search of this handsome and hardy ruminant. After discanting on the nature of the equipment necessary for such a trip, and the description of rifle and ammunition best suited for sport of this nature, Mr. Whitney enters into the method of hunting musk-oxen. The chances of getting these animals in the Barren Grounds are much less favourable in summer than in winter, owing to the fact that at the former search the sportsman has to travel by canoe and is thus bound to keep to the chain of lakes. In winter, on the other hand, he can go across country. In the one case his chief enemies are mosquitoes; in the other the intense cold and the danger of running short of supplies.

"The distance you make in a summer day of Barren Ground's travel may depend entirely on your inclination, for with the fish and the moving caribou you are fairly well assured against hunger, and the weather is comparatively warm and permits of lingering along the route. It is quite another story in the winter, for then food is always a problem, and every day draws on your slender supply of food. Of course the further you penetrate, the nearer you get to the Arctic Coast, the more likely you are to see musk-oxen; and the faster you travel, of course, the further you penetrate. We averaged about twenty miles a day."

But the author, by no means, confines his attention to the difficulties of travel, or to the successes, or otherwise, with the rifle. He has, on the contrary, much to say with regard to the natural history of the musk-ox; and it is this which gives to his work a much wider interest than it could otherwise claim. Mr. Whitney is fully convinced that the East Greenland musk-ox is entitled to be regarded as distinct from the Barren Grounds form.

"Until 1898," he writes, "Ovibos Moschatus was the only existing type known to either hunter or scientists. In that year, however Lieutenant Peary, the Arctic explorer, killed in Bache Peninsula, Greenland, a series of specimens which, on being sent to the Museum of Natural History of New York, were decided by Professor J. A. Allen as having sufficient distinction to warrant classification. Meantime Rowland Ward, the London taxidermist, had secured, by purchase, a couple of similar specimens from East Greenland which Mr Lydekker* recognized as a new variety, and in honour of Mr Ward named O. Moschatus wardi. Mr. Ward's specimen were secured from whalers who, in turn, got them from trading with natives in East Greenland. Lieutenant Peary's specimens, however, were collected on the ground by himself, and he is certainly entitled to the honour of the new variety bearing his name So Professor Allen rightly thinks, and though he has adopted Mr. Lydekker's name, he reserves O pearyi (Allen) as a provisionary one which may be accepted for the Grinnell Land animal in case it should prove to be separable. This, however, does not appear likely The most distinguishing difference between the O. wardi, as called, or O pearyi, as it should be known, and O. Moschatus, is in the head."

This, we are afraid, "wonst wash." Priority in nomenclature at the present—whatever may be said with regard to the past must be rigidly enforced, or otherwise Zoology would soon be in hopeless confusion; and the Greenland and Grinnell Land musk-ox must be known as O. Moschatus wardi (for it is a race and not a species). But hereby hangs a tale, when Mr Lydekker (as we have the best means of knowing) brought the type specimens of that race to the notice of the Zoological Society, the then Secretary made certain remarks which the describer regarded as altogether uncalled for, and the latter accordingly sent the description of the animal to Nature. Had this event not occurred, it is quite probable that Dr. Allen's name might have had the right of priority!

The two excellent articles on the big-horn or mountain sheep and the white goat are contributed by Mr. Owen Winter, another well known sporting writer; but this review has already extended to such a length, that we are reluctantly compelled to pass over both without further notice.

Although it is repeating a hackneyed phrase to say that this volume "should be in every sportsmans, library," yet it is in this case so eminently true that we are compelled to repeat it. All that is worth knowing with regard to the practical natural history and the hunting of the four species of animals described will be found compressed within the 284 pages of this volume; in which, moreover, there is not a dull or over technical sentence from cover to cover.

* Erroneously "Professor" in the original.

In the "good old days" there were not a few wagers made that would nowadays raise doubts as to the sanity of the contracting parties. Perhaps one of the most daring ever carried out was that made by a certain well-known cross-country rider, who took a thousand pounds to a couple of hundred that, mounted on a favourite hunter, he would beat a friend over a previously named distance of country. The fact that added to the excitement of the challenge was that the well-known rider was to have his hands securely fastened in front.

At the appointed time the twain started. In order to have some slight control over the horse the handicapped one had the reins placed in his mouth. Both successfully negotiated every obstacle until a small river was reached, when the non-challenger's animal refused. In response to the call made upon him by the handicapped rider, however, the other horse safely got over the water, and steadily pursuing his way was a long distance ahead before the "jibber" could be persuaded to cross the silvery streak. After making practically all the running it was in a degree satisfactory to find the tied one successful, for it required not a little nerve under the circumstances to attempt the many stiff jumps that were marked out on the course.

A SHORT HOLIDAY ON THE HILL RANGES OF THE COIMBATORE DISTRICT.

ON a lovely cool morning, we bestrode our bikes and started off for camp in high spirits. After fifteen miles on a good road we halted for a little refreshment and met the pony "jutka" in which the remaining portion of our journey was to be done. On arriving at our first camp, we discovered it was market day, and the villagers were swarming like so many ants. Their noises were appalling, and the smell worse. A large square structure with a small open courtyard in the centre affording the only light was our shelter for the night. Had there been a ganja plant in the middle, it might perhaps have been the abode of an ordinary native gentleman!

The next few days were spent in a bungalow where we had a magnificent view of the Bhowani bridge with its winding river, while arrangements were being made for an extended tour on the hills where supplies were not procurable

An enterprising Monegar (the village headman) received us with great ceremony at the foot of the hills and feasted us regally on sugar-candy and plantains. The house in which he entertained us was adorned with most impossible pictures and quaint transfers. In the back ground amidst a group of admiring shy native women we discovered a curious "Swamy" reported to be the god of the ghaut road. Dug up during the excavation of the road this 'Swamy" had been brought to the house of the Monegar for luck.

Preceded by an almost endless line of coolies we mounted our ponies and began the ascent. The scenery through which we passed as we rode through the graceful bamboos and forests of Albergia and Latifolia was most picturesque The plains appeared to spread out like a gigantic chess board, and the hills in front grew ever higher the nearer we got to them. At last we arrived at an open plateau dotted about with hill cultivation and pretty little hamlets. Our accommodation for the night consisted of a one roomed hut and a tent.

Here we made the acquaintance of the Walas, a wild and uncouth people who cultivate the hill lands. Their still wilder brethren the Sholago's live in the dense forest. Their chief characteristic is their blanket which they use alternately as an overcoat, vest and honey-strainer.

Our next move brought us to an artistically designed bungalow where our time was pleasantly occupied in various little shooting excursions. Here grouse, quail and partridge afforded us amusement and sport, and on no less than three occasions we came across spotted deer but no stag fit to kill.

About two miles distant were the gold mines which we visited with great interest. Escorted by the mining engineer we entered the long dark Adit where we were shown the various strata by the light of a flickering candle. We were also taken to see several shafts, and were shown samples of the gold bearing quartz. Should this enterprise prove a success, there is little doubt that what is now wild, almost inaccessible, forest will become a flourishing settlement. At this camp three tiny tiger cubs were brought to us by the local shepherds. They could not have been more than a week old, but already showed their savage nature with snarls and weird cries. We noticed they had no yellow on them but were of a nondescript grey colour with deep black stripes.

We now entered the heart of the forest, amid a wealth of tall grass, large trees with their lovely contrasts of light and shade with varied gold and brown reminding one of the autumn tints at home.

We were greatly interested in the sandalwood tree here. For an experiment of the whole root system several trees were exposed to view so that we could see the tiny parasitic root through which the sandal tree derives its nourishment. It was interesting to note how the stronger sandal trees feed on the weaker ones, when there is no other root handy, and on one root we found no less than thirty-one of these tiny root parasites.

Down the winding ghaut again and we found ourselves on the lower plateau, feeling that half of our pleasant holiday was over.

About three miles from the taluq head-quarters, there is a tank where we had some good snipe shooting. It was a pretty sight to see the birds rising on every side at the first shot. Crack! Crack!! went the guns and down came the birds. We arrived at camp very muddy and hot, but thoroughly satisfied with ourselves and our morning's sport.

We spent a very enjoyable afternoon in examining a splendid collection of butterflies, known to be one of the finest in Southern India. The Atlas moths—that had been reared from caterpillars were magnificent specimens. The butterflies with hairy legs, and transparent wings resembling bees were most curious, and one which when caught exudes an extraordinary odour interested us greatly. There were also specimens quite unknown to science which were very valuable.

Icilma.

For keeping the skin soft, cool and free from all irritation; there is nothing equal to rose scented Icilma Natural Water Soap. Easiest and silkiest of lathers with any water.

A revelation of what a soap can be. Sold by Army and Navy Stores, Bombay and Calcutta.

From here we made a little expedition to see the Cauvery Falls. Though by no means at their best, at the time of our visit, the beauty and grandeur of the scene was really most impressive, with their ever-changing waters as they dashed over the rocks. The electric works which utilize some of the water of the river for making electricity to carry over ninety miles is well worth visiting, but would take too much space to describe at present.

Another week of camping, and we began our ascent to a totally different range of hills. An endless vista of mountains and valleys was spread before us as we climbed the ghaut, and on crossing the saddle a totally different view of villages and cultivated land met our eyes.

One of the interesting features of the latter half of our tour was the constant sight of what appeared to be large stacks of bamboo taties, but on close inspection they proved to be nests for silk worms and cocoons, showing a thriving local industry.

We were here able to enjoy some more shooting, and on one occasion a florican was shot, a rather uncommon bird in these parts.

Our owl hunt was a very amusing episode. Evidently a homeless owl found its way into our bungalow, and disturbed our rest by flapping its wings against the roof. We accordingly armed ourselves with slippers and other handy articles, and proceeded to shy them at our tormentor. At first he did not seem to mind our efforts to oust him, but after he had been hit about a dozen or more times, and half our articles of apparel, shoes etc., had been deposited in the rafters, a really accurate shot by one of my companions, brought him to earth, and he was speedily despatched by our dog. The owl was then skinned and stuffed by our female taxidermist, and will in due course be sent to the Calcutta Museum.

The cows in this locality are as numerous as bees. A herd of over fifty was driven to our bungalow each day to supply us with milk. Our consumption, however, was not so enormous as might be imagined as each cow only produced about the proverbial "thimbleful."

Our last day on the hills was saddened by the loss of one of our dogs. We went out for our usual morning sport, taking our pack with us, and had several shots at jungle and spur fowl, which were plentiful in the locality. We were returning to camp when a rustling in the brushwood attracted our attention and we heard one of our dogs give a little bark—then all was silent. At that moment a jungle cock flew over our heads which was fired at after which we moved homewards We missed Nelly and in the afternoon went in search of her and on cutting away the undergrowth we discovered the body of our good and faithful animal with her head and neck bitten off. I suppose by a panther, who, no doubt, dropped his prey on hearing the shot when in the act of carrying away our good Nelly. We buried her where we found her, feeling that she had died as she lived a good and trustworthy little pal.

A rubber of cutthroat Bridge was our usual way of amusing ourselves after dinner until overwhelmed by the attractions of bed. One of our hands deserves mention as it contained no card above an eight and with only three trumps.

At some places on our road down from the hills, one looks down a precipice of about five hundred feet without a parapet In fact they surpass the well-known sensation points in Ceylon. Two more marches brought us back to the land of plenty. We now look back with longing eyes to the Nilgiris and wish that its pleasant climate could be carried to the low sweltering plains.

Fishing.

THE WHITE CARP. MIRGIL, AND OLIVE CARP.

THE White Carp (Cirrhina cirrhosa) and Mirgil (Cirrhina mrigala) are much alike and may be at once distinguished from the Labeo family by their slender mahseer-like shape, and the mouth which is quite unlike that of the Rohu. The Mirgil is a very active fish and a six-pounders I caught lately, struck me as giving as much, or more, sport than a ten-pound Rohu. All the three fish whose names I have given above are bottom feeders and take paste, and are caught along with Rohu, and are the same tackle.

From the little I know of the Mirgil I should say it was a decidedly shy biter.

The Olive Carp (Barbus chrysopoma) is a very common fish in Madras and Ceylon: I have not come across it so far in Northern India. Although very insignificant when compared with the Labeos, yet the Olive Carp attains considerably larger dimensions than given credit for by Thomas. Thus I have notes of having caught three in Kantalai Lake, Ceylon, weighing 1¼lbs., 1¼lbs. and 1½lbs. respectively, besides several more of a pound each. Chrysopoma takes a small paste bait freely, but the ordinary Rohu tackle is rather too heavy for these fish, and I prefer fine gut and a small hook. The float should be a light quill with a single shot a few inches from the bait. Either the paste or the shot should just touch the bottom: in clear water I prefer the shot to touch the bottom and the gut between it and the paste to lie flat. The Olive Carp has a fairly capacious mouth and having taken the paste into it, pulls the float under and away.

When a tank is shallow at the edge it is better to erect a staging which will permit one to reach deep water.

Although fishing without a float is quite practicable, it has many disadvantages when fish are biting shyly. There must always be a lot of line between the rod point and the bait, which makes really quick striking almost an impossibility. The broader the shallows between the bank and deep water, the more line must one have out, and the more difficult it is to detect bites. As, however, many occasions may arise when a float cannot be used, it is a great advantage to have the method described in my former letter, to fall back upon; always, however, remembering that float fishing when practicable, is infinitely the most killing method of angling for the paste-taking carps.

In tank fishing a rod rest, and quiet, are very essential. When a float is used, the rod rest should be so arranged that the rod point is just over the quill. The rest must also be such that the rod can be picked up, and the strike made without the least delay. Talking of course does not in the least disturb fish; it is tramping about on the machan, or bank, which causes vibration, and scares them.

No account of tank fishing would be complete without a reference to the turtle. A burst of small bubbles all rising in a bunch to the surface, is a sure sign that one of these reptiles is foraging about below If they were small so that one could pull them out and kill them, it would not so much matter; but one is liable at any time to hook a great reptile of thirty to fifty pounds, and if it does not cut one's gut, yet much valuable time is wasted over landing it, while its struggles will very possibly disturb one's pet fishing stand badly. A possible way of getting rid of some of these pests would be to row a boat very gently about, looking for bubbles; having located a turtle the boat should be brought above the spot and a barbed spear driven down into the creature's back. In a shallow tank at any rate I should imagine this plan would be quite successful.

LATE SNIPE.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE INDIAN FIELD."

SIR,—During my 30 years' experience, I have never seen snipe staying so late in Lower Bengal. I was rather astonished, when I got my first birds on the 17th April and ever since have been getting snipe almost daily. Blue-winged teals have also been very plentiful in April, and I believe, there are some still to be had and intend having a try for them to-morrow. Black partridges are fairly plentiful about here and I have got several of them lately. These birds seem to be migratory in this part of the district. The natives say, that they usually begin to come about April, their favourite haunts are the til or sesamum crops and they generally begin nesting in them or in any other suitable cover towards the end of May and most of the birds leave again about the latter part of August. For the table I have found the blacks simply excellent, the meat I found to be tender and well flavoured and most of those I shot were a mass of fat. So from the above it will be seen that I do not quite agree with "Fleur de Lys" as regards blacks from an epicurean point of view, though I must say he is perfectly right as regards the two sexes not usually being found together, for all the birds I shot lately were cocks. Blacks may be safely shot at least in this district till the end of April as they do not begin nesting until the end of the following month.

CLOSE SEASON FOR QUAILS.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE INDIAN FIELD."

SIR,—Under the Bengal Game Regulations issued over the signature of Mr. H. M. Kisch, Officiating Secretary to the Government of Bengal, one finds that a "wild bird" for the purposes of those rules includes Quail. The regulations lay down that the breeding season "extends from the 15th March to the 15th August," and rule No. IV. runs as follows:—

"Whoever during the breeding season has in his possession any wild bird, deer, or hare, recently killed or taken, or exposes for sale any such bird or animal, living or dead, shall be liable to a fine not exceeding Rs. 5 for each bird or animal."

May one be permitted to enquire whether the Calcutta Municipal Market is exempted from the operations of these regulations? Hundreds of miserable quails are at the present moment "exposed for sale," to use the words of the regulation, in this market, and, one observes with humiliation, that these unfortunate little victims to Mahomedan rapacity and ignorant appetite are daily purchased by those who cater for the tables of Europeans!!

Now, if the Government of Bengal makes rules and regulations, it should make proper provision for the enforcement thereof, otherwise it is borne in on one that Mr. Bumble was very near the mark when he declared that the "law is a hass." But there it is the Bengal Government says these birds shall not be sold, while the Municipal Commissioners, the aforesaid Moslem vendors and the Superintendent of the market decide that they shall be sold. Clearly this law was only made to be broken and, if the game regulations in other parts of India are as loosely administered as they are in the metropolis, the sooner they are repealed the better. Then we can all please ourselves: the ignorant and the vicious can continue in their criminal practices, and law-abiding citizens will not be shocked to see the Government stultified by a handful of rascally native bird dealers whose contumacy richly deserves the punishment, which under any other Government they would undoubtedly receive.

THE SOCIETY FOR THE PROTECTION OF BIRDS.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE INDIAN FIELD."

SIR,—I should esteem it a favour if you would kindly allow me to explain, through the medium of your columns, the delay which has occurred in issuing the Annual Report of the Society for the Protection of Birds. On going on leave I unfortunately put away and locked up, some important papers, bringing with me by mistake others of no particular value. As I do not wish to issue an incomplete Report, I am waiting until I return to Meerut in July.

I intend shortly to send to each member a brief account of the Society's proceedings during the past year.

Meanwhile it may interest those who are concerned at the destruction of our Indian Fauna, to know that we have a balance of nearly Rs 335. and this, in spite of our expenses, being somewhat heavier than last year.

The Indian branch of the Society concerns itself not only with the protection of birds but of the fauna of India in general, and of the game of our Eastern Empire in particular.

Lord Curzon's Act prohibiting the export of feathers, etc., and the practical promise to take up the question of game protection after his return, show, I hope, that the Society's work has not been entirely fruitless.

May I point out that, in spite of our balance we need further help, if we are to do all we should like. Any subscriptions or donations addressed to Meerut College, Meerut, will be forwarded, and will be gratefully received and acknowledged by

WILLIAM JESSE,
Hon. Sec., Society for the Protection of Birds.

H. McQuade's Training Stable is now in full swing, preparing many horses and ponies for the coming Mysore and Bangalore Meetings.

This stable is in great form, every meeting records for him four for five wins, this shows that he takes very great interest in the horses or ponies under his charge. His training stable is one of the largest and up-to-date business places in India. Owners of Race Horses should avail themselves of this opportunity as his charge is very moderate and the climate of Bangalore is the place to keep a horse of value.

Second Day, Thursday, 28th April 1904.

THE attendance to-day was a good one, in spite of the heavy showers at the beginning of the afternoon's proceedings. The course was very slippery in places and a few falls took place. Nonpareil coming down in the Merchants' Cup and Lah Kenny and Tsain Tin in the Roadster Plate. The racing was interesting, but it was an afternoon of upsets. The Rangoon Derby resulted in a win for a rank outsider, High Flyer, by half a length. The public fancy, Forlorn Hope, was left at the post. The Stewards' Cup provided a capital finish, Edith just beating Topsy III by a neck after a great race. Brownie was an easy first in the Roadster Stakes, the much-favoured Tsain Kyu only running third—another upset. Details:—

THE NEW COURSE PLATE.—Rs. 500 to the winner, Rs. 100 to the second and Rs 50 to the third pony. For Indo-Burmans, Country-breds, and Burma-bred ponies 13-0 and under. Distance about 5 furlongs.

Third Day, Saturday, 30th April 1904.

The attendance to day was again a very large one in spite of the heat. Fields were good and the sport provided ditto. There were six races on the card, the two last being the only events in which favourites gained winning honours. The others proved great upsets—notably in the Indo-Burman Handicap when Chit Sway caught the judge's eye. The totalisator paid the fine dividend of Rs. 310 to win on this race. Cornet provided a surprise in the Steward's Handicap winning by a length. Ida won the Amalmated Handicap and Browne had an easy victory in the Medium Handicap, the favourites—Edith and Topsy III, finishing in the ruck. Details.

THE AMALGAMATED HANDICAP.—Rs 300 to the winner, Rs 50 to the second, and Rs 25 to the 3rd pony. A handicap for Indios Burmans and country breds, 13-0 and under, and English and Australasians, 12-3 and under. About 5 furlongs.

Lotteries :—Tickets Rs. 200. Lady Glen Rs. 95, Martha Rs. 60, Speculation Rs 40, The Jap Rs. 30, Sarah Belle Rs. 22.

Betting : 2 to 1 each Lady Glen, and Speculation, 4 to 1 Martha, 5 to 1 The Jap, 8 to 1 Sarah Belle.

This was virtually a match between the two first horses, Speculation having a little advantage till down the straight, when Lady Glen came up and beat the other cleverly by half a length.

Desert Stakes.—For a cup value Rs. 49. For Arabs and C.-B's 14-2 and under. 14-2 to carry 12st, W. I. ¼ mile.

Mr G Hennessy's g a h Victory, 10st 4lbs Capt Travers 1

Lotteries :—Tickets Rs 200. Comely 70, Victory Rs. 55, Vodki Rs. 30 Arab Commissioner Rs. 25.

Betting : Evens Comely, 6 to 4 Victory, 2 to 1 Vodki, 5 to 1 Arab Commissioner.

Comely got off nicely and held a clear lead till the last turn when Victory got ahead and won with something in hand. There was something pathetic in seeing an erstwhile Army Cup favourite in Arab Commissioner tailing the field from start to finish.

Lhasa Plate.—For a cup value Rs. 49. For all Bhutia ponies. 13-1 to carry 11st. W. I. previous winners of Rs. 40 or over once 7lbs., twice 14lbs., three times or over 21 lbs. extra. 1 mile.

Peacock and Paddy had this race to themselves, running neck to neck the whole way, Paddy just finishing in front of the other by a neck.

The Lieut-Governor's Cup.—For a cup, value Rs. 49, presented by H. H. the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal. For all ponies 14-1 and under that have never won a race value Rs. 500 or over. Lotteries : Tickets Rs 20'. Energy Rs. 90, Dolly Rs. 85, Bluebell Rs. 80, Birdie Rs. 75, Floradora Rs. 65, Black Leg Rs. 30, Comely Rs. 25.

Betting : 5 to 2 Energy, 3 to 1 Floradora, and 3 to 1 Bluebell, 4 to 1 each Dolly and Birdie, 6 to 1 Black Leg, and 10 to 1 Comely.

Floradora extinguished her chances by bolting to a false start. When they were sent off, Energy was taken to the front and keeping there won somewhat easily by a couple of lengths. There was a good race for second place.

Kakina Cup.—For a cup, value Rs. 49, presented by the Raj Kumar of Kasina. For Ladies' genuine backs. English and Australasians 14-1 to carry 12st 2lbs., Arabs and C.-B.'s 14-1 to carry 10st 4lbs. W. I. ¼ mile.

Lotteries :—Tickets Rs 200. Speculation Rs. 65, Martha Rs. 44, Clifton Rs. 20, Gentleman Rs. 10.

Betting : 2 to 1 on Speculation, 6 to 4 Martha, 3 to 1 Clifton, 4 to 1 Gentleman.

Speculation led away and continued ahead till nearing home when Martha caught him and a ding dong finish resulted in the Judge being unable to separate them. The rest nowhere. In the run off Speculation got away again, but Martha caught him again nearing home and another great race was given in favour of the mare by a length.

Polo Scurry.—For a cup value Rs. 49. For all polo ponies that have played regularly in the Darjeeling and Jalpaiguri districts during the current season Best of three heats without dismounting. Catch-weights over 11st. 7lbs ¼ mile.

Mr G Hennessy's g a h Victory ... Capt Travers 1

Mr Harcourt's b aus m Rosie ... ... Mr Oakley 0

Lotteries : Tickets Rs. 200. Victory Rs. 80, Hyacinth Rs. 40, Rosie Rs. 40, Paul Rs 20.

Betting : 2 to 1 on Victory, 2 to 1 Rosie, 3 to 1 Hyacinth 8 to 1 Paul.

Hyacinth won the first heat from Victory and Rosie, but ran off the course and tumbled into a drain taking no part in the second heat, which was won after a good race by Victory from Rosie. In the third heat Hyacinth was sportingly allowed to go again, but Victory showed a clean pair of heels to them all, and won easily by a couple of lengths.

The Cooch Behar Cup.—For a cup, value Rs 49, presented by H. H. the Maharajah of Cooch Behar. For English and Australasians 13-2½ and under and Arabs and C.-B's. 14 hands and under that have never won a race value Rs. 50 or over. Arabs and C.-B.'s 14-0 and others. 13-2½ to carry 12st. W. Mr P Sen's b aus m Lady Glen, 10st 10lbs Capt Travers 3

Lotteries : Tickets Rs. 200. Bluebell Rs. 65, Dolly Rs. 65, Lady Glen Rs. 25.

Betting : 2 to 1 on Lady Glen, 6 to 4 Bluebell, 3 to 1 Dolly.

Lady Glen was winning this race somewhat comfortably, but a dog got in her way down the straight and put her out of her stride allowing Bluebell to come up and win by a neck.

The Fred Archer Plate.—Rs. 20 to the first and Rs. 10 to the second for all Bhutia ponies that have been regularly hired out in the station, to be ridden by N.-C.O's, or men of the Garrison. Catch-weights 11st 7lbs. 5 furlongs.

Owing to the dense mist it was impossible to see how many entered for this race, or how the race was run: so that this usually amusing event was shorn of all its interest. Private Wilkins was eventually returned the winner.

Second Day, Saturday, 7th May, 1904.

Hurlingham Vase.—For a cup value Rs. 49. A handicap for all polo ponies that have played regularly during the current season. 3 furlongs.

Mr Harcourt's b aus m Rosie ... Mr Metcalfe 0

Lotteries :—Tickets Rs. 200 Birdie Rs. 80. Victory Rs. 70, Hyacinth Rs. 30, Rosie Rs. 20.

Betting : 6 to 4 on Birdie, evens Victory, 3 to 1 Hyacinth, 4 to 1 Rosie.

Won easily by Birdie, a good race for second place.

Thibet Stakes.—For a cup value Rs. 49. A handicap for all Bhutias. 1 mile.

Mr W H Edwards' d bh g Paddy, 10st 6lbs, Capt Travers 1
Mr K Skempa's g bh g Peacock, 9st 6lbs Mr Metcalfe 2
Mr A Wright's g bh g Jester, 11st 6lbs ... Stuffy 3

Lotteries :—Tickets Rs. 200. Peacock Rs. 75, Jester Rs. 50, Paddy Rs. 45.

Betting. Evens Peacock, 5 to 4 Paddy 2 to 1 Jester.

As on the first day this race resulted in practically a match between the first two. They ran level all the way, Paddy getting just the best of it at the finish by half a length. Jester beaten off

Himalayan Purse.—For a cup value Rs. 49. A handicap for all Arab and C.-B ponies 14-2 and under. ¾ mile.

Mr G Hennessy's g a h Victory, 10st 12lbs, Capt Travers 1
Mr W M Fraser's g a g Arab Commissioner, 8st 7lbs ... ... Native 2

Lotteries :—Tickets Rs. 200. Victory Rs. 95, Arab Commissioner, Rs 60, Vodki Rs. 20.

Betting : 2 to 1 on Victory, 2 to 1 Arab Commissioner, 4 to 1 Vodki.

This race was a moral for Victory and he justified the confidence of his backers by winning handsomely. Vodki refused to join in the race and was left at the post.

The Burdwan Cup.—For a cup, value Rs 49, presented by H. H. the Maharajah of Burdwan. Handicap for Arabs and C. B.'s 14-1 and under, others 13-3½ and under that have never won a race value Rs 200 or over. ¾ mile.

Mrs K Shawe's g aus m Birdie, 10st 4lbs ... Stuffy 0
Mr Harcourt's b aus m Rosie, 10st 4lbs ... Mr Metcalfe 0

Lotteries :—Tickets Rs. 200. Birdie Rs. 60, Lady Glen Rs. 60, Bluebell Rs. 50, Dolly Rs. 30, Rosie Rs. 5.

Betting : Evens Lady Glen, 3 to 1 Birdie and Bluebell each 4 to 1 Dolly 10 to 1 Rosie.

Birdie made the running for half a mile followed by Lady Glen and Bluebell, Dolly next and Rosie whipping in. At the last round Birdie shot per Bolt and fell back beaten and Lady Glen and Bluebell went on followed by Dolly. At the turn for home Dolly was called upon, and improving her position at every stride she went up to, the leaders and beat them down the straight, winning a good race by about a length. Blubell just beat Lady Glen on the post for second place.

Lebong Purse.—For all Bhutia ponies the property of natives and to be riden by the same.

Half a dozen entered for this race which was well ridden and contested. The winner turned up in a pony named Punray, who lay last all the way till entering the straight, when the weight of a diminutive boy (about 5 stone) commenced to tell in his favour, and he gradually worked his way to the front winning by a length and a half amidst, a great demonstration from the hundreds of natives present.

The Commissioner of Rajshai's Cup.—For a cup, value Rs. 49, presented by C. R. Marindin, Esq. For all ponies bona fide the property of Owners, Managers and Assistants of Tea Gardens in the Rajshai Division, that have been regularly ridden on gardens up to 15th March 1904. W. I. 14-1 to carry 12st. 7lbs Bhutias allowed 3st, Arabs and C.-B.'s 21lbs., previous winners of Rs 40 or over once 5lbs., twice 10lbs., three times or over 14lbs. extra. 5 furlongs.

Betting : 2 to 1 on Bluebell, 6 to 4 Arab Commissioner, 5 to 1 Vodki.

Bluebell apparently took it all out of herself in the Burdwan Cup for she never ran kindly at any part of the race. Arab Commissioner led without being troubled from start to finish, winning easily by a couple of lengths.

Kinchinjunga Plate.—For a cup value Rs. 49. A handicap for all ponies that have run on the first day. 1 mile.

Mr A Price's b aus m Energy, 12st ... Mr A Power 1

Betting : Evens Energy, 2 to 1 Floradora, 3 to 1 Comely, 4 to 1 Dolly.

This was a capital race, the handling of the favourite by Mr. Power being much commended. Comely and Floradora went off at a great pace, Energy lying third, with Dolly in the rear. This position was maintained till the last round when Mr. Power gave Energy the office and she answered under her great weight in the gamest manner possible. At the far side she had her field beaten and sailed home a gallant winner under a crushing impost.

Mr P Sen's b aus m Lady Glen, 11st 11lbs Capt Travers 3

Lotteries :—Tickets Rs. 200. Lady Rs. Glen 75, Martha Rs. 35, Speculation Rs. 20, Jap Rs. 5.

Betting : 2 to 1 on Martha, 2 to 1 Lady Glen, 3 to 1 Speculation, 10 to 1 The Jap.

Martha was a good favourite and was prominent all through the race. She looked all over a winner till half way down the straight when the boy on The Jap came up, and making the most of his light weight joined issue with the leader. A most determined finish ensued and the waler lasting out the longer just snatched the long odds by a neck.

DERBY MEETING.

RACING under the conditions that prevailed during the Craven Meeting is a pastime that appeals irresistibly to the sport-loving public, and the contingent that journeyed across from Newmarket to Derby on the 15th instant to wind-up a memorable week at the capital of the Midlands was a comparatively strong one. They were reinforced this morning by a considerable body of Metropolitan pleasure-seekers who think nothing of travelling to and fro daily now that the railway facilities have reached such a high pitch of excellence, and it was a fair gathering that assisted at the proceedings. Unfortunately, a breakdown in the weather entirely spoilt what should have been a most enjoyable day's racing. The rain which set in the previous evening continued almost without cessation throughout the night, and it came down with monotonous persistency the whole time that racing was in progress, rendering the going soft and sticky. The strength of the fields was well maintained, however, and race after race was fought out to the bitter end, lending additional zest to the sport.

The clashing with Windsor could not but exercise a detrimental effect upon the concluding stage of the Derby fixture, the Metropolitan division of racegoers preferring to patronise their home meeting, whilst certain trainers and jockeys who took an active part in the first day's proceedings had to fulfil engagements at the Royal Borough The football match between Everton and Derby County proved a formidable counter-attraction for the local half-holiday folk, and, having due regard to the circumstances, the attendance, especially in the cheaper enclosures, was decidedly good. This was due in a great measure to the improved climatic conditions. Bright, sunny weather prevailed throughout the day, and the ground,

EPSOM MEETING.

In brilliant weather on the 19th at Epsom the Great Metropolitan maintained its reputation for sensational developments, the favourite, Mark Time, being defeated by Elba, whilst of three horses who fell in the course of the race Grey Tick broke his leg and had to be shot. In the Tattenham Plate, Stephen's Green followed up the initial success of his career, (when as the Talky Talky colt he accounted for a big field at Lincoln), but, as was the case on the Carholme, he owed his victory in a great measure to a speedy beginning. The start was unfortunately a very indifferent one, Little Willie swerving badly as the tapes were released, with the result that he not only put himself out of court, but extinguished the chances of some of his nearest attendants. He is a free-striding colt by Bill of Portland out of Elfin Queen, for whom Mr. Joel gave 360 guineas as a yearling, and he will assuredly prove well worth the money. Bramble Jelly colt did not get away on quite such good terms as the winner, and as he ran him to a length there can be very little between them. A very curious-looking customer is the Drill colt, one of the get of Sir Hugo, as he is a bright chestnut plentifully flecked with large white spots.

The fact that Extradition had shown his liking for the course by appropriating the Tattenham Plate on the corresponding day a twelvemonth ago was not overlooked when Mr. A. L. Duncan's colt was saddled for the North Park Plate, and he enlisted such a universal following that the tardy ones had to lay slight odds on his chance. He looked well, as did Challenger, who carried a splendid polish, and cut down his field without an effort when it came to racing, the favourite being unable to get within six lengths of Mr. Lionel Robinson's colt as they passed the Judge. By Isinglass out of Meddlesome, Challenger is grandly bred, and S. Darling will be able to get a line to the classic form thought to day's victory. The colt is engaged in the Two Thousand Guineas and Derby, and, though he ran thrice as a two year old, his juvenile performances throw little light upon his present capabilities. Citrine hung fire at the start and figured in the rear throughout. The field for the Great Metropolitan numbered four more than a year ago, when Wavelet's Pride finished first on the two occasions that the race was run. Seldom, perhaps, has such a warm favourite started for this event as did Mark Time. He had done so remarkably well under N. H. Rules, and won so handsomely at Lincoln, that the Epsom race was voted an almost sure thing for him, and no more than evens could be obtained about the four year old. For the greater part of the journey backers of the favourite were on good terms with themselves. At Tattenham Corner he held a commanding lead, and it then looked all over. Below the distance, however, Lord Cadogan's mare challenged resolutely, and, in the hands of W. Lane, wore Mark Time down, eventually winning a pretty race by half a length, the starting price of the victor being 100 to 8. Elba had no recent from to recommend her; she did not gain a bracket last year, but she will be remembered as having inflicted defeat upon Sceptre in the Park Hill Stakes, Doncaster, 1902.

BETTING: Evens Mark Time, 7 to 1 agst Lovat, 100 to 9 Parody, 100 to 8 Rightful, 100 to 8 Elba, 100 to 7 Puerto, 100 to 6 Grey Tick, 100 to 1 any other (o)

The first to leave the paddock was Servitor, and he was followed in the parade by Elba, Rightful, Lovat, Flor di Cuba, St. Patrick's Day, Astolat, and Grey Tick, the whippers-in being Induction and Mark Time, whilst Puerto was an absentee. Elba led the canter from Rightful, Servitor, and Lovat, and it was 3-17 when the white flag was hoisted. A capital start was effected at 3-25. Grey Tick being the first to break the line, attended by Lovat and Flor di Cuba, but on settling down Puerto showed the way to St. Patrick's Day, Lovat, Rightful, Mark Time, and Induction, with Flor di Cuba next, in advance of Grey Tick, the whipper-in being Servitor to the turn out of the straight, where Rightful took third place, with Mark Time, Lovat, Grey Tick, Flor di Cuba, and Parody next. About halfway St. Patrick's Day took a slight lead of Puerto, the pair going on clear of Lovat, Mark Time, Rightful, and Elba, these being well in front of Grey Tick and Parody, whilst Flor di Cuba, dropped into the rear, but, passing the mile post Mark Time joined St. Patrick's Day and Puerto, and the three were well clear of Elba, Servitor, Grey Tick, and Lovat when St. Patrick's Day struck into something seven furlongs from home, falling and bringing down Grey Tick and Induction. Mark Time then drew out with a two-length lead of Elba, with Servitor, Puerto, and Lovat in hot pursuit, but below the distance Elba challenged, and a tremendous race all the way home resulted in the victory of the mare by half a length; five lengths divided the second and third. Rightful was placed fourth by the judge. Astolat was fifth, Florinda sixth, Parody seventh, Servitor next and Puerto last. Grey Tick broke his leg by his fall and had to be destroyed. Time by Benson's chronograph, 4mins 11⅘secs.

Green fields, a cerulean sky, hedgerows bursting with tender leaf and starred with daisies, stretches of golden gorse, and the countryside bathed in sunshine—all these conditions combined to make the journey by road or rail to Epsom a memorable day in the history of the City and Suburban. And then the delightful walk over the crips, springy turf in a volatile atmosphere and a vision of fat pastures and cornfields beyond the blue haze left an all too rare feeling of physical exhilaration. For once the calendar was at fault. There was nothing on the downs to remind one that we were still in early spring. It was warm enough for a July day, and the gentle easterly breeze accentuated rather than minimised the grateful warmth of the sun. A more perfect day for the first big metropolitan handicap could not have been desired, and the dimensions of the crowd were suggestive of Derby Day.

PLACE BETTING 1, 2, 3: 5 to 4 agst Niphetos, 7 to 4 Hackler's Pride, 9 to 4 Prince Royal, 7 to 2 Cerisier, 7 to 2 Burses, 7 to 2 Kroonstad, 4 to 1 Achaicus, 5 to 1 Kano, 6 to 1 Dean Swift, 6 to 1 Bachelor's Button, 6 to 1 Bass Rock, 8 to 1 Switchcap, 8 to 1 Sun Rose, 100 to 12 Over Norton, 10 to 1 Robert le Diable, 10 to 1 Sun Bonnet, 10 to 1 Muriel II., 100 to 8 Dumbarton Castle, 100 to 8 Happy Slave, 100 to 8 Love Charm and 100 to 8 Gascony.

The first to leave the paddock was Kano, whose followers in the parade were Over Norton, Love Charm, Kroonstad, Prince Royal, Burses, Robert le Diable, Niphetos, Gascony, Switch Cap, Muriel II., Happy Slave, Dumbarton Castle, and Achaicus, the last trio being Bachelor's Button, Sun Bonnet, and Bass Rock. The canter was led by Over Norton from Love Charm, Kroonstad, Prince Royal, and Kano, and Bass Rock was again the whipper-in. The white flag was hoisted at 3-40, and just six minutes later Mr. Owen despatched the field to an excellent start, Love Charm, on the inside, being the first to show in front of Switchcap, Bass Rock, Robert le Diable, and Hackler's Pride, these being clear of Niphetos, Sun Bonnet, and Kroonstad, with Kano whipping-in, to the mile post, where Bass Rock and Niphetos improved their positions, taking second and third places slightly in advantage of Cerisier, Hackler's Pride, Prince Royal, and Robert le Diable, with Sunrose and Switchcap next, in advance of Kroonstad and Bachelor's Button, Kano still bringing up the rear. Making the bend for home, Bass Rock joined Love Charm, and the pair came on in command of Cerisier, Hackler's Pride, Niphetos, Robert le Diable, and Bachelor's Button, but Niphetos hung out signals of distress entering the straight and dropped out of the race. About a quarter of a mile from home Love Charm was done with, and Robert le Diable, dashing up on the rails, took up the running on the inside, from Cerisier, whilst Dean Swift, wide on the outside became third, clear of Happy Slave and Bachelor's Button, but the issue was never in further doubt, Robert le Diable holding his own to the end and winning in a canter by three lengths from Dean Swift, who deprived Cerisier of second place at the distance; a length and a half divided the second and third. Bachelor's Button was placed fourth by the judge, Happy Slave was fifth, Switchap sixth, Hackler's Pride seventh, Kroonstad eighth, Sun Bonnet ninth, Kano tenth, Sunrose next, and Gascony last, behind Prince Royal. Time by Benson's chronograph, 2mins 8⅘secs.

SANDOWN PARK MEETING.

It was a relief after the stress and turmoil of Epsom with its dust its crowd of holiday-makers, and congested programme, to assist at the quiet, decorous gathering at Sandown Park yesterday. The half dozen items of which the card was composed sufficed to afford an enjoyable and diverting entertainment—exclusive of the run-off for the dead heat—and had the weather only been more genial no fault could have been found with the day. As it was the conditions were almost wintry. A bitterly cold north-easterly wind swept the hill, and little shelter was obtainable in the stands, which were exposed to the full force of the gale. Nor did the solar rays go far towards gladdening the scene, as the sky was dull and overcast throughout the afternoon. Despite the inclement weather, the King honoured the proceedings with his presence, and Prince Christain and the Duke and Duchess of Westminster were prominent amongst a fashionable but somewhat meagre attendance. Big fields were seen out, and the equine arrival list for to-morrow is a lengthy one. The going was firm, and even dusty in places, a little rain being required to freshen up the turf.

THE SCOTTISH CUP

GLASGOW RANGERS (HOLDERS) vs. CELTIC.

If New Hampton Park, the colossal ground of the Queen's Park F. C., Glasgow, was denied the opportunity of having its holding capacity tested on the occasion of the International match between Scotland and England on the 9th instant, all its detractors then must certainly have been silenced for all time after the admirable manner in which was housed within its confines on Saturday, the 16th, a spectatorate numbering 65,000, or half as many again as that present at Celtic Park witnessing the downfall of the Thistle in her last International of the year. In no case was the swaying and crushing, which are not unusual when large crowds are assembled in limited space, observed, and great as the attendance was there appeared to be full room for a few thousands more. In all, the sum of £1,400 was drawn at the gates and £400 at the stands, and with members and ticket-holders added there could not have been less than the number stated in the enclosure when the game—the thirty-first final and the third played between Saturday's opponents—commenced. Perfect conditions prevailed, there being little wind and a moderate sun, while the turf was in excellent condition. Taken over both periods, it was a capital encounter, full of incident, good and fast play, with an absence of that rougher element past matches between these old rivals have had recorded against them. Ably supported by a strong half-back line, the Celtic forwards practically commanded matters in the opening stages, but their ascendancy was cut short at the close of the initial quarter of an hour. Some really clever combination between Robertson and A. Smith on the Ranger's left wing enabled the latter to send across a high drive, which Speedie, lying handy, diverted into the net, a success which restored the confidence of the Cup holders, somewhat staggered by the first onslaughts of their opponents. Becoming more even, the exchanges continued fast, the battle waging from goal to goal but a decided set in favour of the "Light Blues" became evident when Speedie a second time snatched a short pass forwards and at close range scored. The advantages thus gained, however, were not long held, the Colts—mainly through Quinn, whose fast dashes were a constant source of trouble to the veteran backs on whom the Rangers relied—became more aggressive, and through weak back play—certainly the most prominent failing on the holders representation—that player lessened the leeway, and ere the interval be was instrumental in equalising the game. Changing ends with honours easy, the pace remained as in the preceding period, neither side claiming any preponderance in play, and it was not until forty minutes had elapsed when Quinn again had the better of an encounter with the opposing defence and notched the third as it proved, the winning point. The closing stage was quietly contested, and, no further scoring occurring, the Celts were returned winners by three goals to two.

Some people would be inclined to think that Joe Cannon is not quite the kind of man to be led away by superstitions, but the following incident would lead one to suppose that at any rate he has never since the occurrence took place brought thirteen horses to a meeting.

In 1875, Cannon was training for Captain Machell at Bedford Cottage, and in making up his lot for Goodwood that year, the total number of the string amounted to thirteen.

"I don't like that number," remarked the considering Joseph. "Here, put in Trappist with them—that will make fourteen."

As luck would have it, Trappist was fortunate enought to pull through successfully in the Stewards' Cup—the most important event of the meeting.

ATHLETICS.

S. L. H. SPRING MEETING.

A fine, sunny afternoon and the promise of witnessing excellent sport at the South London Harriers' spring meeting, had the effect of drawing a remarkably large crowd to Kennington Oval on Saturday last. The turf was a trifle soft, and at times a shifting wind bothered the runners, slight incidents these in otherwise fine conditions. With regard to the programme, most interest was evinced in A. Shrubb's attack on Sid Thomas' five mile record of 24mins. 53⅗secs., made at the Essex Beagles' meeting at Romford Recreation Ground as far back as 1892. On the occasion of a match with C. E. Willers (Essex Beagles), Mr. Parker had prepared a handicap with the idea of fully extending the four-mile and cross-country champion, who, it may be mentioned, has never been beaten on even terms at any distance short of fifteen miles since he finished third in the four-mile championship of 1900. He was now called upon to concede 50secs. to A. Aldridge, 1min. to G. Fearce, and 1min. 25secs. to G. Still, the four-mile midland champion, the limit man in a field of twenty-two, receiving 2mins. 30secs. start. At the outset, Shrubb, who met with a very cordial reception, quite electrified the crowd by his dash, and he actually covered the first mile 10secs. in front of Thomas' time. Without showing any diminution of pace the South London Harrier completed the second mile in 9mins 40⅖secs., as against 9mins. 47secs., but from that point he began to slacken somewhat, and half a mile further found him one-fifth of a second outside the old figures, while at three miles he was 5⅘secs. to the bad, and at three miles and a half, 10⅖ secs. outside his record. Never making at the gap in the times, Shrubb failed to cut the old figures, by 16⅖secs. Good judges opined that the champion took too much out of himself in the first two miles. Shrubb was naturally disappointed, but considering that he has only recently concluded a heavy season of cross-country work and was now virtually stepping from field to path, his display cannot be called a bad one. The handicap fell to G. F. Pepper of the Belgrave Harriers, who was one of a trio allotted 2mins 30secs start, but the outstanding feature was the smart running of Aldridge, whose net time, 25mins. 14⅘secs., was only 4⅘secs. slower than his great rival Shrubb's. The handicap produced a keen struggle between Pepper Pearce and Aldridge. Two laps from the finish Pepper was twenty-five yards in front of Pearce, with Aldridge, Delaney and Clark all running prominently in the rear. At the bell, Aldridge took second place, but he could not get up to Pepper, who, stalling off several challenges by the Highgate man, won by a dozen yards Pearce being a similar distance behind Aldridge. Time—24mins. 21½secs. Aldridge took 24mins. 24½secs. His net time, 25mins. 14½secs., was only 4½secs. slower than Shrubb's Others who started in this event were: G. Still, Highgate H. Razzell, and Sims, Thompson, second in the Brighton walk last week, being ninth. In the last lap Lansley lost the leadership to Bailey, who won by half a dozen yards. Sims, spurting pluckily towards the close was eight yards behind Lansley, with Norton a good fourth. Time—13mins. 58⅗secs. The scratch man, T. O. RACQUETS.

PUBLIC SCHOOLS CHAMPIONSHIP.

FINAL MATCH.

The annual competition for the Public Schools Racquets Championship came to an end on the 15th afternoon at the Queen's Club, West Kensington, W., and resulted in a decisive triumph for the really fine pair representing Winchester. The Wykehamists thus placed the name of their college on the list of winners for the second time, the previous occasion having been so long ago as 1889. Notwithstanding the heavy rain, a large number of enthusiasts visited the famous West End enclosure, and the gallery in the first court has rarely contained more people, the youthful element, of course, predominating. Several ladies were also present, and among the gentlemen in attendance we noticed the Rev. S. R. James, Rev. L. J. Percival, Major Lyon, Messrs. A. J. Webbe, J. R. Mason, H. D. G. Leveson-Gower, G. J. V. Weigall, E. B. Leaf, S. Heap, F. Dames Longworth, E. B. Noel, Vane Pennell, M. C. Kemp, H. K. Foster, C. R. Durant, Malcolm Roberts, H. S. Mahony, C. J. B. Marriott, and Stanley Brigge. The two pairs left in were those representing Winchester and Malvern, and en route to the final the Wykehamists had beaten Haileybury, Charterhouse, and Rugby, while Malvern accounted for Clifton, Wellington and Marlborough, the Malvernians, in fact, not having lost a single game. A great struggle was expected yesterday, but, contrary to anticipations, Winchester quite outplayed their opponents and won a love match. Bruce and Wright played together in beautiful style, and never allowed Malvern to get properly going. Foster, without being quite at this best, played brilliantly at times, but Day was rather off colour and frequently made the fatal mistake of returning the ball too high. Mr. F. Dames Longworth (Charterhouse and Cambridge) officiated as referee, Messrs. A. J. Webbe (Harrow and Oxford) and M. C. Kemp (Harrow and Oxford) were the umpires, and Holden marked and clearly called the scores. Details:—

FINAL MATCH.

Winchester College (Hon'ble C. N. Bruce and E. L. Wright) beat Malvern College (G. N. Foster and A. P. Day) by four games to love (15—12, 15—11, 18—13, and 15—9), 63 aces to 45. The aces were scored by: Bruce 40 (24 by service). Wright 23 (14 service), Day 26 (11 service), and Foster 19 (12 service).

Day opened the proceedings for Malvern and went to 5 love (4 by service) before missing a low return, and, after both the Wykehamists had failed, Foster put in a single. Day and Wright lost their service, but Bruce scored twice, and then Foster and Day made it 11—2 before Wright opened his account with a couple. Bruce succeeded and, serving a brilliantly cut length, obtained a sequence of nine before he put himself out. Wright followed with two scoring services, Winchester took the first game at 15—12. Resuming, small hands and splendid rallies between Bruce and Foster were the chief features until Foster got in and contributed a nice run of six, making the scores 8—5 in favour of Malvern. Bruce equalized at 9 all, and, although Foster went to 11—9, Bruce once more drew level at 11 and went out with five (4 by service) at 15—11, making Winchester two games up. On continuing, Bruce increased his sequence by four, and a ding-dong struggle ensued for fifteen small hands, when the game was set to five "13 all." Bruce obtained one, and, after both Day and Foster had been put out without scoring the Wykehamists took the third game at 18-13. At the fourth and final meeting runs of five each by Wright and Bruce enabled Winchester to possess a commanding advantage at 13—1, but then, following five barren hands, Day drew up with a splendid sequence of eight. Malvern did not have another chance, for Wright secured the next two aces, and Winchester won the match, amid great enthusiasm, by four games to love. Time—46mins.

GOLF.

OXFORD vs. CAMBRIDGE.

Famous amateur golfers assembled in strong force on the Woking Links on the 20th instant, the occasion being the twenty-sixth annual match between the Universities. On previous seasons the struggle has taken place at either Sandwich or Wimbledon, the former course having been utilised for the past six years, but it having been decided to favour an inland enclosure again, Woking was selected. The links proved in glorious condition, the turf being as dry as the proverbial bone, and with the prevalence of glorious sunshine and just a slight touch of keenness in the wind, one felt it good to be alive on such a day. Each team possessed five old choices, and on previous performances this season, the Cantabs were supposed to possess a good chance of checking their rivals' long sequence of victories. The Light Blues certainly flattered their supporters during the morning, for at the end of the first round (the matches were all 36 holes each) Oxford were no fewer than twelve down, the respective scores of the players being: Cambridge—Hoffman, 0; McDonell, 1; Gillies, 0; Stuart, 2; Wedderburn, 2; Potter, 3; Simpson, 1; Allen, 4. Oxford—Humphreys, 1; W. Grundy, 0; Graham, 0; Girdlestone, 0; Alison, 0; Fairlie, 0; Sanderson, 0; G. Grundy, 0. After luncheon, however, the Oxonians pulled up in great stye, and when the scores came to be reckoned up at the finish it was found that Oxford had just won the match by two holes. The final figures were:—

OXFORD.	Holes.		CAMBRIDGE.	Holes.
J L Humphreys (Bromsgrove and Brasenose) ...	9	vs.	G H Hoffman (Giggleswick and Caius) ...	0
W M Grundy (Malvern and All Soul's)	0	vs.	H C McDonell (Winchester and Corpus) ...	0

Taken on the whole, the golf was quite up to the average, but Cambridge should have won after securing such a strong advantage during the earlier stages. To begin with, Hoffman held his own fairly well with Humphreys, the Cantab being only one down at the interval, but subsequently the Oxonian had matters all his own way. At this second round Humphreys did the journey in 77, his scores being:—

Out: 5 4 5 5 4 4 4 3 5 4—38
Home: 4 3 4 4 4 6 5 4 5 4—39

Total, ... 77

The Cambridge captain, McDonald, had a hard fight with W. M. Grundy, but the old Wykehamist ought to have won. He was one up at the seventeenth hole in the second round, but his drive found the ditch, and having to lift, his second shot landed in the pond. Grundy played steadily, and managing to make all square, just about gave Oxford the verdict. Graham and Gillies were a well-matched pair, but the former never threw a chance away in the afternoon. Stuart ran away from his opponent, Girdlestone, in the second round—the easiest Cambridge triumph of the day, and Fairlie found Potter much too good. The meetings of Alison and Wedderburn and G. E. Grundy and Allen were very close affairs, but Sanderson comfortably won his match against Simpson.

Oxford have now won fourteen times to Cambridge eleven, the match in 1896 resulting in a tie.

BOXING.

THE NATIONAL SPORTING CLUB.

Jimmy Walsh, the clever little bantam-weight boxer, from Boston, U.S.A., experienced his first defeat on the 18th instant, when at the National Sporting Club, he met Digger Stanley, of Fulham, in a fifteen-round contest at 8st, for £100 aside and a purse given by the management. The bout was bright and sparkling throughout, fought in a give and-take manner on such even lines that few would have cared to lay the slightest shade odds on either when the gong went for the last time. Walsh boxed as we anticipated, right and left, relying on his rushing tactics and two-handed work at close quarters to pull him through against a youth his superior in both height and reach. For the first half-dozen rounds the visitor made good headway. Stanley fought below his form, and, instead of relying, as he usually does, on his straight left, he played as it were, into the other youth's hand by standing and mixing it at close quarters. Subsequently, the Londoner settled down to his best form. Now and again he infringed the rules by holding, and, in the eighth round, he came in for a severe and what looked like being a final caution for so doing. Mending his ways, the Englishman then fought in fairer fashion, and after a desperately close finish the verdict went his way. With Stanley upright, and Walsh crouching a good deal, the first-named looked more than his inch the taller. Walsh sparred like the majority of the Americans, very wide and with the open glove, and though each scaled 7st. 11lbs, as they shaped Stanley took the eye as the bigger youth. The Yank was aggressive from the start, and, before the two had boxed a round, it was seen that in-fighting was his forte. Stanley commenced in rather a wild and erratic manner, and he wasted some of his strength in swinging blows, mostly lost in the air. Twice in the first three rounds the Londoner led yards out of distance and lost his balance in doing so, and Walsh, crowding in a lot of good work at close quarters, established a lead. After six rounds had been contested, however, Stanley displayed improved form and making more use of the ring and showing better generalship, he began from this stage to rub off the points scored against him by the American. As round by round went by excitement as to the result reached a great pitch. Walsh fought in dogged fashion never relaxing for a moment in his efforts to get inside the other man's guard, and put in some telling work on the body. Served by his reach, however, the Londoner scored the faster in the last three rounds and won. It was a fast and scientific battle, so close at the finish that a draw would have created no surprise to the backers of either. Harry Barrett, of Islington, who met Sergeant Fox, of the Scottish Rifles, in a ten-round catch-weight contest, was a good stone the heavier. The civilian, who has a fairly good record, forced the business from the start, and, making the most of his strength, he soon had the soldier in trouble. Fox, who, on his first visit to the club, boxed in fairly good form while beating Tom Clifford, was quite outclassed and defeated easily halfway through the second round. In his bout with Gunner Hewitt, champion of the Navy, Gunner Moir added another victory to his long list of successes, as Hewitt, standing toe to toe with a slogger of the first water, was beaten to a standstill in a little over two minutes.

JUMPING.

ARDWICK RUNNING GROUNDS, MANCHESTER.—At the above ground on Saturday, W. Barker, of Openshaw, was down to beat the following records, viz.: Five spring-jumps without weights and four hops and jump for a stake of £400. His first attempt was at the four hops and jump, and his first effort was a yard short, but on toeing the mark again he cut Higgins's record of 19 yards 9in. by 10in. The final jump was five springs, but in this he failed to beat the mark made by Darley, at Dudley, of 61ft. of 5½in. in three attempts, although his second jump was the best, and this was five inches short of that made by the record holder.

CRICKET CHAT.

THE usual hot weather exodus of Anglo-Indian cricketers has commenced and among those who proceeded home by the P. & O. Co.'s mail steamer Arabia on leave last Saturday, I notice the names of the following: C. L. Barnes and H. P. Hebblethwaite, two well-known Bombay players, C. H. Browning, the Central Provinces slow bowler and Old Merchant Taylors, S. Cayley, the old Cliftonian and Madras player, E. W. Wilson-Johnston, the old Rugbeian and Northern India player, F. G. E. Lamb and G. A. Iles, two well-known United Provinces players, and K. S. Ranjitsinhji. The latter will be home in time to assist his county in the fourth fixture of the season against Gloucestershire.

The dates for the Presidency-Parsee matches have been fixed, but Presidency supporters are wondering where their team is to come from. There is certainly no improvement in the Presidency prospects since I last wrote things if anything looking gloomier. Had H. Cheetham, G. G. S. Brander, G. A. Akers-Douglas, F. L. Spratt, J. J. MacDonogh, and Major H. E. Lowis all been available quite a good side would have represented the Presidency. Unfortunately Cheetham, Brander, and Akers-Douglas have gone home on leave, J. MacDonogh is not now in the Presidency, Spratt has been transferred to Sind and will not be available, and Lowis has announced that he will not play any cricket this year. Among other players who will not be available are W. F. O. Faviell, E. L. Sale, and J. T. Weatherby who have all gone home, and H. C. John who has decided to play in no more important matches. An another player who might have been useful, but who has also gone on leave, is C D G. Lyon, the old Wellingtonian, whose battery is stationed at Kirkee. The conclusion of operations in Somaliland gave room for some hope that such players as Captain J. G. Greig, Captain L. M. R. Deas, Captain A. C. Edwards, and the old Reptonian T. G M. Harris would be back in time to assist the Presidency, but I learn that Greig is going home on leave where Deas has already preceded him and that Edwards and Harris are also more likely to go West than East. Even B. E. A. Manson, who played in the Poona match last year with some success, will not be available this year having left the country. Who then will be available is the question that Presidency supporters are anxiously asking each other. The Bombay sporting organ is silent on this point, though an announcement was made in its columns three weeks ago that a list of candidates for Presidency honours would be given the following week. Of the players who represented the Presidency last year in one or both matches the following are still available:—B. M. Carroll, E. E. Coombs, A. L. Smith, A. P. Langhorne, J. Monteath, Captain E. Campion, H. D. Sinclair, C. Walcott, and A. H. C. Kearsey. Carroll, Coombs, Monteath, Campion, and Walcott will all very likely receive further trials, but the others are not class enough for these important fixtures. Captain M. D. Wood, an old tried Presidency player, is back in India from leave, but is stationed with his regiment at Quetta and we know from said experience that it is a far cry from Quetta to Bombay or Poona. Anyhow the old Wellingtonian's appearance for the Presidency this year is extremely problematical. Among those players whose names came up for consideration in connection with the Presidency matches last year the following are still available: Captain G. L. Hobbs of the Connaught Rangers (Ahmednagar). Captains A. J. Poole and R. H. W. Brewis of the Royal Warwickshire Regiment (Belgaum) and Captain A. B. Sangster, the old Brightonian (Nusseerabad). The influx of new players has unfortunately not been proportionate with the exodus and as far as Bombay is concerned there is only one new player with any pretentions to Presidency form, J. L. Ainsworth, the old Marlburian and ex-Lancashire county bowler, to with whose name I mentioned in my last notes. The 10th Hussars who are stationed at Mhow have a useful trio of batsmen in Major Hon. T. W. Brand, Captain Hon. G. W. S. Cadogan, both old Etonians, and H. P. Chaplin, who, if I am not mistaken, is the best bat of the three. I am not, however, in a position to say whether these players are in form or have been keeping up their cricket, though Cadogan, who played in a match at Bombay last January, ought to be in form. The new men at Poona are J. Kennedy, S. Langton, and O. C. Herbert of the Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders, Captain H. K. Umfreville, the old Brightonian and Captain G. R. C. Stuart of the East Lancashire Regiment. The two first-named are fine bats and if they are in form should be a great acquisition to the Presidency in this department. Kennedy is, I should mention, an old Haileyburian and for two seasons did well in Calcutta cricket. Umfreville and Stuart of the East Lancashires are also good bats. The Selection Committee should give outstation cricketers a trial this year and not depend altogether on Bombay and Poona talent as has been the case during the last five or six years. If the team is to be called a Presidency team let it be so in more than name. The Bombay military command is a large one and in stations like Mhow, Quetta, Indore, and Nussecrabad there are usually a number of good cricketers, some of them unquestionably quite up to the standard required of a Presidency candidate. Quetta has several good men in Captain G. G. Lang, J. C. Gretton, P. S. Fryer, and L. D. Rollo of the West Yorkshire Regiment, and B. F. Vernon-Harcourt, R. H. Montgomery and R. S. Jones of the Welsh Regiment. Mhow too can point to some players above the average in A. C Cameron, L. J. Jones, and H. G Manson. If the claims of outstation players to representation on the team are carefully considered the Presidency may be able to place a team in the field no weaker than that which took the field last year, but if the selection of the team is to be confined to Bombay and Poona players the matches with the Parsees will be an easy walk over for the latter.

The number of old Harrovians in India who obtained their "blue" has been added to by the arrival of Captain J. L. Fisher of the Royal Fusiliers who has already made his mark in Darjeeling cricket this year. Captain Fisher was a member of the Harrow XI. of 1894 and headed the bowling averages with the useful figures of 8·52 for 17 wickets. His batting average was only 8·66, but he was unfortunate in rarely finding a wicket to suit him being a slow wicket player and the wickets that year owing to the dry season being hard. He has been useful with both bat and ball for Darjeeling station this year in the first few matches of the season and will doubtless do better as the season advances.

Individual scores of three figures in Ceylon cricket are as a rule few and far between in a season, but this year there has been a plethora of centuries culminating last week in no less than three batsmen achieving the feat. The successful batsmen were F. J. de Saram, the old Cliftonian and brother of D. L. de Saram who visited Bombay last December in connection with the Indian team for England who scored 111 out of 191 for seven wickets for the Colombo Sports Club vs. the Colombo Rovers; J. Atkin who made 103 for Umbegamawa vs. Dikoya; and S. S. Jayawickrame who compiled 115 out of 129 for eight wickets for Mahindu College vs. Muslim C. C.

There are several prominent cricketers at Darjeeling this season, among them Captain J. L. Fisher, the old Harrovian, D. S. Murray, the old Malvernian, J. T. Uzielli, the old Marlburian, Captain P. A Turner, the old Cheltonian, Captain C. A. H. Blairet, Cyril Hogg, E. Hewit and S. R. Hignell, the old Malvernian. Later on these will be joined by S. L. Maddox and E. L. L. Hammond of the I. C. S. which will enable Darjeeling Station to place a very strong team in the field. Apropos of Darjeeling cricket I notice that Cyril Hogg playing for the Station vs. St. Joseph's College last week made 37 top score for his side. A. Bryan, who is the best school bat in India bar none made 83 for the College. Hogg was the most successful bowler for the station capturing four wickets. The old Bedfordian who showed good form for the Goorkha Brigade team recently is one of the best all round players in the station this season. A most interesting match was that between Kailana Depôt and the Royal Welsh Fusiliers at Kailana recently. The Kailana team included the Rev. R. N. Kirwan (Forest School), Captain F. C. Pilkington, the old Etonian, J. R. C Gannon, and P. D. Saxton (Bath College). The latter made 91 not out and was chiefly responsible for the Depôt's victory by 49 runs. The Welsh Fusiliers which possesses one of the strongest officers' teams in India compiled 186, towards which Captain F. C. France-Hayhurst, the old Etonian, contributed 57. He also captured five wickets.

The first important match of the Ootacamund season.—Civil vs. Military—played last week was chiefly remarkable for a fine first wicket stand by C. Morrison (89) and W. W. Phillips (71) for the Civil who had all the best of a drawn game. The only other double figure contributor to the Civil total was Sir J. Bourdillon (12), who, it is pleasant to see, still keeps up his cricket. C. T. Studd was an absentee, but among those who donned flannels for the Civil was K. Seshachari, the famous wicket-keeper. The most prominent players who turned out for the Military were Major R. H. Dewing, the old Brightonian, Captain B. E. H. Manson, Captain E. H. Boome, Major Jollie and Captain Copeland. The Ooty-Bangalore match should prove an interesting one this season and I hope to deal with it in my next notes.

FOOTBALL NOTES.

NEXT Saturday will see the opening of the Calcutta Football League Competition. The League Committee, at their Annual Meeting held last month, restricted the number of competing teams to eight so the three vacancies caused by the departure of the 93rd Highlanders and K. O. S B.s and the withdrawal of Burns A. C. were reduced to two, which were filled by the election of the King's Own and West Ridings; the remaining five local clubs and the 64th R. F. A. from Barrackpore who played last year being unanimously re-elected. The rejection of the other teams anxious for admission naturally occasioned much disappointment but they have consoled themselves by the formation of another League, "the Civil and Military," of which more next week. Of the teams left out the 79th R. G. A. are apparently the pick, and they are no doubt disappointed at not having a show amongst the senior clubs, but eight teams is undoubtedly the correct number for this competition.

I noticed a suggestion in a local daily last month that the League should admit twelve teams instead of eight, and the season be extended by a fortnight or a month, but the author of this suggestion had evidently not taken into consideration the fact that twelve teams in the League would necessitate the playing of no less than 132 matches as against the present 56, and that even the apparently small reduction in the number of teams from nine to eight has cut down the matches by 16. The main point which is generally left out of consideration by those who propose extending the League appears to be that the period during which matches can be played is limited to the few weeks which intervene between the Beighton Hockey Cup ties and the I F. A. Shield Tournament and that the rugger season commences directly after the latter competition closes. It is obvious that the middle of May is early enough to start footer, in fact, most people think it is too early, therefore those who argue in favour of an extended League Competition wish it to continue into August or later. How many local clubs would like to continue playing in a League for this length of time and after the excitement of the I. F. A. Tournament is over? Very few, I am sure. As matters stood last season several clubs complained that the playing of two, and sometimes three, hard games a week was more than they could tackle.

Casually taking up the subject it, of course, seems that the I. F. A. Tournament could be put back a month if necessary; but carefully considering local conditions it will be seen that this is not so. Rugger in Calcutta may be at a low ebb, but it attracts a large number of players and as our local clubs cannot keep two grounds going, the rugger season must be separate from the soccer, and, as the evenings get too short after August for a game to be played after office hours, the rugger games and cup ties cannot be played later in the year. This being so it follows that the I F A. Tournament cannot be held later with ut interfering with the Rugby season and, therefore, the League cannot be extended with any prospect of general approval.

The League rules have been largely amplified this year and appear to provide for all contingencies. Several points which were made the subject of protests last year have now been allowed for in the rules, the new rule which provides that protests must be submitted in regular form and with a deposit of Rs. 10 is an excellent one. As the deposit is forfeitable if a protest is not sustained clubs will now no doubt, think twice before sending in protests, especially such absurdities as appeal against a refere's decision on a point of fact. Rule 23, concerning suspended players, also appears to be needed and the suggestion that club officials should use their best endeavours to keep spectators at least six yards behind the touch lines has been made none too soon. These rules, together with the current laws of the game, the League record and fixtures for 1904 are all included in the new annual Handbook which football enthusiasts can purchase for four annas from the Honorary Secretary.

I would draw the attention of all footballers to the new Law X of the game by which a goal may be scored from a free kick, whether the ball first touches a player or not, if the kick is awarded for tripping, kicking, jumping at or pushing an opponent or intentionally handling the ball. It should, however, be remembered by referees that a free kick awarded for any other breach of the laws, such as off side, an improper throw in, etc., does not come under this new law. There is also an addition to the penalty kick law by which a referee may refrain from awarding a free kick if he is of opinion that his doing so would give an advantage to the offending side. This is an important and valuable addition.

There has not so far been sufficient football to give one much idea of the probable form of the various teams in the forthcoming League Competition, as owing to the number of draws which have taken place in the Beighton Hockey Cup Tournament the principal grounds have been engaged every evening for Hockey. Most of the clubs have had a scratch game or two but only the military teams have gone in for any hard practice; they have been hard at it in the Fort and at Dum-Dum and Barrackpore and, no doubt, will turn out very fair elevens. I haven't seen the 64th R. A. or West Ridings play, but they should not, at any rate at first, give their opponents a hard game, as the former eleven are about the same as last year and the latter are more up in rugger than soccer. The King's Own are supposed to have left their best footballers behind when they sailed from Malta but with over 800 men to pick from they are sure to turn out a good string. They have had two or three matches with the 79th R. A. in the Fort and last Saturday played and beat Calcutta. In this latter match the forwards made a very good display except for a strong tendency to lie offside, and Anness at half showed great promise. I trust the manner in which some of the spectators at this match were allowed to crowd over the touch lines is not a sample of what we are to expect during the season Club officials please note.

With regard to the civilian teams Calcutta have unfortunately lost the services of Buckley, Fyfe, Gillespie, Stewart, Walker and Pearson, and there are rumours that Todd will not play at all and the elder Cooper but seldom, so at first sight it looks as though this club were in a bad way. New blood is not, however, so scarce as in former years and I think they will make a good show. Dodds, who played well for Burn's A. C. last year, will keep goal, and Badham, Ansell, Smith, and the younger Cooper should get places in the eleven the old hands being represented by Maunder, who is now captain, Crawford and the two Shermans.

Dalhousie have lost Margrett, Wade, Echlin, Bushby and Rosser so seem as unlucky as Calcutta, but they, too, have new blood to draw on and have the makings of a very level team indeed. I haven't seen much of their play yet but they appear to have secured a good left winger in Price and Street in goal will no doubt shape well. The Rangers with Behrend, Margrett, Anderson, Lees and Schumacher should have a good back division and Rosser, Macready and Russell will considerably strengthen their forward line Howrah will no doubt be strengthened by Burn's A. C. having withdrawn from the League, notably by the return of Woods, but the Y. M. C. A. have apparently had several defections owing to the formation of a new league. At present it seems that this latter club will not make a big show in the competition. Space being limited I shall have to reserve further comments till next week.

The matches which open the League Competition on Saturday next are :—64th R. F. A. vs. Rangers; Dalhousie vs. Howrah; King's Own vs. West Ridings, and Y. M. C. A. vs. Calcutta.

TOUCH.

A friend of Fred Swindell, acting on the latter's advice, once managed to get one of his horses nicely weighted in the Cambridgeshire, and though it was thought the mare could not lose, yet, owing to an incident that occurred during the race, she finished in the ruck After this unexpected contretemps the owner was loud in his lamentations, much to the disgust of Fred, who had no sympathy with bad losers.

"He's like a lot more of them," Swindell said, when expressing his contempt for the chicken-hearted turfite. "Directly they lose a race through an accident they go about crying how they have the worst luck in the world, let everyone know what a splendid trial the horse won, the amount of money they had on and how it would have rolled in but for the accident Of course, it gets in everybody's mouth, and then another time when you want to have a go the handicapper remembers this, and even if he treats the horse fairly there's the public on the look-out for it, so what chance have you got. The thing to do when you've been beaten like that is to go about with a downcast expression, and hint that you must have been a fool to have backed a horse that had been tried with such indifferent tackle and the next time you put one through the mill it won't be like that. After a while some of them will think you're right so that the next time you get a chance, there's no one to interfere with the market."

That Swindell acted on the above advice was shown by his conduct after Wallace, whom he had backed for over £100,000, was left at the post for the Derby, but finished in the first flight. So discreetly was everything managed that the unlucky animal secured the Goodwood Stakes and £30,000 for his owner, who well deserved to be known as the Turf Talleyrand.

GOLF IN CALCUTTA.

THE CALCUTTA G. C. ANNUAL FOURSOMES.

THIS tournament has just been concluded on the Calcutta maidan and produced as usual a number of close and interesting games, though the entries showed a decided falling off, owing to the difficulties of getting four players together on an ordinary week-day evening, and to the greater attraction for golfers of Tollygunge, which is now so easy of access. It eventually resulted in a win for Mr. F. H. Stewart and Captain McCay, the latter of whom, though practically a beginner, has been showing such steady form throughout the season, but they had to work very hard for their victory two of their matches being only decided at the last hole, and the other two at the last but one. The ordinary ties were as usual nine holes each, and the final eighteen holes, and in this game Messrs. Stewart and McCay beat Messrs. Wild and Williamsom to whom they were conceding two strokes, by two up and one to play after an exciting game in which Mr. Stewart played good golf, and Mr. Wild, one of last year's winners also showed up well. The results of the various matches were as follows.

Mr. B. Sinclair and Mr. D. A. Cuthbert (1) beat Mr. D. L. Miller and Capt. Burn (2) by 2 and 1.

ON THE LINKS IN GREAT BRITAIN AND IRELAND.

THE Easter Meeting of the Royal St. George's Golf Club held at Sandwich, on 2nd and 4th April, was productive of some very fine scores, despite the fact that a strong westerly wind amounting to almost a gale was very unfavourable to low returns. Mr. S. Mure Fergusson was in fine form and for the club handicap memento returned a card of 79, which, however, with 4 strokes added as his handicap debarred him from the position of winner. On Monday, 4th, the wind was even higher, but notwithstanding this drawback, Mr. A. D. Blyth succeeded n making a new competition record of 75 with the following figures : 5—4, 5, 3, 2, 3, 4, 3, 4 = 33 out—54, 5, 6, 7, 4, 3, 3, 5 = 42 in. and in spite of his handicap of plus 3 his 75 secured him the scratch medal and the handicap prize.

In the foursome tournament some fine play was witnessed, the four surviving pairs of the earlier heats being Messrs. Caird and Hughes, C. M. Smith and G. E. Kekewich : S. Mure Fergusson and C. Eric Hambro, M. P., W. H. Murphy Grimshaw and James Tabor.

Messrs. Caird and Hughes somewhat easily disposed of their opponents, Messrs. Smith and Kekewich by 6 and 4, and Messrs. Mure Fergusson and Hambro beat Murphy Grimshaw and Tabor by 3 and 2, in the semi-finals. And in the finals although Messrs. Fergusson and Hambro had had many doughty foes to overcome on their road to victory, still the glamour of great names and great deeds has undoubtedly some effect, and from first to last the "crack" couple were equal to all demands and eventually scored a big victory over their final opponents, Messrs. Caird and Hughes by 6 and 4.

At Felixstowe, Mr. V. A. Pollock accomplished an extraordinary feat. Playing with his brother in a four ball foursome against Mr. Henderson and the Secretary of the club he holed the 18 holes in the grand score of 70, breaking Braid's professional records of 74 by 4 strokes, and his own, the amateur one, of 77, by 7 strokes.

Mr. W. Travis, the American Champion, is on his way to England, to take part in the Amateur and Open Championship, and Miss Mabel Higgins, one of America's most renowned lady players, is also en route, to compete at Troon in the great event of Ladies' Golf on 9th May, and following days.

Among the ladies, golf is at its perennial height. Open meetings Club meetings, matches and fixtures of all sorts are crowding thick and fast on each other. Captains of counties are very busy now and great and heated are the discussions on the alteration in the number comprising a county team. Starting when this "department" of the game was inaugurated five years ago, with a team 10 in number, the Central Committee three years ago reduced this number to eight ; at their meeting in January last still further, and according to universal opinion very unwisely, reduced the team to seven, did away with halved individual matches and effectually guarded against a tie of any sort occurring in the finals as was so unfortunately the case last November at Sunningdale.

Miss M. A. Graham, the Lady Champion of 1901 showed fine form at Moreton recently in a Medal Competition, winning the trophy with the splendid score of 74+4=78. Miss Lottie Dod of Tennis and Golf fame taking 81 strokes for the round. Cheshire and Lancashire have once again joined the Counties Association and both can muster very strong representative teams; these two counties with Yorkshire (under the able captaincy of that first-class golfer Miss Bertha Thompson) form the Northern Division.

The Irish Ladies' Championship will be held over the beautiful Links at Lahnich on 6th, 7th, 8th, 9th and 10th June. Hitherto this course has not been the privileged hunting ground of a Ladies Championship ; Portrush, Newcastle, Portmarnoch, having been the favoured and favourite Links, but those who know Lahnich are rightly much enamoured of the course and its surroundings and fresh from the competition and premier honors at Troon will be all Erin's most formidable champions amongst whom may safely be reckoned Miss Rhona Adair, the Misses Hezlet. Miss F. Walker Leigh (last years' runner-up), Miss M. E, Stuart, etc,

* * * *

James Braid is just now playing a remarkably strong game, and is by most "in the know" looked upon as probable open champion this year at Sandwich. Playing quite recently on the Links of the Cinque Ports Club at Deal he easily broke all former records, the exact figures of which his remarkable round consisted are as follows :—

Out, 4, 4, 5. 2, 5, 3, 4, 5, 4, =36 }
In, 3, 5, 4, 4, 3, 4, 3, 4, 4, =34 } =70.

His hitting was long, his iron play was strong, his putting accurate, and with confidence. The previous record was held by Mr. Eric Hambro, M. P. with a total of 75. Braid is now going to take up his duties at the New Club, Walton Heath, his many friends at Romford have in vain tried to induce him to remain there, and his loss will be greatly deplored on the popular Essex Course.

* * * *

Among other records Mr. R. H. de Montmorency made a new competition one of 74 at Rye, in Sussex. Those who know this very sporting and first-class Links will recognize from the following figures compiling his score that it was no mean performance.

Out, 3, 5, 3, 5, 3, 4, 4, 5, 4=36 }
In, 5, 3, 4, 5, 4, 3, 5, 4, 5=38 } =74.

Mr. Montmorency playing an ordinary round last year holed the full course in 71.

* * * *

Members of the Fettesian-Lorettorian Club recently held their annual competition at Muirfield ; it was won by Mr. Jopp with 84 despite a strong wind. Following the competition a match was played between this Club and the Edinborough Academicals, which resulted in a win for the Fettesian-Lorettorian Club by 10 holes. The teams consisted of 11 a side. In the match between the Bar Golfing Society and the Irish Bar at Formby on 8th April, the Society were disappointed at the last moment of the services of Mr. Marshall Hall, K. C., but in both signals and foursomes the B. G. S. were successful, winning respectively by 6 matches to 2 and by 3 to 1.

* * * *

On 25th May a professional match will be played at Guildford in which Braid, J. H. Taylor, Ralph Smith, and Jack White will take part.

* * * *

The Inter-'Varsity Match played over the beautiful looking course on Wednesday, 20th April was full of interesting and even unusual incidents For the sixth year in succession the dark blues have now won the contest, although at the end of the first round of 18 holes Cambridge was leading by 13 holes to 1, and there was every appearance of a speedy end to Oxford's run of victories. But Golf is essentially a game in which surprises play a prominent part, and the luncheon interval proved disastrous in its effect in the Cantabs. When 6 of the couples were in (the teams was 8 aside) Cambridge still led by 1 point, but the 7th dark blue man came in 2 holes up, thus turning the tables and giving Oxford the advantage of a hole, and on the conclusion of the last player's round it was found that in spite of his having been 4 down to Mr. Allen in the forenoon, Mr. Grundy had not only wiped off the 4 holes, but finished his round with a victory of 1 hole, thus leaving Oxford 2 up. Since the two 'Varsities tied in 1896 this is the closest match and especially full of incidents, one of the most remarkable of which occurred in the match between Mr. Alison (Oxford) and Mr. Wedderburn (Cambridge). Going to the last hole in the morning Mr. Alison's ball landed in the roof of the club-house and there it very inconsiderately remained. not to be done, Mr. Alison procured a ladder, climbed on to the roof and from there played a beautiful shot on to the green below and halved the hole in 5.

The best form displayed in the match was by Mr. Humphreys who finished 9 up on Mr. Hoffman the Cambridge Secretary. Mr. Humphrys' afternoon score was made up as follows :—

Out, 5, 4, 5, 4, 4, 4, 3, 5, 4=38 }
In, 4, 3, 4 4, 6, 5, 4, 5, 4=39 } =79

While the two great Universites were fighting for honour at Woking, the ladies of Great Britain were fighting for their country, their respective clubs, and their individual selves at Ranelagh. Instituted some 10 years ago by Miss Issette Pearson, this annual meeting has increased year by year in popularity until it has now reached enormous proportions while not even the limiting of handicaps, can keep the fair sex away.

Last year with 210 entries, the place seemed crowded to overflowing, but 40 more were added and the number on 20th and 21st April included nearly all the best known lady players of the period (that is to say from England and Ireland.) Miss Rhona Adav was there, also the Misses Hazlet, Miss Dod, Miss Glover, Miss G. C. Nevill, as well as an imposing crowd of ordinary scratch players. One of the great features of this meeting is the contest for the International Cup given by the Ranelagh Club, and now in 1904 for the first time England has succeeded in wresting it from the Emerald Isle. Next week I hope to give fuller details of this important fixture with the names of winners, etc.

The Hampshire ladies taking advantage doubtless (and very wisely two) of the cheap tickets issued by the Railway Companies for the Ranelagh Meeting are playing some of their county matches on Suburban Green. On Monday, 18th, Essex on their home green with a strong team scored a "grand slam" over their visiting opponents. On the Ranelagh Course next day. Sussex met and defeated them by one point and as it proved by one small putt in the last green.

THE BEIGHTON CUP.

THIRD ROUND.

UNITED SERVICE vs ST. JAMES.—After three unsuccessful attempts this match was brought to a definite conclusion on the 6th instant. The teams met on the Calcutta ground, there being a very large gatherin of spectators. The game was a very exciting one and was keenly contested from start to finish. The United Service men were in splendid form the combination of their forward line being very good, and they were eventually victorious by two goals to nil. The United Service rushed down at the start, but Durnford relieved and St. James attacked. Duff missed a chance of scoring, but Walkem sent in a shot which Hogg cleared at the expense of a corner Nothing resulted but St. James continued to press their forwards, losing opportunities owing to wild shooting. Then Spry got away for the United Service and a fine bit of passing by the front rank carried the ball to their oppenents' circle, where Szczepanski put through. St. James played hard to get level but were unsuccessful. After the interval the United Service again attacked and Dr. Wilson sent in a stinging shot, which Simpson stopped, but Le Fleming got possession and put the ball through. St. James made great efforts but were unable to reduce their opponents' lead, the United Service back division offering a sturdy resistance. The game thus ended in a win for the United Service by two goals to nil. It was a victory which was hailed with satisfaction by the public, for the school team on occasions adopt tactics which do not make for popularity. Teams :—

UNITED SERVICE.—Cooper, goal ; Captain Gardner and Dyer, backs ; Hogg, McCleverty and Wagstaff, halves ; Spry, Dr. Wilson, Le Fleming, Szczepanski and Arundell, forwards.

SEMI-FINALS.

RANCHI vs. HORNETS.—These teams met on the 5th instant when a good game resulted in a draw, but the match was replayed on the Rangers' ground last Saturday, and ended in a victory for the Hornets by the narrow margin of one goal to nil. The Ranchi representatives did not play up to their usual fine form, while their opponents gave a great display. The game began with fast exchanges and good runs by both the forward lines, then the Hornets got right away and Mabert passing to Apear, the latter sent in a good shot which Nehemiah saved : but L. Rosser was on the ball and banged it in before the Ranchi goal-keep could recover himself. The Hornets continued to press and forced two corners, but failed to convert. After the interval the Hornets again pressed and obtained a corner. Then Ranchi took the ball down and the Hornets had to concede a corner ; a shot by Daud just failed to find the net, but the Ranchi men kept the ball in their opponents' goal making desperate efforts to score. They were unsuccessful, however, and the Hornets won as stated by a goal to nil. Teams :—

HORNETS.—R. Brown, goal ; A Browne and Yakchee, backs : Young, A Rosser and Powell, halves ; Mabert, Simmons, Apear, Cooper and L. Rosser, forwards.

RANCHI.—Nehemiah, goal ; Isriprasad and Edward, backs ; Suleman, Sharan and Boss, halves ; Jasman, Daud, Sadu, Rev. Whitley and Pathras, forwards.

Referees.—Messrs. F. Lees and T. Walsh, Rangers.

UNITED SERVICE vs. SEEBPORE COLLEGE.—The meeting of these teams was looked forward to with the greatest interest for a good game was expected, nor was the large gathering of spectators on the Calcutta ground on Tuesday disappointed. The United Service had in no way gone off the form displayed against St. James's and once more giving a fine exhibition in all departments of the game won by four goals to nil. The forwards played a great game, Dr. Wilson and Messrs. Arundell and Le Fleming being very conspicuous, while the fine defence of the back division and especially the brilliant play of Captain Gardiner evoked loud and most deserved applause on several occasions. For Seebpore Lawton, Street, Lewty and Ansell were in good form.

The College were the first to attack and forced a corner, nothing resulted, however, and the United Service rushed down, a pass from Arundell glancing off one of the opposing backs and dribbling into the net. Seebpore tried to retrieve this reverse and a good run by Lawton ended in an unproductive corner. The United Service brought the ball back and Lewty conceded a corner. From the hit in Dr. Wilson almost scored, but Skempton saved, the ball was stopped by Le Fleming who found the net with a stinging shot. Following on the bully Arundell got away and taking the ball down himself scored the third point after tricking the Seebpore custodian. The college played hard after the interval and pressed time after time, Cooper being called upon to save on a couple of occasions which he did in masterly fashion. The United Service defence was splendid and they always got the ball away. At length Le Fleming once more got going and a good bit of passing culminated in his scoring the fourth goal. Seebpore played pluckily to the end but were unable to score, the final result being a win for the United Service by four goals to nil. Teams :—

UNITED SERVICE.—Cooper, goal; Captain Gardner and Dyer, backs; Hogg, McCleverty and Wagstaff, halves; Spry, Dr. Wilson Le Fleming, Szczepanski and Arundell, forwards.

Referees.—Messrs F. Lees and T. Walsh.

FINAL.

HORNETS vs. UNITED SERVICE. The final match in the tournament was played last evening, the usual big assemblage which attends final games lining the ropes on the Rangers' ground. The result was a win for the Hornets, a team who make up in individual brilliance what they lack in combination. The United Service men did not appear to be in such good form as in their recent displays against the Seebpore College and St. James's. They played a splendid game, however, and stuck to it pluckily to the end. The weather conditions were perfect at the beginning of the afternoon, but the storm which came up after half time just held over till the end of the game, the final stages of which were contested in a high wind. The Hornets were the first to attack, and going away forced a corner Nothing came of it; but they continued to press and L Rosser sent in a hot one, which was stopped by Cooper only to be banged into the net by Apcar. The United Service then had return, after determined rushes by the forwards they obtained an unproductive corner, then a fine run down by Arundell, culminated in a goal, Szczepanski finding the net. They kept up the attack till the interval. On resuming, the game ruled very even, neither team gaining any advantage, till Mabert got away for the Hornets and from a melee in front of goal the ball was put through by Knolles. The U. S. were on their mettle and tried hard to equalise. They did all the attacking, but could not break through the fine defence of the Hornets backs. Play was extremely fast and the U. S. forwards made desperate attempts, but were unable to score, the game ending in the victory of the Hornets by two goals to one. Mrs. Szczepanski gave away the cup and medals.

THE AGA KHAN TOURNAMENT.

(By Special Telegram.)

This annual tournament was commenced at Bombay on Monday, the 9th instant, when two games were decided. In all eighteen teams entered, but the Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders had to scratch at the last moment. The remaining seventeen teams are fully representatives of local clubs and there being a fair number of up-country elevens, good sport should be witnessed on the Cooperage and Marine Lines grounds during the ensuing twelve days.

The arrangements for the tournament have been well carried out by Mr. E. R. Fisher, the Honorary Secretary and a brother of Mr. Percy Fischer whose name and fame is well known throughout India.

YORK AND LANCASHIRE vs. ELPHINSTONE HIGH SCHOOL.—These teams met in the only game in the first round. The Elphinstonians were the first to get away with the ball; but in the greater part of the first half stood no chance whatever against the repeated attacks of the military team from Mhow. Play had been going ten minutes when the York and Lancashire scored their first goal and from this point up to the time of the team's crossing over the military scored with great freedom and when they changed ends the score stood 6 goals to nil.

The second half was productive of more even play and to their credit the High School eleven held their own to the finish, the concluding portion of the game being full of interest. But the military played cool defence and ran out winners by 7 goals to nil.

BOMBAY GYMKHANA vs. R. G. A.—The opening match in the second round a well fought out match was witnessed. Neither team showed very good combination, but there were many pretty bits of play. The soldiers had the advantage of weight; but the Gymkhana men were faster. At the outset the soldiers rushed into the Gymkhana half, Lazenby relieving to the centre; the Gymkhana then took the play into the Artillery half and forced a "corner." But the Gunners once more rushed to the other end where Brand misjudged the ball and Kewan shot into the net. After a spell of play in midfield the civilians attacked and the R. A. custodians kept out hot a shot; but a moment later Fischer experienced hard lines in not scoring, the soldiers' goalkeeper just managing to keep out a high shot Eventually the civilians secured a goal through Griffiths, and from now up to half time play ruled fairly even, and there was no further score. At the restart the Artillery attacked and Marsh saved a hot shot. Fischer was next responsible for a capital run down the wing from which he forced a corner, and a minute later Reed scored. The R. G. A. made strenuous effort to score and during the rest of the game the Gymkhana had a very anxious time; again and again the soldiers carried the ball into their opponents' circle and experienced hard lines in not scoring on three or four occasions. The whistle went with the score standing: Gymkhana 2 goals; R. G. A. 1 goal.

Lawn Tennis.

LAWN TENNIS IN CALCUTTA.

CALEDONIA A. CLUB.—A small party of members and friends witnessed the finals of the Handicap Tennis Tournament on Friday last, the counter-attactions being too strong to admit of a large attendance.

Last year's winner, E. O. Elliot, had got through all his matches with ease, but his opponent, H. Chandler, had stiff fights with G. V. Wade in the third round, and W. J. Morrow in the semi-finals, so that Elliot was the favourite for the challenge cup, the gift of the Right. Hon'ble Sir Joseph Dimsdale, Bart, P. C., M. P.

The match proved one-sided, for although Chandler made a good show in the first set, he fell off form altogether in the second, and lost the match by three sets to love.

Mrs. J. H. Dimsdale presented the cup to E. O. Elliot, the runner-up receiving a traveller's watch from the club. The Honorary Secretary called for a vote of thanks for Mrs. Dimsdale which was heartily accorded.

Things are not always what they seem. Soon after Lord Falmouth's return to the Turf he won a race at Salisbury. As his popular colours had not previously caught the judge's eye that season, the noble owner was naturally pleased, especially as the horse had apparently something in hand.

"Goater" his lordship said, addressing the rider of Mohawk, is he not a good horse? He won rather easily, it seemed to me."

"Well, my lord," bluntly returned Jem, "he certainly won easy enough; but I don't know how he'd have gone if any of the other beggars had been spinning."

The late Count Lagrange had a somewhat unique method of trying his young stock. His invariable system was to draw one against the other in much the same fashion as though arranging for a coursing meeting.

Eventually, of course, the winner and runner-up of the party would be known. These would be tried with some older horses on whose form the stable could depend, and according to the result of this last spin the Count gauged his yearlings.

Lisette and Cherubin were invaluable for many years as "tell tales." Not only were they to be relied on, but, what was more essential under the circumstances, they could both go at a rare bat for three furlongs, beside being quick off the mark—the latter an indispensable qualification when trying yearlings.

The Horse.

USEFUL HINTS AND OPINIONS.

THE following suggestions in regard to training and conditioning trotting horses are taken from the published writings of some of the leading trainers of America from the days of Hiram Woodruff to the present time :—

"No man is fit to handle colts or horses unless he has perfect control of his temper, for you can do much more with coaxing than you can with harsh treatment ; for, when an animal becomes afraid of his trainer he loses confidence and will not improve in that man's hands. This applies to aged horses as well as colts."—A. J. Feek.

"Further than halter-breaking I have never thought necessary during the first year. The fall and winter after weaning, they should have all they will eat, and on every dry day they should run out in the fields and take all the exercise they will ; for plenty of food and plenty of exercise are equally necessary to accomplish the best results.

"There is no process, not even the starving process, that I think more injurious to the colt than overfeeding, with little or no exercise. The legs cannot grow and develop without plenty of galloping, and if well fed and turned out in the fields in good weather, they will run and play."—A. J. McKimmin.

"The first thing in training a horse is to make a careful study of the animal, learning all his peculiarities, faults weakness, habits, etc. I think one vital mistake made by men training horses is that they do not seem to think that horses are made of flesh and blood, and very nearly human in all their ways."—John Splan.

"Two-thirds of the promising and fashionably bred colts are ruined through mismanagement, which includes over-conditioning, bad shoeing, excessive use of boots, weights and ointments, which incite and weaken, through increased growth, the hoof one of the most fruitful sources of malformation.' —Alexander Dunbar.

"It used to be a custom to send a three-year old colt, half-halter broken, and give him one month to complete his education, and return it fit and safe for any use. This was a great mistake; the man had either to half kill the colt or return him half broken, or perhaps both. It takes a bright, intelligent boy ten or fifteen years to complete a good education and it can hardly be called fair to expect a dumb beast to be fit to graduate at the end of a month. A colt, when thoroughly broken should have a graceful, easy carriage, a pleasant mouth, be obedient, and yield promptly to every requirement. He should go at his work cheerfully, and with as much apparent pleasure as his driver takes in riding after him. By such behaviour he would indicate at once that he was an educated horse, and not an abused and half-killed brute. To take a green colt and return him in this condition requires considerable time—at least three months."—H. C. Woodnutt.

"The commencement of Lady Suffolk's history interested those who remembered her performances five-and-twenty years before and revived the discussion about the forcing system and early maturity. It was admitted that David Bryant trotted the mare too much in her first season; but some still held that early maturity was a good thing, and predicted that it will be hereafter one of the chief aims of the breeders. I am somewhat afraid that it will; and being convinced that it will be mischievous, and end in the premature decay of many good horses, I have protested against it. The argument is this: If a colt can be made as good at three years old as another will be at five or six, there is a great saving of time and expense. Now, this is not the proper way to state the question; for a colt may be as fast at three as another is at five or six, and still be an inferior horse ; and it is my opinion that the method adopted to make him at three equal to what the other will be at six is almost certain to render him an inferior animal as regards duration."—Hiram Woodruff.

"In regard to colts, I have previously observed that the forcing system in the raising of trotters was not advisable. I am satisfied that it is not only expense laid out to no use, but for a purpose which is likely to be mischievous. Very early maturity is only to be attained accompanied with the liability, the almost certainty, of corresponding early decay ; and, to achieve such excellence as that to which Dutchman attained, the trotting horse must have all his powers long after the period at which most running horses have left the turf. The reason is obvious. The trotter has to be educated up to his best and strongest rate, and the education takes many years Dutchman improved until he was ten or eleven years old, and it may be questioned whether his very best capabilities were ever brought out ; for the change into new hands just when he had come to the highest pitch that we know of was not altogether favourable to continued advance. Therefore, when a trotting horse has attained the ago of seven, and is aged, or arrived at natural maturity, he has only just reached that stage when we may begin to expect the development of his finest powers ; and that development, according to my experience is likely to be gradual, and to continue for along time. No doubt many horses never improve after they are seven; and in some cases the speed comes to them all at once, as the saying is. In the former, the constitution, breeding or form is probably defective. A century of work would not improve some horses. They get to their best early, and only because their best is very bad."—Hiram Woodruff.

"Many trainers ought never to be allowed to get into a sulky in possession of a whip. They are so constituted that they cannot control their temper, and they often whip when there is no better reason for it than the gratification which the doing so yields their ill-nature. One single cut with the whip at the wrong time will not be forgotten by some horses during a whole season, and may cause the horse to become timid and irritable—may, in fact ultimately ruin him—causing him to prove unreliable, both as regards gait and everything else considered as exceptionally valuable."—Farmers' Home Journal.

"Drivers are born, not made, and it is impossible to teach a man so that he can get up behind a horse and drive him well unless he has the natural gift; and only this, with experience, makes a good driver. You want a steady, firm hand, and yet a light one. You want a firm hand, but not a rigid, unyielding one, for a certain ease is necessary to give the horse confidence If the driver be nervous and unsteady, the horse will soon know it, and his steadiness will be affected by it. Never take more hold on the horse than is necessary to give him confidence, and to hold him steady and safe. A good driver must be a good judge of pace and of distance, cool-headed, with presence of mind, and able to take in a situation at a glance and act upon it instantly. He must be ready to see an advantage the moment it presents itself, and seize it the moment he sees it. All this, as I have said, cannot be learned; there are certain qualities of the brain and the hand that must in a degree be natural to the man, though they may be perfected by acquirement. A driver may be good when going at a 2-40 gait, but the same man may be all at sea when going at a 2-16 gait. The difference in results that will follow a move at 2-40 gait and that which may follow a move at 2-20 gait is marvellous."—Charles Marvin.

"In order that a fast horse should be under circumstances to do his best, he should be as much at his ease in his harness and general rig as possible. If he is not, he is placed at almost as much disadvantage as if sore or stiff, or suffering from some bodily ailment. You may see horses brought out of the stable to trot, with a very tight check to keep their heads up, and a tight martingale to keep it down. Such a horse is in irons ; and when to this is added a dead drag at the reins, and no movement of the bit from end to end, I cannot see how he should do his best. People talk about a steady, bracing pull ; but, in my opinion, that is not the right way to drive a trotter. There is a great difference between letting go of your horse's head and keeping up one dull, deadening pull all the time."—Hiram Woodruff

"Bits are often kept in places to which the frost penetrates in very cold weather. The bits become frosted ; and, without a thought of what he is doing, the man claps a frosted steel bit into the horse's mouth. The consequence is a sore mouth, just about as certainly as if the bit had been nearly at a red heat ; and then the man bothers his brains to find out what caused it. If he had put the frozen bit into his own mouth, it would have brought the inner skin of the lips away with it, and then he would have felt the mischief. In very cold weather, take your bits to the fire, and be sure that there is no frost in the steel when the bit is placed in your horse's mouth."—Hiram Woodruff.

"My experience has been that no horse can be successfully driven with anything like a severe bit. I never saw one that was even broken of the habit of pulling in that way. If you put a severe bit in the horse's mouth and pull on it it makes the horse mad and irritates him; the further you drive him and the harder you pull him, the more he will pull against it. When I was a boy, almost every trotter I saw would pull in a disagreeable manner when being driven at top speed. At the present time I cannot think of one horse that is anything like first class that pulls enough to make it disagreeable for a man at any time. A great many people think that every horse should be driven with an overcheck. I can remember when I had the same opinion myself. I am now satisfied that it is a serious mistak'. There are a great many horses that will not take kindly to an overcheck, and if you insist on using it on them it will sooner or later spoil the horse's disposition to a great extent "—John Splan.

"The mouth is now fine and sensitive; and it ought to be kept so, because this is the great organ of communication between a good driver and the trotter, when he is cultivated and improved into a fast horse. What you want the trotter to do when he is at speed is to be got into him through his mouth. You may encourage him by speaking to him, or sting him into a greater effort with the whip; but neither of these is half as good as the play upon the reins, with which you let him know what you want through his lively sensitive mouth. You are then to keep in constant mind the necessity of not impairing the colt's mouth by rough handling of the reins. If you pull and lug at the bit, the colt, in his efforts to resist what hurts him will very soon pull too, for he will find out that this numbs and deadens the jaws; but this is at the expense of ruination to the mouth. It will become hard and insensible ; and the first and the largest part of the mischief which goes towards the making of a hard puller is done."—Hiram Woodruff.

'Checks and bits have a good deal to do with balancing the horse, and the less restraint or annoyance these appliances give the horse the better. I like plain bits If you cannot control a horse with a plain bit, you have small chance of making a trotter of him at all. Such bits as the 'Perfection.' 'Rockwell,' etc., I consider pernicious contrivances. There are cases where a horse has improved with a severe bit, but they are exceptional. With what extreme measures have achieved I do not quarrel, but I do argue against using artificial and unusual appliances unnecessarily, and this applies not only to bits, checks, shoes, weights, etc., but to everything connected with training."—Charles Marvin.

"The stallion (Kemble Jackson) was then sent to me to be handled; and, in order to prevent him from throwing down his head between his knees when he broke, the well known Kemble Jackson check, since in use all over this country, and introduced in England also, was invented. It answered well in this case, and must always be of great use in similar ones; but I think it is often applied in cases when it is not only unnecessary, but does harm instead of good."—Hiram Woodruff.

"I would teach every colt or horse to drive with and without blinds or winkers."—A. J. Feek.

"How far to work a colt, I cannot tell you any more than I can how big a lump of chalk is. Colts differ in size, stamina, disposition and strength. Some have got to indulge in a little foolishness before they are ready to do right—play with the birds along the fence, or the shadows of the poles—while others are strict business all the time. It is safe enough to figure not to exceed four mile a with any colt and not less than two and one-half. With the proper care, such as walking and turning out, colts do not need much jogging. They are ready to speed very soon after getting to the track "—Thomas J. Dunber.

"I think it is a mistake to job horses too far. From three to five miles a day is ordinarily sufficient for most horses, except that on one day in each week it is best to job seven or eight miles, so the horse will get a little leg weary. Some days three miles and some four and five miles; but I do not believe in slow jogging for more than one mile. After going the first mile, it is best let them jog along good and strong, as I am satisfied that from three to five miles stiff jogging will do a horse more good than twenty miles at a slow, poky gait. I also think a great many horses are jogged so far and slow that it takes away their speed; besides, it gets monotonous to the horse, and he does not take his work as cheerfully as a horse that is jogged short and lively. "—Edward F. Geers.

"The object of the driver should then be to support him with as little pull as possible, but still to support him. The horse with a good mouth will always feel the driver's hand; and, when the latter is as skilful as he ought to be for the handling of the first rate fast trotter, he may play upon the rein with a touch like that of a harper upon the strings, and the horse will answer every touch with the music of the feet and wheels."—Hiram Woodruff.

"It will be remembered that I have spoken of three prime qualities in the trotting horse; viz., speed, bottom and the power to pull weight. I was already confident that little Flora Temple possessed the last, as well as the other two. People are apt to think that great size is demanded for a weight puller, but there are plenty of notable instances to show that this is a mistake. Still, though there need not be great size, and though some big horses are the very worst of weight-pullers, coming right back as soon as they are required to take along a wagon and a heavy man, strength is certainly demanded This strength in small horses is the result of a nice adaptation of parts, together with particular power in the loin and hind-quarters. If a little horse of that sort be particularly examined it will commonly be found that, they are long in all the moving parts; and their quarters are generally as big, and sometime a deal bigger, than those of many much larger horses."—Hiram Woodruff.

A young Tasmanian newspaper man had a somewhat peculiar experience the other night. He was invited to a party at a home which had recently been blessed with an addition to the family. Accompanied by his best girl he went, and on meeting his hostess at the door, he naturally, after the customary salutations, asked after the new baby. The lady was suffering from a severe cold in the head, which made her slightly deaf, and she mistakenly supposed he was inquiring about her cold. She replied that though she usually had one every winter, this was the worst she ever had ; it kept her awake a good deal, and at first confined her to her bed. Then noticing that the scribe was becoming pale and nervous, she made confusion worse by remarking that she could see from his looks that he was going to have one just like hers, and asked him if he wished to lie down. The paper came out as usual next day, but that pressman has given up enquiring about babies.

The Theatre.

VAUDEVILLE AT THE THEATRE ROYAL.

A GOODLY house assembled to see the entertainment given last Saturday night at the Theatre Royal and on the whole those who rolled up had no reason to be disappointed. The first point to appeal to the critical observer was the excellence of the management and this was strikingly manifest all through the evening. The name of the responsible party was not vouchsafed on the programme but whoever he was there could be no question as to his being an old hand at the game.

But to pass to the performance itself. First on the card was Mr. S. Garrett, a gentleman with a good presence and a pleasing voice, but "Blow, Blow thou winter wind" was rather too much for his powers and in a slightly less ambitious venture he would have undoubtedly scored higher than he did. Mr. Bert Flatt, who in the role of a musical burglar witched the audience for an all too brief period in the first part is that brand of comedian who walks straight into the affections of his audience and keeps there. The fact of his being a masterly performer on the bassoon mouth organ and banjo was not "in it" in the opinions of the audience compared with his touching reminiscences of his friend Jones "who was so pow'ful fond of his wife." Mr. Flatt worked like a beaver the whole evening, and, with his capable and artistic help, was a great factor in the undoubted success of the entertainment. Messrs. Franklin and Douglas in their "Americanisms" would have been better had they been louder : their dancing was distinctly good. The second part consisted of a playlet entitled "After Dinner" where Mr. Flatt scored again as also did Mdlle. Morosini who not only acted exceptionally well, but sang a number of songs with great verve, in addition to the excellent rendering of the lively numbers allotted to her, her words could be heard in the back row of the pit. Mr. H. Mathew was obviously not sufficiently rehearsed and moreover he did not appear at all happy in the part. "Down South," which was the concluding item, hung dreadfully at the start, and the liberal use of a blue pencil at the beginning would be a great advantage. Mr. Mathew's acting was not as good as his make up. In fact the piece would have been infinitely better if the whole of the first scene had been ruthlessly cut out. From the moment the "Lost Father" enters the piece is excellent—in fact it would not be too high praise to say that nothing equal to it has ever been seen in Calcutta. The fun is kept going at the highest pitch and when the curtain finally drops the audience must be indeed hard to please that is not in a state of absolute enthusiasm. One little suggestion and that is, the words of the coon songs should be sung by one man, they were not quite distinct enough and the excellent effect was somewhat marred.

Special mention must be made of Mdlle. Morosini her first song "Espana" was just a trifle too much café chantant, but her second a laughing song was so undeniably clever that one could not help feeling that the performance would have been more enjoyable if the costume had not been so absolutely modelled on the "Folies Bergeres." Her cake walking was exceptionally good.

During the evening Mdlle. Marguerite Maryx gave some pianoforte solos, well selected and brilliantly played, that were alone worth the entrance money.

Altogether it may be said that "music, song and dance" with a few emendations here and there should hold the stage for an unlimited number of Saturday nights.

Throughout his short but eventful career, the Marquis of Hastings only once lost the wonderful command he had over his nerves. No matter how trying the situation, he was apparently unaffected by it, though a few amongst his friends more than suspected the concealed fire that raged within him.

Lady Elizabeth was a great favourite with her owner, and when she ran in the Middle Park Plate, for which event she started a warm favourite, his lordship backed her for no less than £17,000.

The Marquis watched the race without moving a muscle, but when the filly finished a bad fifth the proud spirit gave way, and the noble plunger was fain to lean on the rails of the Cesarewitch stand for support. Just at that moment, Maria Marchioness of Ailesbury who knew of the "dash," caugh, sight of the Marquis, and immediately resolved to rouse him from the despairing mood into which he had fallen. Approaching him with her betting book, the marchioness feigned to be greatly upset at the amount she had lost over the race, and, putting her tiny volume into his hand, requested his lordship to tell her exactly how her affairs stood. For an instant the unfortunate plunger looked at her ladyship in a somewhat dazed manner, and then, quickly recovering himself, took the book, glanced at it, and, returning it in his usual polite manner, calmly said, 'Your ladyship loses twenty-three pounds."

By the look he gave the marchioness she knew his lordship was grateful for the interruption, and the spirit which enabled him to pay attendtion to such a trivial affair after sustaining so heavy a blow had few warmer admirers than the beautiful, warm hearted marchioness.

THE BEST OILS FOR MOTOR CARS.

Wilburine for cylinders ... Rs. 6-8 per gallon Tin. | Valvoline for Bearings, etc. ... Rs. 5-0 per gallon Tin.

Extract from the "Autocar."

LUBRICATING OILS.—[2422]—It may be instructive to your numerous readers to have the experiences of a motor car experimentalist on the behaviour of lubricating oils for motor work. In the first onset I tried various sorts of oils, all of which left deposits of carbon and gumming matter in the cylinders and valves. These deposits are serious drawbacks, not only to the working of the pistons and valves, but also interfere with the proper sparking at the ignition plugs. I then tried the Valvoline Oil Co.'s oils, using "Wilburine" for the cylinders and "Valvoline" for the bearings, etc.; these being quite pure mineral oils, no deposits either of carbon or gumming matter were left. Every time the pistons, etc., have been examined they were quite bright, clean and well lubricated. The valves also keep in good condition and require very little regrinding. I have been quite free from sparking troubles since using the above lubricants. Any dust that alights on the working parts is easily wiped off, whereas with other oils dirt stuck fast through gumming.

Very much smaller quantities of these oils ("Wilburine" and "Valvoline") about one-third to one-quarter, are required, which more than balances the extra first cost. The wearing surfaces are besides in a magnificent condition. These advantages —viz., high-class lubrication, freedom from deposit in cylinders, gum in bearings, absence of sparking troubles, are too important to be neglected by any motorist.

There is a tendency to use various greases, instead of oils. Engineers have over and over again proved that greases give much greater frictional losses than oils; with motor car engines and bearings the lubricant that gives the least possible friction is the best.

I have referred to the advantages the motorist gets. I will mention another advantage these oils have to those whom the motorist passes, viz., the absence of the fried-fish-shop smell so often noted. Several persons have been very much struck by the absence of smell; even when the car has been standing for some time with the engines running, no trace of offensive odour has been apparent to the bystanders.

I mention these experiences, having no interest in the Valvoline Oil Co., that others may be benefited and save themselves trouble and their neighbours some annoyance.

SOME POSSIBLE OUTSIDERS FOR THE DERBY OF 1904.

IT is a peculiarity of the Derby that while in the great majority of years the favourite, or at any rate one of the best supported competitors, is returned the winner, still there is almost a regularity with which the victor turns up from the ranks of the "outsiders" and the cycle seems to be something like five or six years. Thus it was in 1898 that Mr. Larnach's Jeddah won the great race at the record odds of 100 to 1, and out of the five years since then the winner has on four occasions been the actual favourite in the Ring and even for weeks prior to the race, and on the fifth occasion one of the most highly thought of candidates, Ard Patrick, secured the spoils. Before Jeddah there were five winners at short odds against or odds on, and then came Sir Hugo, who at 40 to 1, defeated the great La Fleche in 1892; there was then a series of practical favourites till the deadheat in 1884 of St. Gatien and Harvester at fairly long prices; another series of four years carries us back to the 20 to 1 chance Sir Bevys and again five years further back in 1873 there was Doncaster, or as he was originally named "All Heart and No Peel," at 45 to 1: and so on, as anyone may see for himself by referring to some book of turf records. It may, therefore, be not altogether unreasonable to prophesy that this year the Derby will be won by something from the "any price you like" division, and indeed the events of the Craven Meeting at Newmarket and the more recent form exhibited in the Newmarket Stakes, lend some little justification for such an expectation.

Throughout the winter and early spring such betting as was recorded showed clearly that the race was generally regarded as a match between Mr. de Rothschild's St. Amant (St. Frusquin—Lady Loverule) and Mr. Musker's Henry the First, son of Melton and Simena, each of whom was always quoted at 5 to 1, or slightly longer or shorter odds, but with never more than a point between them. These two champions, however, cut but sorry figures at the Craven Meeting; St. Amant failing in the Biennial Stakes, apparently through sheer want of courage, to concede 12lbs. to His Majesty (Melton—Silver Sea), who as a two-year-old had run three times without ever getting into the first three; and Henry the First finishing unplaced without once looking like a winner in the Craven Stakes, which fell to the lot of Airlie, a bay colt by Ayrshire out of Lady Ernie with the Duke of Westminster's Grey Plume second, beaten a head after a most punishing and exciting finish. His Majesty and Airlie are both possible, if not probable, competitors for Derby laurels, and it may be indeed that one of them is destined to have much to do with the finish of the great contest at Epsom on the 1st of June, as each one is finely bred and capable of much improvement by the eventful day; but there are others who though little thought of, or perhaps quite ignored at the present time, may come into serious reckoning, and amongst them may possibly be another Jeddah or Doncaster.

First amongst these "long shots," one may draw attention to Mousqueton, the property of Mr. D. Baird and trained by Enoch at Newmarket. This colt is a son of the great New Zealand-bred sire Carbine and Musa, an Oaks winner, and granddaughter of Bend Or, himself a grandson of the mighty Stockwell; time and again has it been proved how efficacious can be this union of the blood of a Colonial sire and a Stockwell mare, and it would not be surprising if one of such breeding were one day to achieve the highest distinction possible on the Turf. Mosqueton individually is a colt of excellent merit and gameness, and as a juvenile not only won three good races, but ever performed with credit and unflinching courage. According to the training reports he has been continually doing good and steady work, no one knowing better how to train a Derby horse than his astute trainer, and it is at least significant that the colt was not entered for any of the handicaps so far published, from which it is a fair deduction that his connections regard him as of some promise for the classic races.

Then there is Admiral Breeze, belonging to Mr. Musker, who did not run at all last year, but on his first outing as a three-year-old he finished a respectable fourth to Airlie in the Craven Stakes with his stable companion Henry the First behind, form which has since been enhanced by the victory of the "Admiral" in the Tudor Plate at Sandown. Admiral Breeze is a chestnut son of Velasquez and Seabreeze, by Isonomy out of St. Marguerite by Hermit, his sire being by Donovan, so that he can claim a pedigree equal to any and belongs to the famous No. 4 of the Bruce-Lowe families. It is remarkable how rarely has a chestnut horse won the Derby, but singularly enough the only two winners of this colour during recent years were the long-priced Jeddah and Sir Hugo, so that those who "listen with credulity to whispers of fancy and pursue with eagerness the phantoms of hope" may find herein an omen for the success of Admiral Breeze at long odds.

Mr. Lionel Robinson, who trains with S. Darling at Beckhampton, owns at least one possible "outsider" in Challenger by Isinglass out of Meddlesome, who at Epsom on the Great Metropolitan Stakes Day (the 19th April) won the Nork Park Plate, run over the last mile of the Derby course, in a common canter by six lengths, and as a winner over the course he will certainly merit consideration should he appear fit and well at the post.

Richard Marsh of Newmarket has no less than thirteen of his charges entered, and of these Mr. Arthur James's colt, Jupiter Pluvius, holds a fair outside chance. As a two-year-old he ran unnamed as the St. Simon—Andromeda colt, but his achievements were very poor, for out of five attempts he only once earned winning brackets in a Mile Nursery Handicap on the last day of the season, when he carried the moderate weight of 7st. 4lbs. His record so far for the present season is, however, remarkably good and proves that he has come on by leaps and bounds and moreover that he is a splendid stayer. On the first day at Lincoln he easily accounted for the Chaplin Plate, run over ten furlongs, and then beat a fairly good field in the Northamptonshire Stakes (1 mile 5 furlongs) in a common canter, though he was disqualified for going the wrong side of a post. It is perhaps a mistake, however, to attach too great importance to this performance, with the example of Florinda, who won the same race as a three-year-old last year and did nothing at all afterwards. It may be that this stable will provide a more likely candidate in Montem, a daughter of Ladas and Kermesse, and as it is nearly a quarter of a century since a filly won the Derby (the last was Shotover in 1882) perhaps it is time that this happened again. Montem last year won the New Stakes at Ascot and the July Stakes at Newmarket, so that she is quite entitled to take rank with the very first-class, but probably her journey is more likely to be the Oaks, where, however, she will have to tackle the flying and unbeaten Pretty Polly.

From Kingsclere, Porter may as likely as not send up the winner, for he has a string of eleven from which to choose, the most likely one, so far as public form goes, being the Duke of Westminster's Rydal Head, though he can hardly be regarded as an outsider, indeed from all one can hear at the time when these notes are being written this son of St. Frusquin is very likely to prove the winner. The others are all practically "dark horses," with the exception of the Scribe, and it would be no surprise if this colt proved to be the best of the lot, disappointing as were his performances in his juvenile days; for with Isinglass, a Triple Crown winner, as his sire, and Memoir, who won the St. Leger as well as the Oakes, for his dam, he could hardly be better bred, and his victory would be welcomed by all lovers of racing, for there is no better sportsman than his owner, the Duke of Portland: still he will probably give way to his stable companion Rydal Head.

But whatever may be the result of the great race and whether it is destined to be won by a favourite or an outsider, there is every promise that there will be a good field of thoroughly trained horses to compete for the Blue Riband of the Turf, and may the winner prove both as a race-horse and at the stud to be a worthy successor of the heroes of the past.

THE EVERGREEN "W. G."

THE English Cricket season opened at the end of April under better auspices of weather than the game enjoyed last year. The first match of the season, London County vs. Surrey, as reported in our London Sporting Letter, is not one that would call for special attention from us, but for the circumstances that the London County Captain was none other than Dr. W. G. Grace and that the veteran batted with all the vigour and certainty of the "W. G." of twenty years ago. As the "Grand Old Man of Cricket" he certainly promises to justify the title, inasmuch as he will attain his fifty-sixth birthday on the 18th July next, and played in his first match at Lord's in July 1864. Dr. Grace played in a game at the Crystal Palace not long before the official commencement of the season, and we then noticed that the critics considered him to be in form: it was anticipated that he would prove up to his mark when real business began: but his innings of 52 for London County seems to have surpassed all expectation. He was at the wicket for nearly an hour and a half before Lockwood dismissed him with a good ball, and his style seems to have lacked nothing of the ease and power of his best days: we are told that he timed the ball without difficulty, that some of his drives were very powerful and that his placing to leg and his late cuts were quite perfect. Abel, Richardson, Murdoch and Braund were among the players, but "W. G." stood out once more as head and shoulders above the best of the batsmen on the ground. His innings was played without a mistake, and until a fast break back from Lockwood dismissed him he never made a mistake. The performance for a man nearer sixty than fifty was indeed remarkable, and we look forward with no ordinary interest to Dr. Grace's doings during the season which is now in full swing.

Dr. Grace, as we have said, completes the fortieth year of his cricketing career in July and we do not think that the records of the game can show a player who has borne a prominent part in first-class cricket for a period nearly approaching it. George Parr, one of the best men of his day, had a long and successful cricketing life: but between his first match at Lord's and his last was twenty-five years. A. P. Lucas and W. L. Murdoch maintained their form for periods as long or longer: it is more than twenty years since the latter made 286 not out for an Australian team against Sussex at Brighton, and though he is still to the fore—was playing for London County in this first match of 1904 at the Crystal Palace—he is not the man he was. The late Arthur Shrewsbury occurs to mind as a player who kept his form in all its vigour for an unusually long period: students of cricketing reports will no doubt remember that Shrewsbury's batting in 1902 was the subject of general remark as being something worthy of special commendation for a player who had then some twenty-six seasons of first-class cricket behind him.

The minor lights of cricket, those who do not achieve fame in "first-class" cricket suffer from their obscurity: the chronicler who watches the game with the eyes of a lynx cannot spare attention from the doings of the conspicuous, however remarkable the achievements of these lesser planets. The late Mr. Fred Gale ("the Old Buffer"), whose recent death removed a link between old time cricket and the modern game, played until near his eightieth year, but it goes without saying that his passionate love of the game outlived his "form" by thirty years or more.

One of the most extraordinary cricketers who blushed unseen by the patrons of what we call public cricket was Mr. Charles Absolon who belonged to a Holloway Club. He was born in the year 1817, began playing in his fourteenth year, and when we last heard of him, seven years ago now, he was still going fairly strong though in his 80th year. Mr. Absolon in his degree was a remarkable example of the hale old cricketer: he took a just pride in his game and could boast that in the fifteen years of play, which ended in 1893, he had scored 24,189 runs and had taken 7,339 wickets. He confessed to "going off a bit" when he had passed the ripe cricketing age of 72: for his tale of runs in 1889, in which year he attained that age, was but little over 1,000, whereas in 1877, being then 60 years old, he made 1,179 runs and took 362 wickets: as a bowler he lasted longer than as a batsman, for in May 1896 he took four wickets for five runs. We have written of Mr. Absolon in the past tense, for his days in the cricket pitch are over, if indeed his mortal career has not ere now reached its close. Had his lines been cast in different places this wonderful old man might have ranked among the historical giants of the game: but even as a player of only minor cricket his performances deserve to be rescued from oblivion, if only as an example of human vitality.

Were we to take the records of cricket during the earlier half of the nineteenth century and search these for names and performances to set beside those of Dr. Grace and his contemporaries, we should find that in our grandfather's cricketing days men played to a more advanced age than they generally do now, or have done since cricket was made the exact science and serious business it is since become. But any parallel drawn between early or pre-Victorian cricket and the modern game would be misleading and false. For example William Lillywhite took eight wickets in a first-class match in 1850 when he was 58 years old. In 1852 Mr. E. H. Budd played a capital game for Burton at Lord's, being then 67 years old. But cricket in those days was not the tax upon strength and staying power it has become with billiard table wickets: there was not the same wear and tear. Matches were very often played to a close in one day and it was quite the exception for a match to run into a third day: fixtures were fewer and a player was rarely asked to play in more than one match a week: a very different state of affairs from that now prevailing, when owing to pressure of engagements only a proportion of matches are played to a close at all, and when players often hurry from the ground to the railway station to speed across England and play another match. Such a life as the first-class cricketer leads now-a-days makes heavy demands on stamina: which suggests the reflection that had that gamest of old players Mr. Absolon ever found his way into the team of a first-class county his cricketing career might have been much shorter, if more brilliant.

Dr. Grace's achievements then must be tried against those of his contemporaries and his pre-eminence remains unchallenged. When he scored his ninety-ninth "century" (for M. C. C. V., Sussex) in 1895, which he did at the rate of about one run per minute, a critic remarked that "for any other man rapidly approaching his forty-eighth birthday this would be held a phenomenal performance, but no achievement of 'W. G.' can occasion more than passing surprise." And perhaps the fact that the great cricketer put together 52 runs in his first match of the season which will see his 56 birthday and did it in a style which was more like that of a young man whose hand half a season of cricket had put thoroughly in, than that of a veteran who has just taken bat in hand after the winter, will occasion less surprise than gratification. "W. G." is a national possession: and his achievements make for pride in our nationality.

Sporting Notes.

SOME surprise has been occasioned by the announcement that the Commissioner of Police, Bombay, last week issued orders whereby a couple of well-known firms of bookmakers, who have hitherto had business premises in that city, wherein they have been conducting S. P. betting on the principal English races, have had to close their establishments. This mandate was issued under the provisions of the Bombay Gaming Act of 1897, and though it is possible the aggrieved bookies will endeavour to get the order set aside, we fear they will find the law against them. Together with the surprise caused by this announcement, there has been a feeling of alarm in certain quarters that the prohibition will extend to the operations of the bookmakers in the recognised enclosures of race-courses. From enquiries made we conclude that there has been a disposition to make a mountain out of a molehill and, while we sympathise with the firms concerned in the suspension of this branch of their business, we are informed that there is no intention of interfering with the privileges hitherto enjoyed by the bookmakers who do business in India. The action, so far, is entirely confined to the two firms, who, by opening business premises, have brought themselves within the four corners of the Act. The order of the Bombay Commissioner having been promptly complied with, we are given to understand the incident is closed.

Our Bangalore correspondent writes:—Three extra days' racing are already announced to preceed the big meeting at Mysore next month. These are all to be Saturday functions, the 28th instant, and the 4th and 11th June being the dates mentioned. Each race will be worth Rs. 150, of which Rs. 25 will go to the second animal. It remains to be seen how the entries will pan out, but the Bangalore Stewards have certainly made a move in the right direction, by giving possible visitors from outside stations something to do with their ponies. There will certainly be a considerable influx of bookmakers soon, and owners will be able to back their animals to their hearts' content. That marvellously well-bred horse Carberton by Carbine out of Miss Butterwick is in regular work now on the race-course, but his forelegs are giving his trainers some anxiety. At first, indeed, they seemed to be going very seriously wrong, but are now much finer. English horses are bound to feel the jar of the hard ground on Indian courses, and a very experienced racing amateur lately recommended special rubber-lined shoes for Carberton. What makes matters worse is that Bangalore has had very little rain this year so far, though it is all round us and must come before long. Certain improvements are also being taken in hand with regard to the Bangalore Course, and on the whole it may be hoped that Carberton will be fit and well at the Mysore and Bangalore meetings.

The Mysore Stewards—who are distinct from the Bangalore executive—are taking much trouble with the Mysore race-course in the way of levelling and draining, and incidentally it may be noted that these efforts have been extended to the polo ground, which has also been levelled, and is watered from hydrants which have been constructed round it. Stabling has been erected in the neighbourhood of the race-course, and with regard to the polo ground it is an absolute picture, and beautifully green. The Mysore management is represented by Mr. Maconochie, I.C.S., Colonel J. P. Grant, Colonel J. Desaraj Urs, Mr. M. Kantaraj Urs, and Mr. P. F. Bowring, and anxiety is great that the Mysore race week, which will embrace the Birthday Polo Tournament, should be a success. It must be confessed that as I write the entries for the race meeting which have come in are not very promising, but it is to be hoped that some will come at the last moment, and that the second entries will improve matters. It would be a thousand pities, after all the trouble which has been taken, and the really good stakes which are offered, if the meeting should be a failure, or even result in mediocrity.

In Bangalore also a good deal is being done, and owing to an excellent fall of rain during the last week the course is looking beautifully green and fresh. I have an impression somehow that Bangalore will be the better meeting of the two, but time will show. Horses here are looking pictures of health, and are ready to kick themselves out of their skins in the morning air on the course. Bundook, Rapid Pilgrim and Peppercorn are entered at Mysore, and the first-named is simply above himself, although doing good work. He kicked half-a-dozen times in thirty yards, from sheer lightheartedness the other morning, and although it is early days to prophesy, I doubt if anything will beat him for the Maharaja's Cup at the capital. Peppercorn galloped six furlongs this morning, the clocking being 1min. 27secs., but the course was decidedly heavy after the recent rain, and is proverbially a slow one. Two unnamed colts in Watson's stable—at present in Gerrard's charge—also did a goodish gallop this morning, being eased towards the end, but they are evidently both good ones. Old Ocean looks as well and fit as ever—I heard his age variously stated as from 12 years to 20—and other horses in steady work are Wild Raven, Goldsmith, Wallgrove, Trenton, Caroline and Johore. Colonel Desaraj Urs' new English pony—which it strikes me there will be some difficulty in measuring—does not fill the eye at present. He may be—indeed he looks like a galloper, but if, as is rumoured, it is intended to put him to the stud afterwards, I should doubt success in this direction.

In connection with stud matters, it may interest some of your readers to know that Messrs. Madden and Company of Madras have just purchased five beautifully-bred fillies in Australia for the Mysore Government stud farm. Of these, three are by Gassoon who was sired by Galopin, with Yattendon blood on the dam's side, whilst the other two are by Haut Brion (more St. Simon blood), and of Musket descent on the side of the mother. These mares, when old enough, will be mated with Courage, the well-known Australian sire now at Kunigal. A Kunigal country-bred that will be worth watching at Mysore and Bangalore is Philistine, belonging to Colonel J. P. Grant. It will be remembered that he won last year both at Bangalore and Poona.

Reports of the extra day's racing at Rangoon, the Mussoorie Gymkhana and the Dibrugarh Sky Meeting appear in our Turf columns to-day.

During the week previous to that on which the last mail left England, three celebrated names were added to the equine obituary of the year. The death of Bendigo we have already announced: within a few days of his demise there died the famous old time American horse Foxhall and the more recent favourite O'Donovan Rossa.

The experience of the Central Provinces would seem to suggest that big game shooting is less popular than it used to be, or that sportsmen have less time than they once had to devote to shikar, observes the Madras Mail. Despite the fact that rewards of Rs. 500 each were offered last year for the destruction of four man-eating tigers, not one of the tigers was killed. A claim was made for the rewards offered for the Salekassa tigress in Bhandara, but it was not proved. However, this tigress has ceased killing in Bhandara, but is said to have moved to another district. The Central Provinces authorities require, as is natural, very clear proof that a tiger killed is a man-eater before paying over the reward, but such proof is almost impossible to obtain, and refusal to pay leads sportsmen to say unkind things about the officials. However, a new system has been introduced in the Jubbulpore Division which should prove more satisfactory. A reward of Rs. 150 will be paid at once for the shooting of any man-eater, to be followed by a further reward of Rs. 350 at the end of six months if human kills in that district cease entirely. It appears that in 1903 tigers killed 190 persons in the Central Provinces and that 199 tigers were killed. Forty-eight persons were killed in the Sambalpur District alone, and the whole of these deaths are attributed to one tigress, which has infested the Ambadhona jungles for some years.

Out of a total of 180 deaths due to panthers and leopards, no fewer than 110 took place in the Raipur District, and this district also suffered severely from wolves, 42 deaths out of 50 for the whole of the Provinces being credited to it. The mortality among cattle from wild animals is reported to have been much greater than in the previous year, being put down at 16,810, while snakes are reported to have killed 584 more cattle. Tigers, panthers and wolves account for an increased mortality amounting to some 2,600 animals. In the Chanda District it is believed that the increase in the figures is due to better reporting, but elsewhere it is thought the increased mortality is due to the disappearance from the jungles of the game which forms the natural food of carnivora, and to the growth of scrub round the villages during recent famine years which has given increased cover to beasts of prey.

"Toots," the correspondent of a Madras contemporary, has some remarks to make on the subject of some recent fatal shikar accidents, as thus:—Having had a certain amount of experience with these creatures, I cannot help thinking that with a little more caution at least one of these two unfortunate victims might be now alive. To take the case of the first one. He had wounded a tiger in the night, and, on following it up in the morning, found it lying facing him. As is well known, a tiger can lie with its body practically hidden behind its head, and in the jungle where it would be lying amongst grass and undergrowth, it does not in such a position offer much of a mark to a man who has been tracking it in the heat of the hot weather and carrying a heavy rifle. At such a mark I understand Mr. Woodhouse must have fired, and weather he hit it or not I do not know, but the brute bounded out and seized him. Surely it would have been better to have waited, and, instead of taking this frontal shot, to have got a side shot at a vital spot later. I have known of face shots to come off, but have seen a face shot at four yards that had no stopping effect. Since this unfortunate accident I had the chance of an exactly similar face shot on an unwounded but very angry tigress in thorny grassy scrub, but preferred to wait for a side shot later, which I eventually got.

As regards Mr. Todd at Chandia, it is difficult to tell exactly from your note what really happened, and no details are given in the case of Lieutenant Johnston, but one at least was injured from following a wounded tiger. Every year in the hot weather, men, especially subalterns with no experience of these animals, go out for shikar, and if they wound a tiger, naturally don't wish to lose it, and without proper precautions proceed to follow it up, hoping to find it dead. I have done the same myself, and so know exactly how one looks at it. One finds blood marks and goes on thinking that the beast must be dead, and that it will be all right, and when one does not find it as soon as one expects, one continues to proceed to find it. If the tiger is not dead the chances are all against the sportsman, as the former hears the approach of the latter and gets himself into the aforesaid position which offers the smallest and the least visible mark to the latter and the greatest facility for sudden attack for himself. In such a case, if one does not find the tiger dead at once it is best to send for the village cattle, black buffaloes preferably, and drive them through the part of the jungle where the wounded beast is supposed to be. If it is not dead there will be quite excitement enough in despatching it when discovered by the buffs under more equal circumstances than by direct attack, when one cannot tell exactly where it is. Considering the number of good sportsmen who are killed in this way a little advice to the inexperienced ones may not be altogether out of place.

The following unusually good scores were made at the last shooting competitions with Rook rifles, 100 yards range, at the Tollygunge Club :—In the Affinity Quick-firing Match, Mr. P. C. Palin and Commander E. J. Beaumont broke all their 8 chatties in 30 seconds.

In the Gentlemen's Singles, 10 shots at the target, Mr. J. H. Allen scored 50 points—a possible.

Many people in Calcutta will share our regret on reading of the death in London, on the 8th instant, of Mr. Arthur Bois, late senior partner of Messrs. Cook & Co., Calcutta.

Mr. J. S. Middleton, of the Cadamaney Estate in South Mysore, has passed his four score years, but withal the hand of this veteran shikari has not lost its cunning. We hear that the other day Mr. Middleton brought down an elephant with a ·577 bullet which penetrated the animal's forehead and dropped it in the spot. Mr. Middleton, by the way, is the only planter in South Mysore who holds a license to shoot elephants.

The Annual General Meeting of the Mysore Game and Fish Preservation Association takes place at the Club on the 31st of this month.

We are glad to learn that the Government of Mysore have given permission to Mr. G. E. Ricketts, Deputy Conservator of Forests, to accept a cheque for £100, presented to him by Lord Manners on the occasion of his visit to Mysore. It will be remembered that Mr. Ricketts was instrumental in organising a most successful shoot in the Mysore hills for his Lordship.

It is a pity that inclement weather should have interfered with H. H. the Maharaja of Mymensingh's shoot the other day. His Highness had to return to Mymensingh on the 15th after about ten days in the howdah, but during that period a very creditable bag was secured. It consisted of two splendid tigers, two leopards, ten deer, one large bull buffalo and over a hundred partridges, hare and other small game.

There appears to be no lack of shikar in Kulu at present. Leopards are the terror of the shepherds and their flocks so that these worthy gentlemen have bethought them of keeping as many sheep dogs as possible and the tables have been somewhat turned in master spots. The other day, according to a Kulu correspondent, a leopard, which had killed seven goats belonging to Guddis on the Praur mountain, was himsels killed by three large sheep dogs. Another leopard who seized the dog in the village of Balu was at once attacked by every dog in the village, about a score of them. A huge mongrel between a sheep dog and a fighting bull terrier got fixed on to his throat and tore it open, the rest of the pack worrying wherever they could get a bite. The leopard had no chance and was killed in a few minutes. Three bears were also shot in Bilan on the 29th of last month and another bear was shot on the 5th. Three more leopards were shot in the Chauri district of Mandi by shepherds whose flock they were stalking.

Captain T. G. Peacocke, Honorary Secretary, has issued the prospectus of the horse and dog show which will be held at Simla on 4th June. The Viceroy gives a cup for the best horse in the show, and the Committee a similar prize for the best pony. There are the usual jumping competitions for horses and ponies. There are ten classes for horses and ponies and fifteen for dogs.

Athletic Notes.

OUR Bombay correspondent writes :—The yachting season in Bombay was brought to a very successful conclusion on Saturday, when a series of races were sailed, finishing at Hog Island. A light breeze was blowing from the south-west, which made an outing on the harbour a pleasant change after the heat on shore. The first yachts to start were those of the "B" class, with time in hand. The course was from the Committee Vessel round Butcher Beacon (leaving it to port), round Red Channel Buoy, north of Butcher Island (leaving it to starboard, round) B.W.H.S. Buoy, north north-east of Elephanta (leaving it to starboard), and finishing off Hog Island Bunder, a total distance of between ten and eleven miles. Sayonara crossed the line first, followed by Erin and Trixie, Butcher Beacon being rounded in the same order as at the start. On the beat to the Red Channel Buoy Erin overhauled Sayonara just before rounding the mark, and Trixie overtook the latter yacht when near the B. H. S. W. Buoy, the result being as follows :—

The "A" class yachts, which were the next away, sailed the same course. Isca was the first to leave at 3h. 2m. 30s., followed by Melody, Sapphire and Stella. No change of order took place on the run to Butcher Beacon, but on the beat to the Red Channel Buoy Melody overhauled and passed to windward of Isca, and Stella overtook Sapphire just before reaching that mark. From then to the finish it was a dead run before the wind. Melody increased her lead and won the first prize, the times being as follows :—

The Tomtit class sailed a course of between nine and ten miles. They all got away to a fairly good start, Meg being first over the line, closely followed by Tomtit, Hawthorn, and Lapwing. On the run to Tucker Beacon Meg maintained her lead, and rounded the mark 18 seconds ahead of Tomtit, with Lapwing 37 seconds later, and Hawthorn about the same interval. From this mark to the Red Channal Buoy it was a free reach.

Tomtit and Meg had a short luffing match in which the former gained the lead, and went round the buoy 28 seconds ahead of Meg, Lapwing still keeping the same distance behind the leading boat, and Hawthorn losing ground slightly. No change took place on the run to the finish, but the distance between the boats was somewhat increased. The finishing times were as follows :—

The usual dinner took place in the evening at Hog Island, bringing to a close what may be considered to have been one of the most successful yachting seasons of recent years.

As I telegraphed you on Monday night, the Aga Khan Hockey Tournament opened on that day, and during the past week we have witnessed some interesting games. The second round was continued on Tuesday evening, when the Middlesex Regiment, from Secunderabad, met the Pioneers, a local civilian club. The game opened in favour of the soldiers, but during the next twenty minutes things ruled very even, play being rapidly transferred from one end of the ground to the other. Eventually, however, the soldiers put on three goals in rapid succession, while close upon half-time the civilians sent into the net. Crossing over with three goals to one in their favour, the regimental team throughout the second-half kept up a hot attack on the Pioneers' goal. They were, however, unable to penetrate the civilians' defence, and there was no further scoring. The same evening the Royal Scots, from Kamptee, met the Customs, but a very disappointing exhibition of the game was witnessed. A couple or three years ago the Scots had one of the finest hockey teams in the Presidency. Since then, however, they have lost the services of a number of their best players, and those who have come in to take their places are by no means such good exponents of the game. As to the Customs the majority of their players are practically new to the game, and in the match on Tuesday, there was plenty of evidence of this fact. "Sticks" were frequent, while one player caused no little amusement by the way in which he wildly careered about the ground waving his hockey stick all over the place. The result was a win for the Scots by seven goals to nil. By the way, the refereeing in this match was by no means as good as it might have been, one referee in particular failing to pull men up on many occasions, when he certainly should have done. For a tournament of this kind it is essential that official referees should be appointed who have a thorough knowledge of the game.

In consequence of the Poona Gymkhana scratching and giving the East Lancashire Regiment a walk-over there was only one game on Wednesday evening. The contesting teams were the Grant Medical College and the Cathedral Old Boys' "B" team, and an excellent exhibition was given by the medical students, who eventually ran out winners by eight goals to nil. This team has entered the tournament for the first time this year, and on all hands it was acknowledged that rarely have we had a team in Bombay who could give such a pretty exhibition of the game—their combination was brilliant, every man was always in his place, and their play was marked by an absence of infringements of the rules. On Thursday evening a couple of matches were played off, both were productive of somewhat ragged exhibitions. On the Cooperage the Cathedral Old Boys' "A" team met the Royal Garrison Artillery from Karachi, and won by four goals to nil. For the first 20 minutes of the game the soldiers managed to hold their opponents, but after that the Old Boys were constantly on the attack, and but for bad shooting the margin in their favour would have been much greater. On the Marine Lines ground "D" Company of the Cheshire Regiment were opposed to the Byculla Education Society's eleven, and a close struggle was witnessed. There was little to choose between the play of the two teams. Play on either side was not of a very high order, and the match resulted in a win for the Cheshires by the only goal of the match, which they were somewhat lucky in scoring during a scrimmage in front of the net at the close of twenty minutes' play.

The concluding game in the second round, and the opening game in the third round, were played on Friday evening. On the Marine Lines' ground the York and Lancaster Regiment were opposed to the Elphinstone College, and a capital game resulted. There was very little to choose between the two teams, and from start to finish it was practically a case of "anybody's game." At half-time the College held a lead of one goal to nil. Soon after the re-start the military players considerably increased the pace. Several times they sent in shots, but for a time the civilian custodian remained unbeaten. Eventually, however, the military succeeded in equalising, and a few minutes later added their second point from a scrimmage in front of goal. With only five minutes left for play, the College once more made the score level, but a couple of minutes before the close the military forward made a grand combined rush and again found the net, the game terminating in a win for the soldiers by three goals to two.

The opening game in the third round was between the Gymkhana and the Royal Scots, and was of a somewhat one-sided character, the Scots asserting their superiority in all departments of the game, especially towards the close. In this match the civilians made a big mistake in making changes in their team. To start with, they put a man in goal who had never played in that position before, and another change was made in the half-back line, which weakened rather than strengthened it. The Committee would have done well to have played the same two outside half-backs as against the Royal Artillery. The change should have been at centre-half, which was really the weakest spot in the team. In the early part of the game the Gymkhana held the Scots in check with success. In the second-half, however, they went all to pieces, the military team eventually proving victorious by four goals to nil.

The match of the tournament, so far as it has gone, came off yesterday (Saturday), when the Grant Medical College and the Cathedral Old Boys "A" team met on the Marine Lines' ground. The general opinion was that this match would really decide the ultimate winners of the tournament. Never have I seen a bigger crowd at a hockey match in Bombay than that which turned up to see this match. The supporters of both teams came in their hundreds, and when the game started there must have been close on four thousand people present. The game itself was a grand one, both elevens playing at the top of their form. The only goal of the match was scored soon after the start, when Fido found the net with a brilliant shot and thus gave the Medical College the lead. From this point to the close the "Old Boys" did their utmost to score, but they could not penetrate the College defence, while the students came very near adding to their score on two or three occasions. It was a grand game, and excitement ran high, the supporters of the teams lustily cheering one against the other. The hero of the match was Fido, the College centre forward, who, I have no hesitation in saying, is the best centre forward taking part in the tournament. The other match, yesterday, was between the East Lancashires and the Middlesex Regiment, the winners being the latter, who scored four goals to two.

In an interview in Mr. C. B. Fry's new magazine Dr. Warre, the headmaster of Eton, tells the following cricket story :—

I once committed myself in an article I wrote to the opinion that the majority of boys, if left to themselves, would never play any games that called for great exertion. A remarkable instance of this occurred during the earlier half of the last century. A certain celebrated public school was then established. The first headmaster, a very distinguished man, who afterwards became a bishop, noticed that the boys, who were always very industrious and attentive in school hours, only loafed hopelessly through the playtime. So one day he took off his coat, called an assistant master to bowl to him and he began batting hard in the playing field. Gradually a few of the bigger boys joined in, and to-day that school sends out some of the best scholars and best cricketers you could wish for.

"Remember this," continued Dr. Warre, "the school with a good record for games is almost always in the front rank of scholarship. So far from the one destroying the other, I maintain that wise athleticism helps to good scholarship. Fagging in the cricket or football field does good in this way, it ensures the attendance of the younger boys who would otherwise only loaf about the field. I prefer, perhaps, that the boys' playtime should be at their own disposal. It is the more ideal plan, but I see and recognise the necessity for certain amount of discipline in the playing-field as in the schoolroom.

The death is announced of William Spiller, the well-known professional billiard player.

It was only in the early part of last November that he left England for Africa in search of better health, after a long and wearying illness in that country. Born in Hertford on 21st February 1868, Spiller first learnt to play the fascinating game at the Vine Hotel in the town of his birth. He was not twenty years of age when he made his first public appearance, for in the early part of 1887 he competed in the Jubilee "spot barred" Handicap promoted by Messrs. Wright and Company at the Royal Aquarium, and won by the late H. McNeil. His first match of real importance was with Dawson at the Royal Aquarium in November 1890, when he received 1,000 in a game 4,000 up, spot barred. The scores were called 2,173 all and in an interesting finish Spiller won by 93 points. Such a promising player was Spiller that Messrs. Burroughes and Watts soon after this engaged him as billiard coach, a post he kept until his health broke down. Most of Spiller's matches were played at the Dean Street establishment, and the season of 1895 saw him perhaps at his best, for in that year he successfully engaged such formidable opponents as Dawson and Diggle. His biggest break was 529 made in a spot barred match with H. W. Stevenson on 19th March 1896. His other best runs were 419 in 1896 and 407 in 1897, both against C. Dawson. He had great power of cue, a fine touch, and was particularly good at making nursery cannons. The deceased was married and leaves a widow.

Among last week's important English cricket results were the following :—

Leicestershire beat Warwickshire by eight wickets.

Notts beat Kent by three wickets.

Yorkshire beat Cambridge University by an innings and 117 runs.

Oxford University beat Somerset by an innings and 45 runs.

Marylebone beat Sussex by 24 runs and Surrey beat Essex by 125 runs.

The question of fixed-seat rowing has again cropped up in England mainly at the instigation of London R. C. members, we believe. No thoughtful man can get away from the fact that a preliminary course of fixed-seat rowing is essential to everybody who aspires to become a first-class oarsman. This on the face of it. The art of rowing is an intricate one at all times, and very few can excel at it intuitively, so to speak. Some "born not made" oarsman may, perhaps, master its mysteries right away, but the species is rare. How, therefore, can the average oarsman expect to commence his training on sliding-seats?

In the final round of the Amateur Championship of Racquets H. K. Foster, the Worcestershire captain, defeated Eustace Miles by 15-8, 15-5, and 15-11. On Monday, the 25th ultimo, Foster played E. M. Baerlein, the holder, in the championship round, and won. Full details in our London Sporting Letter.

1893-6—Inter-University Singles, for Oxford.
1893-6—Inter-University Doubles, for Oxford, with F G Ridgway (three times) and J L Johnson (once).
1894, 1900, 1904 } Amateur Championship.
1894—Amateur Doubles Championship with F G Ridgway.
1896—Amateur Doubles Championship with P Ashworth.
1897—Amateur Doubles Championship with P Ashworth.
1898—Amateur Doubles Championship with W L Foster.
1899—Amateur Doubles Championship with P Ashworth.
1900—Amateur Doubles Championship with P Ashworth.
1903—Amateur Doubles Championship with B S Foster.

That rowing does not shorten life was demonstrated anew at the end of last month at the unique assembly of veteran rowing men, which took place at Putney. The L.R.C. eight-oared crew which won the Grand Challenge Cup at Henley thirty years ago—in 1874, to be precise—were photographed together, and afterwards dined at the L.R.C. headquarters. Their names are :—(Bow) B. Horton, C. S. Routh, C. E. Routh, E. B. Parlour, A. de L. Long, F. L. Playford, S. Le Blanc Smith, F. S. Gulston (stroke), V. Weston (cox). It may be noted that Messrs. Smith, Playford, Long, and Gulston also won the "Stewards" in the same year. A glance at the names, however, will show that Ibsen's heredity theory has a deal of truth in it after all. What's bred in the bone," etc., has been proved a truism, notably in the case of Mr. Long and Mr. Le Blanc Smith. When a new edition of Dr. Morgan's "University Oars" is issued, emphasis should be laid on the historic aquatic gathering in question.

Mr. C. C. Pilkington, the Oxford, Lancashire, and Middlesex cricketer, was married on 21st April to Miss Emilia Lloyd. Mr. Pilkington played for Oxford against Cambridge in 1896, scoring 4 and 44.

Old Cambridge men will have heard with regret the announcement of the death of Mr. John Hilton Ridley, who was one of the crew which turned the tide of the Oxford successes under J. H. D. Goldie, in 1870. But Mr. Ridley was not only a fine oar, he was also an athlete, and in 1868 won the Quarter Mile for Cambridge in the Inter-University Sports in 51secs. In the following year he was given a place in the University boat, and rowed two behind Goldie, who was also rowing for the first time in the race. Cambridge was not successful on that occasion, but in 1870 Mr. Ridley occupied his old place in the boat, and had the satisfaction of being one of the crew which beat Oxford in the boat race for the first time after nine years. Mr. Ridley, who was educated at Eton and Jesus, took his degree in 1871, and then became a civil engineer settling down in Northumberland. He had been ill for some time before his death. In Dr. Morgan's book, "University Oars," a letter is published from Mr. Ridley, in which he says, I certainly think that the training for the "Varsity Race could not possibly damage a man unless he was in a bad state of health to begin with, and such a man is not likely to be chosen. As for myself, I felt more 'fit' and well each day as we got on in training; in fact, I never was better in my life."

Last Saturday evening a sporting littl. match was brought off on the Kidderpore water over a half mile course by two crews of Calcutta Rowing Club members. Messrs. Tassie and Wilson and Messrs. Hales and Blumenthal having entered for the Tub Pairs event in the regatta that fell through last month, decided to row the race nevertheless, and brought it off before a small but very select gallery. It has been our privilege but once before, in a rowing connection of over thirty years, to gaze on a larger and more awe-inspiring bow than Mr J. A. Tassie—that was the memorable occasion on which Messrs. F. C. Danger and J. B. Hoare won the Tub Double Sculls three years ago. Mr. C. S. Wilson, too, has plenty of beef, so that when the crews got aboard their craft the prospect of a win for the big 'uns, who weighed about ten stone more than their opponents, seemed assured. In spite of the crab with which Wilson led off, they soon had a lead and with Hales and Blumenthal practically settled half way, they forged ahead and won easily by ten lengths.

The Second Regatta of the Calcutta Rowing Club will be held in July and will include that usually popular race the Class Fours and the Junior Sculls, for which Biffen's new skiffs are shortly expected. We might suggest that intending entrants for the Class Fours begin bestirring themselves to get their crews together. Coaching is available and will be on hand whenever members notify their desire for such to the Honorary Secretary.

Messrs. Thacker, Spink and Co. are bringing out a new edition of their War Map. Even the most high priced maps now in circulation have most defective information regarding the Liao-Tung Peninsula, where the interest at the present moment, of course, centres. By a piece of good fortune the publishers have come across a Russian Survey of the Peninsula recently and have included the additional information obtained therefrom in an inset on the extremely generous scale of forty miles to an inch, the country covered being practically up to Harbin. The publishers have endeavoured to bring the eccentric Russian spelling into line with that favoured by English newspapers, but in some cases it will be found that the spelling of words does not quite agree with the English. The information contained on the map may, however, be reckoned on as being quite reliable. The printing is in six colours, and the price twelve annas.

London Week by Week.

London, Friday, 29th April, 1904.

HAVING held a Court at Buckingham Palace on Friday evening, the King and Queen embarked for Ireland on Monday. The "Official Programme" published in the papers, covers their Majesties' movements until 4th May, when they re-embark at Kingstown. The intention to make the visit in any sense "private" seems rather to have failed, for private letters confirm the newspaper reports which describe the welcome of the King and Queen as splendid. What brought the ebullitions of royalty to boiling point was the Royal visit to Punchestown on Tuesday and Wednesday: and I doubt not that the visit to Leopardstown to-day will evoke demonstrations equally cordial.

The much-needed Aliens Bill passed its second reading by a thumping majority on Monday night. If we could be astonished by any vagary of C. B. & Co., the attitude of some of that Great Man's supporters would have startled us; some among these got up and wept hysterically over the fathomless iniquity of refusing alien criminals a haven of rest in these islands. A short and useful contribution to the debate was Sir Howard Vincent's: that level-headed man told the House that 13,000 alien criminals were sent to our gaols for various offences every year.

We were rather taken aback on Thursday morning to learn that on the 21st a mixed force of bluejackets and Hampshires had stormed Illiq on the Italian Somali Coast. It was on the 1st, if I remember aright, that Mr. Arnold Forster told the country that the Mullah's forces had been reduced to a condition of such débris that operations against him were over. The remains of that Mullah and his men had escaped into Italian territory and were to be there left alone. Now the merest pen and-ink fellow can see that there is a difference between keeping the field and holding a fortress well planned and strong as Illiq appears to have been: but it was inconsiderate of the Mullah to sustain such severe losses in men and animals and then put up such a good fight as he did on the 21st under any circumstances. It has made the Government look rather foolish.

Matters are not going too well with Russia apparently, successes in sinking unarmed transports notwithstanding. That discovery of mines floating down the Neva with obvious designs on two ships of war must have been disconcerting, whether they were set afloat by disaffected Finns or anyone else. Now it is reported that a local militia is to be formed for the defence of Sakhalin, that dreariest and worst administered of convict settlements. If true, this idea of arming convicts in the cause of Holy Russia, suggests paucity of material: it is difficult to imagine that they can be depended on to do anything, but turn against their guards and those in authority over them. A telegram from St. Petersburg yesterday said that Russia has now four submarines ready for work at Port Arthur. Like the cooly I am a very poor man who knows nothing, but it does cross my mind that if I had got four such terrible engines of war and wished to get the full value out of them I should keep my possession a close secret and bring the submarines into action to the devastation of mine enemy next time he made the attack which is now about due. Of course if I had no submarines at my hand, and wished to prevent another attack on my port, it might occur to me to let mine enemy know by a side wind that I had received incredible quantities of submarines per goods train. I shall watch for news of the next Japanese attack on Port Arthur with peculiar interest.

Professor Hans Delbrück of Berlin is, I believe, a man of much account in Germany; his mind is the mirror of all that is most representative of German thought. I hope this is not so though, because the professor has just been letting himself go in a journal or magazine with a (to me) unpronounceable name and the telegraphic summary of his views is attracting attention. He says that the mission of Germany is to prevent the world from becoming British. He regards the Anglo-Saxonisation of the universe as a mere matter of time if Germany does not step in to prevent it. Germany, he says, must be exerting her power to the utmost to enforce the principle of the equal rights of the plurality of nations. I am not quite sure that I know what that means, but perhaps it is the "own correspondent's" way of watering down "the equal rights of all nations" when it would be comprehensible to mean intellects like my own. So far there is no great cause of quarrel with the professor, but when he goes on to express his opinion that "war may still be avoided between Great Britain and Germany" one asks what in the name of Anglo-French agreement is the matter with Germany? I glean that he anticipates with cheerful confidence a fierce row between Russia and England when the former has done with Japan or when Japan has done with Russia and that event he says "should supply Germany with the unique opportunity of saving her place as a World Power." Meantime we can only stare in amazement and ask how and where is her place as a Power, World or otherwise, threatened. It is difficult to believe that the professor really speaks for his Fatherland.

The New Army Order is directed against the exercise of "interest" I suppose. Under this officers are forbidden to write to officials at the War Office privately about personal matters as steps, appointments, transfers, etc.; they are forbidden to ask for any interview with any War Office official without written permission from the General, unless they belong to battalions abroad, when they may apply for an interview direct. "Attempts to obtain favourable consideration of any application by the use of outside influence are forbidden:" such attempt will be held to prove that the officer is not qualified for the post he so attempts to obtain. Dear me! Has "interest" been so mischievous as to require such measures as these? I can quite understand the anxiety to check the stream of anxious enquirers who have written to ask for something and "run up to town to ask what my chances are:" these are numerous to a nuisance as I can see for myself: but has "interest"—sheer downright exertion of influential friends—been the means of jobbing round pegs into square holes to such a degree that drastic measures are needed? Men will have to be very careful what they say to friends, as if anybody ask for anything on behalf of an officer the officer will be held responsible unless he can prove that he had no knowledge of the application.

To-day is the Private View of the Academy. Having spent Wednesday there among the pressmen, and having this letter on my hands to-day, I beg leave to postpone detailed remarks till next week. The show struck me as particularly strong in portraits, though there are no sergeants of the startling kind that catch you firmly by the eyes and bid you sit down and let the effect sink in. The new gallery has been open for several days and it is on my conscience that I did not write of this show last week.

Watts is represented by five pictures: he grows allegorical to mystery. "Whence, Whither?" (No. 39), a chubby child just out of the dark sea behind him, liked me best: but it irresistibly recalls "Good luck to your fishing," and one is inclined to ask the chubby child what he has done with his wings and hand line. Sargent has a capital likeness of "Toby M. P.;" the man himself alive, alert. J. M. Strudwick has a beautiful allegory of the school we know, "Passing Days." There are some really great portraits: Shannon's of little 'Joan Ratcliffe," Sargent's "Mrs. Hugh Smith,' Richard Jack's wonderfully graceful "Mrs. Leonard Avery," and the Hon'ble John Collier's daring achievement "Mrs. Anthony Hope Hawkins," in gold and yellow in startling harmony with the lady's red brown hair. Among the landscapes nothing sticks more in mind than Mr. Charles Whymper's "On the Top of Schichullion," lichen rocks tenanted by a few ptarmigan in summer dress, with wonderful atmospheric effects. Mr. Adrian Stokes' "November in the Dolomites" is another striking bit of work.

Miss Nellie Farren died yesterday. Her name will always be inseparable from that of the Old Gaiety, behind whose footlights she made her last public appearance the night before the house was closed for demolition. Her famous benefit in 1898 provoked the most extraordinary display of affectionate loyalty to an actress ever seen in London: people assembled in hundreds at the theatre door more than 24 hours before the curtain was to rise and the total realised was £7,000. Nellie Farren's popularity was probably greater and wider than that of any burlesque actress before or since, and she owed it entirely to her boundless animation, good humour and native drollery. She was not a beautiful woman: she lacked the "presence" which goes for so much; but success showed how other gifts more than compensated for those nature denied her. Who that saw Nellie Farren in Little Dr. Faust will ever forget her? or as the street Arab in Aladdin?

But one dare not begin the congenial task of reviewing the Gaiety pieces in which Nellie Farren shone: that were to write the history of the old theatre for just quarter of a century, and that the brightest period of its career first under Mr. Hollingshead and then under Mr. Edwards. Graceful, original, sympathetic, and full of ready humour, Nellie Farren had no twilight in her stage career: it was cut short abruptly by the rheumatic attack which crippled her and for more than ten years she had been more or less an invalid. Her death was due to some affection of the heart, but her end was unexpected, and only on Wednesday did there appear any cause to expect it.

Exceedingly clever and pathetic is Miss Hilda Trevleyan's reading of the part of Amanda Afflick, the workhouse girl heroine in "'Op o' me Thumb," which piece, having been played by the stage society, was promptly secured as a curtain raiser to "Saturday to Monday" at the St. James'. I am not over partial to moving plays, but there is a freshness and humanity about this little piece that fascinates. 'Op o' me thumb is engaged at a laundry and reads penny novelettes at odd moments: she lives in a world of dreams whereunto mangle and soap suds enter not. Out of her novelettes she invents parents and relations to satisfy the searching curiosity of her fellows: but the action centres on her appointment of Horace Greensmith (Mr. Nye Chart), a working man who brings his "other shirt" to be washed, to be her lover. The man has never even noticed her, but they make acquaintance one day when he comes for that shirt and he then learns that he is 'Op's ideal. He is a good fellow and offers to take her for a Bank Holiday outing, but 'Op, who is observant, sees that he would be ashamed to be seen with her and refuses to go: so she declares she has been fooling him and they part with manifest reluctance on both sides. Curtain. A little, little thing, but a veritable gem of minor tragedy.

Sir Edward Clarke had a dig at the cryptogramists in his speech at the Savage Club on Saturday night. He delighted the savages by demonstrating that by the careful application of Mrs. Gallup's principles it could be shown that William Shakespeare wrote the prayer book version of the psalms. His remarks were timely as they were busy with the annual festival at Stratford on Avon last week, and the "London Shakespeare League," which, I believe, aims at keeping alive that which will never die, was hard at work all Saturday visiting such remnants of Elizabethan London as have not been county councilled out of existence, in hearing speeches and in dining at the Cri: (the reckless modernity of it! but I suppose they had to dine somehow and somewhere). They did what they might to import a Shakespearian atmosphere to the banquet, regaling themselves with music of the period, including a "pavan and galliard for three viols and virginals." This seems an appropriate place to remark that on Saturday was sold for £305 the original warrant on which John Bunyan was committed to Bedford gaol on 15th March 1674, the term of imprisonment during which he is believed to have begun the "Pilgrims' Progress."

The dramatic world is rather disturbed by the latest move of the Lord Chamberlain. Managers of theatres have been informed by circular that encore verses and gags must be submitted to the censor before they may be used on the boards. As regards encore verses these are often topical and, I conceive, not to be called impromptu : and if the censor is to "pass" the original verses of a song it seems only consistent that he should pass any additions to it. "Gags" are rather different and I imagine it is the restriction placed on these that annoys the manager. After all the hardship should not be very great: the Lord Chamberlain is not likely to take proceedings against an actor who happens to gag one night : and if the utterance be incorporated into the play there will be plenty of time to obtain the censor's approval or reverse. Meantime the order serves useful purpose as a gag. George Grossmith last night in the Orchid pleaded the Lord Chamberlain's leave for mentioning apropos of nothing of course, that Cambridge won the boat race.

Mr. Beerbohm Tree's Academy of Dramatic Art was formally inaugurated by a meeting at His Majesty's on Monday. Mr. Tree gave an outline of the curriculum. He did not put the item first, but perhaps he might have done it without criticism,—students "would learn to think dramatically" (he thanks the Joe for teaching him that phrase). The academy will teach elocution, fencing, dancing, deportment, pantomime and gesture, and will train pupils by rehearsal. There has been an entrance examination for more aspirants to the stage than the academy could hold, and 20 per cent. of these were advised that there was no histrionic force in them. Those who have passed in will be told if they are not likely to succeed. Mr. Tree hopes eventually to obtain a charter and to translate his academy into a public institution : but where lies the benefit of such translation should the school become, as it hopes, a self-supporting institution.

Various items : the Pollard trial, as everyone foresaw, has been followed by the arrest of six of those who figured as witnesses in those remarkable divorce proceedings. The house in Coventry Street, formerly known to many of us as the Lyric Club, has been re-opened as the Walsingham on much the same lines as the old one. The Admiralty made no answer at all to the idiotic request of the Humanitarian League to be allowed to take photographs of boys in the Navy being whipped. The request, as mild Parliamentary language puts it, "was considered an improper one." Rev. Henry George Woods, Rector of Little Gaddesden, Herts, and for ten years President of Trinity College, Oxford, succeeds Canon Ainger as master of the Temple. The L. C. Mr. Kensit's appeal against his conviction and fine by the Lord Mayor for brawling in St. Paul's was rejected with costs. Mr. Brodrick announced on Wednesday that Coopers Hill is to be closed as a measure of economy, other engineering colleges providing sufficient candidates for the P. W. D.

IN BIRDLAND WITH FIELD GLASS AND CAMERA.

WE were very pleased to receive this most interesting little book on British birds. It is divided into four parts dealing with those birds found in the woods, fields and hedgerows, the stream and its banks and some Norfolk birds. The greatest feature in the book is its illustrations which are all from photos taken by the author himself. There are many of these and they are all excellent. It is hard to say which of these is the best, but perhaps the most interesting are those of the Bearded Tit or Reedling, these birds being so rare at home, in fact they were a few years back, supposed to be extinct in Britain, and even now it is only in the Broads of Norfolk where one is likely to come across them. They are also said to occur in Devonshire. We are given three photos of this species, one of the nest and eggs, one of the young being fed and a most interesting one of one of the old birds in the act of cleaning out the nest. Many hours were spent in obtaining these photos ; Mr. Pike must have the patience of Job to have waited the long time which he did in taking them. We ourselves would have given it up in disgust long before he did.

For taking occasional snapshots he advocates the use of a gun camera in which you can focus the bird up to the moment of exposure.

Mr. Pike is a keen ornithologist and one who evidently loves birds for their own sakes and not simply as creatures to be shot down or robbed of their eggs. He is very strong against the wholesale robbing of nests but doesn't object to a few being taken, he himself being a collector.

One bird he has never been able to snapshot on the nest is the Moorhen. He tells us of how he has tried over and over again and how near success he has been, but something always happened to scare the bird away. We wish him luck in his further endeavours of obtaining the long wished for photos. Writing about the Great Spotted Woodpecker Mr. Pike mentions ' what a number of attempts this Woodpecker makes at boring a hole for its nest before it finally settles on a suitable tree!" We have noticed this also repeatedly out here more especially with the small Indian Pigmy Woodpecker, evidently the smaller the bird the more difficult it is for it to get wood soft enough for it to bore into deep enough for the laying of its eggs. The handsome little Blue it is evidently not a bird to be kept in aviaries with other small fry as we read of one which when it found its companion in difficulties, being caught in a trap, uttered a cry of exultation and pounced on the unfortunate prisoner vigorously pecked at his head until it was able to eat the brains. Accounts of the habits of many species are given and are told just as observed by the author, and these make most interesting and edifying reading.

We are given a sad account of the extermination of a colony of herons in Florida as told by Mr Gilbert Pearson at the World's Congress on Ornithology at Chicago in 1897. Mr Pike also speaks very pathetically about the sport of rook-shooting, but whether his account is too highly coloured or not we can't say, never having indulged in this sport. He first gives an account of a colony of rooks busy with their domestic affairs and then another account of the same old rookery but a little later on. Standing under the trees are several sportsmen dealing out death to the poor helpless young birds, of whom some fall back wounded into the nests that have been their happy homes ; others, while their life is ebbing, cling to a branch, but at last fall back, and as their hold loosens they drop to the ground with loud thuds. The distracted parent Rooks, flying out of gunshot, are entreating their young to leave the nest and some will attempt to do this ; but after flapping a short distance they fall a prey to the guns. Thus the spring day passes, the many tinted flowers of the smiling and perfumed meadow seeming to be quite out of keeping with such cruel extermination... but it does not strike one as being genuine sport, this standing beneath a tree to shoot helpless birds which cannot fly many yards, which even have to be hustled out of their nests to become a mark for "sportsmen" below.

A HOT WEATHER SHOOT.

AT the beginning of April 1903 I found myself at C. which is overrun with tigers and panthers. About a month before my arrival two of my friends had been in camp there for a weak or so, and had had 11 bullock killed but never got a shot. My luck, however, was out. On the second day a man was carried off while cutting grass some two miles from my camp, but although I set up beat the beast never appeared. After four days of fruitless tying up I had to leave. The lack of game was probably due to jungle fires which were raging all round. On the 15th I arrived at a small village called G. where I made arrangements for a beat as I was told that pig and four-horned antelope were abundant. We started out about 2 P M. and at 3 P.M. the beat commenced. I had only a ·256 with me as I expected nothing big. At the end of the beat a four-horn gave me a very difficult shot which I missed and then the beaters appeared all very excited. I got down from my ladder and one of my stops told me that just before I fired a tiger had walked past him. The beast must have passed within 60 yards on my left, but it was too thick for me to see. Collecting the beaters and telling them not to begin beating till I sent word, I went quietly on through the jungle for about three-quarter of a mile and took up my position on a Mohwa tree. I had a very good position as the tree was on a path at right angles to the direction of the beat and I could command a good hundred yards on either side. Having posted half-a-dozen stops on each side of me I sent back word for the beat to begin. The jungle in which the tiger was supposed to be was about two miles by half a mile wide and I was in the middle. On each side were open fields of long dry grass which I caused to be fired at the beginning of the beat. I was sitting there listening to the beating and trusting that if there was a tiger it would give me a standing shot, when I heard a rustling in front and suddenly caught a glimpse of a fine panther trotting along. He came to a halt on the path and looked about him. It was not a nice shot as he was partly hidden by a bush, but I didn't like to let him go on as the jungle was thick. The shot broke his hip and he rolled over on the path growling and snapping at his paw. He was then right under the tree and the second shot took him in the centre of the chest coming out between the shoulder blades and just missing the spine. On receiving the shot he scrambled into the jungle behind me and I fired a third shot as I saw him crawling away but missed. The beaters were shrieking and howling like fiends and it was some time before I could get them to hear that the beast had gone on. When they came up they told me that at the first shot a tiger had broken back. Of course, if I had known that a tiger was really in the beat, I might have let the panther go, but when I saw it I made sure they had not seen a tiger but only this panther However, it was too late to do anything. One of my stops had marked the panther down under a tree and climbing another tree close by I saw the beast lying panting and put a bullet through his head. He was a fine male of 7′ 1″ in good coat. Feeling satisfied with the day's work and trusting for more luck we went off to the bungalow at J. some 6 miles distant.

I got to J. about 6 P.M. and was met by the headman who said that a tiger had been killing lately and that he had tied up four old bullocks as bait. This was good news and I went to bed full of hope. Next morning the headman turned up and said that one of the bullock had been killed and the body dragged away about 100 yards. I went out to the place which was about a mile from the bungalow. The cow, or rather bullock, had been killed on a path and the body dragged into a bend some 100 yards away and nearly all of it eaten. There were mark of two tigers. There was very little of the bullock left but I determined to sit over what there was and at the same time have another tied about a mile away at a small tank. I sat up from about 4 P.M till 9 P.M. and never saw a thing except a jungle cock. I have, however, no doubt that the tigers were about as the crows began to make a great noise at 6 P.M., but I fancy the tiger saw me as the machan had to be made in a very open place.

Next morning I was told that a panther had killed the decrepit bullock tied up near the tank and had dragged away the body. This struck me as an unusual exhibition of strength as the bullock had been tied by the leg to a tree and the rope was a good cotton one what I had supplied. The body had not yet been found as the men did not like to go into the thick jungle. I went out at once, some 2 miles, and found as I expected that the bullock had been taken by tigers, their pad marks being very numerous. They were evidently the same tigers who had killed the first bullock.

We followed the track of the body for about 200 yards and found the horns and a few bones under a tree. it had been entirely eaten, and the ground all round was trampled and rolled over by the tigers There was no use in sitting up so I sent out at once and at 1 P.M. had 150 beaters ready. The jungle, where the tigers were, was an ideal place to beat. A strip of fairly light sâl jungle extending from the village of J. to a range of hills some 6 miles distant. This strip was in no place more than half a mile wide. All the other bits of cover close by had been recently burnt. The tank where the bullock had been killed was two miles from J and about a mile and a half from there the strip of jungle narrowed to 200 yards in width. I took up my position in this neck and posted stops on each side. I commanded the whole of the narrow part and if the tigers were in the beat I must get a shot. The machan was six feet off the ground, in the middle of a small clump of sâl saplings but I had a 10-bore rifle and trusted to keep any tiger off with that.

It was very hot and still and I could hear the beat start, at least two miles away. The beaters came slowly closer and closer and when they were about 250 yards off I began to fear that the tigers were not there. Just then my nearest stop on the right began making violent signals from the top of his tree I looked towards when he was pointing and was cheered by the sight of two tigers walking slowly towards me on my right front some 50 yards away. As I looked one of them spotted me and stopped. Without a moment's delay I gave him the 10-bore in the chest. He gave a coughing roar and through the smoke I saw him standing on his hind legs and striking at the empty air with his fore paws before falling back. Before the smoke cleared another tiger tore past the machan on my right making a great noise. The second barrel missed. I jumped up and seized the Mannlicher and gave it two shots as it was departing but missed. Re-loading, I looked to my stop for information about the first tiger. He said that it had crawled back towards the beaters. I shouted this information to them and told them to climb trees and see if they could see it, but not to come on till they know where it was I had hardly spoken when I saw a tiger dash right across my front, from right to left, at a distance of about 70 yards. It was impossible to get a shot. The beaters were making a great noise especially those on the left. I was waiting anxiously for news of the wounded tiger when my eye was attracted by something on my left front about 50 yards off. I looked up and saw a tiger standing facing me but with his head over his shoulder listening to the beaters. I fired at his chest with the 10-bore and knocked him over into a date bush. Up he jumped and came straight for the machan roaring like a devil. I determined to keep the remaining barrel till he was at the machan and then see what the ·256 would do. However, the tiger's spirit failed, and about 15 yards off he turned sharp to his right and passed the machan. I gave him the second barrel through the ribs and dropped him. He died in a most remarkable attitude, just subsiding on the ground, so that when we went to look at him he was crouched as if in the act of springing. While I was attending to this tiger a fourth had broken beat. The beaters now shouted that they had marked down the wounded tiger and he was very sick. I went off to them. The jungle looked like a menagerie of black monkeys as every tree within view of the tiger was crowded with beaters. Making my way to the tree nearest to him I climbed up and saw the wounded brute evidently very sick. Not being able to see his head I took a shot with the Mannlicher at his neck. On receiving the shot he scrambled to his feet and made a rush to a very thick bush some 30 yards from him, when he subsided. I couldn't get a shot from where I was so I got down and sending for my elephant I got on her back and went to a tree some 10 yards from the bush where the tiger was The elephant unfortunately was not quiet under fire so I climbed from her back into the tree and saw my friend lying down and turning his head from side to side. A bullet through the brain finished him. The tigers were both young males and each was exactly 8′ 6″. I had evidently come upon a family party. The only thing that annoyed me was missing the second tiger, it was a fairly easy shot, but I suppose my excitement spoilt it. The return to the bungalow was most imposing as the villagers garlanded the tigers and four men danced before them waving flowery branches whilst others beat tomtoms and made strange sounds through various weird wind instruments that they had brought to beat (!) with. On arriving at J. the village all turned out and escorted us to the bungalow where the beaters were paid off and the work of removing the skins commenced.

Fishing.

THE ROHU (LABEO ROHITA).

THE Rohu and Kala-Bans (Labeo calbasu) or Kalbose of Bengal, are the two best known members of the Labeo family. The latter fish is the common Labeo of Madras.

The Rohu is so widely spread, so generally accessible, and grows to such a size, that it deserves a very warm corner in all Indian anglers' hearts. As it is essentially a bottom feeder, and has to be sought in the sleepy depths of tanks and lakes in the plains, there will be no charms of mountain scenery and rushing water, as with the mahseer, to enhance the pleasures of the sport. The Rohu has to rely entirely on its own solid merits for popularity. Its large size and dogged resistance when hooked, have gained for it a high place as a sporting fish, in spite of the absence of all poetry from its surroundings! Although Rohu are invariably angled for with a paste or worm bait resting on the bottom, yet the methods of presenting the lure and detecting the cautious bites, are so different under differing circumstances that it will be necessary to make some sort of classification.

First there is the tank or lake with deep calm water close to the edge. The depth of the water permits of large fish coming close to the side and feeding there during the day. Unless there is six to eight feet of water near the bank big fish are very chary of coming close to in the daytime, and, moreover, if the water is shallow they are scared at once, by any movement of the angler or of the rod. The absence of ripple allows of a float being used. Deep calm water close to the side is therefore an ideal condition for bottom fishing in a tank. The tackle under these circumstances is simple, a stiff light ten or eleven-foot ringol rod with upright rings and a check winch with 100 yards of fine line.

The weight may be of lead wire wound round the shank of the hook as recommended by Thomas, or the atta bait alone may be relied upon to pull the float down the necessary distance. The main object of a weight is to sink the pellet of paste rapidly, and thus prevent its being knocked about by small fish on the way down.

In addition to the single hook carrying the lump of paste Thomas advises a pair of Limericks whipped back to back hanging below and unbaited. There should be two inches of gut between the single paste hook, and the unbaited pair of hooks. These latter lie flat in the mud and are not noticed by the Rohu; so that when you strike, if the top hook fails to get him in the lip, there is every chance of the double hooking him under the jaw.

Luscombe's advice is to have a big shot attached to the double gut cast a short distance above the hook, which is a special short shanked round bend, manufactured expressly for this fishing. The depth should be plumbed so that the shot just rests on the bottom, with the float upright and about one inch of it out of the water. [We prefer this method.—ED.]

Both systems of fishing have strong points in their favour. If the fish will bite when Thomas' tackle is used, there is certainly no doubt that the disposition of hooks gives one the very best chance of catching them. I believe, however, there are many tanks where a Rohu would not have anything to do with a lump of paste which had a piece of vertical gut going straight from it to the surface Moreover I am sure that shy fish are very suspicious of any unnatural weight or drag about the piece of paste offered to them: I would, therefore, if possible, dispense with the lead wire wound round the shank of the bait hook. I have tried the short shank Rohu hooks and have a very high opinion of them, because they enable one to bury a fairly large and powerful hook in a moderate sized lump of paste. The long shank is objectionable as that part so readily becomes bare of paste when a fish nibbles; it also stiffens and lengthens the bait making it less easy for a fish to take the lump of dough into its mouth, without detecting that there is a hard and foreign substance concealed inside.

When the shot rests on the bottom, the paste bait has no signs of gut in its immediate vicinity: the part between the shot and the hook lies flat on the bottom out of sight.

If there should be a strong ripple on the water, a float is useless: it is then a good plan to use an auxiliary rod as recommended by Thomas. The small rod is simply employed to detect the bites with and to strike from; the fish when hooked are played from the ordinary rod and reel.

As the line will have to go through two top rings (the main and auxiliary rods) the paste cannot be cast from the rod in the ordinary way: it is necessary to coil up the line on the ground so that it can run out freely, and then throw out the bait by hand.

The auxiliary rod should be of thin light cane going to a fine point so as to be as sensitive as possible. I have heard that a whalebone tip is a great improvement. There should be a small ring at the tip of the small rod for the running line to go through. When a fish has been hooked the little rod is at once dropped, and the ordinary rod picked up and the fish played from it.

This system of fishing is, I hear, used in the large wind-swept lakes in the Jhansi district.

There are many water ponds and lakes which, though calm enough, are yet so shallow at their edges that the paste bait has to be cast far out. You cannot see the movements of a Rohu float at a distance, so that here, too, the quill must be dispensed with. Owing, however, to the calmness of the water we are able to do without the troublesome auxiliary rod, and fish direct with the ordinary ringol. The bait should be cast out, the line drawn gently taut, and the rod laid over a forked stick so that the line goes off it almost at right angles; this is arrived at by laying the rod nearly parallel to the bank.

I always watch the line more than the rod tip; when the water is calm the slightest touch to the bait is indicated by vibration of the line.

If Rohu are biting boldly, a few gentle tugs will be followed by a long slow drag; it is during this drag that one should strike.

It is quite hopeless attempting to formulate genera rules as to when to strike. Rohu behave quite differently under differing conditions, and, moreover, when fishing for them one often gets bites from Mirgil (Cirrhina mrigala) and Kala-Bans, which still further complicates matters.

Rohu are curiously different in their behaviour when hooked some leap into the air, and then go off with a rush; others allow themselves to be drawn to the side directly they are hooked, and only begin to fight after they have seen the landing net. As a rule they take a long time to tire out, and though they may not run out much line after the first rush or two, yet they make a prolonged and dogged resistance. Ground baiting should not be overdone, especially in small tanks. In some places turtles are a great nuisance; the bigger ones are almost impossible to get out on ordinary tackle.

A large hook on strong Hercules gimp, with a big lump of paste or meat, in combination with a short strong sea rod and stout line, will be found equal to most turtles.

Having had my gut smashed one evening in a pool in the Jumna, I rigged up some tackle as described above to defeat the turtles and very soon caught two of about 50lbs. and 60lbs. respectively. For large Rohu I prefer a cast made of double sea-trout gut throughout. The strands are laid side by side, not twisted, and each pair fastened to the next with buffer knots. It is a little difficult at first when making up traces, to get the lengths of gut exactly even, but it is most important that each strand should bear a fair share of the strain. When fish run under ten pounds single gut is good enough.

I hate Tussa lines and never use one: I think that at least thirty yards of one's line should be plaited silk, waterproofed for preference. This does not tie itself up into hopeless snarls, and when the water is unsuitable for float, you can swing out a paste bait a long distance without the least difficulty. It is a pity no effort is made in India to produce plaited Tussa silk lines: they would be first rate for everything.

THE CLOSE SEASON FOR GAME.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE INDIAN FIELD."

SIR,—I was interested in reading two letters in your edition of yesterday, one by Raoul headed "Late Snipe" and detailing bags made by him of Snipe, Teal and Partridges between the 17th April and 3rd May, and the other by Sportsman headed "Close season for Quails" giving the regulations with regard to the close season and suggesting that the vendors of game in the close season should be prosecuted.

Surely it is as great an offence to kill game during the close season as it is to offer it for sale, and it seems to me that Raoul renders himself liable to punishment. His defence might be that the game he has been shooting does not breed in the plains. This would not hold, and surely he can get sufficient shooting during the seven months in the year to give birds a rest during the remaining five?

PINTAIL.

A COINCIDENCE

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE INDIAN FIELD."

SIR,—I seldom break golf clubs and for many a day have not had such a misfortune. I played golf this morning with a friend who tells me his experience is the same.

At the fifth hole I played a clean shot off the tee and the ball flew straight and fell about 100—120 yards off: my driver head, alas! flew also, about 30 yards off.

My friend then went and did the same, his ball being exactly 4 yards beyond mine, his driver head a little short of mine (sorry I forgot to measure the distance). Both shots clean hits, both balls straight, neither head nor shaft the least bit hurt.

As there's nothing very meritorious in above I withhold names, though men have received Kaiser-i-Hinds for less, but if anyone collects details of curious coincidences and wishes the above authenticated my name and official rank with address are at his service.

THE MEASUREMENT OF MEN!

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE INDIAN FIELD."

SIR,—Most of us have heard of, and are acquainted with, the measurement of horses, of dogs, of monkeys even, and occasionally of other animals, and have recognized such as data zoologically—and incidentally anthropologically—interesting and acceptable in our estimate of the physical attributes of the dumb creation, when it has been a matter of assessing the worth or otherwise of creatures necessary or desirable for our use or comfort, whether it has been for sporting, domestic, or playful purposes. Some of these measurements, too, have of course found their place in what is known to sporting men as natural history record. Now, however, certain faddists at Home, known academically as "Anthropometricians" are venturing on further scientific research, for English papers lately to hand advise that a scheme is on foot having for (apparently) its chief object the ascertainment of the exact aggregate anthropometrical value and resource of the British nation, with a view to provincially-differential comparison!

We are solemnly told that "there is a likelihood that the Committee which is at present investigating the alleged decline of the national physique will recommend a scheme for measuring and weighing the population of the United Kingdom. The desirability of adopting such a scheme has been strongly urged upon the Committee by doctors and anthropologists. The development of a project of such magnitude will necessarily occupy considerable time, but it is understood that it has so far advanced that a schedule based upon measurements and tests prepared by Dr. Cunningham, of the Edinburgh University, is now being drawn up by a section of the British Association." One pauses to think what such knowledge, when acquired, may not evoke in the breasts of our friendly foes! To further this most interesting scheme, it is suggested that a copy of the schedule alluded to should be sent to "every householder with a request that he state therein the age, height, weight, chest measurement, and other facts respecting the physical condition of himself and each member of his family. Furthermore, it is proposed to establish in every important centre of population a bureau where men and women of all ages will be encouraged to present themselves for measurement by male and female enumerators."

One of the committee members advocating this very exhaustive and expansive scheme, had the hardihood to point out a few of the "many" difficulties confronting the project. Let us take one only! That is in reference to "obtaining the measurements of girls in a higher social sphere than those employed in mills or shops, but the hope has not been abandoned that in the interests of science and the public well being they would supply privately the required information. Anthropologists are anxious that the measurements should include those of the skull." Yes: and I think they would—eventually if the idea were attempted, say somewhere up in Durham, "where the coals come from!"

But seriously speaking, one may well ask the promoters of this unique and fantastic scheme, cui bono. So far as I have been able to see there has been advanced no suspicion even of any possible practical good to the present generation, or to the next, or to those that may follow, in the derivation of the knowledge which it is fatuously—very fatuously—sought to acquire. Of course England, or rather Great Britain, or, a bit further rather, Greater Britain, might be found to possess greater stature, strength and weight than our foes even now suspect, or it might be the reverse, but from a purely insular point of view, this ethnic information would be practically valueless to us, as we should have no other racial statistics of like nature with which to compare our aggregate national physique. As one of the committee remarked, we have "no precedent for our guidance, as an anthropometrical survey on like extensive lines has never been previously undertaken in Europe." No, nor in any other part of the world either.

It is claimed that the statistics obtained by the proposed census would be of immense value in future comparisons, and as regards present practical use, it is urged that the survey would demonstrate whether the general physique of the residents of one British town, say, was superior to that of residents of another, for then, "local authorities could investigate the cause of any inferiority shown, and remedy the circumstances contributing to it," presumably by removing them. It is difficult to follow the committee in their sanguine anticipation. It is generally conceded that the causes of dissimilarity in physique have been known for generations, not only to scientists and statisticians, but to the ordinary "man in the street." Scotchmen, for instance, are invariably accredited, and rightly, with the possession of hardier constitutions and robuster physiques generally than those who live, say, in London! And why? A more invigorating climate, freer inhalation of a purer and cooler atmosphere, plainer and more wholesome diet, and in other respects less depressing and enervating surroundings." No municipality can change its climatic conditions at will; no "local authorities" can inculcate into the minds of the residents the alpha and omega, of health, strength, and physique, seeing that, since time immemorial, medical men have failed to impress the a b c (and z) of salutary principles upon the individual, to the extent of much material beneficial inception.

Local influences have admittedly a very great deal to do with genealogical physical deterioration, for there can be no possible doubt that the increase of a town's population, and its concomitant "cribbing, cabining, and confining," as the late Charles Du Val would have said, of its units and its industries, into a more and more circumscribed space as the years roll on, must of necessity tend towards a gradual vitiation of that pure atmosphere which is Humanity's breath and life! The British public have "to live and move and have their being" entirely in accordance with individual possessive circumstances. And not all the anthropologists in Greater Britain will ever be able to evolve from their metrical comparisons any plan by which those circumstances can be mitigated—even if their census scheme be found to be practicable! One has no need to enquire why the Zulus, to take another instance, are such a fine upstanding race. Their very mode of life proclaims the answer. It is a matter that goes without saying. Sociologists probably have their own theory to account for the supposed physical deterioration of the British nation. Physicists, on the other hand, may argue that loss in stature and general bodily development is a feasible correllative of a nation's mental expansion. I should prefer to accept this dictum if it were not for the very palpable insalutary influences. But whatever be the causes that conduce to Britain's most alarming (!) tendency towards pygmean conditions, it is certain that these Daniels who are coming to our judgment—eminently scientific though they be—will never succeed in advancing any practical remedy, that will be accepted for adoption, for the evils that it may please them to saddle with our terrible doom! Again I ask of their scheme cui bono? Their labour must end in vain. Can any of your ethnological readers perceive any possible future advantage in any "civilized" race of people knowing to a pound and an inch their aggregate national physique?

First Day, Thursday, 12th May 1904.

THE possession of a polo ground—only just completed—has enabled Mussoorie to indulge in the luxury of races. An attractive programme was drawn up and the first day's racing proved interesting if not good The feature of the afternoon was the great struggle in the Mussoorie Plate between Dewdrop and Queen of Gems, the former winning after a grand run home by half a head. Maureen proved somewhat disappointing in her second race in fact she might have been more scientifically ridden with advantage.

The attendance was bad not more than a hundred people being present, this is probably accounted for by the rather threatening weather. Details :—

Second Day, Saturday, 14th May 1904.

The weather again marred the afternoon's racing and had a bad effect on the attendance which, if anything, was smaller than on Thursday. A smart shower fell soon after the first race. This was the main cause of Mr. McCall's accident. Fortunately he was not very seriously damaged, though he could not ride again. His substitute, Mr. Crawshay, pulled off the next race rather cleverly. His saddle slipped right back, and he had to finish seated a foot in front of it.

The Sportsman's Safety Stirrups.

Are the only successful "SAFETY" for men.

A "wrench" is due to the foot being momentarily held fast through the ordinary stirrup adhering to the boot or the stiffness of a safety bar. The Patent Stirrups, by means of revolving thimbles at A, B and C, entirely obviate this by giving instant release to the feet, and thus reduce the bad effects of a "fall" to a minimum.

This accounted for the paucity of entries and small attendance which was, however made up in great measure by the keenness of those who did attend. The eel was anciently said to possess the power of enforcing sobriety upon the most devoted subject. "If you would make some notorious drunkard to loathe and abhorre his beastly vice, and for ever after to hate the drinking of wine, put an eele alive into some wyde-mouthed bottle with a cover, having in it such a quantity of wine as may suffice of it self to suffocate and strangle the eele; which done, take out the dead eele, and let the partie whom you would have reclaymed, not knowing hereof, drink of that wine only as much as he listeth."

THE TURF.

SANDOWN PARK MEETING.

THE Jockey Club campaign has always got well under way before the metropolitan winter season receives its final quietus at Sandown Park, and the last day's cross-country work is, as a rule, productive of some of the best sport of the whole year. Saturday was no exception A liberally endowed programme attracted the very cream of the National Hunt performers to this venue, and the strength of the fields was well maintained. The form has been so exhaustively threshed out by the middle of April that backers can generally look back with complacency at the results of their speculations on the concluding day of this fixture, but those who threw in their lot with the favourites this afternoon experienced an almost endless succession of reverses which must have seriously depleted their exchequers. Notwithstanding that the half-holiday folk flocked in overwhelming numbers to the Crystal Palace to witness the final for the Cup tie, the company at Esher was considerable in excess of the total on the 22nd, and they were favoured with bright and enjoyable weather, whilst the going was all the better for a series of soaking showers that fell during the night.

NEWMARKET

The First Spring Meeting, big with the fate of the Two Thousand and One Thousand Guineas, always appeal more strongly to the racing public than its predecessor the "Craven," and, notwithstanding that the King had to forego the pleasure of presiding over the gathering owing to his Irish holiday, the leading lights of the Turf were present in sufficient strength on the 26th instant to ensure the social success of the reunion, though there was no appreciable increase in the general attendance for the opening stage of the fixture. Apart from the doings on the racecourse, the attention of owners will be occupied by Messrs. Tattersall's sales of bloodstock at Park Paddocks, and there is so much to be seen in the way of morning

Bovril supplies to the body the nourishment it requires, and makes good the muscle, tissue and energy spent during the hurry and worry of the day's work. The very embodiment of strength and sustenance in a digestible form is Bovril.

The Weddesday of the First Spring Meeting is one of the few occasions in the year when excursion trains are run on a comprehensive scale in conjuction with racing at "headquarters," and from many parts of the country—London and the North in particular—there was a influx of holiday-makers that betokened that the Turf world was on the eve of momentous issues. Having regard to the bright and reassuring outlook, however, the company that assembled on the Heath was comparatively light for a Two Thousand Guineas day, much larger crowds having been associated with previous celebrations of the great race. The sale of Mr. Sievier's horses in training was but sparsely attended, and more interest seemed to be taken in the early doings on the Heath, a goodly number of visitors turning out to witness the exercise gallops. This was not to be wondered at, as the morning was Eilightfully fine and bright, and, though the sky became overcast later, the afternoon was for the most part sunny and springlike. A little rain fell before daybreak but it barely sufficed to lay the dust, and the surface of the round was dry and firm in spite of the luxurious herbage which, covers the racecourse.

PLACES (1, 2, 3) 5 to 4 on St Amant, 7 to 4 agst Airlie, 2 to 1 Henry the First, 9 to 4 Santry, 5 to 2 John O'Gannt, 3 to 1 Rydal Head, 8 to 1 Challenger, 7 to 2 Jupiter Pluvius, 4 to 1 Montem, 5 to 1 Clonmell, 6 to 1 Cinquefoil, 8 to 1 Lancashire, 8 to 1 His Majesty, 8 to 1 Inverkeithing.

Montem was the first to leave the paddock, and she was followed to the post by Jupiter Pluvius, His Majesty, St. Amant, Airlie, John o' Gaunt, and Challenger, the whipper-in being Inverkeithing. John o' Gaunt was a little troublesome at the post, and when the barrier was raised to a capital start he whipped half round, Henry the First, in the centre, being the first to break the line from St. Amant, on the right, Santry on the top ground, Montem in the middle, and Rydal Head, with Cinquefoil and His Majesty close up, and Challenger and Airlie heading the middle division, the last two being John o'Gaunt and Inverkeithing. So they swept across the flat to the Bushes when Henry the First lost his place, and St. Amant came on in the centre with a clear lead of Santry, wide on the right, Airlie and John o'Gaunt, Henry the First being next, slightly in front of Lancashire. Rishing out of the Dip Henry the First came again and took third place, but the issue was placed beyond doubt a long way from home, St. Amant winning easily by four lengths from John o'Gaunt amidst tumultuous applause; two lengths divided the second and third. Santry was officially placed fourth and Airlie fifth, heads only separating third, fourth, and fifth; Lancashire was sixth, Montem seventh, Rydal Head eighth, Jupiter Pluvius ninth, Challenger tenth, Inverkeithing next, and Clonmell last. Time by Benson's chronograph, 1min. 38⅘secs.

The early risers were present in strong force on the Heath yesterday morning to watch the exercise gallops and imbibe the pure, exhilarating air which renders a sojourn in the Turf metropolis so rejuvenating. Owing to the recent drought the only portions of the racecourse side available for use were the summer gallop beyond the Ditch and the Flat, so most of the work was done on the Bury Side, and things ruled very brisk. The Thursday of the "First Spring" is generally in the nature of an "off" day, and the conversation turned on the gallant victory of St. Amant and his prospects of adding the Derby to his list of triumphs rather than on the affairs of the moment. The One Thousand Guineas also provoked some discussion, but by general consent the race is voted almost a walk over for Pretty Polly, and no attempts were made to wager on the result. The dust in the High-street was almost intolerable until the water carts were brought into requisition, and the going on the course was abnormally hard and dry for April, a copious downpour of rain being urgently required. The afternoon was dull and threatening, and, needless to say, there was a considerable falling off in the attendance as compared with yesterday.

THE F. A. CUP FINAL.

MANCHESTER CITY vs. BOLTON WANDERERS—Played at Sydenham on the 22nd instand, Manchester city winning by a goal to nil.

Meredith beat Brown in the toss, and Yenson kicked off for Bolton towards the cricked ground end, the breeze not being of sufficient strength to give Manchester any material advantage. Immediately after the start Meredeth was prominent on the Manchester right. He was checked by Freebairn, but, with characteristic dash, he returned to the attack, and forced a corner off Struthers. The City settled down much quicker than the Wanderers, but the latter, by pick and rush tactics, made a few incursions towards Hillman. Burgess and McMahon were very safe, however, and the Manchester goalkeeper was not seriously troubled. For a time the play was of a rather scrambling nature, but eventually the Mancunians arrived at a nice understanding, their methods being pretty to watch. Meredith proved a rare handful for Struthers and Freebairn, who were a trifle unsteady, and once the last-named made a poor kick that sent the ball in the direction of his own goal. At length Taylor who had not hitherto had much to do was prominent on the extreme left for Bolton, and, following a header to Hillman, he tested the goalkeeper with a slowish screw shot that required careful handling. A corner next fell to the City, but Bolton then had a look in, Burgess passing back for safety A little later Hillman ran out and stumbled, at the same time throwing the ball in the air, the Manchester goal at this period having a narrow escape The pressure was relieved by McMahon with a fine kick, and Livingstone headed in cleverly to Davies, who brought off a capital save. Meredith next swung the ball across to Booth, who also tested Davies, the Bolton custodian being prominent at this stage by his smart handling of the ball and his effective clearances. Manchester were awarded a free kick, but this proved of no advantage owing to Gillespie getting offside. Now having very much the better of matters, Manchester pressed heavily and the Bolton defence had to work very hard indeed to prevent a score. Davies ran out and cleared from both Booth and Turnbull, while a weak kick by Struthers might easily have proved costly. Although contested in resolute fashion, the game so far had progressed without any roughness. Pretty passing by Livingstone and Turnbull led to a corner being conceded by Struthers, who rushed across in the nick of time. Davies saved cleverly, but had to concede a further corner, while Manchester continued to play the better football and be the chief aggressors. Spirited and plucky play by the Wanderers—all of whom worked untiringly—kept the City from getting through. Brown accomplished some fine kicking at full back, and at length the pressure was relieved. Yenson racing away at top speed. The old West Ham man had practically beaten all opposition but the goalkeeper when Burgess brought him down a little way outside the penalty area, a claim for a foul not being allowed. Some fairly even play followed, but when the game had progressed twenty-three minutes, a great demonstration of enthusiasm greeted a goal for the City. The ball came over from the left wing to Livingstone, who in turn passed to Meredith the latter executing a clever dribble completely outwitting Struthers, and then scoring with a pretty cross shot from an extremely narrow angle. There was naturally great rejoicing at Manchester's success, and one burly and excited North-countryman required so much cooling down that five policemen removed him from the ground, subsequently permitting him to return. Immediately on resuming, Manchester were again aggressive and Davies was tested with a header from Meredith. Bolton still pegged away with commendable grit, but Burgess stopped the progress of both Taylor and Freebairn. The International back was beaten by Stokes, however, who sent across to White, the latter failing to seize an opportunity to shoot. At the other end Manchester's left wing made a pretty combined movement, and a very hot shot by Turnbull was parried by Davies at the expense of a corner. By strong, methodical football, the Mancunians were clearly proving themselves the better team at this stage of the game. A clearance by McMahon from Stokes was followed by Gillespie being pulled up for getting hopelessly offside, Davies—in great form—next pushing out an awkward shot from Meredith. An injury to Ashworth caused a temporary stoppage and on restarting Bolton were lustily urged on by their supporters. An equalising goal nearly came from Taylor who followed a stirring sprint with one of the finest shots of the match. Hillman, to whom the ball came chest high, had to be very alert to stop it at all. As it was, he conceded a corner, the ball rebounding off his hands with such force as to go high over the line near the corner flag. Kick and rush continued to be the tactics of Bolton, and Marsh once charged down a kick from Burgess but failed to finish well. Meredith and Ashworth were both prominent in a Manchester attack, and from the latter's shot Struthers saved the situation by kicking the ball out of play when nearly under the bar. For a second time Yenson was brought down by Burgess just outside the penalty area and on this occasion a free kick was allowed from which nothing tangible resulted. Another brief stoppage occurred through Struthers being slightly damaged in a charge. A splendid flying shot by Gillespie, which just missed the mark, was the last feature of the initial stage, and the following was the state of the game at Half-time :—

Manchester City ... ... One goal
Bolton Wanderers ... ... Love

The second stage opened with Meredith and Livingstone forging ahead, but Bolton replied with a spirited attack, and Burgess made a rather bad mis-kick. Coming a long way out of goal to a low shot, Davies gathered the ball smartly and punted away, but Booth obtained possession and sent wide. Bolton gradually began to find their proper form, but as the Wanderers improved Manchester showed a corresponding falling off. Stokes now stirred himself to useful purpose on the Bolton right, and on one occasion he was brought down by Burgess, whose offence was again committed just wide of the penalty area. Following the resultant free kick, the Manchester goal was hotly assailed, a clearance by Hillman, who ran a long distance away from his charge, being succeeded by a corner. Capital efforts to score were made by Stokes and Yenson, while Talor distinguished himself by testing Hillman with a high shot that screwed in awkwardly. Hands against Livingstone led to a further Bolton attack, and at this period the bulk of the Manchester defence devolved upon Burgess and McMahon, the halves for a time being far less prominent than formerly. Manchester now and again indulged in some pretty wing play, but Meredith had to be pulled up for offside, while Brown played a very skilful game at full back and frequently checked Turnbull and Booth. Somehow or other, the Manchester wings lost touch with their centre forward, and their attack was not characterised by its former sting. Booth once put rather tamely over the bar on receiving from Meredith, but Bolton had by far the larger share of the play and set up a very persistent attack. In this Marsh made a fine overhead kick close to goal and gave Taylor a chance which was not turned to good account. The Wanderers forced a corner, and then Hillman had to run out to Taylor. Greenhalgh was very noticeable at this stage for some accurate placing, and, taken altogether, Bolton were rather unlucky not to equalise. White received a bad shaking in a charge from Meredith, and was carried off to the side of the field. Happily he speedily recovered, and was out of the game for barely two minutes. A little undue vigour being introduced into the proceedings, the referee administered a few timely words of advice, after which Yenson, Stokes, and Marsh indulged in a combined run for Bolton, the last named shaping poorly at Burgess, who easily robbed him. Meredith, who was assiduously fed by his colleagues, did many good things on the Manchester right, but once he carried trickiness to excess and let slip a good opportunity to shoot when close up. He next forced a corner, which was immediately following by another, and with Bolton at this time seemingly feeling the effects of the pace, Manchester were once more having a look in. Meredith had a knack of hanging too far up and being penalised for off side, but he was still the chief aggressor, the Manchester halves scarcely paying enough attention to their left wing. Booth made one capital run, but finished with a shot over the bar, and it was noticeable that Manchester were now confining their chief efforts to defence Ashworth playing well back. Bolton appeared to have shot their bolt about twelve minutes from time, and their goal had a narrow escape, when Davies mishit the ball, which bounced on to the posts. A slight injury to Meredith was followed by Livingstone making poor use of a good chance, Struthers next conceding a corner through treading on the ball in an attempt to kick it. Davies was equal to a few shot by Gillespie, while Booth skimmed the bar with a beautiful effort The Wanderers all at once recovered themselves and, in the closing few minutes struggled in a gallant style for an equalising goal. Stokes made some plucky attempts, but generally found Burgess too clever for him. There were loud cries of "goal" when White shot at a tremendous pace, but unhappily for Bolton the ball want whizzing just outside the net. From a forward pass Stokes seemed likely to get clean away, but the ball travelled too fast for him, and went over the line. A dangerous Manchester attack was led by Meredith, and both Booth and Turnbull nearly scored, while Davies once ran out and caught a dropping shot. A final effort was made on behalf of Bolton by Marsh, Taylor, and Stokes, the last named heading in to Hillman, but a Cup-tie, which had been conducted in capital spirit, and produced play above the average of recent finals, resulted in a narrow win for the Mancunians, thus exactly bearing out the anticipations expressed in Saturday's Sportsman. As the teams came off the field, it was pleasing to note the friendly hand-shaking between victors and vanquished, all of whom seemed to have heartily enjoyed a memorable struggle

RACQUETS.

THE AMATEUR CHAMPIONSHIPS.

The famous Worcestershire cricketer, H. K. Foster, regained championship honours at amateur singles racquets, with a decisive triumph over the previous holder, E. M. Baerlein at the Queen's Club, West Kensington, W., on the 25th instant. Foster displayed magnificent form to win a love match, and quite outgeneralled his younger opponent, who failed to do himself justice owing to having caught a slight chill. The veteran set a tremendous pace, and his judgment was superbly clever. Foster won his way to the Championship round with previous victories over L. F. Andrewes, Ivor de la Rue, E. H. Miles, and F. H. Browning, and he accomplished the wonderful performance of going right through the competition without losing a single game. The Old Malvernian has now won the championship on no fewer than eight occasions. A large number of people witnessed yesterday's match, among those present in the gallery of the first court being Major Cooper Key, Captain H. Balfour-Bryant, Lieutenant P. Bramwell-Davis, Messrs. E. H. Buckland, S. D. Muttlebury, H. M. Leaf, H. L. Doherty, Vane Pennel, W. G. H. Price, H. S. Mahoney, B. S. Foster, E. Temple Gurdon, E. B. Noel, B. S. V. Dyas, E. H. Miles, G. J. V. Weigall, Malcolm Roberts, and C. J. B. Marriott, and Peter Latham, the famous professional. Mr. F. H. Browning officiated as referee and Holden clearly called and accurately marked the scores. Details :—

H. K. Foster (Malvern and Oxford) beat E. M. Baerlein (Eton and Cambridge) by three games to love (17—14, 15—7, and 15—12), 47 aces (24 by service) to 33 (15 by service).

Baerlein commenced operations with a barren hand, but after Foster had scored a run of three, the old Cantab got in and registered a fine sequence of six (four by service) before being put out by a beautiful low shot just above the board. The following eight hands were all small, with Baerlein steadily leading, but when the holder possessed the advantage at 9—5 Foster contributed a brilliant sequence of eight. Baerlein drew up with three, and at length the game was set to three at "14 all." Baerlein failed, and then Foster ran out with a hand of three, thus taking the first game at 17—14. On resuming, Foster early took the lead with three, but his opponent soon got on terms. Forter, however, would not be denied, and, mainly by means of an extremely powerful service put on successive runs of four and seven, reaching game ball six. Baerlein obtained one more ace, and Foster secured the second game at 15—7. At the third and final meeting six hands saw Baerlein in front at 4—2, but then Foster's terrific service enabled the old Oxonian to forge ahead with a sequence of five. Subsequently, Foster always held the advantage in small hands, his generalship being perfect. Foster eventually captured the third game at 15—12, and thus won a love match. Time—33mins.

DEATH OF MR FRED GALE.

We regret to announce the death on Sunday, the 24th instant in the Charterhouse—of the brotherhood of which foundation he had been a member for some five years—of Mr. Fred Gale, who in his school days figured in the Winchester eleven, and for many years subsequently interested himself heart and soul in the welfare of Surrey cricket, at the annual meetings of which body he was until recently a familiar figure.

How we shall miss this genial man, and miss the "Old Buffer's" reminiscent talk. A sportsman to the core and in every sense a fine old English gentleman, Mr Frederick Gale endeared himself to all who love cricket. We can take down his works from our bookshelves and turn over the files of "Bell's Life" again and again and never grow weary of reading the charming articles that breathe the every spirit of sport. But the greatest pleasure of all—meeting Mr. Gale at a cricket match and listening to his stories of bygone days on the green sward, delivered in a style of rhetoric peculiar to himself—will be denied us for ever. No one had such store of reminiscences such as the beloved "Old Buffer," and it falls to the lot of few to leave this world as absolutely free from enemies. Born on 16th July 1823, and therefore at the time of his decease in his eighty-first year, Mr Frederick Gale was a son of the Rev Thomas Hinxman Gale, vicar of Milton, Lillibourne, Wilts. His father was also curate of the adjoining parish of Woodborough, and it was at the Rectory in this place that Mr. Fred Gale first saw the light. The parson was himself a keen all-round sportsman, and it was not surprising that the son developed a passionate love for the green fields and manly games. At twelve years of age young Frederick—whose home was then at Rainham, in Kent—entered Winchester where he remained for nearly seven years. He was a promising cricketer—his best work being accomplished as a fieldsman—and he appeared against Eton at Lord's in 1841. Winchester won the match by 109 runs. Gale going in first wicket down and recording one and sixteen. In the same year he figured on the losing side against Harrow, fourteen and six being his contributions. In this latter match one of his opponents was Mr William Nicholson, a fine batsman and a splendid wicketkeeper. At Winchester Mr. Gale was also captain at football, and in 1842 he was launched on a legal career, being articled to a prominent London firm. We read in "Baily's" that he did not at first take too kindly to his profession his love for the pursuits of country life being ever uppermost. In the prosperous times of 1846, however, he transferred his services to a firm in Westminster, this being largely due to the extraordinary number of railway bills then introduced into Parliament and the many favourable opportunities in consequence afforded the legal profession. In Parliamentary business Mr. Gale speedily made his mark, and for forty years—until 1886—he remained a familiar figure in Parliament street. Meanwhile, he delighted the sporting public with his contributions to "Baily's Magazine," "Bell's Life," "The English Illustrated," "Boy's Own Paper," "The Sporting Life," and numerous other publications. Among his familiar writings were: "The Country Parson,' The Old Dover Road," "Tom Spring's Back Parlour," and in 1888 he published 'The Game of Cricket" and "Sports and Recreations in Town and Country," the latter being a delightful volume. He contributed "Country Cricket" to the Badminton Library. "Winchester of Fifty Years Ago" to "The English Illustrated," and at the special request of old Harrovians, the memoirs of Robert Grimston. At sixty-eight years of age—in 1891—Mr Gale left his native country for Manitoba, where he spent two very happy years among the prairies. Fortunately, he returned to England to further entertain with his writings, and it was not so very long ago that we met him at a county match in Kent, as keen as ever on the grand old game he loved so well. He has left us, after an honourable life at a ripe old age, but the world of cricket will cherish the memory of the genial, sympathetic, and kindly nature, while his writings will serve as a perpetual monument. But, to end as we began, how we shall we miss his charming personality! And it is sorrowful, indeed to think that the familiar initials of "F. G." and the cherished nome de plume "The Old Buffer" have been written by Fred. Gale for the last time!

THE OOTACAMUND HUNT.

AFTER a fortnight of drought with catchy scent and the Downs as hard as iron it was a very welcome change on Monday (9th May) when we met at Kandal Cross Roads at 6-30 on a fine fresh morning with a heavy dew and the country greatly improved by the recent rain. The station is now quite full and there are besides a large number of men up for the races, so that the field that met Captain Fife, the master, was a large one. From the Cross Roads we trotted on to Mills' Covert and a start to draw it had hardly been made when hounds hit off a line and went away on a splendid scent at a great rate. The jack took us, still going very fast half way up Blackmoor vale, over the top of Newmarket, then leaving Rawling's nullah on our right, on to Bluegums. This is a very large covert, but hounds were never at fault and drove their jack through it without a pause, then on through Porlock Wood and on to Governor's Shola. The jack skirted the bottom of this as far as the Toda School and then turned up the Hill to Martyn's Shola Here he turned very short and there was a short check Hounds were not many minutes in hitting off the line again and drove the jack out at the bottom, whence he set his mask again for Governor's Shola: hounds were very close to him by now and in the lower part of Governor's Shola they killed him. He was a very large dog jack and had given us a splendid run.

As we were passing through Bluegums, Mr. Hodgson, the Field Master, had viewed a fresh jack away at the bottom and we therefore trotted back down the stream and towards the end of Lawley's course. Hounds were not long in finding the line and ran up through round Shola, and at the top, though Martyn's Shola and over to the Yemakal Valley. The sun by this time was very hot and hounds and horses nearly exhausted. Besides this sambur and jungle sheep were jumping up in all directions. The body of the pack, however, stuck to the line of the hunted jack who took them down the side of Yemakal Shola and then straight across the Valley to the Pykara River. Here he turned up the right bank of the river and eventually ran hounds out of scent. It was a grand run, but there was no one to share it with the Field Master, who was the only man to see it through. Captain Fife had stayed behind with some tail hounds in the dangerous country for riot and sent a whip to bring back the hounds.

The following Thursday, we met at Sandy Nullah Toll Bar, the field being one of the largest of the season as there were more than a hundred out. The morning was cold and fine with a chilly wind. We first tried from Pamela's Crossing, over Dartmoor Vale and then on to the swamp between Wapshare's Hare Shola and the old Pykara Road. In the swamp hounds struck a good line and ran at speed across it and the new Pykara Road to the rising ground between Chemmund and Wenlock Wood. Here there was a check, but only a short one, and, hitting it off again hounds took us above Khed Shola and from there, leaving Road Shola on their left, streamed down and away over the long slope to the Shola below the Toda Coffee Shop. Another short pause in this Shola and then they were away again on the other side and we had to gallop all we knew to keep them in view at all. The jack followed the Pykara Falls bridle paths up to the Glen Morgan Tea Estate and there beat hounds in the thick cover Captain Fife then took us back to the coverts near the seventh milestone on the old Pykara Road and we had not been there long before a jack went away from the Bracken covert. Scent was not very good, however, and we hunted him slowly into Wenlock Wood. Here he ran a ring and then broke at the low side, taking us back across the road and through the various coverts between the road and Dunsandle, until at the high ground where the old road crosses it at the sixth milestone we had to give him up on account of the failure of scent. Scent was not good all day; but it was an excellent morning's sport.

CRICKET AT DARJEELING.

THE STATION vs. THE ROYAL FUSILIERS.—Played on "The Shrubbery" ground on Thursday, 12th May, and resulted in an easy win for the Fusiliers by 182 runs. Captain P. Turner won the toss for the Station and sent in Mr. Cyril Hogg and Mr. D. S. Murray, who were opposed to the bowling of Captain Fisher and Mr. A. S. Hewitt. Mr. Murray was the first to go, hitting out at a ball which just touched his bat and flew into the hands of Mr. Hewitt at short slip. Mr. Uzielli came next, but after a couple of fours he misjuged a hit and put the ball beautifully to Private Crane in the long field who easily secured it. Mr. Hugh Mytton was the next man in, but he soon lost Mr. Hogg, who was out to a catch at short slip. Captain Healing followed, but after scoring 1, he was caught by Corporal Sunshine. Mr. Clayton Danberry looked like scoring, but Captain Fisher was bowling well and he soon got a ball in which took his off stump. So far the disasters were appalling, but the side had hopes of Captain Turner making a stand with Mr. Mytton, who appeared to be well set and was scoring consistently. After Captain Turner had hit a four, he was bowled and Captain Fisher had secured his fourth victim Mr. A. E. Power was next in and before he scored had the mortification of seeing Mr Mytton caught and bowled by Captain Fisher, after a well played innings of 29. The rest made very little addition to the score, and the innings closed at 1 o'clock for the poor score of 84. Captain Fisher and Mr. Hewitt bowled unchanged throughout the innings, the former securing 8 wickets.

Captain Fisher and Mr. Hewitt went in first for the Fusiliers, and hit about them in great style treating the bowling with scant respect, and they were still together when an adjournment took place for lunch with the score at 26. On resuming Mr. Hewitt soon succumbed to one of Captain Healing's leg breaks, and Sergeant Fraser joined his Captain who was bowled after a couple of overs, after a merry innings of 35. Private Battle joined Fraser and the two played splendid cricket, the latter doing all the scoring, while the former kept his wicket up. All the Station bowlers were put on, Mr. Danberry having 13 scored off him in one over, and a separation was not effected until the two had added 68 to the score. Captain Legge and Mr. Peel scored well, but they were playing mostly to Mr. Uzielli's tempting bowling, and should have been caught early in their innings. Three catches from Captain Legge were missed in one over! Altogether five catches were dropped from Mr. Uzielli's bowling in as many overs. The Station, however, had already lost the match, and had got rather slack in their fielding. Over one hundred people witnessed the match, and proceedings were enlivened by some excellent music by the fine Band of the Royal Fusiliers. Score :—

Referee.—Mr Grieg, Dalhousie.

HOWRAH vs. DALHOUSIE.—Played on the Dalhousie ground, the home team being victorious by two goals to nil. The visitors had if anything the better of the first moiety but were unable to score. The Dalhousie men also put in some fine runs but failed to put through and the interval arrived without any score. On resuming the homesters showed improved form and kept their opponents busy. At last they got the ball to the Howrah twenty-five where a great struggle took place, Stewart eventually finding the net. Another point was scored by Holley from a capital run just before time. Teams:—

DALHOUSIE.—Street, goal ; Robinson and Templeton. backs ; Phelps, Dalling and Evans, half-backs ; Stewart, Frike, Doherty, Boner and Holley, forwards.

HOWRAH.—Bennet, goal ; Burns and Curtis, backs ; Morrow, Jackson and Sharp, half-backs ; Echlin, Smith, Woods, Kerr and Linton. forwards.

Referee.—Mr. R. Remfry.

KING'S OWN REGIMENT vs. WEST RIDINGS.—The West Ridings met the Fort team on the latter's ground last Saturday, the King's Own winning by two to nil after a good game. They kicked off and carried the ball to their opponents' half where Roberts was called upon to save. They continued to attack and Ashworth found the net. Then the West Ridings ran down and forced a corner. Nothing resulted, however, and the interval arrived with the Lancasters leading. On resuming play was very even, neither side getting any great advantage till a good run by the Dum Dum forwards gave Wood an opportunity which he missed. Just before time Carman ran down and put through, the King's Own winning as stated. Teams :—

LANCASTERS.—Hill, goal ; Miller and Cottam, backs ; Lonard, Ennis and Quin, half-backs ; Jones, Biddell, Ashworth, Carman and Wittingham, forwards.

WEST RIDINGS.—Roberts, goal ; Stewart and Evans, backs ; Reeves, Turner and Morris, half-backs ; Collins, Kelly, Wood, Drew and Hollier, forwards.

Referee.—Captain Gardner.

CALCUTTA vs. Y. M. C. A.—The Y. M. C. A. ground was the venue of this match on the 14th instant, the visitors who were a stronger team defeating the Young Men by three goals to nil. Calcutta were first away and invaded their opponents' territory, V Sherman scoring after a combined run. The home team then got going but were unable to gain any advantage and Baker relieved. Calcutta again attacked and forced two corners which proved abortive. After the interval the visitors returned to the charge and H. Cooper scored from a pass by H. Sherman. This was followed by a third goal soon after, V. Cooper beating Curtis with a low shot. The Young Men played hard to the end but were unable to score and Calcutta thus won by three goals to nil. Teams :—

CALCUTTA.—Dodds, goal ; Baker and Badham, backs ; Maunder, Crawford and Wickham, half-backs ; H. Sherman, V. Cooper, H. Cooper, V. Sherman and Smith, forwards.

Y. M. C. A.—Curtis, goal ; Baldwin and Stokes, backs ; Redmond, Pooler and Mason, half-backs ; Price, Collingwood, Scully, Vanspaul and Schaumberg, forwards.

Referee.—Mr. P. Willder.

HOWRAH vs. 64TH R. F. A.—This match was played at Howrah on the 17th instant the Gunners having an easy win by three goals to nil. They had the best of the game throughout and had it not been for the strong defence of Curtis and Annett might have scored more points. They put on one goal in the initial stage and two goals after the interval, Osborne being responsible for all three. Curtis was injured in the second-half and had to be carried off the field.

CALEDONIA A. C. vs. RANGERS F. C.—This friendly match was played last Thursday on the Caledonian ground when both clubs put out teams which were expected to represent them in their respective leagues. Winning the toss the home team played with the breeze in its favour, and though the forwards were slow on both sides, the players settled down to a fairly good game. Harrington, Chandler, Wilson and Nickel all got in good shots but Behrend kept the Rangers' goal in fine style. After half time the Caledonians had to defend, the visitors' five got in some good bouts of passing and Byrne was called upon to save from scrummages in front of his goal. Time was called without any score being made. Teams :—

RANGERS.—Behrend, goal ; Margrett and Anderson, backs ; Affleck, Lees, Russell and half-backs ; McCready, Cuthbert, Smith, Gault and Biers, forwards.

CALEDONIANS.—Byrne, goal ; Wade and Park, backs ; Chandler, Harrington and Tierney, half-backs ; Davis, Wilson, Nickel, Davison and Tenbrocke, forwards.

THE CIVIL AND MILITARY LEAGUE.

The above opened on Saturday, the 14th instant, when three matches were played. The Hornets had an easy victory over the Measurers by six goals to nil. The 79th R. G. A. beat St. Joseph's by three goals to nil and La Martiniere defeated the Caledonians by two to nil. On Monday three more games were played, La Martiniere defeated the Measurers on the latters' ground. St. Joseph's and the B.-N. Railway drew with a goal each while the match between Caledonians and the Hornets ended in a victory for the former by two goals to nil, and is reported below :—

CALEDONIA A. C. vs. HORNETS F. C.—On the ground of the former the home team gained an unexpected victory. The Hornets on Saturday had beaten the Measurers handsomely while the Caledonians succumbed to La Martiniere. The Hornets were without Apcar and played short during the first-half and the Caledonians had a much re-arranged team out. The football was good in the first-half but very scrambling in the second, and very much in favour of the home club. T. Davis and Tenbrocke, who each scored goals, infused much life into the forward line. Yackjee at back, Rosser and Russell played best for the Hornets. The Caledonians have a splendid full-back in Park, but the team requires to play together more if good results are to be obtained.

FOOTBALL NOTES.

OF the four matches which opened the League season last Saturday, the meeting of Dalhousie and Howrah attracted the largest crowd and, although the former team won, the game was much more evenly contested than the score of two goals to nil would seem to indicate. Howrah lost several chances of scoring, but with a bit more practice, Woods will have his forward line in good trim. For the winners Stewart, Prike and Doherty showed up well in the forward line, though the latter was very erratic at times, and Templeton at back was in great form ; the team as a whole, however, will profit by more combined practice. Echlin played for Howrah against his old club, and did not show up very strongly, the best men on the Howrah side being Woods and Smith.

Calcutta had no difficulty in defeating the Y. M. C. A. by three goals to nil, and had it not been for the good kicking of their backs, the Young Men would have had a greater score against them. The Calcutta backs were lucky in not having a strong forward line opposed to them. They seem to have trouble in keeping their places, and although Badham is a sound player and will improve weekly, he wants more weight and will no doubt get considerably hustled in playing against a heavy team, the King's Own for instance. Crawford was by far the best man in the half line, his tackling being at times extremely good. The Cooper-Sher-man combination kept things moving among the forwards and with a little more practice Smith will be a handy left-winger. For the Y. M. C. A. Baldwin and Stokes played well at back, and Price, Collingwood and Scully in the forward line, the team as a whole, however, are at present the weakest in the competition.

The Rangers—64th R. A. match did not attract a large crowd, but those who were present were agreeably surprised at the form shown by the men from Barrackpur. They seem to be a far better team than they were last year, although most of the old men are playing, their improvement being in no small way due to the energetic coaching of their Secretary, Bombardier Smith. The Rangers came off victorious by two goals to one, but the R. A. had most of the game and should have at any rate made a draw of it. Lieutenant Shaw has vacated his place at centre forward in favor of Young and the team will not now include an officer. They have good men in Young and Douglas and are not likely to carry off the wooden spoon this season. For the Rangers Rosser was the best in the forward line, and the club have been lucky in securing his services ; Macready, too, will make a good forward with practice, Lees played his old game at centre half and Anderson and Margrett are fairly reliable backs though the latter seemed off-color at times. Behrend had no chance of saving the one shot which passed him. He is likely to be as useful to his side as aforetime.

Though there is no doubt that the best team won in the contest between the "King's" and "Duke's," the the latter team deserve praise for the unflagging energy with which they fought out a losing game. Their back division were kept going almost the whole time by the combined rushes of the Lancasters' forwards and Roberts had a lively time of it in goal. Their attack suffered for want of combination, the centre forward especially seemed unable to get the ball away promptly to his wings, thus on many occasions losing the advantage gained by a stiff tussle with the enemy's halves. The latter are a tough trio and take a lot of moving, and they have two strong backs behind them ; Miller especially on Saturday showed himself to be a fine kicker. The entire King's Own team show evidence of steady combined practice and understand one another thoroughly, as is generally the case with a military team, and the forwards worked together perfectly, the only fault to find being their habit of persistently lying offside, this constitutional tendency of Thomas A. keeping the referee (Captain Gardiner) continually on the go. Whittingham on the left was perhaps the best of the line, his centering being admirable, while Ashworth in the centre played a dashing game. Calcutta will have their hands full on Wednesday.

almost on the King's Own touch-line (in fact along nearly the whole of the eastern side there is barely 4 or 5 feet between the two grounds) the regimental ground is hemmed in badly. It was bad enough before on the western side, owing to its close proximity to the Calcutta F. C. ground, but now it will be almost impossible to keep spectators off the field when the King's Own and Caledonias are both playing home matches at the same time. The soldiers have unfortunately made the mistake of digging a regular trench for a touch line on one side of their ground. I hope this will be filled in before some player hurts his ankle. With regard to the other grounds, Dalhousie's seems to be in better condition than last year, but the Y. M. C. A. pitch is the same as of yore, not very good. The Rangers are for the present playing on their old hockey ground, and a nice ground, too, if a bit small ; but it will be unplayable in wet weather as the tram-road end is a regular swamp after a heavy shower. Howrah ground is as last year and given fine weather one need not want a better of its size. It is a pity, however, that it cannot be extended. The Calcutta ground is as good as ever, which is all that need be said of it.

Regarding the institution of a second League this season there does not appear to be much to say as it is now an accomplished fact. Putting aside the question of whether it was advisable to start another League or not it seems a pity that such an amalgamation was not run in conjunction with the Calcutta Football League and so made an opportunity of binding the various football clubs more firmly together—making it a junior League with a proviso that men who had played in Calcutta Football League matches would not be eligible to compete in it would have given a fine impetus to junior football, but the opportunity has apparently been lost. Then again had the new League been inaugurated on the same lines as the second division of the English League, the prizes in which consist of entry into the first division of the winners and runners up, there would have been a good reason for the exclusion of native teams, the Calcutta Football League being restricted to European Clubs : but as the "Civil and Military" is apparently to be run entirely separate from the older organisation it seems a pity that the two or three best native clubs were not admitted. Apart from these two points, the independence of the Civil and Military and the non-inclusion of native teams, all who have the interests of football at heart will welcome the new League as a means of raising the standard of play generally. but native clubs will now find more difficulty than ever in arranging matches with European teams and their football will consequently suffer, although they have or had last year a small League of their own.

There is one military team in the new combination, the 77th R. G. A., and they seem likely to head the list. The Hornets are a strong team on paper, but although they played a good game on Saturday, on Monday they could make no headway against the Caledonias which does not argue well for their success. Of the remainder two are school teams, with whose play I am not at present acquainted, and one the Licensed Measurers, seem to be rather weakif the beating they received from the Hornets is any criterion. Seebpur have not yet had an oppor tunity of displaying their form.

The Calcutta Football League matches for next Saturday are 64th B. F. A. vs. West Ridings, Calcutta vs. Dalhousie, King's Own vs. Howrah and Y. M. C. A. vs Rangers, the first of these being played at Barrackpur and the other three on the Calcutta maidan. I hope suitable arrangements will be made for keeping the spectators on the narrow strip between the Calcutta and King's Own grounds off the fields of play.

The positions of the various clubs in the League up to Saturday, the 14th, was as follows :—

TOUCH."

The man at the bazaar, says Answers, had been using a vast amount of persuasion in trying to induce a visitor to purchase a phonograph. "Wonderful instrument," he remarked. "I've a blank cylinder here, if you care to hear yourself." The visitor's eyes brightened. "I play a flute a little," he replied, producing an instrument. "If you don't mind——." The bazaar man did not, and the wax cylinder was soon indented with something that only a Scotland Yard detective could have recognised as "Alice, Where Art Thou ?" "Is that really me !" asked the flutist, when his performance was repeated by the instrument. "That's you exactly, sir. Will you buy the phonograph ?" "No," was the sad reply. "I'll sell the flute, though."

AGA KHAN TOURNAMENT.

MIDDLESEX REGT. vs PIONEERS.—These teams met on the Marine Lines ground on the 10th instant, the Regiment winning by three goals to one. At the start the Middlesex were the first to open the attack and had matters somewhat their own way for a few minutes. This led to the Pioneers settling down to combined work, and for the remainder of the first half the game was very fast and brilliantly contested. The Pioneers had rather the better of the exchanges for a considerable period till eventually the Middlesex breaking away, Brown was able to score their first goal from a good centre by Peel. The regimental team then continued to attack and gave Phillips an opening which he took advantage of. This was followed by a determined rush down the ground by the Pioneers and led to Stringmore deserting his goal circle and suffering the penalty. The Middlesex followed this up by pressing hard, but the more than excellent defence of the Pioneers' backs and goalkeeper resisted all their attacks until Phillips again scored. The Pioneers then became the aggressors and a minute before half time scored their first and only point in the match. Crossing over with 3 goals to 1 in their favour the regimental team throughout the second period had much the better of the attack which was mainly located in the Pioneer's territory. A series of "bullies" near the civilians 25 yards led up to the Middlesex sending in a volley, the ball, however, rebounding into play off the goal post. From this point the pace slowed down considerably. The military continuing to press obtained a penalty 'bully" within the Pioneers' circle. The ball was well cleared by one of the latter's backs and led up to attacks being made on either goal in succession. A brief spell of more open exchanges following resulted in the Pioneers missing a possible chance of adding to their score. For the remaining few minutes the Middlesex attacked well, but were unable to break down the defence of the civilian players No addition to the score having been recorded in the second half, the Middlesex won a good game as stated. Teams.—

ROYAL SCOTS vs. CUSTOMS.—Played on the Cooperage on Tuesday, the 10th instant the soldiers had the best of matters from start to finish, and ran out winners by seven goals to nil. From the start the Customs carried play into their opponents' half, but were seen driven back and after this the Scots were constantly on the attack. Play had only been in progress about five minutes when Pryde opened the soldier's account with a splendid shot from the left. The military team kept up the attack, but their combination was weak, and many chances of scoring were lost. Eventually, however, they were rewarded by further success Henry dribbling well up and putting into the net with a shot which the Customs' custodian had no chance of stopping. After this the civilians rallied somewhat and took play to the other end. Their stay there, however, was of but brief duration, and they were soon busily on the defence. Again and again the Scots took play into the circle, but it was not until close on half time that Reed once more found the net. The soldiers thus crossed over with a lead of three goals to nil. In the second half play way of a still more one sided character, and the soldiers added four more goals to their score, eventually leaving the ground winners of a very disappointing game by seven goals to nil. Teams.—

GRANT MEDICAL COLLEGE vs. CATHEDRAL OLD BOYS "B" TEAM.—This match was contested on the Cooperage on the 11th instant. The Grant College winning easily by 8 goals to nil The Old Boys were outclassed and forced to defend throughout The Medical College got away and scored their first goal a few minutes from the start They continued to press but could not get through till just before the interval when they put on their second point. On resuming the College made a good run resulting in the third goal Keeping up the attack two more goals were scored then the Old Boys got away but were unable to score and the ball being returned to the territory the medical team netted a sixth goal. They attacked till the end of the game and before the call of time had added two more goals to their total thus winning by 8 goals to nil.

CHESHIRE REGIMENT "O" CO. vs. BYCULLA EDUCATION SOCIETY.—Played on the Marine Lines ground a good game resulting in a win for the Regiment by a goal to nil. Play ruled very even for the first twenty minutes when the Cheshires broke away and from a scrimmage in front of goal put the ball through. After the interval the regiment tried to add to their score but were unable to pass the Byculla backs and the game ended as stated. Teams:—

CHESHIRE REGIMENT "D" COMPANY.—Goal ; Private J. Tully ; backs: Lance-Corporals Bury and Price ; half-backs ; Private M Tully, Lieutenant Governor and Private Kinsey ; forwards ; Privates Edwards and Park, Sergeant Harvey, Private James, and Sergeant Corwood.

CATHEDRAL OLD BOYS "A" TEAM vs. ROYAL ARTILLARY KARACHI.—On the Cooperage on the 12th instant the cup holders beat the Karachi gunners by four goals to nil. The Old Boys pressed from the start and forced a corner. Nothing resulted but they continued to attack and after several attempts to the goal the ball was put through by Gawthorne. From the bully the old Boysigot away again and Spilling scored. Half time arrived without further addition to the score. On changing ends the Old Boys again attacked. Then the gunners got away and their centre forward almost scored. The Cathedral custodian relieved and play was again transferred to the Royal Artillery ground where two corners were obtained. The Greene got away and netted the third goal for the Old Boys. The Artillery men played hard but were unabe to score, the Cathedral team finding the net once more won by four goals to nil.

EAST LANCASHIRE vs. MIDDLESEX REGIMENT.—These teams met on the Cooperage last Saturday, a well contested match resulting in a win for the Middlesex Regiment by 4 goals to 2. They were the first to score, the ball being put through in a scrimmage. They attacked and soon after found the net again. The Lancashires then got away and hit a goal. Up and down play followed till the Middlesex men got going and scored a third point. In the second stage the play was very even, and it was not till within the last few minutes that the East Lancashires scored once more, their opponents immediately replying with a fourth goal.

GRANT MEDICAL COLLEGE vs. CATHEDRAL OLD BOYS' "A."—This match was played on the Marine Lines ground on Saturday, 14th instant. There was a large crowd and a splendid game resulted in the defeat of the Old Boys by a goal to nil. The opening exchanges were very even, then the Grant College got away and Fido rushing down put the ball through. The Old Boys then attacked and kept up a vigorous onslaught, the play being very fast They forced a corner, but nothing came of it, and the Medical team relieving, took the ball down, Fido sending it between the posts. He was penalised far off side however. On resuming after the interval the game was very exciting, both teams playing at the top of their form. The Old Boys made desperate attempts to score, but were unsuccessful and the game ended as stated.

CHESHIRE REGIMENT, "D" CO. vs. YORK AND LANCASHIRE.—The concluding game of the third round was played on Monday afternoon. Almost throughout the first half the Cheshire representatives held the upper hand ; but no scoring occurred. Crossing over with a clear score sheet the Cheshires asserted themselves ; their centre forward was badly fouled and, taking advantage of a free hit, the team rushed the ball into the net. Immediately afterwards they scored again and again, three goals being recorded in as many minutes. After resisting the pressure another ten minutes the York and Lancashire became dangerous, but could not score, and eventually the Cheshires, working down the left wing, scored their fourth goal and the game closed with the score. Cheshire, "D" Co. 4 goals : York and Lancashire nil

THE SEMI-FINAL.

ROYAL SCOTS vs. GRANT MEDICAL COLLEGE.—At the outset the College attacked and Fido had a possible chance, but the ball went behind. Good combination between the Scots' half-backs and forwards transferred the scene to hostilities to the other end, but they were unable to penetrate the Collegian's defence. Back to the other end the students took the ball, and once more Fido was just pulled up in time by the military goal-keeper. During the next five minutes the local men gave their opponents an anxious time ; but the defence was sound. Eventually the Scots rushed down and Reed sent in a well directed high shot which the homesters' custodian well saved at the expense of a corner. The soldiers now attacked strongly and on three or four occasions the College custodian was called upon and each time saved in splendid style. The Scots were not to be denied, however, and a minute later their inside right opened the account with a low shot, the College goal-keeper had no chance of stopping. From now until the half-time the Kamptie men had decidedly the best of matters and just before the whistle sounded Reed sent in a second goal. Immediately after the resumption of play the collegians attacked, and on two occasions Fido was only just pulled up in time. Eventually the soldiers broke away, but their stay at the other end was of brief duration. During the last fifteen minutes of play the College men made strenuous efforts to score and again and again got within their opponents' circle ; but the Scots backs defended splendidly and, try as they would, the students were unable to score. The whistle at length piped time and the Scots were winners by two goals to nil.

THE SHYING HABIT—CAUSE AND CURE.

A DRIVING or riding horse which forms the habit of shying is a constant menace to safety, whether he is by nature vicious or kind. Shying is nearly always a growing habit which, if not overcome, gets to be chronic and difficult of cure. The animal affected will often seem to go out of his way searching for or inventing bugaboos to furnish an excuse for shying or bolting.

The well-bred and high-spirited animal of mixed breeding is more liable to form the shying habit, but there are occasional causes where veritable deadheads under ordinary circumstances become the most unmanageable of shyers and bolters after they have developed an unreasoning fear of some commonplace object, as a certain shaped or coloured stone or plant, the drooping leaves of the mullen or plumes of the goldenrod.

Whatever the cause of the shying, it nearly always has its beginning in improper or careless handling when the animal is feeling very fit and "toppy." Sometimes the habit originates through some imperfection of sight which causes objects to look distorted and terrifying. Again, a colt will form the habit of shying at some particular object simply because he feels disturbed and lonesome from being kept from his companions and accustomed surroundings. In some cases among older animals it is not fear, but simply a nervous condition, which prompts them to wish to get into a mix-up; and if persisted in, and an advantage is gained over the driver occasionally, the chance for a tilt and a bolt gets to be enjoyed.

As to remedies, the best is prevention or overcoming as soon as possible after the trait shows. First ascertain that it is not a result of defective eyesight. If the animal is a colt, nervous and timid, hook him double with a well mannered horse until he gets way-wise. Should he continue to show fear of some object, induce him to get a satisfying knowledge of its harmlessness through both his senses of sight and smell. Do not attempt to force his acquaintance of it suddenly. Lead the way yourself and handle it; do not force him to it under the whip.

It is more often the colts that are entirely country reared and broken which give the most trouble from shyidg. When driven in town or City from the start their attention is divided and diverted by so many sights and sound as to cause little notice to be paid to anything but their driver's wishes.

There are occasional cases among older horses where the shying is caused by none of the causes mentioned, but is simply a headstrong challenge to try conclusions with the driver. Where such a condition is proved, it will be advisable to have a reliable and expert horseman try heroic measures by using strong harness and rigging and a bit that will afford complete mastery over the animal. Then when an attempt is made to shy and bolt, let a convincing introduction to a first-class whalebone be judiciously, but not brutally and blindly, applied. A treacherous, unsafe animal can thus be sometimes made to see the unwisdom of his ways when kindness alone fails entirely. The best cure for the generality or early and slight attacks of the shying habit is sufficient and regular road work to keep the animal's nervous and muscular tension down to a normal condition.

The Story Teller.

"IN THE CAUSE OF CHARITY."

THE season of amateur theatricals is upon us—a dismal and a boresome season—it is all set about with traps and pitfalls for the feet of the unwary. It seems to have set in this year with redoubled ardour, an irrepressible enthusiasm which bids fair to drive one to flee the country and seek shelter in the calm of Monte Carlo or the less exigeant Sahara Desert!

The shooting season has been a poor one—disappointing bags, birds scarce and wild and weather execrable. The hunting season has been so far a trial to the patience and temper of most of the hunting world, but the amateur theatrical season positively threatens to romp in!

What with bills and begging letters the New Year early posts were never an inviting prospect, but when added to that we find every second letter contains an invitation to attend—with or without payment—some fresh display of histrionic art on the part of our large circle of friends and acquaintances it becomes an act of heroism to tackle the post bag at all.

There is another curious development about these performances which gives food for reflection.

Formerly you were only invited as a mere guest to witness the attempts of your friends to amuse themselves and your hostess frankly thanked you for coming. Now a very different attitude is imposed upon one. You are not only invited to attend, but you are expected to pay for the privilege! To pay good money down for the doubtful comfort of a cane-bottomed bed-room chair in a crush where you could see nothing if you wished to, and of being bored to death for two mortal hours, added to which you are expected to pay fulsome and preposterous compliments to the players, the stage managers, the hostess, the prompter, the scene shifters, the orchestra, and the individual (generally an irrepressible schoolboy with a bent for practical joking) who "manages"? the curtain?! one and all they seem to think that they have a personal claim on your gratitude and —— self consciously while you rack your brains to find suitable expressions of wonder and admiration! You need never be afraid of over doing it or laying it on too thick.

It is simply amazing what the average amateur will swallow in that way and, what is more, honestly believe it too!

Truly charity covereth a multitude of sins! Hence alas! all these amateur crimes seek shelter beneath her friendly wing.

But its rough on the rest of the world. Under the old régime we could at least hug ourselves on good nature, but now! good Lord! we have not only got to bear it, but we got to pay for bearing it and pretend a gratitude and an enjoyment which it becomes year by year more difficult to simulate

They no longer honestly admit, that they are a little dull and want something to amuse and occupy a few wet days, to fill up a country house visit! Good gracious, no! That is not at all the line they take! Now they "graciously give their services" in the cause of charity, and assume an air of conscious virtue, though as a matter of fact they care nothing about the particular charity in question, and as a rule have some difficulty in fixing on a suitable purpose to which to devote the funds, should there be any, after defraying the expenses.

This point usually produces a considerable amount of argument and heated discussion—it is indissolubly bound up with the choice of the play. On one point only are they all agreed—they must act something, and it follows that they must therefore act it in the cause of some charity—but what?

It would never do to merely announce that having nothing better to do they were bent on performing a play for their own selfish amusement and that they would be immensely grateful to their friends if they would so far sacrifice their own comfort and feelings to the extent of sitting through the performance and lending it an air of reality and gaiety that the mere presence of the servants and workpeople could never produce alone!

But this is rank heresy, an unheard of, an inconceivable view to take of the kindness, the good nature, the benevolence of these condescending ladies and gentlemen!

The very tone in which they mention the subject fills you with resentment and a desire to be crushing not to say rude. The sort of proud humility with which they assure you that they could not well refuse to help in such a cause—that though their time is valuable they are glad of course to give their services, etc.!

Irritating is not the word for it and the desire to laugh at times beyond poor human powers of resistance?

"David Garrick is the thing to act—I've acted a drunken scene before—it's a piece that takes a bit of doing and it's not too long."

"David Garrick! my dear chap! Rot! Let's have something with some dances and a song or two—Pantomime Rehearsal or the "Country Girl" or something in that style. I have it "A Chinese Honeymoon"! That's the piece, plenty of fun and go in it!"

My dear follow impossible, absurd! Where are you going to get a Louie Freear from? Besides it's quite unsuitable in such a cause. Do remember this is a charity performance in aid of the society for clothing converted Boers or reforming inebriates or something moral like that! you must have a serious piece for such a purpose of course."

Bunkum! Charity be jiggered! Or change the blessed cause then give the money—there won't be any, there never is—to the hospital or to the actors' benevolent fund. That's a good idea! They won't care what you act and I dare say poor devils they be glad of a five-pound note too. Good idea that too. Tell you what! We might have a collection just among ourselves the performers you know, at the end and send them a trifle anyhow even if there isn't any money—which there wont be, there never is? Only do lets act something decent, none of your blooming starchy four-act tragedies. Besides I have a fancy I may be wrong of course, though I can generally trust my intuitions in those things, that I could do Louie Frear's part myself!" he smiles deprecatingly. A howl of derision meets this proposal accompanied by shouts of laughter and a chorus of jeers and jibes whereupon the aspirant to the part of Miss Freear gets up with offended dignity and prepares to leave the room, "all right you can act any silly thing you jolly well please, only don't count on me that's all!" and he stalks towards the door followed by the expostulations and appeals of the company.

The stage manager in his efforts to effect a reconciliation goes so far as to assure him in an under tone, that of course, anyone could see with half an eye that he was just cut out for the part, but where was he likely to find others capable of sustaining the characters necessary to support him, "after all you know my dear chap, what would be the good of a Louie Frear by herself?"

Even this obviously unanswerable argument, however, has no effect on the aspirant to Miss Frear's special shoes and he remains obdurate not to say sulky though he returns to his place in the discussion with a feigned air of somewhat overdone reluctance.

A perfect bable of suggestions follows, each proposing a more or less pretentious and impossible play containing at least one or two characters which appeal to the professor as particularly suited to their own special personality. That they should consider anything but their own particular parts or that the suitability of the play as a whole is of the smallest importance does not seem to occur to any of them, and the purpose to which the profits, of which "there won't be any" as the Louie Frear individual continues at intervals according to the state of his temper to assure them, are to be devoted is a matter of the most complete indifference, provided only that it is one that will leave them a free hand all round and not hamper them in any way in the choice of a play or interfere with their personal peculiarities as to the height of a kick, the length of a skirt, the vulgarity of a song, etc.

"Oh do let me do a slavey. I really can do that kind of part awfully well" exclaims the beauty of the family with a bewitching glance from the corner of her blue eye. She has no idea of acting, but she loves to black her nose and speak with a broad country twang and comport herself as much like a street arab as she can—indeed it is almost the only form of "acting" she can attempt, and as she always insists on doing it, there always has to be a "slavey" introduced into the piece somewhere, no matter what the play chosen; Hamlet or Macbeth would have to submit to a dirty and irrelevant kitchen maid; flouncing about with a tea tray, or a broom and duster, placing her arms akimbo and haranguing the audience at considerable length with a face adorned with marvellous smudges and a still more marvellous accent what intended to represent no one has ever discovered!

The variety of suggested plays is only rivalled by the variety of arguments and objections with which each is met. The stage manager has his work cut out to keep the peace and he is only partially successful, for long before the rehearsals are half over there is only a very thinly veiled antagonism between half the performers and an armed neutrality between the other half. Indeed the wonder is that peace is kept as well as it is considering all things.

However, things settle down more or less and adjust themselves and the rehearsals proceed, only disturbed now and then by first one and then another threatening to throw up his or her part at the eleventh hour.

The eventful day finds them in a state of more or less unpreparedness which in no way interferes with their feeling of complacent satisfaction. They declare with conviction that they will be "all right" at the real show and assure each other that they never can really act at rehearsals, which is a self-evident fact and no sort of consolation to the stage manager!

Threats or blandishments, scolding or cajoling alike has no effect upon any of them. Useless is it to repeat the same instructions over and over again, each has his or her own pet theory which nothing would induce them to abandon however absurd or inconvenient to the other actors. That they should be expected to be "word perfect" is an idea they scout with derision. What on earth is the good of a prompter if they have got to know their parts!

But then "they do enjoy it so" as the hostess remarks, surveying the antics of her family with maternal pride and admiration! There is no doubt about that, if no one else does they most certainly enjoy themselves thoroughly from start to finish with a zest and gusto which is refreshing—at least it would be if the conditions were a trifle less of a strain on the patience of the audience.

The room is very hot, very crowded; the chairs, a miscellaneous assortment, are small, hard and unpleasantly near together. One elderly lady of goodly proportions trying vainly to find a position in which she can rest some adequate proportion of her weight on the diminutive seat provided, remarks fretfully to her neighbour that she hopes it's not a very long play and she can't think what they they want to do it for at all!

"Oh! but it's for a charity you see and of course they have to put the seats near together in order to make as much as possible," replies her neighbour in a soothing whisper. "and Captain Trotter is taking part, he is very good, you will like him they say. He was once on the real stage for a short time and he is a ventriloquist—he's got a doll and it's really very funny, if you don't look at him you can almost believe it's the doll speaking!"

"Humph," grunts the old lady quite unappeased by this alluring prospect, "all I can say is I call it iniquitous dunning your friends to take tickets and then not even giving them a chair they can sit on! Charity indeed! Much charity there is about it! What are they doing now? Oh! that girl and her broom again! Who's she talking to! The prompter, not intended to hear that? Well, there's nothing else to listen to! I can see much with all these heads in front of me, but I don't mind that, I have seen them all off the stage and they are just the same on it. Well, I shall be glad when it's over!"

The audience laugh and whisper and applaud at intervals, at last rising with a buzz of relief and pent-up feelings the moment the curtain finally descends, hardly waiting to clap the performers as they come on singly and in pairs, bowing and smiling and smirking with pleased condescension and that air of self-conscious complacence which appears to be inseparable from the amateur actor, male or female and which has such an unfortunately irritating effect upon the onlookers.

Every one hurries off in search of refreshments; they feel they have earned something and the hostess is wise who is careful to see that at least there is nothing left to be desired in this direction. Wonderful what a good supper and good wine will do towards disarming criticism and appeasing the feeling of the guests.

"It was a ghastly performance of course, but what can you expect with that Trotter and that little fool with her eternal smuts and her country accent! As for Brown why he is always Brown, just that! But the supper wasn't bad and the wine was quite good!"

"Well I am glad it's over, there weren't even any decen frocks I wonder she didn't run to something fresh. I've seen that pink gown half a dozen times last summer! However I suppose they are pleased, and that's all that matters. I must go and say goodbye and get off as soon as possible. Dull! I believe you—but so dull!"

"So good of you to take so much trouble—charming! and how well they all acted. Dear Eva so amusing, so full of spirits she was quite the life and soul of the piece and how lucky to secure Captain Trotter. He is a bo n actor? What a pity he couldn't introducee his doll though—but with such a very long play perhaps it would have been too much."

"Really you are a public benefactor—so kind of you! The district nurse ought to be most grateful! I hope you have made quite a nice large sum for her by your most successful entertainment."

"Oh! the district nurse! Well we haven't got a district nurse at present, but then one never really makes anything at these performances, so she won't be disappointed! One has to do something to amuse the young people, and they are all so keen on acting that we are only too pleased to let them get it up. Tom was really very good, wasn't he and May looks so sweet in that pink frock! We hired all the wigs and the men's dresses.

"Every one seems so pleased I think we may congratulate ourselves on a most successful evening."

"D—d rot I call it victimising one's friends in that way." And this is true hospitality!

THEATRE ROYAL.

THE entertainments of music, song and dance continue to run their prosperous course at the Theatre Royal, where a warmly appreciative audience gathered last Saturday night and thoroughly enjoyed a highly interesting programme. Next Saturday the third entertainment will be presented when an entire change will be made in the first part of the programme which will include part songs by the Minster Quartette; character songs by Miss Beryl Mackay, a song by the popular favourite, Mrs. D. S. Richmond and a novel act by Messrs. Flatt, Franklin, and Douglas entitled "White and Black introducing many new and comic situations songs, and dances; a newversion of 'The Musical Burglar" by Mr. Bert Flatt; and new songs by Mdlle. Morosini. Mdlle Maryx will play Chopin's "Polonaise." In the second part many new items will be introduced into the plantation sketch, Down South" the principal of which will be "A Party in Fairyland" and "Sammy." A crowded house should award the efforts of the two enterprising young ladies, Mdlles. Morosini and Maryx, who are doing so much to relieve the tedium of the present dull season.

TO MOTORISTS

THE BEST OILS FOR MOTOR CARS.

Wilburine for cylinders ... Rs. 6-8 per gallon Tin. | Valvoline for Bearings, etc. ... Rs. 5-0 per gallon Tin.

Extract from the "Autocar."

LUBRICATING OILS.—[2422]—It may be instructive to your numerous readers to have the experiences of a motor car experimentalist on the behaviour of lubricating oils for motor work. In the first onset I tried various sorts of oils, all of which left deposits of carbon and gumming matter in the cylinders and valves. These deposits are serious drawbacks, not only to the working of the pistons and valves, but also interfere with the proper sparking at the ignition plugs. I then tried the Valvoline Oil Co.'s oils, using "Wilburine" for the cylinders and "Valvoline" for the bearings, etc.; these being quite pure mineral oils, no deposits either of carbon or gumming matter were left. Every time the pistons, etc., have been examined they were quite bright, clean and well lubricated. The valves also keep in good condition and require very little regrinding. I have been quite free from sparking troubles since using the above lubricants. Any dust that alights on the working parts is easily wiped off, whereas with other oils dirt stuck fast through gumming.

Very much smaller quantities of these oils ("Wilburine" and "Valvoline") about one-third to one-quarter, are required, which more than balances the extra first cost. The wearing surfaces are besides in a magnificent condition. These advantages —viz., high-class lubrication, freedom from deposit in cylinders, gum in bearings, absence of sparking troubles, are too important to be neglected by any motorist.

There is a tendency to use various greases, instead of oils. Engineers have over and over again proved that greases give much greater frictional losses than oils; with motor car engines and bearings the lubricant that gives the least possible friction is the best.

I have referred to the advantages the motorist gets. I will mention another advantage these oils have to those whom the motorist passes, viz., the absence of the fried-fish-shop smell so often noted. Several persons have been very much struck by the absence of smell; even when the car has been standing for some time with the engines running, no trace of offensive odour has been apparent to the bystanders.

I mention these experiences, having no interest in the Valvoline Oil Co., that others may be benefited and save themselves trouble and their neighbours some annoyance.

SPORT THEN AND NOW.

THE appearance of a reprint of Henry Alken's famous folio The National Sports of Great Britain, with the fifty coloured plates which form its chief attraction—we might, without disparagement to the writer of the English and French letterpress, say its only attraction—serves to remind us of the gulf which has grown up between our grandfathers and ourselves in sport. Alken's work was published in London in the year 1821 and the plates include some of the finest drawings that most capable of sporting artists ever committed to paper: it is claimed for these plates that they cover the entire range of British sport, and the criticism we are tempted to offer from memory is that the claim falls short of fact: for Alken has here given us pictures of pursuits which in no other contemporary work are mentioned in the category of sport. Was bittern shooting, for example, ever a recognised sport in England? Neither Daniel nor Hawker refer to Botaurus stellaris as a game bird, or as one that offered any attraction to the wild fowler, and the knowledge possessed by both these authorities is beyond challenge. The probability is that bittern shooting was a strictly local form of sport which became familiar to the artist through residence in the eastern counties in whose marshes the bird was always most plentiful while it remained a common species in England.

Henry Alken was born in Suffolk in 1784 (the place of his birth is not known with precision) and he married at Ipswich in 1809; whence it would appear that he had opportunities of informing himself concerning local sport which might not have been known to others. "Owling" is another sport which perhaps may rank with rat catching, bat fowling, and the many forms of bird netting by night which were beloved of our forebears. Daniel has a few words to say about owl catching, but the five lines he devotes to the subject relate to the brown owl as vermin and recommend its capture by the pole trap which has so recently been proscribed by law.

Apart from these and similar forms of sport, a mental review of National Sports invites the reflection that our grandfathers had larger choice than ourselves. Bull baiting—one of the most spirited of these fifty pictures—was abolished in 1835 and bear baiting went with it: cock fighting followed in 1849 as a public spectacle at all events and badger drawing is gone. Falconry survives, but almost as an exotic, for the number of hawking men in Britain at the present day are to be counted by tens and deplorably few tens at that. We need not regret the disappearance of the bull ring, bear pit and badger cask; for it would be difficult to find a word to say in defence of any one of them on the score of humanity. Badger baiting was denied a place among legitimate sports by Daniel twenty years before Henry Alken perpetuated it as a "National" amusement. "The baiting the badger with dogs," says the Rev. W. B. Daniel, "is a cruelty usually confined to the vicious and inhuman, who delight in seeing an innocent animal surrounded by its enemies and which although torn from his haunts where his gallantry might possibly repel his assailants, and although oppressed by numbers, defends himself from their combined attacks with wonderful activity and effect." Substitute "bull" or "bear" for "badger" and Daniel's remarks will apply: but on bull and bear baiting and cock fighting, the great authority is silent, these sports not coming within the scope of his survey.

Hunting and racing were the subjects to which Alken as an artist was most devoted, and his pictures accentuate the difference between these sports in George III.'s day and our own. Smaller fields and, probably, more foxes: neither wire nor railway line to obstruct. Our horses and hounds are faster no doubt, but we can boast no other improvement, if indeed we may claim greater speed as a point to the good; for if a modern hunting field has more galloping it sees a good deal less of true hunting; whether the majority wish to see more of the latter, however, is another thing. The changes in the turf have been reviewed ere now in these columns and we need not recall them now.

Perhaps none of the sports which were national in 1821 and remain so have undergone such changes as shooting, more especially pheasant shooting. It is difficult to recognise as "pheasant shooting" the picture of two sportsmen with single muzzle loaders, accompanied by a brace of setters; heavy bags of pheasants eighty years ago were unknown in England and twenty years later the Oracle of Rural Life and Sporting Almanac refers to "that continental import the battue;" terms which indicate its novelty. Tastes differ in shooting as in other matters; for ourselves we cannot but feel that there was far more sport in working copse and ragged hedge row with a couple of clever dogs and killing two or three brace of pheasants in the old style than there is in "pulling 'em down" by the score, even though skill is rejoiced by the sight of three birds falling at once to prove marksmanship and sleight of hand in changing guns. The above-mentioned Oracle of Rural Life gives a picture of covert shooting much as Alken pourtrayed it. "At this period of the year (January) covert shooting is delightful, because the trees are divested of leaves, and the working of the spaniels and the movements of the game become more clearly perceptible. There is something remarkably interesting and indeed animating in the working of a well trained team of spaniels." That sight is a thing of the past, though there are some modest sportsmen who do not "run to big shoots" that use the spaniel regularly in their quiet informal shooting on their own ground.

Coaching was still at its zenith when the National Sports appeared and of course it figures among the subjects dealt with. Alken as a horse painter has had few rivals and no superior; and it is the verisimilitude of his hunting and coaching scenes that have kept his memory green. Coaching at the present day, kept alive by the Four-in-hand and Driving Clubs and by the London coaches which ply in summer, is a pale reflex of the ancient glories of the road in the golden age of coaching. From the practical point of view it is almost as dead as bull baiting. We forget now whether National Sports include yachting, or sailing in any form, but if memory does not deceive, it has nothing to say or to show in this department; yet yacht races were held regularly in the Thames Estuary and in the Solent during the earlier years of the nineteenth century and Alken could not have been wholly unacquainted with the fact of their occurrence.

Unless we are content to give motor racing a place among our modern sports (and we confess that by no stretch of indulgence can we see how driving machinery at speed can be considered "sport" in any legitimate sense) there is no single form of English sport we enjoy which was denied our grandfathers while they enjoyed many which are denied to us. Home-staying folk have nothing to replace bull and bear baiting and badger drawing which aforetime gave pleasure—whether legitimate or not—to thousands; and in that respect our forebears were much better circumstanced than ourselves; and if the faddist element represented by the so-called Humanitarians are allowed to have their way, our grandchildren will draw envious comparisons between our opportunities and those which a sickly sentimentality has left for their delectation.

In this country we are better off in some respects at least; we have never yet been able to ascertain for certain who was the pioneer of hill sport and when Europeans first discovered the joys of bagging markhor, ovis ammon or other wild sheep. Such sport was unknown in the twenties or we are greatly mistaken, and in those days, there was so much game and so accessible in the plains that sportsmen had little temptation to look farther afield, even if they possessed weapons of sufficient precision to do justice to wary hill game; which they had not. Taking a wider cast, it need hardly be said that the great shooting grounds of Africa and North America were practically untouched by white men, though a few early sporting books give us accounts of the shooting that was enjoyed by travellers of more than ordinary enterprise. It is a fact patent to all that so far as big game is concerned the golden age of sport is past; the multiplication of sportsmen, the ease of transport, the spread of colonisation and the vast improvements in firearms have made it necessary for nearly every corner of the earth to take step to preserve what is only too often the remnant of its large fauna; it is improbable that shooting without restriction will ever again be possible in lands where game bears any comparison in quantity with the game of even forty years ago.

Sporting Notes.

THE first entries for the Mysore races are quite good and a successful meeting is assured. Not quite so many visitors from the west of India as was anticipated have entered at present, but the second entries may produce additional nominations from this source. It is curious to note the different class of horses in some of the races, and Mr. Cursetjee will indeed have his work cut out to bring them anywhere near together. It always appears a cruel thing to crush a good horse with a welter weight, but, from what one can see, welter weights will be the order of the day in a good many events. Meanwhile there must be plenty of sport. As an instance, there are fourteen entries for the Maharaja's Cup, and twenty for the Palace Cup.

The Bangalore meeting will, we confidently believe, be a real bumper one. Coming close after Mysore, many visitors who run horses or ponies at the former meeting will most probably wait for the latter and we know personally of some real good horses that are going at Bangalore. Bundook will probably be seen there as well as at the capital, and at least half-a-dozen more from Ferguson's stable, which are not running at Mysore will figure in the Bangalore entries. Carberton, the English horse, already several times referred to in these notes, did a good half-mile gallop the other evening, and there is not much doubt about his pace. But his forelegs will want care, and it must be a relief to his connections that the recent copious rain has made the course such good going.

Paperchasing has begun at Bangalore: the 19th instant saw a point-to-point ride from the 3rd mile-stone on the old Madras Road. Captain Adams, of the 28th Light Cavalry, was first home, followed closely by Mr. Hawley of the same regiment. Mrs. Georges, the popular wife of Colonel Georges, commanding the 28th Light Cavalry, came to grief in a nullah—there were a good many of these, and they wanted doing—but most happily no damage was done to either horse or rider.

We regret to notice the death of the mare Matsa, the property or Mr. R. Henderson, of Cachar; she broke her back in struggling to free herself from the stable wrecked in one of the late storms. Her local reputation and performances justified the expectation of seeing her down in Calcutta, as also at other Bengal meetings.

Cachar owners have not been in luck's way lately, as anthrax has broken out in the district, and has already claimed two victims in the well-known ponies Raffer and Ginger belonging to that accomplished wielder of the stick Mr. Carslaw. It is to be hoped the disease will soon be stamped out for in no part of the country are there so many polo nags gathered in close proximity.

The Gymkhana at Simla, on the 21st instant, was again very successful, there was a big gathering, Lord and Lady Ampthill and Lady Rivaz being among those present. Proceedings opened with tent-pegging, for which there were fifteen competitors, Mr. Lyne Evans winning. The second event was for ladies—to pick polo balls off posts and place them in buckets. There were four heats, Mrs. McLeod, Mrs. Crocker, Mrs. Rivett Carnac and Mrs. Robinson meeting in the final, which was won in fine style by Mrs. McLeod. Hitting the Polo Ball for gentlemen attracted sixteen competitors, Captain V. Brooke, A.-D.-C., winning the finals. A match for Rs. 100 a side between Mr. Davies' Katerfelto and Captain Maconchy's Minden proved an easy thing for the former. The Rounding-up Stakes with goats provided great amusement and was won by Major W. Campbell and Mrs. Heneage. The Cigarette Scurry was the final event, and twenty entered. Gentlemen were to gallop to the rail where their partners rolled cigarettes to be smoked on the return journey. Captain Popham, A.-D.-C., and Miss Patterson won, with Mr. Gabbett and Mrs. Shikleton a close second.

McQuade, the Southern India trainer, had a most successful time at the recent Wellington and Ootacamund Meetings, at which he led in no less than fifteen winners.

On dit that the Quetta executive have decided not to hold lotteries in connection with their forthcoming meeting.

Training in Colombo for the approaching Monsoon Meetings is now in full swing. Jockeys Lansdowne, Wiles, Morrison, Sullivan, Fisher and Johnston are there: the latter may be coming up to Calcutta after the meeting on the lookout for something with which Mr. E. L. F. de Soysa may have a shy at the Governor's Cup.

All who knew Mr. Justice Norris in India will regret to hear of his death. A hater of humbug, a staunch advocate of common sense and equity as often opposed to the law, a man of unbounded and quick sympathy he was, perhaps, not a brilliant success as a High Court Judge—"too human altogether" we heard him called—but he was a man conspicuous for those qualities of head and heart that never fail to compel our respect and warm admiration. He did a great deal for the S. P. C. A. in Calcutta and was one of our bright particular society stars, a charming host and a raconteur of rare gifts. It will be remembered by card players here that he was one of the whist party which had a complete hand of one suit dealt to each player.

Mr. Justice Grantham and a special jury, sitting in the King's Bench on the 3rd instant, had before them the case of Sievier vs. Duke alluded to in a recent issue. This was an action brought by Mr. Robert Standish Sievier, the well-known owner of race-horses, to recover damages from Sir James Duke for alleged slander. The defence pleaded was privilege.

Mr. Eldon Bankes, K.C., and Mr. Norman Craig were counsel for plaintiff; while defendant was represented by Mr. Lawson Walton, K.C., Mr. C. F. Gill, K.C., and Mr. Spence.

The words complained of were to the effect that the reputation of plaintiff was that he was "a card-sharper, a thief, and a murderer;" further, that he had been thrown from a boat into the sea owing to his having cheated at cards; and, with regard to the alleged murder, a dead man was once found under his window in Australia, and that it was common repute the plaintiff murdered him. There was a further alleged slander, which was to the effect that Mr. Sievier had allowed his race-horse Sceptre to be pulled when running in the Derby which was the means of his winning much money, and that at a certain club the matter was mentioned with the result that plaintiff had been unmasked and turned out.

In opening the case, Mr. Bankes said the accusations brought against plaintiff were of a most terrible character. In the Raleigh Club, in 1903, card-sharping allegations were made by the defendant to Major Seller, and plaintiff was also said to have caused the pulling of Sceptre, whereby the animal lost the race. Such statements were entirely wrong and when the jury had heard the whole of the evidence they must come to the conclusion the defendant spoke recklessly and maliciously. The occasion in question was when defendant, seeing the plaintiff in the club, asked the Major whether he had introduced the plaintiff, and being answered in the negative, the remarks were made.

Counsel said he considered the plaintiff was entitled to such damages as the odium of the slanders warranted. Besides Mr. Sievier, there were other people whose future depended upon the jury's verdict. This inquiry merited a very careful, patient, and independent hearing. The life which Mr. Sievier lived was such that no charges should be brought against him of dishonesty in connection with racing or improper dealing in betting transactions. It was admitted that Mr. Sievier had been on three occasions bankrupt, and it might have been that he was unfortunately in a room playing cards in the presence of certain individuals—unknown to him certainly—who were of disreputable character.

His Lordship: Nothing worse? (Laughter.)

Mr. Bankes: Of disreputable character; but Sir James Duke is not entitled, nor is any other man entitled, to say what he has said; and I ask you, gentlemen of the jury, to protect him and award such damages as you think right, in order that Mr. Sievier may go forth from this court clear of these odious accusations.

Major Seller, of the 4th Dragoon Guards, then gave evidence on behalf of plaintiff. He stated that the words were uttered to him by Sir James Duke in a private part of the club, and he considered they were not privileged.

Cross-examined by Mr. Lawson Walton, he said he could not say what Mr. Sievier's business was in this affair. Sir James Duke did not say when he uttered to him the words complained of that he wished him to listen to him in a private room. It was not a confidential talk.

His Lordship: Where was he when you saw him first?—Witness: In the hall.

Why should he not have spoken to you there if he did not wish it to be private?—I could not tell you, my lord.

Does not it strike you when a person, as an ordinary practice in society, takes you into a private room to talk over something, he means it to be private?—Well, I never asked him.

His Lordship: Now, does it not look rather as if he considered it a private conversation?—Witness: I suppose he did, my lord.

Mr. Lawson Walton: Did he not say, "Is Sievier the sort of man you would introduce to your wife?"—Witness: No.

Or "socially?"—Certainly not.

Did he say this: "Would you take him to your mess?"—He mentioned that.

Would you introduce him to your mess to-morrow?—Not while this action is going on.

Witness felt sure that Mr. Sievier could not have ordered the horse Sceptre to be pulled, because it was Mr. Sievier's greatest wish to win the Derby. He knew that Sievier was formerly a bookmaker in Australia, but that did not make any difference in his friendship for him. He knew nothing whatever against him. Witness admitted that he had had loans from Mr. Sievier, but only to the extent of £25. On both occasions, added Major Seller, the defendant said to him at the end of the conversations about plaintiff, "Now you may tell Bob Sievier, with my compliments." It was suggested that the rider of Sceptre should be called to prove that he did not pull the horse, but upon a protest by Mr. Walton that it was not necessary the jockey was not sworn.

Mr. Sievier then went into the box: in reply to Mr. E. Bankes, he said he was passing the Raleigh Club in the company of the Major, when the latter turned towards the club and said he was sorry he could not take him inside. The witness looked aghast, as he had been into the club the previous night, and asked the reason. In the end the Major said, "Certain things have been said against you. You will forgive me. I will see you at the Carlton Hotel between four and five." The witness was surprised, and asked for an explanation. After great pressure the Major told him the slander.

The witness was examined at some length as to his career. He said he was formerly in the Army, went through the Kaffir war, and received medals. Then he went to Australia and started as a bookmaker under another name. He had a row with a certain lord, who would now be named X, because that lord owed him money. When he demanded it, the noble lord wrote him that he could go and be d—d. Next time he met his lordship he was told that as his lordship was a high police official he should arrest the witness. As his lordship was in a bad humour, and said he should not pay him, the witness smacked his face. Then he was "run in," and was obliged to appear in the police court, where there was a packed bench of twenty magistrates. It was what was called in the colonies a "packed" bench, because he was told long beforehand that in any event he would be convicted. He appealed from the decision, and the appeal was upheld. He admitted that in 1888 he was to have been presented at Court, but this was cancelled on account of his having made a book in Australia. The plaintiff in detail denied various allegations as to his not having discharged his debts, as to his playing cards and billiards and as to his turf transactions, and the case was proceeding when mail left.

It is rumoured that Scott has purchased (in France) for the Kour Saheb of Patiala a horse named "La Belle France." We have been unable to trace the animal—there is a La Belle and a La France, but a search among files and turf registers has not so far revealed "La Belle France."

We see by our home papers to hand this week that St. Amant defeated Sceptre's time record in the Two Thousand Guineas by one-fifth of a second, and Pretty Polly in the One Thousand beat the record Mr. Bass's filly made in the "One Thousand," also by one-fifth. The value of the fillies, race—4,000 sovs—was 200 sovs in advance of the sum earned by Quintessence a year ago, but it fell £1,450 less than the value of Sceptre's "One Thousand." This is due to the fact that in Sceptre's year the number of subscribers was the highest in the history of the race, which was established in 1814.

At Chester races on the second day of the meeting a curious sight was seen. A brougham was observed being dragged across the Roodee without a horse by a mob of 500 people. The brougham was hoisted over the rails on to the course, turning a somersault, righted on to its wheels again, dragged on across the course, hoisted over the other rails, righted on to its wheels and sent helter skelter down the banks of the Dee into the river. It was said to have been occupied by bookmakers who had not liquidated their liabilities, and, be this as it may, it is a fact that there was an individual in the carriage throughout the whole of its exciting transit from the ring to the river. By the time the vehicle had got into midstream this individual, apparently none the worse, managed to get out, swim ashore, and escape.

The death of Janissary, at the Abony Stud, Hungary, at the age of seventeen years, is recorded by Deutscher Sport. Janissary was a bay son of Isonomy out of Jannette and, as a juvenile, once ran second to Signorina. In the following season he won two races, one being the St. James's Palace Stakes. His chief feat at the stud was siring Jeddah, the great outsider who won the Derby of 1898, but he also begot other useful ones in Amurath (winner of the Brocklesby), Valide, Lock and Key, Violenta, etc. He was sold at the first July sales of 1902 to Baron Harkanyi for 500 guineas.

We regret to hear that Ranjitsinghji, the cricketer, has been guilty of a piece of sporting vandalism in that he has shot a lion in the Gir forest. There are (it is believed) but a dozen or so of these noble creatures left, and in the natural course of events the Indian lion may soon become extinct. It seems a pity this much puffed cricketer should have been permitted to help in hurrying on such extinction.

Old Lady (to taxidermist): "You see for yourself, man. You stuffed my poor parrot only this summer, and here are his feathers tumbling out before your eyes. Taxidermist: "Lor' bless you, ma'am! That's the triumph of the art. We stuff them so natural that they moult in their proper season.

Among Mr. R. McKenna's recent purchases for India is Diapur, a jump horse by Grand Flaneur, and reputed of more than average quality over hurdles and fences.

With characteristic generosity and that sporting spirit which so materially helps to make the "wheels go wound" Mr. George Lund, of the well-known firm of Messrs. Lund and Blockley, Bombay, has offered to provide, in future years, medals for the winners and runners up in the Aga Khan Hockey Tournament, an offer which, of course, the executive will cheerfully and gratefully accept. So far the winners have carried off nothing but the Cup.

On a reference made by Mr. T. Hunt, Honorary Secretary of the Mysore Game and Fish Preservation Association, the Government have pointed out that a notification, empowering Subdivisional Magistrates to grant licenses, under the Game Rules, has been issued in order to avoid unnecessary delay; and concurring with the Conservator of Forests and Deputy Commissioner of Hassan, they deem it inexpedient to prohibit entry into District Forests for shikar, except on permits, as the provision of the Game Rules afford sufficient protection to all animals of game, and the fact that the hunting and beating for other animals disturb game is not by itself sufficient to call for action as suggested by the Association, because the other animals chiefly pursued are pigs and carnivorous, which are destructive to crops and cattle, and which consequently do not deserve special protection.

The manufacture of LEMCO is controlled by the Liebig Company throughout—from the rearing of their own cattle to the potting of the extract. This ensures that perfection and evenness of quality which are found in LEMCO alone.

The secret of LEMCO's efficiency—high concentration—explains its great economy. The careful housewife will find that LEMCO, besides improving her cooking, reduces her expenses.

been before the public, and to satisfy the curious I may say I am making scientific solar experiments in this red hot district of your sultry Province ; but I hasten to uphold the veracity of the author in question. I have had experiences in this snaky country, which go far to corroborate the most improbable of snake stories. I shall not weary you with a long account, but content myself (and you?) with one instance. I was once in the Godavery District, and walking one day (armed with a butterfly net) near the mighty river of that name, was horrified to see a hamadryad snake, the cobra maxilla of the author, coming towards me at a furious pace. I did not wait to see exactly how it got along ; it seemed to be bounding, as would a thick india-rubber hoop violently impelled forward over rough and stony ground. I say I did not wait to see, but fled for all I was worth, with the hamadryad after me. Fortunately, the river was within half a mile, and into it I plunged, swimming for dear life. The Godavery is fairly wide in this part, and the current swift. However, I am a good swimmer and after an arduous struggle I approached the opposite side, fondly hoping and expecting that I had distanced the snake. Imagine my horror and surprise, when I found my enemy calmly waiting for me on the bank ! For a moment my presence of mind fairly forsook me, but only for a moment. Exhausted though I was, I plunged into the water again—and this time waited for a boat.

Athletic Notes.

THE Nizam of Hyderabad is away on another of his big shooting excursions.

Last week brought us the news of the death, in Scotland, of Mr. J. J. J. Keswick, formerly of the firm of Messrs. Jardine Skinner and Company, of Calcutta. He was a very prominent figure in commercial circles years ago, and the leading part he took in the Ilbert Bill agitation gained for him the title of "The Uncrowned King of Calcutta." He was an enthusiastic supporter of manly sports, and many of the older generation of sportsmen will remember the impetus he gave to local football and athletics by the presentation of Challenge Cups for Rugby, Tug o' War and what not.

Some results of last week's county cricket :—

Surrey beat Worcestershire by 100 runs.

London County beat Derbyshire by an innings and 31 runs.

Middlesex vs. Sussex, and Yorkshire vs. Oxford University abandoned on account of rain.

Cricket in Darjeeling will shortly lose Captain Fisher, Captain Palairet, Captain Legge and Mr. Hewitt, who are off with their regiment, The Royal Fusiliers, to Tibet, for the more serious game of war.

Mr. Gordon Home, in his studies of great cricketers appearing in Land and Water, thus refers to Mr. E. H. D. Sewell, the Essex professional, formerly well known in India. "Few personalities in the cricket field are more interesting than that of Sewell. If, as a player, he has not yet taken the position which, in the opinion of the best judges, his abilities merit, it is because he does not always do himself justice. Lord Hawke has given it as his opinion that it always takes three years to make a county player, and Sewell is anticipating the forthcoming season with greater eagerness than ever....That's the man who Mr. C. R. Borrodaile always hopes will emulate Mr. Jessop for Essex, and assuredly a mighty hitter at Leyton would draw such crowds that all financial anxiety would soon be lifted from the mind of the County Committee. So far Sewell has not realised that ideal fondly imagined by the keen Secretary. But a lot of us believe that, given a hard season, with the confidence of one or two big innings he would—in slang parlance—'get going for all he is worth.' Last season Sewell established himself on a far better footing, and if he had not fallen off terribly in August, would have had a very excellent average indeed. Even yet, however, he does not seem to have acquired the confidence to let himself go freely, nor has he obtained his first three figure contribution in county cricket. After 95 for L. C. C. vs. Sydenham on Easter Monday, 13th April, for Dr. Grace's Club vs. Surrey he rattled up 90, in cold, sunny weather, and with the unwonted obligato of some snowflakes to usher in the wettest cricket season ever known. I hope in the season just inaugurated, Sewell will be able to do himself the fullest justice." Since this was written, as our readers know, Sewell has scored his century.

Our Bombay Correspondent writes :—The second game in the semi-finals of the Aga Khan Hockey Tournament was played off on Tuesday evening, when a closely contested game was fought out between the Middlesex Regiment and "D" Company of the Cheshire Regiment. During the first fifteen minutes of play the exchanges ruled fairly even, but eventually Taylor sent into the net for the Cheshires. As soon as the ball was again put in play the Middlesex men attacked and equalised matters by sending in a high shot which found the net. This was the extent of the scoring up to half time. On the resumption of play the Cheshires again attacked with vigour, but failed on two occasions to work the ball into the net, while at the third attempt the Middlesex goal-keeper saved a well judged shot. Play was once more carried out to the centre, and up to the call of time exchanges ruled fairly even. The scores being level, an extra ten minutes' play was ordered, during which the Middlesex men added a goal to their score, and thus ran out winners by two goals to one. Taken on the whole, the match cannot be said to have been productive of a very good exhibition of Hockey—there was plenty of hard hitting, but good combination was conspicuous by its absence.

The final was played off on Thursday in the presence of a large attendance of spectators. The competing teams were the Middlesex Regiment and the Royal Scots. As far as public opinion went, the Scots were the favourites, but I for one had rather a fancy for the Middlesex men, who have twice won the Laver's Cup at Secunderabad, and who, in my opinion, had not shown their best form in the previous matches of the tournament in which they had been engaged. During the first five minutes of the game the Scots attacked, but after that they had to mainly confine their attention to staving off the almost continuous attacks of their opponents, who were much the fastest on the ball. The Kamptee men defended stubbornly, and up to half-time they proved successful in keeping the ball from being shot into their net, and the teams crossed over with the scoring sheet blank. On the resumption the Middlesex men at once returned to the assault, and after being momentarily repulsed as far as the centre of the field, again bore down by a combined rush on the Scots' citadel. Getting well within the circle one of the Middlesex men missed an easy chance, but ere the Scots could get on the ball a comrade rushed in and sent in a high shot which found the net. With one goal against them, the Scots forced the contest for a few minutes and got close up to the Middlesex circle. Failing to break through the latter's defence they were compelled to retire, and directly afterwards had a second goal scored against them. From now until the call of time play was of a fast and exciting nature, and both goals were frequently in danger. Try as they would, however, neither side could score, and the game resulted in a win for the Middlesex by two goals to nil.

Monday's mail brought us the news of the death, in England, of Mr. Charles Palmer, the respected head of the well-known firm of Messrs. Cutler, Palmer and Company. The business will be carried on as usual under the same name and style as heretofore.

If we are to believe the famous racquets champion, Mr. Eustace H. Miles, one of the great problems of the age is not "Do we eat enough," but do we eat proper nourishing food of the right consistency. Mr. Miles, in addition to being a great athlete, is an ardent food experimentalist, and, as he never gives advice about a diet without an exhaustive test of its value and effects on the constitution, one is compelled to admire his philanthropy.

Lecturing at Kensington Town Hall early this month, Mr. Miles presented his audience with a new series of simple food recipes, from which one gathered that at the cost of 5d. one could obtain a satisfying, nourishing and palatable lunch. Mr. Miles assured his hearers that he is not a vegetarian faudist. "I can do without vegetable foods," he declared. "This diet consists mainly of animal foods without flesh foods. It comprises plasmon (which is dried milk) cheese, milk and butter—all animal foods."

Concerning the meal under notice, it consists of savoury sandwiches and vegetable soup, and entree embracing such elements as beans, lentils, cheese and sprouts, plasmon snow or blancmange and fruit, and finally lentil savouries. The meal, according to the lecturer, is an ideal one, and amply nourishing : it is neither starchy, sloppy, nor bulkly.

Icilma.

For keeping the skin soft, cool and free from all irritation ; there is nothing equal to rose scented Icilma Natural Water Soap. Easiest and silkiest of lathers with any water. A revelation of what a soap can be. Sold by Army and Navy Stores, Bombay and Calcutta.

Mr. Miles's lecture was principally directed towards emphasising the importance of proteid foods. Proteid is indispensable. It is the only material that can build up the body and repair its waste. With it and a few other elements Sir Michael Foster declares we can maintain life indefinitely. The prospect of a new race of proteid beings with an indefinite existence before them is distinctly romantic. We shall proceed to become a proteid slave immediately and defy the insinuating insurance agent and the dread undertaker. Those who do not know how to commence a proteid diet and what to choose will be interested to learn that Parmesan cheese, pulse foods, and nuts contain the greatest percentage of proteid. Beef contains only 20 per cent.; the rest is water—"an expensive way of buying water," as Mr. Miles naively remarked.

The lecturer delivered a heavy blow at vegetarianism when he declared that one would have to consume sixteen pounds of potatoes and cabbage—an elephantine meal—to get four ounces of proteid inside one.

And now as to the effect of such a diet, as Mr. Miles has drawn up for his daily consumption, upon athletes. Eight years ago, when his tastes were carnivorous, Mr. Miles lost all three of his last tennis matches through cramp. Since changing his diet he cannot remember to have lost a match through feeling tired, and can lead a sedentary life for weeks together without going out of training. "That," said he, "is what everybody wants. Why remain slaves to the old fetish about the necessity for daily exercise?"

Mr. Miles frankly admits that his diet may not suit everybody, but then he agrees that no food reform can gain the public confidence if its failure are not stated as well as its successes. Out of the many people—peers, Parliamentarians, schoolmasters, and International athletes—who have tried his diet, only five have declared it a failure At present Mr. Miles is engaged in a slow-eating experiment—testing the number of bites he can make at certain foods before they lose their taste—and next week he is going to try living on two pence a day. He has already done himself well at the modest expense of three pence a day. Truly, he deserves well of the nation as a food publicist and economist, and when he succeeds in his ambition to run a restaurant for the supply of proteid foods only who knows but we shall witness the dawn of a new era for the community at large. If the champion racquets player can win a great athletic event upon a glass of hot milk and three spoonfuls of plasmon, we have visions of a great milk-distributing centre at Smithfield a generation hence.

Those Madras sportsmen who paid to see the alleged boxing match between Brophy and Tully are very angry and talk of "fakes," "fiascos" and "disgraceful exhibitions." Apparently they do not read, or at any rate remember the reports of Calcutta boxing or they could surely never have expected anything else but what was served up for their delectation last week. We were much amused when reading the announcement of "the big-fight" between these fistic professors and their individual "records," as published at some length in the Madras papers, said records being curiously silent on the subject of certain little episodes and achievements which most Calcutta men could have filled in. Well the "contest" came off under the auspices of the Southern India Athletic Association. Absolutely nothing was done in the first two rounds if we except an exhibition of clumsy, meaningless see sawing and dodging around that could not by any stretch of indulgence be called "boxing" and during which not a real blow was struck. In the third round Brophy went down, it is said to a blow, though apparently no one noticed it and to the general amazement he was counted out and the "fight" given to Tully. Those who have seen Brophy succumb to these invisible knock outs will sympathise with the "indignation and discontent" as expressed in Madras. What we cannot understand is how the Southern India Athletic Association came to countenance a meeting between these two men whose doings we should have thought were, by this time, well known throughout India.

Mr. F. S. Kelly, we hear, will defend his title to the Diamonds and Wingfield Sculls this season.

Messrs. H. T Blackstaffe and D. Fitte are in steady work for the "Goblets."

The only foreign entries for Henley Royal Regatta (5th, 6th, and 7th July) made under Rule 4, Part 1, are those of Harrison Burke, of the Tasmanian R. C., and L. F. Scholes, of the Don R. C., Toronto, for the Diamond Sculls. The French, German, Dutch, Belgian and Canadian clubs enter on or before 1st June.

It is understood that the Winnipeg R. C. will have an eight for the grand Challenge Cup, and a four for the Stewards' Challenge Cup. They sail for England on 15th June, and will be coached by Captain R. K. Barker, of the Argonaut Club, Toronto.

The Regatta Stewards have again taken Phyllis Court, the fine grounds of which stretch down to the river a little way below the winning-post on the regatta course.

It is hoped that the King will visit the regatta this year, and should he do so, Phyllis Court will form an ideal place of entertainment for Royalty.

The Calcutta Swimming Club opened their season last Friday, the 20th May, with the two lengths Novices' Handicap. We are indebted to the Honorary Secretary for a programme of the season's fixtures, which run up to the 17th September, terminating with the Autumn Meeting on that date.

London Week by Week.

London, Friday, 6th May, 1904.

THE King and Queen returned to London last night after a most successful visit to Ireland. His Majesty's speech at Kilkenny, wherein he spoke of the "new spirit" that is abroad in Ireland, is likely to do more to promote the new spirit than all the politicians put together. There has not been a discordant note in the proceedings from start to finish: and if Irish M. P.'s held aloof, their constituents combined to demonstrate that their views as regards the Royal Visit are not those of their M. P.'s

Telegrams from Petersburg and Tokio have been coming every day this week and each successive message makes it clearer that the Japanese prowess on land is, so far, as great as Japanese success by sea. The first Russian messages sought to minimise the defeat: it was suggested that the retreat was a strategic move to lure the Japanese on: it was stated that General Kuropatkin in a despatch to the Czar expressed his satisfaction at the crossing of the Yalu by the Japs, and that he "did not intend to accept a serious battle before the middle of May." Yesterday's messages and to-day's tell another story and one that confirms on all points the news received from Tokio, though heroic endeavours are still made to explain away the importance of the defeat. In the clubs, the question one oftenest hears asked is will the Japanese be able to keep their heads and follow up or make the most of this first great land success: or will they make the mistake of under-rating a powerful enemy? There can be no doubt of the magnificent spirit displayed by the Japanese troops: on the other hand the Russians seem to have fought a losing battle with splendid pluck.

The season is fairly begun. The R. A. Banquet was held on Saturday evening: the great ones of the earth assembled together with that judicious peppering of small fry required to afford great men a comforting sense of their own importance. The speeches are recorded at length as usual, but that is because they were spoken by noble lords on an occasion almost statutory and not because the noble lords had anything to say. The park was full every afternoon for the road menders having seen the error of their ways, got over the repairs with unwonted expedition and heavily rode away on their own steam rollers. The "Personal" column of the Morning Post is prolonged with three line announcements of arrivals in town: blinds are up in the windows of the seats of the mighty, and we feel that things generally are alive: for the sun is shining and fires are out of place till nightfall.

There was reason to think, for a few years, that the coaching interest was reviving in London. I don't refer to the private clubs, but to the road coaches plying to Guildford, Oxford, Windsor and so on. Apparently the enthusiasm was washed away by the awful weather of 1903, or the motor-car has supplanted the team: at all events where eighteen coaches plied a couple of years ago only seven are billed to run this summer: and so far these are doing poor business. For some reason Americans are the great patrons of the road coaches out of London: I don't know why Britishers do not patronise them more generally, for once you get over the idea that a coach and team are going at a snail's pace, there is no more delightful way of spending an idle day in the country.

Monday was the opening night of the opera. Dr. Richter conducted Don Giovanni before a large audience which included the Duke and Duchess of Fife. I was not there myself, but the authorised agent was a little disappointed with Fräulein Destinn's voice: the lady took Donna Anna's part and her voice is not quite so fresh as it used to be. Mdme. Suzanne Adams carried off honours among the vocalists.

* * * * * *

By the way, Messrs. Chappell, the music publishers, have offered a prize of £100 for the best libretto for a comic opera in two or three acts. 'Tis a good move: when one considers what dreary, deplorable drivel the verses in most comic operas are, one marvels that those who write the really smart and clever verses in the weeklies are not enlisted to write for the stage. It will be interesting to see what response is made to the offer.

* * * * * *

A funny mistake, and one that caused many people to rise up and call their misleading morning papers anything but blessed, occurred a few days ago. There was to be a "Staff Ride" in the South-Eastern district and the "ride" was chiefly per steamer, officers being required to report on the facilities for landing troops at various places on the South Coast concluding with Folkstone. Somehow the papers got hold of the idea that there was going to be a big field-day and that an "invading" Army Corps would land at Folkstone: the railway companies put on special trains to meet the passenger traffic, and as it was a lovely day the crowd that assembled to see about fifteen puzzled officers land at Folkstone was numbered by tens of thousands.

* * * * * *

Another new Army Order: about "Ragging" this time. It points out that inasmuch as Commanding Officers, in certain cases, have not discovered the unfitness of a ragged officer until he has been ragged, the Powers That Be opine that such Commanding Officers cannot be in touch with their officers, or that they report unfavourably on the be-ragged victim to condone delinquencies "which reflect unfavourably on their method of command." The Army Council knows that unsuitable men sometimes do get Commissions, but it will not have them shot out of the service by "indirect means." And Commanding Officers are required to note that if any ragging goes on in their battalions, they, the Commanding Officers, will be held defaulting and will run grave risk of being gazetted out. I wonder if there has ever been a case of ragging in which the victim did not deserve what he got: and wouldn't it be possible to take measures to test the fitness of men for a soldier's career before they are given their Commissions.

By the way, a man who ought to know has been telling me that the Army Order aimed at "interest" is more than welcomed by those whose chairs are set in Pall Mall. For some time past ladies' visits to the penetralia of the War Office have been discouraged: and now, remarked my informant, "there ought to be an end of invitations one doesn't want and presents of game one would like to send back. I didn't know that there were women who thought they could secure a favour for a friend by a couple of brace of pheasants."

Some interesting figures concerning the "daily breads" traffic have been given the London Traffic Commission: the day population of the City is estimated at 359,940 persons: the night population at under 27,000: number of people who "go to the City" daily having no offices therein one million and a quarter, number of vehicles entering the City daily about 100,000.

The "Fairy's Dilemma" appeared at the Garrick on Tuesday night and proves to be pretty much on the lines we expected: to wit a Gilbert and Sullivan opera without the music. The most astonishing thing about the play is its extraordinary freshness and vigour: as the handiwork of a man nearer seventy than sixty it is a marvel: the creator of Iolanthe and the rest jumps into the ring, so to speak, in the pink of condition, toes the line and sets him to hit out all round. The Army, the Bench, the Church, the State, the Stage, the Press—every mortal institution comes up in turn for the exercise of Gilbertian satire, good humoured, but tingling with wit. Lacking music we are not left without verse: and the rhymes are as neat and pointed as the rhymes of the Gilbertian vintage years of long ago.

author's exuberant fancy. We begin with the "Abode of the Demon Alcohol:" hence to the Rev. Aloysius Parfitt's the Vicarage of St. Parabola's. Act II. Mr. Justice Whortle's country house: Cloudland: "Grand Transformation Scene. The Revolving Realms of Radiant Rehabilitation": a London Street: the Vicarage of St. Parabola's. The moving spirits of the "domestic pantomime are the Demon aforesaid (Mr. Jerrold Robertshaw) and the fairy Rosebud (Miss Jessie Bateman). Rosebud is out of work: her rôle in life has been to unite young lovers and the growing scarcity of these threatens her office with extinction and the relegation of herself "to the back row among the fat ones:" which is the last stage of degradation for a ballet fairy. To her, in distress, enter Alcohol. Alcohol is sadly handicapped by the remorseless convention which compels Pantomime demons to speak in verse, and to cope with the difficulty he always carries a rhyming dictionary (Pray observe how the Pantomime is made to make fun of itself). Rosebud enduces Alcohol to help her "put up a job:" a lady, Rosebud says it is the Hospital Nurse, is about to marry Rev. Aloysius Parfitt: and Colonel Sir Trevor Maulevier, Wicked Baronet (of the Household Cavalry), is trifling with her. Now, if Alcohol will kindly attach himself to the Bad Baronet and help him to abduct the lady, Rosebud's manifest duty will oblige her to come to the rescue: whereby she will demonstrate the necessity for such an office as hers and save herself from the awful fate that threatens her. I merely add that Rosebud made a sad mistake: that the Hospital Nurse is not the lady to whom Rev. Aloysius is engaged, that the Nurse is not a real Nurse but Lady Angela Wealdstone, daughter of the Earl of Harrow in disguise: that Clarissa, daughter of Mr. Justice Whortle, is the padre's fiancée and that Sir Trevor is pursuing the Hospital Nurse but with the most honourable intentions: that to deceive the ambitious Whortle, the Baronet and the Clergyman make love to one another's intendeds whenever the Judge is around: and you have a game of cross purposes whose ingenuity would baffle the ablest demons and fairies to unravel.

Of course the Demon, misled by Rosebud, abducts the wrong lady, and does it with needless display: he appears through the vicarage floor with half a dozen attendant imps who harry the padre while Alcohol carries off the bride. Act II produces Rosebud in a terrible state of mind at Mr. Justice Whortle's: she has discovered her mistake: we last saw her driving the poor padre to distraction with her assurances that he shall marry the Angela he doesn't want: now she has to put things right somehow, and this can only be done by a regular overboiling of the Gilbertian pot. The plot grows a trifle misty about this epoch: we are translated to those Revolving Realms (Scene 3) and there the most radical "Transformations" take place. Rev. Aloysius becomes Harlequin and the Nurse-Lady Angela becomes Columbine: Sir Trevor, who is really a most gentlemanly and dignified man, turns into the Clown and the Judge is Pantaloon: in which several capacities they act the parts allotted by time-honoured convention, sorely against their will. To crown the whole absurdity with a thoroughly up-to-date bit of satire these transmogrified players have to listen to a "favourable notice" of their pantomime performance read from The Times. This was the funniest thing I have heard for many a day, and the house simply rocked with laughter. The point of the joke may possibly be lost to those who did not follow the quarrel between Mr. Bourchier and "Mons" Walkeley over the latter's criticism of H. A. Jones' plays: but it came home to a first night audience and the laughter exceeded even that evoked by Miss Boucicault in "Little Mary." But we missed the music that would set a "Fairy's Dilemma" on the old plane.

Mr. Arthur Law's "The Bride and Bridegroom," which was produced by Sir Charles Wyndham at the New last night, is chiefly remarkable for the extraordinary and scandalous uproar which came from the gallery just before curtain fall. The piece is a poor one: so dull that its failure relieves me of the necessity to say anything about it, for we are not likely to see its name in the bills for many nights. The row seemed to have been organised. When Sir Charles answered the yells by coming forward there were demands to know where Miss Terry Lewis was, that lady not having a part in the piece. Sir Charles stood his ground keeping a cheerful countenance, but in my humble opinion he had done better not to answer the disturbers who hurled insults at him. Removing one rioter did not improve matters, for it only led to scrimmages with the police. Finally Sir Charles apologised to the stalls and dress circle for the gallery's misconduct and the incident closed in ominous growlings from above

There is a new departure at Burlington House this year. The big gallery No. III heretofore practically consecrated to R. A.'s, A.'s and the elect is opened to the lesser brethren: and one of the pictures in that gallery that most liked me is Mr. Herbert Draper's "The Golden Fleece:" a remarkably finished and vigorous work, illustrating the moment when Medea caused her young brother to be thrown over board that her pursuing father, H. M. of Colchis, may heave to and be delayed by the rescue. Mr. Watt's great equestrian statue, "Physical Energy," is in the courtyard: it is an imposing piece of work, full of life and movement. So striking is it that one does not care to consider the horse by mere practical standards. There are half a dozen Sargents in the exhibition, but only one, I think, has the extraordinary qualities of style which we have learned to associate with his work. His portrait of Mrs. Wertheimer is far and away the best of his six pictures: the rest lack wholly his distinctive method.

Mr. Briton Riviere's picture "Youth" is one of the best things of his that I can remember: there is an idea in it, and the idea of recklessness is mostly cleverly expressed by the heedless lad who is intent on talking to his hawk while his horse shrinks from the edge of a precipice. It is a "portrait" year, however. Mr. Bacon has done "Tay Pay" and a very characteristic likeness he has made. Mr. Von Herkomer has a portrait of "Joe" likewise admirable: Mr. Shannon has Mr. Martin Harvey as Sydney Carton: Mr. Orchardson's picture of Sir Samuel Montagu is among the best: but I suppose you would rather I did not go through the catalogue. One of the most impressive pictures in the Academy is Mr. J. C. Dollman's "Famine:" a painful conception carried out with remorseless skill: Death, robed and hooded stalks across a snowy plain accompanied by starving wolves: ominous black sky above: below measureless snow and everywhere wolves, droves and masses of wolves. I can't get the thing out of my mind. Mr. Dollman gains power every year, but this is a distinct, long step in advance.

The London School Board read its own burial service yesterday week. Born in 1870, the deceased institution was in its twenty-third year. During its working life it has raised the proportion of children in standards 3 to 7 from 2 per cent. of the whole to 30 per cent.: it has raised evening schools and schools for the training of children physically and mentally defective: it has raised 475 permanent schools: it has also raised the cost per head of educating the children as we know to our cost: but with the deceased School Board we part from evils we knew something about and make over its work to the L. C. C.: and our confidence in the L. C. C. as a business-like administrative body is some few degrees less than that we had in the School Board.

The cathedral city of Exeter has had its dignity rudely shaken. His admirers having raised a memorial to the late R. W. Blackmore, the Dean and Chapter corrected the inscription to read "This tablet with the window above are a tribute of admiration," etc., etc., and the faithful sculptor, blindly obedient to that august tribunal, 'graved the sorry blunder in monumental marble and nobody noticed it till the tablet was solemnly unveiled. Then a rude fellow saw it and he wrote to The Times casting bitterly ironical reflections on "Exeter English" whereto he did not sign his name: and now the Dean, and the Chapter's component parts, and the sculptor person, and Bishop and aliens and all sorts and conditions of men have fallen upon one another in The Times, and there is raging and gnashing of teeth. Who is to blame? Not me, sir: not me, sir: and so say all of them. A small and sensible voice has suggested taking down the tablet and correcting the grammar, which is to be done: but a more violent storm never raged in a tea cup.

Various items: Nellie Farren was buried in Brompton Cemetery on Monday. The afternoon was wet, but there was an enormous crowd in and about the cemetery. The number of wreaths was something unprecedented: they came from actors and actresses, clubs, institutions and private individuals. The sad case of Mdme. Clara Davies, not so long ago one of the most popular of concert singers, is settled: she goes to Farmfield under the Inebriates Act for 14 months to finish a term of two years. The London and North-Western has begun to accelerate some of its best trains, and their fastest, which began the new timing this week, covers the 188½ from Euston to Manchester in three hours and a half. The next entrance exam. for the P. W. D. will be held as usual: and the successful men will go to schools or colleges of their own choosing approved by the Secretary of State for India. By 1908 the change of the existing system will be completed and exit Coopers Hill. One cannot help feeling that the Indian Government's wishes should have prevailed after reading the correspondence that passed between the India Office and Simla: the full details are not yet published. There has been much indignant talk about the slackness of Unionist M. P.'s in their attendance at Westminster: various suggestions have been made to explain, the soundest being, perhaps, the disinclination of Unionists to support Radical measures brought in by their own chiefs. A very strong deputation yesterday waited on Mr. Balfour to urge the glaring necessity to readjust the scale of representation which gives Ireland thirty members more than she ought to have according to population. The feeling that the present Parliament ought to correct this state of affairs is growing steadily. The "proceedings were private," but promises appear to have been the breath of the time. They generally are: "Fulfilment is a kind of last will or testament"—but you know the rest.

"PRIMARY EDUCATION" AMONG WILD ANIMALS.

MR. LONG'S book is an addition, and a most welcome one, to what we may perhaps call the thoughtful literature of natural history. It is the work of a man who has realised how little we really know of the life and character of wild creatures, and who has set himself as a labour of love to learn more concerning those species with which his opportunities bring him in contact. And if in his long vigils in the woods of North America, he appears to read into movement and action more of purpose and meaning than we are prepared to admit, we must bear in mind that Mr. Long is practically an explorer in a field of enquiry which is almost untouched, and that he who lifts the veil from things that have lain hid, always lays himself open to the criticism of those who lag behind. Our own feeling is one of almost complete surrender to the author; his singular patience, his discernment, charity of thought, combined with his close observation and sympathetic interest, win our ready attention: we are conscious as we follow him in his discussion concerning the bear, porcupine, heron, moose, and others that his conclusions are much what we should deduce ourselves in the like case, and even when we catch ourselves doubting whether the detected motive exists in the animal or in the reasoning mind of the author, we are free entirely from the discomforting sense that he is endeavouring to enhance the interest from the wealth of a vivid imagination.

The following sentence may stand as the keynote of the author's work:—"Personally after many years of watching animals in their native haunts, I am convinced that instinct plays a much smaller part than we have supposed: that an animal's success or failure in the ceaseless struggle for life depends, not upon instinct, but upon the training which the animal receives from its mother." Mr. J. G. Millais in England and Mr Thompson Seton in America have voiced much the same view: but we quote this passage as indicating Mr. Long's attitude in his study of wild life: he looks, not for evidences of instinct, but for evidences of mother-trained intelligence; led thither by his own observation. We are willing to accept the theory—the more willing when taught by so fascinating a teacher—but almost at the outset we recognise that we must not suffer ourselves to be led blindly. "Those young birds and animals that are left by sad accident or sadder wilfulness without their mothers' training profit little by their instincts. They are always first to fall in the battle with the strong. Those alone that follow their natural leaders, till they learn wisdom, live to grow up in the big woods." That is a sweeping assertion and objections raise their heads as we read. What of the cuckoos reared by foster parents whose life, habit, apart from diet, is dissimilar from their own? What of the mound building birds whose young hatch out without parental aid at all, and embark on life, so far as is known, with no educational equipment and no parental protection whatever? We cannot part with the theory of inherited instinct, though we readily concede that the tuition of parents is of the greatest possible benefit: for we have proof of it in the absolute fearlessness of some young animals which later in life, under maternal guidance, learn to fear where fear is desirable in the struggle for existence. It is no surprise to find that Mr. Long is a whole-hearted believer in the sane and sound doctrine that "there is no terror in extreme watchfulness. To the animal it is simply the use of his unusual powers, with the joy and confidence that the use of his unusual powers always brings to animals as well as men." We may perhaps doubt whether an animal can be said to enjoy conscientiousness of unusual powers: but if read "knowledge of superiority" in certain vital respects, no doubt we shall take correctly Mr. Long's meaning.

But to revert to the "Educational" theory. The author undoubtedly brings much evidence to support his view: his study of "Ismaques, the fish hawk," of "Moowees, the bear," of "Unk Wunk, the porcupine" (he has a fancy for using the popular names current among the Millicete Indians) undoubtedly show that some parents at all events among birds and beasts do educate their children. We cannot read the account of the hen hawks fish-catching exercise before her well-fledged young without recognising this, and take this passage from the chapter on the bear: If you should ever have the good fortune to watch a mother bear and her cubs when they have no idea that you are near them, you will note two characteristic things. First when they are travelling..... you will see that the cubs follow the mother closely and imitate her every action with ludicrous exactness,—sniffing where she sniffs, jumping where she jumps, rising on their hind legs with forearms hanging loosely, and pointed noses thrust sharp up into the wind on the instant that she rises, and then drawing silently away from the shore into the shelter of the friendly alders when some subtle warning tells the mother's nose that the coast is not perfectly clear. So they learn to sift the sounds and smells of the wilderness. ..... And second, when they are playing, you will see that the mother watches the cubs' every action as keenly as they watched her's an hour ago .....noting every detail of their boxing, wrestling and climbing, as if she had shown them once how it ought to be done and were watching now to see how well they remembered their lessons."

Similarly, the author illustrates the "school life" of the moose and cariboo calves, and other rising generations.

Incidentally we learn much that is new to us concerning the habits of North American beasts and birds: and, we feel sure, from a sound teacher. It is news to us that any bird repairs and makes safe from the winter storms the nest to which it will return next breeding season. Mr. Long tells us that "Ismaques," the osprey before mentioned, wedges large fresh sticks across the top of his nest before he leaves for winter quarters; pulls out doubtful sticks and replaces them with new. He does not suggest that this is the habit of the species; he states that it was done by a pair of his acquaintance. The writer of a recent book on English natural history, Mr Cuming in his Arcadian Calendar, has suggested that the tastes or acts of bird or beast need not necessarily be the tastes and acts of the whole species, but merely of individuals: and we are of the opinion that there would be fewer disputes among naturalists, could they bring themselves to adopt the very reasonable theory that the individuals of any given species are not de facto unanimous in taste and action. It is information to us that young herons "grow suddenly seasick, as if they had swallowed ipecac" when a man climbs to the nest—a proceeding which checked summarily Mr. Long's enterprise in this direction—that some of the petrels—adults—employ somewhat similar defensive methods is of course common knowledge. Another thing we did not know is that the porcupine's tail is a potent weapon of offence which he uses at need with terrible effect.

We are much tempted to linger over Mr. Long's chapters on the moose, chapters wherein the naturalist routes the sportsman, and to consider his argument concerning the attraction of the "call" which, unlike any moose-made-sound that ever was, nevertheless brings the love lorn or battle seeking bull with absolute certainty. This matter is one which has special interest for the thinking sportsman: our own view is that the over-mastering motive of the hour-sexual desire—dulls all other senses and that in its eagerness the animal is deceived, willing to be deceived, if we may go so far—by the sorriest imitation of the cry of a possible mate.

The book is admirably illustrated by Mr. Copeland, whose drawings show not only close and intimate study of anatomy, attitude and character, but are often distinguished by a delicate and delightful humour.

A SIX DAYS' BIG GAME SHOOT.

A FEW years ago I was living in a district, in one of the larger provinces of this country, which was well known for its shooting as well as its fishing. Towards the end of February N., who was then in charge of the district, asked me to join him in a short shoot. The grass in the jungles had commenced to be burnt, a distinctly warm feeling was to be experienced in the day, although the nights were still very cool and though the shoot was to be a general one there was every chance of getting a tiger. I was only too pleased to accept the kind invitation and the morning of the 24th February saw us on our way out. Our first camp was some 20 miles out. We drove 11 miles and then had to walk about two more, where the elephants were assembled under the able leadership of a native gentleman known as "the Raja," a thorough sportsman and A-1 shot, who was to be one of the party also.

It was a nice, clear, fresh morning as we rattled along in a four-wheeled conveyance. The twittering of the birds, the buzzing of the bees, the air laden with the scent of numerous flowers and the foliage of the trees all betokened the arrival of spring. Occasional patches of cultivation, wheat, barley, gram, oats, which were ripening, caught the eye and formed a pleasing contrast to the sombre hues of the forests by which they were surrounded. Away to the north the outer ranges of the Himalayas stood out in bold relief against a clear blue sky and from the foot of those great hills the forests stretched away south and east. All the conditions under which we sallied out were favourable. The scenery and climate were all that could be desired and so was the companionship of my kind host and "the Raja."

It was about 11 A.M. when we climbed into our howdahs, a line was formed and we moved forward towards our camp, some 6 miles off. The shooting to-day was of a general description. In the early part of the day small game, partridges, peafowl and jungle fowl afforded us much sport. The jungle fowl particularly required some hitting. Later on we got into an enormous sounder of pig They were running about in all directions like rabbits and a furious fusillade went on for some minutes. Three pig were slain and in case this should rouse the ire of pigstickers I would explain that the country was not rideable! A lull ensued after the sounder had been dispersed and although we beat some excellent ground for cheetal and hog deer, we saw no stags, which was distinctly disappointing. It was now getting on in the day so the usual halt was called for lunch. This was done ample justice to and I would remark, in parenthesis, that my host's catering bundobust was excellent! In the early part of the day the beat had been through forests, from the time the pig were started up to lunch it was along the banks of a river—a really good bit to look at, where cover, shade and water were in abundance. After lunch we moved away from the river and tried some bajis, but to no purpose. The deer were not at home and some further additions of small game made were only to the bag. We got into camp at 7 30 P.M. after a long and enjoyable day. No news of tiger so far. The bag to-day was three pig and much small game.

25th February.—None of the buffaloes which were tied up last night were killed, so the day was devoted to another general shoot. We shot our way to another camp some 8 miles south. Tried a very well-known beat along the banks of a river, which later on is a sure find for tiger; but we were a bit early in the season, as water was still to be had in the minor range of hills a short distance off, which afforded the tigers excellent cover and which they would not leave until the hot weather had set well in, when the want of water drove them down to the jungle along the river. Still there were hopes of seeing a tiger and the cover was magnificent enough to hold anything. The beat produced a good stag para which fell to N. and a small stag cheetal which I got. A very fine stag cheetal made good his escape in the heavy jungle. The beat was over by luncheon time and the rest of the day was unproductive. Reached camp soon after sunset.

26th February.—Our numbers last night were disturbed by a wild elephant which, in its nocturnal rambles, came on to the outskirts of our camp and made a good deal of noise by breaking branches of trees as it went slowly feeding along. "The Raja" tried to get a shot with a double ·500· Magnum, built by Alexander Henry and a really splendid weapon, but did not succeed. The whole lashkar was very glad when the unwelcome visitor had moved off, because it was a solitary tusker of a cantankerous disposition. I believe the beast was "proclaimed" not many months after this incident and was shot by 'the Raja.' This was a day of misfortunes. Clouds had gathered in the night and a nasty, cold drizzle went on, more or less, the whole day and as we had to march back to camp No. 1, this was not very pleasant. Then N. was prevented by work from accompanying us in our shoot and finally for some reason or other the line was reduced to the two howdah elephants which "the Raja" and myself rode. Prospects were not, therefore, bright. This bad luck dogged us the whole day. In the morning, before breakfast "the Raja" and myself did a stalk. Came on a herd of cheetal, with a very fine stag, close to camp. There was every hope of the stalk being a successful one, when a number of peafowl were suddenly disturbed and flew straight in the direction of the deer, giving vent to their cry of alarm. This was too much for the cheetal, which vanished like ghosts. We saw nothing else in our morning ramble. About 10-30 A.M. N. went off to his work, "the Raja' and myself mounted our elephant and started to shoot our way to our former camp. The jungle was all thick sâl forest with seas of grass so two elephants were not likely to be of much use. Till close on 2 P.M. we saw nothing. Then we put up a fine sambur stag which we succeeded in killing, "the Raja" getting in the first shot. As we had no pad elephants with us we had to skin and cut up the stag. This was a most laborious operation and took some two hours, even pocket knives being used! While the sambur was being skinned we heard the crack, crack of branches of trees being broken in unpleasant proximity. There was no doubt there was a wild elephant on the feed and very possibly our nocturnal visitor. For some time we remained on the qui vive, with our rifles in our hands, expecting the elephant to appear every moment, but he moved off in another direction.

It was about 4 P.M. before the sambur was cut up and placed in sections on our howdah elephants and as it had been drizzling the whole day, on and off, by the time we resumed shooting our ardour, as well as our clothes, had been somewhat damped! The forest was very thick, the grass was very heavy and the light, as may be imagined, very bad. We were moving slowly homewards when in some particularly dense sâl forest with thick undergrowth I saw an animal moving, but owing to the thick cover and the bad light I could not discern what it was. Moving my elephant forward I just caught sight of the posterior half of a full-grown tiger disappear. The animal just glided out of sight before I could get my rifle up and have a snap shot. We never saw him again although we beat high and low, it was like looking for the proverbial needle! If we had had more elephants we possibly might have found him again, or if my mind had acted quickly enough and I had plugged him the instant I saw him he probably would have been bagged, but the fact of the matter was that a tiger was the last animal I expected to see and in the bad light the yellow foundation of the skin looked a dirty white, though the stripes were clearly visible It would have been a grand finale to a dismal day had we bagged him. Oh! the pity of it! the pity of it! Wet, tired, disappointed we got into camp somewhere about 6 P.M., but it was not very long before I, at any rate, was to be well recompensed for the disappointments of to-day.

ACCURACY vs. POWER IN 12-BORES.

SIR,—Will you kindly settle this point for us.

Smooth bore cylinder gun 12-bore firing 13-bore solid bullet: will it be more powerful with 4½ drams powder than 3? If so why? By powerful I mean practically so, as against a tiger for instance: no doubt if the tiger were a foot off the muzzle then 4½ drams would be more useful than 3. But for the sake of discussion let us say the tiger is between 20 and 30 yards broadside on and I fire at and hit the shoulder, do I stand a better chance with 4½ than 3 drams? My idea is that after a certain amount the excess powder burns to waste even if it does not by excess force play the deuce with the accuracy of the flight. My friend says that subject to a proviso about the strength of the gun, its ability to bear the strain, the more powder the better. He quotes an express rifle: but against this I argue that the bullet sets into the grooves and there can be no escape of powder till the bullet leaves the rifle, which is not the case with a gun.

J. S.

AMRAOTI, 21st May 1904.

[Three drams with spherical bullet is quite enough for any ordinary 12-bore gun. Providing the gun were strong enough to stand a largely increased powder charge there is no reason to suppose that it would not be burnt in the barrel, giving increased velocity and striking force with at least equal accuracy (the thick felt wad acts as a gas check) Twelve-bore ball guns have been made for five and six drams of powder with spherical bullets, and such weapons are naturally more efficient than ordinary guns.—ED.]

WASHED OUT GAME.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE INDIAN FIELD."

SIR,—The recent tremendous downpour throughout the eastern districts will have driven all big game into the ravines, where it may be expected to lie pretty closely packed for the next two months; previous firing of the hill sides and plateaux affording till then neither cover nor herbage, while, except in the case of moish and bheelwah, the lowlands are too stodgy for occupation. Anyone wishing to secure good heads, antlers being in their prime at the close of the rutting season, can now do so without any great amount of exertion, by trying the gullies that run in from the orange groves in North Sylhet. If the moon serves, a tramp through the groves themselves should meet with due reward, for deer generally remain out in them throughout the night to avoid the prowlers among the rocks. Enquiries should also be made as to what may be in the isolated teelahs round the Sylhet station, which seldom contain aught but small deer under ordinary circumstances, being full twenty miles from the mountain proper. On a former occasion when a sudden spring downpour occurred the rapid gorging of the torrents cut the denizens of the intervening lowlying bheels off from the main range forcing them to take refuge in the teelah alluded to and sambur could be heard belling within a mile of the station. In fact a metna was shot on the Kalagool Tea Garden within two miles, so that any shikari wading up the innumerable small trout streams, cherras that intersect this jungly amphitheatre in all directions, is likely to secure something. The beds of these streams are chiefly hard sand, so little noise beyond splashing need be made when on the stalk. The Sylhet teelahs at other times are now hardly worth attention, save for fowl, but on occasions such as the present are well worth trying. No camping out is required as one can go out on the jaunts recommended, day by day making the dâk bungalow his home.

SYLHET, 14th May 1904.

"GAMAGE'S"

We have before us a copy of the report presented to the shareholders of Messr. A. W. Gamage, Ld., at the seventh annual generals meeting, which was held at that cheerful rendezvous, the Holborn Restaurant, on the 4th instant. A glance at the balance sheet and profit and loss account up to the end of last January discloses a flourishing condition of affairs, on which we tender our congratulations to all concerned in the well being of this firm, whose popularity is well nigh world wide. The volume of business done shows a satisfactory increase on that of previous years, large amounts are placed to reserve fund, a fat balance is carried forward and a 7 per cent. dividend is declared.

In view of the rapidly increasing business and the crowded state of the departments the Directors have secured a magnificent building site adjoining the Company's premises with a frontage of 95 feet to Holborn and a depth of 153 feet. This they have been able to do, on very favourable terms, for a lease of 99 years. The Company will thereby obtain the much-needed space for further window display, which is of great importance. For the present it is intended to use only the additional shops for the Company's business; the basement will be let for the purposes of a restaurant (there being three fully licensed houses on the site acquired), and the whole of the upper portions are proposed to be let for show rooms and offices, for which there is a large demand. It is estimated that the rentals will be sufficient to cover the ground rent and interest on capital expended in building, leaving the Company with the additional shops rent free.

It is interesting to note in connection with this big extension that the premises taken up are the "Old Black Bull" inn "immortalised by Charles Dickens in." Martin Chuzzlewit, Here Sairey Gamp (when so disposed) nursed Mr. Lewserne, and ere long it will be classed with the many old landmarks included in "disappearing London." The last link in Holborn of the old coaching days will glide into oblivion and be replaced by the warehouses of one of the largest athletic stores in the world.

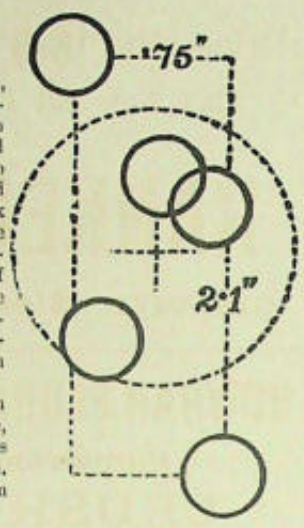
"SPECIAL No. 2." ·450 Bore.

CORDITE RIFLES

FOR BIG GAME.

Average Velocity 2,171ft. per second.



Striking Energy Equals an 8-bore Firing Black Powder.

The Special No. 2 gives a pressure of about 13 tons compared with 16 to 18 of the original ·450 Cordite Cartridge, consequently there is a greater margin of safety, and the risk of jamming is reduced to a minimum.

"THE FIELD,"
9th May, 1903.

"Messrs. Joseph Lang & Son, Ld., have been very prompt in submitting for our notice a rifle which has been chambered and regulated for firing the new No. 2 nitro cartridge.....A thoroughly sound and well turned out piece of work .....maximum of strength and ease of extraction. Very high velocities.....most marvellous run of uniformity. In fact, it would be extremely difficult to find an instance where equally well authenticated experiments have shown such satisfactory readings."

Five shots at 100 yards with the new No. 2 Nitro Cartridge, fired in a LANG Rifle. Centres of shot holes fell within 2·1 in. by ·75 in. Average deviation from point of mean impact ·7 in.

"THE FIELD." A fine piece of shooting.

"A target made at 100 yards, which is in our possession, contains a group of five shots with a distance of 1in. between the centres of the highest and lowest perforations and $\frac{1}{16}$ths of an inch between those on the extream right and left."

"EL. OBEID."

"With reference to the ·450 Cordite Rifle you made me, I am very pleased with it. It is extremely accurate, and, although heavier than the ordinary ·450 Express taking black powder, the difference in weight is not sufficient to prevent an ordinary European carrying it himself all day in a hot climate. For these reasons it is often the only rifle I take with me out shooting, and have killed with it Lion, Koodoo, Waterbuck, Hartebeest, etc."

TO THE HONORARY SECRETARY,
Umballa Races, Umballa.

"Everybody knows the fondness of the adult Chinese for kite flying. The Korean, however, puts this pastime to a use altogether novel. When the time of good resolutions comes round at the new year the Korean writes on a kite of all his faults, 'Evil disposition, impatience, bad words, street fights,' etc. 'It was so dark,' says one American residing in Korea, relating such an instance, 'that no kite could be seen, but when he had run the string out to its full length he cut it and let it go, imagining that so he had rid himself of his enemies and could begin the new year with new courage."

Our interesting contemporary, the Hour Glass, says:—"During a feast which he gave not long ago the Emperor of Korea had the misfortune to break a tooth. His August Majesty at once threw the chief cook and all the latter's assistants into prison. A dentist who was touring the hermit kingdom heard of the trouble and gave relief to the Royal sufferer, and was paid 1,000 yen (about 500 dollars.) for his services. Then the imprisoned kitchen force was set at liberty, but the chief cook was sentenced to serve three months without pay. The Emperor ordered another feast to celebrate the fact that the Imperial jaw no longer ached."

THE TURF.

CHESTER MEETING.

A BUSY week, and one which conjures up recollections of stirring struggles amidst the pleasantest environments, is that during which the curtain is rung down on the last two of the important series of spring handicaps, viz., the Chester Cup and the Great "Jubilee" Handicap. An auspicious start was made on the 3rd instant. The Roodee, with its broad expanse of verdant turf bounded by the silvery Dee, was looking at its best, the herbage having been wonderfully freshened up by the recent showers, and for the greater part of the day the scene was bathed in sunshine. There did not seem as many people as usual astir in the streets in the morning, but the crowd was supplemented later by the arrival of trains from all parts of the country, and by the time racing commenced the attendance in the various enclosures and on the far side of the course was up to the average for a Tuesday. The Duke and Duchess of Westminster were present with a large house party, and a brilliant and fashionable assemblage filled the country stand. Only once did the fields reach double figures, and they were for the most part small, but many of the races were closely contested, and the course yielded almost perfect galloping.

Anyone who has only seen Chester in its normal state of dignified repose must be amazed at the striking contrast afforded by the venerable city on Cup Day. Apart from the countless thousands of sporting enthusiasts who pour into the town from every direction to witness the struggle for the world-famous trophy, it seems to be part of the creed of the local laity to pay a fleeting visit to the Roodee just for this momentous occasion, the day being celebrated as a public holiday. The influx of sightseers was on a big scale on the present anniversary. The streets were so congested that traffic was seriously impeded by midday, and it was early apparent that the gatemoney receipts would reach a big figure. The chief factor towards the success of the function was the glorious weather. The morning was simply gorgeous, and happily the sun shone resplendent throughout the afternoon, which was almost perfect. The paddock, with its tasteful floral decorations, was thronged in the intervals between the races, a feature of the gathering being the large percentage of the gentler sex, who, clad in the lightest and brightest of summer attire, lent an additional charm to a brilliant scene. The racing, apart from the big event, was devoid of significance, but the Chester Cup provided a pretty spectacle, and the victory of Sandboy benefited a large section of the public.

THE CHSTER CUP (Handicap) of 2,030sovs., (a cup value 50sovs., and the remainder in species). Old Cup Course (nearly two miles and a quarter).

Rightful led the parade from Parody, Florinda, Likely Bird, Mountain Rose, Torrent, Australian Colours, Throwaway, and Mark Time, with Sandboy and Switchcap next, and Hammerkop bringing up the rear. They turned and cantered in similar order, and the white flag was hoisted at 3-17, and four minutes later the lot were despatched to a capital start. Mountain Rose, on the inside cut out the work from Switchcap, Rightful, Hammerkop, and Sandboy to the stands where Hammerkop went on third, with Rightful, Mark Time, Sandboy and Torrent next, the whipper-in being Florinda. At the first turn Mark Time drew out with a three-length lead of Mountain Rose who in turn was well clear of Switchcap, Rightful, Hammerkop, and Torrent, with Throwaway, Sandboy, Parody, and Likely Bird in close attendance. last; but passing the Gosvenor Bridge Switchcap took second place, her immediate attendants being Parody, Rightful, and Hammerkop. As they swept past the stands the second time Mark Time held a couple of lengths' lead of Switchcap and Parody, these being followed in order by Hammerkop, Florinda, Torrent, Rightful, Sandboy, and Throwaway, with Mountain Rose some way last till six furlongs from home, where Sandboy took close order with Mark Time, the pair going on well clear of Switchcap, Hammerkop, Parody, and Torrent. Gradually forging on ahead, Sandboy took a slight lead of Mark Time passing the Grosvenor Bridge the second time, the only ones within hail of the pair being Hammerkop, Switchcap, Throwaway, and Torrent, but the race resolved itself into a match thereafter, and Sandboy, maintaining his advantage to the end, shook off the attentions of his stable companion and won, all out, by three lengths; four lengths separated the second and third. Hammerkop was placed fourth, Torrent was fifth, Switchcap sixth, Parody seventh, Florinda eight, Likely Bird ninth, Australian Colours next, and Mountain Rose walked past the post last. Time by Benson's chronograph, 3mins. 56⅕sec.

After the dismal weather associated with the last two celebrations on the Roodee, it was only in the correct order of things that the executive should be favoured with pleasant conditions on the present anniversary. A twelvemonth ago there was a falling off in the receipts, but when the balance-sheet for the current season comes to be placed before the shareholders the tale will doubtless be of enchanced revenue and a replenished exchequer. On the Cup Day there was an increase of 7,122 in the number of persons that paid admissions as compared with the corresponding day last May, and if the muster on the 5th instant seemed that in contrast to the huge concourse of twenty-four hours previously, it was nevertheless much above the average for the final stage of the fixture. The wind swung round to the south west during the night, and the atmosphere in the morning was close and muggy. The sky was overcast and rain threatened, but happily the downpour held off, and one of the most successful meetings of late years was concluded amidst genial environments. The course throughout the gathering yielded perfect going, but the number of runners failed to reach expectations.

FOOTBALL IN SCOTLAND.

There was only one match of any note North of the Border on Saturday last, and with this 3rd Lanark terminated the schedule and also closed the Scottish League Competition for the season. The previous week the Volunteers safely annexed the championship by defeating Dundee, and in their final game, despite the fact that they were not full represented, rather easily brought their list of wins up to the full score. With the lead already assured, there was a probability that the home side would be somewhat indifferent as to the outcome of the game against the Hibernians, but, on the contrary, the entire eleven set out from the start to gain the day, and, in ultimately securing an additional brace of points by two goals to nil, correctly indicated the difference between themselves and the oppsition. 3rd Lanark's record for the season reads: Played 26, won 20, drawn 3; points 43. Close in the Volunteers' train come Heart of Midlothian with four points less, having two defeats more recorded against them, while those old rivals, Rangers and Celtic, occupy jointly third place with 30 points, though the former have a better goal average. Queen's Park figure at mid-distance on the eighth rung of the League ladder. Under Inter-city League auspices, Celtic repeated their Scottish Cup victory over Glasgow Rangers, emerging on the right side by two goals to nil. The successful side played the same eleven as on the date of their Cup triumph, with the sole exception that Bennett took up Muir's position. Quinn was again prominent in the scoring line, notching both goals. At Meadowside, Partick Thistle and Queen's Park played a drawn game of two goals each. Appended are the complete records of the Premier Division of the Scottish League:

CRICKET.

THE "TIME LIMIT" MATCH.

YORKSHIRE vs. NOTTS.—Played at Leeds on 2nd, 3rd and 4th May. Yorkshire won by 71 runs. This match, which was not reckoned in the County Championship, was arranged with a view of giving a trial to a new scheme. Unfortunately, or fortunately as the case may be, the progress of the game was such that it was not found necessary to put any of the rules into force, except that the footholds of the bowler and the batsmen were covered up overnight and during a shower, and boundary was only 60 yards from the nearest wicket. The idea that the new game, and especially the short boundary, would have the effect of turning slow players into hitters was not at all borne out by results, and the rate of scoring was no faster than is usual in county matches. For the first half hour Brown and Tunnicliffe made praiseworthy and successful efforts to keep the game lively. They put on 36 runs in the first quarter of an hour, but the next 20 took twenty minutes, and from this time there was nothing exciting about the batting, although Hirst played in his usual brisk style. Lord Hawke, as he often does, made a most useful score at a time when runs were badly wanted. The Notts team for the most part seemed to forget that rapid scoring ought to be the order of the day, and most of them took things easily. When stumps were drawn they had lost eight wickets for 126 and were 109 runs behind. On Tuesday, Wass and Hallam did so well that the adverse balance was only 73 when the innings came to an end. Except that Hirst and Rhodes both played exceedingly well, there was nothing of any interest in the Yorkshire second innings. The two returned tourists put on 70 runs while together in about half an hour Hirst made his 60 in fifty-five minutes. When Notts began their second innings at a quarter to four they required 254 runs to win, and when stumps were drawn they had made 121 of them for the loss of half their wickets. Iremonger, J. Gunn and and Day played good cricket.

CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY SENIORS' MATCH.—Played on the University ground on 2, 3, and 4th May. Mr. Marsh's side won by four wickets. In the Seniors' and Freshmen's matches at the University the bowlers are not often seen to advantage, but on Monday F. J. V. Hopley and the Honble G. W. Lyttelton had an opportunity of which they availed themselves. C. C. Page played the highest and best innings of the day, and R. E. Lambert and J. G. Hirsch both did very well indeed on a difficult wicket. The play on Tuesday was chiefly remarkable for the batting of H. D. Keigwin, a brother of last year's Blue; he made 88 in an hour and a half by cricket of a kind which ought to gain him a thorough trial. Hopley and Driffield bowled well. The play yesterday was noticeable for the good batting of J. F. Marsh, who made 113 in an hour and three-quarters. In partnership with Hirsch he helped to increase the score by 84.

M C C AND GROUND vs LONDON COUNTY C C. Played at Lord's on 2nd, 3rd and 4th May London County C C won by seven wickets. Owing to rain there was no play in this match on Monday when the season at Lord's should have begun. Except that W W Odell took the place of Heksth Prichard there was no change in the London County team which had played Surrey last week. On Tuesday the weather was fine but a little cold, and as the rain had effected the wicket considerably, batsmen had rather a bad time. The M C C began well enough by putting up 40 for the first wicket, C E De Trafford playing a delightful innings. Afterwards nobody could make any prolonged resistance to Odell, who took seven wickets for 41 runs, three of his victims, viz., Newstead, G L Jessop, and L H Gay being out to successive balls. The visitors made a bad commencement of their innings by losing Dr. Grace for a duck's egg, and so well did Hearne and Tarrant bowl that four wickets were down for 34, and the remaining wickets fell quickly. With a lead of 10 runs the M C C scored 120 in their second innings for four wickets before stumps were drawn.

Of these runs 61 came from the bat of Captain Wynyard, who was still not out; he played in quite his old style, although he was not quite as aggressive as he used to be. Sir A Conan Doyle, who when play ended was not out 19, batted very well indeed. In the course of the day G L Jessop was twice out for a duck's egg the only time in his life that he has made a pair of spectacles. Yesterday the two not outs played very pretty cricket, but at 131 Sir A Conan Doyle was dismissed for a very well played 31. Capt Wynyard did not long survive him. His steady innings of 75 had taken him two hours and a half to compile. After this Odell, as on the previous day, was almost irresistible and his record for the morning was five wickets for 19 runs; altogether he took seven for 62 in this innings. The visitors had to make 197 to win, and although Dr Grace played a very pretty innings three wickets were down for 71 when Knight joined L O S Poldevin. These two men took charge of the bowling and without being separated knocked off remaining runs by some of the best cricket seen during the match.

LAWN TENNIS.

CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY vs MR HAMBLIN-SMITH'S TEAM.—The powerful team got together by the Old Light Blue, Mr. Hamblin-Smith, caused a large company to assemble on the University courts on the 4th instant. The weather was favourable, and the company present were rewarded by seeing some first-class play. The brothers Allen won all their games, whilst Palmer and Wilding played exceedingly well, beating Doherty and Hamblin-Smith, and making a good fight against the brothers Allen. Score:

C Palmer (Sidney) and A J Wilding (Trinity) beat H L Doherty and R Hamblin-Smith, 6—3, 4—6, 6—2; lost to E R and C G Allen, 6—0, 5—7, 1—6; beat H Scrivener and C F Chance, 6—1, 6—4.

F W Argyle (St John's) and C F K Andrews, (Trinity) lost to Doherty and Hamblin-Smith, 3—6, 7—9; beat Scrivener and Chance, 6—2, 6—4; lost to E R and C G Allen, 4—6, 1—6.

H Chapple (St John's) and E D Evans (St John's) beat Scrivener and Chance, 6—1, 6—2; lost to E R and C G Allen, 0—6, 0—6; lost to Doherty and Hamblin-Smith, 4—6, 4—6.

The visitors thus won by five matches to four.

OXFORD UNIVERSITY vs LANCASHIRE.—Lancashire paid a visit to Oxford, on the 4th when they met the Students in delightful weather. The University players, who have not had much time to get into working order, gave a somewhat disappointing display, and it was only the success of Mavrogordato in the Singles against Paul that secured for them a single winning bracket, Lancashire winning by fourteen matches to one. Details:

BOXING.

HARRY FELLOWS vs ALF RODGERS.

A tremendous amount of interest was centred in the glove contest between Harry Fellows, of Chesterfield, and Alf Rodgers, of Sheffield, who met in the Drill Hall of the latter town on the 2nd instant to box the best of twenty rounds, at catch weights, for £100 aside and a purse of £100. Both men had a large following, and spectators came in their hundreds from Chesterfield and the surrounding districts, while the town contingent swelled the attendance to something like 6,000—one of the biggest crowds seen in the building for some time.

Fellows holds an unbeaten record, his last contest being fought in the Drill Hall where he defeated Dick Parkes, of Goldthorpe, in two rounds. Rodgers has a big local reputation and a large number of admirers in the cutlery town. The contest, if brief, was of a very determined character, and while the men were pummelling each other in the ring the excitement was at fever-heat. A lot of money was waged on the result, and on the strength of his record Rodgers, though the smaller man, was the favourite, but the Fellows party never tired of taking the odds, which, when the men stood up for the first round, had come down to 11 to 10 on the local man.

Fellows at once made the most of his natural advantages. Fighting his hardest, he soon drove Rodgers round the ring, and the last-named standing up and "mixing" it, instead of relying on his cleverness, soon got the worst of the deal. Fellows was somewhat wild and erratic, but deadly in earnest, and served by his strength and hitting power he had Rodgers beaten before the finish of the second round.

The winner fought with any amount of dash and resolution and the loser with little or no judgment. Fellows trained from Toby White's hostery at Castle Bromwich, and took the ring in the pink of condition, while Rodgers did his work from the Railway Hotel, Buxton. The arrangement were admirable in every way, and boxing is evidently again on the up-grade in Sheffield.

Mr G T Dunning of The Sportsman, was referee for the chief event and Mr. Ben Coldwell timekeeper. The preliminary bouts were judged by Sergeant Walsh.

Previous to the event of the evening there was an eight-round contest between Tippler Gray and Mick Burke, both of Sheffield. Gray was the lighter of the two, but although he was twice nearly knocked out when time came to his rescue he stayed the eight rounds, and was awarded the contest on points after a really good exhibition. The next contest was one of fifteen rounds of two minutes each between Percy Laycock and Jock Casey, both of Sheffield, for £15 aside and a purse of £20. Laycock showed a useful left and did most of the leading, but Casey frequently got home and some hard rights on the body. In the eigth and ninth rounds Casey had Laycock down with these blows, but in the tenth when he appeared well beaten Laycock got the right home on the point and won a good bout.

RODGERS vs. FELLOWS.

It was 9-50 when the men stood up for the big contest of the evening. Fellows had in his corner Jabez White, Jonah Fellows, and Ralph Asberry, while Rodgers had behind him Pat Kelley, Jim Small, and George Corfield. Directly time was called Fellows rushed at his man and drove him to the ropes with a hard left on the neck. Rodgers came with a rebound and landed on the chest, and, getting to close quarters, the men fought hard until separated by the referee. Before the contest had lasted a minute it was seen that Fellows was the stronger man, and Rodgers was glad to make what use he could of the ring on the break away. He was somewhat slow in this respect, and, rushing in Fellows again forced the work until Rodgers steadied his man with a smashing left on the face. The visitor was quickly back again banging away for all he was worth, and by sheer strength, Rodgers was forced round the ring and fell in his own corner. Clinches were frequent and hard hitting at close quarters brought the first round to an end. The second proved the last. Again the exchanges were, if very wild of a desperate and determined character. Fellows received some nasty jabs in the face, but he would not be stalled off, and Rodgers was forced down to his knees. Up again, he did his best to stave off the attack, but Fellows went after his man in the most determined manner. Rodgers was hustled about the ring, and though he got one in now and again, he failed to keep his man at bay, and, after the Sheffielder had fallen from a stab on the throat, he got a second jab in the same place, which ended the business, when the second round had lasted 2mins 10secs.

RACQUETS.

THE AMATEUR DOUBLES CHAMPIONSHIPS.

Twelve months ago the indisposition of Baerlein, who was joint amateur doubles Racquets champion with Miles, prevented the then holders defending their premier honours, and the brothers H. K. and B. S. Foster received a walk over in the championship match. This year the same pairs were again in opposition, and on the present occasion, everybody being fit and well, the match duly took place at the Queen's Club, West Kensington, W., on Saturday afternoon. The struggle had been eagerly anticipated, and, needless to add, the gallery at the back of the first court was crowded when proceedings commenced, among those present being the Lord Chief Justice (Lord Alverstone), Captain H. Balfour-Bryant, Lieutenant P. Bramwell-Davis, Messrs C. Holden-White, G. J. V. Weigall, F. H. Browning, F. Dames-Longworth, H. L. Doherty, H. S. Mahony, Malcolm Roberts, E. Temple Gurdon, Charles Gurdon, W. G. H. Price, E. B. Noel, H. M. Leaf, and C. J. B. Marriott. The Fosters were slight favourites, but the holders failed to justify the confidence of their supporters, and were beaten after a most brilliant display of racquets. Baerlein played much better than against H. K. Foster in the Singles Championship, and his partner rendered splendid service with his admirably puzzling-out service. H. K. Foster maintained his form consistently to the finish and did not tire, but the younger brother fell off a lot after starting in great style. The more powerful pair on the day's play undoubtedly won the championship. Details:—

Eustace . Miles (Marlborough and Cambridge) and E M. Baerlein (Eton and Cambridge) (challengers) beat H. K. Foster (Malvern and Oxford) and B. S. Foster (Malvern) (holders) by four games to two (15—11, 15—9, 14—18 15—11 8—15, and 18—13) 85 aces to 77. The service aces were scored by Baerlein 21, Miles 20, B. S Foster 16, and H K. Foster 13.

Baerlein was the first to occupy the service box, but, after scoring twice, H K. Foster put him out. The latter registered one, but B. S Foster opened out a strong lead for the holders with a splendid hand of nine (six after grand rallies). From 2—10 Miles and Baerlein drew up to 6—10, H. K. Foster added a single, and, following barren hands from "B S." and Baerlein, Miles equalised with a sequence of five (three by service.) All but one of the next six innings were inproductive, and then Baerlein went to game at 15—11 with a run of three. Resuming the Fosters were 3 love at the third hand, but, after Baerlein had served himself out. Miles contributed an eminently useful sequence of five. H. K. Foster succeeded with an even better hand of six, and, B. S. Foster failing, Baerlein eclipsed everything by going to game at 15—9 by means of a magnificent run of ten (half by service) Baerlein continued his innings to 3 love at the third meeting, but subsequently the match was so brilliantly contested that eighteen hands rules extremely small until the marker called "7 all." The challengers then forged ahead to 13—7, when H. K Foster got in, and by the aid of five (four the result of exciting rallies) made it 12—13. Three hands out followed, and H. K. Foster caused the game to be set 5 at 13 all. The old Malvernians were always leading in this, but ten hands had to be played before B S Foster won at 5—1. At the fourth meeting Miles went to 5 love in his first hand, and, although the Fosters made it 3—5, Baerlein responded with a run of four. The elder Foster's next service produced four, and then ensued a ding-dong battle from 10—8. The challengers, however, gradually drew further away, but thirteen hands had to be played before Baerlein went out at 15—11. Two games behind, the Fosters made a valiant effort on proceeding "H. K." immediately went to 6 love (four service), and subsequently "B. S." made it 10—4. Small hands followed, and it took twenty before the younger Foster won at 15—8. Two hands of four by B. S. Foster, and one of three by "H. K." enabled the holders to lead well at 11—3 in the sixth game, but the two old Cantabs gradually made up lost ground, and a run of four by Miles caused "set five" to be called at 13 all. The old Marlburian registered the remaining five aces himself, making a final sequence of nine, and Miles and Bearlein won the match and the championship by four games to two. Time one hour and twenty minutes.

PEDESTRIANISM.

ANOTHER BRIGHTON WALK.

Starting from Westminster Bridge at a few minutes before midnight on Saturday, the members of the "Echo" staff, embarked on their second annual London to Brighton walk. Last year Mr. F. W. Ward, the sporting editor of that paper, won in 10hrs. 48mins., but in the race now under notice the first four competitors, including last year's winner, beat that time. A singular mishap put W. B. Foster Bovill out of the race when he held second position, and but for which accident he would almost assuredly have won the sealed handicap, in which he had 1hr. 10mins. start. When nearing Croydon Bovill was passing a four-wheeler, and from the box of that vehicle the driver fell on Bovill, the heel of the former's boot severely cutting the knuckles of Bovill's right hand and his head striking the walker with such force as to render it impossible for him to continue racing. Bovill was eventually taken to Brighton in the officials' car. Between Ward and Few there was a desperate struggle for individual winning honours, the pair walking almost neck and neck throughout the last twenty miles, and eventually the judges could not separate them at the finish. They were both fairly "done," though Few was a bit the less distressed of the two. The order and times were: F. W. Ward and F. Few, dead-heat for first place (time, 10hrs. 22mins. 32secs.; W-P Storey (10hrs. 41mins. 27sec), 3; J. Petty (16hrs. 43mins. 32secs), 4; S. W. Duggins (12hrs. 14mins. 53sec), 5; A. Richards (12hrs. 25mins. 10secs). 6. Also competed: W. Glyn Jones, A. Jones. A. M. Scott, G. Howell and G. Pearse. The sealed handicap resulted thus: Petty, 1hr. start, 1; Few, 20mins, 2; Storey, 25mins, 3, Ward, scratch, 4.

THE OOTACAMUND HUNT.

THIS week again there has been plenty of rain and both on Monday and Thursday we had excellent runs. On Monday (16th instant) there was a large field out, the meet being at Kandal Cross Roads at half-past-six on a calm fine morning. There had been heavy rain over night and scent was good and the ground perfect. We were first taken to Mills' Covert, where hounds spoke to a line at once. We went slowly into Blackmoor Vale, scent being rather bad; but hounds worked very prettily. In Blackmoor Vale, however, the jack had evidently stayed some time, for now we got on terms with him and went away as first as we could gallop straight up the Vale to Rallywood and then over the Hill to Porlock Wood. Here the jack turned sharp to the right and, skirting Blue gums on the west side, went straight across to Round Shola. Leaving this on his left he crossed the spur into Staircase, but hounds stuck to him through this huge covert and brought him out at the top of Herbert Plantation. Bending again to the right he took us through the lower part of Briar Shola and on to Bacon Wood, where he beat us, the cover in the part of the wood above the road being almost impenetrable. This was a fine long run and was without a check from start to finish.

After this we went on to Briar Shola, Gibbs' Shola and the Covert below Herbert Plantation drawing them all blank and on to Rawlings' Nullah, where also we failed to find. At Jackal Shola, however there were two jacks at home. It was some time before either would break, and, with the cold wind that had now sprung up, scent had become very catchy. At last hounds settled down to the line of one of the jacks and we went through Monkey Shola, Leeds Shola, Sheffield and Tiger Shola, out over the top of Hecuba Hill and then away across the shoulder of Vokal Hill, until we found ourselves looking down into the Emerald Valley and the Master stopped hounds. By this time both horses and hounds were fairly done, but it was a capital day's sport.

On Thursday we had another splendid day. It was a lovely morning, the ground being wet with the previous day's rain and the meet at Brooklands was a large one. Brooklands Covert was the first draw and hounds were hardly in before Captain Dennistoun holloaed a jack away on the side towards Rocky Hill. Hounds got away on excellent terms with him, carrying a good head and going very fast. Soon after crossing the stream below the Black Bridge, however, a large herd of buffaloes right across the line brought a check. Here one of the puppies, drove through the head and hit off the line again, slipping away with five of the others and getting a start that the body of the pack tried in vain to reduce. Over the ridge of Rocky Hill we went and then across the swamp beyond, where those of us who knew the ground well enough to keep to the right had a very nice bit of galloping. Another jack was viewed across the stream towards Beadnell's Shola, but the hunted jack went straight for Waterfall Shola. Hounds were hard at him in this enormous woodland for five minutes more and when judging from the music, they must have been at his brush, he got to ground in some rocks. One of the hounds followed him and could not be got out, a party of men with crowbars being left doing what they could to rescue her.

The ground between the old Pykara Road and Dunsandle was then drawn without finding and from Bracken Covert a porcupine went away, felling two hounds with his quills. Briar Shola was blank and Lamley's Course was gone over without touching a line. Hounds spoke to a cold scent half way up Rawlings Nullah and as we neared the top of the nullah a jack was viewed going over Newmarket. His point was evidently Rallywood and the Master threw hounds across his line in the hope of heading him for the open country. He would not be denied, however, and made for Rallywood with hounds close behind him. There was some very pretty hunting as hounds brought him up the nullah to the Potato field and when he came out at the top it was evident that he was done. He just reached Bluegums and was rolled over in the edge of the Covert. This ended the day.

OOTACAMUND TOURNAMENT.

THE FINAL.

WE published last week the bare result of the final game in this tournament, below we give details, which reached us too late for publication in our last issue.

4TH HUSSARS vs. OOTACAMUND GYMKHANA.—These teams met in the final on the 13th instant. The conditions were anything but favourable, the rain delaying the game and making the ground sticky. It was a fine game, however. The Hussars showing perfect combination beat their opponents by 4 goals and 5 subsidiaries to 2 goals. The Gymkhana played a plucky game throughout, but were unable to get on terms. At the end of the match Mrs. Thompson presented the cups to the winners.

First Chukker.—Ooty was first away but the ball was stopped, and Bell, rushing down, drew first blood for the Hussars. The Hussars then pressed and several shots were sent all of which were cleared. Then play was transferred, but Lewin cleared and Hoare getting away put through. Score: IVth Hussars, 2 goals; Ooty nil.

Second Chukker.—Ooty attacked but the IVth got possession and raced down, Hoare scoring two minor points. They continued to press, but the Gymkhana held them well. At last the Hussars got past and scored a third goal. Score: IVth Hussars, 3 goals 2 subs; Ooty nil.

Third Chukker.—Play ruled very fast and even for a space, then the Hussars worked the ball down and Hoare hit a subsidiary. Midfield play followed till Brodie and Hoare got through and scored another subsidiary, a third minor point being registered just before the close of the period. Score: IVth Hussars, 3 goals 5 subs.; Ooty nil.

Fourth Chukker.—Ooty rushed away at the start and Henderson and Barr got through, the latter opening the Gymkhana score. They began to show improved form and made a good stand. Barr and Henderson got some chances, which were not turned to account, however, and Bell once more put on a goal for the Hussars. Barr then went down, but was crossed as he was getting dangerous. The penalty hit failed, and the ball was got away, but Barr got possession and, returning with it, scored the second point for Ootacamund. Score: IVth Hussars, 4 goals 5 subs.; Ooty 2 goals.

Fifth Chukker.—Only 17 seconds remained for play and there was no scoring, the IVth Hussars winning by 4 goals and 5 subs. to 2 goals. Teams:—

CRICKET AT DARJEELING.

ST. JOSEPH'S COLLEGE vs. THE STATION.—The return match was played on "The Shrubbery" ground on Thursday last, and ended in a draw very much in favour of the College. The College went in first and soon lost Gahan, but Bryan and the brothers Singleton laid the foundation of a good score, which was considerably augmented by C. Stubbs with a meritorious 84 not out, and by C. Rayneau not out 41. It struck the large number of people present as odd that the College should continue batting after 4 o'clock, when by declaring they had no chance of losing the match, and every possibility of winning it, for the Station were tired out with their day's leather hunting. As it was they declared their innings at 288, leaving the Station but one hour for play, and as events proved the College would undoubtedly have won had they declared at 250, for the extra 38 was quite useless to them, and took half an hour to compile. Had the Station been put in at 4 o'clock instead of at 4-30, and even at a Jessopian rate of scoring (and we haven't a Jessop in the Station team, with the possible exception of Mr. Hugh Mytton), they could not have come near the College total, whereas, as it was, their wickets were lost so quickly, that all the best batsmen had gone when stumps were drawn at 5-30 for the total of 120.

The Station, with no prospects of winning, evidently meant to make their innings a merry one, and that they put up 120 in an hour is evidence that things were lively, despite the fine fielding of the Collegians. Captain Fisher, Mr C. Hogg, Mr. Uzielli, Mr. Mytton, and Mr. Murray, brought off some big hits and roused the large number of people present to a high pitch of enthusiasm. Mr. Hewitt and Captain Healing played steadier cricket and the latter was not out when stumps were drawn for a carefully compiled 22. En passant Mr. Uzielli was most unfortunate again in this match in having catches dropped from his bowling in the College innings. Had they been held the match might possibly have borne a different complexion. The following were the scores:—

THE CALCUTTA FOOTBALL LEAGUE.

CALCUTTA vs. KING'S OWN REGIMENT.—The match between the above teams was played on the Calcutta ground on the 18th instant, and a hard game resulted in a win for the Regiment by a goal to nil. They began the attack, but Maunder relieved and Calcutta took the ball down. A foul against the Fort team gave the homesters a free kick, but Crawford sent over. Then the King's Own came away and pressing hard obtained three corners. Nothing came of them, and the interval arrived without score. On resuming the exchanges ruled very even, but no advantage was gained till just before time Carman found the net. The remaining play was fast and exciting but there was no further scoring. Teams.—

KING'S OWN:—Hill, goal; Miller and Cotton, backs; Lenard, Ennis, and Quin, half-backs; Jones, Diddell, Ashworth, Carman and Wittingham, forwards

CALCUTTA.—Dodds, goal; Baker and Badham, backs; Maunder, Crawford and Ansell, half-backs; H. Sherman, V. Cooper, H. Cooper, V. Sherman and Smith, forwards.

Referee.—Mr. P. Wilkie.

RANGERS vs. DALHOUSIE.—On Wednesday, the 18th instant, these teams met on the Rangers' ground, the home team winning by a goal to nil. The first stage was even, though not of a very interesting nature. In the second half the Rangers got together, and Hill scored from a pass by Rosser. The Dalhousie men worked hard to equalise but could only get a corner. The game ending in a win for the Rangers. Teams.—

RANGERS.—Behrend, goal; Auderson and Margrett, backs; Boilard, Lees and Russell, half-backs; Affick, Vears, Rosser, Hill and Walker, forwards

DALHOUSIE.—Street, goal; Templeton, and Robinson, backs; Phelps, Dalling and Evans, half-backs; Barber, Doherty, Johnstone, Stewart and Bonar, forwards.

CALCUTTA vs. DALHOUSIE.—This match was played on the Calcutta ground last Saturday and resulted in a win for the home team by two goals to one. Dalhousie kicked off and rushed down, keeping the home backs busy. Stimson missed a chance by kicking over; they returned to the attack, however, and a penalty for hands against Calcutta gave Prike the opportunity of drawing first blood. The kick was successful, but Calcutta soon got going, and V. Sherman put in a capital run and scored. Play ruled very even to the interval. On crossing over the home team had the better of the game, and almost scored on more than one occasion. At last a fine shot by V. Cooper beat the Dalhousie custodian. The visitors tried hard to get level again, but were unsuccessful and the game ended as stated. Teams:—

CALCUTTA.—Dodds, goal; Baker and Badham, backs; Maunder, Crawford and Ansell, half backs; H. Sherman, V. Cooper, J. MacDonald, V. Sherman and Stewart, forwards.

DALHOUSIE.—Street, goal; Robinson and Templeton, backs; Phelps, Dalling and Evans, half-backs; Barber, Bonar, Stimson, Stewart and Prike, forwards.

Referee.—Mr. R. Remfry.

KING'S OWN REGIMENT vs. HOWRAH.—Played on the Regiment's ground, the home team winning easily by four goals to nil. They went away at the start and Palmer had to save a shot from Carman. The Regiment forced three corners but the wind interfered with accurate shooting. The military continued to press, and West put through, Carman following this success up with a second goal. On changing ends the King's Own returned to the attack, and a third goal was registered, Ennis being responsible. Then Howrah showed up and the game ruled very even. The visitors looked like scoring but could not pass the Fort backs. Carman found the net once more before time was called with the final score: King's Own Regiment, 4 goals; Howrah nil. Teams:—

KING'S OWN.—Hill, goal; Miller and Cotton, backs; Lenard, Ennis and Quin, half-backs; Jones, Diddell, West, Carman and Wittingham, forwards.

HOWRAH.—Palmer, goal; MacFagan and Annett, backs; Linton, Burns and Morrow, half-backs; Echlin, Smith, Kerr, Wood and O'Neil, forwards.

Y. M. C. A. vs. RANGERS.—The Association ground was the scene of this match played last Saturday before a very poor attendance. The Rangers were the first to attack, and Russell passed to Rosser, who banged the ball into the net. They continued to press and obtained a corner, and a mêlée resulted, during which Vears headed in. Play ruled up and down till the interval. Crossing over the Young Men showed improved form and rushing down Redmond sent in a hot shot which the Rangers' custodian saved, but Schaumberg was handy and, getting possession, put through. Even play followed to the close of the game, the visitors thus winning by two goals to one. Teams:—

RANGERS.—Behrend goal; Margrett and Anderson, backs; Boilard, Lees and Russell, half-backs; Hill, Cuthbert, Rosser, Affick and Vears, forwards.

Y. M. C. A.—Trussler, goal; Baldwin and Stokes, backs; Collingwood, Pooller, and Mason, half-backs; Price, Scully, Redmond, Gordon and Schaumberg, forwards.

64TH R.F.A. vs. WEST RIDINGS.—Played at Barrackpore on the 21st instant, a keenly contested match resulting in a draw. The West Ridings had rather the best of the first stage, and Woods scored a fine goal, but in the second half the Artillerymen played up and did most of the attacking, Ingley equalising after two unsuccessful attempts by Wratten.

64TH R. F. A. vs. Y. M. C. A.—Played on the Association ground on the 25th instant, an even game resulting in a win for the home team by a goal to nil. The visitors attacked first, but the young men soon transferred and a free kick in their favour looked as if a goal would result; but Price shot wide. Then the gunners had a turn, but were unable to score, and the interval arrived without any change. On resuming the Association pressed and Redmond put through. The Barrackpore team tried hard to equalise, but were unsuccessful, the game ending as stated. Teams:—

Y. M. C. A.:—Trussler, goal; Stoke and Lamb, backs; Schaumberg, Pooler and Colling-wood, half-backs; Price, Scully, Redmond, Gordon, and Wilson, forwards

64TH R. F. A.—Harrison, goal; Quin and Price, backs; Corby Osborne and Donnelly, half-backs; Woods, Hingley, Wratten, Nicols and Douglas, forwards.

Referee:—Mr. R. Remfry.

CIVIL AND MILITARY LEAGUE.

Four matches of the above League were played on Saturday, the 21st instant. The B.-N. Railway beat La Martiniere on the School ground by a goal to nil. On the Hornets' ground the 79th R. G. A. defeated the home team by three goals to nil. The Seebpore College beat the Customs by two goals to nil, and St. Joseph's beat the Caledonians by the same score.

CALEDONIAN A. C. vs. ST. JOSEPH'S F. C.—St. Joseph's started this match at a great pace. Their "yell and rush" methods overwhelmed the Caledonians, and Manser scored twice in the first four minutes. The Caledonians gradually asserted themselves and in the second half played much superior football but to no purpose. Harrington had the goal at his mercy but kicked wide, the score remaining unaltered to the end.

On Monday three matches were played, La Martiniere were defeated by the 79th R. G. A. by three goals to nil. The Seebpore College beat the Hornets by three goals to nil, and the match between the Measurers and the Caledonians ended in favour of the latter team by four goals to two.

CALEDONIA A. C. vs. MEASURESS A. C.—Played on Monday on the ground of the former club which won by four goals to two. The game was interesting throughout. At half-time the Caledonians, led by two goals to nil, the results of penalty kicks. In the second-half against the strong breeze the home halves played so well that the forwards, lead by T. Davis, secured two more goals, while the Measurers scored twice, leaving the Caledonians winners as stated.

FOOTBALL NOTES.

LAST week I noted that the Barrackpore team were much better this year than last and this was borne out by the result of their match vs. Howrah on the 17th, as although they did not play such a good game as when they met the Rangers they had little difficulty in defeating the United Club by 5 to 0. Play in the first half of this match was very poor, and though the R. A. had most of the game there was very little "go" in their attack; they, however, scored one goal after a good bit of play on the left wing. In the second half matters brightened and the Howrah forwards led off with some dash, but they were never dangerous and the gunners soon got the ball in hand again and before time was called had added two more goals. The Howrah backs played a good game, but Woods at centre half was head and shoulders above the rest of the team and gave the soldiers more trouble than all the others. Linton and Kerr in the forward line made one or two spurts, but there was no combined play in the eleven. For the R. A. Wratten at centre forward earned his place in the team and the wing men played well together. Osborne in the half-line and Price at back were also conspicuous, but the game altogether was not very interesting to watch.

On Wednesday (the 18th) the Calcutta—King's Own match attracted a large crowd and the game was very even, but several opportunities of scoring were lost by both sides, the shooting of the civilian forwards being especially disappointing. In this game as well as the above-mentioned one at Howrah, combination on the civilian side was singularly lacking and it was a subject of remark by many of the spectators that the back division fed the enemy more often than their own forwards. On the whole, however, Calcutta made a very even game of it and had V. Sherman not turned up over a quarter of an hour late, the chances seemed in favour of the home team scoring in the first half As it was they were much handicapped and Dodds in goal had an anxious time. In the second half the military made determined efforts to score, but the Calcutta men, although not in nearly such good training as their opponents, stayed extremely well and kept the soldiers off till about 10 minutes before time when Carman scored from the left wing with a stinging shot which hit the crossbar and angled off into the goal. Dodds fisted out, but the referee ruled that the ball had passed between the posts and Calcutta were beaten, though certainly not disgraced. The latter part of the game was unfortunately marred by the King's Own backs kicking into touch on the slightest chance and their supporters 'booing" the referee. This was a pity as the game up this had been conducted in a most sporting spirit.

On Saturday Dalhousie visited the Calcutta ground and their match with the senior civilian club proved one of the most interesting which has yet been played. H. Cooper being absent, Macdonald took his place at centre forward for Calcutta, and Stewart replaced Smith at outside left and both acquitted themselves most creditably, the entire forward line showing some excellent combination. Ancell in the half line seemed rather off colour and the backs gave the C. F. C. supporters some anxious moments, but the Dalhousie men did not show up well in front of goal and Dodds was equal to all emergencies. For the visitors Prike and Stewart worked well together on the left-wing, especially in the first half, and Boner also gave a good display, being well backed up by Phelps. Templeton at back played his usual game, but his partner was not very reliable. In the first half Dalhousie notched the first point from a penalty off Baker, but V. Sherman soon equalised, being let in by a miskick by Robinson. In the second half V. Cooper, who had been playing a sound game throughout, scored for Calcutta by a splendid shot from the right wing and won the match for his side. After this Calcutta seemed to fall off and during the last ten minutes the visitors gave Dodds plenty to do, play being mostly in the home 25. The match on the whole was most evenly contested and worth going a long way to watch.

The King's Own—Howrah match, which also came off on Saturday, needs no description. The Fort team had it their own way for more than two-thirds of the game and won easily. Howrah had one or two chances but could not get in any effective shots, whereas the military showed some excellent forward play, Carman as usual being especially prominent. This player has scored most of the goals for his side this season and is a very useful forward.

Matches in the Civil and Military League since my last note have been of a very scrambling nature. On Thursdy Seebpore beat the B.-N. R. and the same team added two more points to their score on Saturday by beating the Measurers, and a further two on Monday by overcoming the redoubtable Hornets. The hardest fought game was that between the B.-N. R. and La Martinière, the former scoring their first win. The 79th R A. are going as strong as ever and seem likely to win all their matches, but the Hornets have had a very disastrous time of it, and though they probably did not mind being beaten by the R. A. to go down before the Caledonians and then Seebpore must have been very disheartening; however, it is a long while yet before the Shield Competition starts and ere that day let us hope the "two or three best men" whose inevitable absence from the team has had such calamitous results may have recovered from their temporary indisposition.

It seems a pity that the much talked of Referees' Association did not come to stay in spite of strenuous efforts on the part of the I. F. A. Secretary to set it going. Its premature decease was no doubt due to likely men who would have been glad to receive a C. R. A. certificate being too bashful to come forward for examination, but I believe a few who were keen sent in their names and the initial mistake was made in waiting for more names instead of examining the first few at once. The news that one or two had been put through would surely have attracted others. There were rumours that some of the likely candidates objected to one or more of the examining committee but had they had the matter more at heart they would have overcome their objections, as taking the Committee all round it was the most representative one which could have been found in Calcutta at the time. Perhaps if Mr. Wilder could find another passed R. A. man or two in Calcutta they might do something, but I am afraid Messrs. Pritchard and Botho will not try to regather their scattered forces. As matters stand now the League Secretary will no doubt have harder work than ever to rope in referees.

Next Saturday's League matches are Dalhousie vs 64th R F.A.; Rangers vs. King's Own; Howrah vs. Calcutta; and West Ridings vs. Y.M.C.A. Of these the Rangers-King's Own match will no doubt be the most worth matching.

ST. ANDREW'S TANKARD COMPETITION.—The yearly competition for this old and valued club prize took place on the maidan links on Friday and Saturday last, and attracted a fair number of competitors, though none too many cards were sent in, and the scoring was nothing remarkable, though both Mr. Caw and Mr Cathcart had excellent chances of returning very low figures indeed. Eventually the tankard fell to Mr. A. H. Nicholl with a very creditable return of 94—13=81, Mr. H. B. Caw with one stroke more handicap coming in second two strokes behind and winning the second prize presented by the club. The scratch scores were again indifferent for the most part, Mr. F. H. Stewart with 86 doing best. Details.—

GOLF IN THE BRITISH ISLES.

IT is a very busy time with the Links man and woman just now, so busy that several most interesting events must needs be passed over or only lightly touched upon. Professionals and amateurs of both sexes are glad that Harry Vardon has quite recovered from his break down and is playing better golf than ever. He is a native of Jersey and returning some little time ago to his native place he distinguished himself immensely in a four-ball match, a gale of wind made play very difficult, but despite this he went out in 34 strokes, and came in, in the same, and himself remarked he had never before played such golf.

For the Sunningdale Club scratch gold medal on 22nd April there was a strong entry of scratch players. This medal was won last year, it may be remendered, by the old Dark Blue cricketer and hurdler, Mr. Croome after a tie at 85 with the Hon'ble Osmund Scot. This year another Oxford man, Mr. H. G. B. Ellis, succeeded in carrying it off who accomplished the round in 84, going out in 41 and coming in in 43. Next on the list came Mr. W. Miller Morsop with 85, and Mr. H. D. G. Dunbar followed with 87. Going to the last hole Mr. Dunbar was left with a five to win but was bunkered, took 4 to reach the green and 3 putts put him out of the innings.

On Saturday, 23rd ultimo, the representatives of the medica and legal professions met at Burnham Beeches. This course is so beautifully situated that one is very apt to let one's eye wander over the surrounding lovely scenery and the result is ruination to one's game. But in this case the match was a very level one, the singles resulting in a draw and the foursomes owing perhaps to the inability of Dr. Simpson to take part were won by the Lawyers by 2½ matches to 1½. Drs. Simpson, Howarth, Daniel, Dane, Carruthers, Webb, Hawkins and Chittenden representing the Faculty, and Messrs. Mansfield Hunter, Beveridge, Captain Watt, Dyne, Macpherson, Jackson, Russell and Cracraft, the "Silk." Playing in the Sussex County Union's Competition at Lewes, some surprise was manifested in the defeat of Mr. Horace Hutchinson by Mr. M. Munro.

There are 111 entries for the Parliamentary Handicap; of these, 13 are members of the Cabinet and 13 are members of the Upper House, including Lords Avebury, Dunraven, Hardwicke, Willoughby de Eresby, Newton, Howe, Lurgan, Sandhurst, Hampden, the Earl of Chesterfield, the Earl of Errol, Viscount Galway and Viscount Barrington. The first and second rounds will be played at Sandwich on 7th May, but the subsequent matches will be played by mutual arrangement, the finals are to be competed by 18th June.

* * * * *

There is yet another championship in future to be added to the already long list and this is the "Amateur Championship of France," which is to be held this year on 16th, 17th and 18th June under the auspices of the Societe de Golf de Paris at La Boulie Versailles. A very fine trophy has generously been presented by Mr. J. Gordon Bennett. The Championship of "All Italy" takes place at Florence on 10th May.

Of Ladies' Golf there seems no end, and the club houses have their walls and notice boards plastered over with notices of open meetings with most alluring and attractive lists of prizes for every sort of golf with variations. Last week the Ranelagh Meeting held precedence (and rightly) of all other events, but since then there have been country matches, club matches and open meetings galore. The Hampshire Ladies' County Team have been on tour—they have met and been defeated by Sussex, Essex, Middlesex and Kent, but their Captain, Mrs. Lushington, has managed to do well in Medal rounds, both in the Stanmore and Bamehurst Club's Open Meetings. Against Essex the Ladies of Hants were particularly unsuccessful and against Kent they fared scarce better, one only of the team winning her match and this against Mrs. Stanley Stubbs of vocal fame.

There was a fairly large and very representative gathering at Stanmore on the 26th ultimo. The day was lovely, which always adds so appreciatively to the success of any reunion, and everything that could be done for the comfort and well-being of the competitors was carried out to a nicety by Miss E. B. Makins (the Captain of the Ladies' Club) assisted by an able and energetic committee.

A most sumptuous lunch and tea were provided entirely at the expense of two members of the Men's Club and everyone was loud in their praises of the way everything was done. Mrs. George Hunter of the Littlestone Club, always a formidable score player, won the Scratch Prize with 95, a creditable performance considering the length of the course and the extreme trickiness of the greens, and that the competition was held from the men's Medal Tees, the Bogey for which is 90. Next to Mrs. Hunter came one of the Hampshire Team, Miss C. Bloxsome with 98. The best score under handicap was returned by Mrs. Storey, 98 – 4 = 94, and the prize for the best 1st nine holes went to the Yorkshire County Captain Miss Bertha Thompson at 49. The foursomes against Bogey were won after a tie with two other couples by Mrs. Cameron and Mr. Steedman 6 down.

Most or the players at Stanmore plus 50 more making a total of 106 entrants, were seen at Farnehurst next day, when the portals of this up-to-date club were thrown open to the golfing woman who never slow to avail herself of opportunities of adding glory and silver to herself, her lares and penates as a matter of course attended at May Place. Here Miss Bertha Thompson did anexcellent round of 91 and won the scratch trophy, while an Irish girl from Greystone, Miss V. Henshaw, with 91 – 14 = 77 won the 1st handicap trophy. The driving competition was won with 2 fine drives of 169 and 151 yards by Miss Waters, the putting (18 holes) by Mrs. Powell in 44, and everyone seemed very pleased with themselves, the course and the entertainment provided.

* * * * *

While these 106 were disporting themselves at Ranelagh, the Annual General Meeting of the L. G. W. was being held and the draw for the imminent Championship at Troon was being made. First to meet are the American representatives Miss Mabel Higgins and Miss Rhona Adair, the holder and of all previous draws this one is perhaps the best and the favourite most evenly distributed. Miss Sybil Whigham should certainly now or never avail herself of an almost home course, for does not Prestwick, on which links she has played from childhood, lie next door? The three Misses Hezlet are competing, also Miss F. Walker Leigh, Miss F. Macbeth and Miss M. E. Stuart, all last year's medallists, but I would need a seer of old to prophesy, and spot the winner, and whether the trophy hies back to ould Oireland, remains in Scotland, is carried over the water to Chicago or is brought back over the Border, the fight will be a keen one, and the battle will go to the strong."

6th May 1904.

Stirring events are taking place every day and every green is busy, and well patronized. The lovely weather experienced throughout the month of April made all who had the slightest excuse and opportunity for a day on the Links seize the chance with eagerness and avidity. On Saturday 30th April, strong teams representing the Bar and Stock Exchange met on the Links of the St. George's Club, Sandwich, in what is hoped will be an annual contest. Among the two teams were to be found no less than four International players in Messrs. Mure-Ferguson, Horace Castle., H. W. de, Zoete and B. Darwin, the three former doing battle for the House and the latter on the opposing side. The result was a win for the Stock Exchange by seven points to two. Each match was of thirty-six holes and a win counted one point. The teams were 9 aside, and the individual matches were as follows :—

	Points.
Mr J H Heddemick (S E) beat Mr Crabb Watt (Bar) by	8 up and 7	1
Mr W Miller-Mossop (S E) beat Mr Rand (Bar) by	5 and 4	1
Mr O C Bevan (S E) beat Mr E Blackwell (Bar) by	5 and 4	1
Mr Horace Castle (S E) lost to Mr Ellis (Bar) by	5 and 3	0
Mr H de Zoete (S E) beat Mr Beveridge (Bar) by	3 and 2	1
Mr Kerr (S E) beat Hon'ble Evan Charteriss (Bar) by	1 up	1
Mr Mitchell (S E) beat Mr Dun (Bar) by	2 up	1
Mr Mure-Ferguson (S E) beat Mr Mansfield Hunter (Bar) by	6 and 5	1
Mr. A D Blyth (S E) lost to Mr Derwin (Bar) by	2 holes	0

It is curious to note that there were no halved matches on the 36 holes, and only 2 were square on the conclusion of 18 holes, and only one of the International players lost their match.

* * * *

A great deal of discussion has arisen from the incident which occurred in the Inter' Varsity match at Woking on 20th ultimo, when Mr. Alison of the Dark Blue team going to the last hole played his second shot on the roof of the Club house, ascended to the roof by means of a ladder, played his third from where the ball lay, and eventually halved the hole in five.

The contention is that the ball was "out of bounds," and if it were not so, that the use of a ladder to reach it was not legitimate. Dealing first with the boundary question the definition of "out of bounds" is as follows :—Any place outside the defined or recognized boundaries of the course"—To interpret this literally, is quite contrary to the spirit and usual custom of the Royal and Ancient game for like many other things in the Rules, this definition is necessarily limited, leaving to the various clubs to legislate for the boundaries of their course. As a matter of practice, only the places which are specially indicated by local rules are out of bounds. The Editor of Golf Illustrated contends that Mr. Alison upheld the cardinal principal that "a ball shall be played wherever it lies or the hole be given up," and that there is more to be said, but not much, against the use of the ladder, which was resting against the house, thereby rendering the use of it quite legitimate as a means of access to the ball, which would, however, have been contrary to rules had the position not been accessible by its own inherent appliances, in which case the use of a ladder or of any outside aid would not have been legitimate. For instance a player would not be allowed to send for a ladder or a rope with which to scale a house or tree, although he would be quite entitled to climb either in order to get to the ball. It is a nice distinction, and of course the incident in question would not be allowed to pass without both adverse and friendly criticism.

The annual golf match between the Royal Artillery and Royal Engineers was played at Sandwich on the 27th April, the conditions governing the contest varied in some respects from those hitherto prevailing. Instead of the teams consisting of eight aside as previously, two more were this year added to the number of each, and instead of ordinary foursomes in the afternoon these were substituted by the now popular four ball foursomes the third differing point was in the scoring which now stands that each match won shall score a point and the bye a quarter of a point. The "Gunners" had a strong side including the Irish Golfer (Mr. H. A. Boyd), Mr. H. E. Hambro, the Sunningdale player and and Mr. H. M. Ballingal (Champion of the South of Ireland)s but the Sappers played up well and in the singles led by 6¾ points to 4¾ ; this lead, however, they lost in the four ball four' somes leaving the Gunners 2 points to the good. The teams were a appended :—

The ladies have been quiet during the past week, and no very interesting events have taken place. Surrey met and were defeated by Middlesex at Ashford on 28th ultimo by 4 matches to 3. Miss Sparrow (Mid) defeated Miss Issette Pearson (Honorary Secretary L. G. W. Surrey). Miss Saul defeated the Surrey Captain Mrs. Harry Willock, this victory over Surrey makes the matches in the Home Counties Division in the Counties Championship much more even—Middlesex, Kent and Surrey having so far each lost 1 match.

Some sensational play was witnessed on the 4th instant on the West Middlesex Club's Course at Southall when the Southern Division of the Professional Golfers Association competed for the Tooting Bec Challenge Cup. The day was brilliantly fine and the first thing one noticed on reaching the course was 3 crowds and on investigation one discovered that one followed J. H. Taylor, who was partnered with Gray of Littlehampton, another watched Braid who curiously enough was partnered with R. Thomson, his successor at Romford, and the third went round with Harry Vardon, who was playing with Hephon. This occasion was the first serious golf-day in which the Open Champion has taken part since his long illness and every one was remarking on the extreme fitness of his appearance, though his play was not up to his usual form. At the conclusion of the day's play it was found that James Braid and a young player from the Hampstead Club, J. M. McLaren, had tied with 147, and about 5-30 P.M. these two commenced to play off the tie, the younger man starting with a brilliant 3 and making things look uncomfortable for Braid until at the conclusion of the 16-hole he stood one stroke to the good and McLaren's handicap (3) gone at the 17th hole. McLaren found the bunker guarding the green with his second, whilst Braid lay comfortably at the edge of the green. Taking a mashie McLaren played out, and the ball appeared to the big crowd assembled to be going to lie dead instead of which, however, it trickled slowly into the hole, and this seemed to unnerve even so old a hand as Braid for he missed a short "put" and took 5. Thus with 1 to go McLaren was 1 stroke to the good but the strain and excitement were evidently too much for the younger Scotsman and he missed his drive, lost his ball and took 6 to the hole which his opponent held in a perfect 3 and to James Braid went the Cup and the title of Champion of the Southern Division Professional Association. Braid's 1st round was 75, his second 72-147. McLaren's 147 for 36 holes.

AGA KHAN TOURNAMENT.

Semi-Finals.

Middlesex Regiment vs. Cheshire Regiment.—These teams met on the Cooperage on the 17th instant. The game was closely contested and resulted in a win for the Middlesex by two goals to one. The Cheshires opened with a rush then play settled down and was very even for a space. At length the Cheshires got in a good run and Taylor scored. On resuming the Middlesex men immediately ran down and equalised, the interval arriving shortly after. Crossing over, the Cheshires pressed hard, but failed to score. Then the Middlesex men had a spell at attacking, but were equally unsuccessful. They continued to press and sent in several shots which all but scored. Time arrived, however with the score level and an extra ten minutes was played, the Middlesex men finding the net once more and thus securing a place in the finals.

The Final

Royal Scots vs. Middlesex Regiment.—Theis game in the above tournament was played on the Cooperage on the 19th instant. The opening exchanges were very even, then the Middlesex got away and forced the attack, but the Scots relieved and pressed in turn. Open play followed till the Middlesex team once more worked the ball down to their opponents' circle, but failed to find the net. From a corner the ball was put through, but the goal disallowed, sticks being given against the shooter. After the interval the Middlesex resumed the attack, and after one of the forwards had missed, the ball was netted. The Scots forced the play for a bit, but their opponents got away again and scored their second goal. The Scots showed better combination and gave the Middlesex backs an anxious time but the ball was eventually cleared and the Middlesex returned to the charge. They were weak in front of goal, however, and play in midfield closed the game, the Middlesex winning the match and tournament by two goals to nil. Mrs. Carnegy presented the Cup to the winners.

THE AUSTRALIAN AS A HORSEMAN.

THE Australian, as is well known, has made for himself a considerable reputation as a horseman. It is interesting at the present moment to consider whether this reputation is fairly earned and whether the present-day Australian is keeping up his old traditions in the saddle. Among the men who, during the last two or three years, at different times left Australia to fight in South Africa were undoubtedly some of the finest horsemen who ever rode beneath the flag of any country. That those contingents contained some of the rankest duffers who ever scrambled across a horse is no less strictly true. The so-called riding tests, held in the respective capitals before the troops were chosen, resolved themselves into the variest farces, the men were put up on all sorts of horses and made to ride over low bush fences, so low as to be a laughing-stock even to the city larrikin, who might safety have ridden the suburban nanny-goat over them without fear of risking either his neck or his reputation as a horseman. The consequence was that some would-be soldiers, who had possibly come through their shooting-tests with flying colours, but had seldom or never been across a horse before, having the good luck to be apportioned a steady, honest animal which could jump, managed to keep their seats with some difficulty—with how much difficulty will never be accurately known!—and get safely over their fences; while others, good men who had ridden from their cradle days through cattle camp and muster to the mastery of mature horsemanship being given old screws which absolutely refused even to fall over their fences, were promptly discarded as incompetent. Consequently, these trials became the laughing-stock of the country, especially when it became known that, in two cases at least, possibly in more, noted rough-riders of unusual talent "at the game" had been set aside as hopelessly unsuitable, while dozens of towns-people, who had probably only seen a horse on the racecourse or over the splashboard of a hansom, passed the judges with flying colours—and arms and legs! A friend of mine, who was, though a bushman, a notoriously poor rider, told me that, being given a horse that jumped "big" he managed with difficulty to keep his seat, and though landing perilously near his horse's ears succeeded in passing this peculiar test of horsemanship.

Now it seems to me, if they had started these amateur warriors for a hurry-scurry race over half a mile of rough country with a few rabbit holes and an occasional tree thrown in, that a competent judge would not have been long in picking out the horsemen from the duffers, and Australian horsemanship would have been better represented upon the veldt.

Still, the many undoubtedly magnificent horsemen who went over must have leavened the lump and saved the reputation of the Commonwealth. Of course, from the military point of view, I have no doubt the Colonial's careless seat found no favour. In the Australian Bush, where all men ride, all men ride differently (some, en passant, very *in*differently!), suiting their length of stirrup, their firm or easy seat, to the pace and temper of their horses, and so a squadron of this undrilled irregular horse must have seemed to the eye-glass of the British officer most irregular indeed! Yet, in that confidence in their horses, that perfect understanding between man and beast that is born only of a life-long practice, the major part of our Bush contingents excelled, and all who served alongside of them doubtless carried away the impression that they were good horsemen.

Away in the Bush, as I have said, all men are riders; but by no means all men there are horsemen!

Take the average sheep-station in western New South Wales, employing, say, eight or ten mounted men, men who are, roughly speaking in the saddle day after day from sunrise to sundown. Are they good horsemen? Some assuredly are. Possibly of the above number one is a man noted throughout the district as a master of his craft, one to whom the training of young horses is a delight, and for whom the worst buckjumper has no terrors. Possibly a couple more are fair good riders who are able to take over the half-broken colts from the breaker, men who will ride a fairly "rough" horse for the sake of securing a good hack for themselves men who, endowed with no excess of courage or outstanding skill above their fellows, are yet so thoroughly used to horses from infancy upward that they have become horsemen, like Molière's doctor, in spite of themselves!

Following these, perhaps, will be another stamp of man—generally a jackeroo or store-keeper—a city man or possibly an importation from the British Isles, who, knowing absolutely nothing of horses when he first took up station life, has by pluck and determination taught himself to ride in the face of dangerous falls and innumerable risks of sudden death; sitting like a bag of potatoes, with execrable hands, in a saddle with huge knee and thigh-pads, he can manage a "nasty prop or two," but a horseman in the true sense he can never hope to be yet his undoubted pluck should save him from ridicule.

The remainder of the station staff are almost invariably beneath contempt as horsemen; men who, in spite of living all their lives among horses, will stead fastly refuse to mount a horse which on a cold morning will "bump his back" when the girths are tightened; men who will crowd the stockyard rails to watch some pluckier rider take his chance of a fall, but are always "not havin' any" when asked to take such chance themselves. These are, for the most part, native-born Australians, the men who were swaddled in saddle-cloths and cut their teeth upon the knot of a stock-whip handle; who, at five years of age, were rounding up the milkers on the old grey stock-horse, and a year later riding hot-headed Bush horses on the township race-track; men who, from lack of nerve, will never ride again as they did in those early days, full of dash and courage handling awkward horses in heavy timber with the skill and sang froid of stockmen born.

So, one may say in a general way, all Australian Bush boys can ride well, but not all Australian Bush men.

To find the real good horseman nowadays—the man who, like the Hawkesbury native of ancient fame, can sit for a week on a bucking brumby while an admiring populace tosses pumpkins to him by away of sustenance—one must go out among the Queensland cattle, and there he still remains.

Out there, among the men employed on a cattle station, it is quite possible to find every man a finished horseman. Possibly eight of those ten will ride any buck-jumper that can be brought them; it is almost a certainty that the other two are renowned for their skill in scrub and could ride bucking horses if they cared to, but from age or over-much rough-riding in their youth are unwilling to undergo unnecessarily the severe strain and shock to the system inseparable from riding real "rough'uns."

Of riding across fences; the bushman of course knows nothing; as nearly all his fences are wire, he has no chance of gaining proficiency in that branch of the game; but the man who will race through a ridge of ironbark or gidgee at full speed on a horse rough-mouthed only a week before has nerve enough to face the biggest barrier ever built, and for these men fences have no fears. Among the Australian drovers, another class who make their living on horseback, are many superb riders, and seldom does a cattle camp go by without having in its little band of lithe-limbed, sunburnt horsmen at least one who can master "anything lapped in hide."

Among the teamsters, too, who through drought-time or flood pilot their slow teams mile by mile along the Western roads, are many notable riders. I remember a teamster once riding up to the station on a snorting, half-broken, roan colt to buy some mutton; as he sprang from his horse at the store the colt jumped forward and cow-kicked savagely, but the man only stepped back and laughed. Concluding his purchase he approached the colt with a side of mutton in his hand; there were two or three loud whistling snorts, a squeal, and a cloud of whirling dust and flying hoofs; two seconds later the teamster was cantering down the track with half a sheep under his arm! I have seen many spendid riders get on to many bad horses, but venture to say never another who could have got on that horse under similar circumstances. The thought naturally rose of that man's value at the war if called upon to lift a wounded comrade on to a restive horse under heavy fire!

In the neighbourhood of the Australian capitals are several packs of hounds which hunt a drag over the rail fences which are common in the vicinity of Sydney, Melbourne, etc. In the ranks of these hunts are many fine horsemen, quite on a par with the best of English, Scotch, and Irish cross-country riders, many of them on well-trained horses riding repeatedly at naked wire (occasionally they hunt hares or foxes in the open and take the fences as they find them), in spite of the terrible risks taken when the ground is greasy or the sun shining in their horses' eyes Yet their accidents are few, and though the pace at which they ride is terrific, their horses fence magnificently, most of them being either old steeple or hurdle horses or well-known show jumpers. Polo is played in all the cities and in many country districts in Victoria, New South Wales, South Australia, and Queensland Bush polo, as "Banjo" Paterson has wisely remarked in his witty verses, has mostly "mighty little science but a mighty lot of dash," and the day after playing in a Bush polo-match one wakes feeling as though one had been through a threshing-mill, as the present writer can testify from experience.

No better training for polo exists than scrub-riding, and the man who is fast after cattle in rough-timbered country is invariably "up on the ball" between the flags, even if he cannot hit it when he gets there.

Undoubtedly the decline of the buck-jumper has wrought for the decline of the man who rode him.

Of course, it is hard for one nowadays to learn from the old hands the truth about the ancient buck-jumper; old hands are prone to exaggerate when they get upon this darling topic, and they just love to tell you, 'Horses don't buck like they used!" and the buck-jumper looms large through the glamour of old romance that encircles him. But from all accounts, allowing a margin for this, the buck-jumper is not nowadays such an adept at his art as he was; the old breed of bad horses is dying out, the younger ones are better and more patiently broken with more careful regard to their varied tempers, and, above all, the sheep are taking the place of cattle, and the roughrider's occupation is gone; he, like the horses he mastered, is dying—slowly, but dying.

One old man, reputed by local fame the finest rider ever seen on the Lachlan River in the old cattle days, once said scornfully to me, when I congratulated him on his son's winning the roughriding prize at a recent Lachlan Show, "My God! when he can win a prize for buck-jump riding the horses must be poor hands at it!" Yet we thought him a good horseman. Another man showed me the old stockyard from which the above old pioneer had ridden, in olden days, an eight-year-old just-broken horse fourteen miles to the nearest town—bucking all the way!—a feat of endurance on the part of both man and horse which seems incredible; yet the story is well-known and often repeated, is endorsed by the old man himself, and, if not true, is to east an accepted legend of the Lachlan River.

So, in a general way, one may say the art of Australian roughriding has died; but still, out across the Border, where the big paddocks run endlessly to the sunset, are a remnant of the riders of the olden days; and down in the mountain country of New South Wales, in the shadow of Kosciusko, there are men used to running horses in the hills whom upon their mountain ponies no outsider can ever hope to follow.

INSECTS OF A KIND.

SPIDERS, scorpions, and centepedes should never be included among insects. Nor should worms, as distinguished from caterpillars, grubs, and maggots which are the larvæ of insects. Besides important differences of structure and function, insects are distinct from the other creatures named, in this that they pass through changes, as they grow, so that the perfected insect is not the same thing that it was when it emerged from the egg. The change may be complete, as from caterpillar to chrysalis, and thence to butterfly; or it may be no more than putting on a pair of wings; but it is a great change. On the other hand, arachnids and centipedes, for high orders, and worms, for a low order, are hatched perfect, and simply grow larger till they die. There are exceptions to this rule in the case of a few mites which belong to the arachnids, and of a few worms; but these changes are like the change from Hyde to Jekyll, altogether different from the "metamorphosis" of an insect. The most notable point in the structure of a true insect is that it is in three sections. This is true of every true insect, from a butterfly or a locust to a mosquito or a flea, no matter what be its size or shape. Some insects are so fantastically formed that they might be in many sections; and some beetles appear to be in a solid block, covered with a shell like a tortoise But if broken up they all come naturally into the three sections, head, thorax (chest), and abdomen. On the other hand, a spider or a scorpion has its head and thorax in one piece, and they cannot be separated without a surgical operation. The abdomen is quite distinct in spiders, but in scorpions it joins the hind part of the thorax so closely that it appears to be in a piece with it. Nevertheless, a slight examination, without cutting, shows it to be separate. Every insect has six legs, but spiders and scorpions have eight. Centipedes and millepedes make another order, in which the head is distinct, but the chest and abdomen are divided alike into a number of segments. We may now, before proceeding to insects, consider these three sorts of invertebrates.

I. SPIDERS.—I exceedingly wish that people who read these papers, especially ladies, would endeavour to get over the common, but unreasonable, and unaccountable, repugnance to spiders. The larger kinds bite if they are held, as ants, crickets, cockroaches, and many flies and beetles do; but they are never aggressors, and they do no other harm. Their cobwebs gather dust, but so do the curtains we hang up, and the webs are as easily brushed away as dust on a table. Spiders eat neither our food, our clothes our books, our shoes, nor our gloves: they spoil nothing, soil nothing, and spot nothing: they even keep out of our way. Many garden species are brilliantly coloured, shining in gold, silver, steel or bronze, or shaded and mottled in exquisite loveliness. Then in their manner of life they are, I think, the most interesting creatures in the whole animal kingdom. They appeal to our manliness by refusing all food which they have not captured and killed by their own exertions. The making and spreading of their nets is a work of genius, and their skill in other ways of catching their prey passes belief. I advise the watching of spiders, as I have recommended the watching of birds. It is a study how they lay out the plan of their nets, and how they begin to spread them—always unaided. Then the care of their eggs, and in some cases of their young, is an interesting puzzle. They do not incubate their eggs: but whether they carry them about with them, or place them in a cocoon in a corner, or hang them up in their nets, they do something from time to time to the eggs which ensures their hatching; for if the spider be killed, the eggs do not hatch. In this respect the eggs are like birds' eggs, and unlike all insects' eggs I believe also, although I have not made sure of the fact, that the young spiders cannot get out of the silk bag or cocoon in which the eggs are deposited unless the mother opens a way for them.

One very serious fault, and one only, I have to admit: but it does not affect ourselves. Spiders are ruthless cannibals, making meat of brothers and sisters, parents and children, without compassion. A husband who is nearly always smaller; sometimes very much smaller, than this wife, dare not go near her net, for fear of being tied up and eaten like any insect. A very few species are more natural: the pair occupy a net together, and unite in the care of their eggs and young. It is quite common to find a spider short of from one to five legs, or with legs of all sorts of irregular sizes. This is the result of battles in which the legs have been bitten off—to grow again after a time. A spider's hard, sharp fangs can be beautifully seen with a magnifying glass; and their chitinous covering appears quite plainly in the spider's skins which are commonly found in a house. Where a cobweb has not been disturbed for several weeks, and the spider has had plenty of food in that time, several skins can be found together, in different sizes according to the spider's growth. These are always perfect, to the tips of the long legs, for a spider draws its legs out of its skin as we draw our fingers out of a glove. A spider which has withdrawn all its legs but has got no further out of its skin, looks a curious creature with sixteen legs.

There are very many kinds of spiders, and they range from a pin's head in size to the size of a mouse. The most interesting and convenient way to divide them is not according to their anatomy, but according to the way they capture their food. By a little attention one learns to tell the habits of a spider from its appearance.

1. Many kinds use nets. These nets are mere tangles of silk, or they are wonderful geometrical figures, or in the fields and woods, they are thick layers of white fluff, in a cover of which is the owner's den, with or without a trapdoor. When the spider is eating an insect, if another be caught in the net, it hurries to the second capture, binds it fast, and then returns to finish what it was eating. The largest species of this division is common in the vicinity of Calcutta, on the slopes below Darjeeling, and doubtless in other parts of Bengal. Its net sometimes spreads across eight or nine feet between two trees. There is a very handsome species, with a symmetrical net one yard across, in gardens and waste places in Bombay.

2. Some kinds run down their prey. These are distinguished by long legs, though not longer than some of the last division, and their movements are inconceivably quick. I have repeatedly seen them rush upon and catch a table fly, which beats the performance of a terrier with rats. The largest of these live in our houses, and some of them carry their large, white cocoons under them, without abating their activity after flies and crickets. One of these spiders will attack and size a cockroach of the large, brown, flying species, and a desperate struggle takes place before the cockroach, which is more than twice as large as its enemy, succumbs to the poison from the spider's bite. I try as often as possible, to confine one of these spiders in a pre with my books; and as long as it stays there any cricket cockroach, or fish-insect that enters the place pays for its mischief with its life. I got one of these house spiders, of moderate size and black colour, on a raw, damp, and bitterly cold day at the end of October, in a traveller's bungalow in Sikkim, at an elevation of about 14,000 feet. It is now in the Indian Museum at Calcutta. Numerous smaller species abound in the grass and upon plants.

3. A third division cautiously approach their prey and spring on it. These are small, or of moderate size, and are more alike in form than the species of other groups. Several species live in our houses; others are only found in verandahs and on the outside of doors and windows, apparently loving the glare of the sun; and many other species live altogether outside. There is endless interest in watching any of these spiders creep stealthily near to an insect and then spring on it.

4. Another division lie in wait for their prey. These are in great variety of colour and form. They hide under flowers and among leaves, with their legs packed in close about their bodies, so still and shapeless that persons accustomed to look for such things sometimes cannot detect them; or else stretched out stiffly like dead twigs. When an unsuspecting insect approaches the place where one of these spiders is lurking, its legs fly out with a sudden spring and the insect is caught. There is a pure white species which lies at the bottom of the flower of the common "tube rose" lily. Polianthus tuberosa and many a butterfly enters the fragrant white flower never to leave it again till its dead wings are thrown out by the treacherous devourer.

There is a genus of spiders called phryna, with their abdomens ribbed and their palpi enlarged like a scorpion's, and their first pair of legs very long and fine, reaching out for use as feelers. A small black species, with these two hair-like legs more than half an inch long, is sometimes found in Calcutta; and there is a large species in South India, whose two feet sweep an area of five inches. These spiders make no nets, but rush on small insects, like the second group described above.

Tarantula from an Italian word, is the old name of the largest European spider. That has been described as equal to the "biscobra" in terrifying qualities; but it would attract little notice in India. The word is popularly used of a large spider of any country, and the tarantula of Texas is twice as formidable as the Italian species. In India the name is often given to the galeodes, which will be presently described. Our largest spiders belong to the genus mygale whose bird-catching propensity was first reported from South America and Central America. I have seen at least three species, a buff-coloured one in Malabar, a dark brown one in Oudh, and a black one in Cachar; and I was shown, by the late Mr. Wood-Mason, a drawing of as fourth species in the hill country of North Assam. All these species are two and-a-half inches long and nearly one inch think with two fangs as large as a cobra's, jet black, and pointing downwards. They are thickly furred, and have short, hairy legs. Mygale is a Greek word, meaning "mouse-weazel." I do not know in what part of Asia Minor, on North Africa, or possibly in Greece itself, the Greeks became acquainted with this creature; but their name admirably describes a brute which Aristotle himself could scarcely have conceived to be only a spider. Such astonishing stories were circulated by naturalists in the eighteenth century about the passenger pigeon, the lantern fly, the vampire bat, the Surinam bug, and other American prodigies, that one does not know how much to believe about the 'bird-eating" or "bird-hunting" spider of the New World, one variety of which was reported to entangle birds in a net. Bates and other reliable writers have doubtless investigated it, as Darwin settled the facts about the vampire. But there is at least one authentic case in India, where, a few years ago, a lady in the Nilgiri Hills found a mygale sucking the blood of a swallow which it had caught on its nest in her verandah. These spiders are not easily found when they are wanted, but they are common enough in suitable localities. I have been travelling when I have seen them; but it is a cherished purpose with me to catch the first one I can when I am at home, keep it in a suitable cage, and try it with birds, mice, lizards, frogs, and large insects. They live in holes in the ground, or in the floors of houses, or hide in dark places, by day, and go forth marauding by night. They have been caught in the United Provinces, lately North-Western Provinces, by setting out a lamp in the garden. Insects flocked round the lamp, and a spider came to catch the insects. The mygale—two of them to my knowledge—like certain scorpions, make a creaking noise with some organ about their bodies when they are irritated. Mr. Wood-Mason was investigating these stridulating organs at the time of his death.

A few particular spiders call for a word or two of special mention. Ant-spiders belong to the division which spring on their prey but they are shaped so ingeniously like ants that only a practised eye can see that the head and thorax are in one piece. Of course they have eight legs, to an ant's six. Water-spiders are of several species, which live on plants over water and dive freely. They may be found in any pool that has weeds growing rank in it. A black species, about a third of an inch long without the legs, is common in parts of India. The most remarkable species fastens its egg-bag, which is bell-shaped, open beneath, to the stem of a plant several inches under the water; and as the eggs require to be kept dry, and as the spider itself needs air to breathe, it contrives to carry bubble after bubble of air from the surface of the water down into its nest Some kinds of spider, of which the Italian tarantula is one, strengthen and protect their cocoons or egg-bags with an outer covering of minute sticks. Others cover their cocoons with clay. Such devices must not be looked for in webs: they will be found attached to plants and stones, often with the mother spider in possession. Mention will be made in the next chapter of the destruction of spiders by ichneumon wasps; but the fact is worth stating here that one of the giant mygale of South America is attacked by a wasp which leaves its egg in the body of the "mouse-weazel," to be hatched into a larva which will fatten on the tissues of the marauder and reduce it to a sickly caricature of its former ferocious self.

Nearly all the arachnids, that is spiders, scorpions, and mites, have two finger-like members at their mouths, called palpi. These are well seen in those groups of spiders which catch their prey without nets: they move nervously and incessantly, and are used to help in holding insects that are caught, and in turning them about that a soft part may be presented to the teeth. The palpi are an important part of the structure of this order of animals, and although one would not suspect it a scorpion's claws are simply the palpi modified and enormously enlarged. The genus phryna also has them very long and similar; while in mites they are modified in many curious ways.

A curious and very noticeable family of spider-like animals have the scientific name of Galeodes or Galeodidæ, and are sometimes called "tarantulas" by Europeans in India. They are long for their size and have hairy legs, and very large heads, which are separated from the body, as in insects; and they have a most formidable arrangement of long double-hooked falces or fangs. Some of the species grow to two inches, but one inch is the commonest length. They occur in many parts of India; but I found them swarming in two houses, one in Pachamba, of Bengal, and one in Ahmedabad. They came out after dark, and hurried about all over the floor and up the walls and furniture, making me nervous: but the people in the house paid no more heed to them than if they had been black ants; from which I infer that they do not use their fearful looking fangs viciously unless they are put into a tight place or held down. Somebody in Palestine has described their performances there exactly as I have seen them in the two places named. If kept in a box and fed, these creatures are said to be as voracious as scorpions.

All mites and ticks belong to this group of animals which are not insects, and, with a very few exceptions in the half-grown state, they may be distinguished by their having eight legs. They may also be distinguished from spiders; because they do not capture prey—they only fasten on quietly and tenaciously to large game. Fleas and lice are different: they are insects. The species and variety of mites and ticks are very extensive, and include the microscopic things which cause disagreeable skin diseases. They are found everywhere, under stones, on bark, on dead leaves, in dried fruit and meat, in cheese, in many putrid substances, in living tissues, and on the teeth. Thier life-history has been little studied, and it is not known whence they come. The larger kinds are parasitic on all sorts of animals, even on creatures that live in the sea. An unhappy spider is sometimes found with a tick nearly as large as itself sticking fast to it. The creatures called harvesters, harvestmen, or harvest-spiders, in England are mites. A species with some resemblance to these is common in India in the cold weather—black things the size of a cotton seed, white underneath, with long hair-like legs and an aromatic odour. They are often seen from twenty to a hundred massed together. They seek retired places during the day and come out at night; but unlike the "harvestmen" they move very slowly, and cannot run away. The name "daddy long legs," given in England to a fly, is applied in America to this genus of mites. The "harvest tick," improperly called a "harvest bug," is another thing altogether, like a dog-tick, and bites. The "harvest men," are harmless. Similarly, the cheese mite is different from the cheese hopper, which is the larva of a two-winged fly.

As far as I know, the life of the dog-tick has not been investigated. It seems to come out of the grass, but does not show itself till it is full-grown, when it fastens on a dog or a human being and swells itself with blood. At that point it is pulled off and killed, instead of being let alone and studied. An ascertained fact about some mites and ticks is that they look entirely different when they are growing and when they are adult, and live in different ways. A "blight" has been stopped in a field by cutting down a different crop in an adjoining field on which the mites had to live before they reached maturity and became the "blight." Some of the "blights" of tea and other crops are simply swarms of small mites. One of the largest, most harmless, and most beautiful mites is a creature the size of a little finger-nail, and like a piece of scarlet velvet, which some times makes its appearance after rain, and in a day or two as mysteriously disappears.

II.—Scorpions can be kept and watched quite easily, for they are unable to climb glass or porcelain, or to jump; so small ones are safe in a finger-glass or a vegetable dish, and the giants in a souptureen or a large lamp shade. They are voracious, and will eat living insects before one's eyes, letting one observe how they catch and sting them. I am not aware that the large kinds have been tried with a lizard, frog, or mouse; but if they will eat such game they can easily overpower it. They seize and eat one another fast enough. Scorpions are not of anything like as many kinds as spiders, and I am not sure that these are distinctively house species, although all species seem ready to establish themselves in any old house, and the small or common species do so by dozens or hundreds. Nevertheless there are a good many kinds of them, and it is said on some authority that the largest, or at all events the blackest and most hairy, are not those whose sting is the most painful. Some are quite small; some are slender, with long tails; others are thickset; some have very large claws, but scorpions cannot hurt with their claws. There is little variety in their colours. A few are perfectly black; but shades of brown, inclining sometimes to reddish or to blackish, include the multitude. I have seen a curiously coloured and curiously shaped one, of good size, in Allahabad; and there are several curious and large species from Burma in the Calcutta Museum. Different species have very different dispositions. One needs a good deal of poking to make it use its sting; another faces about and lashes out angrily with its sting, making a creaking noise all the time, if it be approached within a couple of feet.

Scorpions are rare in Calcutta and Bombay, and virtually unknown in Madras: they are fairly common in rocky country, and very common in black, "cotton," soil. But the part where there seems no limit to either their numbers or their size is the Central Provinces and some adjoining districts. I have killed more than a hundred in one house in a month, and I procured several specimens more than six inches long without much difficulty. I saw one which was a good size larger, but did not measure it. The effect of the sting of ordinary scorpions, two or three inches long, has been exaggerated. I have seen nearly a dozen Natives stung by them, and they did not make half the ado that a Native man or boy makes for a caning. Dogs also get over a sting on the nose or the foot with a few yelps. A drop of liquid ammonia let into the wound with a trifling incision, stops the pain like magic. When a scorpion is seen on a person's dress or hair, it should be knocked off quietly and smartly, with no scream or flourish for a scorpion runs swiftly, and if it gets under the dress will sting with a will.

Book scorpions are of the size of a mosquito, and are shaped like scorpions, but without tails. They are common in Calcutta among books and papers. Most of the species, however, conceal themselves in damp places out-of-doors. Whip scorpions have long, fine tails without a sting. They grow from half an inch to more than two inches long. What are popularly called water-scorpions are hemipterous insects, and will be noticed in the next chapter. Their book name is nepa.

III Centipedes and Millepedes or Myriapods are neither arachnids nor insects. Their snake-like bodies are divided into equal segments all the way from the head to the tail; and as a rule, centipedes have one pair of legs on each segment and millepedes have two pairs. Centipedes move about by night, are swift, and carnivorous. I believe the bite of a large one is more painful and causes more inflammation than the sting of a scorpion. They wander about, and climb much, and, if they were as common in houses as scorpions are, would be more dangerous. I have known one caught in the act of devouring the chrysalis of a large moth on the outer twigs of a tree. How long and far it searched for that food, no one can tell. The large ones eat freely in captivity, but they are so active that it is not safe to deal with them. Centipedes are of a good many kinds. The commonest large one in India grows to almost five inches in length: this is excluding the two feet like tails at the posterior extremity, which is the proper way to measure centipedes. This species is coloured in alternate bands of black and straw-colour. When an inch long it is all black; but there is another kind, more slender, which grows to three or four inches, and remains black. The largest centipede I ever saw was in a wood at Khandalla, on the Bhore Ghat. It was nearly or quite a foot long, and banded like the common one just mentioned. But there is a brick-red species, which grows to at least eight inches long and is not uncommon in Calcutta. I have seen it no where else. Whereas a scorpion stings with its tail, a centipede bites with two formidable poisoned fangs, which are dreadfully visible at its mouth. It has no power to hurt in its feet, as natives are fond of asserting that it has.

In contrast with centipedes, millepedes move about by day, go slowly, and live on vegetable matter only—never green leaves, I think, but decaying matter and perhaps moss and mould. They are gentle and harmless. And whereas centipedes are more or less flat, millepedes are cylindrical in form. When disturbed they coil themselves into a spiral. The two commonest species are a black one about four inches long, and as thick as a lead pencil, and a reddish brown one one inch long. Where they are common the latter kind march in solid masses of several hundred together. There is another kind like this little one, which is of a dull black and yellow colour.

Connected with this order there is a sort of centipede, an inch in length, with long hairlike legs, which seems to avoid the seacoast, but is common enough in houses up-country. It runs exceedingly fast; and if some of its legs be broken off they twitch for several seconds. This creature is greatly dreaded by the natives, who assert that if it as much as runs over a hand or foot, a line of irritating sores will rise up on the part. But in fact it has no teeth to bite with; and I have fingered it and crushed it on my skin, only to find it as innocuous as a house fly.

The Theatre.

VAUDEVILLE AT THE THEATRE ROYAL

THE Morosini and Maryx entertainment is still going strong at the Theatre Royal, and a very fairly full house testified its approval of the programme on Saturday last.

General alterations had been made in the programme, but the main features were the same as on former occasions.

Mdlle. Maryx's rendering of Chopin's Polonaise was rightly received with enthusiasm. She has a delicate and sympathetic touch, and speaking personally we would have willingly sacrificed one or two of the minor turns to have heard her again.

Miss Beryl Mackay's song which was the same as she sang the previous week, drew some applause, but we must confess that her's is not a turn that very greatly appeals to us.

Mr. Bert Flatt was, if possible, better than ever in his really clever sketch of the Musical Burglar. He introduced several new imitations, and much new gag and the mythical friend who is responsible for most of the entertaining reminiscences had changed his name from Jones to Casey. As Casey, however, he was no less productive of whimsical situations.

This sketch of Mr. Flatt's is a long way better than anything of its kind that we remember to have seen in Calcutta for many a long day, but his subsequent appearance as a nigger in "Down South" is somewhat of a falling off. In fact, speaking generally, there seemed to us to be a good deal too much nigger minstrel business in the show altogether, and we fancy that the majority of the audience were inclined to agree with us.

If we might venture to make a suggestion, in view of possible alterations in the programme, it would be, more Maryx, more Bert Flatt, and especially more Morosini Mdlle. Morosini is an exceptionally clever serio comic artiste and the enthusiastic reception accorded to her songs "Restez la," and "I really couldn't quite say no," was ample evidence that it would be sound policy to introduce her name on the programme with greater frequency. A little bird whispers to us that she dances as well as she sings: we hope that we shall be given a chance before long of satisfying ourselves that this is so.

Score love. Z turned up D Q.
Z's Hand.—S A, Kg, Kr, 3, 2; D A, Qn, 10, 5; C Kg 9, 4; H A.
Played at the Westminster Chess Club, 7th August 1869.

Notes.—10. The lead of the 8 of Hearts at first sight looks dangerous; but a moment's reflection will show that the play was sound. X. can count Z.'s hand. He knows that his cards are Q of D, S 2, and either two Clubs or the Q of H, and if he has not the Q of H, then he has two Clubs, one of which is Kg or Q. If he has not the Q of H he has two Clubs, and whatever is led he must get 5 by cards. It is true he would have got 5 by cards by leading the small Club, but then his partner might have had the Q instead of the Kg. The remainder of the hand is rather lucky than good.

TO MOTORISTS

THE BEST OILS FOR MOTOR CARS.

Wilburine for cylinders ... Rs. 6-8 per gallon Tin. | Valvoline for Bearings, etc. ... Rs. 5-0 per gallon Tin.

Extract from the "Autocar."

LUBRICATING OILS.—[2422]—It may be instructive to your numerous readers to have the experiences of a motor car experimentalist on the behaviour of lubricating oils for motor work. In the first onset I tried various sorts of oils, all of which left deposits of carbon and gumming matter in the cylinders and valves. These deposits are serious drawbacks, not only to the working of the pistons and valves, but also interfere with the proper sparking at the ignition plugs. I then tried the Valvoline Oil Co.'s oils, using "Wilburine" for the cylinders and "Valvoline" for the bearings, etc.; these being quite pure mineral oils, no deposits either of carbon or gumming matter were left. Every time the pistons, etc., have been examined they were quite bright, clean and well lubricated. The valves also keep in good condition and require very little regrinding. I have been quite free from sparking troubles since using the above lubricants. Any dust that alights on the working parts is easily wiped off, whereas with other oils dirt stuck fast through gumming.

Very much smaller quantities of these oils ("Wilburine" and "Valvoline") about one-third to one-quarter, are required, which more than balances the extra first cost. The wearing surfaces are besides in a magnificent condition. These advantages —viz., high-class lubrication, freedom from deposit in cylinders, gum in bearings, absence of sparking troubles, are too important to be neglected by any motorist.

There is a tendency to use various greases, instead of oils. Engineers have over and over again proved that greases give much greater frictional losses than oils; with motor car engines and bearings the lubricant that gives the least possible friction is the best.

I have referred to the advantages the motorist gets. I will mention another advantage these oils have to those whom the motorist passes, viz., the absence of the fried-fish-shop smell so often noted. Several persons have been very much struck by the absence of smell; even when the car has been standing for some time with the engines running, no trace of offensive odour has been apparent to the bystanders.

I mention these experiences, having no interest in the Valvoline Oil Co., that others may be benefited and save themselves trouble and their neighbours some annoyance.

ANOTHER MAN'S HORSES.

HOW best to dispose of horses and ponies when going home on leave is a question that confronts most of us from time to time during our sojourn in the Land of Regrets, and is perhaps the difficulty that looms largest when time is short and our departure cannot be postponed. Few of us contract an affection for the inanimate household gods of the bungalow, chummery or boarding house which causes pangs in parting from them, and our sole feeling in that regard is a careless curiosity concerning the price they are likely to fetch at the hands of the auctioneer or bazaar dealer who is the medium of their disposal. For any dog of reputable conduct it is always easy to find a temporary home, and other of the pets which some of us gather in the compound and verandahs are generally acceptable to friends as guests or as gifts: the difficulty usually begins and ends with the stable and whether to sell outright, lend, or "make a bundabast" with a friend to keep the animals.

Most of us have been in the position of possessing horses or ponies for which we know there are men only waiting to give us our price when orders for home shall oblige us to part temporarily or otherwise: but as a matter of course the horse or pony which is most readily saleable is the one we are least anxious to sell; the one for which we most desire to find a good home for the months of our absence with the certainty of meeting him again. There is often an animal for which we have no very special regard, which does his work in saddle or shafts tolerably and which only retains his place in the stable because we know he would go "for a song" if we proposed to get rid of him. The quadruped of that kind gives little concern when we are homeward bound, and we are glad enough to let him go for pretty much the figure the buyer thinks fit to put on him. He is not the animal Brown, Jones or Robinson would regard it as a compliment to be asked to keep: he is hardly worth paying a syce's tullub to use, and the most obliging of our friends eye him—and us—askance if we venture to suggest they might like to have him during our absence.

There are few stations in India which do not include in their population a man or two who is glad to keep a useful hack or polo pony for the homeward bound neighbour and who, moreover, is at least a good enough horse-master to be depended on: and probably the most satisfactory way of meeting the emergency is to find the quad a home in such a stable. To sell in haste is not unseldom to repent at leisure after leave is spent and we come out again: but with some experience in these matters we are come to the conclusion that if we resolve to sell at all it is preferable to let the animals go at a price below their value than to leave them with a friend with instructions to do the best he can in our interest: it is an unsatisfactory method to ourselves and, in our judgment, hardly fair to the friend. If we put a limit of price on the horse, he cannot feel justified in parting with it for less; and the men are few who care to take over another's cattle without any indication as to the price required and sell them at a figure that seems good to them. We are always prone to set a higher value on our property than others see their way to give it, and to leave a man's horses with "a free hand" as to their disposal, while it sounds flattering, is a fruitful source of misunderstanding.

Nor are we greatly in love with the system sometimes adopted of leaving horses with a friend and sharing the expense of keep during absence: or perhaps it were better to say, of taking over his horses from the homeward bound friend and accepting from him part of the cost of maintenance during his absence. To take over a horse on racing terms is a different thing altogether: we are now contemplating the responsibility which attaches to the hack, pigsticker, polo pony or trapper: and to divide the cost of maintenance, to some degree ties the hands of the man who has the horses in his stable. The responsibility, we grant, is not great; we live so much nearer our animals in this country than folks at home live near theirs, that every man is more or less a competent horsemaster after a year or two in India. The very architecture of the stable tempts constant visits and we pick up stable lore almost in spite of ourselves. Nevertheless we draw the line at division of expenses under such circumstances. It very generally implies taking over the syces with the horses, and a syce who has been allowed much of his own way with his pucca sahib does not willingly renounce his semi-independence in the service of the temporary master, who feels natural diffidence about treating the man as he would deal with an unsatisfactory servant of his own.

The owner who leaves his animals with a friend leaves them of course at his own risk; that is a point clearly understood on both sides; if there were any doubt on it, we should perhaps feel more qualms than we do about obliging the home-going acquaintance though as a measure of convenience to ourselves. But at the same time spare us the onus of stabling for eight months or a year the horse who has a "dickey" foreleg or is liable to some disorder of which only his owner fully knows how to steer clear. May we never again be "lauded" with such a horse as that, whose character personally unknown to us, we once took over from a friend leaving Calcutta for a few months. He acknowledged no syce but his own. Ignorant of the prejudices of that ill-conditioned country-bred, and confident in the good-will of our stable staff, we undertook charge of him, declining the proffered services of the syces. He was inveigled into a stall, but once there made it clear to all that in the stall he meant to stay, and there he did stay for four days until his own syce, who well knowing his charge's humours and wanting to retain his berth, appeared from the clouds, as it seemed. He was a good syce and he remained; and it needed no great perspicuity to understand that he had followed the horse and had merely been waiting in the background or the bazaar—until such time as the value of his services should be recognised.

Sporting Notes.

THE first day's racing of the Quetta Spring Meeting (reported fully in our Turf columns) took place in perfect weather. There was an excellent attendance in both enclosures, and the racing was as good as any ever seen in Quetta, the fields in all the races, except one, being above the average and the finishes closely contested. The course was in excellent order and the starting gate ensured even starts. The Welsh Regiment was "At Home" and entertained everyone with great hospitality while it's band added to the pleasures of the spectators.

The second day's racing proved equally successful. Fields were not quite so large, but the finishes were close and exciting. The favourites in five out of seven races justified the support they received, and the bookmakers did not have matters all their own way.

Our Bangalore correspondent writes:—Paperchasing has been begun here since the recent excellent rainfall, the honorary secretaryship being in the hands of Captain Adams of the 28th Light Cavalry, as was the case last year. Two meets have already taken place, the first attracting only a score or so of riders, but at the second chase between forty and fifty people rode the course which was about 4½ miles in length and finished near the Lal Bagh Gardens. On both occasions the obstacles were natural, and consisted to a large extent of rather trappy nullahs, at one of which Mrs. Georges, the wife of Colonel Georges, commanding the 28th Light Cavalry, and one of our keenest and best lady riders, came down on the opening day. No damage, however, was done, either to the fair rider or her mount, and she was to the fore as usual at the second meet. Captain Adams was first home at the opening meet, and Lieutenant Graham of the same regiment, the 28th Light Cavalry, won the second chase. Paperchases have now been arranged to take place on every Tuesday up to the end of July.

A Lion has committed suicide by starving himself in a Hamburg dealer's zoo. He pined for a beautiful lioness, his cage mate, that had been sold, and refused to take any food. A lamb was placed in the cage, but the lion ignored it.

From particulars recently published it appears that an orang-outang will average seven years of age in captivity, and a gibbon nine years. The mongoose, lemur, galogo, and slow lives are down at eleven, ten, and seven years. A Himalayan bear has been known to live over 33 years, and an Indian rhinoceros over 47 years in confinement.

A turtle which is declared to be the biggest of its kind ever seen has been caught on the New Jersey coast. Its weight is 1,087 pounds. The length of its shell is 10ft. 3in., while its width is 6ft. 7in. A dozen men can stand on its back with comfort. On all parts of its shell barnacles have fastened themselves in big bunches, and seaweed was growing over the monster's body. The turtle is what is known as a rubberback, and is seldom found outside of tropical waters. In September the big fellow will, in all probability, be presented to the New York Aquarium by its owner. Fishermen say that the turtle is at least 700 years old.

The Mysore Government Stud Farm, having already got a first-class Australian sire in Courage, the Government have now purchased through Messrs. Madden and Company, of Madras, half a dozen good thoroughbred Australian fillies to mate with him, and these young mares will arrive in Madras in the course of July. It will be interesting to see the result. The blood on both sides will be unexceptional, but the question as to whether thoroughbred stock will thrive in India and on Indian food is a moot point with many people. Results, of course, cannot be known for some years, as the fillies will not be old enough to breed from for the present—they were all foaled in 1902. But the move is a sign of the times, and of the energetic administration of Colonel Godfrey Jones, I.S.C., who is the present officer in charge of the farm.

The Bangalore racing season has begun well. Particulars of the first extra day will be found elsewhere.

Last year, a curious disease, an epidemic in fact, carried off many hundreds, possibly thousands, of dogs in Burma; and several well-known sportsmen lost many valuable and well-trained dogs. The disease hitherto has been unknown in Burma. One sportsman who has a house in the jungle thirty miles from Rangoon had half a dozen big dogs that he himself trained to follow the gun and to track game: they fell ill, and died, all except one, within ten days or a fortnight, all of them apparently suffering from fever says a Burma paper.

We are glad to hear that the Umballa executive find funds good enough to allow of the carrying out of some important improvements on the course and stands. We should be rejoiced to see a really good meeting or two there, and have no doubt such would go almost all the way to bringing Umballa up to the standard of 1898.

The Simla Meeting, which was concluded last Saturday, was in every way most successful, and thoroughly deserved was the praise bestowed on the efforts of Captain Jones Mortimer and his Stewards. The course generally is much improved, and there can be no doubt, that under somewhat drier conditions than obtained last week, it would have shown to still greater advantage. The sloppy state of the ground was the cause of Naseri coming down with Captain Mathew Lannowe in the Maiden Plate on the second day, but it is pleasing to observe that neither horse nor rider were damaged. It goes without saying that the attendance was of the "large and fashionable" order, all Simla, including their Excellencies Lord Ampthill and Lord Kitchener, being present, while visitors from mofussil stations and even from distant Calcutta mustered in some strength.

The feature of the first two days' racing was the extreme prominence of the Patiala stable, which carried off more than half the events of the two first days, Hard steering the winner in all six races. The Kour Sahib had but a single win on the third day—the Simla Cup—which he won with Parlour Maid, who carried off the Elysium Plate on the first day and the Merchants' Plate on the second, thereby fully establishing her claim to be the heroine of the meeting.

We are glad to see that Mr. S. McCall was riding in good form, and that the broken collar bone, which our Mussoorie Correspondent gave him, may be "carried forward" for some future occasion, which, we trust, may be far distant. He rode Major Berryman's Canary to victory in the Club Plate, and was first past the post on the same owner's Quilt in the Annandale Plate, besides riding a couple of seconds; it was not quite the picnic provided for him at Dinapore, but it was good enough. Captains Lannowe and Holden rode placed horses, and Mr. Barrow (from Calcutta) rode the Kour Sahib's Cadet into second place in the Club Plate; Cadet was favourite for this race, but 12st. 10lbs. was too much of a crusher, especially in view of the rather heavy going. Full reports of the second and third days' racing appear in the usual place.

It is interesting to learn that forty-six tigers were destroyed in Perak last year, and that the Government paid $200 for the destruction of a man-eater which was known to have killed a Malay, two Chinese, and two Sikhs. That tiger had a tooth for variety obviously, but the mixed diet does not seem to have agreed with him.

First entries for the Mussoorie Summer Races will be found in the usual place in to-day's paper. We remind our readers that final entries close on the 6th instant.

Messrs. Lyon and Lyon, gun-makers, have now on view, in their Chowringhee showrooms, a really splendid specimen of a leopard skin, the property of Rajah A. N. Roy, of Kasimbazaar, in the Berhampore district. The Rajah was lucky enough to bag the animal in full winter coat; it is beautifully marked and measures over 8 feet. The curing and dressing are first-class and reflect no end of credit on Messrs. Lyon and Lyon, who have carried out a rather novel idea in mounting—the Rajah's own, by the way—the skin having been padded and mounted on teakwood an arrangement which displays its beauty to the fullest advantage.

We draw attention to the advertisement of Messrs. Thacker and Company, Limited, Bombay; the Tibet literature and the map should be of special interest to most of our readers at the present moment.

There is some talk of legal proceedings in connection with the recent order of the Bombay Police Commissioner whereby two firms of bookmakers were compelled to close their business premises. We are of opinion that the act is sound enough, and that our friends the bookies would not succeed in upsetting the order. Meanwhile Messrs. Harding and Beattie continue to do business as may be seen from their advertisements in this paper.

For the Beresford Polo Tournament the following teams have entered:—The Viceroy's Staff, 15th Hussars, 12th Royal Lancers, Bengal, the Patalia team, a scratch local team and Lord Kitchener's Staff. The Patiala team consists of Colonel Chanda Singh, Bakshi Pretum Singh, Sirdar Thakora Singh and Major P. Young. The redoutable Colonel Heera Singh, we understand, has decided to play no more.

The Tollygunge Club announces Gymkhanas for the 11th and 22nd July.

Who wants a young leopard? If any such there be, we invite their attention to an advertisement appearing among our casual notifications.

Visitors to the Calcutta Zoological Gardens will have a chance now of seeing some ducks which, we believe we are right in saying, have never yet been shown in any gardens or public collection up to the present time. These are four magnificent specimens of the White-winged Wood Duck, Asarcarnis scutulata, which have been received from Mr. E. C. Stuart Baker, who has sent them down from Dibrugarh. Outside Dibrugarh itself these ducks are extremely rare, but are to be found practically throughout the Province of Assam. In Dibrugarh, or Lakkimpore as the district is called, these birds are, though still very rare, more commonly met with than elsewhere, haunting pools, bheels and small streams in the heart of the dense forests, with which so much of the district is covered. Very little is on record concerning this duck, but what little there is may be found in Stuart Baker's Notes in his series of articles on "Ducks and their Allies" in the Bombay Natural History Society's Journal.

The birds in the gardens consist of two drakes and two ducks, and it will be very interesting to see whether they will breed or not. They are very tame, thrive well in confinement, and there is no reason why they should not do so. May we suggest to the Zoo authorities that suitable boxes be put up for them in convenient places.

Our London Correspondent wires that the celebrated race-horse Ormonde died last week in California. Ridden by Fred Archer, he won the Derby in 1886, being followed home by The Bard and St. Mirin. The same year he won the St. Leger with Archer up, and the Two Thousand, in which race he was ridden by G. Barrett. Ormonde was regarded by some of the best judges of his day as one of the horses of the century, and certain it is that he was a real good horse in an extraordinarily good year. Old racegoers at home will remember how he beat Minting and the others, and to analyse that form is to admit its excellence. Minting was, no doubt, a wonderful horse, and so was The Bard, and yet Ormonde beat both easily! And he was perhaps the best of our big treble event winners, not even excepting Gladiateur. He was trained by John Porter, the worthy master of Kingsclere, and if this trainer has no other claims to distinction, his connection with this horse secures for him a high place in his profession. Ormonde was sold by the Duke of Westminster to the American millionaire, Mr. Macdonough, for £31,280, was taken to Argentina, brought back and finally reshipped to California where he has just ended his days. It will be remembered that in 1887, the Jubilee year of Her Majesty Queen Victoria, Ormonde figured in the celebration. His last race was for the Imperial Gold Cup at the Newmarket July Meeting, in which he started at the phenomenal odds of 100 to 3 on and won by a couple of lengths!

A book, which we learn, is shortly to be published by Messrs. Thacker, Spink and Company, is "Simla Past and Present," which has, by permission, been dedicated to Lord Curzon, and printed at the Government of India Central Press. The author, Mr. E. J. Buck, well known in journalistic circles in India, has, to some extent, based the book on articles on "Old Simla," which have already appeared in the columns of Indian papers: but quite half of the present volume is entirely new, and as a record of Simla it promises to be a valuable and lasting book of reference. Among other subjects the author deals with the origin and early history of Simla, the residences of the Viceroys and Commanders-in-Chief, and old houses and their owners; he traces the history of Annandale, the famous playground, and of the Amateur Dramatic Club, and has a highly interesting chapter on "Simla Society," as well as others on Native hill customs and traditions.

The book, besides possessing a map of the district, contains no less than fifty illustrations, many of which are reproductions from rare old Indian books, and indicate in a remarkable manner the recent growth and development of the summer seat of Government.

Now that "dog-fancying" has—as any Kennel Club catalogue will show—become a really fashionable pastime, the question of preparing dogs for show purposes by methods which are not recognised as legitimate has become one of widespread interest. That all sorts of tricks by which a dog's coat or its carriage is altered, and even its defects made to appear as "points," are regularly practised, has long been admitted; but though a few individual protests have been made, there has never been any thorough systematic attempt made to stamp out the abuse. An "open letter" to the Kennel Club which Mr. Vero Shaw, the Editor, publishes in the Stockkeeper, may have the effect of bringing some such serious movement into being. Mr. Shaw points out that while the club officially has been in the habit of initiating charges against exhibitors who are believed to be guilty of some trivial breach of the rules, such as showing an unregistered dog, there have been few, if any, cases of the Kennel Club having acted spontaneously in lodging objections against an owner for fraudulent practices, such as trimming or dyeing a dog's coat, cutting toe-nails back to the quick, or other forms of mutilation. He goes on to quote recent protests against such practices as staining the coats of Irish terriers and cutting their toe-nails back to such an extent as to cause pain; to the trimming which is known to be practised in the case of fox-terriers; and says that every member of the dog world—except, possibly, the Kennel Club authorities—knows "that coats are combed with a specially constructed metal comb to remove any superfluous growth of hair, that belladonna is applied to eyes, that coats are stained, that mouths are tampered with and that toe-nails are cut back." The position of many of the breeds in question would have been more favourable, Mr. Shaw contends, had the Kennel Club officially and collectively devoted as much attention to the question of trimming in the past as it has done to the subject of pedigrees, the registration of names, and the collection of fees.

The man "Bob" Sievier has lost his case against Sir James Duke, whereat all good sportmen will rejoice exceedingly, for there is not the slightest shadow of doubt that he is a rank blackguard and that his exposure was in every way necessary. "Onlooker" refers to the case in his letter this week: we give below some details of the later stages of the case. The plaintiff was put through a rare, searching cross-examination by the relentless Mr. Lawson Walton. In reference to the Monte Carlo incidents, Sievier said that he did not know Plowman, to whom an uncashed cheque for £500 was paid. He brought an action respecting it, and that the defence was that the cheque was obtained by the plaintiff and his wife from Horn when he was incapably drunk. Respecting his winnings from the Duke of Braganza, plaintiff was closely questioned as to one of the players, named Burns. A friend of the Duke's said that there were rumours that Burns was a card-sharper. He (plaintiff) had never heard that Burns was expelled from France for being mixed up with Turf frauds. He did not know he was the brother of the man who was undergoing imprisonment for burglary at Pierpont Morgan's house. He married Lady Mabel Bruce in September 1902. He was an undischarged bankrupt at the time and his wife knew it.

In the course of two years and-a-half every shilling of her money was lost? It was longer than that—three or four years.

Did you use some of it to start a betting business called Punch and Company—I did not.

Was such a business started?—I believe so.

In Bennett Street, St. James's?—Yes.

Were you not connected with that business? My cousin "Punch" Sievier was there and that took me to the office. I have betted there and later on I have betted for them.

The cross-examination was continued. His cousin borrowed £5,000 from Lady Mabel. She did not know with what object his cousin took offices in King's Row, Brighton. He advised them being taken. Ultimately it was arranged that he should draw cheques on the banking account for this business under the name of Sawyer, Punch and Company. He owed a man, named Nunn, £925. He (witness) got a promissory note from Lady Mabel for the amount.

The note was not paid and an action was brought?—Yes.

And you pleaded the Gaming Act?—We did.

Questioned as to Toddington Park, Bedfordshire, where he lived the life of a country gentleman, he said the rent was guaranteed by a lady whose name he would write down.

To Justice Grantham: He was not living there alone. Lady Mabel was not there. They were separated.

Plaintiff admitted being fined for assault on the proprietor of Scott's in Haymarket. He was also charged with assault at the Freemasons' tavern, and an assault at the Surbiton Club. Plaintiff was taken to the departure of a body of Volunteers from Dunstable to the South African War and the farewell dinner, at which he took the chair.

Did you not promise at that dinner to insure the life of every man who went out for £100 and pay money in case he was killed?—I believe I did, but it was an after-dinner speech, so don't ask me too much about it.

When the men came home he was not at the dinner of welcome, but he wrote what the Judge later called a letter full of flattery and flummery, and later on the town clerk wrote, reminding him of his promise, and saying claims had come in. He replied that the insurance companies had decided to only pay on the lives of men actually killed, or who had died of wounds. These particular men did not claim.

Mr. Walton: In what Company did you insure them?—I do not know; my Secretary would do it.

Did you insure them at all?—I left it to my Secretary.

Where is he?—Dead. (Laughter.)

The Judge: This is the most serious charge which has been made against you. Cannot you tell us what is the name of the insurance office?—No, my Lord, I cannot. I have a great many details to remember in this case. If Your Lordship will give intimation that you think this money is due, I will pay it myself to-day.

The Judge, with an unmistakeable gesture, turned to his papers and said no more.

In course of re-examination of Tuesday plaintiff said he had been on the whole a considerable loser by card-playing. He lost £6,000 last autumn at Liverpool to two members of the Raleigh Club.

For the defence, Mr. Walton, in a scornful speech, said they could only stand amazed at the unblushing effrontery of the plaintiff in going into the box and exposing himself to the ordeal of cross-examination. Regarding the Volunteers' insurance affair, Mr. Walton said that there was a ring of mockery about it that made one recoil with a feeling of disgust at the meanness and depravity of human nature.

Defendant in his evidence said he did not style the plaintiff a thief or a murderer, or make any allusion to Sceptre. Major Sellar accused him of having said "Sievier pulled Sceptre in the Derby."

What did you reply?—I said, howeve big a blackguard he was, I had always held the opinion that he would have given his ears to have won the Derby, and so have his name enrolled amongst honourable men.

Among the witnesses for the defence was Chief Inspector Drew, who said it was his duty to know the character and reputation of men frequenting West-end. There was a class of known men on the market who were under special observation. He had known Sievier since 1893 and his reputation was bad.

Sievier's Counsel, Mr. Banker, made an impassioned appeal to the jury not to send his client forth to the world convicted of the odious charges against him with the brand of Cain upon his brow.

The Judge summed up dead against Sievier. "His Counsel," said Justice Grantham, "has said that you ought to give him the verdict, if for no other reason for the sake of those who stand or fall by his success or failure. Whom do they include? The Australian wife who has divorced him. The young lady in this country to whom he was engaged for five years, and whom he jilted to marry Lady Mabel. Sievier or Lady Mabel herself, the whole of whose fortune had been dissipated during the few years of marriage, and who is now separated from him. Do you think she is sufficiently interested in him to care what our verdict is? Or does the learned counsel refer to the lady under whose protection the plaintiff lived in one of the shires?"

The jury, after an interval of about 15 minutes, found for the defendant, assessing damages, in case the plaintiff were technically entitled, to a verdict at a farthing.

A statement was afterwards made by Counsel on behalf of Major Sellar, to the effect that, had he known a tenth of what had transpired in the case, he would never have given the evidence he did, but would have withdrawn from Sievier's society.

The Press expresses surprise that Sievier should have brought an action, and applauds the verdict, but the Westminster Gazette finds fault with Judge Grantham's summing up and protests against the police giving evidence of suspicion in a civil case.

A very fine head of an ancient Irish elk was recently found in a bog in County Limerick. The horns, which were in an excellent state of preservation, measured 9 feet 8 inches from tip to tip, 22 inches across the palmes, and 10¾ inches round the beam above the brow antlers.

A Meeting of the Committee of the Nilgiri Game Association was held on the 24th ultimo, at the Collector's Office, Ootacamund. The Collector presided and there were also present Sir F. Price, Mr. Hardy, Mr. Colin Mackenzie, Mr. Pascoe, Captain Beadnell, Major Bagnall and Mr. Jackson, the Forest Officer, and Secretary of the Association.

Mr. Farr, an expert in fish culture from Ceylon, was also present and gave a short account of the experiences of the Ceylon Association in breeding trout. He told the members present that in 1899 the Association placed fry of the Salmo irridens or rainbow trout in their streams and that these fish in one year weighed up to ½lb. and that now they were up to 4lbs. One stream in which they had turned 200 fry had already had 500 taken out of it to stock other places. The Salmo irridens itself bred in one year and after two years the native born fish were breeding. There is now every reason for believing that the Association will be able to stock all the suitable streams in Ceylon. Very much more extended operations for hatching the fish are to be undertaken and the Ceylon Government are to be applied to for material help in obtaining the services of an expert. The Association then hope to be able to supply not only Ceylon but the whole of the hill stations in India and Burma. An idea of the progress made by the Ceylon trout could be obtained from the fact that the Association there could charge its members Rs. 50 a year for fishing, Rs. 15 a week, and Rs. 5 a day, while outsiders were made to pay about six times as much. They are able to do practically as they like in this matter as the streams are entirely in their own hands, being leased from Government. In the Nilgiris, however, this is very different, everything being under Government, and the local Association is unlikely to obtain any concessions until many years have passed and a vast amount of correspondence has been written. The principal food of the rainbow trout is the freshwater crab. The fish grow to a very large size, but a peculiarity is that as soon as they are full grown they disappear. They seem to take to the habits of salmon and go down to the sea.

The Committee has decided to ask Government for help and to pay half the expense of the expert the Ceylon Association is getting out, so that it may have the benefit of his experience in the Nilgiris. After August Major Bagnall is retiring from the service and has promised to go home and visit all the principal places where trout are bred and to learn all he can about fish culture. He then intends to return to the Nilgiris and will use his knowledge to help the Nilgiri Association in their breeding.

The only other matter of importance before the Meeting was a statement by Mr. Pascoe that the Game Laws were very badly enforced on these hills. He had seen three Tamils with guns and dogs himself a very short time ago carrying hares that they had killed.

The first edition of "The Indian Field Shikar Book" was exhausted in less than five weeks; the second impression is just ready and may be had of all book-sellers and at the office of this paper.

Athletic Notes.

WE remind our golfing readers that the Calcutta G. C. Bogey Competition runs on to the 30th instant.

Among the results of important cricket matches at home last week are the following:—Middlesex beat Somerset by an innings and 119 runs. Notts beat Surrey by nine wickets. Leicester beat London County by 106. The following matches were drawn:—Lancashire vs. Yorkshire, Essex vs. Kent, Sussex vs. Gloucestershire, Hampshire vs. Derbyshire, Warwickshire vs. Worcestershire.

At the annual track games of Yale and Princeton Universities on the 7th ultimo, McLanahan, of Yale, created a world's record in the pole vaulting event. He cleared 12 feet.

[The previous best performance was 11 feet 10½ inches by R. C. Clapp, New York A. C., at Chicago, 18th June 1898. The best performance in England is R. D. Dickenson's 11 feet 9 inches at Windermere in September 1891.]

Our Bangalore Correspondent writes:—The Essex Regiment held a boxing tournament here on the 26th and 27th instant, which was interesting enough, and although in the majority of bouts not much science was shown, the most unscientific fight of the evening was an improvement on the "fizzles" that have lately taken place in so-called professional fights for which heavy entrance fees are charged. However Bangalore has so far escaped being victimised in this manner, so that that is really "another story." There were competitions for novices amongst feather, light, middle and heavy weights, and the only fighter that showed class enough to be worthy of mention in these events is Private Capper, who in beating Private Gibbs in the final for the feather-weights, showed a good deal of cleverness. With more teaching he should make a good little man, for he is very hard and wiry.

There was also an open competition for feather-weights, besides three exhibition contests and two exhibition spars. The first of these events ended somewhat disappointingly. Privates McGilligan and Corless boxed keenly and evenly in the opening round of the final, and the latter seemed to be having all the best of it in the second round, when he suddenly held up his hand and gave the fight to his opponent. The exhibition contests produced three good bouts, Capper being again prominent when he boxed Barber. He fairly outlasted his opponent, getting the upper hand in the second round and knocking Barber out before the third had been long in progress. In the next bout Private Chivers and Lance-Corporal Prior fought fast and furiously through two rounds when Prior was badly punished on the ropes, and threw up the sponge. Two three-round exhibition spars brought the tournament to a close, the first being between two feather-weights, Privates Knowles and French, and the other between Sergeant Taylor of the Essex Regiment, and Gunner Chapman, R. H. A., who has just returned from Poona after winning the light-weight championship of India. In the first of these two Knowles was the better man, although his tactics were principally of the rushing order, but there was little to choose in the second spar, both men being very clever. Taylor had a longer reach, but Chapman was always with him, and the display was most interesting. Major Hamilton of the Carabiniers acted as referee throughout.

The Calcutta committee of the St. John's Ambulance Association are energetically endeavouring to push the Association in this city. They have formed several classes this hot weather, including one for the Calcutta European police which is now in progress. The committee propose offering bronze medals for competing teams in ambulance work, also for individual members who distinguish themselves in the examinations. Further, they intend next year to offer a trophy for a competition open to Volunteer corps throughout India. The annual competition for railway ambulance teams will again be held next year, it will be remembered that the first competition was held at Jubbulpore in April last. The committee have in view a proposal to form ambulance brigades whose duties would run very much on the lines of those existing at home.

Thus Mr. Maclaren in the course of a String of cricket "Don'ts."

Don't tell your fellows that the lefthander is making the ball turn a yard, and the ball that has sent you back would have beaten W. G. at his best: it is very disquieting to those who follow you in due order, unless you are given to talk a lot of nonsense.

When it is a near thing for time and you have no chance of winning, don't walk slowly to the wicket in the hope of preventing just that over which your opponents ought just to get in, but be ready to leave the dressing-room the moment a wicket falls.

When you are a taile-nder, with a good man as your partner, and runs are badly wanted, don't smite blindly as if you were the man to make up the deficit, when keeping your end up for your partner to do the scoring is the game.

Should the umpire give you out l.-b.-w., don't tell him the ball broke a yard and that he had better study the rules of the game; he will not forget you, and no one will blame him when he gives you out a second time, even if you were not out.

On taking the field with your men, don't expect every member of the side to be anticipating a practice catch from you, as you will probably hit your best bowler behind the ear; also when you have caught a man out, don't express your joy by trying to hit the sky with the ball, for I have seen it, before now, land on a person's head.

When you have missed a catch, and the sun may have bothered you, don't point at Old Sol for every one to thoroughly understand the reason why you have missed it.

When you are going for a catch, and your captain calls out some other player's name, don't continue your struggles or end your performance with knocking the other man head over heels, causing him to drop the ball.

When you have misfielded a hot drive, the ball going for four, don't look at the ground for five minutes, even though the ball did jump when you put your hands down.

When put on to bowl against the wind, don't say you are on at the wrong end.

When a really good field misses a chance off your bowling that you wouldn't have touched, don't wring your hands and ask the team how they are to expect you to take wickets.

Don't run your own quicker than your partner's runs, and don't think about your average at any part of the game.

Don't be annoyed if a man comes and stands silly point to you, and don't try to knock him over, or you are sure to be caught out somewhere on the off-side when the ruse will have succeeded.

Messrs. Rose and Company, the well-known publishers and importers of music, whose name is a household word in musical circles in Bombay, have, with their customary courtesy, sent us a copy of their latest publication—a pretty little ballad, the words of which, by "J. A. N.," have been set to tuneful music by Arthur Sullivan. The quaint and charming lines, which appeared originally in the Pioneer, are as melodious as their setting, from which they lose nothing save their title, which, we venture to think, might, with advantage, have been left as "The Ricksha and the Dandi" instead of going forth to the world under the somewhat prosaic cognomen The Proposal.

The song is uniform in appearance with "The Long Long Indian Day," "Babu Bungsho Jabberjee," "Lumsden's Horse" and others of the same series, and is got up in Messrs. Rose and Company's usual faultless style. The music, compass A to D, without being either pretentious or difficult, is sweet and tuneful, the refrain prettily catching, and, combined with the delicate and idyll-like effect of the little love-story, will no doubt make this addition to the list of Indian drawing-room ditties deservedly popular.

London Week by Week.

London, Friday, 13th May 1904.

EVENTS are moving fast in the East. Yesterday it was stated that the Japanese had retired from the railway which they had destroyed in pursuance of their endeavours to isolate Port Arthur, and that hasty repairs have enabled the Russians to run a train through with ammunition and stores. The statement is contradicted to-day, as everyone anticipated it would be.

But you are as well posted in the events of the war as we are, better probably because information from Petersburg and Paris is, no doubt, carefully sifted before Reuter passes it on. I fancy that with the general gratification in the triumphs of Japan is growing up a feeling of disappointment or chagrin over the helplessness—as it seems—of the Russians to stay the tide of battle. I don't mean that sympathy is veering round in favour of the Russ: but now we see the Bear, who for generations has been the champion bogie man, bug-bear, war cloud—what you will—of British statesmen, turn tail and run before the little Jap, we are inclined to look at one another and ask is this the Bear we have held in such respectful awe? Is this the animal we have been playing so delicately and with so careful a hand? The feeling is like that of a schoolboy who has been horribly frightened by a ghost which turns out to be his little brother masquerading in a sheet.

There be those who see cause of uneasiness in the success which now seems inevitable to Japan. Oust Russia from the icefree port of her desire in the East, say these, and ere long we shall find her seeking compensation for loss of Port Arthur, Dalny and Vladivostock in the Persian Gulf. Personally I venture to doubt it. If the Bear has any stomach for expansion of territory in the face of British, or other interests when she has done with the Jap, I for one shall be surprised: he will have to recover a great deal of lost prestige before he can venture upon the policy of bounce again. The late Ameer, Abdul Rahman, seems to have been one of the few men who really understood the art of bear management. I wonder what he would have said about the business on the Yalu and on the Liaotung Peninsula had he been alive to-day. Russia, by the way, is reported to have floated the much-needed loan, officially stated to be 300 million roubles, in France. Last week the Illustrated London News gave us a picture entitled "One Hundred Millions in Gold at a glance," or something like that—a photograph of the Czar's strong room with many bags in the foreground: the bags struck me as being a trifle misty, but I put their vagueness of outline and form down to defective photography. Now one is inclined to attribute their mistiness to something nearer a First Cause than a mere photographer. For why in the name of political economy borrow vast sums at five per cent. if there is a hundred millions sterling in gold lying to hand in the Treasury? Those submarines at Port Arthur and those millions in gold seem to belong to Shadowland.

Referring to the collapse of the "Congo Case," in my notes published in your issue of 21st April, I remarked that the whole affair was unfortunate, Captain Burrows' total failure to prove his case tending to whitewash the Congo State officials in the eyes of superficial critics. A summary of the judgment delivered by the Belgian Court of Appeal at Boma in the cases of Mons Caudron and Mr. Silvanus Jones has been polished, and the summary shows that had Captain Burrows put the saddle on the right horse, his case would have worn a very different complexion. Caudron, Chief Commercial Commissioner of the Société Anversoic du Commerce au Congo was convicted of directing five of his men to fire on natives because they had failed to furnish labour, and of conducting an armed expedition into specified districts and firing on the inhabitants thereby causing the death of a large number of natives." Caudron's sentence of twenty years was reduced by the Court to fifteen on the ground of "extenuating circumstances." Jones, convicted of ordering his men to fire on natives who had failed to bring in sufficient rubber whereby at least one woman was killed, had his sentence of ten years confirmed. Jones' offence strikes one as particularly monstrous, inasmuch as he was paid in ratio with the quantity of rubber he collected.

Worst, however, viewing the affair from the broad standpoint, are the facts blinked by those "extenuating circumstances." Caudron declared in his defence that the political reports sent by the local superior authorities of the region to the Local Government, would show that he, Caudron, had known and approved his "Expeditions:" and demanded that these reports should be put in evidence. The presiding judge made enquiries of the Local Government, and the Local Government "declared in principle that it did not think it possible to disclose these documents and that more the said documents contained nothing that could refer to the facts mentioned by the accused." The Court of Appeal did not press for their production on the ground that if the documents did confirm Caudron's statement they would not justify his actions, though they would furnish "extenuating circumstances." Ugly for the Congo State authorities, is it not?

The fulminations of the teetotal party against the Licensing Bill find feeble echo from the streets. The British workman—or idleman met in his half dozens at the foot of the Nelson Column on Saturday afternoon to hear speeches and pass resolutions in condemnation of a measure which protects a trade which is responsible for all the crime and most of the follies of the nation. The proceedings were of a lukewarm character and what crowd there was soon melted away to get a drink.

Sir Henry Stanley's death early on Tuesday morning took nobody by surprise. If his career leaves something to desire when examined in detail, more particularly in connection with his Emin Pasha expedition, this is not the time to recall blots. Reviewed as a whole his life was a big and stirring one which has made a lasting mark. He was the last of the Great African explorers in the exact sense of the word: subsequent travellers have done splendid and probably more valuable if less brilliant work: but to the pioneer always the palm. There is little scope for explorers of the grand type now: Sven Hedin has done for unknown Asia what Livingstone and his successors did for Africa, and future generations will not know what exploration means. Stanley expressed a wish that he might be buried near Livingstone, in Westminster Abbey. The funeral service will take place in the Abbey on Tuesday, but no announcement concerning the question of burial has yet been made: sepulture at Westminster is an honour not to be accorded without consideration.

One of the sensation of the week has been the arrest of Mr. Ernest Tirah Hooley for fraud: with him at Bow Street appeared Mr. Henry John Lowson whose name has been less before the public. Hooley, described as of "no ocupation" and Lawson were charged with conspiring to defraud a man named Payne, a Westminster publican. It is alleged that some thousands of pounds were obtained from Payne as investments in mining companies and others, at least one of which is said to have no existence. The defendants stand remanded on bail to the tune of £6,000 each.

Wednesday brought the end of the Sievier-Duke slander case which has furnished the clubs with an inexhaustable topic of conversation for days past. Everyone knew that it was coming on, of course, and the general feeling was one of surprise that the plaintiff should have had the courage to take Sir James Duke into Court. Those who happened to be present on Wednesday afternoon say that they never heard a more remorseless summing up than that of Mr. Justice Grantham, and you may find significant confirmation of this view in the question the judge put to the jury when they gave their verdict for Sir James Duke: "Supposing it were found that a technical verdict must be returned for the plaintiff at what sum would you assess the damages?" Whereto the foreman replied that the contemptuous farthing would meet the case. Judgment, however, was entered for the defendant, the only doubt being whether remarks made in a Club by a member of its committee, claiming freedom of speech as such, were "privileged:" and one can hardly challenge the view of the jury that such remarks on the character of a visitor are privileged. The revelations in Court go far to show how far impudence and a thick skin will carry the owner. Sievier actually got himself presented to the late Queen: the presentation was promptly cancelled when something about his antecedents became known, but presentation at Queen Victoria's Court when allowed to stand for nearly a year covers no end of sins: bankruptcy piled on bankruptcy, shady cardplay and deception of women for instance. Everybody knew the identity of the defunct "Punch" who ran a little betting office in Bennett Street, but I suppose that was not very severely regarded by people who knew nothing of Sievier's colonial career.

The man who gets most sympathy is Major Sellar, of the 4th Dragoon Guards, who lost £3,000 to Sievier and was by him pursued into the Raleigh Club where the remarks that gave rise to all the pother were made by Sir James Duke. Major Sellar's acquaintance with the man seems to have been of the "outside" sort familiar to most of us, and when Sievier brought his action, Major Sellar was too straight a man to refuse to appear for the plaintiff. The generosity of his attitude was misunderstood by the judge who, however, made full amends at the close of the case after Mr. Ricketts stated that had Major Sellar known one-tenth part of what he had learned from Sievier himself in the witness-box, he would never have given evidence and would have withdrawn. The moral of the whole scandal for most people dragged into it is "Be careful who you call friends."

There have been no new plays this week: wherefore wandered I into Daly's to enjoy Mr. Huntley Wright in the "Cingalee" again. I am fain to confess that the "Cingalee" does not wear so well as either of its predecessors, "San Toy" or the "Country Girl." Malapropism within bounds is amusing, but no ingenuity can maintain malapropism for a whole evening on "unexpected" lines: given a something to be said and after a while you can lay odds on the sort of blunder the Baboo will make. It is only the feeling of the old Anglo-Indian of course, but as I am writing for Anglo-India I don't mind saying that there is a feature of the play which does not please when one looks on dispassionately for the second time. One dislikes the spectacle of a Baboo pawing and caressing an English girl: the average playgoer does not see anything amiss in it, but it sets the Anglo-Indian's teeth on edge.

The Palace people did a smart piece of work this week. The "Eliminating trials" for the Gordon-Bennett motor race have, as you no doubt know, been conducted this week in the Isle of Man. On Wednesday the Palace executive obtained special biograph films of the races and had them on view in London the same evening. By the way, I see that Mr. John Hargreaves, Master of the Blackmore Vale Hounds, whose portrait and biography were given in Baily's Magazine a few months ago, is one of the successful competitors in these eliminating trials, and will be one of the representatives of England in the race itself.

Mrs. Alfred Lyttelton, wife of the Secretary for the Colonies, has written a play "dealing with London Society," and called Warp and Woof. It has been played at Hull and is to be produced at the Camden Theatre on 6th June by Mrs. Patrick Campbell. The Moody Manners English Opera season opens at Drury Lane on 21st with a curious innovation. Before the opera begins (7-45) a lecture will be given on the plot! The plan is a curious reflection on British disinclination to read anything: but surely anyone who will so far rearrange his day as to be in his seat at Drury Lane by 7-15 will rather be at the slender trouble of reading Faust, if abyssmal ignorance doesn't know the story. I admire the firm presence of mind of the sergeant of police at the Proctor's Theatre, New York, when a fire broke out there on 7th May. Having marched his men into the house, he waited till the manager had announced the outbreak and "on his own" shouted that the first person who should start a rush would be "clubbed into insensibility." The audience apparently preferred the remote chance of burning to the certainty of "clubbing" and walked out quietly within six minutes. The chief attraction at the Alhambra on Monday night was Mr. P. F. Warner's Australian team (among the audience): on Tuesday the eleven were present at an invitation performance at the Palace. At the Hippodrome the latest addition to the programme is Mdlle. Nadya: she is a "medium" thrown into the hypnotic state, she being blindfolded will play any piece set before her on the piano at the "suggestion" of her manager. It is long since an hypnotic seance caught on in London, and it will be interesting to see how the public appreciates this one. The Italian Exhibition was opened at Earl's Court on Wednesday, and the public rushed at it with gratifying unanimity, given plenty of bands, coloured lights and et ceteras, and any Earl's Court Exhibition will draw in fine weather.

Various Items: A curious case of death was investigated by the Hammersmith Coroner on Saturday. A woman died at the West London Hospital two days after undergoing a serious operation which involved the opening of the abdominal cavity: post mortem revealed that a pair of forceps had been left inside the unfortunate patient's body when the operation was finished. It was one of eight or ten pairs the surgeons used and was accidentally overlooked. The walls of Gloucester House are covered with the auctioneers' bills: the contents of the late Duke's come under the hammer on the 2nd June. The Lords' Committee have approved the removal of King's College Hospital to the selected site at Camberwell.

The Tailor and Cutter is a journal which finds no place on the club table I am sorry to say. It is a pity because a philosophical being like myself enjoys looking out on the world through new glasses, and the Tailor and Cutter takes a view peculiarly its own. I always appreciate its remarks on the painted clothes in Academy pictures and wonder when Sargent or Orchardson or Herkomer will be moved to call in a polite man from Poole's or Morgan's to help them in putting the clothes on their sitters. Look at Mr. Von Herkomer's picture of Mr. Chamberlain. On the right sleeve of the coat there is a suggestion of a deep cuff, but on the left none: the collar is too heavy and the lapel is bumpy. Mr. Chamberlain's trousers look as if they were made of inferior material worn so long that it had changed colour. Mr. Goscombe John, A.R.A., as depicted by Mr. Arthur Hacker, A.R.A., wears a coat which is a smudge of black and has no buttons. These are also missing from the vest, which overlaps one way at the top and another at the bottom. Sir William Emerson's coat, for which Mr. Shannon is responsible, has among many other faults no collar on the right side and the outside edge to the lapel is "like a dog's hind leg." But the severest criticisms are reserved for Mr. Seymour Lucas, R.A. In his portrait of Sir John Neilson Cuthbertson the leg-coverings (he refuses altogether to call them trousers) fill the critic with despair: from the tailor's point of view he has seen nothing so bad.

ONLOOKER.

Sir Pompey Brown: "Your mother seemed very much amused at that little story I told her last night about my dog cashie."

Dolly: "Yes; mother has laughed at that story ever since I can remember!"

WILD SHEEP AND BEAR IN KAMCHATKA.

PRINCE Demidoff's last book describes an expedition made, with his wife and Mr. Littledale to Kamchatka, (which spelling he informs us correctly represents the name of the peninsula). The attractions were ovis nivicola, caribou and bear; and in a minor degree the salmon fishing of which he had heard marvellous accounts. Kamchatka is not the easiest place in the world to reach, as it appears that two steamers only leave Vladivostok annually for Petropaulovsk, the port which is of necessity the sportsman's starting point. Though very little is known about the country Prince Demidoff succeeded in obtaining some useful information at St Petersburg: Professor Sliounine, who has spent three years in Kamchatka on Government mission, was able to speak with authority on the existence of the wild sheep, but he could only say that they were to be found on most of the hills north and south of Avatcha Bay and especially on the cliffs overlooking the sea: but that their habitat was vaguely defined and their haunts in the interior quite unknown. He also informed the author that bears were to be found in great numbers on all the hills, and that caribou were numerous. Most of his statements proved correct. After a not particularly comfortable journey across Siberia, the party reached Vladivostok just in time to catch the steamer on 14th June: they had been debating what they should do if they missed it, but the author seems to answer the question when he tells us that tigers are said to "swarm" in the Ussuri district (the hinterland of the port) and were reported to have given great trouble during the construction of the line. Eight days' steaming over rough seas and dense fogs saw the vessel safely in Avatcha bay, one of the finest harbours in the world, and having secured a native hunter, Prince Demidoff found himself obliged to abandon the idea of attacking the interior yet and turn his attention to the hills some 80 miles down the coast. The party tried to make the voyage in boats and were defeated by the weather: then by steamer and were beaten by defects of machinery: successive breakdowns of which obliged their return to Petropaulovsk under sail. And here a hint to the wealthy sportsman: "if one wishes to obtain sport along the coast of Kamchatka, where big horn are certainly more plentiful than in the interior, chartering a yacht in Japan or elsewhere is the sole chance of success." The author, however, did not wholly regret the failure to reach the sheep ground from the sea, the main object of the expedition from the first having been to shoot in the interior where the ovis had never yet, so far as was known, been hunted. Accordingly ponies having been procured, the party left Petropaulovsk for the fourth time on the 2nd July, hoping that by this time the passes would be sufficiently free from snow to let them cross. Orders were sent to Khutor for ponies and men to await them and they were rowed and towed up the Avatcha river to that hamlet which was to be their starting point proper. The author attributes the absence of game in the low-lying woods to the plague of mosquitoes; and from his account we should judge the mosquito of this region to be about four degrees worse than its relative in India. Salmon frequent this river in vast numbers, as many as 2,000 fish being taken from one trap in a day: they took a spoon readily but would not look at a fly.

Within a march or two of Ganal the party reached their shooting ground; and from Prince Demidoff's account of it we doubt whether the interior of Kamchatka will ever prove a popular resort for sportsmen. The snow lies until June and the ensuing weeks are the wettest season; mosquitoes were such a nuisance that it was at times impossible to use the glass and on at least one occasion they swarmed in such numbers on the barrels of the rifle that they hid the sights! Native shikaries are few and far between, but an old man quite deaf and nearly dumb was discovered who had been a hunter thirty years before and who guided the party to the ground he had known. Mr. Littledale killed three rams on the first day, but reported the sheep too tame to afford sport as they let him come within full view without taking alarm. Prince Demidoff killed three bears on his first day, and the number of these beasts quite bore out all reports: on one occasion he had in sight eight big ones, all wandering about on the snow fields apparently trying to escape the mosquitoes. The sheep in summer time appear to retreat to the loftiest hills and ridges, but when sighted were, as Mr. Littledale had found, absurdly easy to stalk. A very few days in the interior satisfied the party and they made their way back to Petropaulovsk to try on the coast ranges. On these the sheep are certainly more numerous than they are inland, owing no doubt to the comparative freedom from mosquitoes brought by the sea breezes; nevertheless the mosquitoes are sufficiently troublesome to make them restless; the author one day watched a number of young rams "trying to bury themselves as deep as they could in the snow, worried as they were by the merciless mosquitoes"! Were average wariness added to this restlessness stalking would be well nigh impossible. Prince Demidoff had better luck on the coast ranges, killing one day two fine heads of 39¼ and 38¼ inches, both of good girth: these, if we mistake not, are the best heads recorded of ovis nivicola. Altogether we are bound to say we are not fascinated with Kamchatka as a sporting ground; caribou antlers were picked up but the animals themselves were not seen; and while any man who prefers bear shooting to any other sport and is mosquito and rain proof may find this land an elysium, we are strongly of opinion that the stalker will find more to repay him with far less unpleasant surroundings, in more accessible regions.

A Shooting Trip to Kamchatka. By Prince Demidoff. Rowland Ward.

AUTO AND PHOTOGRAPHS.

BIRTHDAY books in this 20th century of ours are so numerous and of such a variety that one would think the age for the production of a novelty in this line had long since passed and that every idea had been thoroughly exhausted.

In Signatures and Photographs, however, we have an autograph book compiled in a style that is quite new to us. The title of the volume speaks for itself. The common-place birthday-book has usually a very small space allotted to each day of the year, and the person who is requested to inscribe his signature more often than otherwise discovers that his particular day is also the anniversary of not a few other fellow-creatures. He has in consequence to squeeze his name (especially if he be the possessor of a bold and flowing hand) into a corner that in the ordinary course of events would barely suffice to hold his initials. Moreover pages and pages of cognomens are frequently confusing to the collector. The latter may be endeavouring to bring to mind the original of perhaps P. Q. Smith. He, or shall we say she, will probably possess the signatures of a dozen Smiths with initials ranging from A. B. to W. X., and for the life of her she cannot bear in mind whether it was the handsome P. Q or that terror W. X. Smith who sent her that nice present on her last birthday, yet she is so anxious to return the compliment with a card. Now W. X.'s birthday happens to fall on 1st April and P. Q.'s on Valentine's Day. To send a card to W. X. on the 14th February might give him a wrong impression, and to send P. Q. a token of remembrance on April fool's day might lead to dire consequences. An appeal to "hubby darling" probably results in an expression to be found in no dictionary. But if she had a small photograph of either P. Q. or W. X. cut out of some old group and pasted in opposite the signature, how easy the problem would be of solution. In Signatures and Photographs this want is supplied. A full page is devoted to each of the 366 days of the year, for the luckless mortal whose anniversary falls on the 29th February is duly catered for, in fact he has a whole chain of "halli-sikka" rupees set apart for the reception of his likeness. Inscribers of their signus-manual are also invited to add any piece of poetry, wit or humour that may strike their fancies. There are 31 separate designs (uncoloured), one for each day of the month with special sketches for New Year's Day, Christmas, and the 9th of November, with spaces neatly worked in for the insertion of small photographs. Many people when facing the camera, have the misfortune to assume an air of self-consciousness. In a group, however, these persons often appear to great advantage, for some humorous remark made at the critical moment usually dispels the mask. Thus a few snips with a pair of scissors is the means of procuring an excellent likeness without the environment of less appreciated forms or details. Miniatures thus collected in conjunction with autographs are of far greater interest than a mere list of names. It affords a pleasant means also of bringing to mind old faces and old acquaintances scattered to all four corners of the globe. The designs are artistically arranged, and the quotations, proverbs, and adages accompanying each day of the year have been judiciously and appropriately chosen. To those in search of a novel birthday-book, we would recommend a glance at this handsomely compiled volume. It is to be had of Messrs. Phillips and Co., Poona.

A SIX DAYS' BIG GAME SHOOT.

27th February.—Halted at camp No 1. A cold, wet, raw, day. By 2 o'clock the clouds had broken up and we sallied forth to seek our prey. The country looked thoroughly washed and presented a refreshing spectacle. Moving through the jungle was distinctly damp work and one got a regular shower bath if the howdah bumped up against overhanging branches. Moved out northwards from camp and, after a time, circling east worked home. The shoot was unproductive and in some respects disappointing, for we saw no end of doe cheetal, but not a single stag.

28th February.—One of the buffaloes which was tied up last night was killed by a tiger. The shikaris who went to look the animal up, reported that when they got there at dawn it had only just been killed and they could distinctly hear the tread of some heavy wild animal in the dense jungle adjacent to the kill, which they concluded was the tiger moving quietly off to lie up for the day. This was gratifying news indeed. On receiving intimation of the kill the Raja had given necessary orders for the building of two machans and for the collection of a number of intelligent men to be posted in trees all round the jungle as stops. At about 11 A. M. we started off on our expedition. The scene of the occurrence lay some 3 miles north from camp, in an isolated but very dense boji, which was bounded north and east by a road, on the south by a stretch of open country, the grass having been burnt, and on the west by a stretch of, comparatively speaking, low, thin grass which stretched some 300 yards down to a river. The boji ran due east and west, at the eastern end it was narrow, then spreading out, it narrowed, almost to a point, at the western end. Its length was approximately three-quarters of a mile, its extreme breadth from about 400 to 500 yards. Heavy grass, thick pitu and other forms of undergrowth stretched throughout the boji, which was a haven par excellence for a tiger. Stops were placed at intervals along the southern and northern faces. Shortly after 12 noon the preparations for the beat were complete. N. was in a machan at the western extremity of the beat and guarded the stretch of country down to the river on one side and a small bit of the road on the other. I was on the second machan, some 250 yards away to N's left front, guarding the road which ran straight past my tree from east to west. It was a beautifully clear, bright day. The recent rain had laid the dust, had washed the country thoroughly, and had cooled the air, though the sun's rays, coming through the clear atmosphere, seemed stronger than they were before the wet weather. Prospects were bright. There was a paucity of elephants, it was true—four including that of an itinerant sportsman whom we picked up on our way to the beat and whom we induced to "fall in" with the line—but the capacity of the Raja for beating a jungle with scanty material at his disposal was unbounded and, therefore, though a few more kathis would have been acceptable, their presence was not considered indispensable. The beat commenced about 12-30 P.M. and the manner in which it was conducted and its final result can best be described in the form of a diary I wrote while in my machan:—

12-30 to 2-15 p.m.—The Raja, having seen us into our places, shouldered his rifle and walked down the road on the northern face of the boji to the eastern end where the elephants had been left. For an hour no sounds of an approaching line reached us. The tree on which I sat was an old, withered one, and every time a puff of wind came with any force it creaked in a very uncomfortable manner. The sun was distinctly hot and I was getting well roasted. A swarm of bees went over my head, with a great buzz, and I was distinctly glad to see the last of them. A family of seven sister birds kept up a perpetual squabble just in front of my machan. About 1-30 P.M. the sounds of a line of elephants approaching became unmistakable. Slowly, but surely they advanced. By 2 P.M. they were opposite my machan when all of a sudden, something yellow dashed out of the jungle to my left. It was quite exciting for the moment, but it was a cheetal and her fawn bounding gracefully along for all they were worth. By 2-15 P.M. the first beat was over, no tiger had appeared, but the Raja had just got a glimpse of him, and without wasting any time, took the line back for beat No 2.

2-15 to 3-15 p.m.—For some time there was dead silence. A cool, gentle breeze kept playing on my face, and was very refreshing. At 2-30 P.M. there were indications that the line was approaching. One of the men, placed as a stop to my left, seems to have lost his head at this point, for he left his post and squatted on the road for some time, like a monkey! This was really aggravating and I hoped the tiger would come out and devour him! After a few minutes this "dusky son of Erin" thought better of it and went back to a tree. Shortly after this I heard a rifle shot close to my rear and in a few moments a sportsman in a howdah, with a stag cheetal slung on behind, appeared under my tree, heading straight into the tiger beat! This was a bit too much, so I dropped a good thick twig with a "whack" on his hat and having attracted his attention we had a short palaver. Being a sensible man and a good sort he hurried off at right angles and was soon lost to view. In about a quarter of an hour the line got to the end of the beat. Just as it was emerging a considerable number of jungle fowl rose and went off in all directions with loud cries. But where was the tiger? once more had he succeeded in slipping through the line. The Raja was positive the tiger was in the beat, so our hopes were buoyed up.

3-15 to 4 p.m.—The third beat was not so long as Nos. 1 and 2. The line appears to have got on to the tiger much quicker and to have had him under better control. Close on 3-30 P.M. long and continued trumpeting broke forth from the line of elephants. The tiger was beginning to get annoyed at being hustled and began to make himself objectionable. He did not maul any elephants, but contented himself with frightening a small line elephant, which, by the way, carried the tiffin basket, and which the tiger could have reduced to mince meat in a very short time. There was a "kit" on the small elephant, looking after the tiffin basket. I do not suppose this gentleman ever spent so precarious a day in all his life and, doubtless, he was thoroughly glad when the whole show was over. The trumpeting was followed by dead silence and by 4 P.M. the third beat was over. The tiger had been driven to a point opposite my machan and had then broken back. He had apparently made up his mind not to leave the boji—we had resolved that he should. So back went the elephants for beat No. 4.

4 to 4-25 p.m.—A short and sweet beat, resulting in the death of the tiger. After the second beat the tiger, a very heavy, old male, appears to have got sluggish and to have only doubled back a short distance. The stops prevented him from breaking out to one side and he was evidently hungry and, therefore, loth to leave his kill. For close on four hours he had been kept on the move and this did not suit his feline majesty, so he was at last induced to break cover. The line got on him very quick and he was manœuvred with great skill. The boji in which he was, was on the opposite side of the road to that on which the tree I occupied, was. Just in front of my tree and obscuring about five yards of road, was a small piece of wood jungle. The line of elephants was going past my machan and I could see the Rajah in his howdah looking keenly ahead to try and catch a glimpse of the tiger, when I heard a twig break in the wood on my side of the road. This followed by another firm, heavy tread and in the next instant our friend walked out and stood under my tree. But for a small piece of grass which covered a portion of his right shoulder he was in the open. The afternoon sun fell on his beautiful coat and seemed to be reflected as off a cloth of gold. With his massive head erect, and in no way disturbed he stood, and looking back over his shoulder, watched, with perfect equanimity, the line of elephants moving past. All this was the work of a few seconds, but it was a grand sight and quite worth taking in. His length appeared enormous and his height and bulk gigantic. Another moment and the tiger would have walked quietly back into the boji from which he had been driven, but a ·450 express bullet crashed through the base of his skull and laid the jungle monarch low for ever. I gave him two more just behind his shoulder to make quite sure! He measured 9 feet 9 inches when he lay, but his build was exceptionally heavy—his head was enormous and one eye was completely gone. How this had happened it is impossible to say, but the injury was, palpably, of old standing. His forearms were very massive and with them he must have been able to deal terrific blows. When he was skined he was one mass of fat. He was a heavy beef eater, had lived to a patriarchal age and had evidently done himself proud all through life. It was 5 P.M. before we assembled hungry, thirsty and well sun burnt, and attacked the contents of that tiffin basket, and I noticed that the "kit" who had ridden on the small elephant all day was beaming with delight. We got home close on 7 P.M and so ended a very successful day. The patience and skill with which the Raja had manœuvred the tiger for four hours with an inadequate number of elephants was admirable. That night I sent the tiger skin into the station to be cured. It completely covered two ordinary charpoys, placed side by side!

29th February.—The last day of the shoot started soon after 10 A.M. and worked along some grass lands, terminating in a sâl forest to the west of the camp. These grass lands produced 2 stag cheetal. Close on noon we circled north and the Raja with a beautiful shot, bowled over a very good stag para, which was going for all it was worth through bushy country. A little later we struck the place where we had bombarded the pig on the 24th, but to-day not one was to be seen. In the afternoon jungle and peafowl afforded us good sport.

Close on 5 P.M. we had to give up and rode and drove home, getting in at about 7 P.M. and so ended as pleasant a shoot as it has been my good fortune to have been in.

"CALLING" JACKALS.

I THINK that few of your readers probably have ever heard of jackals being called out from jungles, and still fewer have ever seen it done, yet it is very commonly done by certain classes of natives. One caste in particular called "Koonghurs," a wandering tribe, partly shikaris and partly thieves, who move about Purneah, Dinajpur and the adjacent districts, living in small movable huts, made chiefly of reed mats, are adepts in thus calling out jackals which they hunt and kill with their dogs for food, and on which they, to a great extent, live when unfortunate enough to be unable to annex a meal from among the pigeons, fowls or pigs of any village they may be camping near. I will describe the method employed as witnessed by me in the Purneah District. The first time I ever heard of such a thing I was riding along a main road and observing a gipsy encampment enquired when and whence they had come, etc. A number of rather smart-looking dogs were hanging about, apparently a superior class of pariahs with probably a touch of Rampur in them, they stood up tall, erect and keen, and were I was told used by their masters for hunting jackals and foxes. In conversation the men explained that they called jackals out of any jungles that they might be near and then hunted them down. I hardly altogether believed this, and was of course anxious to see it done, and my camp being only two miles off they promised to come on there in the afternoon, so at about 4 P. M., four rough looking fellows, with four equally rascally looking dogs turned up, they knew nothing of the country thereabouts, but there were several patches of low shrubs and jungles about, and they felt sure of being able to find jackals in almost any of them, they selected at sight a long line of low bushes about twenty to thirty feet deep in front of which lay a ploughed field; one of them broke a large leafy branch off a bush and went out with it on to the field, and sat down about forty yards from the bushes. One of his companions with two of the dogs then went off and hid among the bushes about a hundred yards away and the other two with the other dogs similarly hid about the same distance off in the opposite direction. I sat down behind a tree beyond the field to watch proceedings. When all were in their places, the fellow in the field crouching low on the ground began imitating a jackal's cry, and switching his branch about soon raised a great dust round himself, he then began mixing up with the jackal's cry the bleating of a goat and its agonised cries when seized by some animal, then followed the snapping and snarling of an enraged jackal. In a few miniutes I saw a jackal cautiously appear from among the bushes in front and stand intently watching the field. The Koonghur by that time had raised such a cloud of dust about him that it was almost impossible to distinguish his figure at all, or to make out what was really there, the noise exactly resembled the cackling and snarling of two or three jackals savagely fighting among themselves and the piteous cries of a goat apparently being torn to pieces among them. In a short time a second jackal appeared at the edge of the bushes and the first comer becoming bolder and evidently desirous of sharing in the good things before him, trotted out a few paces, the second animal following him, they came on stealthily, stopping to reconnoitre every few paces and to assure themselves that there was really a feed in prospect, after each pause they trotted, on a bit quicker, the Koonghurs branch in the meantime worked on the ground quicker and quicker, the dust rapidly became thicker and the fiendish noises increased, when at length the two jackals unable to restrain themselves longer made a final rush in among the dust and on to the man, but though he laid about him strenuously it almost appeared to me that they must get hold of him: not so, still continuing his unearthly noises he kept them deceived and employed, knowing that assistance was at hand. Four savage hounds being loosed from either side were then approaching with long strides half way across the field, the men who had held them were also running up and their shouts first startled the jackals, who glancing round and at once taking in the situation quick as thought dashed off in different directions for dear life, the one followed by three of the dogs and the other by one alone. All the dogs were very fast, but the single animal was not able alone to follow all the jackals' sudden twists and turns though he was too fast for him on the straight, and he soon hopelessly lost him, but the three dogs together were too much for their quarry, each and all were as fast as he, while whichever way he jinked, one or the other of them was sure to be ready for him. After he had escaped their teeth over and over again one of them managed at last to get hold of his neck and drag him down, when in a moment the others joined in the jackal made a good fight for it but was soon finished off, when the men coming up the dogs were taken off. I paid the men well for the entertainment they had afforded me, and the following day in order to show me that there was no chance about the matter and that they could generally be sure of their game, they again came to the camp to show what they could do. I took them off about a mile to some long grass where I had in the morning shot a hare and they almost immediately called five jackals out of it, all of which quickly displayed the keenest interest possible in what might be going on in that cloud of dust in front of them, their shikari instincts were thoroughly aroused, but they could not entirely throw off all their usual natural suspicion and caution, and were not to be drawn at once. It was evidently past their belief that so toothsome a morsel as a goat was really to be so easily had for the asking, first one then another edged out, of course still a bit undecided, then one bolder than his fellows trotted out into the open and with his head well up took a long steady look at the dust cloud and then with his nose to the ground tried to sniff out what might be going on there. He then trotted on a few paces, the noise and dust increasing rapidly, his fellows behind gathered confidence, seeing him ahead and still safe, and all followed him, he, afraid lest they should arrive before him, made a hasty rush on, the rest followed, and in a moment they were all lost to sight in the dust cloud which seemed momentarily to increase, as did the horrible noises Suddenly all was changed, with savage yelps like a whirlwind four hounds were among them, and, scattered right and left, the frightened jackals made the best of their way out of the scrimmage, but the dogs quickly singled out one, and pursued and mobbed it and within three hundred yards had him down among them, a second in his consternation almost rushed into one of the men, who was running up, and who, deftly throwing his lathi, bowled him over when one or two blows on the head quieted him. Thus the Koonghur's pantry was well and easily supplied for at least two or three days. I afterwards discovered that Mr. T., a planter in the district, who was very skilful with all animals and who could imitate most of their calls, had learnt this trick of calling out jackals, and we got him one day to show his skill before a number of the station people. He was quite as expert as the Koonghurs, but he said it was often ticklish work to keep clear of the teeth of two or three jackals when they made a rush into the dust, as it was often difficult to see them at all then through the dust, and he had more than once had his clothes torn before his dogs got up. I should think it most ticklish work and should be very sorry to try it myself.

INDIAN BOTTOM FISHING.

BY

T. P. LUSCOMBE.

FOR ROHU (LABEO ROHITA) MIRGILL.
(LABEO CALBASU.)

Seasons.—Middle of February to end of April, commencement of the rains to middle or end of November, when greatest cold sets in.

Rod Required.—A 10 or 11 foot, moderately stiff Dacca ringall, (in one piece) with upright snake rings.

Reel.—According to water, and size of fish it holds, from 3 to 5 inches T P. L.'s "antifoul" (best), but any fairly free running check reel will do, with not less than 100 yards of best Indian tussur silk line, moderately fine, hand made, best.

Float —T. P. L.'s Tell-tale single.

Hooks.—T. P. L's short sprout or Limerick bend Rohu hooks, on double gut tied straight, with one grain of perforated shot working loose between two ridges of tying, four to six inches from the hook. I use three sizes of hooks according to size of fish expected. For Calbose and small fish, Hutchinson's No. 7, for medium sized fish, do. No. 10, and for large fish, do. No. 12. The No. 10 hook is the best general hook for this work.

Bait.—Worms if procurable scoured by keeping in sandy mud and grass or moss with a piece of turf, with the grass on over them and kept moist, lobworms best (dudia ketchwa.)

Paste made from the inside of a thick attah chupattee, rather under cooked, kneaded in water and mixed with a little rotten cheese rubbed down fine, the paste must be moderately soft, or the Rohu especially will not take it.

To ground bait for and catch these fish in a lake or tank, if possible find a place where there are some weeds extending out from the bank into the water, and try and get 5 to 6 feet of water, just outside the weeds, don t disturb the weeds at all, but have a man swim round outside, and fix a bamboo in the mud of the bottom, just in the centre of the place you intend baiting; he can then, by grasping the bamboo, dive down and thoroughly clean the bottom as far as he can reach, holding the bamboo in one hand while diving, and removing it when the bottom is cleaned. Now if you cannot easily reach the place from the shore, so as not to have more than 2 feet of line between your float and the end of your rod, rig a machan or platform (I use a set of planks and trestles with a broad plank, at the end to sit on and can thus reach out any distance requiredy so that you can sit on it on a low morah or chair, and your rod can easily reach out a foot or so beyond the weeds. Connect the machan with the shore by a plank or otherwise as most convenient. The whole should be reasonably firm, as its shaking in the water would frighten the fish, also use an old pair of tennis shoes, they are noiseless. Now, if the weeds extend far along the shore on both sides, clear them away from say 8 to 10 feet of the shore some 8 to 10 yards away from your machan, to allow of your landing a fish there easily.

If the bottom is soft "Paunk," i. e., rotten mud of any depth, it will be better to make a false bottom of fine gravel (kunker,) coarse sand or hard yellow clay, as the baits easily sink in the "Paunk," and are not readily seen or taken by fish when thus sunk; yellow clay itself (rungamuttee) has a great attraction for Rohu.

Care should also be taken in selecting the fishing place, not to have the sun shining directly in front, or it will try your eyes very much; it is best to have in a large lake or tank, two places, one for morning and one for evening, so as to have the sun behind you at all times, and ground bait them accordingly, say at 5 A.M. and 2 P.M. Now get two rests fitted, one in the water near the outer edge of the weeds with the bar a few inches above them, and as firm as possible, and one on the edge of your machan or a little inside the edge so that when the rod is laid down with the reel just inside the rest on the machan, the rod will be in a proper position to strike from, i. e. with the point within 3 inches of the surface of the water, and the butt just where your right hand can grasp it comfortably outside the reel and strike with one hand without moving from the seat. Now plumb the depth and fix the float so that the grain of shot can just rest on the bottom, and keep the float upright with about an inch of it out of water.

Ground bait.—The natives have many sorts of ground baits such as assafœtida, scented baits such as methie, ekungee, souf and kalajeera roasted, ground, and mixed with mud, and no doubt they do attract fish, but they take time to do it. What is wanted, is a ground bait that will act quickly, say in one night. What I use is as follows: Get a seer or two of mustard oil-cake (sursoo ka kul'ee) damp it, if with butter milk or sour milk so much the better, and let it stand; it will soften and commence to foment in from 24 to 48 hours according to the weather. When it has a smell like strong cheese, take some of it and mix with soft mud (chickna muttee) about one-third kullee to two-thirds mud and throw a lot of it exactly so that it may sink to the bottom on your fishing place (char): do this daily, morning and evening, if you intend continuing to fish the same place. The bait should be thrown in, about an hour before you intend fishing, and at the same time every day. All the above ground baits must be more or less supplemented by some feed for the fish, otherwise they will not remain long in one place, although hovering about in the immediate vicinity.

For feed I get two seers of (chawl ka kura) rice husk dust, and roast it in an old frying pan till it has a nice roasted smell (sonda) do not burn it; take 4 chittacks, of common rice and boil it down to kanjee, mix with the roast rice husk dust, and add a little rotten cheese or if not available, a little of the fomented kullee and make it soft. Just before you intend fishing (quarter of an hour or so) let your man keep throwing in small pieces of this bait exactly into your char, and during the time you are fishing occasionally throw in a piece; the fish feed on this greedily and it keeps them about. Even on the days you do not fish, you should feed the fish at the regular time with this bait: if you intend fishing with paste only, throw in some balls the size of a large marble too.

Now supposing you have thus ground baited for two or three days, go down either early in the morning, or at say 3 P.M. Bait your hooks nicely, if with worms, use two, one well up the shank of the hook to conceal it, and the other with the barb of the hook only passed through some half or three quarters of an inch of the centre of its body, throw well out and let the bait gradually sink down till about an inch or an inch and a quarter of the float protrudes above the surface, lay the rod on the rest not having more than 15 to 18 inches head line between tip of rod and float, and wait patiently. A small fish such as the little tengras, etc., which are so plentiful in many places, give a very sharp jerky bite, but the bite of a Carp is more deliberate, except that of the Calbose, which is a quick succession of sharp up and down nibbles, and if only these robbers are at work, small hooks and sharp striking in the middle of such nibbling, is the only plan to hook them; but a little experience soon teaches one to know almost to a certainty what fish is feeding. Thus the Mirgill (called up-country Nain or Nainee) takes two or three up and down strokes, when the float generally goes down, and it is during this downward pull that the strike must be given quick and sharp, but only with one hand, when if hooked keep all the strain you can safely on him, but by all means get him away as fast as possible from your char, and land him as quickly as possible. For this, a good large deep landing net is best, for if you let him kick and splash about in your char, he very soon frightens all the other fish away, and it may be hours before they will come in to feed again; this applies principally to the Calbose and Mirgill, for the Rohu and Cutlah are off like greased lightning out into the middle of the tank, the moment they feel the prick of the hook.

The Mirgill sends up every now and then a collection of small bubbles, the Calbose the same, only smaller, the Rohu three or four large bubbles, and the Cutlah one or two much larger; also if many fish are about, some will rise in or just outside the char, and if very calm and not too deep, the presence of large fish in the char, is shown by the curling round and round of the water, caused by the action of their large tails, when feeding with their mouths near the ground and tails elevated, at an angle of some thirty degrees. This is more especially the case when Cutlah come in to feed.

Absolute quiet is necessary, and especially avoid all loud talking, stamping on your machan or the ground close by; it will also be found best to let the rod lie quietly on its rests, as by holding it in the hand, the line is constantly shaking, when large fish will not take. In case the water is very clear, and the fish very shy, it is a good plan to bait just beyond the end of the machan, and sit back on it out of sight, having only a few inches of top of rod outside the machan. Be very particular to see that your line is quite clear and has no turns round the rod tip, for the rush of a large Rohu or Cutlah cannot be stopped suddenly, without a certain smash. The front piece of line should be cut off as it gets too much worn.

On the occasion of the Manchester Cup won by The Docker, a country yokel went running into a certain public-house in Bolton mostly frequented by loafers, shouting "The Docker's won, Allsopp up.'

Thinking he was about to stand treat—"All sup up" being a frequent form of invitation in this locality—the company promptly drained their glasses, and called for fresh drinks. On being requested to pay, the countryman seemed surprised, but eventually explained matters, amidst a shower of imprecations calculated to do him more harm than good.

INDIAN BOTTOM FISHING.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE INDIAN FIELD."

SIR,—I observed in The Indian Field, of the 19th May, an article by "Fleur de Lys" on Rohu fishing with most of which I disagree entirely. First of all the Rohu, especially in Calcutta, is not the principal fish taken in tanks, for in almost all tanks that I have fished in three mirgil will be taken to one Rohu. The arrangement of two limerick hooks back to back is, in my opinion, a very poor one, as from the very fact of these hooks lying flat on the bottom in striking they will come up with the points on each side, and in three out of four cases miss hooking the fish. One pairs of hooks is much better, as they are so arranged that on striking the lower hook turns point upwards in front and they are much more sure in hooking, and when fish are shy and only nibling, I only part the upper hook and am very often successful in hooking foul with the lower. Again the pair of hooks tied back to back make a great splash on striking and frighten every fish out of the char; this applies also to a treble hook hanging below which I have found practically useless Again Thomas is really no authority on tank angling, and never, I believe, caught a really good fish from a tank. I have landed Rohu 44lbs., Cutla 56lbs, Mirgil two of 29lbs. each in one day. Thomas says he has heard of Mirgil of 18lbs. But I hooked a Mirgil in Dalhousie Square tank at 7 A. M and played him till past 3 P. M., and he was seen by several persons who all said he was fully 6 feet long. He then got into a bed of Panaphuli and got off. Immediately after I hooked the 56lbs. Cutla and landed him after 7 P. M. I send you our latest list. See pages C. and D. for my directions for bottom fishing which I fancy will be found hard to beat. I may mention that General Kinloch was with me when I landed the two Mirgil of 29lbs. each. We get some big fish here in McPherson Lake. I landed ten Cutlas of 41lbs. each and many Rohu and Mirgil.

T. P. LUSCOMBE.

[We print the above letter as coming from a practical fisherman "Fleur de Lys" wrote, we imagine, from Mofussil rather than Calcutta experience. At the same time over twenty five years of Calcutta tank fishing inclines us to think that Mr. Luscombe's 3 to 1 estimate in favour of the Mirgil is much too liberal—"honours divided" would, in our experience, be considerably nearer the mark. We are inclined to agree with our correspondent that Thomas, as an authority on tank angling, must be accepted with caution; in our opinion a really practical, helpful and reliable treatise on the subject has yet to be written. The big fish T. P. L. talks of would seem almost small fry when put alongside some we have seen landed in Calcutta and others we have been lucky enough to enter to our own credit; but it is possible, indeed we believe it may be accepted as a general rule that Rohu, Cutla, Mirgil and Calbose no where in India run to such size as in the big tanks of Lower Bengal. In our Fishing Columns we reproduce Mr. Luscombe's notes on bottom fishing; some of our readers may profit by a perusal thereof.—ED.]

THE KING'S BILLIARD TABLE MANUFACTURERS.

The firm of Messrs. George Wright and Company of 158-164, Westminister Bridge Road, S.E., and Argyll Street, W., enjoy the great distinction of having been appointed billiard table manufacturers to His Majesty the King and H R.H. the Prince of Wales. To have received such high honour at the hands of Royalty was evidence that there must be something well worthy of inspection at Messrs. Wright and Company's showrooms, and a recent invitation to visit the establishment was therefore most readily accepted by our London representative. The scene there presented excelled all anticipations. In saloon after saloon hundreds of tables are stored, in readiness to be sent out to order at a moment's notice Built of oak, mahogany, walnut, teak, and a variety of other valuable woods, the designs are of the most varied and artistic character

Amongst the tables that came particularly under notice were some constructed in imitation of the superb massiveness of the furniture of the time of Charles II., and others in the quaint Queen Anne style, or the dainty marqueterie work of Louis XIV Some have the usual six or eight legs, some have 20, and here and there stood elaborately inlaid tables, designed with no fewer than 40 supports. Messrs Wright's resources are so extensive, moreover, that they are as well prepared to furnish a palace as to supply the requirements of men of small and moderate means. The price of their ordinary tables range from 40 guineas upwards, while they manufacture, at a very cheap figure, tables which can be converted in a few moments into dining-tables, and which are eminently suited to small residences. Of the latter class, the "Premier" combined billiard and dining-table is remarkable for the simplicity of its action, which is instantaneous, and remains perfectly true either for billiards or as a dining table.

Beyond this, Messrs. Wright and Company are the patentees of nearly all the latest improvements in connection with the game of billiards. Perhaps the most noteworthy and important speciality of the firm is the Royal "Excelsior" cushion, which can be fitted to any table, and is of immense advantage to any player when his ball happens to be close in under the cushion.

Their billiard-room accessories, again, are in the form of magnificent pieces of furniture of elegant design and wondrous ingenuity of construction, often carved with great taste—here is a beautiful cabinet, for instance, there a secretaire—worthy of any mansion which is convertible by a touch into a billiard or poolmarking board, and by one or two other touches reveal from concealment cue rests, pool trays, and wine cupboards. The firm make a feature of panelling, which, elegantly carved and finished, contains within its recesses marking boards, cue rests, etc., which can be made visible when in use, but close up within the panelling when required. Beautifully upholstered seats can also be made to appear at will from these same wonderful recesses The object of these ingenious contrivances is that a room so fitted can be converted into a billiard-room dining-room, music-room, or a luxurious appartment suited for any purpose. The panelling, with mantles and over-mantles, is made in all kinds of wood, and the carving executed to suit the individual tastes of patrons. At the time of this visit, one saloon was arranged in light oak, the furniture being that which gained two gold medals at the Paris Exhibition; and the fact that, in spite of the furniture having been exposed for six months beneath the hot glass roof of the exhibition, not a warp or crack was visible, testified to the excellence of the manufacture. The original exhibition table was, however, missing—it was purchased by the Sultan of Morocco. That the Royal appointment of Messrs. Wright and Company is no empty honor may be realized from the circumstance that the firm have, since the King's accession, completely refurnished the billiard-rooms at Buckingham Palace, Balmoral Castle, Windsor Castle and Sandringham.

H. McQuade's Training Stable is now in full swing, preparing many horses and ponies for the coming Mysore and Bangalore Meetings.

This stable is in great form, every meeting records for him four for five wins, this shows that he takes very great interest in the horses or ponies under his charge. His training stable is one of the largest and up-to-date business places in India. Owners of Race Horses should avail themselves of this opportunity as his charge is very moderate and the climate of Bangalore is the place to keep a horse of value.

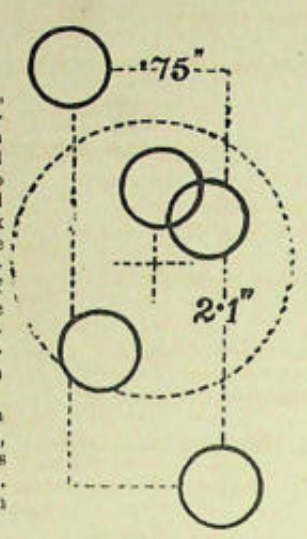
HIGH-POWER, LOW-PRESSURE.

"SPECIAL No. 2." ·450 Bore.

CORDITE RIFLES



FOR BIG GAME.

Average Velocity 2,171ft. per second.

Striking Energy Equals an 8-bore Firing Black Powder.

The Special No. 2 gives a pressure of about 13 tons compared with 16 to 18 of the original ·450 Cordite Cartridge, consequently there is a greater margin of safety, and the risk of jamming is reduced to a minimum.

"THE FIELD,"
9th May, 1903.

"Messrs. Joseph Lang & Son, Ld., have been very prompt in submitting for our notice a rifle which has been chambered and regulated for firing the new No. 2 nitro cartridge.....A thoroughly sound and well turned out piece of work .....maximum of strength and ease of extraction. Very high velocities.....most marvellous run of uniformity. In fact, it would be extremely difficult to find an instance where equally well authenticated experiments have shown such satisfactory readings."

Five shots at 100 yards with the new No. 2 Nitro Cartridge, fired in a LANG Rifle. Centres of shot holes fell within 2·1 in. the 75 in. Average deviation from point of mean impact ·7 in.

"THE FIELD." A fine piece of shooting.

"A target made at 100 yards, which is in our possession, contains a group of five shots with a distance of 1in. between the centres of the highest and lowest perforations and 1⅛ths of an inch between those on the extream right and left."

"EL OBEID."

"With reference to the ·450 Cordite Rifle you made me, I am very much pleased with it. It is extremely accurate, and, although heavier than the ordinary ·450 Express taking black powder, the difference in weight is not sufficient to prevent an ordinary European carrying it himself all day in a hot climate. For these reasons it is often the only rifle I take with me out shooting, and have killed with it Lion, Koodoo, Waterbuck, Hartebeest, etc."

"H. G. F. S., Captain."

BANGALORE RACES.

First Extra Day, 28th May 1904.

NOTHING could well have been more promising, or a better omen for the ensuing racing season than the first extra day's racing in Bangalore. Attendance was certainly only fair, but the Station is still comparatively empty, and even as it was the enclosure became moderately filled as the afternoon wore on. The Carabiniers were "At Home" to their friends, and the Band of the 64th Madras Pioneers enlivened the scene with an excellent selection of music.

Turning to the racing, fields were fair, and with the exception of the first race, which Derision won in a canter, finishes, were good. In the first three races favourites came home, although Chemisette did the fielders a good turn by beating Firebrand for a place in the second event. Then came a tremendous upset, Dolly, the outsider of the six starters for the All-Comers' Plate, getting away with a good lead, and winning by three-quarter of a length from Rosamond with all the heavily backed ones still further in the rear. A favourite in Bijli also went down in the last race But taken all in all, the afternoon's racing was a good start. Details:—

THE PALACE PLATE.—Rs. 150, of which the second pony will receive Rs. 25. For Arab ponies 14-1 and under. Weights—Handicap.—¼ mile.

Mr S W Webster's b a g Derision, 9st 3½lbs	Capt Randall	1
Lieut-Col J Desaraj Urs' b a h Delight, 10st	Hoyt	2
Major R M Bell's b a h Matussan, 7st 7lbs	Melsom	3
Mr Reuben's g a b Bisthan, 10st 7lbs ...	Meah Jan	0
Mr Jacob Sait's g a h Jacob, 6st 9lbs ...	Krishna	0

BETTING: 6 to 4 on Derision, 2 to 1 agst. Delight, 3 to 1 Matussan, 4 to 1 Bisthan and 6 to 1 Jacob.

Matussan jumped away and was leading quite two lengths at the bend for home, when the favourite came up on the outside and Delight also joined issue.

At the distance the three were about level, but Hoyt and Melsom both had to begin to ride, whilst Captain Randall had never moved. At the second enclosure Derision shot out and won in a canter by three lengths; a length between second and third. Time—1min. 30secs.

THE SCURRY.—Rs. 150, of which the second pony will receive Rs. 25. For ponies. Weight—Welter Handicap. 3 furlongs.

Mr A West's ch aus m Firebrand, 10st 4lbs	Koops	3
Major Logan-Home br aus m Nipcat, 10st	Hoyt	0

BETTING: Evens Dandenong, 6 to 4 agst. Firebrand, 2 to 1 Nipcat, and 6 to 1 Chemisette.

So soon as they could be seen in the straight it was apparent that the race was going to be a good one. Dandenong, however, always held his opponents safe at the finish and won without being pressed by a length. Chemisette travelling very fast at the finish beat Firebrand who was carrying a lot of place money by three-quarters of a length for second place. Time—41⅖secs.

THE BANGALORE PLATE.—Rs. 150, of which the second horse will receive Rs. 25. For horses. Weights—Handicap. ¼ mile.

Major F C Logan-Home's bk aus g Pope, 10st 3lbs	Capt Randall	0
Mess s. Pratt and Co.'s b aus g Comet, 6st 10lbs	Bennett	0

BETTING: 6 to 4 on Red Coral, 2 to 1 agst. Pope, 3 to 1 Leonidas, 6 to 1 each Best Shot and Comet.

Leonidas was first away with Pope next, and the other three in a cluster. This order was maintained until a quarter of a mile from home, when Red Coral came up on the outside. He swerved a bit, but soon assumed command and won by a length from Best Shot, the latter coming with a very wet sail at the finish.—Time, 1min. 22⅕secs.

THE ALL COMERS' PLATE.—Rs. 150, of which the second pony will receive Rs. 25. For ponies Weights—Handicap. ¼ mile.

Capt W. A. Ward's b aus m Dolly, 8st 10lbs	Meah Jan	1
Mr T G Strickland's b aus m Rosamond, 9st 12lbs	Maree	2

Mr R H Bullen's br eng h Referee, 10st 10lbs	Col Armstrong	0
Mr R Anketell Jones' b eng m Lady Superior, 7st	Melsom	0

BETTING: 6 to 4 agst. each Felicity and Lady Superior, 5 to 2 Rosamond, 5 to 1 each Swiveller and Referee, and 6 to 1 Dolly.

A shocking start, Dolly getting away at least three lengths ahead of everything. She came into the straight well in front with Felicity and Rosamond galloping hard to catch her. This they failed to do, although Rosamond made a good effort, and Dolly won by three quarters of a length; half a length between second and third. Time—56½secs.

THE POLO SCURRY.—Rs. 150, of which the second pony will receive Rs. 25. For bonâ fide Arab polo ponies 14-1 and under. Weights—Welter Handicap. 2½ furlongs.

Mr W Cottrel-Dormer's b a g Bonnie Lad, 9st	Koops	0
Major A C Hamilton's ch a h Jack Horner, 8st	Meah Jan	0

They came into view pretty well together, but at the distance the three place drew out. Bijli led until 50 yards from the post, when Delight wore the gray down and won by half a length: three-quarters of a length between second and third. Time—37⅕secs.

THE TURF.

KEMPTON PARK.

THE public know full well that they can rely upon getting good value for their money whenever Kempton Park is the Turfite's tryst, and the bill of fare arranged for their edification on the 6th instant, was substantial and satisfying. This being so, nothing but the hostility of the elements could militate against their attending in strong force at Sunbury, and though the early outlook was somewhat dubious, it was to a fairly full house that the entertainment was run through. The King, looking in robust health after his Irish tour, honoured the proceedings, arriving just as the horses were cantering to the post for the first race. His Majesty was attended by Lord Farquhar and Lord Marcus Beresford, and was met by Prince Christian, who had arrived earlier on the scene. Two or three sharp showers swept across the Thames Valley during the afternoon, but the weather was delightfully fine for the most part, and the atmosphere beautifully clear The race track, well covered with herbage, yielded splendid going, and racing was conducted under high pressure from start to finish.

Seventeen years have elapsed since bold Bendigo stirred the pulses of the admiring multitude by carrying the welter burden of 9st. 7lbs. to victory on the first anniversary of the Great Jubilee Stakes, and yet it was only a few days ago that the popular idol of the "eighties" passed away full of years and honours. Launched on a successful career from its inception, the big race has maintained its prestige with marvellous consistency, and its proud history was embellished with another bright page on the 7th instant when Ypsilanti once more triumphed over a high-class handicap field with 9st. 5lbs. in the saddle. Patrons of the great May meeting have from long usage come to regard sunny skies and summerlike environments as their prescriptive right, but, though the park was clad in a wealth of spring verdure, they were denied the genial influence of the sun's rays this afternoon, and the weather was dull and cheerless. The inability of His Majesty to again honour the proceedings with his presence occasioned much disappointment, and the threatening outlook in the morning was strongly reflected in the attendance, which was one of the smallest ever associated with the function, especially amongst the general public.

The Sportsman's Safety Stirrups.

Are the only successful "SAFETY" for men.

A "wrench" is due to the foot being momentarily held fast through the ordinary stirrup adhering to the boot or the stiffness of a safety bar. The Patent Stirrups, by means of revolving thimbles at A, B and C, entirely obviate this by giving instant release to the feet, and thus reduce the bad effects of a "fall" to a minimum.

delayed the start slightly, assisted by Burses and Salute, and it was 3-49 when the lot were despatched on level terms, the first to show in front being Kilglass (on the outside), from Surbiton (in the centre), L'Aiglon (on the inside), Cerisier, Salute, and St. Brendan, with Hazafi, Countermark Ypsilanti, Dean Swift, and Newsboy composing the middle division, and Bachelor's Button whipping in behind Fermoyle and Templemore About seven furlongs from home Countermark took up the running, with a slight lead of L'Aiglon, St. Brendan, Cerisier, and Ypsilanti, these being closely pursued by Newsboy and Dean Swift to the straight, where Countermark dropped back beaten, leaving L'Aiglon in front of Cerisier, Ypsilanti, General Cronje, Countermark, Fermoyle, and Templemore. So they ran till a quarter of a mile from home, when Ypsilanti ranged alongside L'Aiglon, and, drawing to the front below the distance, closely attended by Cerisier, General Cronje, and Fermoyle, made the remainder of the running and won cleverly by three-quarters of a length; a like distance separated the second and third. Fermoyle was fourth, L'Aiglon fifth, Templemore sixth, Bachelor's Button seventh, Countermark eighth, Salute ninth, Kilglass tenth, Hazafi eleventh, Dean Swift twelfth, Newsboy thirteenth, St. Brendan next, and Burses last. Time by Benson's chronograph, 2mins. 10⅘secs.

NEWMARKET MEETING

In comparison with the First Spring Meeting, the last of the series of early fixtures at headquarters is always unostentatious and quiet; and even the presence of the King failed to imbue the gathering on the 11th instant with much life. The Great Eastern Railway officials tell of a marked falling off in their race traffic as compared with the corresponding date a twelvemonths ago, and though the leading lights of the Turf world and the regular habitues of the Newmarket reunions attended in something like representative force in honour of His Majesty's visit, there was every noticeable decrease in the general muster. Nor was the reason far to seek. The spell of wet wintry weather, which set in at the end of last week, extended to the opening stage of the meeting. Weeping skies and a chilly atmosphere were the accompaniments to which the proceedings opened and the conditions were dismal and dreary in the extreme. The Heath had benefited very materially by the downpour, and the going was in capital order, whilst there was no lack of runners, and many of the races were closely contested.

The cold rain of the day before continued almost without cessation throughout the night, to the delight of trainers and agriculturists, but the skies cleared at dawn, and the morning broke in inimitable splendour. The air was delightfully invigorating, and it was a treat to stroll about the Heath in the brilliant sunshine and watch the early gallops. Things were unusually brisk on the Racecourse Side whither the King drove in an open carriage, accompanied by Lord Marcus Beresford shortly after nine o'clock, and when the time came for the resumption of sport His Majesty utilised the same conveyance, reaching the Rowley Mile Stand in time to witness the first race. The sale of Sir Edgar Vincent's horses in training did not draw a very large muster to Park Paddocks, nor did much business result. Having regard to the bright weather and the importance of the contest for the Newmarket Stakes, the attendance was disappointing. There were many more present in the rings and across the course, but they were a mere handful compared to the gathering on a Cesarewitch or Cambridgeshire day. Runners were numerous again, and the going was in grand order.

There was little delay before the lot were despatched to an excellent start, Amant, on the lower ground, being the first to sho well in front of John o'Gaunt, also on the left, Airlie, on the top ground, and Henry the First, to the Bushes, where St. Amant was in difficulties, and John o'Gaunt shortly afterwards headed him the pair coming on clear of Henry the First and Airlie. Descending Bushes Hill, John o'Gaunt drew out well in front o St. Amant, but he was challenged in the Dip by Henry the First and a slashing race home resulted in favour of Henry the First by a head; four lengths separated the second and third. Airlie, was fourth. Time by Benson's chronograph, 7mins 8⅖secs

The Second Spring Meeting has well maintained its reputation for quietness, for, in spite of the patronage of the King (who was again present throughout yesterday's proceedings), the attendance ruled very thin. The victory of the Royal colours in the Breeders' Stakes was received with a popular demostration of loyalty that was very gratifying to witness. But for the enthusiasm aroused by the success of Rosemarket the racing was devoid of fervent interest, and to-day's results are not likely to have much bearing on the future.

s. As the wicket played well on Monday, the Notts of 345 runs was not considered very formidable, but he forty minutes that remained for the M C C to bat, six kets fell for 45 runs. Most of the Notts men were either out form or out of luck for eight of them could only put-together runs between them. But the other three were more than qual to the occasion. Iremonger played a fine innings of 137 in three hours and three-quarters, although his first fifty runs were compiled laboriously in a little more than two hours; his second fifty took him only an hour. He played well all round the wicket, his hard driving being especially noticeable. A O Jones helped him to put up 73 for the first wicket, and Anthony 132 in a sixty-five minutes for the 5th, both men playing attractive cricket. The M. C. C. bowling appeared to be uncommonly weak, and Tarrant and Braund only took one wicket between them for 136 runs. When the M. C. C. went in, the bowling of Wass, in a not very good light, proved most effective, and of the six wickets which fell, he claimed four. Nor was there much improvement in the batting on the following morning, and it was not found necessary by the Notts captain to change his bowling. Towards the end of the innings C. C. T. Doll played useful cricket, but in the end the M. C. C. had a balance of 243 against them, with the result that they were made to follow on This time they did much better, and aided by showers which handicapped the bowlers even managed to save the innings defeat. Braund was seen in good form for the first time since his return from Australia; his 54 runs were made in an hour by very pretty and attractive cricket. Trott hit well, and T. A. D Bevington played the highest and best innings of the day. Soon after he had made his fifty, a ball from J. Gunn hit the shoulder of his bat and struck him in the face, compelling him to retire for some little time. He resumed his innings when the next wicket fell, and continued to play good cricket. He eventually carried his bat for an excellent 74, which had been put together in about an hour and a half, chiefly by good and sound driving; his hits included a 5 and ten 4's. Notts went in at about ten minutes past six to make 47 runs, and as at half-past six only twenty-seven of these had been made it was decided not to wait until the next morning to finish the match. Thanks chiefly to Day, the runs were hit off just before seven o'clock. In the course of the match Wass took twelve wickets for 135 runs.

Some people back winners regardless altogether of such things as books of form, and occasionally even without any sort of reason. Previous to the St. Leger of 1861 a couple of Edinburgh gentlemen were discussing their fancies for the forthcoming event.

"What do you think will win?" asked one of them.

"It is a certainty for——" began his companion, but ere the end of the sentence was reached a passing fish-girl shrilly cried out, "Caller Ou!"

The friends, taken aback by this unexpected answer to the query, looked at each other in silent astonishment.

"I shall have a bit on that," at length said the questioner.

Caller Ou's unexpected victory proved profitable to the cannie one, who presented the unwitting prophetess with a pair of gold earrings to commemorate an event as pecular as it was profitable.

At a dinner party, where a celebrated Jew was a guest, another guest rudely remarked that at a town abroad they killed all Jews and dogs. The host was horrified, but the Jew quietly remarked to the speaker, "What a good thing you and I do not live there."

THE M. C. C. AUSTRALIAN TEAM v. REST OF ENGLAND.—Played at Lord's on May 9, 10 and 11. Although the weather was very cold and cheerless, it was somewhat surprising that there was only a small crowd at Lord's when the game began. Without any doubt the absence of Fry and Ranjitsinhji made people feel that strong as was the Rest of England team, it was not representative. In the course of the afternoon the increase in the number of spectators was considerable. As there was every prospect of rain before many hours, both sides were anxious to win the toss, for the wicket looked very easy. The advantage of going in first fell to the tourists, who thereupon kept at the wickets for nearly the whole of the day. Their total of 300 was not large for the wicket, more especially as it was so bitterly cold that the fieldsmen and bowlers were greatly handicapped, but from the appearance of the sky in the evening it was long odds that rain would fall, and that the Rest of England would not be able to make anything like 300 runs. As usual, Warner and Hayward opened the innings, and for a time played the game which made them famous in Australia, although towards the end of his stay Warner hit out boldly. He had a piece of good fortune such as does not often fall to a batsman, for with his score at 13 he skied a ball on the offside in such a position that it fell into—and out of—the hands of Jessop, who ran from cover point. It was by no means a difficult catch but it was a very cold day. The first partnership produced 49, and then Tyldesley played a superb game, while Hayward kept steadily on his way. The two men were together until the total was 121, by which time the Rest of England team looked like having a long outing. Hayward was stumped off the wicket-keeper's pads after batting for about an hour and three-quarters. Tyldesley survived until the total was 160, when, having made 76 out of 132 while he was at the wicket he was beautifully caught and bowled. His innings was the best of the day. Foster Knight, and Braund all made useful scores, Braund being at the wickets for an hour for his 16. A very attractive innings was played by Hirst who did not use the pull quite as often as is customary with him; he was batting for an hour and a quarter for his 51. All the other members of the team except Rhodes made double figures, and when the innings ended there was only an hour's batting in store for the Rest of England. As he often did in Australia, Maclaren adopted an order of going in which was unexpected, and as things turned out this policy answered well, although before stumps were drawn two wickets had fallen for 27. Owing to heavy rain in the early part of the day it was decided at a quarter to three on Tuesday that it was impossible to play. Yesterday morning it looked as if the Rest of England team would have a very difficult task in avoiding defeat, for much rain had fallen and the light was very bad, so bad that it was not possible to resume the game until twenty minutes past twelve. But the unexpected happened; the wicket was soft and did not help the bowlers as much as had been anticipated, although run getting was more difficult than it was no Monday. The Rest of England made a most plucky and creditable fight, and it was a really fine performance to make as many as 247 runs under discouraging circumstances. For some time, with Quaife and Jackson together, the cricket was slow, and Rhodes was bowling for over half-an-hour without having a run scored off him. But at last things began to brighten up, and Jackson played a very pretty game, while Quaife stuck to his end pluckily enough. At 59 Quaife was caught at the wicket, and just as Perrin came in an adjournment was made on account of the bad light After lunch Jackson and Perrin both played most attractive cricket, and the Yorkshiremen's score of 41 was worth many an innings of a hundred, as it paved the way for Denton's fine innings. Perrin was seen at his very best, and perhaps his innings was the best seen during the match. At times he hit with great power, and his 65 included eleven 4's. Long before he was out all question of defeat had been put aside Jessop did nothing, but Denton played a delightful game, making his more than an hour. By the time that the innings came to an 57 runs in a little end it was but the manœuvre was not altogether successful, for half-past five o'clock. The M.C.C. went in again, and when the match ended was 87 runs on, with nine wickets in hand.

Here the members of the South London Harriers held an evening meeting, a long programme—considering that the start was not made until half-past six—including a five-mile handicap, specially arranged to enable Shrubb to do what he failed to accomplish at the S. L. H. spring fixture held recently at Kennington Oval Everything was in favour of fast times. The weather had undergone a pleasant change and there was hardly a breath of wind to interfere with the progress of the competitors, while Charley Perry had a path as well as it could be possibly made. Starts extending to 600 yards were allotted, and within hail of him Shrubb had runners like A

...lge, G. Pearce, F. S. Cleveley and G. Still to pull him out. ...Little South Londoner looked in excellent trim, but he ...st brought tears to the eyes of some of the critics when, ...g off at a smashing pace he covered his half in 2mins ...secs. and the mile in 4mins 31secs. The general idea was that ...ubb had again started too fast, and there was still a shaking of ...eads when the watch marked 9mins 30 ⅘secs for the two miles as against his 9 mins 47secs at the Oval. At three miles and a quarter Shrubb wiped out the record for this distance made by W. G. George, and at four miles and a quarter he again created new figures. Just previous the scratch man looked like having a bad time. He rolled a bit, and his face had a drawn and rather distressed look. Recovering, however, Shrubb ran his last mile inside 5mins, and, though finishing third in the handicap, he broke the tape in the marvellous time of 24mins 33⅘ sec. In this way he beat the previous best amateur time of 24mins 53⅘ secs. made by Sid Thomas in September, 1892, by 20 1-5 sec., and in addition, lowered the figures of 24mins. 40secs. which had stood to the credit of Jack White, the Gateshead clipper, who was present for 40 years and a day. It is only fair however, to say that White's time was made in a ten-mile race and on a rough track at Hackney Wick.

The remaining events furnished excellent sport. H. Phillips took the hurdles in fine style, and that promising youngster J. George, of St. John's College, Battersea supplemented his success of Saturday last at the Inter-College meeting by running away with the novices' half-mile scratch event. The final of the 300 was confined to the backmarkers, E. H. Montague, the scratch man, just failing to concede starts to H. Watson, 4 yards and L. J. de B. Reed, 3 yards. The chief officials were: Referee, C. Herbert; judges, Gordon C. Innes, J. J. Cooper and F. W. Firminger; timekeepers, J. E. Fowler-Dixon, F. Wyborn, and F. W. Parker; starter, W. Tripp.

100 Yards Members' Race for "Nicholson" Challenge Cup.—J. W. Morton, 1; H. Watson, 2; L. J. de B. Reed, 3; C. D Comrie, 0. Morton soon took the lead and won by a yard and a half; two yards between second and third. Time, 10⅘secs.

120 yards Hurdles Handicap.—Heat 1 G. H. Bolt, owed 2 yards, w.o. Heat 2: H. Phillips, owed 12 yards, 1: J. S. Wyllie, scratch, 2; H. O Whibley, owed 2, 0. Won easily. Time, 18⅕secs Heat 3: J. B. Densham, owed 10 yards, 1; S. W. Walden, scratch, 2. C. P. Jones, 2 yards start, 0. Won by three yards. Jones fell. Time, 19⅕secs. Final heat: H. Phillips, owed 12 yards, 1; J. B. Densham, owed 10, 2; G. H. Bolt, owed 2, 3. Phillips took his timber in fine style, and, gaining the lead at the half-distance, he won cleverly by eight yards; six between second and third. Time 18⅘secs.

Aldridge retired at two miles and three-quarters, at which stage the champion had run into fifth position. Coming right through, he failed to catch Hulford or Cleveley, the first-named winning by twenty yards, while the Highgate harrier finished about 10 yards in front of the scratch man. Hunting.

THE OOTACAMUND HUNT.

LAST Saturday (21st May) we had a bye day so that this week I have three days' hunting to chronicle. The most noteworthy feature of them all was the very large number of jacks that are now about the Downs; indeed, in one run on Thursday, no fewer than six jacks were in front of hounds, and it speaks very well for them that they behaved so well. The going has been excellent, for we have had plenty of rain.

On Saturday, the meet was at Rees' Corner at seven o'clock on a fine morning, with the country still damp after the previous rain. There was only a small field out, on account of the Horse Show We drew Porcupine Shola blank and then moved on down the Mujmad Valley. Half a mile below Melkaval Village a brace of jacks jumped up in front of hounds and the pack divided. The body of the pack soon marked their jack to ground in a nullah. We then went after the other hounds and found them at fault in Sambur Shola, where the master stopped them as it was getting late.

On Monday (23rd) there was a very large field present at the meet, which was at Sandy Nullah Tall Bar. There was a heavy dew, but the morning was beautifully fine. The master's first move was to Sawley's Course, on the top of which we found. The jacked jumped up close in front of hounds and ran down the long slope towards the Gold Mine Stream. This was very foolish of him, for hounds gained on him at every yard. Had he turned up the hill and thus gained some lead, we should have most likely had a very good run, for he was a fine dog jack, but as it was hounds rolled him over in the stream near Rawling's Nullah.

We then moved on to Briar Shola, where, unfortunately, a jungle sheep jumped up in front of hounds, and on such a scenting morning they were not able to resist his fragrance. He broke across into Bacon Wood and soon had hounds beat, most likely by lying down. We were not kept waiting long, however, for hounds soon opened on the line of a jack and were away at a good pace to Chemmund where the master had to stop them. We were just moving down into the Yemakal Valley where Captain Fife viewed a jack leaving the bottom of Chemmund. He had apparently been hunted before, for his tongue was out, so that in all probability hounds had changed on to him at Bacon Wood and that it was his line they had hunted to Chemmund. We had a very good run after this, over the rising ground to the Pykara River and back again to a nullah below Chemmund, where the jack went to ground While we were waiting for terriers to get him out he bolted again and we had another gallop of about half a mile towards Bacon Wood when he again went to ground, and this time we had to leave him. A large extent of the Yemakal Valley was then drawn and, with the exception of a very cold scent, which hounds marked prettily, but could make nothing of and along the banks of the Pykara River nothing more was done.

On Thursday (26th) a very large field turned out. The meet was at Golf Corner and it was a perfect cloudy hunting morning. The first draw was Jackal Shola and hounds were, scarcely in at the top before a brace of jacks broke at the bottom Hounds got away beautifully and swung round to the crossing at Rallywood. The hunted jack turned up through Rally Wood, while the other went over the hill towards Blue Gums. In Rallywood two more jacks and hounds divided, eight couple hunting a fresh one into Governor's Shola. The remaining 12 couple stuck to their jack across the Krurmund Road and down to the lower part of Monkey Shola. From this a brace more jacks went away, one across to Baikie and the other back to Jackal Shola. The pack, however, never left the line of their first jack who was now running short up and down Monkey Shola. Hounds hunted beautifully in the wood for quite a quarter of an hour and then forced the jack out at the bottom where he was viewed dead beat. He turned up the nullah below Swamyar Blue gums as if for Tiger Shola, but was killed before he got more than half way. This was a splendid run and hounds behaved beautifully, for during the run they had no fewer than six jacks in front of them, to say nothing of a large and bad tempered porcupine. Yet they never required the least assistance or steadying.

We then went on to Sheffield Corner in pursuit of the other eight couple who could still be heard hunting their jack in Governor's Shola, Having stopped them we turned through Blue Gums to Rawlings Nullah and drew down to the grass covert near Double Crossing it was evident that a jack had been about here as hounds feathered and as we rounded the corner into Blackmoor Value above Treble Crossing he jumped up into view. He only just managed to reach the stream, but turning up the northern slope of Bagman he gained on hounds. He gave us a very fine run and had he been able to hold his own long enough he would doubtless have gone by Farrier's Crossing and the Rifle Range to Bramly. But, with the leading hound snapping at him he sought refuge in Lascelles' Covert where he was killed.

Saturday (28th) was a bye day, the meet being at Rees Corner at 7 A.M. We first drew Porcupine Shola blank and then moved on down the Nunjenad Valley, of which we drew a wide extent without finding We a then drew Baikie, which is full of woodcutters, also blank. At last we found in Jackal Shola, and the jack as usual look us through Rallywood whence another was viewed away. The hunted jack turned, up the covert and across the Krurmund Road to Monkey Shola. Running through the upper part of this he came out on the Baikie side and it looked as if Baikie was his point Swinging to the right, however, he took us at a great pace past Swami Crossing and straight on down the Valley After passing Dharma Tope he turned across the stream and over the hill into Sambur Shola where we lost him. We then came home. It was a bright morning with a cold wind, and scent was probably never very good.

CRICKET CHAT.

I HEAR on what must be considered excellent authority, seeing that the player in question is responsible for the announcement, that Captain J. G Greig proceeds home on six months' leave from the 20th May, and will assist Hampshire in all that county's engagements during the latter half of June and fro the remainder of the season. his announcement following as it does a similar one regarding another well-known Anglo Indian player, Major R. M. Poore to wit, who will also assist Hampshire, will lend a peculiar interest in the doings of Hants this season among Indian cricketers. Should both those famous batsmen be in anything like their old form, the Southern County should be in no danger of holding the wooden spoon in the County Championship this year.

The most interesting match played last month was that between Ootacamund and Bangalore, at Ooty. Neither station was represented at full strength, the most prominent absentee being C. T. Studd, from the Ootacamund team, but on paper at all events Ooty seemed to have the stronger side. Among those who donned flannels being Major R. H. Dewing, A. B. Jackson, Captain B. E. A Manson, W. W. Phillips, Captain J. S. Unthank, the old Etonian, C. Morrison, R. Simpson, and Major Norie. The Bangalore team included Captain Standage. Captain Copeland, J. G. Tait, L. G. Moore, the Collector, J. T. Harris, Captain Peel, Major Hayes and last, but not least, that keen old cricketer, Sir J. Bourdillon. Ootacamund curiously enough made exactly the same total in both innings, viz., 182, but only had a lead of 9 runs on the result of the first innings. Mainly owing to a fine effort by Moore in the second innings who scored 55 not out, and a determined stand by C. S. Rolland who contributed 23, Bangalore was able to win by 24 runs. Besides these two batsmen, Major Hayes (35 and 5), Captain Standage (5 and 30), H. Hanson (37 and 33), and Captain Peel (20 and 14) all did well for Bangalore. The two crack Ooty batsmen, Dewing and Manson, did very little, and it was left to Major Norie (27 and 69), W. W. Phillips (43 and 6), A. B. Jackson (23 and 35), and C. Morrison (16 and 43 not out) to do the bulk of the scoring The bowling honours were fairly evenly divided, Standage 4 wickets for 26, Copeland 7 for 108, and Harris 5 for 119 doing best for Bangalore, and Unthank 6 for 47, and Morrison 9 for 118 for Ooty.

Indian cricketers and cricket lovers generally will be very pleased to read of E. H. D. Sewell's success in the opening match of the home first-class season between London County and Surrey. Playing for the former the erstwhile Madras crack made the highest score in the match and at the same time his first century in an important match. His 181 was described as a brilliant exhibition and worthy of a born hitter. The match was Sewell's match, as in addition to his big innings he took one wicket in Surrey's first innings—Strudwick's—brought off four catches which dismissed Able, Hayes, Moulder and Lockwood, and ran out Lees with a fine return from mid-off. In the following match against M. C. C. and Ground, also for London County, he was dismissed for a single and against Surrey in the return match in the first innings was dismissed for a blob.

The chief interest in cricket circles this week has been centered in the matches played at Simla between the Simla C. C. and the Black Watch, and Simla C. C. vs. Outstations. Until the scores in these matches were published, cricket lovers had no means of telling who were the most prominent players up at Simla this season. A glance at the names, however, shows that there is a galaxy of talent available this year, and, fully represented, the Simla C. C. could place a team in the field that would be capable of rendering a good account of itself against any team in the country. Simla, of course, always has a call on the services of a number of well-known players, but this season the number is unusually large, and in no year since 1899 has the summer headquarters of the Government of India been able to point to such a strong team as that available this year Some of those who played in the two matches under notice are only up the hill for a few weeks but among those who are available for the whole cricket season are Brigadier-General J. Spens, the well-known Hampshire cricketer; Captain H. C. Laverton, of the Black Watch, who has established a great reputation as an all round player in Northern Indian; E L French, the old Marlburian, who has even now very few equals and no superiors among European wicket-keepers, and is still able to score freely; Captain F. G. Smallwood, who has made his mark as a dashing batsman in Bengal cricket Captain M E McConaghey, the old Cliftonian, who it will be remembered played a very fine innings against the Authentics a couple of seasons ago; S. M. Robinson, Lahore's crack bowler and a batsman of no mean ability; H. Hensman, an old Simla cricketer, who is as good as ever as a bowler; Captain A. B Stokes who rendered fine service to the club last season; Major W. C. Walton, a well-known Bombay player, and Major Todd, R. Mitchell, J. S. Evans, and two or three others whose name are not so familiar to me

The match with the Black Watch resulted in a draw, Simla having 21 runs to make to win in the fourth innings with only one wicket to fall. The scoring was not high, the Black Watch's second innings of 160 being the highest in the match, but three batsman made over 50 runs, viz. Mitchell and McConaghey for Simla who contributed 62 in the second innings, and 52 in the first innings respectively, and Bulloch who knocked up 55 in the first innings of the Black Watch Several other batsman also did well, notably S. M Robinson who contributed 33 and 38 to the Simla totals, and C. B. Henderson, the old Rugbeian, who made 35 for the Black Watch in the second innings. The bowling was fairly strong on both sides, Murray, Laverton and Baillie-Hamilton all having good figures for the Black Watch, and Robinson and Hendsman doing well for Simla

The match between Simla and the Outstations was to the great regret of all concerned, spoiled on the first day by heavy hail and rain, only 147 runs being made for the loss of six wickets by the Outstations, who batted first, when stumps had to be drawn. Both teams were very strong on paper, the Outstations eleven, including H. Etlinger, the old Marlburian and Incogniti player, C H. Lyon the Derbyshire county man, C. C. Marshall of the Calcutta C. C., E. O. Lewin, an old Wykehamist, whose first appearance it was in an important match, R. A. Bulloch, of the Black Watch, C. R. B. Henderson, also of that regiment, and R. M. Logan and F. E. W. Venning two young players who have only recently arrived in India and bowled with marked effect in Simla's first innings. The Outstations totalled 2 5, there being five individual scores of over 20. Chief batting honours were carried off by H. Etlinger, the old Marlburian, who contributed 65. Lyon failed Marshall (30), Bulloch (25), Henderson (26 not out) and Stuart (26) were all more or less seen to a vantage. Laverton who captured five wickets, and Robinson, who took three, did best with the ball for Simla. So far there had been nothing remarkable about play, but a most startling collapse followed on Simla going in to bat. Logan and Venning, the two young players referred to above, bowled with the most remarkable success, dismissing the strong Simla eleven for 68, and sharing the wickets. I have not their analysis by me but their debut was sufficiently promising, considering the calibre of the Simla team to warrant the hope that two really good new bowlers have been introduced into Indian cricket. It is best to pass a veil over Simla's first innings, and turn to their performance in the follow—on, where, at least one batsman achieved a feat that deserves special mention. Captain F. G. Smallwood, the player in question, who had made 14 not out in the first innings, proved that good bowling has no terrors for him by knocking up 101 not out out of 206 for three wickets. His success was the chief feature of the match, and I may remark en passant that his three-figure contribution is the first in hill station matches this season. E. L. French (33), Captain A. B. Stokes (24 not out), and R. Mitchell (20) gave him valuable assistance.

STATISTICIAN.

Conductor of tram car, to Irishman seated with a pipe in his mouth: "No moking.'
Irishman: "I'm not smoking."
Conductor: "But you've a pipe in your mouth."
Irishman: "Sure, an' I've boots on my fate, but I'm not walking."

A young fop entered a tram car the other day, accompanied by a dog, which attracted a good deal of friendly interest from an Irishman who inquired what breed the dog was. The owner looked the questioner insolently up and down, and then replied, with a drawl: "It's a cross between an ape and an Irishman."
"Faith, then, we're both related to it," was the response.

THE CALCUTTA LEAGUE.

DALHOUSIE vs. 64TH R. F. A.—On the Dalhousie ground, last Saturday, the home team won by a goal to nil. The first-half was very even and no score was registered. On crossing over play ruled very fast, but opportunities were lost by both sides owing to wild shooting. Then Dalhousie began to press, and just before time Dalling scored. Teams:—

DALHOUSIE.—Street, goal; Stimson and Templeton, backs; Phelps, Butler and Evans, half-backs; Barber, Holly, Dalling, Bonar and Prise, forwards.

64TH R. F. A.—Harrison goal; Quin and Prince, backs; Lockins, Osborne and Donnelly, half-backs; Woods, Hingley, Wratten, Nicols and Douglas, forwards.

WEST RIDINGS vs. Y. M. C. A.—This match was played on the Calcutta ground on the 28th ultimo. The Regimental team winning by twoigoals to nil. They began by attacking and Woodings, getting away, put through. On resuming Woodings once more got possession and put on a second goal. After half-time the Young Men played up, and offering a strong defence kept the military out. Teams:—

WEST RIDINGS.—Roberts, goal; Evans and Stevens, backs; Morris, Turner and Reeves half-backs; Hulyer, Drew, Grady (captain), Woodings and Wilson, forwards.

Y. M. C. A.—Kay, goal; Stokes and Collingwood, backs; Wilson, Pooler and Schaumbergh, half-backs; Vears, Redmond Scully, Gordon and McPhee, forwards.

Referee.—Mr. R. Remfry.

HOWRAH vs. CALCUTTA.—Calcutta went across the river last Saturday, and defeated the Howrah team by three goals to one. The game was very even in the first-half. Howrah drew first blood, Karr putting through for the homesters On changing ends, the visitors got going and a good run terminated in a goal, V. Cooper scoring. Fast play followed, then the Calcutta forwards once more got away and Macdonald put through. Almost immediately afterwards H. Sherman scored the third point. The home team played hard, but were unable to reduce the visitors' lead, the game ending as stated. Teams:—

CALCUTTA.—Dodds, goal; Wickham and Badham, backs; Maunder, Crawford and Ansell, half-backs; H. Sherman, MacDonald, V. Cooper, V. Sherman and Stewart, forwards.

HOWRAH.—O'Neil, goal; Curtis and MacFaen, backs; Harrison, Wood and Morrow, half-backs; Echlin, Linton, Smith, Hart and Karr, forwards.

Referee.—Mr. Percy Willder.

RANGERS' vs. KING'S OWN REGT.—There was a large gathering on the Rangers ground on Saturday to witness the match between the above teams. The Regiment went away at the start and Carman opened the scoring. The Rangers attacked in turn and Rosser equalised. Exchanges were even for a space, then the King's Own obtained another goal and were leading at the interval. Crossing over the Rangers had the best of the opening play, and several shots were sent in—without success, however. Then the soldiers got going, and the home team were forced to defend till time was called, West scoring the third point just before the whistle was blown. Teams:—

KING'S OWN.—Hill, goal; Mellor and Cottam, backs; Leonard, Ennis and Quinn half-backs; Jones, Diggle, West, Carman and Whittingham, forwards.

RANGERS.—Behrend, goal; Margrett and Anderson, backs; Boiland, Lees and Russell, half-backs; Walker, McCready, Rosser, Affleck and Vears, forwards.

Referee.—Mr. J. Greig.

CALCUTTA vs. WEST RIDINGS.—Playing on their own ground on the 31st ultimo, the Calcutta team beat the Regiment from Dum-Dum by a goal to nil after a good game. The first stage was evenly contested but neither team could score, and the interval arrived with a blank sheet. On resuming the homesters began to show up, and the brothers Sherman were seen to advantage. Calcutta continued to press, and V. Sherman scored after several unsuccessful shots. The soldiers made great efforts but were unable to get level. Teams:—

CALCUTTA.—Dodds, goal; Badham and Wickham, backs; Maunder, Crawford, and Ansell, half-backs; H. Sherman, McDonald, V. Cooper, V. Sherman and Steward, forwards.

WEST RIDINGS.—Roberts, goal; Stevens and Evans, backs; Morris Turner, and Reeves, half-backs; Hollier, Drew, Grady, Woodings and Wilson, forwards.

Referee.—Mr. P. Willder.

Y. M. C. A. vs DALHOUSIE.—The match between these teams was played on the Association ground, the home team being victorious by a goal to nil The visitors were not at full strength, while the Young Men had a good team out. They pressed during most of the play, Wilson heading into the net during the first half. The Dalhousie team were awarded two penalty kicks, but could not turn them to advantage. Teams:

Y. M. C. A.—Key goal; Stokes and Lamb, backs; Collingwood, Pooler and Schaumberg half-backs; Vears, Scully Redmond, Gordon and Wilson, forwards.

DALHOUSIE.—Street, goal; Robinson and Williamson, backs; Phelps, Butler and Evens, half-backs; Barber, Roebottom, Dalling, Bonar and Wheeler, forwards.

Referee.—Corporal Guest King's Own.

CIVIL AND MILITARY LEAGUE.

Last Saturday three matches in the above League were played. On the Measurers' ground St Joseph's beat the home team by four goals to one. The Hornets met La Martinière on the school ground, the school team winning by two goals to one. The match between the Seebpur College and 79th R G. A. was played at Hastings and resulted in a draw of a goal each. On Monday, the 30th ultimo, the Hornets beat St. Joseph's by a goal to nil, but the latter had the best of matters all though, and were unfortunate in not finding the net. The 79th R G. A. defeated the B.-N. Railway, by 2 goals to nil.

Two matches were played on the 31st ultimo. At Sibpur the Engineering College beat La Martinière by three goals to nil and the game between the B.-N. Railway and Caledonians resulted in a win for the Railway by a goal to nil.

FOOTBALL NOTES.

THE first half of the Y. M. C. A. vs. 64th R. A. match on Tuesday, the 24th, was very uninteresting. The Gunners, Wratten and Nicholl especially, missed scoring once or twice, but otherwise there was nothing worthy of note. In the second half the Young Men played up better, Pooler and Lamb being conspicuous, and eventually scored a goal, the only one of the match. This result was a great surprise to most people as the R. A. had previously been improving daily, but although the Young Men had strengthened their team the Gunners had no excuse and should have put more energy and less temper into their play. The sympathy of those of the civilian spectators who supported the R. A. was alienated by the behaviour of some of their number during the latter stages of the game. Corby had to be ordered off the field for foul play and, assisted by several friends, passed the remainder of the time in abusing the Referee. I trust the I. F. A., to whom the matter has been reported, will issue such a warning as will act as a deterrent to any future would-be abusers of Referees, and that this unpleasant feature of local football will be put a stop to as soon as possible.

Calcutta spectators have no excuse whatever for not being supporters of the amateur as opposed to the professional game, and the sooner some of them realise that no one having any connection with the game is paid, that they themselves have not paid any entrance fee to see the game, and that they are not watching a professional match surrounded by a betting crowd, the better it will be for everyone concerned.

On Wednesday Dalhousie were at home to the West Ridings, the latter showing up much better than in their previous two matches. There was an absence of the usual excessive short passing in front of goal and the shooting, especially in the second half, was above the average Play in the first half was fairly even, but Dalhousie missed the services of Stimson and Stewart. Phelps worked hard as usual and Prise and Bonar put in some good individual runs, but the latter player was rather selfish at times. The Ridings' wing men were in excellent form also Stevens and Evans, and Roberts gave a good exhibition of goal keeping. It was a good game free from any foul play, and the Dum-Dum men deserved their victory.

The other Wednesday match, Rangers vs. Howrah, did not call for much enthusiasm. Howrah scored the first goal, but Rosser soon equalised, and the Rangers then getting into their stride romped in easy winners by three to one. Woods at centre forward made one or two good runs for Howrah, but was not well supported, and Behrend was seldom troubled. Rosser played his usual game for the Rangers, and is the most valuable acquisition the club have made since Lees joined their ranks.

Up to last Saturday the opinion of many people appears to have been that luck had had a lot to do with the success of the Rangers, but those who were fortunate enough to witness the good fight they put up against the King's Own will now be prepared to contradict this. A gamer contest has not been seen this season, and this in spite of very trying atmospheric conditions. Both sides were at full strength and played for all they were worth almost up to the call of time. From the start excitement was intense, the King's Own pressed for a few minutes, but the ball was soon transferred to the other end and the Rangers, playing with much dash, raised the hopes of their supporters by the determination of their attack. Both sides missed scoring in the first few minutes through obvious nervousness and a good deal of feeling was aroused by some bad the part of Quin. It would be a pity for such a strong to be lost to the team, but although Calcutta Referees ng suffering lot, I am afraid the King's Own left half will g pursue his course unchecked unless he modifies his ds.

o resume comments on the game. The first goal was scored Carman to the great delight of the men from the Fort who mustered in force behind the Rangers' goal line. The home team then bombarded the soldiers' goal and two corners were conceded, but neither resulted in a goal. At last after a good piece of combined play on the part of the Rangers' forwards, a miskick by Miller gave Rosser a chance and amid great enthusiasm he equalised with a fine shot. The second goal scored by the visitors came as a surprise to everyone, especilly Behrend, and it was unfortunate for the Rangers that the scores were not equal at half time. The second half of the game was just as fast and furious as the first, and though the King's Own added another goal to their score, the Rangers had most of the game to within ten minutes of time, their forwards and halves, Rosser and Lees especially, showing tip-top form. Altogether the civilian club have reason to congratulate themselves on their exhibition and their next two games, against the West Ridings and Calcutta, should be well worth watching. The King's Own forwards were, as usual, very good, and one was glad to notice, much less frequently "off side" than in their previous matches.

The Calcutta-Howrah match was well attended and although the ground was somewhat heavy, especially at one end, a very good game resulted. The home team had slightly the better of the first half and when half-time was called were leading by one to nil. On crossing over the Calcutta team pulled themselves together and, after a little play in midfield, scored three goals in rapid succession. V. Cooper who had changed places with Macdonald kept the forward line well together and some excellent combination was displayed. Wickham who had displaced Baker at back played up well and the halves showed considerable improvement in form. For Howrah Woods was as good as usual, and the team as a whole seem to be improving as the season advances.

The West Ridings had on the whole little difficulty in disposing of the Y. M. C. A. by 2 to 0. They played the same team as against Dalhousie, and it was largely owing to the goal-keeping of Kay and the defence of Pooler that they did not make a greater score. The game, which was watched by very few spectators, was not of an interesting description, as, although the Young Men played a fairly strong defence, they could make no ow against the Dum-Dum back division.

The Dalhousie-64th R. A. match was very even. Both s had several opportunities of scoring, but the shooting was e tic and the goal-keepers had an easy time. The general o ion seemed to be that the game would end in a draw, but D ing scored just before time, so Dalhousie secured their two p ts. Templeton, Phelps and Bonar for Dalhousie and P ce, Osborne and Wratten for the R. A. were most conspicuous.

Games in the Civil and Military League drag on without any great show of popular interest. The 79th R. A. still keep their leading position, but Seebpur have shown that they are almost as good and the men from the Fort will need to play up for all they are worth to eventually come out top. The Hornets managed to beat St. Joseph's, but it was more by luck than superior play. The form displayed by the other teams is very variable.

Up to Saturday, the 28th instant, the various teams in the Calcutta Football League stood as follows:—

Name of Club.	Matches played.	Won.	Lost.	Drawn.	Points.	Goals. For.	Goals. Against.
King's Own ..	4	4	0	0	8	10	1

And in the Civil and Military League, up to the 30th instant:—

Since writing the above "notes" I hear that the Commanding Officer of the Barrackpore B. A. has taken stringent measures to prevent any recurrence of the trouble, as far as his men are concerned, which spoilt the latter part of the 64th R. A.—Y. M. C. A. match on the 24th instant. These measures are very severe and although perhaps a little stronger than the occasion warranted, the thanks of the Indian Football Association and Calcutta Football League authorities are due to Major Knox for taking such a firm stand in favor of fair play.

BOGEY COMPETITION.—The month of May was as usual devoted to a running Bogey Competition which lasted throughout. The imaginary warrior's score has been reduced by several strokes since last year, and it takes an uncommonly good round to halve a match with him so that Mr. Sinclair's 4 up on nine holes without any handicap to help him may be regarded as an extraordinarily fine performance, and at the same time a testimony to the improved state of the course, which is probably in better order just now than it has been for years. Messrs. Cuthbert and Hechle also distinguished themselves, but no other players succeeded in defeating Bogey, the best of the 154 cards which were sent in being as follows:—

GOLF IN THE BRITISH ISLES.

LONDON, 13th May 1904.

THE first two rounds of the Parliamentary Handicap for which there were 111 entries were played on Saturday, 7th May, at Sandwich, under the worst meteorological conditions that have been experienced since the institution of this Annual Competition. Of the one hundred and eleven entrants 24 scratched thereby reducing the number to 87. During the first round the rain fell in torrents, but ceased about 3 o'clock P.M. The Premier was playing well and easily won his round as did also the Hon'ble Alfred Lyttleton against first Mr. Gray and then Lord Newton. Mr. Eric Hambro plus 4 qualified for the third round by beating Mr. Guy Pym and by his next opponent scratching to him. The match between Mr H. W. Foster and Mr. Bigwood terminated in favour of the former only on the 19th green. Among the successful back markers are Messrs. Wauklyn, Marshall Hall, A. B. Tennyson, A. G. Robertson, R. L. Hannsworth, K.C. and 32 players are left to complete the third round by 21st instant.

* * * * * * *

During the past week the ladies' play has attracted first notice and interest. The institution of International matches before the Championship is now an annual event and this year certainly the matches have been extraordinarily well contested. The first of the three was between England and Scotland on the Troon (Ayrshire) Links on May 5th. Rain fell in torrents throughout the day and many of the greens were under water, this led in many cases to some slight confusion for all the combatant, were not aware of the local rule which differs from that of the R. and A. bearing on the case providing that when a ball lies in casual water on a green, it shall be placed behind the water, whereas the local ruling is that the ball shall be placed to the side of the water. In the match between Miss Maitland (Scotland) and Miss Bertha Thompson (England) this rule had a very important bearing on not only the individual, but the International result. Miss Maitland's ball lying in casual water on the last green, and adopting the R. and A. ruling she failed to get it through the water thereby losing the ball and the match, for herself and for Scotland, for England won by the narrow margin of 5 matches to 4 and one was halved, the teams being 10 a-side. On the following afternoon, with a decided improvement in the weather, the same English team met and were severely defeated by Ireland. Great interest was evinced in the match between the Champion, Miss Rhona Adair, and Miss E C. Nevile (England) and that between Miss May Hazlet and Miss L. Dod, in the former match the result was a half. Miss Adair, however, was off her drive, a state of affairs which was counterbalanced by Miss Nevile's lamentable and unusual weakness on the green. Miss Dod's putting was extraordinarily deadly and at the turn she was 1 up to Miss Hazlet going out in 39, made up as follows: 5 4, 5, 4, 5, 6, 2, 5, 3=39, but the Irish lady regained her lost ground coming in, and won the match by 2 and 1. Next day the scene of the conflict was moved from Troon to Prestwick's Classic Green, and then in the match with Scotland the prestige of Irish girl received a rude shaking at the hands of the Scotch lassies, and though the Cup may yet return to Ireland still the fact remains, and ever will remain, that the invincible position which the Irish lasses seemed to hold has been most seriously assailed. The chief feature of the match was naturally the defeat of the Champion by the Scottish Champion (Miss Glover). The large number of spectators assembled were all anxious to see how these ladies would prove the farthest back. Tees negotiate the "Cardinal" the "Himalayas" and the Alps. It was soon apparent to all that Miss Glover was in excellent driving form, though her short game was often faulty. Off the Tee to the "Cardinal" Miss Glover sliced her ball and had to play short of the hazard for her next, whilst her opponent easily chasing the bowler in her second won the hole. At the Hamalayas the match was square. It was a bold bid for ladies with a head wind blowing quite hard, but Miss Glover secured it in a grand 3 and assumed the lead, Miss Adair having failed to carry the bunker. At the 8th the match was once more square and at the turn the Scottish lady was 1 up. On the 16th tee Miss Adair was 1 up, but was too strong in her approach on to the 17th and failing to extricate her ball she picked up and the match was even and 1 to play. With both balls on the green with a drive and pitch everything looked as though the match would be halved. Playing the odd Miss Adair made certain of a half in 4, but Miss Glover some 5 yards from the hole, made a bold bid and holed the putt amid loud applause, thus winning the match. Perhaps one of the most closely contested in the annals of Ladies' golf. Meanwhile Miss May Hazlet, whom good judges regard as the most finished player in the world, had given the local favourite Miss Sybil Whigham a big beating by 4 and 3 and her youngest sister had claimed a victory over Miss Flora Macbeth on the 17th green, but otherwise the day had gone ill for Ireland. Miss Molly Graham of Drylake had won on the 18th green from last year's "runner up" Miss Walker Leigh, Miss Dorothy Campbell a well-known North Berwick player had announced a victory of 8 up and 6 to play over Miss N. Graham, whilst her sister Mrs. Swanston (better known by her Maiden name Miss Madeline Campbell) easily defeated Miss M. E. Stuart of Pertwick by 4 and 3 and Scotland won the match by 9 points to 2 and a half between Mrs. Jackson and Miss Sant. Appended are the teams in the three matches:—

At a largely represented meeting of the Ladies' Golf Union at Troon, on Monday 9th May, the cordial invitation of the Royal Cromer (Norfolk) Club to hold the Ladies' Championship of 1905 on their links was accepted.

The stroke competition open to competitors in the championship only was played at Troon, on Monday, 9th May, and resulted in an easy win for the Scottish Lady Champion Miss Glover in the fine score of 81. Miss Dorothy Campbell coming next with 86, and Miss May Hazlet 87.

Full particulars of this and the championship will be given in next week's issue.

CALCUTTA vs. HOWRAH.

On Saturday last the bowling contingent of the Calcutta Golf Club visited Howrah to make a fourth and last determined attempt to break the sequence of Howrah victories. The home players, however, again proved too strong for them, and won by twelve points in spite of some excellent play by Mr. Dickson and Mr. Begg, the latter of whom, however, was not very well supported by the rest of his link. Mr. McLaren was in wonderful form for the winners, and the Howrah green, though not so fast as usual, owing to the recent rain, played very well indeed. The details of the play were as follows:—

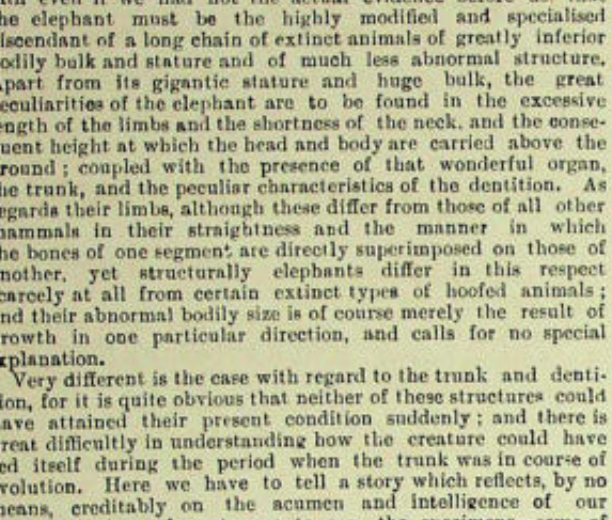
THE ELEPHANT'S FAMILY HISTORY.



THE elephant is indissolubly connected with India, of which indeed it is the impersonation and the symbol. In the Hindu mythology it has figured from time immemorial as Ganesh, the elephant-headed god, and in modern times its effigy forms the water-mark of our postage stamps! It is true that the monster is by no means confined to India, ranging as far eastward as Siam and Sumatra; but it was from India that it first became known to Europeans, and it is with India—in spite of sacred white Siamese elephants—that its name will always be connected in popular estimation. Again, it has a rival in the person of the African elephant; but there are elephants and elephants, and the difference between the two animals is at least as great as that which sunders a shire cart-horse from a Derby winner The Indian elephant is indeed the much better-bred and more "classy" animal of the two as is shown by its general build, the structure of its trunk and teeth, its smaller ears, and the mode in which the legs are set on the body. It is, in fact, both structurally and in appearance, far in advance of its African cousins, and as being by far the more specialised of the two, and likewise the type of Linnæus's genus Elephas, is clearly entitled to be regarded as the elephant par excellance.

In pre-Darwinian days the elephant was regarded at all events by the majority of Naturalists, as a creature made in the form in which we now know it, although even then there may have been some, like our Indian celebrity, Hugh Falconer, who speculated on the possibility of its discent from the extinct mastodons Now, however, all this is changed, and we are certain even if we had not the actual evidence before us, that the elephant must be the highly modified and specialised discendant of a long chain of extinct animals of greatly inferior bodily bulk and stature and of much less abnormal structure. Apart from its gigantic stature and huge bulk, the great peculiarities of the elephant are to be found in the excessive length of the limbs and the shortness of the neck, and the consequent height at which the head and body are carried above the ground; coupled with the presence of that wonderful organ, the trunk, and the peculiar characteristics of the dentition. As regards their limbs, although these differ from those of all other mammals in their straightness and the manner in which the bones of one segment are directly superimposed on those of another, yet structurally elephants differ in this respect scarcely at all from certain extinct types of hoofed animals; and their abnormal bodily size is of course merely the result of growth in one particular direction, and calls for no special explanation.

Very different is the case with regard to the trunk and dentition, for it is quite obvious that neither of these structures could have attained their present condition suddenly; and there is great difficultly in understanding how the creature could have fed itself during the period when the trunk was in course of evolution. Here we have to tell a story which reflects, by no means, creditably on the acumen and intelligence of our palæontologists; for, strange to say, the specimens—some of them in the Museum on our own maidan—which serve to demonstrate the manner in which the elephant's trunk has been gradually developed out of an ordinary muzzle have been lying ready to our hands for years, and yet no one had the gumption to put two and two together and solve the problem. It was not, indeed, till the recent discovery of the remains of the early Tertiary ancestors of the elephant in Egypt attracted attention to the whole history of the group that the problem of the trunk was finally and fully worked out. And now we know it, it appears so exceeding easy and self evident that we are all wondering why we did not find it out long ago for ourselves.

Early in the first half of last century Hugh Falconer demonstrated that in respect of dental characters there is a practically complete gradation from the elephants of to-day to the ridge-toothed, or stegodont, elephants of the Tertiary formations of the Siwalik Hills, which, with the exception of the much simpler structure of their cheek-teeth, are in all respects true elephants. And, according to modern ideas of evolution, these ridge-toothed elephants are to be regarded as the immediate ancestors of the elephants of to-day. From these ridge-toothed elephants there is in turn an equally complete gradation into what may be called the short-jawed mastodons; that is to say into elephants with cheek-teeth of a still simpler type of structure, but in which the lower jaw is tuskless and terminates in front in the short spout characteristic of the modern elephants.

There are, however, other mastodons in which the fronts of the jaw is produced into a long trough-like chin, considerably exceeding in length the rest of the skull, and terminating in a pair of small tusks which projects upwards at an obtuse angle to the general line of the jaw. In the European species of long-jawed mastodons these tusks were present in both sexes, but in one Indian species, as shown by specimens of this portion of the jaw from the Punjab, they appear to have been restricted to the males. The upper tusks of these mastodons, instead of curving upwards like those of elephants, were somewhat bent down at the tips, so as to cross the extremities of the lower pair; and in this respect they are evidently one degree less far removed from the corresponding teeth of ordinary mammals.

Now it is these long-jawed mastodons, which, be it remembered, have been known to us for years, have enabled naturalists to slove the problem of the origin and evolution of the elephant's trunk. Obviously, a creature with a lower jaw of this inordinate length, must have had the upper half of the muzzle, or, in other words, the nose and upper lip prolonged to an equal degree; and it is therefore quite clear that these long-jawed mastodons had an extremely exaggerated pig's muzzle. If we ask what was the reason for this extraordinary development, it may be replied that the long-jawed mastodons had evidently been developed from shorter-legged animals without any corresponding elongation of the neck to balance the lengthening of the limbs. Consequently, in order to enable them to reach the ground with their lips it was imperative that the muzzle should be lengthened And it is perfectly easy to understand how the muzzle lengthened pari passu with the increasing length of limb Doubtless these long chinned mastodons were able to graze; but their increase in bodily stature may have been for the purpose of enabling them also to browse after the manner of the Indian elephant; and in this respect, it may be incidentally mentioned, we find by contrasting the latter animal and its relatives with the giraffe a remarkable instance of the manner in which the same end is attained in nature by different means.

No sooner had the long-jawed mastodons attained their full development of muzzle and tusks, then it would appear, the whole arrangement was found unwieldy and inconvenient: the rigid lower jaw presenting the upper half of the muzzle acting as a flexible proboscis. At all events we may assume that this was the case from the rapidity with which the structure was modified and altered. Owing to the soft nature of most of the parts, the details of how this was accomplished are not quite clear. Broadly speaking, it may be stated, however, that as the size of the animals of this group continued to increase (for, it should be mentioned, elephants are much larger animals than mastodons), the upper half of the muzzles which were now assuming the character of a true proborcis, continued to grow in length, while the long trough-like chin of the lower jaw lost its tusks and began to contract in length, till it finally disappeared altogether, leaving only the short spout found in the front of the lower jaw of the elephant as a witness of its former existence. With this disappearance of the lower half of the long muzzle, the upper half become converted into the trunk of the modern elephants, which serves the purpose of a spoon and fork—to say nothing of a tumbler—in conveying nutriment into the month, now incapable of approaching within a long distance of the ground. The elephant's trunk is therefore nothing more than the greatly prolonged nose and upper lip; and the ridges to be seen on the two sides of its lower surface are in fact neither more nor less than remnants of the margins of the lip itself. Such, in brief, is the history of the evolution of this most marvellous organ.

We have thus traced the Indian elephant into such a widely different animal as the long jawed, or long-chinned, mastodon; and it has to be added that, so far as available evidence goes, the transformation appears to have taken place in Asia. It remains to trace the long-jawed mastodons into connection with smaller animals of less abnormal structure; and for this we must journey we Egypt in the early Tertiary deposits of which country we meet with the earliest known ancestors of the elephants

How it is necessary to observe that even the long-jawed mastodons have a dentition of a highly modified and specialised type. The front teeth, as we have seen, are reduced to single pair of tusks, or incisors, in each jaw; while of the cheek-teeth there are, at most, but portions of three in use at any one time on the same side of each jaw, the hinder teeth of this series coming into use as the front ones and worn away and shed. Moreover, with the exception of the first one or two, each teeth carries at least three transverse ridges.

From the aforesaid, Egyptian deposits have been obtained remains of an animal—known as palæomastondon nearly allied to the long-chinned mastodons, but with a somewhat shorter chin to the lower jaw, and with both pairs of tusks relatively smaller and inclined somewhat more downwards or upwards, as the case may be. Moreover, although the cheek-teeth still have three ridges each, nearly the whole series was in use at the same time. As regards size, palæomastodon was considerably smaller than the long-chinned mastodons;—in some instances very markedly so.

A stage further in the line of evolution is prevented by another Egyptian Eocene mammal, the Mœrithirium, a creature but little larger than a tapir. From the length of its neck, it could evidently graze in the ordinary manner, although its muzzle may already have been somewhat elongated. The teeth, which all come into use at the same time, form a fairly complete and regular series; these being three pairs of incisors, together with canines, while most of the cheek-teeth carry only two ridges a piece. Already, however, we notice elephants-like character in the superior size and abnormal direction of the second pair of incisors in each jaw; teeth destined to become eventually the tusks of the long-chinned mastodon. In fact, Mœrithirium is a very ordinary kind of early hoofed mammal

Thus ends for the present our knowledge of the family history of the elephants; knowledge which only two or three years ago was as imperfect as it is now nearly complete. As stated by Dr. A. S. Woodward, in our contemporary Knowledge and Illustrated Scientic News, "the general conclusion, therefore, is that the history of the elephant is analogous to that of the other tribes of hoofed animals which culminated in the horses and the cattle. They have grown from mere creatures of the marshes to roam over the plains, or through forest, and have at the same time gradually acquired deeper and more effective grinding teeth. For some inexplicable reason, the lengthening of their legs with a concomitant shortening of their neck, necessitated a unique elongation of their face and chin to reach the ground for browsing. When this strange makeshift had reached its maximum degree, the chin suddenly shrivelled, leaving the flexible, toothless face without any support. By stages which we cannot discover, because they concern only soft parts which are never fossilised, this flexible face became the wonderful prehensile proboscis of the elephants as we know them to-day."

A NATURALIST IN THE N.-W. HIMALAYAS.

PREFACE.

FROM time to time I propose, with the Editor's sanction, to send for publication such incidents connected with a collecting naturalist's wanderings as are likely to prove of interest.

Possibly these notes may be of service to others, and I am confident that there are many who can aid not only with their advice but with specimens (which will be returned when desired) after reference to the British Museum naturalists, who will I am fully aware be pleased to afford aid. Very little knowledge of the smaller mammals has been acquired, and the field of operations is large, progress is naturally slow when in order to arrive at any definite conclusions, it is necessary to collect large numbers of specimens at all seasons of the year and from the same ground: how necessary this is only those who have worked for years can really appreciate. Writing on this subject Mr. Oldfield Thomas gave us an instance: "To understand the British squirrel I needed 60 from one wood all the year round." Lately whilst dealing with one of the mouse hares it became necessary to work the same area during two collecting seasons in order to throw some light on the seasonal change of a species, and although the first of the series was sent home in August 1902, although the first of the series was sent home in August 1902, the papers are not yet complete and this series is still under discussion. The work seems to be never ending, of course it is engrossing but alone it is very hard to make any appreciable advance; if therefore my notes on the subject lead any other enthusiastic person to aid I shall be well repaid.

Notes on birds, birds' eggs and any interesting occurrences have for years past been jotted down in my travelling diary. and if you care for extracts Mr. Editor they are at you disposal.

PART I

Mus viceræ is Mr. Bonhote inform us, a rat belonging to the rufescens group, differing therefrom by its much shorter tail. This tail is bicolor with fine hairs. The colouring is never so bright as that of Mus rufescens. there is also another well marked feature viz., a narrow white edging to the ear. Mus viceræ is evidently the common rat of Kashmir, it is to be found in the main valley and in the side nullahs up to about 7 500 feet. So far it has been obtained in house boats, on the river in fields distant from houses in huts, and in deserted sheds.

When first this rat was sent to the British Museum, it was acknowledged with the remark that 'provisionally it must be admitted as M. decumanus," but with the addition "We have none quite like them at the museum, they seem to have remarkably short tails.'

We may for the present consider we have done with this rat except as regards its distribution, the type is a female rat procured by Mr. A. O. Hume at Simla and Mr Lewis Bonhote deals with Mus viceræ in Annals and Magazine of Natural History Series 7, Vol. XI., May 1903.

A small series has been sent to the Natural History Museum, Bombay.

The floods of last summer seem to have destroyed an enormous number of rats,—fields which were honeycombed with their holes seem now to be quite free from the pests. The Buzzards and other birds of prey appear to have given up sitting on the bare trees waiting for their food, but this will be only for a short time and in a year or so Mus viceræ will be as plentiful as ever.

Measurements of full-grown specimens were:—

♂ head and body 7·70" Tail 7·00" hind foot 1·00" ear 0·80"
♂ " " 7·00" " 6·15" " " 0·85" " 0·80"

Looking at this year's Journal. I find an entry 19th January shot a plain backed mountain thrush Kashmir, elevation about 5,200 feet.

Orocincla mollissima. This mountain thrush is apparently very rare as far west as Kashmir, but Blanford records it from Chamba. The specimen is a male Head above and upper plumage uniformly olive brown. Wings brown, but feathers margined with the same colouring as the back, the coverts have a fine edging of lighter brown. The four middle tail feathers are uniformly brown with a slight olive shade; the other tail feathers are a darker brown with an indistinct white tip, the outermost feather is still darker, but the ends are damaged.

Sides of the head dark brown and yellow, the throat and breast were shaded from whitish yellow to almost golden, the ends of the feathers having black terminations, the lower plumage has far less shades of yellow as it approaches the abdomen and gradually merges into white, but each feather has the black terminal band. Auxiliaries white and dark brown, under wing coverts black with broad white ends.

Length 10 inches. Bill blackish brown. Legs and feet yellowish. Iris dark brown.

This description is almost the same as that recorded by Blanford, but has been given with considerable minuteness in case any one can also record having obtained a specimen from Kashmir.

The other Turdinæ observed in the Jhelum valley during January were the Missel Thrush (Turdus viscivorus). The black throated ouzel (Merula atrigularis).

The Theatre.

THE MOROSINI-MARYX FAREWELL.

LAST Saturday night witnessed, we are given to understand, the final entertainment at the Theatre Royal by Mlles. Morosini and Maryx, and in view of the disappointingly small house on this occasion, it is perhaps an act of wisdom to postpone further appearance until the weather is a trifle cooler and more tempting to the theatre goers.

At the same time we would remark that if, as we hope, a fresh series of entertainments is to be opened a little later in the year, we trust that the principals will be more fortunate in their choice of assistant artistes. Mlles Morosini and Maryx themselves are both excellent, but we cannot conscientiously congratulate them upon the rest of the company.

Mr. Bert Flatt as we have before remarked, can on occasion give his audience some really clever fooling. As the musical burglar he was quite good, but he does not always come up to sample, and as "America's Musical Comedian" last Saturday he was not so much Flatt, as flat—very flat indeed in fact. As regards his second appearance in a "Comedy Sketch" in conjunction with Miss Beryl Mackay, perhaps the less said about them both the better!

Miss Maryx' rendering of "Inquietude" was well received, as was also Chopin's valse which she gave later in the evening, though the former gave the better effect to her delicacy of touch.

Mlle. Morosini sang that good old song "Robin Adair" as we do not often hear it sung, and in response to an insistent encore, gave an English version of a French chansonette. She has an unusually sympathetic voice, and though her subsequent comic songs were vociferously encored, we think that her metier is a good deal above the serio-comic business.

As regards the rest of the performance there is little to say, except that it was persistently interrupted by some of the presumably "gilded mug" brigade, who had apparently dined, not wisely but too well, and from the altitude of a box proceeded to render themselves a general nuisance, not only to the performers but to the rest of the audience as well. We were reminded of the antics of a certain gang which, some four or five years ago, used to consider it the height of humour to attend the performances of the A. D. S., when in a condition vulgarly known as 'oiled," and express their opinions of the various members of the caste, with a freedom which ultimately resulted in official notice being taken and a general climbing down on the part of the aforesaid humourists.

No doubt in this case the sportsmen we are alluding to considered themselves safe, inasmuch as it was not an amateur performance, but it is to be hoped for their own sakes that their playful inclinations will not take a similar direction should they pay a visit to say "the Empire" when next in England, as it is more than probable that the services of the burly ex-guardsmen in the gold laced liveries, who form so imposing a feature in the corridors of the theatre would very quickly be called into requisition.

It is difficult to please some people. Not many years back an owner with a penchant for "dashes" on good things conceived the idea of squaring the handicapper. Approaching the subject in a delicate manner, he contrived to let the weight-adjuster know that in the event of a certain animal he possessed being allotted about 7st. in a fairly valuable event the handicapper would be on a useful sum to nothing.

Then was the man of plunges comforted. Not only did the official offer to do his best in the matter, but he further declared that the horse should not have more than the weight in question. Fully satisfied, the owner confided to his fidus Achates how well the scheme had worked and arrangements for breaking the Ring were promptly made.

In due course the weights appeared. The sharer of the good thing first obtained possession of the sheet.

"What's mine got?" eagerly inquired the owner. "Six stone twelve," was the reply.

"He's a brick," enthusiastically remarked the plunger. "Why, it can't possibly be beat!"

"But look here," interposed his confederate, pointing to several animals down at the bottom of the handicap. "surely you can't beat these at the weights!"

"Why—er," began the erstwhile jubilant owner, glancing at the spot indicated, "I m afraid not. Why, d—n it!' he suddenly burst out, "the blanked brute hasn't given mine half a chance. Any of these could beat me at even weights, and they're receiving nearly a stone!"

'Twas even so. The handicapper had fulfilled his promise to the enterprising owner, and at the same time put the intended cert hopelessly out of court.

TO MOTORISTS

THE BEST OILS FOR MOTOR CARS.

Wilburine for cylinders ... Rs. 6-8 per gallon Tin. | Valvoline for Bearings, etc. ... Rs. 5-0 per gallon Tin.

Extract from the "Autocar."

LUBRICATING OILS.—[2422]—It may be instructive to your numerous readers to have the experiences of a motor car experimentalist on the behaviour of lubricating oils for motor work. In the first onset I tried various sorts of oils, all of which left deposits of carbon and gumming matter in the cylinders and valves. These deposits are serious drawbacks, not only to the working of the pistons and valves, but also interfere with the proper sparking at the ignition plugs. I then tried the Valvoline Oil Co.'s oils, using "Wilburine" for the cylinders and "Valvoline" for the bearings, etc.; these being quite pure mineral oils, no deposits either of carbon or gumming matter were left. Every time the pistons, etc., have been examined they were quite bright, clean and well lubricated. The valves also keep in good condition and require very little regrinding. I have been quite free from sparking troubles since using the above lubricants. Any dust that alights on the working parts is easily wiped off, whereas with other oils dirt stuck fast through gumming.

Very much smaller quantities of these oils ("Wilburine" and "Valvoline") about one-third to one-quarter, are required, which more than balances the extra first cost. The wearing surfaces are besides in a magnificent condition. These advantages —viz., high-class lubrication, freedom from deposit in cylinders, gum in bearings, absence of sparking troubles, are too important to be neglected by any motorist.

There is a tendency to use various greases, instead of oils. Engineers have over and over again proved that greases give much greater frictional losses than oils; with motor car engines and bearings the lubricant that gives the least possible friction is the best.

I have referred to the advantages the motorist gets. I will mention another advantage these oils have to those whom the motorist passes, viz., the absence of the fried-fish-shop smell so often noted. Several persons have been very much struck by the absence of smell; even when the car has been standing for some time with the engines running, no trace of offensive odour has been apparent to the bystanders.

I mention these experiences, having no interest in the Valvoline Oil Co., that others may be benefited and save themselves trouble and their neighbours some annoyance.

GAME AS A PUBLIC ASSET.

AN interesting step, and one that is quite new for a British Colonial Government to adopt, unless we are much mistaken, has been taken by the authorities of British Columbia: they have published as Victoria B. C. a "bulletin," the Colonial equivalent of the "Blue book," containing a list of the birds and mammals of the Province with notes as to their distribution, etc., prefaced by "an introduction containing notes which may be useful to sportsmen who are not familiar with the game of the Province." The publication is in fact an official invitation to the sportsman to come and enjoy the shikar obtainable in British Columbia and as such it has a significance which claims our attention for it. An official welcome is a thing to which the sportsman is a stranger and he might be pardoned were he to regard a thing so unusual almost with suspicion and to ask himself what possible motive could induce the executive of a Colony to thus smooth the way for him. Information concerning game in most countries under the British raj is conveyed to him—through official channels—in the shape of game regulations, schedules, and restrictions: and a modest publication like this before us which is at pains to convey advice concerning localities, guides, expenses and equipment is as pleasing an intimation that sportsmen will be welcomed as it is novel.

We need hardly go into the details which the Secretary of the Bureau of Provincial Informations has collected in his pamphlet: it will suffice for all practical purposes if we say that all the sportsman need take with him are rifles, blankets, and ammunition: stores of all kinds are best obtained in the Colony and, no doubt, the man who should make Victoria B. C. his starting point would find himself in the midst of plenty. Big game shooting, it may be remarked, is not a much cheaper amusement in British Columbia than it is anywhere else: we are told that $500 a month, which will include cook, guide, and five ponies will enable any man to make a trip in comfort. As regards game there are mountain goats and sheep, wapiti, caribou, deer of various species, grizzly, brown and black bears, panther and lynx. Broadly speaking the legal shooting season is from 1st September to 15th December, and the females and young of all species of deer, wild goat and sheep are absolutely protected all the year round. The Provincial Government of British Columbia has followed the movement which has been so widespread during recent years, and has made laws to protect the game which, as this bulletin proves, it realises to constitute a valuable asset: it has, moreover, taken a leaf out of the American book and has introduced from England both pheasants and partridges; but these, though they have become fairly acclimatised, are not yet sufficiently numerous to reckon as game and continue to enjoy absolute protection. It is reassuring and gratifying to find that the responsible authorities of a country like British Columbia realise the desirability of attracting sportsmen to visit it. A new country—and British Columbia in view of the area that remains undeveloped—requires enterprising men with a little capital as pioneers, and there is no better way of tempting pioneers of the right sort than by setting out the possibilities of sport which the country has to offer. Mr. Baillie Grohmann and others have described shikar in the since and have done it well: but their writings now to a past age, in these swiftly moving times, the number of sportsmen who combine with love shikar time and means to travel and "prospect" opportunities are comparatively few. It is, therefore, wise for those who are entrusted with the welfare of a Colony to bestir themselves in this direction and hold out what inducements they can to the possible colonist of the required stamp.

It has often occurred to us, as it must have occurred to many, that the game regulations promulgated in Uganda and in some other parts of Africa, wise though they be in the main, might perhaps with advantage to the countries to which they apply have been varied in one particular. Certain areas in Uganda and in the Soudan are reserved as sporting grounds to the officials who are carrying on the local government. This is a proviso whose justice and propriety no good sportsman questions: it is only fair and right that those whose lot is cast in the country should enjoy sporting advantages superior to those available to the casual wealthy visitor who comes for his own pleasure and leaves when the attractions of Leicestershire or the Scottish deer forest tempt him home: and perhaps there is nothing to be said against maintenance of these reserves for officials during such time as officials are the only residents in the country. Would it not, we are tempted to ask however, make for the interests of a territory it is desired to colonise in the true sense of the word, were the distinction between the official and the non-official removed to a certain extent? Would it not help to attract the right class of settler were the planter or trader who establishes himself in the country as a bonâ fide resident permitted to enjoy the same privileges as those who are entrusted with the administration? We would draw the line of distinction in this matter of privileged shooting not between the official and the non-official; but between the official and the resident who has put an industrial stake into the country on the one hand, leaving the sporting visitor on the other. The money and the benefits which the wealthy visiting sportsman brings to the country of his preference are of small account, regarded from the public point of view, by comparison with the utility of the resident planter or trader. Regarding sport as an asset in the tale of attractions a new country has to offer the settlers it desires, we cannot think that the governments make as much of it as they profitably might do. The responsible officers in our African colonies are perhaps under no necessity to officially inform the world concerning species of game obtainable and localities, etc. These matters have found so many very competent chroniclers that there is nothing left for hard worked officials to do: their mission has been rather to stem the flood of unprofitable visitors who come for sport and pleasure and whose interest in the country itself is simply nil. We do the British Columbia Government no injustice when we say that in offering facilities and encouragements to sportsmen, it wants to attract to a great country pregnant with possibilities awaiting energy and capital, not sportsmen per se, but men whose taste for sport indicates that their presence as settlers would be advantageous to the territory. The shooting season, as we have already remarked, lasts for three or four months only: the amount of money each sporting visitor would spend in the country during that period is reckoned at about $15,000 to $2,000 if he remain during the whole season. That is a very small matter regarded from a revenue standpoint; and in holding out the temptations it does, the British Columbian executive hope to paraphrase a familiar saying, the sportsman who comes to shoot will elect to stay.

SPORT AND ANIMAL LIFE AT THE ACADEMY.

[Communicated.]

BOTH of these schools (if they are entitled to the dignity) are rather poorly represented at Burlington House this year. The cattle and sheep pieces are more numerous than usual, but these domestic animals would not be particularly interesting to you. The first picture to be noticed is No. 17, Mr. Briton Riviere's "Youth:" he represents a young gentleman in red, fifteenth century style, on a black cob which he has ridden along a shelf of rock till the horse pulls up with a pardonable expression of terror on the very edge of a doubtless unfathomable abyss. The young gentleman exhibits the proverbial carelessness of his immaturity by tantalising the hawk he holds high with the wood pigeon we presume the bird has recently killed. I am not greatly impressed by the hounds which accompany the young gentleman; they lack hound character, and the expression on the faces of two, as in the case of the nag, err, to my thinking, on the side of exaggeration. License, however, must be permitted the allegorical, and the heedless youth is to be congratulated on riding a horse which looks where it is going if the rider does not. Miss Imogen Collier's "Rocket" is an excellent study of the weight carrying hunter; but Mr. Warwick Reynolds' "Rajah" (No. 77) is more to your address: a very boldly and cleverly painted picture of a tiger's head: it has real character and I wish the hanging committee had put it a little lower down. It has often been a matter of self-enquiry to your correspondent why those artists who revel in colour do not more often seek opportunity in Burma. Mr. James Middleton's picture (No. 129), "Worshippers at a shrine of Gaudama," revives the query. The painter has chosen his point of view in the court of the Shway Dagone Pagoda at Rangoon, and has given us a group of Burmans, men and women, the latter only at prayer. The pasohs and tameins are vivid patches of colour against the darkness of the carved teak shrine, and there is an air of distinction about the work due to its unusual character. Mr. Middleton seems to have painted his picture between showers during the rains, for there is none of the glare of the hot season in his atmospheric effect. Mr. John Griffiths' "Blackbuck hunting with cheetah in India: the kill" (No. 153) is a small picture and skied at that. The drawing of the cheetah and his quarry are decidedly good, and the general impression of strong sunlight is well conveyed. The only point which fails to satisfy is the country depicted: naked, arid sand, with never a trace of herbage in sight: the cart which brought the cheetah is the only object in the background. It is not quite the ground with which one associates blackbuck. Mr. Edward Molyneux's "Himalayan Dawn" (No. 178) relates to neither sport nor animal life, but must be mentioned for its intrinsic merit. In the background rock, buttress and pinnacle, whence the rays of the morning sun sweep the lingering mist: a gloriously clear and tender blue sky with wreaths of filmy cloud beyond: below down in the foreground snow, ice and water blue in the strengthening dawn light which has begun to dispel the night. I do not remember a picture in the whole exhibition which distinguished more beautiful and subtle effects of light and atmosphere.

"Diana of the Uplands" (No. 222) by Mr. Charles W. Purse is a good piece of work: a life size portrait—I am sure it is a portrait—of a girl holding a brace of greyhounds which strain at the leash. The group stands on the shoulder of a hill fiercely swept by the wind: the greyhounds are admirable studies, and you instinctively put your hand to your hat as the sense of high wind infects you. "Lake Sonsa Nâg, Kashmir" (No. 227) is another clever piece of landscape by Mr. Edward Molyneux: but while granting its merits, this picture does not remain with me as does his "Himalayan Dawn:" certainly the artistic opportunities afforded by the latter are infinitely greater. Miss Lucy Kemp Welch has but one picture in the exhibition this year: No. 330, "Timber Hauling in the New Forest." At first sight one remarks that the log is a great deal too heavy for the team of four stout horses which strain at the traces on a stiffish slope: looking more closely, past these, whose vigorous action and effort is conveyed as Miss Kemp Welch can convey strong action in the horse, you discover that there is a second string of three horses hidden by them: and here occurs, what I venture to think, an error in perspective: there does not seem to be space between the team of four and that patriarchal beech trunk for a second team of horses: moreover the latter seem to be too completely thrown into the shade. One might pass the picture without noticing they are there at all: but that, as already hinted, may be attributed to the arresting merits of the horses in the foreground. The composition of this picture strikes me as particularly good and nicely balanced. Mr. C. Napier Henry can put a yacht in the water and set her going under full canvas in a breeze with any artist in existence. "Haul Aft" (No. 396) stirs the blood; the half decked cutter is coming round the mark buoy and the crew are getting in the spinnaker. The sense of movement in the boat herself and the straining of the boom against the sheets is admirable: you feel the boat skimming past into the frame. "The Noonday Rest, India," does not satisfy me at all. Miss Christina Stoddart shows the dull noon of a dust storm: scene under spreading trees. The place is the place you shall find on any road in Northern India, but why are the natives on their feet talking when they might hitao or still better lie down and sleep: and why keep those two sleek white byles on the foreground standing on their feet when they would lie down too if allowed? It is anything you please, but not a "Noonday Rest" as the poor black man and his cart bullocks understand the thing.

Mr. Herbert Decksie's tigers in "The Destroyers" (No. 404) are admirably drawn and convey the sense of loose limbed agility and strength most successfully: but the surroundings do not satisfy. Tigers do not wander abroad at high noon on naked hillsides where there is no cover within miles. Mr. T. Blinks sends a picture which is difficult to criticise from a practical point of view, because painted from an impossible point of view. Two pheasants falling are the subject: and in the distant background stands the sportsman who has pulled them down so neatly. The ribald spectator is tempted to ask if Mr. Blinks got much peppered as he passed in his air ship: because the spectator would get a modicum of the shot not absorbed by the birds in his face. "Well Stopped!" is clever, but not satisfactory. The same artist's "A Message" (No. 453) represents a well made brace of pointers in the heather, the foremost, facing us or nearly so, standing to game while his lemon and white friend backs. This picture is one of the best canine works by Mr. Blinks I can recollect: his foxhounds are always so excellent that this is the highest praise I can give. Mr. Arthur C. Cooke's "Gambler's Victim," a young man in mid-eighteenth century dress, thinking alone over the card table in the light of dawn, with guttering candles and cards strewing the floor, is a new version of an old topic: the pose of the victim is exceedingly good, utter dejection is in every line. Mr. John Charlton's great horse picture, "Abandoned," is very powerful and full of life and movement: but it appears to me open to objection on the ground that there is too much expression in the horses' faces; one does not see so much variety, however frightened horses may be. The passage from Alison Mr. Charlton has chosen to illustrate, is a tempting one, and the grouping and modelling of the horses are admirable. I should have said that "Abandoned" refers to the Spanish horses which our ships were obliged to leave behind on the shore in Jutland on an historical occasion during the Peninsular War. "Passive Resistance" (No. 504) by Mr. W. Frank Calderon is an exceedingly clever painting of a dignified Great Dane warding off the advances of an over-effusive terrier, the Great Dane's expression is to the life. "Polo at Rugby" (731) is a small and unpretentious work by Mr. George Wright: but it repays close inspection as a remarkably careful and successful study of polo ponies at speed. Captain E. D. Miller, easily recogniseable at first glance, is the foremost figure. "Fate" (845) by Mr. Arthur Wardle shows a leopard holding down a guinea-fowl; the feline attitude is exceedingly good.

The only exhibit of interest to your readers in the sculpture is Mr. Thomas Brock's forceful statue of General Nicholson, which is to be erected at Delhi. The statue, more than life size, is a grand piece of work; the pose and features are pregnant with character.

Sporting Notes.

WE note that the prospectus of the first three Calcutta Monsoon Meetings is out. The programmes appear to be practically the same as last year, and do not call for much comment. We notice that in only one of the programmes are there two hurdle races for horses; this strikes us as an improvement, as two jump races for horses on the same day generally entail poor fields. The dates of the meeting are 6th, 13th and 20th August, 10th and 17th September.

That well-known racing mare Naiades is for sale, we understand, and should be a good investment for anyone wishing to have a bit of fun in the Monsoon season as she is a good performer over the sticks, in addition to having picked up a useful race or two on the flat.

We learn from Johannesburg exchanges, that Mr. "Barney" Allen landed the nice little wager of £1,000 to £10, over Moifaa's win in the Grand National, laid him sportingly by a brother penciller. We are also informed he has just had a further disappointment with Dandy, and that he intends disposing of him. It appears also that a New Zealand jockey, named O'Neill, has been warned off for stopping a horse. The Transvaal officials are apparently quite alive to their duty to the long-suffering public : may others, like Captain Cuttle, "make a note" of this.

First entries for the Bangalore Races, beginning 9th July, which closed on the 2nd instant, are really splendid. For the first day there are 7 for the Highground Plate, 6 for the Macintire Plate, 6 for the Pony Trials, 9 for the Horse Trials, and 7 each for the Paddock and Arab Plates. For 12th July there are 2 for the Cloister Cup, 4 for the Leonidas Purse, 8 for the Eastern Plate, 12 for the Horse Scurry, 18 for the Maharajah's Cup, and 2 for the Hebbal Plate. For 14th July the entries are 8 for the Stewards' Purse, 6 for the Cambridgeshire, 12 for the All-Horse Handicap, 6 for the Excelsior Plate, 20 for the July Plate, 10 for the Desert Handicap, and 7 for the Yelandur Purse. The leading stables represented are Mr. Apcar's, the Sultan of Johore's, Hon'ble Mr. Thelluson, Chowdhury's, Aga Shah's, Rajah Venugopal's, Colonel Desaraj Urs', and Rajah of Pittapore's.

The Illustrated Sporting and Dramatic News to hand this week contains a well told Indian racing story by Mr. Harry Stokes, whose many friends in Calcutta will be glad to hear that he is as bobbish as of yore, and wielding a busy pen, in witness whereof one frequently reads his interesting contributions to English sporting newspapers.

An open Gymkhana race meeting will be held at Jubbulpore on Wednesday, the 29th instant, consisting of half a dozen Rs. 40 events, five of them for ponies and the sixth a charger and pigstickers' handicap. Mr. F. J. Preston is the Honorary Secretary : first entries close on the 10th, second entries on the 20th.

The Hon'ble Mr. A. A. Apcar has purchased Mallard in Australia. This is a bay colt by Malvolio—Britomarte. A well-known turf authority "down under" has this remark to make on the purchase :—"Though not exactly a top-notcher, Mallard is a very useful colt, and there is no doubt he was unlucky not to have won the Place Handicap with 8st. 11lb. at the recent A.J.C. Meeting at Randwick. He stays well, and a good many racing men had ticked him off as one of the horses worth keeping in mind for the next Caulfield or Melbourne Cup."

The following details regarding the horse and his T.Y.O. career are interesting.

Mallard, b c, 3yrs. Malvolio—Britomarte. Mr. J. Wilson, jun. Engaged in Caulfield Cup, 6st. 9lbs.; Melbourne, Cup, 6st. 12lb., also A.J.C. Epsom Hcp., A.J.C. Derby, Metropolitan, Caulfield Guineas, V.R.C. Derby and West Australian Derby. Trainer, owner.

One upshot of the Sievier vs. Duke Case was the prompt warning off by the Jockey Club of the plaintiff. Commenting on the case The Field writes :—"No one can have been unprepared for the finish of the action brought by the adventurer R. S. Sievier against Sir James Duke. The most astonishing feature in a case which presented many curious points (among them the scathing summing-up of the judge) was the unblushing effrontery of a man who hesitated not to ally himself in marriage with a lady of good birth, to allow himself to be elected member of a club like Boodle's, to walk in and out of other London clubs with any member who would drag him in, and last, and most astounding of all, to permit himself to be presented at Court to our late Queen. A man, however, who could dare all this was not likely to hesitate about going into the witness box to have dragged out of him bit by bit the details of a remarkably chequered and disgraceful life. Some of the revelations in court were, of course, no revelation at all to many of those who know the inner history of the Turf and its followers ; but it says a good deal for the spirit of fair play pervading our Turf that, although the better class of racing men would have nothing to do with Sievier as a companion, it was not sought by reason of his improbity in other matters, so long as he was not discovered to be guilty of infringing the rules of racing, to interfere with his getting hold of the best horses he could, running them, winning races, and beating the horses of men whose ideas of rectitude are, fortunately for racing generally, somewhat in advance of those held by the plaintiff in the action. The rank and file of the racing army, however, regarded Sievier serenely, and perhaps rather wished that they had enjoyed some of his opportunities. The remark of Sir James Duke, who set about his task in the most patriotic manner, that Sievier would doubtless for every reason, financial and social, have given anything to have won the Derby with Sceptre, was absolutely the best contradiction to the statement that Sir James Duke had accused Sievier of pulling Sceptre for the great Epsom race. Society is quite mixed enough as it is. There are quite as many flies in the amber as society can do with, but the line must be drawn somewhere, and though the Raleigh may not be the most exclusive club in London, it could not stand an adventurer like Sievier, with so much against him, accepting the hospitality of one of its members, who, by his weakness and bad judgment, placed himself in a very false position."

On the subject of the warning off The Sportsman writes :—"All's well that ends well," as a proverb has its limitations, for some things would have been still better not begun. Among them may rank the connection with the Turf which yesterday's announcement of the Stewards of the Jockey Club brought to a close. They visit with their displeasure a man who has not, so far as we know, violated any of the rules expressed or implied which should govern the conduct of owners, trainers and wagerers. But the Stewards look further afield for reasons, though in their judgments they give none. Hoc volo, sic jube, stat proratione voluntas, and there is no appeal. They are in their juridical function a court of summary jurisdiction and the House of Lords in one. Everybody knowing anything of the Turf trusts them as free from conscious prejudice, not to mention injustice or partiality. They are implicitly believed in, and they have earned that confidence. Presently they are to give themselves the power to license trainers throughout Great Britain, who will thenceforth have to be not only desirable persons themselves but to be employed by such. There the thing lies in a nutshell. We should all rejoice to be rid of the undesirable members of our acquaintance or family ; the Jockey Club has that inestim-

le privilege with the great army rather than mily of followers of racing. His Majesty, with- t reason given, may dispense with the services f any commissioned officer. So may the Stewards of the Jockey Club with the presence of any undesirable person in the enclosures and areas under their control, which are not found at Newmarket alone, though verbally to Newmarket exclusively the warning off applies. Practically it is world wide, for any person so named is not only prohibited from going on Newmarket Heath, from running, training or riding any horse, and from entering any enclosure of any race meeting conducted under Jockey Club rules, but in every case this warning off is ratified by the National Hunt, and meetings under their rule are also barred to the person so prohibited. Moreover, foreign racing Stewards likewise recognise the sentence. This tremendous power is wielded with great caution, but with equal fearlessness. A person may be 'undesirable' apart from and independent of anything done in his actual racing career: and if this quality be sufficiently pronounced we see that the Stewards launch their edict against him. They plainly think it was in the case."

By this warning off it appears that Sceptre will be disqualified for the Princess of Wales's Stakes of 10,000sovs. at the Newmarket First July Meeting. According to Rule 67 (A) of the Rules of Racing, "A horse is disqualified by the disqualification of his present owner, or that for his owner at the time of entry or subscription, or that of any person who has any interest in such horse's winnings." Sceptre was nominated for the Princess of Wales's Stakes by her former owner, and he has an interest in her winnings in the race to the extent of 400sovs., that being the amount which, according to the conditions, is to go to the nominator of the winner.

First entries for the Mysore Races are published in our issue of to-day: final entries close on the 15th instant.

Sweet Sound, a mare by Bill of Portland—Melodious, has been bought in Australia for India. The probabilities are she will fulfil her engagements at Caulfield before being shipped.

Second entries for the Mussoorie Summer Races are published in our paper to-day.

It is not a little curious that Mr. W. Bass, who last year purchased the ill-fated Grey Tick to lead Sceptre in her work and afterwards won good races with him (including the Cesarewitch), should have a similar experience in the case of Wet Paint. The son of St. Frusquin and Red Enamel was recently bought from Lord M. Beresford to lead the famous mare at Manton, and on the first occasion of running for his new owner he won the Prince's Handicap at Gatwick. Chanter, Templemore and Thunderbolt were all well backed for the race as will be seen from the details given in our London Sporting letter, and the first-named came within a neck of winning, but Madden, on Wet Paint, just got the best of Lane in a rattling finish and placed the useful stake to the credit of Mr Bass. According to Benson's chronograph Wet Paint covered the course (one mile and a half) in 2mins. 43⅕secs.

Mr. Galstaun's new trainer is Mumford, said to hail from Newmarket. Mumford arrived last week in the Olympia with Goldsmith, St. Marquis and Humdrum, and went up with them to Poona. Cragthorne, by Wolf's Crag—Under the Rose, died on the voyage near Port Said; the animal was insured.

The dates of the Mysore Polo Tournament are 24th, 26th, 27th and 29th June, and of the Bangalore Polo Tournament 13th, 15th, 18th and 20th July.

A Bangalore Horse Show is being organised for 21st, 22nd and 23rd July, and a Cricket week from 25th to 30th July, so that a great season is before the station.

St. Amant has been scratched for the Grand Prix, which will be run for next Sunday.

The substitution of sugar planting for the time-honoured industry in Tirhoot has, we note, brought about an invasion of pigs from the Terai, leading one gentleman, probably with an eye to business, to imply that another industry may be introduced into Behar—that of pork curing. Piggy was never in dearth up in these parts, but it is quite possible to have too much of a good thing. Little porkers and sows that have hitherto enjoyed an immunity are likely to be as much sought after as the grizzly patriarch himself, and the present generation even may witness an Indian Chicago arise on the banks of the Gandak! We can fully endorse the writer's eulogium on the lusciousness of the half-grown porker's ribs in the cane season. One thing is that, ladies and the youth of both sexes will be able to participate in the chase, while the return from a "stick" will resemble that of a party of Bashibasooks coming back from a raid into the Balkans, with the difference that the trophies bourne aloft on the Tirhoot victors' spear heads will consist of infantile swine instead of Bulgarian babies.

Fishermen on the big eastern rivers are complaining of the unusual number of catfish that have put in an appearance lately. These voracious water pirates play havoc among the hilsa now going up to the mountain streams to spawn, and although our huge herring does not come within the sport list of the devotees of the rod, if these predacious brutes follow them up such water game as masheer, basha and others will suffer. The catfish himself gives good play, but as he frequently attains the dimensions of 6 feet, pretty strong tackle is needed to land him. He should be plentiful enough at Port Canning or Diamond Habour if, as stated, he is cruising in the other waters; like the shark he'll take almost anything.

The rinderpest, or some disease resembling it, reported as having broken out among the big game in Lower Burma, will not be pleasant reading for those sportsmen who looked forward to the ramification of light railways opening up those well-stocked shooting grounds. All animals seem to suffer, the cause being attributed to owners of tame buffaloes driving their cows periodically into the jungles to be covered by wild bulls. But how is the disease transmitted to deer and elephants? These animals do not herd together and we can but surmise infection is spread by grazing, unless, indeed, the disease has arisen spontaneously in some mysterious manner. It was a well ascertained fact that deer at any rate contracted dengue fever during the prevalence of that malady in 1871-72, for sportsmen reported many lamed animals both from Northern and Southern India; close examination of the carcases revealing no reason for the crippled condition till a medical man at Coonoor determined the truth. Left to itself dengue merely ran its course, but the present disease is of a much more serious character and whether it has been correctly diagnosed or not it is proving fatal. In the interests of sport we hope our constituents in North Burma and the Eastern Frontier districts will not fail to attend to this matter, for though there is no means of checking it, as the jungles run into one another, it is important for the prevention of disappointment to note its ravages. Game is redundant enough in inaccessible places, but by no means so in those more readily get-at-able, and once India proper is invaded it may spread throughout the peninsula like the milder malady mentioned, or the enteritis that is afflicting the pheasants in the United Kingdom.

However ill furnished with up-to-date weapons our antagonists in Tibet may be, there is no doubt they possess in their unkempt, queer-looking steeds the nucleus of a breed of mounts for mountain warfare that would prove eminently serviceable either for military purposes, travel or pack, so we hope the opportunity of securing a good number of both mares and sires will not be neglected. The Bhutia ponies we are accustomed to, though perhaps descended from the same stock, are undersized compared to their congeners higher up in cloudland. In fact, from all accounts, the Tibetan horse is identical with that on which the Russian Cossacks from the Ukraine are mounted, and certainly these latter need no lauding for either speed, handiness or endurance. The first generation would probably be found unsuitable for work in the plains, but by judicious crossing the second should do pretty well. One thing, from being bred in a rarified atmosphere, the sires and mares should transmit to their progeny the most splendid lung power. It is not very probable, however, that ponies of Tibetan descent will ever be needed in the plains. Now that our grazing grounds are being extended so rapidly and the incentive of fair prices is stimulating breeding, the bulk of the animals we may expect to raise from this new source of supply will be needed solely for mountain operations, suitable beasts for which every fresh expedition shows we are still deficient in, despite our ransacking every country on the globe. The mortality among Indian-bred mules and other baggage animals the past two months proves we are still far from possessing the ideal beast for high elevations, but we think now we are within measurable distance for securing such.

A new terror to life in the Far East! In the Hongkong Government Bacteriologist's Report for 1903, Dr. Hunter says that 121 fowls were examined during the year and 44 were plague-infected. "Morphologically," he says, "the bacteria would pass for the B. pestis, but in the absence of more detailed examination the question at once rose as to the possibility of the forms of Spectiœmia avium. The organism of fowl cholera, although smaller in size, presents very much the appearance of the B. pestis morphologically. Fowl cholera is met with in Hongkong. I have met with several instances of it. The Bacterium avicidum is an organism which affects a large number of birds of different species, calling forth in their bodies a typical Bacteriamia, but so far has not been known to affect man to any great extent. The consumption of the carcases of fowls, ducks, etc., dead from this disease, however, frequently calls forth severe emesis and diarrhœa. The general consensus of opinion is that should a bird have succumbed to this disease, it ought, from a strictly sanitary point of view, to be destroyed, and not used for dietetic purposes. Forty-five ducks were also examined, 22 being found plague-infected.

Messrs. James Baldwin and Sons, the original patentees of gun wadding, and whose advertisement appears on page iii of this issue of The Indian Field, intend, we see, to keep abreast of the times; at least such we take to be the meaning of a recent announcement made by this old firm. They are entirely remodelling their works at Birmingham, putting up new and greatly improved machinery of their own special design. This should enable them to greatly facilitate their output for the coming season, a prospect that is not without interest to sportsmen in this country who have used Baldwin's wads for years and heartily appreciate them.

It is interesting to observe the procedure of a really good instructor in shooting, thoroughly expert at his work, observes "Nevis" in The County Gentleman. A client comes to him, let us assume, who may have been game shooting every season very regularly for the previous ten years, and is still far removed from a good shot. But a good shot he desires to become, and, by the recommendation of a friend, he places himself unreservedly in the hands of our expert, whose first step is to ascertain the precise type of marksman his client comes under, and the kind of gun he has been in the habit of shooting with. He does so by requesting his client to put up his own gun to his shoulder half-a-dozen times in quick succession. That is all that is necessary with a skilled expert to inform him whether his client has shot much or little, and whether he has developed a set style and manner of his own, and whether that style is good or bad, alterable or unalterable except with great difficulty. A mental note is made of the client's style in the brain of the expert, who now takes his client to the clay-bird traps. He is asked to fire seven or eight cartridges at flying clays, the expert keenly watching every shot, being able to trace the flight of the pellets through the air so clearly as to come to accurate decisions as to the directions in which they went past the bird, whether to right or left, high or low. This power of seeing the shot-charge travelling in the air is not given to every expert. Facility into distinguishing where the pellets have travelled, when the clay is missed, demands strong, clear eyesight and considerable practice. But when acquired, that power dispenses with all necessity for white-washed plating targets to tell experts where the pellets have hit, thus saving much time and trouble to the shooter, as well as to his instructor. Mr. Charles Lancaster, of Bond Street, and Mr. W. W. Watts, of the London Sporting Park, both claim to have acquired this serviceable power; and we believe them, for both have enjoyed long experience in coaching, but there are also other experts in shooting equally entitled to claim the possession of it. They prove their claims by undeniable demonstrations, so that there can be no question about the fact that this useful power can be acquired. Assuming that power, then, in our expert seven or eight shots at flying clays by his client all plainly visible to him in the air, and all, let us assume, a foot to the left and a foot below each clay, shows the expert that the shooter, who is missing so often in excellent style, and always in the same place, must have something wrong with his gun-stock. The fault may be found to be in the gun, not in the man; he has most probably been badly fitted, and could shoot very well with a well-fitting gun.

The consistent shooting of his client into a certain "gap," as Mr. R. C. Lehmann calls it, below, and to the right of the clays, gives the keen expert all the information he wants to improve his client's shooting. But he desires to convince the latter that it is so (for confidence in shooting goes far), and he has recourse to the "try-gun," adjustable to any dimensions of gun-stock. By the ingenious use of screws and hinges the expert alters the form and shape of the try-gun to make it what he considers suitable for his client temporarily, and thus let the demonstration at once proceed. This is done, and with the so altered try-gun the client finds that shooting just as he did before he can now smash six or seven clays out of ten that he formerly missed entirely. His confidence in himself, that was almost at vanishing point, now begins to return, he begins shooting clays right and left, both sent out at once. The whole of his previous practice for years, that almost led to his giving up shooting, now comes to his aid in the quick production of unison between hand and eye and between brain and trigger finger, that unison, that was of so little avail before, owing to mechanical faults that stood in their way. By his next visit to the ground the stock of his own gun has been altered by the client's gunmaker to the dimensions found to be best suited to him, and he performs equally well under skilled instruction at clays thrown over him at increasingly difficult angles, first singly, then in pairs, and finally, perhaps, in threes and fours, requiring a loader and a change of guns. Space fails us to describe the further proceedings in showing a fairly good shot how he can achieve much improved results, having obtained a weapon or pair of weapons that do not handicap his efforts by misfitting him at the shoulder. With a beginner in shooting, again, the process of tuition is entirely a different one, and in some ways a much easier one for the expert instructor. The latter has no set style to study in his young client; on the contrary, he has to build up his client's form into the best style, having no faults to eradicate, or to allow for, if irremovable, by a gun-stock built to help them into good shooting. Every expert has his own idea of what is best in bend and cast-off for a beginner, the root idea being with every case, that the less of either the better if the shooter's physical development is of the normal character. A beginner always prefers a well-bent stock, whereas the straighter the stock that he can be taught to shoot with the better for his ultimate success in modern game shooting. On the other hand, where any man has shot for years with a well-bent, well-cast-off gun-stock it is almost impossible to get him to accommodate himself to a straighter one with less cast-off. He has to be accommodated in that matter instead of fitting himself to a straighter gun, with which he might possibly have been able to have improved his form some ten or fifteen per cent. It can be seen, therefore, that the expert instructor has to study very carefully, in the light of his experience and skill, every shooter, good and bad, experienced and inexperienced from a different standpoint, weighing them up very quickly before he begins to advise them generally, or as to the taking of particular kinds of shots, on which even crack shooters may occasionally feel grateful for guidance, if only to have information given them where their shot-charges have gone, when they occasionally miss difficult clays. Altogether, the teaching of shooting is a most interesting and absorbing business, and one that is greatly dependent for success not only upon shooting skill, but also upon wide experience of all the pitfalls into which shooters are apt to fall, and have to be guarded against in all descriptions of sport with the gun.

The Tollygunge Club Gymkhana, advertised for next Saturday, has been postponed until Wednesday, the 22nd instant.

Athletic Notes.

THE regatta, which is one of the features of the Ranikhet Week at Naini Tal, was held on the 4th instant. Proceedings were interfered with by heavy rain, but the events were all carried through. Naini Tal beat Ranikhet by three-quarters of a length in the Fours after a good race. The Single Sculls was won by Mr. Coode, and the Novice Sculls by Mr. Mansell. Cooper's Hill won the Open Fours, but in the Open Pairs were defeated by the British Services represented by Messrs. Barnaby and Cooper.

The Calcutta Golf Club holds its annual competition for the Bombay Medal on the 10th and 11th instant.

The ups and downs of a big hitter are well exemplified in the case of Sewell this season, if Sewell, who so often plays a steady game, can be called a big hitter. In the very first big match of the season he scored 181, but since then has done nothing of note, his scores being 1, 0 and 33, 11 and 0. On the other hand, if a hitter only comes off three or four times during a season, he very likely wins a match or two for his side.

The following are some of the important Cricket matches played at home last week. On the 3rd instant Lancashire beat Surrey by an innings and 113 runs, and Kent beat Hampshire by 293 runs. On the 4th Leicestershire beat Essex by six wickets, Middlesex beat Yorkshire by 77 runs, Gloucestershire was defeated by Somerset by 105 runs, Notts beat Sussex by 226 runs. The match between Worcestershire and the South Africans was won by the former by 137 runs, and Warwickshire beat Cambridge University by five wickets.

The "horrible tale" of the Sutherlandshire eagle and the 18-month-old baby, which was circulated by some of the daily papers at the beginning of the week, has proved to be as fictitious as a number of sceptical readers no doubt suspected at the time. Thrilling details were given of the stricken parents' discovery of the child's absence, and how the mutilated body was subequently found in the mountains, but no mention was made of any eagle being actually seen by eye-witnesses. Considering that the whole story was a fabrication, this seems a fine opportunty lost. We should have preferred to hear of the gigantic bird swooping from the heavens to the crofter's doorstep and disappearing slowly above the roof with its human prey amid the tears and imprecations of the entire family. It would be interesting to know exactly how much well-authenticated evidence there is for the familiar story of golden eagles carrying off human infants. There is no intrinsic improbability about the feat, so far as the muscular effort goes; a golden eagle can, at a pinch, make off with a young lamb or fawn, and would find no particular difficulty in transporting an infant to its eyrie. But it seems a good deal more doubtful whether it is disposed by nature to extend its ordinary range of diet so far as to include such unaccustomed prey as babies caught up en passant from the bosoms of their families.

The Amateur Golf Championship at Sandwich has been won by Mr. Travis, an American.

Within a comparatively short time Stamford Bridge, most famous of the few athletic grounds left to London, will be in the hands of the builders, and it is evident the L. A. C. mean to make matters hum during the period of their tenancy still remaining. A couple of meetings were held last month, that of Thursday, the 12th May, being in a sense the most important, since Alfred Shrubb, going for the five miles' record, relegated to the background all previous times for the distance, including Jack White's 24mins. 40secs., which has stood for over forty years. That Shrubb was capable of performing the task set him those who know most about the South London Harrier were fully aware, and it is a pity that occasionally he runs with very bad judgment. The feature of Saturday's fixture was the Mile Relay race,—full details of which will be found in our London Sporting letter this week. Eight speedy runners representing the L. A. C. against an equal number selected from the Rest of England. Each man had to run 220 yards, and after an exciting struggle, which more than once hung in the balance, victory rested with the "Rest." The result would probably have been the other way about, however, but for the fact that the Cantab, R. W. Barclay, failed to turn out, his substitute, E. S. Ward, being very little good over short distances. Nearly all the other runners acquitted themselves with credit, C. H. Jupp doing "evens" for his furlong, while Cooper, Ayto-Rowell, and Berwill also showed fine form.

Ten teams entered in the Football tournament for the Murree Brewery Challenge Cup, which commenced on the 30th ultimo. In the first round the Royal Irish Fusiliers beat the Gunners from Pindi by a goal to nil; the King's Royal Rifles defeated the Dorsets after a fine game by five goals to one. In the second round the Gordon Highlanders beat the Somersets by two goals to one; a fine game between the Queen's and the Cameronians resulted in the victory of the former by a goal to nil. The match between the Wiltshires and the 104th Company R. G. A. ended in a draw; on replaying the tie the Wiltshires won by four goals to nil. The King's Royal Rifles beat the Royal Irish Fusiliers by four goals to nil. In the semi-finals the Gordon Highlanders beat the Queens by two goals to one.

In the second match of the semi-finals the Rifles beat the Wiltshires by one goal to love.

London, Friday, 20th May 1904.

It is to be hoped that the Tibetan Mission will receive its reinforcement quickly, to the end that the forward movement need not be delayed to infuse useless courage into the tribesmen. Mr. Lambert took upon himself to ask certain questions in the Commons on Monday night which Mr. Brodrick, in the exercise of his discretion, declined to answer: though it may be doubted whether the Lamas have any system of intelligence at all, or if they could turn information to any account if they got it. The "C. Bees" have said remarkably little about the business; on the whole, no doubt, they think flank attacks on the Finance Bill and on Mr. Chamberlain's proposals pay better.

It was officially announced on Saturday that only the first part of the burial service over Sir H. Stanley's remains would take place in Westminster Abbey: and the body was interred at Pirbright on Tuesday. Recognition of the explorer's wishes was manifested in the hall made by the procession in the Abbey by Livingston's grave. Canon Rannoley suggested that cremation would allow the burial of an urn containing the ashes near the remains of Livingston: but it is a question whether the matter of available space was that which influenced the Dean and Chapter in their decision. It is said that there is space for only seventy more graves in the Abbey: which indicates the necessity for very careful consideration of claims. The King and Queen wrote personally to Lady Stanley, condoling with her on her husband's death.

There are movements among the Continental nations which may mean much, or nothing. Austro-Hungary, through her ministers, wants an extra fourteen millions for the army next year, the usual estimates being for only fifteen millions. Then there are rumours of alliance between Servia and Bulgaria, which seem to have a solid basis: and though nothing has appeared in print on the subject, yet one hears enquiries whether Finland has been so sufficiently "Russified" that she will remain quiescent when the Bear fairly turns tail and retreats. Recent telegrams say that Russia does not mean to begin the war seriously till after the rains: that is, in September next. Russia's intentions, however, have not been the determining factors up to now, and there is little reason to suppose they will weigh more heavily in the future.

Last night's papers gave us news of the Japanese losses off Port Arthur. The Zoshino was only an old protected cruiser, but the loss of a vessel at once handy and fast, as the Zoshino, has proved herself, is serious enough: infinitely graver is the loss of Hatsuse, one of the most powerful ships in the Japanese navy. It is not as that of a single vessel that the loss of the Hatsuse must be regarded, but as that of one-sixth of the Japanese sea force. Japan had only the six battleships, and it is difficult to see how she can obtain any more under existing circumstances, while Russia professes to have several fighting ships on the stocks nearly ready to launch. There is an uneasy feeling abroad that these losses may have a very serious effect on the course of the war: but the Japs have displayed such unsuspected resource and enterprise that the feeling, I refer to, seems a trifle premature.

Mr. George Rollit calls his three-act play, produced at the Royalty, on Friday, a "Farcical Comedy," but I think farce pur et simple is about its measure. The Money Makers is founded on one of our national sins; and as betting is a highly popular National Sin, a piece that turns thereon without reading a ponderous moral recommends itself. The tale is easily told. Dot and Mabel engaged, respectively, to Captain Archie Fitzgerald, otherwise "Fitz," and Charles Clifton, medical student, want to make money in order to marry. Prompted by Bella, the maid, who has a young man who does a little quiet betting, Dot and Mabel conceive the idea of starting business as tipsters, and as Fitzgerald is going out of town, he is easily persuaded to lend the girls his rooms to "rehearse a charade" wherewith to surprise Dot's mother on her birthday. This preparatory business comprises Act I, the scene of which is Dot's Mother's kitchen over which Bella presides. "Fitz" is a penniless soldier, and the kitchen is the only place where he can meet his love. Act I, I am bound to add, was a bit slow, but the promise of fun to follow sustained us. The promise was fulfilled in Act II. Curtain rises on Dot and Mabel in Fitz's rooms doing a roaring trade as tipsters with Bella acting as clerk. Five-shilling postal orders for "special wires" arrive in sheafs, and the girls are writing telegrams for all they are worth. This is the fruit of an artistically worded advertisement inviting backers to send for the latest tip to "The Major." Needless to say the girls know as much about racing and betting as so many kittens, and being ignorant of the meaning of the verb "to scratch" in its turf connection, get into awful hot water by tipping Mustard for the something stakes the day after Mustard has been scratched. To thousands of "subscribers" the dear things tip Mustard in face of the annoucement in all the sporting papers. Naturally those suscribers who live within a day's march turn up at "The Major's" to enquire what it all means and get their money back: among the crowd is an American backer, a Cockney, and a French backer: also comes Mabel's young man, Charles Clifton. The row is in full blast when Mr. Mathew McDougall, the rich and righteous old Scotch uncle of Fitz, walks in, and we recollect that Fitz said something about uncle's intended visit when he gave up his latch key in Act I. Uncle remarks the "spread" on the sideboard and various suspicious luxuries from the jewellers (fruits of those many postal orders) and puts down Dot and Mabel as what they are not with ominous references to his roué nephew. He has not much time to speculate: the crowd of subscribers pounce upon him as "The Major," vide advertisement, and after rough handling is dragged away by the police to answer some thousand summonses for obtaining money by false pretences. Act III finds Dot and Mabel in despair: to them enter "Fitz," who has got his step since we last saw him. To him enter more wrathful subscribers to whom he admits being "The Major" exit in handcuffs. Then it is time for things to be put straight. Clifton undertakes to charge old McDougall, and when he learns that he is Fitz's uncle, he withdraws. Then it turns out that there was a mistake over that scratching: it was Bustard, not Mustard, that was scratched: Mustard ran starting at long odds and won, and all those thousands of subscribers have made heaps of money. Peace, release, apologies, kisses, etc., etc., the piece went with a rush from the beginning of Act II: I had enjoyed it more were there a little less noise on the stage, and I think it would lose nothing if played less tempestuously. The best of the players was Mr. Mark Kinghorne as old McDougall: Miss Lettice Fairfax as Mabel, and Miss Muriel Ashwynne as Dot, had not much acting to do in the strict sense of the word, but filled the parts of two eager, enthusiastic, perplexed or despairing girls very prettily.

"The Prince of Pilsen," a musical comedy hailing from America, was put on at the Shaftesbury on Saturday. It would go better, I think, had it been worked over by a Britisher, for the local and topical allusions were thrown away on a London audience. The scene is laid in the garden and court of the Hotel Internationale at Nice, and the fun depends on the mistake whereby Hans Wagner, Dutch brewer of Cincinatti, is regarded as Carl Otto, Prince of Pilsen. The true Prince of course turns up and makes love to Nellie, Wagner's daughter. Plot there is none: nor is it wanted, for the music is pretty and tuneful, some of the numbers being much above the musical—comedy or variety—entertainment average. The house was delighted with the piece, and it is likely to hold the boards for many weeks to come. Mr. John Ransome, as the Dutch brewer, bore the brunt of the work, and when his sayings were intelligible to Britishers, he was uncommonly amusing.

Mr. H. H. Davies' Cynthia, which appeared on Monday, is one of the plays which the author's success has brought to the surface: and truth to tell a deserved reputation suddenly earned had lost nothing were Cynthia never to have seen the light at Wyndhams, or anywhere else for that matter. The whole play centres upon the pretty, spoiled, impulsive and extravagant Cynthia (Miss Ethel Barrymore). Cynthia has married Albert, son of the wealtly merchant, Mr. Jerrold, and her one idea is to see how much she can spend. Gold taps, mounted with diamonds in the bathroom, is one of her fancies for example. She wants a dozen carriages and pairs and her whole ideas of housekeeping are on a similar scale. Albert (Mr. Du Maurier) makes nothing and lives on his father's (Mr. Charles Grove's) bounty. Papa protests and Albert tries to make his wife economise: Cynthia's idea of economy is to "give up having coffee after dinner." The need of money is so great that Albert proposes to go without a new greatcoat: whereupon Cynthia sends, by her manicurist (a Jew usurer's agent he turns out to be) for a money-lender, Mr. Duncan, who lends her £3,000 at 200 per cent: that her hub shall have his greatcoat. This transaction is a secret and Cynthia's aunt by marriage, Miss Jerrold, suspects Mr. Hampton, an American friend of the young lady "who is far too much about the house." Albert, seeing the case empty on the table, thinks his wife has sold her diamonds to raise coin. Act III was the most amusing. We find Cynthia, a reformed character, in the kitchen doing house work, while Albert is out looking for a situation. Enter remorseless creditors: Cynthia holds a meeting and suggests that she and her servants who want their wages paid shall start a hairdressing and manicuring shop to be financed by Duncan. This scene was funny, if a trifle forced in its humour. Eventually when Albert has accepted a berth on the Gold Coast and Cynthia clings to him protesting he shall not go without her and she will "live on nothing" that much tried Jerrold père turns up and puts things straight. The play is clever: the dialogue is full of wit, and the character touches are subtle and neat: but it is not in the same street as "Cousin Kate" nor as good as "Mrs. Gorringe's Necklace." It is as a writer of character plays that Mr. Davies succeeds and Cynthia is not a convincing person. Miss Henrietta Cowen, as the honest shrewish aunt, and Mr. Max Freeman, as the Jew money-lender, were very good.

On Wednesday night—it has been a busy week in the theatres—Mr. H. Hamilton's version of Veronique was produced at the Apollo. Veronique is not a musical comedy: it is comic opera with a tangible story whose interest is sustained all through. The plot is simple. Florestan de Valiancourt is affianced to Hélène de Solanges: it is a marriage of convenience, and he has never seen her, though she knows him well by sight: Florestan does not want to marry, but his choice lies between Hélène and prison for debt: also he has a flirtation on hand with Agatha Coquinard, who runs a flower shop. He is to meet Hélène at a ball at The Tuilleries one night, and in the morning goes to say adieu to Agatha: he invites her and all her girls to a party at Romainville: Hélène and her aunt overhear the invitation, and engaging themselves as shop girls to Agatha, are automatically included in the invitation. Hélène, as Veronique, the florist, easily brings Florestan to her feet at the party, and his bearing is so courtly that she falls a victim to him. In the third act, The Tuilleries Ball, the pair meet again in their proper social station and there you are. Miss Rosina Brandram was perfectly suited as Hélène's grande dame aunt, and Miss Ruth Vincent was charming as Hélène. Mr. Laurence Rea was Florestan, and a gallant lover he made. The music is very pleasing and the lyrics, freely rendered, very freely, from the French are much more to the point than these things usually are. Veronique's "Take Estelle and Veronique" is one of the best songs, and another good one is "Dear Little Donkey" in the same Act. The donkey had not profited by rehearsal, it may be remarked, and if he cannot get over stage fright it will remove a risk to dispense with him.

The Darling of the Gods will soon come to an end, to make place for Shakespearian revivals, so 'tis said: A Chinese Honeymoon comes to its close, and the Wheat King and Joseph Entangled put up their shutters after to-morrow night. Mr. Leigh's idea of taking the Court Theatre and letting it out to any company that wants to "run a show" for a few nights has answered exceedingly well: the stage has been occupied without a single hiatus since the system was started. If I say little about the doings there it is because the "runs" are necessarily so short. Yvette Guilbert is with us again, and a good deal changed. It may be partly due to the 18th Century dress she wears at the Bechstein Hall, but whatever the change, she is no longer weird as of yore, but charming and picturesque as a girl of Watteau. Her voice is improved also, and as she has lost none of her wonderful coquetry, grace and effrontery, she fairly took the house by storm. Vecsey, the Hungarian boy violinist, of whom Joachim has said he has greater genius than any player of any age who has come within his experience, is giving a series of concerts at St. James's Hall. The third took place on Tuesday, and the hall was full: but whether Vecsey is going to create a furore or not remains to be seen. I feel guilty for that having remarked upon the opening of the opera season. I have left Covent Garden alone. The fact is that with the number of new plays one week and the crush of interests of other kinds another week, either my time or your space do not

The "Hawkins Sale" at Christies has been attracting a good deal of attention during the last few days. There were some sensational prices on Friday last. Duveen, the Bond Street dealer, paid £2,750 for a miniature of Frances Howard, Duchess of Norfolk, by Hans Holbein. This work of art is about the size of a four-shilling piece. Snuff boxes were in brisk demand too, one, Louis XVI, gold box bringing a trifle of £1,650. Many stories of Mr. Hawkins, who is said to have spent £10,000 a year on miniatures, snuff boxes and other works of art are floating around. He lived at No. 10, Portland Place, a roomy house, as all in that favoured quarter are, but the place was more like a dealer's neglected store house or an embryo museum than anything else. Once he acquired a picture or anything he wanted he seemed to take no further interest in it, the thing might, and often did, lie for years just where the carrier's man happened to leave it. Every room in the house was crammed with things the acquisitive old gentleman had made no attempt to put away. He could find a corner for every thing but his wife: who for long lived at the Langham (I think it was the Langham). Coming home one afternoon, she found passages and living rooms in a state of congestion from her husband more than usually extensive purchases at a sale, and remonstrated. Mr. Hawkins suggested that she should go to an hotel for the night that things might be got straight. Mrs. Hawkins agreed: she went to the hotel and stayed there for sixteen years.

Various items: The Lord Mayor presided at a Mansion House Meeting on Wednesday, called to further the scheme of an Irish International Exhibition to be held in Dublin in 1906. The Lord Mayor of Dublin telegraphed to "protest" against any endeavour to help a scheme to which "all Irishmen object," i.e., the international character. Show me a Nationalist in power and I shall show you a champion idiot. The Road Car Company have struck out a new line in omnibi—if that be plural of omnibus—having done away with the side seats and put "garden seats" inside on the principle of the roof accommodation. Vesta Victoria, the music hall actress, has obtained an absolute decree against her husband for cruelty and misconduct. The Jockey Club has warned Mr. Sievier off Newmarket Heath, though the "Turf Libel Case" had nothing whatever to do with the Turf, this bye-result of the trial was hardly unexpected.

The International Sports Exhibition opened at the Crystal Palace on Saturday. It is in the main an "implement" show of guns, rods, tackle, and so on: with a long series of athletic meetings, and polo, fencing, billiard, tennis matches, etc., to attract out of doors. There are some curiosities on view: Alexander Selkirk's gun: the bowls with which Drake stopped playing when the Armada was sighted: a bat His Majesty played with when Prince of Wales: and a round dozen 18th century bats lent by the M. C. C.: oars used on famous occasions and other relics of sporting history. The collection of heads is a remarkably good one. Admiral Kennedy, Sir H. Seton Karr and Mr. Hesketh Pritchard being responsible for the majority. Among the modern improvements, Wright's new billiard table caught my fancy: each pocket connects with a track under the table whereby the balls return automatically to the baulk end: a useful dodge for practice play.

Monday was a big day at Tattersalls. The Marquis of Cholmondeley's and the Blankney Hunt horses were the chief attractions, but there were several lots of clinking polo ponies too, and the crowd was full of men from the "shires" and familiar at Hurlingham and Roehampton. Mr. E. Ezra got 300 guineas each for two ponies, and Mr. J. B. Dale got 240 and 180 respectively for Pedlar and Nellie. Lord Cholmondeley's bay hunter, Barn Dance, a rare stamp of the weight carrier, brought 340 guineas. Buckminster went for 280 and Holmby for 230 guineas. Mr. R. Burke of Fethard Martes of the "Tips," sent up half a dozen very nice looking hunters which went at prices from 100 to 190 guineas.

ONLOOKER.

It is said that no bird, or creeping thing will touch a castor-oil plant It seems to be a rank poison to all the animal world. Even a goat will starve before biting off a leaf, and a horse will sniff at it and turn up his upper lip as though it had the most detestable odour on the face of the earth. Army worms and the locusts will pass by it, though they may eat every other green thing in sight, and there is no surer way to drive moles away from a lawn than to plant a few castor beans here and there. Even the tobacco worm will refuse to be fed on its leaves. There is hardly another instance in natural history of a plant being so universally detested by the animal world.

THE MANGO.

MR. G. M. Woodrow's treatise upon the mango, its different hybrids and cultivation, will no doubt commend itself to the European horticulturist, those in charge of experimental farms, the gardeners of Native States and our colonists in the tropics, but the recommendations are rather two elaborate for the usual native cultivator to follow. Few, we fancy, were aware that there were nearly eighty varieties of the fruit ranging from the flannel and turpentine one up to the luscious Maldah or Langra of Benares. In his list of the better class or most popular jats of mangoes the author quotes largely from our old friend Charles Maries, whose book on the mango of Behar ought to be ranked as a classic, but we fail to find any reference to, or description of, such well known and choice mangoes as the Doorga Lall. ka khelwa. Muktoola wallah, Maharaj pussund, Ashgari Begum, Gopaler dhola or Piwunda, Mr Woodrow tells us all about grafting, transport of trees and selection, but we are still confronted with the difficulty of putting down the choicest fruit of Hindustan in perfect condition on the European markets

MY LITTLE PRESERVES.

VI.

AND now let me redeem my promise to relate how, a few days after the disappointment we had, that was mentioned in my last, we succeeded in bagging the bull. The herd had gone off very quietly, and made for a big jungle to the south of our camp, so we refrained from following them up, feeling pretty sure that they would turn up again before long, in the neighbourhood of the swamp, and in this we were not disappointed. During the next four days we saw three other herds, one of four, another of seven and the third of nine, all in the same part of the plateau. Being laid up with a nasty attack of rheumatism, I was unable to go, F. went after them on three consecutive days, but somehow or other failed to get up to them in time on two occasions, and on the third, after making a capital stalk, found the bull had so poor a head, that he would not shoot. This was particularly hard lines, as while stalking the herd, he came quite close upon a solitary ibex, but would not fire for fear of disturbing the bison.

That evening I received a wire from by friend S., saying that he was coming up for a three days' shoot, and would be with us on the following Wednesday, so although we saw a herd of bison on the next and two succeeding mornings we left them alone, in hopes that S. who was paying us a long promised visit, and who was particularly anxious to bag a bull, would get a shot.

S. duly arrived, and on the following morning went out with F to the swamp; they saw a herd of nine, but failed to get a shot. Next morning, as soon as it was light, they were out again, having seen a couple of bison on the slope of the hill about half a mile on this side of the swamp. Shortly after they left we saw the rest of the herd all feeding down in the direction of our camp, so that we felt pretty sure that to-day, at any rate, they were in for a bit of luck.

By the time S. and F. had got to the foot of the hill, the bison had fed down nearly to the bottom, but had moved off over the shoulder, and to us who were watching them through the glasses, it seemed that they were going off into the jungle. Any how we saw no more of them, and could not imagine what had become of S. and F. Before long we spotted a solitary figure coming down the hill from just below where the bison had disappeared, and fondly hoped that it was one of the hill men who had accompanied them, coming back to fetch coolies to bring in the head.

Little did we dream that while we were anticipating all sorts of good luck for them, one of them had met with a most unfortunate accident and had a most narrow escape. On their return a couple of hours afterwards we could see from F's. face, who was a little in front, that something untoward had happened, and this is the story they had to tell.

When they got to the bottom of the hill down which they had seen the bison feeding when they started, they lost sight of them, and were doubting whether the herd had gone into the valley to the right or into the jungle to the left. F. went off the path to the right, leaving S. watching the left slopes and sent one of the hill men up the hill. Suddenly a cow came along to the left of S. about 40 yards off, and expecting to see the rest of the herd following, he pushed on through the long grass to get a closer shot at the bull, and fell headlong into an elephant pit, that in the excitement of the moment, he had forgotten all about.

One of the hillmen seeing S. so suddenly disappear, shouted to F. who came running up and found to his horror what had happened.

It was no easy matter getting S. out of the pit as he had dislocated three fingers, cut his eye very badly, and was of course severely bruised and very much shaken. It was a most miraculous escape, the only wonder being that he was not killed on the spot.

* * * * *

So far, in spite of the number of bison that had been seen, not a shot had been fired at them, and a couple of days after S. had left, we spotted another herd at the same old spot, the hill just above the swamp. It was too late to go after them that evening, but, F. and I made a very early start next morning, leaving camp as soon as it was light. Before we had gone half a mile, a look through the binoculars assured us that the bison were there all right, but they were rather low down the hill, and in a nasty position for the stalk. We pushed on as fast we could for the next mile, which brought to the elephant pit where we called a halt, after a careful examination of the country all round moved on another quarter of a mile up the hill to a spot whence we could command a good view of the slope on which we had seen the bison.

There they were right enough, eleven of them, one good bull, and the rest apparently cows,—it was impossible to get to them in the position they were in, so there was nothing for it but to wait patiently till they moved off a bit. Two of the cows were a few hundred yards away from the others, and seemed restless, continually stopping, feeding, and looking about in a suspicious sort of way—but the wind was in our favour, and they could not possibly have seen us; however it was some relief to see them after a bit move off quietly to the left, and still more to see the rest of the herd, the bull bringing up the rear, following after them, in the very direction I hoped they would take. In another ten minutes they were all out of sight, and we were at last able to make a move.

The ridge up which we had to go, was all short grass, and there was little or no cover, so we had to proceed with the greatest caution as the higher up we got, the greater was the chance of our being spotted by one of the numerous cows.

About two-thirds of the way up we got a sight of the bull and one cow making for the swamp, so naturally imagined that the rest of the herd must have already got there, in which case we should be safe to get an easy shot. On again we trudged making for a small depression in the hill from which we could command a fairly good view of the valley to the left. Having satisfied ourselves that none of the herd had wandered down that side, and there being no signs of the bull on the ridge above us, we made for the swamp, feeling sure that in another five minutes we should be up with them. Crawling through the grass, we got down to the swamp most successfully, but only to find that the bison had never gone into it, but had moved off along the ridge and apparently gone down the eastern face of the swamp hill—so far, so good, we had taken every possible precaution, had made a most careful stalk, and were soon—rather sooner than I expected—to be rewarded. From the bottom of the swamp to the ridge over which I had seen the bull and cow go, was not more than a hundred and fifty yards, we were not more than half an hour behind them, so that there was every chance of our catching up with them before they reached the jungle at the bottom of the valley for which they would be sure to make.

Just as we reached the top of the ridge, to our intense delight we spotted the herd quietly grazing on the slope below us, utterly unconscious of danger; the bull was the last, and barely 70 yards off with one cow close by, the rest about 50 yards in advance.

The whole lot were feeding away from us, and the bull was stern on when we first saw him; F., to whom I had given the shot, very wisely waited a minute till he moved nearly broadside on and then let him have it. The cows were off like the wind, but the bull staggered down the hill, and I thought he would drop before he had gone 50 yards. We bolted after him and nearly ran over two little calves, that in the excitement we had not noticed before. They stood together for a few minutes, and then went off, with their tails in the air, after the cows, who had disappeared over the southern ridge.

F. meantime put in another shot, but it seemed to put new life into the bull who went off full bat for another 50 yards. A third shot at close quarters knocked him clean over, and we then thought of course that he was done for, but he picked himself up, and managed to get into some very high grass where he lay down and was so perfectly still that we felt sure it was all over. One of the hillmen who was with us "just to make sure" as he put it, picked up a stone and threw it in the direction of the bull, but with no result. A second attempt, however, was more successful as it roused the poor brute, and he staggered to his feet, and made one more feeble attempt to get away, but it was of no use; another shot put him out of his misery.

He attempted a mild sort of a charge at the end, but was too far gone to make it good.

After duly admiring the grand old fellow, and taking a few measurements, we called for the tiffin basket, the contents of which were most thoroughly enjoyed after our somewhat long, but highly successful stalk.

With the assistance of the hillmen we cut off the head, and brought it back with us to camp, which we reached about noon.

In my next I must tell you how another stalk after bison was spoilt by a heard of elephants and how a few weeks ago, by the hardest of hard luck, I missed getting a shot at a solitary tusker who gave me the slip, and while I was after him in the jungle at the foot of the hill actually passed within 30 yards of our camp, and was hunted right away by my foxhound "Boxer."

SAVERNAKE.

THE NIZAM'S SHOOTING TRIP.

HIS Highness the Nizam made his first bag of the season on the 25th May in the shape of a full-grown tigress at the village of Dhanasari. For some days previously a tiger had been marked down in the jungle round Dhanasari, but when the beat commenced it revealed the presence of two tigers, a male and female. His Highness with Colonel Afsar-ul-Mulk Bahadur, C.I.E., was located in a jhulah or suspended perch to await the advent of the game. "These," says the correspondent of the Deccan Post, to whom we are indebted for the stirring details, "at last broke and came into view. The tigress was leading with her head turned to the left. Thus she ed a sort of broadside to His Highness who, with characteristic faultless aim, lodged a bullet in her , shattering the fifth rib, cutting away the under lobe he heart and finally smashing the liver—this last was e result of the explosion of the ball. It is needless to add at the brute dropped on the spot with hardly a struggle. [Doubtless Ed.] Her mate, following in her wake and seeing so suddenly the fate she met with attempted to escape unscathed, but the royal master who had so liberally contributed towards their up-keep and that of other denizens of their ilk had his eye fixed upon the ungallant mate and billetted him with two bullets as pools of blood testified. If master 'stripes still breathes the sylvan atmosphere in the bowels of the cavernous rock into which he retreated and refused to come out, he will have ample food for reflection never again to show even his nose to that grand past master of shots." [Phew !]

The bringing of the trophy to camp was the occasion of much rejoicing in true Oriental style and is described thus by this priceless correspondent :—" Meantime the good stiding was brought to the Subadar Agha Sheikh Mohammed who, with his characteristic readiness and resourcefulness, at once organised a torch light procession. His Highness had returned to camp ere this could be formed. The procession headed by the Local Police and supported by the military and newly-uniformed Sowars of the Nazm Jamiat, met the elephant bearing the valued remains a long way out of camp and escorted their precious charge in to the ear-splitting din of the hundreds of drums, 'ruction,' horns, etc, not to omit the welcome bugles. The sounds of these could be caught even above the noise of the tom-toming and tumultuous shouting by the multitudes of beaters who had joined the processionists. The order of the procession was this. The District Superintendent of Police, Mr. Narottam Das, with his erect stalwart figure marched in command and was followed by four Amins in one line ; then came the Police Foot in fours ; next the Mounted Police with their lances having pennons floating gaily in the evening breeze ; then the Nazm Jamiat who attracted attention on account of their uniform which was spic and span and was the only arm that seemed uniformed for the first time since their service. Now came His Highness' Body Guard, a fine set of fellows full of blood and muscle and tenacious of discipline. Then the Infantry also a fine specimen of masculinity, (sic) next the beaters by fours too armed with their noisy instruments, and the last of all the grand trophy of the day—the elephant being closely guarded by the shikaries carrying guns on their shoulders. I was just omitting to mention an important figure in this drama and this was no other than Khaja Aminuddin, the Superintendent of the Preserves. He was riding his faithful and hard-worked mule, Barney, from whose saddle came out two iron brackets curving outwards the shoulders of the rider. The ends of these were ringed each holding a flaming lamp which shed its light far and wide. Before this grand procession could move on, the whole camp was astir and joined bodily the vast sea of heads and shoulders. [Wah wah !] Thus the procession marched round the camp and then halted in front of His Highness Saloons. Here the elephant was made to deposit his valuable load. After the trophy lay in view for some time, it was taken away to be 'anatomised' and his precious claws, skin and head thereafter to come under the skilful hand of the taxidermist. Soon afterwards Nazars were presented. Mr. Marrett, Superintending Engineer, was among the presentees. His Highness, while receiving the Nazars gave each donor a gracious smile in token of his acceptance of the customary offering. This done, Agha Sheikh Mohammed approached His Highness and read out in his customary clear and stentorian voice the short ode he had composed for the occasion. The theme was that the King of the land had paralysed the King of the jungles by the power of his arm. In other words the tiger, for instance, is reckoned always as being at the mercy of the sportsman. In fact the poetic significance as given in Persian cannot with any approach to tolerable interpretation, be rendered in English. To attempt this would be perhaps to deprive it of its flowery and poetic beauty and clothe it roughly and insipidly in English phraseology. [How true !] After the recitation His Highness clapped his hands immediately caught up by those around and expressed his high appreciation to the author for his 'valuable effusion' and then three cheers were called by the popular and energetic Colonel Afsar-ul-Mulk, C.I.E., responded to lustily by the thousand and one voices or throats crowded around accompanied with musical honours. This closed the day's proceedings."

The correspondent concludes with the following pious wish :—" We do all hope that His Highness will be able to secure two or more 'stripes' at his next camp to make up for the wounded tiger that probably died in some inaccessible rock hole and could not be got hold of ; and Nur Shikari is no man to stop at any obstacle in such matters."

SNOOKERS.

TO THE EDITOR OF " THE INDIAN FIELD."

Sir,—Will you kindly answer the following point regarding "snookers ?" A. B. and C agree to have a game and during the progress thereof A puts down a red ball, and has the option of aiming at any cloured pool ball. A. seeing a black and blue ball nearly together, attempts a shot at blue, but hits the black, whereon B. and C. ask A. at what ball he aimed. Can they legitimately ask this question after the stroke when they could have done so with the usual penalty on A. before ? Under the circumstances is A. liable to be mulcted or not ?

Ignorant.

[After pocketing a pyramid ball, the player plays on any of the pool balls, but he must declare what ball he intends to play at according to the rules. If, however, he did not do so before making the stroke, his opponents cannot legitimately ask him to declare his shot after he has made it we should say.—Ed.]

THE CLASSIC RACES.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE INDIAN FIELD."

Sir,—Can you inform of the meaning of the word "Classic" as applied to races at Home. Does it mean antiquity ? If so why only to three-year old racing—five races I believe.

Does it mean high-class races, if so why ? Only applied to three-year old races ?

Or does it mean class alone as three-year old colts and fillies and to what races does it apply ?

Argument.

[The Derby, St. Leger, Two Thousand Guineas, One Thousand Guineas and Oakes have for many years, by common consent been called "Classic" events ; we confess we cannot say why they are so styled nor why certain other very important events are so far excluded from the title. Perhaps some reader can give the derivation.—Ed.]

FIVE TO THREE AGAINST.

TO THE EDITOR OF " THE INDIAN FIELD."

Sir,—Will you kindly let me know, whether, during your experience of sport, you have ever heard of a horse starting at 5 to 3 against. Hoping this will put you to no trouble, and thanking you in anticipation,

H. O.

[We have never heard 5 to 3 quoted, nor can we find such a quotation in connection with any races out here or at home.—Ed.]

INDIAN BOTTOM FISHING.

THE EDITOR OF "THE INDIAN FIELD."

Sir,—As you surmise I have no experience of the Calcutta tanks, and have therefore never caught fish of the calibre described I take it, however, that it is the nature of the tank, not the size of the fish, which governs the method of presenting the bait. [Certainly. Ed.]

The fish of from ten to fifteen pounds from which I have derived my conclusions no doubt behave in much the same way as the heavier Calcutta ones.

I have tested both Mr. Luscombe's method, and Thomas' double hook plan ; and as I said before when the fish can be induced to take paste offered on the latter tackle, I consider there is nothing like it for hooking them.

The double hooks are close up to the paste and in an excellent position for hooking a fish which is missed by the top and baited hook.

It will be remembered that the single unbaited hook below the baited one, was thoroughly tried in Southern India in about 1887 or 1888 by the members of the " Rod in India" Club, and eventually given up in favour of the pair of Limericks back to back.

My great objection to Thomas' tackle is the gut going direct up from the bait : this I am sure makes shy fish suspicious, and this I believe to be the reason why Mr. Luscombe's tackle is often much the most successful This latter tackle is in my opinion still further improved by having the shot a greater distance from the hook. It is what is called in England a combination of the ledger and float tackle, and is often used for taking large and sky roach. The loose shot working freely on the gut line allows great freedom to the bait, and presents any suspicious drag, when the fish takes the paste into its mouth.

When fishing a shallow edged tank, I use no float, but cast my unweighted paste bait a good distance out, and then gently draw in the slack.

The gut thus lies flat along the bottom and nothing but the paste itself is visible to the fish.

It is extraordinary what confident bites one sometimes gets when fishing thus : this bears out what I have said about the suspicion fish exhibit towards a gut line rising direct from the bait.

Of course no one would fish without a float unless the conditions are such as to make the use of a float inadvisable.

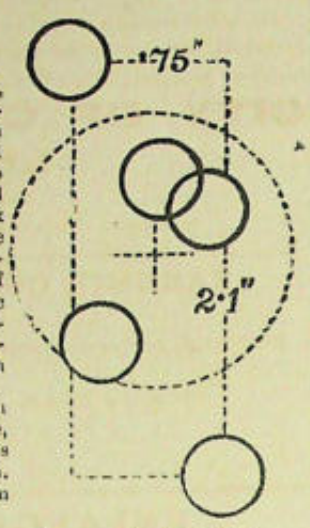
"SPECIAL No. 2." ·450 Bore.

CORDITE RIFLES



FOR BIG GAME.

Average Velocity 2,171ft. per second.

Striking Energy Equals an 8-bore Firing Black Powder.

The Special No. 2 gives a pressure of about 13 tons compared with 16 to 18 of the original ·450 Cordite Cartridge, consequently there is a greater margin of safety, and the risk of jamming is reduced to a minimum.

"THE FIELD,"
9th May, 1903.

"Messrs. Joseph Lang & Son, Ld., have been very prompt in submitting for our notice a rifle which has been chambered and regulated for firing the new No. 2 nitro cartridge.....A thoroughly sound and well turned out piece of work .....maximum of strength and ease of extraction. Very high velocities.....most marvellous run of uniformity. In fact, it would be extremely difficult to find an instance where equally well authenticated experiments have shown such satisfactory readings."

Five shots at 100 yards with the new No. 2 Nitro Cartridge, fired in a LANG Rifle. Centres of shot holes fell within 2·1 in. by ·75 in. Average deviation from point of mean impact ·7 in.

"THE FIELD." A fine piece of shooting.

"A target made at 100 yards, which is in our possession, contains a group of five shots with a distance of 1in. between the centres of the highest and lowest perforations and ⅛ths of an inch between those on the extream right and left."

"EL. OBEID."

"With reference to the ·450 Cordite Rifle you made me, I am very pleased with it. It is extremely accurate, and, although heavier than the ordinary ·450 Express taking black powder, the difference in weight is not sufficient to prevent an ordinary European carrying it himself all day in a hot climate. For these reasons it is often the only rifle I take with me out shooting, and have killed with it Lion, Koodoo, Waterbuck, Hartebeest, etc."

BANGALORE SECOND EXTRA DAY.

Saturday, 4th June 1904.

NOTWITHSTANDING the fact that the first race on the card was reduced to a match, the Bangalore "Second Extra" provided excellent sport on the whole. Attendance was again only fair, although better than it was last week, but the Bangalore season has hardly begun yet and many people are still in the hills. The weather was propitious, the bookmakers laid fair prices and, on the whole, probably had a satisfactory day. For although Derision beat Delight comfortably enough in the opening event, it was at one time a moot point as to which pony had the most call, and Sister was the only other absolute favourite which won during the afternoon. This mare, by the way, looked very fit, and is a credit to Gerrard who has been looking after Mr. Apear's horses during Watson's late holiday But she had to be saddled at the post, and "oh! she looked sweet"—sweet tempered that is to say. There was another villain in this race and that was St. Rule, a horse which lately caused the death of Major Hamilton's Rubicon by kicking him at the start. But St. Rule was in a hood, was kept on the outside by the starter, and on this occasion did no damage The English importation—Carburton—did not run up to his reputation brought from home, but it is early days yet and he may not be fit. As each race is described in its place more lengthy comment here is unnecessary, but it may be said in a word that the Bangalore season is promising to be the best for some years. Details:—

THE DESERT PLATE.—Rs. 150, of which the second pony will receive Rs 25. For Arab ponies. Weights—Handicap. 5 furlongs.

Mr S W Webster's b a g Derision, 8st 7lbs Meah Jan 1

BETTING: 6 to 4 on Derision.

The two ran together until nearing the distance, when Derision drew out and won in a canter by a length. Time—1min. 14⅘secs.

THE ULSOOR PLATE.—Rs. 150, of which the second pony will receive Rs. 25. For ponies. Weights—Handicap. ¼ mile.

Mr C P Graham's ch aus m Shot Silk, 8st 2lbs ... ... Hoyt 1

BETTING: 6 to 4 on Cleopatra II., 2 to 1 each agst Shot Silk and Cossack, 3 to 1 Firebrand, and 4 to 1 Felicity.

Cleopatra II. on inside jumped away, but almost at once gave way to Shot Silk, the latter making the running at a great pace, and coming into the straight with at least a couple of lengths clear lead. She was never approached and won as she liked by two lengths; three quarters of a length between second and third Time 1min. 23⅕secs.

THE PALACE PLATE.—Rs. 150, of which the second horse will receive Rs. 25. For horses. Weight—Handicap 6 furlongs.

The Hon Mr A A Apear's br aus m Sister, 6st 10lbs ... ... Bennett 1
Lieut-Col J Desaraj Urs' ch aus g Courara, 9st 6lbs ... ... Melsom 2

Capt St C Houston's ch aus g Redoubt, 7st 8lbs ... ... King 0
Messrs Pratt and Co's b aus g Comet, 6st (car.7st 2lbs) ... .. Krishna 0

BETTING: Evens Sister, 2 to 1 agst Courara, 3 to 1 Carburton, 5 to 1 each St. Rule and Comet, and 6 to 1 Redoubt.

Courara was quickest away, but Sister at once raced past her on the outside, and assumed a strong lead. As they came into the straight, the order was Sister leading Courara by a length with Carburton third, and in this order they finished, Mr. Apear's queer tempered mare winning fairly easily by a length, with Carburton four lengths behind Courara. Time—1 min. 12secs.

THE PADDOCK PLATE.—Rs. 150, of which the second pony will receive Rs. 25. For bond fide Arab poines that have never won a flat race of the value of Rs. 50 or over Weights—Handicap. ¼ mile.

Major Smyth's g a h Diamond Rose, 9st 6lbs ... ... — F Koops 1

BETTING: Evens Matussan, 2 to 1 Jack Horner, 3 to 1 Diamond Rose, 4 to 1 each Khusrow and Quince and 6 to 1 Jacob.

The last-named made running until dispossessed of the lead by Diamond Rose. Coming round the bend for home Jack Horner began to make up ground and a furlong from home he was on terms with the leader and looked like winning. Diamond Rose, however, ran on gamely under the whip and staying the longest won by a length and a quarter; three-quarters of a length between second and third. Time—1 min. 31⅕secs.

THE STEWARDS' PURSE.—Rs. 150, of which the second horse will receive Rs. 25. For horses. Winner claimable for Rs. 1,200. Weights—Handicap. ½ mile BETTING: Evens Marquise, 6 to 4 agt. Musketeer, 3 to 1 each Kingfisher and Best Shot and 6 to 1 Quicksilver.

The lot got away well together, but at the turn into the straight Musketeer went to the front and quickly spreadeagling his field, he won striding away by six lengths, with Best Shot three-quarters of a length behind the favourite. Time—52⅕secs.

DINAPORE GYMKHANAS.

ON Thursday, 26th and Saturday, 28th May, gymkhana races were held at Dinapore The conditions were framed with a view to exclude racing ponies and to confine the different events to ordinary chargers, polo and tumtum ponies, which at a regular race meeting would be hopelessly outclassed.

The entries were hardly up to expectations, the only good fields being for the Stiffuns' Stakes and a race for battery horses on the Thursday and the Stiffuns Handicap and Pony Handicap on the Saturday. The executive were lucky with respect to the weather as a heavy thunderstorm broke over the course shortly after racing finished on Thursday, the rain continuing the whole Friday but clearing up on Saturday and giving a fine afternoon to finish with. On Wednesday evening the lotteries were presided over by the Honorary Secretary, Mr. H. Blackmore, and if no sensational prices were realised purchasers were readily found for such ponies as were not available, it being the guest night of the Duke of Wellington's Regiment consequently the lotteries had to be held early in the evening, Mr. Blackmore again presided and two were successfully got through. Quite a number of ladies graced the racing with their presence and on Saturday we had the pleasure of welcoming several of the Bankipore contingent. On each afternoon the Duke of Wellington's Regiment dispensed hospitality to all and sundry and on Saturday in addition they allowed their band to play much appreciated selections at intervals throughout the afternoon. A most successful little gathering was brought to a conclusion on Monday evening by the Duke of Wellington's Regiment again allowing their band to play a couple of hours after dinner in the club compound. A word of congratulation must be tendered to Mrs. Holmes, who after several unsuccessful mounts ended by winning the closest race of the two days by a neck on her own pony Gobbett. Details:—

The Bovril Bottle

is familiar in the homes of Britishers the world over—in Great Britain itself Bovril is looked upon as the great national "stand-by" in case of failing strength. Bovril is the very embodiment of nourishment. It imparts strength in a most effective manner, and is, at the same time, extremely palatable.

THE TURF.

GATWICK SPRING MEETING.

THE Gatwick executive will have good cause to remember the Spring Meeting of 1904. The conditions under which the gathering was initiated yesterday were bright and pleasant enough, but they were totally eclipsed by the weather, on Saturday which was characteristic of midsummer. The heat of the solar rays would have been overpowering but for a strong south-westerly breeze, and the light was so luminous and transparent that the lofty tower which crowns the abrupt slopes of Leith Hill in the far distance was clearly visible without glasses. On neither day were the takings on quite such a flattering scale as they had been at the corresponding fixture a twelvemonth ago; but they must have been abnormally large on that occasion, as the stands seemed to hold their full complement this afternoon. A liberally-endowed programme provided sport which was of more than passing interest, and the meeting can be pronounced an unqualified success.

YORK SPRING MEETING.

The York Spring Meeting, old established as it is, cannot boast such a wealth of historical associations as the three-day August fixture, and it has of late years had to content against a formidable counter attraction in the shape of racing at Bath. The Southern gathering appeals more strongly to the metropolitan division, and it was only a meagre contingent that journeyed from London into the county of many acres in connection with the present reunion. There was a very fair muster on the 17th inst. nevertheless. The local folk turned out in their accustomed numbers, and their experience was a pleasant one, as the sun struggled through the dark canopy of clouds about midday and illuminated the scene throughout the afternoon; the while a fresh breeze blew from the south-west. Knavesmire looked bright and verdant, but underneath the covering of herbage the ground was on the firm side. Only once did the fields reach double figures, but the entertainment worked out smoothly and was productive of good sport.

No more appropriate way of perpetuating the memories of equine giants of the past could be desired than the plan of naming important races after them, and it is a policy which might with advantage be more widely pursued, especially at the headquarters of the Turf. It was in honour of the equine idol of the early "fifties" that the principal event to-day's card received its title of the Flying Dutchman's Handicap, and the race has achieved much popularity with Yorkshire owners, though the spoils generally go South, as was the case on the 18th. Blustering weather marked the close of the fixture, drenching showers alternating with brilliant spells of sunshine throughout the day, whilst a gale of extreme violence raged during the time that racing was in progress, rendering it a difficult matter to follow the proceedings with race glasses. The course was all the better for the rain and yielded good galloping and the fields exceeded the average as regards numerical strength. A large company again assisted at the proceedings.

CRICKET.

YORKSHIRE vs. LEICESTERSHIRE.—Played at Bradford on 16th 17th and 18th May. Drawn. The batting of the Yorkshiremen on the first day was remarkable for its consistency, Brown alone failing to make double figures. Although Tunnicliffe made the highest score, his was not the best innings of the day, for he met with more than ordinary good fortune in the way of dropped catches. On the other hand, Hirst once more played a great game, and scored 76 in an hour and three-quarters, helping Tunnicliffe to put on 111 runs for the third wicket. The Yorkshire innings came to a conclusion just in time to allow Leicestershire to lose one of their best batsmen in C J B Wood, with the total at four runs. On Tuesday Leicestershire struggled against their fate, but although Knight and V. F. S. Crawford played well Whitehead alone made a big score; he was batting for a couple of hours for his 62 not out. Yorkshire went in again with a lead of 125, and for some time found in Gill a bowler who was able to keep them very quiet. They lost half their wickets for 56 runs in an hour to Gil, who was bowling fast and making the ball get up sometimes. The sixth wicket fell at 80 and then Lord Hawke and Rothery made a stand which quite altered the situation; it produced 76 runs. Gill was becoming tired, and no one else seemed capable of causing the Yorkshire captain any discomfort. When stumps were drawn the total was 210 for eight wickets, Lord Hawke being not out 61 and Ringrose not out 16. Yorkshire was now 385 runs on. The next day Lord Hawke again played fine cricket and succeeded in making his hundred, when he declared the innings closed. He was batting for two hours and a quarter. Leicestershire had to make 385 runs, and with four hours before them they succeeded in making a very honourable draw. Knight played a splendid innings.

LANCASHIRE vs. WARWICKSHIRE.—Played at Old Trafford on 16th, 17th and 18th May. Lancashire won by nine wickets. On account of rheumatism A. C. Maclaren was unable to play in this match for Lancashire. There was nothing very remarkable about the Warwickshire first innings on Monday, but Quaife played a good game for a couple of hours. When stumps were drawn the Lancashire score was 104 for two wickets. Spooner not out 53. On Tuesday Spooner made 22 more runs, his entire innings having lasted for two hours and a quarter. Several other men made good scores, but Sharp's finely hit innings of 72 stood out prominently. Moorhouse bowled exceedingly well. Warwickshire had to face an adverse balance of 101, and when stumps were drawn they were two runs on with six wickets in hand. Quaife again played good cricket, and was not out 39, Lilley being not out 44 yesterday.

GLOUCESTERSHIRE v. SOMERSET.—Played at Bristol on 16th 17th and 18th May. Gloucestershire won by three wickets. On a good wicket Somerset in their first innings could do very little with the bowling of Dennett, and only three men made good scores. L. C. H. Palairet played pretty cricket, and Lewis showed sound defence, but half the wickets were down for 62. Captain Poyntz, who was making his first appearance for the county, then played an attractive innings, his 32 runs being made out of 45 while he was at the wickets; but the total fell far short of what was expected when Somerset won the toss. Before stumps were drawn Gloucestershire lost eight wickets for 178. Six of the men who batted made double figures, but nobody got really going. Jessop's innings was lively enough, but it only lasted for ten minutes: in the over in which he was caught in the long field off a big hit he made 14 runs. On Tuesday only one more run was made, so that the lead held by Gloucestershire was only 13. The second innings of Somerset was chiefly remarkable for the splendid batting of L. C. H. Palairet, who carried his bat nearly through the innings, always playing a beautiful and attractive game. He made his first 50 in an hour and a quarter, and his second 50 in about an hour and a half, his entire innings lasting for four hours and ten minutes. Robson gave him most valuable assistance for a couple of hours, and helped him to put on 127 for the third wicket. Gloucestershire had to make 288 to win. Before stumps were drawn they had put up 20 runs without loss. Yesterday the two not outs, Sellick and Barnett, surprised everybody by putting up 78 for the first wicket, and Gloucestershire never looked back. At lunch time the total was 143 for two wickets, Jessop being not out 46. He had only been in for ten minutes. After lunch he made 15 more runs, his total of 61 being made out of 73 in twenty-four minutes. Afterwards Wrathall and Langdon played fine cricket, and Gloucestershire won a somewhat sensational victory.

CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY v. YORKSHIRE.—Played at Cambridge on 12th and 13th May. Yorkshire won by an innings and 118 runs. On a slow but not difficult wicket the University found Haigh and Myers far too good for them although Rhodes was not successful against them. Long before stumps were drawn the Yorkshiremen were in a commanding position and they ended the day with a total of 224 for three wickets, and thus had a lead of 131 runs. Every man who went in showed good form, and Denton and Hirst both batted exceedingly well, the latter being not out 74 when stumps were drawn. On Friday morning Hirst and Rhodes were both seen to great advantage with the bat; Hirst made his 102 in about a couple of hours, while Rhodes, who had a 50 minutes partnership with Whitehead, carried his bat for 85 after batting for the same time as Hirst. Despite the large score made by Yorkshire, the 'Varsity bowling was not at all bad, but the fielding was by no means up to 'Varsity form. Cambridge, with 312 runs to wipe off before they drew level, shewed better form in their second innings, but Haigh, who went on as fourth change, was again a thorn in their side. Keigwin and Eyre batted well together after three wickets had fallen for 39 and during their partnership increased the score by 76. Keigwin's 72 was a very sound innings which lasted for about an hour and threequarters. Towards the end of the innings K. R. B. Fry hit hard. The Yorkshire captain was able to give Hirst a complete rest from bowling, while Rhodes was only used for a few overs in the first innings.

ROWING.

ROWING AT CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY.

The work on the river was favoured with delightful weather on Saturday the 14th. The May Eights are now in strict training and the majority of the boats show decided signs of improvement.

Continued misfortune appears to attend on Third Trinity, who have now been deprived of the assistance of the Light Blue president. Mr. Edwards Moss having a return of his old trouble with the right arm, serious doubts are entertained about his being able to row again for a long time, and he will be a notable absentee from Henley. As Mr. P. H. Thomas was away for some days, the Third Trinity crew did not row this week before Thursday. The order of rowing has had to be altered considerably, and is now as under: R. M. Soames (bow) M. E. Balsten, F. W. Seymour, A. Botfield, B. C. Johnstone, P. H. Thomas, B R Winthrop-Smith, C. H. L. Chalmers (stroke), C Kent (cox). No further alteration has been made in the Trinity Hall oarsmen, but B. G. A. Scott (the 'Varsity coxswain) is now in charge of the rudder lines. The coaching is being done by Mr. Thomas. First Trinity did not appear on Saturday. Their order is unaltered, however, and G. H. Johnstone sets the work. Mr H. B. Grylls is their coach. Lady Margaret have again re-arranged their head crew, which is now constituted thus: H. S. Crole Rees (bow), R. J Lewis, J. Fraser, H. G. Frean, R. Meldrum, J. S. Collins, H. Sanger, R. R. Walker (stroke), A. G. L. Hunt (cox). Mr. L. H. K. Bushe Fox supervised their work. The Christ's crew remain without alteration, but they have lost the services of Mr. E. W. Mowll as coach, and are now looked after by Mr. J. R. C. Canney. Owing to the indisposition of their stroke (C H. S. Taylor), Caius have had to make changes, and H. D. Gillies (the Blue) is now setting the work. The amended order is as follows: C. C. Brinton (bow) W. D A. Smith, J. V. Wilson, C. B. Heald, E. P. W. Wedd, J L. Wordsworth, C. R. P Cooper, H. D. Gillies (stroke), J G H. Randles (cox). They are being advised by Mr. Sanger, the 'Varsity secretary. In the Jesus crew A. S. W. Dore has succeeded E. C. Hoskyns at bow and the rowing is looked after by Mr. J. Eaden. Selwyn are being coached by Rev. W L. E Parsons. Emmanuel by Mr. R. V. Powell, King's by Mr. J. S. Collins, First Trinity 2 by Mr. A. L. Lawrence, Pembroke by Mr. A. J. C. Huddleston, Peterhouse by Mr. Winthrop-Smith, and Clare by Mr. G. H. Johnstone.

The Sidney (Carpenter) Sculls were won easily by G. S. Laird Clowes, the other competitors being B. Fisher, A. J. May, and P. N. Peacock. The Queen College Sculls were won by C. A. Chase who beat A. Warner by 100 yards, whilst the Pairs were won by B. C. Wilson and C. A. Chase very easily from two other couples. The Corpus (Hayward), Sculls went to F. E. Hodder, who easily defeated J. Gardner and R. S. Carey, and G. C. Brooks won the Freshmen's Sculls from W. J. Wright.

ROWING AT OXFORD UNIVERSITY.

THE SUMMER EIGHTS.

Grand weather prevailed on the 19th instant at Oxford, and the first day's racing in connection with the Summer Eights caused an immense attendance to assemble both on the towing path and on the barges. The racing was somewhat disappointing, as all the bumps took place below the boat-house, and it could not be said that there was a really exciting finish in either division. Those who had so confidently prophesied the downfall of New College from the headship must have been very much surprised by the ease with which the latter held their own against Magdalen, although at one time the latter did gain somewhat, and Magdalen in turn were never in any danger of being caught by University. The Second Division crews were started at half-past four, the order being as follows: Worcester, Jesus, Lincoln, St. John's, Keble, Hertford, Oriel, Corpus, Queen's, Wadham, St. Edmund Hall, and St. Catherine's. It was generally thought that Worcester would go down before Jesus, but, although the latter gave them a good race, they never got in dangerous proximity, and the leading crew reached home without any great difficulty. Lincoln, who had the misfortune to lose their number seven a few days ago, could make no headway against St. John's, who are a very good crew and the latter made their bump at the Willows. Keble had an unpleasant five minutes with Hertford immediately behind them but they were saved further anxiety after passing the Willows, as Hertford had then to give in to Oriel. Queen's overhauled Corpus early in the race, whilst St. Edmund Hall fell to St. Catherine's before reaching the Gut.

The First Division order of starting was New College, Magdalen, University, Balliol, Brasenose, Christ Church, Pembroke, Trinity, Exeter and Worcester. The racing between the leading crews was not of a very exciting character. Magdalen gained on New College up to the Gut, where they took a very bad course, and, New drawing away again, finished a length and a half to the good. University rather disappointed their supporters, inasmuch as Magdalen held them without any great difficulty and had a length and a quarter to spare at the finish. Balliol lost ground behind University, and will probably fall to Christ Church who succeeded in overhauling Brasnose on reaching the Gut. Pembroke made a poor race with Trinity and had to acknowledge defeat before reaching the Gut, whilst Exeter were overhauled by Merton at the Corporation Ferry.

ROEHAMPTON CLUB.

The chief attraction at Roehampton, on the 16th, was the match between Rugby and the Old Cantabs. Mr. W. McCreery, Mr. F. M. Freake, Mr. W S. Buckmaster and Captain Godfrey Heseltine (back) formed the latter contingent, while Captain H. Wilson) Mr. Walter Jones, Captain E. D. Miller and Mr. C. D. Miller (back) played on behalf of Rugby. Umpire, Captain Sheppard. Immediately after the start the Cantabs scored through Mr. Buckmaster, and before the period ended that player had added a second goal. The next stage also went in favour of the Cantabs, who gained two more points through the instrumentality of Mr. Freake and Mr. Buckmaster. Rugby played up with great dash during the third ten minutes, securing two goals. This was all they could do, however, and they were finally beaten by seven goals to two. Rugby had all the worst of the luck. Previous to the above, Roehampton contingent met the Magpies. Sides: Magpies: Mr. J. Pearce, Captain W. H. Lambton, Captain H. R. Lee and Captain U. O. Thynne (back). Roehampton: Mr. R. Grenfell, Mr. F. Jay Mackey, Mr. L. Paine and Mr. P. W. Nickalls. The club quarette had registered five goals to love at the end of the third period, and in the result they proved successful by six goals to two, the Magpies having the better of the exchanges in the latter portion of the game.

HURLINGHAM CLUB, FULHAM.

An abundance of fast galloping resulted from the meetings of the Students and a home quartette at Hurlingham on the 16th instant, and the play consequently was not lacking in interest, although the scoring was nearly all on one side. The teams were as follows: Students: Mr. M. Nickalls, Mr. O. Nickalls, Mr. J. B. Dale, and Mr. H. Scott Robson (back). Hurlingham: Mr. A. Rawlinson, Mr. F. Bellville, Col. W. Gordon Renton and Major Kirk (back). Umpire and Captain, F. Blaker. Though the Students were almost incessantly on the aggressive during the opening period they failed to break through the defence of their opponents, but in the second bout goals came from Mr. C. Nickalls and Mr. Dale, while the latter and Mr. M. Nickalls supplemented the score in the following stage, so that the students had an advantage of four goals to love at half-time. Just previously, Colonel Renton retired through an injury to his knee, his place being taken by Mr. Mackey. Continuing to have much the better of affairs, the Students, with further points by Mr. Dale (3) and Mr. M. Nickalls (2), eventually ran out the easiest of winners by 10 goals to 1, the solitary goal for Hurlingham being registered by Mr. Bellville from a clever pass by Mr. Rawlinson.

BOXING.

THE NATIONAL SPORTING CLUB.

JACK ROBERTS v. YOUNG JOSEPHS. Return boxing matches are not always the attraction the promoter and the principals may desire. The remark, however, does not apply to the second set to with gloves, fought out at the National Sporting Club on the 16th instant by the veterant Jack Roberts, of Drury-lane, and Young Josephs, of Mile End. On 21st March the men met for £100 aside at 9st. 2lbs. when Roberts stopped his opponent half way through the seventh round. The supporters of the East Ender were by no means satisfied, and after some little paper warfare a return encounter was arranged, this time at catch-weights, and limited to ten rounds. The bout proved interesting enough to attract a fine crowd of members and friends to the old club, and in return they were treated to a give and-take battle, which from start to finish was full of incident and possibilities. Roberts looked well-trained; indeed, almost fine; while Josephs a big growing youth of nineteen with a healthy, robust appearance struck one as being fully 10lbs. the heavier. Very strong on his legs and clever in his foot-work, Josephs flattered his friends in the early stages of a determined battle. For a time Roberts could not settle down or get anything like his distance, and for the first three rounds he passed the best part of his time fighting the air. Up to this stage Josephs had taken a lot of finding, but the flagging of the Jewboy brought about an improvement on the part of his opponent. Roberts shines best when he has a man who will stand and deliver. There was not much of an advantage either way, but Roberts was the quicker boxer if not at times the stronger, and in the end he gained a very hard-earned and well-deserved award. The six round go between Bob Russell and Sid Doyle was not to the liking of either the spectators or referee, and Mr. Douglas sounded a pleasant note when he gave it as no contest. In the Heavy Weight Competition Harry Shearing, of Walthamstow, proved far too strong for the man he had to meet, and he took the event without much trouble.

very interesting events was limited to reasonable length, and, with the card bristling with the names of the chief sprinters of the day, the fixture was quite to the liking of those who prefer the high class to the plater. The competitors in the long-distance races could have done, perhaps, with a little less of the fairly strong breeze that blew across the enclosure, but the sun shone with a welcome warmth and power, and the meteorological conditions, a most important factor on an occasion like the one under notice were as nearly perfect as possible. With a view of bringing together the fastest sprinters of the day, and at the same time providing something of a novelty, if a 220 yards relay race may be so termed, the executive included on the card an event of this character and also a 100 yards dash, with a limit of four yards start. It is hardly necessary to add that quantity gave way in a marked degree to quality. Of good and speedy amateurs we have many, but runners requiring no more than four yards from scratch men able to give evens a shaking are not too plentiful. Consequently class was very much in evidence on Saturday, and a more enjoyable meeting has seldom been held on the old ground Fulham way.

The 100 Yards Invitation Handicap secured an entry of seventeen, which included the 220 yards champion, G. F. Brewell, of Loughborough; E. R. Cooper, of Manchester; W. Hiles, of the Salford Harriers; Thompson and Hurdsfield, of the Birchfield Harriers; Ayto-Rowell, of the Liverpool Harriers; with J. W. Morton, S. L. H., and the Light Blue, R. W. Barclay on the scratch mark. Unfortunately, Barclay, was unable to be present. This, besides being a disappointment to the spectators, was a piece of bad luck for the promoting club, as the absence of the Cambridge runner undoubtedly cost the L. A. C. the Relay Race they fought out against the Rest of England. The fact that the wind blew in gusts may have had something to do with E. R. Cooper's even time in his heat for the 100 yards, as, though doing the fastest time in the preliminaries, he was last man in the final, which went to that greatly-improved runner, E. H. Clube, S. L. H., who had the limit. The Open 120 fell to C. E. Towers, also of the South London Harriers, who, after winning his heat in two yards inside evens from the 8½ mark, took the final in very smart fashion in 12secs Perhaps the event of the day was the Relay Race, which, as stated, brought out a splendid combination of tip-top talent. At the last moment the L. A. C. were weakened by the loss of C. W Fox and R. W. Barclay. Fox had broken down, and the best the home club could do was to substitute the mile runner, E. S. Ward. Seeing that the race was run in bursts of 220, this was a very serious handicap for the L. A. C., one which, increased by Barclay's inability to turn out enabled the Rest to secure a victory by the bare margin of five yards. The race fully described below, created no end of excitement, and so well did the L. A. C. men run that when five of the eight couples had been slipped they were almost a dozen yards to the good. Then Ayto-Rowell, a finely-built young gentleman, with a grand stride, and, indeed, all the makings of a champion, outran Ward and secured a lead, which neither Densham nor Comrie could wrest from Morton and Brewell and in this way the Rest of England won as stated. From the times appended it will be seen that Jupp ran grandly, and was credited with doing his 220 in 22secs. Densham and Cooper were both returned as covering the distance inside of 23secs. E. S. Ward had an easy task in the 1,000 Yards Challenge Cup, while in the walking race F. B. Thompson went faster than the scratch man, R. H. Watson, and won easily. Charley Callow, the veteran of 68, took part in this event.

The officials were: Referee M. Shearman, K. C.; judges, D. Basan, H. W. Hill, E. H. Pelling, J. Shearman, and J. H. A. Heay; starter, C. L. Lockton; referee for walking, H. Venn; official timekeepers, J. E. Fowler-Dixon, E. B. Turner, and S. K. Holman; handicapper, F. W. Parker. Details:

One Mile Relay Race.

Rest of England (G. F. Brewill (capt), Loughborough Corinthians A F C (220 yards Amateur Champion); E R Cooper, University of Manchester A C; W Hiles, Salford H; S Hurdsfield, Crewe Alexander A C; J W Morton, S L H; L J de B Reed, S L H; F E Ayto-Rowell, Liverpool H and A C; and S H Thompson, Birchfield H) beat L A C (K Cornwallis, C D Comrie, J B Densham, E S Ward, C H Jupp, L F Tremeer, H Watson, and W H Orton).

The runners were paired as follows: Watson and Reed, Jupp and Cooper, Tremeer and Hiles, Orton and Hurdsfield, Cornwallis and Thompson, Ward and Ayto-Rowell, Densham and Morton, and Comrie and Brewill.

At the crack of the pistol Watson slipped away from Reed, but the last-named was nearly level, when Watson sent Jupp on his way. Running in grand style Jupp outpaced Cooper, and gave Tremeer a six yard lead of Hiles, and as a result, Orton was able to leave his mark seven yards ahead of Hurdsfield. Cornwallis increased this to eight yards, and Ward was this distance to the good when he started away from Ayto-Rowell. The last-named soon overhauled the L A C man, and for the first time in the race the Rest went to the front. Morton was too fast for Densham, and, Brewill, starting the last furlong ahead of Comrie, beat the L A C man at the finish by five yards. The mile was covered in 3mins. 9⅘secs.

The official times for each 220 were returned as follows:—

Finishing the first quarter, Brassey was leading Miller by a yard, with Blott next, Montague ninth, and Packford last. Half way round the last lap Montague began to fall back again, and Elliott turned into the straight with a good advantage. Heyes now came up hand over hand, but after a desperate finish he was beaten by a foot, six yards between second and third. Time, 1min. 58⅘secs.

Hunting.

THE OOTACAMUND HUNT.

On Monday (30th May) we met, by special invitation of H. H. the Maharajah of Mysore, at Fernhill. It was a beautiful hunting morning and a very large field was out. We were, as usual, photographed, and afterwards we trotted off to draw Dairymaid, where the field Master lived up the field on the Cairn Hill side in order to get the jack to break in the right direction. The covert was drawn blank, however, and we were no more fortunate in the top strip of Baikie Wood, which the Master drew upwards from Baikie Crossing. Here also the large field behaved very well. Hounds just touched a cold scent in Jackal Shola which was the next draw, but the jack had been gone too long to make any thing of his line. A move was then made on round Bagman to Milles Covert and a jack was viewed away at once. The line was a beautiful one, and a sharp gallop followed. The jack making straight for Staircase, across Blackmoor Vale, over Newmarket and the Gold Mine Stream, hounds pulling him down at the south end of Lawley's Course, within a few yards of Staircase where he evidently had a strong hold. He was a very large Staircase dog jack.

We then drew over Lawley's Course to the swamp at the 6th Milestone of the Pykara Road, across the road and by Dartmoor Vale to the swamp between Warpshare's Hare Shola and the Old Pykara Road. Just above the Old Road Captain Kennard viewed a jack and we all expected a very good run. He turned in the direction of Wenlock Wood and hounds hurled him through this beautifully, but in reaching the top he took to the road and ran it persistently, seeming to know that it carried no scent. The Master held hounds forward along the road through Khed Shola and on as far as Road Shola, in the hope of hitting off the line again at the point where the jack had left the road but without success and most unfortunately a wild cat caused a diversion, so Captain Fife had to give him up. It seems to be a favourte trick of jacks in this part of our hunting country to run the roads and it is most successful in baffling hounds.

On Thursday last there was only a small field out, the meet being at Brooklands on a wet monsoon morning, but, luckily, the wind was not high. As a matter of fact there were only about 20 people out—the smallest field for weeks. In Brooklands Covert hounds soon picked up the morning drag of a jack and after a few doubtful notes opened on his line with a burst of music that did one's heart good to listen to. After running a couple of rings in the Covert he went away towards Double Crossing and at the same time a second jack broke at the top and Crossing the road, took three couple of hounds into Bramley Wood. This we did not learn until afterwards, for the rest of the pack got away on good terms with the other jack, which turned to the right over the hill above Sandy Nullah Toll Bar, and then crossed the Dewar Valley Stream, with his mark set for Rocky Convert. Hounds drove him through this without a pause, and as he broke at the lower corner they were close behind him. Instead of now making for waterfalls, as jacks usually do from this point he took a line which would have brought him to Barber's shop, but the pace down hill was too hot for him and he was pulled down just short of the stream. He was a fine dog jack. We then crossed the stream and drew on past Barber's shop on the hill above which we picked up a line and saw some very petty hound work as hounds puzzled out the early morning wanderings of a jack that had been too long gone to do anything with. Dartmoor Vale and the swamps near Wapshare's Hare Shola were blank, also the Shola itself, Briar Shola and Gibbs' Shola. We drew over the end of Lawley's Course and up to Rawlings' Nullah without finding, but on reaching the top of Newmarket the Master viewed a jack just stealing up towards Rally Wood. Hounds ran him through Rally Wood, whence, as usual, another jack crossed towards Parlock, but the hunted jack came out at the top over the Krurmund Road and then swung round in to the top of Monkey Shola. Breaking on the side towards Baikie he took us at a rare pace through the upper strip above Baikie Crossing and out towards Druid. Leaving this on his left he crossed the Baikie Road and took us below Denmark Shola as if Fairlawn were his point. Turning up hill, however, he took us through Porcupine Shola, over Denmark Hill, and down the side of Baikie over Swami Crossing and up towards Hecuba. Short of this he swung again to the right and passing Swamyar Bluegums, brought us back by Owl Crossing to Baikie, where he eventually beat us. This was a very fast and severe run.

THE CALCUTTA LEAGUE.

DALHOUSIE vs. KING'S OWN REGIMENT.—These teams met on the Dalhousie ground on the 4th instant, a good game resulting in a goal to nothing victory for the visitors. At the start the Regiment attacked and forced a corner, from which Whittingham put through. They continued to press, but the Dalhousie defended in good style, and the soldiers were unable to get through. Then the home team had a turn in their opponent's territory, but their shooting was at fault. In the second moiety the Dalhousie men showed improved form, and Dalling just missed equalising. The game ruled very even till its close, but neither team were able to score. Teams:—

KING'S OWN.—Hill, goal; Mellor and Cottam, backs; Leonard, Standish and Quinn, half-backs; Diggle, Ennis, Jones, Carman and Whittingham, forwards.

DALHOUSIE.—Street, goal; Stimson and Templeton, backs; Phelps, Butler and Evans, half-backs; Prike, Bonar, Dalling, Holley, and Barber, forwards.

Referee.—Mr. P. Wilder.

WEST RIDINGS vs. RANGERS.—This match was played last Saturday on the Rangers' ground, resulting in the defeat of the homesters by two goals to nil. The military team went away at the start and Woodings scored. They continued to press throughout the first stage, but did not take advantage of several chances. On changing over they got a good run down and Drew put on the second goal. Then the game settled down and play ruled very even to the end. Teams:—

WEST RIDINGS.—Roberts, goal; Stevens and Evans, backs; Reeves, Turner and Morris, half-backs; Woodings, Wilson, Grady, Drew, and Hulyer, forwards.

RANGERS.—Behrend, goal; Margrett and Anderson, backs; Bollard, Lees and Russell, half-backs; Carbery, McCready, Rosser, Afflick and Vears, forwards.

Referee.—Mr. E. E. Rope.

HOWRAH vs. Y. M. C. A.—On their own ground last Saturday Howrah drew with the Young Men after a very even game. Both teams pressed in turn, but the shooting was weak and there was no scoring, the game ending pointless. Teams:—

HOWRAH.—Powell, goal; MacFadgen and Annett, backs; Morrow, Wood, and Curtis, half-backs; Jackson, Smith, Echlin, Karr and Linton, forwards.

Y. M. C. A.—Kay, goal; Stoke and Lamb, backs; Schaumberg, Pooler and Collingwood, half-backs; Price, Scully, Redmond, Wilson and Gordon, forwards.

Referee.—Mr. G. Ribbins.

CALCUTTA vs. 64th R. F. A.—Played on the Calcutta ground on the 4th instant, a large gathering being present. The homesters played a good game and won by four goals to nil. They got possession immediately and Harrison was called upon to save. Then H. Sherman put in a fine run and found the net. The Gunners ran down, but Badham relieved, and Calcutta, returning to the attack, Macdonald scored. The 64th had the best of the play till the interval, but were unable to score. In the second half Nicols played in place of Wratten, who was injured just before half-time. The home team had it all their own way, Cooper and V. Sherman putting on the other points. Teams :—

CALCUTTA.—Dodds, goal; Badham and Wickham, backs; Ansell, Crawford and Maunder, half-backs; Stewart, V. Sherman, V. Cooper, MacDonald and H. Sherman, forwards.

64TH R. F. A.—Harison, goal; Quinn and Endersby, backs; Donnelly, Osborne and Sale, half-backs; Prince Ingley, Marchant, Wratten and Clarke, forwards.

Referee:—Mr. N. G. Pritchard.

HOWRAH vs. WEST RIDINGS.—These teams met at Howrah on the 7th instant. The first half was very even, both teams taking turns at attacking, but no score was registered and they crossed over with a clean sheet. On changing ends, the Regiment got going and Grady opened the scoring from a good centre by Woodings. Drew followed up this first success by putting through shortly after. The West Ridings continued to press, and Wilson added a third point. During the second moiety, Howrah lost the services of McFadyen, who had to retire with an injured knee. They were unable to make any score, and the game ended in a win for the soldiers by three goals to nil. Teams :—

Howrah.—Powell, goal; McFadyen and Annett, backs; Morrow, Wood and Curtis, half-backs; Smith, Echlin, Jackson, Purcell and Kerr, forwards.

WEST RIDING.—Roberts, goal; Stevens and Evans, backs; Rewes, Turner and Morris, half-backs; Woodings, Wilson, Grady, Drew and Hulyer, forwards.

Referee :—Mr. P. Willder.

CIVIL AND MILITARY LEAGUE.

TWO matches were played on the 4th instant. La Martinière and St. Joseph's drew with a goal each while the 79th Royal Garrison Artillery simply walked over the Measurers, defeating them by eleven goals to nil. On Monday evening St. Joseph's beat the Sibpur College by a goal to nil, and the match between the Caledonians and 79th Royal Garrison Artillery ended in a draw.

CALEDONIA A. C. vs. 79TH R. G. A.

On the Caledonian ground the home club gave the Artillery men their second check for the season. The Civilian forwards were very erratic in their shooting, while Watts and his four tested Byrne with some hot shots which the latter saved well. The Caledonian defence was good and continually broke up the combination of the soldiers, who made great efforts at the end to win the match. The goal which Dewsburry scored for the Caledonians, and that scored by Watts for the Artillery, were the results of melees in front of the respective goals. The match was drawn.

FOOTBALL NOTES.

THE match between the West Ridings and Calcutta on Tuesday, the 31st ultimo, which the former team courteously agreed to play on the C. F. C. ground, was one of the most pleasant I have witnessed this season. There were absolutely no fouls worth mentioning and the soldiers played the same gentlemanly game after a goal had been scored against them as they did before. The first half of the match was rather tame to watch though full of exercise for the players and referee. The ball travelled from one end of the field to the other and back again with hardly any cessation, the backs indulging in plenty of long kicking. Both sides looked to have chances of scoring, but half time arrived with a clean sheet. During the second half both lines of forwards showed some good combination, the right wings being most conspicuous, and V. Sherman getting a chance beat Roberts with a beauty. The West Ridings put a tremendous lot of "go" into their play after this reverse and gave the home backs a very hard time, but the whistle went without any addition to the score. For Calcutta Ansell at half showed signs of improvement, and Wickham at back made a very fair show, though the latter has not got into the way of keeping his place. The forwards played well together, the Shermans being the most prominent. For the soldiers Grady, Woodings and Wilson showed up well, and though the backs did not play so well as in their last match, the whole eleven worked well together and deserved better luck.

To the dismay of their supporters Dalhousie could do nothing with the Y. M. C. A. and had to admit defeat by 1 to nil. The Young Men have only beaten the Trades Club once before since the League was started and their satisfaction at their win on Tuesday was therefore great. Lamb and Pooler were as usual most prominent for the Y. M. C. A., and Benner showed up well for Dalhousie, though he has yet to learn when to pass. Phelps must be rather disheartened at the way his men turn out, three of the best being absent in this match.

On Wednesday the R. F. A. came in from Barrackpore to play the King's Own and, as there was no other matchin progress, a fairly large crowd was attracted. The game was all in favour of the King's Own and had it not been for their frequently being pulled up for off-side they would have scored heavily. The R. F. A. with the exception of Nicholl and Wratten seemed to have lost all their dash and given the game up as hopeless from the start. Their backs had a hard time of it and came out of the ordeal very well. The King's Own played a good game but they had little opposition and should have made more than 3 goals.

On Saturday Dalhousie turned out in force and made strenuous efforts to wrest at least one point from the King's Own, but with no avail. The King's Own forward line had undergone some changes but did not seem to be materially weakened as they put in some very good combined play, and Street in goal had several stiff shots to tackle which he did in first-class style. The soldiers' back division was not, however, brilliant, and in the second half especially Dalhousie looked like scoring, Dalling on one occasion missing a perfect opening. The only goal of the match was scored early in the game. A free kick was given against Street for carrying and the point was scored from the resultant play round the home goal; rather unfortunate for the Dals. The men from the Fort had the best of the game, but they will have to give a better exhibition if they wish to go on unbeaten to the end.

The Y.M.C.A. eleven went over to Howrah with the full intention of repeating their victory over Dalhousie and adding 2 more points to their score, but Howrah proved a hard nut to crack, and although the Young Men had slightly the better of the game no goals were scored, and each side, therefore, registered one point. For Howrah this was the first point of the season and they had to play hard to get it, Woods and Curtis being chiefly responsible for keeping the Young Men out. Both goalkeepers were in good form, Powell especially being quite an acquisition for the United Club.

Calcutta had little difficulty in disposing of the Gunners by 4 goals to love, but they will have to pay more attention to shooting if they want to finish the season with a goal average anywhere near that of the Lancasters. The Barrackpore men were on the defensive for quite two-thirds of the game and their display on the whole was not all up to average, though they had hard luck in losing Wratten in the first half. The game was very one-sided and needs no description. Calcutta will have something harder to tackle in their next match.

A very small crowd turned out to watch the Rangers-West Ridings' match. This game on the Rangers' ground was chiefly remarkable for the number of chances missed by both sides and the excellent goalkeeping of Behrend and Roberts. It was hard to believe that the home team was, with one exception, the same that made such a good stand against the King's Own on the previous Saturday. The whole team with the exception of Behrend seemed quite off their game and though Margrett at back came out strong at times and Lees put in a lot of work in the second half the forwards could do nothing with the ball. Rosser was quite off colour and Affleck missed two splendid chances and altogether the display was very disheartening to the civilian supporters: perhaps the weather had something to do with it. The men from Dum-Dum showed further improvement, their success being due to good combined play more than to individual brilliancy, and are a credit to themselves and their trainer. Just before time the referee failed to give a free kick against Roberts for carrying, but this probably made no difference in the result.

There are rumours that the transfer of two companies of the West Ridings from Dum-Dum to Benares will deprive the regimental soccer team of most of its present players and that consequently they will now be a very weak combination and may perhaps withdraw from the League altogether. It is sincerely to be hoped that this sporting team will not have to cancel their League engagements just as they have got into their stride and look like winning all their return matches. Perhaps the Commanding Officer will arrange a transfer for some of the footballers.

Up to Saturday, the 4th, the various teams in the Calcutta Football League were placed as follows :—

Name of Club.	Matches played.	Won.	Lost.	Drawn.	Points.	Goals For.	Goals Against.
King's Own	6	6	0	0	12	14	1
Calcutta	6	5	1	0	10	13	3
Rangers	6	4	2	0	8	9	8
West Ridings	6	3	2	1	7	7	4
Y. M. C. A.	6	2	3	1	5	3	7
Dalhousie	7	2	5	0	4	4	7
64th R. A.	7	1	5	1	3	5	12
Howrah	6	0	5	1	1	2	15

Matches in the Civil and Military League continue to provide the usual number of surprises. The Fort R. C. scored a record number of goals (eleven) against the Measurers on Saturday, but on Monday could only manage to draw with the Caledonia A. C. This latter result should have given Seebpore their chance, but to everyone's surprise they were defeated by St. Joseph's and so lost a great opportunity of reducing the 79th's lead.

THE LADIES' CHAMPIONSHIP.

CONSIDERABLE interest was evoked in and around the neighbourhood of Troon, in the Stroke Competition preceding the Tournament Proper as affording a very good idea of the form of the various players, especially after the close matches and exciting finishes of the International contest in which even the Open Champion had suffered defeat. Prizes were presented by the Duchess of Portland and two by the Ladies' Golf Union and as a signal that the great annual L. G. W. Week had begun, their flag was unfurled at any early hour over the Club house. This Stroke Competition has now been a fixed institution since 1895, the first time the Championship was held at Portrush, and as a rule the winners of this, have figured prominently during the ensuing week. The day was fine, but a somewhat stiff breeze blowing from the north-west made scoring difficult and therefore the 81 returned by Miss Glover, was regarded by all as a very fine performance, made up of the following figures : Out 4, 5, 7, 5, 5, 5, 4, 4, = 41, In 5, 4, 4, 4, 6, 4, 5, 4, 4 = 40 = 81. For a long time this score was strokes ahead of any other, the second best return, when all played from scratch, being that of Miss May Hezlet in 87, but it was not until the North Berwick player Miss Dorothy Campbell, arrived and handed in a card of 86 depriving Miss Hezlet of second place that people began to realize what a really fine performance the Scottish Champion's was. Miss Campbell's score was Miss Glover winning the Duchess of Portland's Prize, Miss Campbell the second prize given by the L. G. W. and the third prize also given by the Union fell to Miss May Hezlet, Miss Adair followed with 88 and it was whispered that the united ages of the first four players scarce equalled the average total of the four returns !!

When in due course the great day, Tuesday, 9th May 1904, broke and grew old it was upon a gay and busy scene at Troon. Much interest has been taken in all the West of Scotland, in this great golfing event, the second of its kind ever held in the Land O Cakes and an interest which has shown a vast improvement since the Union unfurled its flag at Gullane in the Diamond Jubilee Year of grace ! so that when the leading couple left the tee fully 600 spectators were gathered together, when the match between Miss Rhona Adair and Miss M. B. Higgins was progressing fully 1,000 people were on the Links as onlookers. Miss Higgins had journeyed from far away Chicago, the city where such wondrous things are done, and it seemed real hard luck that in her first match she should be pitted against the world-famed Miss Adair, and to the plucky American fell also that most trying of ordeals, the first tee shot of the Championship and that Miss Higgins proved equal to the occasion by hitting a beautiful ball which was followed by an equally good one from her opponent and the battle began and ended only on the 16th green when the Irish lady added one more to her row of scalps.

Some of the finest Golf in the 1st round was exhibited by Miss May Hezlet in her match with no mean opponent Mrs. Jallard (nee Katie Walker) of Woking, after taking 5 s at four consecutive holes. Miss Hezlet took the 5 in 4 ; and the long sixth hole (460 yards) in 4 holing with her mashie ! with a 3 at the 9 She took a substantial lead and won her match by 7 up and 6 to play. Other stiff matches were between Miss Dod Moreton and Miss Moeller of Ilkley, but the Lawn Tennis Champion brought matters to a satisfactory conclusion on the 17th green.

Delightful weather prevailed on Wednesday when at 10 o'clock the leading couple started, the chief feature of the day's play was the unexpected defeat of Miss Glover by her club-mate Miss M. Maitland. After the Scottish Champion's grand performance in the Irish-Scottish match the preceeding week when she defeated Miss Adair and again on Monday when in the Score Competition she ran far ahead of all the other competitors the hopes of all Scotland were centred on her and it was confidently expected she would go far towards if not through the final stage. The match in which she suffered defeat all the hands of Mrs. M. Maitland was one of the most stubborn encounters in any championship, and was played before a crowd of over 2,500 spectators. The end came on the 19th green only. Going to this hole Miss Glover played two fine shots on to the green, her opponent finding the bunker with her second, but with a truly splendid stroke she laid her ball by the side of the green and Miss Glover had to play the like over some nasty undulating ground, and her ball stopped 4 feet from the hole. From the side of the green Miss Maitland again played the odd, hitting the ball quite truly, on and on it trickled until it reached the bottom of the hole, leaving Miss Glover a difficult put to negotiate for a half and failing to hole it, her opponent won the match amid the loud applause of some 3,000 onlookers.

One of the most extraordinary matches of the round was that between Miss Dod and Miss G. Robertson. Miss Dod was 5 down at the 8th and turned 5 down. After a half at the 10th she won six holes in succession making her dormy 2. Miss Robertson won the 17th but the English lady with a win on the home green was 2 to the good.

Miss Dorothy Campbell won somewhat easily from last year's runner up on the 15th green and the match between Miss Tyrell and Mrs. Perkin was only finished on the 20th green in favour of the Irish lady. In the third round interest centred principally in the match between Miss Adair and Miss E. C. Nevile and in this round the Champion played better Golf than she had done since her arrival at Troon, and with a lead of 2 at the turn she brought matters to a crisis on the 17th green and entered the 4th round. Two of the sisters Hezlet (Miss May and Miss F.) met in this same round (3rd) and the younger leading all the way almost took her sister to the home green before she suffered defeat. The two sisters (Mrs. Swanston and Miss Dorothy Campbell) both won their ties and were included in the last 16 survivors !

The interest manifested in the play of the 5th round was pretty evenly spread over the four matches, that between Miss May Hezlet and Miss Macbeth drawing the largest following, but the match ending on the 13th green in favour of the Irish lady the gallery elected to bestow their attention on that between Miss Dod and the local (Prestwick) lady Miss Whigham. Not until the 7th hole did the English lady commence to take the lead, the 8th and 9th followed suit and she turned 3 up, losing the 10th she won the 11th and maintained that lead with only 3 to play The Scotch lady took the 16th but Miss Dod secured hole and match at the 17th and entered the penultimate round. The match between the sisters (Mrs. Swanston and Miss Dorothy Campbell) promised to be a close one, but the younger sister took the lead from the beginning, and, never relinquishing the advantage, won on the 14th green by 6 up and 4 to play. Miss Campbell began the match in a sensational manner by holing in 3 off her mashie and on Thursday evening the immense crowd were looking forward on the morrow to witness in the two matches, that between Miss Molly Graham and Miss May Hezlet both ex-champions and that between Miss L. Dod and Miss Dorothy Campbell, two of the four having entered from English clubs, and from Ireland and one from a Scotch one—in fact quite an international affair. The excitement at Troon was enormous, all the schools were given a holiday, and the factories and docks hands turned out in hundreds, the number of spectators being estimated at between 6,000, and 9,000, and so unruly and unmanageable did they become that the officials had more than once to appeal, for the players themselves had frequently to carve for themselves a passage to the greens. How they managed to play the fine golf they did, is and ever will be a mystery and a fine triumph of nerves.

But to return to the Semi-finals, that between Miss Hezlet and Miss Graham first. The long game of the Irish lady was extremely fine, in spite of a very strong head wind on the outward journey, while Miss Graham's approaching was extraordinarily accurate and deadly. At the turn the Irish lady was 3 up, and she eventually won by 4 up and 2 to play in the 16th green. Meanwhile behind them a deadly fight was being fought by Miss Dod and Miss Dorothy Campbell, Miss Campbell had shown such excellent form, in the International matches, in the Stroke Competition and in her earlier heats that the hopes of Scotland ran high that she would win the coveted Cup ; but it was soon apparent that in Miss Dod she had a foeman worthy of her steel, and from the first Miss Campbell fell into a very common error against a strong head wind—shortness in her approaches—and she turned with 3 holes down, which lead by splended play she reduced at the 11th to 1, but losing the 13th after a half at the 12th she also lost the 14th, and with a half at the 15th and a win at the 16 Miss Dod entered the finals. At 3 o'clock the fairway from the 1st Tee to the green was lined with fully 6,500 people intent on seeing the ex Champion Irish Lady, Miss Hezlet and the Lawn Tennis Champion Miss Dod contest the match.

The weather was horrid, a cold wind blowing from the south, with occasional showers of drenching rain. A faultless half in 5 opened the match, the second went to Miss Dod a half in 5 at the 3rd and a win for Miss Hezlet at the 4th squared the match, halves at the 5th and 6th and the 7th, taken by the English lady, but her lead was snatched away at the 8th and by winning the 9th Miss Dod stood 1 up at the turn, and 2 up at the 10th and a half at the 11th, knocking 1 off Miss's Dod lead at the 12th. Miss Hezlet after halving the 13 in 3 won the 14th with a perfect 4, and again all was even. The 15th was halved in 4 and for the first time in the match Miss Hezlet got the lead at the 16th with 1 up and 2 to go. Miss Hezlet most unaccountably missed a 2ft. putt, and again with 1 to play the match was square. Fully ten minutes were occupied by the officials in getting a pathway for the players through the crowd to the 18th tee—playing the odd for her second Miss Dod's iron shot was helped by a lucky kick and ran to within 6 yards of the hole. Miss Hezlet caught the face of a hillock with the like and was short ; failing to be up with the odd the ex-champion was called to play 2 more, and her putt missing the hole by a hair's breadth, Miss Dod holed in 4 and won the Championship. The presentation ceremony took place at the Club House, where Miss Dod was given the gold medal, the cup, and the replica, Miss May Hezlet the silver medal, and Miss M. G. Graham, and Miss Dorothy Campbell bronze medals. The usual congratulatory speeches were made and votes of thanks recorded and the Ladies' Championship of 1904 is a thing of the past.

JOHN C. HEENAN.

HIS FIGHT AT FARNBOROUGH.

Relics of the past, sporting and otherwise, are continually coming to notice. To-day it may be a handsome trophy, to-morrow perhaps a simple parchment, each, however, telling of some deed of bravery and note, a token bearing silent testimony to a performance far above the average. The Championship battle—an absolutely unadulterated Championship, and not the hybrid sort of thing so frequently forced upon one nowadays—fought back in the "sixties" by Tom Sayers and John C. Heenan, is even yet on the tongue of those who prefer merry mills on the greensward to the more modern way of settling differences in the ring with the padded first. Old hands who saw the fight—and there are still a few left—talk to you with pride of Sayers and Heenan whenever the noble art is mentioned, and youngsters born after the fight stand by what history has handed down to them. In later times we have had our Smith and Greenfield, Smith and Kilrain, Sullivan and Mitchell, and Slavin and Smith ; but never in the annals of the P. R. anything approaching either in in interest or deadly determined fighting the great battle decided at Farnborough, in Hampshire, on 17th April 1860. Patronised by men whose names appeared in Burke and Debrett, Justices of the Peace, members of Parliament, and brethren of the cloth, the international struggle attracted the most remarkable attendance ever seen around a prize ring. Perhaps never a bout has been so minutely described and so freely criticised as that between the representatives of the old and the new world, and the new generation will tell you how Sayers, at a disadvantage of over 2st. in weight and conceding 5inches in height, was knocked off his pins round after round by the stalwart "Benecia Boy," only to come up smiling and do his share of thumping in the thirty-seven rounds, which furnished two hours six minutes of most deadly battling. Men who never saw a knuckle fight in their lives have "read up" Sayers and Heenan sufficiently to tell how the little Englishman injured his right arm in the fourth round and how in this way the "auctioneer," his favourite weapon, was practically useless for the rest of the fight ; how, too, when the ring was broken up and a draw declared, Sayers, though half-choked from being bored on the ropes and badly battered, was full of bull-dog pluck and courage, and his opponent, Heenan, almost blind as the result of the "pinking" he had recieved at the hands of the Britisher. The fight, as stated, was for the Championship and £200 aside, and, ending as it did in a draw, neither could claim the belt, which, as both retired, was subsequently fought for by Sam Hurst, the Stalybridge Infant, and Tom Paddock. By way of solace to the heroes of Farnborough, a facsimile of the original trophy was presented to each. Sayers never fought again, and passed away on 8th November 1865. Heenan, however, outlived his doughty opponent some years.

Memories of the Sayers-Heenan fight are refreshed by the announcement of the sale of the belt given the American, as just mentioned. This historic trophy will be put up for auction shortly by Messrs. Debenham, Storr, and Sons, at their rooms, 26, King-street, Covent Garden, and surely there should be some spirited bidding. The belt, manufactured by Hancock and Co., is made of silver and represents a roped and staked ring. In the centre is the following inscriptions :

"Presented to John C. Heenan by F. S. Dowling, Esq., referee and editor 'Bell's Life in London,' May 30, 1860."

This is flanked by the British Lion and fighters in position, one being by no means a bad picture of Heenan himself.

Considering the world-wide reputation he gained, Heenan's career in the ring was comparatively brief. He was born at West Troy (N.Y.) in 1834, stood 6 feet 1¼ inches and scaled in condition a little over 13st. His father, Timothy Heenan, held for nearly thirty years the position of chief in the Ordnance Department of the Watervilet Arsenal at Troy. When seventeen, Heenan went into the workshops of the Pacific Mail Steamship Company at Benecia, and from this time forward he was dubbed the "Benecia Boy." His battles proper in the ring were limited to three, viz., with John Morrisey, Tom Sayers, and Tom King, and, strange though it may read, the man who will stand out for all time as a principal in the finest struggle ever contested never once tasted the sweets of victory in a stake-money match. He was first beaten by John Morrisey at Long Point, Canada, after a desperate battle of twenty-one minutes. Morrisey, a man of good family, subsequently sat in Congress. Failing to get a return match or to find a customer of any sort, Heenan journeyed to England, and met Sayers at Farnborough Three months later he returned to the States, but he was back in England again in 1852, and was soon a hard and fast friend of his old opponent Sayers. It was thought the "Benecia Boy" had done with the ring, but an announcement appeared to the effect that an American could be matched to fight anyone for £100. aside This was ignored by Mace but accepted on behalf of Tom King The articles were signed at Owen Swift's house, the backer of King leaving his jewellery as a first deposit. Wadhurst was the scene of a fight which is still and will no doubt for ever be shrouded in mystery. Heenan appeared to have his man beaten more than once, and an eye-witness stated in print that at the end of one round King was "out" for quite four minutes. Many of King's friends, indeed, left his corner, thinking the fight was over. Subsequently Heenan collapsed in quite a startling manner. Why he did so has never been made known He retched to a remarkable extent, and was beaten in twenty-four rounds, lasting 35min. A year later Heenan while returning from Ascot got into a railway accident and received £1000 compensation. Back in America, he ran a saloon for some little while, and then paid a third visit to England. Finally he died on 23rd October 1875, at Green River Station, Wyoming territory. Heenan, who was a splendidly-built man and a tremendous hitter, married the actress, Ada Menken.—Sportsman.

SIMLA HORSE AND DOG SHOW.

Saturday, 4th June 1904.

WITH large entries in almost all the horse classes, and a rare good display of quality, a big attendance and Viceregal patronage nothing was wanting to make this show the success to attain which Captain Peacocke, the Honorary Secretary, and his colleagues had worked so hard. The dogs were poorly represented, only five classes out of thirteen filling. The reason does not present itself, for evidently all sorts and conditions of cannies were catered for and nothing was omitted that could attract dog exhibitors. The fact remains, however, that as far as the dogs were concerned the visitors gazed on for the most part on "a beggarly array of empty benches" to borrow a stage metaphor. Lady Ampthill won the Viceroy's Cup for the best horse in the show with Atalanta, and distributed the prizes at the close of the day. Appended is the list of prize winners:—

CLASS I.—Bona fide hacks, 14-2 and under.—Mrs. Stuart Beatson's b aus m Allora, 1st; Captain Courage's b aus m Freebooty, 2nd; Mrs. Peacocke's b aus g Assurance, 3rd.

In the pony jumping Mrs Peacocke's Assurance, ridden by Captain Peacocke, was 1st; Mrs. W. R. Walker's Doctor Syntax, 2nd; Major Heneage's Hebe, 3rd.

STRAY NOTES.

Another difficulty has arisen in connection with the destruction of rats. It appears that they can, after some time, not only resist the action of poison, but actually thrive upon it. At the last meeting of the French Academy of Sciences the question of rat destruction was discussed, and the eminent scientist, M. d'Arsonval, affirmed that, as a result of experiments, it was found that rats are able to resist the effects of arsenic for an extraordinary lengthy period. They can absorb a dose seven times greater than any other animal of the same size, and in time may even become accustomed to doses of arsenic which seem incredible. M. Bordas declares that he has seen rats absorb without any apparent ill effects, and during long periods a quantity of arsenic corresponding to a dose of five grammes. It appears, therefore, from this investigation, that, whilst the farmer has been pinning his faith to arsenical rat-killing preparations, he has been wasting his money and feeding the rodents on tonics into the bargain. We shall now have to look round for another means of destroying these pests, which, as we have again and again repeated, are the game preserver's worst enemies.

Dr. M'Culloch, of Edinburgh, ascertained that the antiseptic quality of sugar is sufficient to preserve fish in most excellent condition. He states that this substance is so active that fish may be preserved in a dry state, and perfectly fresh, by means of sugar alone, and even with a very small quantity of it. He has thus kept salmon, whiting, and cod for an indefinite length of time; and by this simple means fresh fish may be kept in that state some days, so as to be as good when boiled as when just caught. It is added that if dried and kept free from mouldiness, there seems no limit to their preservation, and they are much better this way than when salted. The sugar gives no disagreeable taste. This process is particularly valuable in making what is called kippered salmon; and the fish preserved in this manner are far superior in quality and flavour to those which are salted or smoked. If desired, as much salt may be used as to give the taste that may be required; but this substance does not conduce to their preservation. In the preparation it is barely necessary to open the fish, and to apply the sugar in the muscular part, placing it in a horizontal position for two or three days that this substance may penetrate. After this it may be dried, and it is only further necessary to wipe and ventilate it occasionally to prevent mouldiness. A table-spoonful of brown sugar is sufficient in this manner for a salmon of 5lbs or 6lbs weight, and if salt is desired, a teaspoonful or more may be added. Saltpetre may be used instead, in the same proportion if it is desired to make the kipper hard.

The Story Teller.

"CUM GRANO SALIS."

IN the club the other evening Beasley happened to come across a paragraph in the newspaper which started a discussion on the topic of intelligence of animals. The story which gave rise to the conversation stated that a cat, having been despatched by train to London from its home in the North of England, managed to find its way back after some days' absence, arriving after its journey of three hundred odd miles in a terribly emaciated and worn-out condition. Parminter, who is the club oracle, attributed the feat to the well-known homing instinct in these animals.

"It's an every-day occurrence," he added, lightly; 'any book on natural history will verify it. I wonder they took the trouble to publish it."

"Quite right," assented Newbatt. "I've read the same thing over and over again. It's a funny thing it's always a cat from the North of England, though!"

"Perhaps it's the same cat," suggested Beasley; "or," he added, with a grin, "the same reporter."

"I can see that you don't quite believe it, old man," said Parminter.

"I don't," replied Beasley. "Do you?"

"Absolutely," said Parminter, crossing his legs and throwing himself back in his chair. "My experience is that newspaper editors are extremely distrustful of any stories concerning animals, and refuse to print them unless they are—"

"Short of 'copy,'" put in Beasley.

"Convinced of their accuracy," continued Parminter, ignoring the interruption. "The reason for my belief is that the editor of a newspaper to whom I addressed a circumstantial narrative concerning a cat belonging to me refused to print it on the plea that, though he had no doubt of its substantial accuracy, his readers might refuse—"

"To swallow it!" laughed Beasley, taking advantage of a slight pause.

"To treat so remarkable a contribution to our evidence of the higher faculties in the lower animals with the respect due to it,' said Parminter.

"Editorial paraphrase for 'swallowing,'" commented the irrepressible Beasley.

"I," said Newbatt, coming to Parminter's assistance, "can substantiate Parminter's story."

"About the cat?" queried Beasley.

"About the editor," replied Newbatt. "He refused a little anecdote of mine about a dog in doing so using very much the same terms."

"Stereotyped form of refusal, evidently," sneered Beasley. "Judging by the sort of thing"—he shook the newspaper containing the above-quoted report—"the British public is considered capable of assimilating your narratives must have been—er—stodgy. I should like to hear them."

"My dear Beasley," said Parminter promptly, "I haven't the slightest objection to telling you the little anecdote to which I referred. Between ourselves, I shall be glad to have your opinion on the facts, as it has always been a mystery to us how a creature not generally credited with the power of interpreting its owner's wishes or imparting—"

"Perhaps," interrupted Beasley, "you'd better let me have the—ah!—facts first. You can't tell animal stories too simply."

"My dear fellow, I agree," said Parminter, heartily. "I will be simple to the verge of baldness. The facts of the case are these: We had at home from a kitten the animal whose behaviour forms the subject of my story. She was a present from some friends of ours living in Peterborough and, owing to the uncertainty which overhangs the—er—sex of kittens, the first half of the name of her native town was bestowed on her by my aunt, to whom Peter had been presented. By the time it became clear that a baptismal error had been perpetrated it was too late to remedy it, my aunt's cat refusing to own any more feminine designation. Peter was in many respects an extraordinary animal, and in none more so than in the marking of her coat. The foundation of this was of a jetty blackness but it was powdered all over in the most regular manner with small white tufts, causing her to look as though she had been out in a heavy snowstorm. I must admit that she was not a general favourite with us—I was a lad at the time I am speaking of—while she was alive, her temper giving way under the slightest strain; and it was only after her decease that we realised what a noble nature lay hidden under that spotted coat."

Beasley snifled contemptuously at this tribute, and Parminter remembering his promise, apologised and resumed.

"I anticipate, however. Peter was an inmate of our house for many years, and needless to say, during that period presented several litters of kittens to our notice. It was the earnest wish of my aunt to possess a pair of kittens marked like their mother so that the race of Peter might be worthily perpetuated; but, strange to say, none of Peter's extremely numerous progeny resembled her in the least. I am inclined to think that Peter shared my aunt's disappointment in the matter, for, in defiance of the accustomed maternal instinct—"

"Cared nothing for 'em, you mean, I suppose," interrupted Beasley, impatient of the narrator's floridity.

"On the contrary, my dear fellow," resumed Parminter, quietly, "she was so fond of them that she devoured them."

"Horrid brute!" cried Beasley, with disgust.

"It seems unpleasant, I admit," said Parminter; "but, as we should have drowned them it saved a good deal of trouble Well, as Peter advanced in years my aunt began to give up all hope of realising her wish, seeing that Peter's offspring diverged more and more from her likeness. However, one morning my aunt's maid burst into the room, and with considerable excitement announced that the expected had happened.

"How many?" said my aunt, calmly.

"'Five,' replied the maid, 'when I left her. She's started putting of 'em away'—my aunt shuddered slightly in spite of her affection—'and, believe me or not, miss, two of 'em are the very image of 'er!'

"'Idiot!' cried my aunt. 'Why didn't you take them away?'

"She started up from her chair and made for the door. As she reached it, Peter's mew was herd outside.

"'Too late!' sighed my aunt, turning back again and sitting down. 'Let her in,' she said, faintly.

"The maid opened the door and admitted the waiting animal, who made straight for her mistress. My aunt, whose eyes were closed, felt Peter's head on her lap.

"'Cruel Peter! how could you?' she cried, letting her hand fall. She opened her eyes with a scream of surprise as she felt something move beneath her fingers. Then she looked down and knew that her grateful pet had spared the two speckled kittens!"

"You said Peter was dead, didn't you?" said Newbatt, as Parminter finished.

"Yes," replied the other; "she died a day or two later. It seemed as though she knew she had done her duty and had nothing else to live for. What do you think of that, eh?" he said, turning to Beasley.

Beasley grinned in a sickly way. "I'll tell you when we've heard Newbatt. Come on! A dog, wasn't it?"

"Ah! yes," said Newbatt, briskly. "Not my dog, though; but as he belonged to a particular friend of mine who vouched for the accuracy of the details, you can depend upon the story being as truthful as—"

"Parminter's, I suppose," put in Beasley.

"Just so," said Newbatt, gravely. "He was an ordinary-looking dog, my friend said—a cross between an Irish terrier and an Airedale—named Shamus. He was not a particularly accomplished dog as far as the ordinary dog tricks go, and the one piece of cleverness he displayed seemed to have come instinctively. At least, my friend had never taught him, although he might have learned it from a former master. It was this: My friend, whose name was Binfield, by the way, was accustomed to buy his tobacco at a particular shop in his neighbourhood. It was a fancy tobacco, costing sixpence an ounce, and as Shamus usually accompanied Binfield to the shop, the tobacconist knew him, and on his appearance in advance of his master would lay the packet ready on the counter. After this had happened once or twice the dog helped himself to the package and presented it to Binfield on his appearance. Little by little the shopkeeper became so used to this that he would hand the tobacco to Shamus without waiting for Binfield, who frequently now passed the shop without entering. I must mention that quite early in the game Binfield had entrusted the dog with the necessary coin, which Shamus duly laid down on the counter.

It is so happened that one day Binfield, on his way to town, had gone some distance beyond the shop before he remembered that he was without tobacco. On searching his pockets he made the discovery that he was also without money. Shamus, who had watched his master's actions attentively, appear desirous of intimating that he was ready to help. The thought struck Binfield that if he sent the dog back to the shop, the tobacconist would doubtless hand him the tobacco. Shamus, who appeared uneasy at receiving no coin, nevertheless comprehended Binfield's order to go back and trotted off in the direction of the shop. Shortly afterwards he reappeared, bringing Binfield's ounce of tobacco in his mouth. A day or two later Binfield was again in want of tobacco, so, providing Shamus with sixpence, he sent him on in advance, intending to call at the shop as he passed in order to pay for the ounce had on the former day. Contrary to his ordinary custom Shamus failed to rejoin his master, and when Binfield entered the shop the dog was sitting on his haunches waiting for him.

"'Well, old, man where's my tobacco?' said Binfield.

"The tobacconist's wife was serving and she looked up as Binfield spoke. 'Your dog seems to think the tobacco isn't right this morning' she said.

"'Why, won't he pay for it?' asked Binfield.

"'Oh! he dropped his sixpence on the counter when he came in,' replied the woman, 'but when I gave him the packet he wouldn't touch it.'

"'Funny!' said Binfield, feeling in his pocket and bringing out another sixpence. 'That's for one I had the other day.'

"Well, Binfield says," concluded Newbatt, looking round to see if Beasley were listening, "that the moment he put down the coin Shamus barked as though a load were off his mind, and pounced upon the packet which he had refused a few minutes before as if he could take it with a clear conscience. There's no doubt he's convinced that Shamu's moral sense is extraordinarily highly developed, but—Halloa! Beasley, what's the matter?"

Beasley had risen from his chair with a contemptuous grunt.

"That fellow with his long-distance cat," he muttered "ought to be a member of this club. You and Parminter and he would make a pretty trio—Ananias, Sapphira, and B—B—"

"Binfield?" said Newbatt, softly.

"Beelzebub!" roared Beasley, 'the Father of Lies!"

CRICKET CRITICS.

Our cricketers are taking more and more to journalism till it is hard to find a first-class player who does not write cricket articles for some paper or other.—Daily paper.

Oh, what will become of our national cricket
When every player devotes
The time he would otherwise spend at the wicket
To penning elaborate notes?
To face a fast bowler is always exciting,
But wouldn't it cause you distress
If between each two overs you had to be writing
Your views on the game for the Press?

I can see "Plummy" Warner appealing to "Locky,"
"I say, can you wait for a bit?
My memory's apt to be awfully rocky;
I must make a note of that bit!"
And "Locky" will pause in the midst of his bowling,
While onlookers barrick and scoff;
He will not surrender his chance of extolling
That stunner that broke to the off.

With pencil and paper the field is provided,
To note ev'ry item of play;
Though their missing of catches is loudly derided,
Their note-books get so in the way.
But if cricket is robbed of a few of its g'ories,
A splendid advance has been made
When the newspapers come out with twenty-two stories
Of how the great match has been played!

In the Press box there's Jessop, and Fry, and Maclaren,
And Sewell, and Jephson, and Knight;
Their loss makes the field look excessively barren,
But still they are beggars to write.
And although they have given up playing—or nearly,
What need to repine about that
For the pen of the critic of cricket is clearly
More mighty by far than the bat!

THE BEST OILS FOR MOTOR CARS.

Wilburine for cylinders ... Rs. 6-8 per gallon Tin. | Valvoline for Bearings, etc. ... Rs. 5-0 per gallon Tin.

Extract from the "Autocar."

LUBRICATING OILS.—[2422]—It may be instructive to your numerous readers to have the experiences of a motor car experimentalist on the behaviour of lubricating oils for motor work. In the first onset I tried various sorts of oils, all of which left deposits of carbon and gumming matter in the cylinders and valves. These deposits are serious drawbacks, not only to the working of the pistons and valves, but also interfere with the proper sparking at the ignition plugs. I then tried the Valvoline Oil Co.'s oils, using "Wilburine" for the cylinders and "Valvoline" for the bearings, etc.; these being quite pure mineral oils, no deposits either of carbon or gumming matter were left. Every time the pistons, etc., have been examined they were quite bright, clean and well lubricated. The valves also keep in good condition and require very little regrinding. I have been quite free from sparking troubles since using the above lubricants. Any dust that alights on the working parts is easily wiped off, whereas with other oils dirt stuck fast through gumming.

Very much smaller quantities of these oils ("Wilburine" and "Valvoline") about one-third to one-quarter, are required, which more than balances the extra first cost. The wearing surfaces are besides in a magnificent condition. These advantages —viz., high-class lubrication, freedom from deposit in cylinders, gum in bearings, absence of sparking troubles, are too important to be neglected by any motorist.

There is a tendency to use various greases, instead of oils. Engineers have over and over again proved that greases give much greater frictional losses than oils; with motor car engines and bearings the lubricant that gives the least possible friction is the best.

I have referred to the advantages the motorist gets. I will mention another advantage these oils have to those whom the motorist passes, viz., the absence of the fried-fish-shop smell so often noted. Several persons have been very much struck by the absence of smell; even when the car has been standing for some time with the engines running, no trace of offensive odour has been apparent to the bystanders.

I mention these experiences, having no interest in the Valvoline Oil Co., that others may be benefited and save themselves trouble and their neighbours some annoyance.

THE "PIGSTICKING WEAPON."

THE decision of the late military authorities at home to make an end of the lance as a weapon for the cavalry, retaining only a dozen or so per regiment for ceremonial purposes, was received with such very qualified approval by those who are entitled to hold an opinion on the subject, that nobody will be surprised to see that the present authorities are considering the matter anew. The question of the efficacy of the lance is essentially one for the soldier, and the Secretary for War contented himself with the remark that he thought the decision to abolish the weapon had been arrived at with some haste.

Decisions to make changes of this character usually are reached in somewhat of a hurry. There are still among us in this country men who can remember the almost revolutionary changes in the British Army which followed the Franco-German War. The authorities, in a hurry to show that they had "learned the lessons" of that war, set themselves to Teutonise all military institutions as far as the essential differences between conscript and voluntary armies could be made to resemble one another, if not farther. Everything that was German was good and therefore to be copied in all haste: it was the "lesson of the war." The fact that our lancer regiments had few opportunities, or none, of employing their distinctive weapon in South Africa was deemed sufficient reason to abolish the lance as an encumbrance something worse than useless. Expert opinion was far from unanimous on the point: but the fact remained that the lance had been seldom or never used during the campaign and "the lesson of the war" taught that it was obsolete, cumbrous and unserviceable; and therefore to be passed into store.

Regarding the matter, as perforce we must, from the purely civilian standpoint, any expression of opinion concerning the value of what an honourable member of Parliament described as a "pigsticking weapon" in modern warfare is out of the question. But it may be permissible to suggest that the lessons of the South African War are not necessarily applicable to any or all future wars. Our troops were operating over an enormous area of country against an unorganised and peculiarly mobile foe and engagements at close quarters rarely occurred: when they did occur, unless memory deceives us, lancers did not happen to be among the troops which bore part. Colonel Legge, late 9th Lancers, we observe, expressed in other words the idea we have suggested: he said that the evidence given before the War Commission was almost entirely in favour of retention of the lance: and he "thought we were depending too much on South African experience." It is always the last "lesson" that carries most weight irrespective of the circumstances under which it was learned: and the fact that the lancer, as a lancer, was of little use in South Africa does not, as we venture to think, finally prove that he can never, under any circumstances, be of utility again.

The conditions of warfare in the 'fifties, of course, were very different from what they are now; but history shows us that the lance was very far from being useless during the Mutiny. When the native cavalry employed in the last Burma War got a chance of using their lances, the "moral effect" was conspicuous: and while we do not pretend that moral should be set against physical effect, we believe that the most eminent military authorities set no inconsiderable store by the former. The effects, both moral and physical, in the Soudan campaigns were sufficiently marked: and since an army like the British never knows against what manner of foe it may next be pitted, there does seem some reason to carefully consider the question of abolishing the lance before the decision voiced by the late Secretary for War is ratified.

To write of the lance as "the pigsticking weapon" with sneering intent appears to us to be foolish, and we do not think the honourable member who employed the expression can ever have had opportunity of using the spear. Had he done so he would perhaps have paused to ask himself for what weapon he would exchange the spear to receive the charge of a valiant old boar who meant business. For the fearless boar bent on giving battle at close quarters, substitute the equally fearless fanatic charging over in the fashion which rifle-fire cannot completely check, and we suggest that there still exists a use for the lance as a weapon with which to receive attacks of a kind with which our many wars have made our troops familiar. If the ardent advocates of abolition can satisfy the world that cavalry will never again by any accident or chance of warfare be called upon to repel attack at close quaters or pursue a flying enemy in the ungrateful task of cutting him to pieces, then no doubt the lance may go: but humbly borrowing the experience gained in snipe shooting from the saddle, whereby boggy ground produced heaving flanks and an unsteady seat, is rifle fire from the saddle wholly to be depended on? We imagine that circumstances may arise in future wars which will oblige cavalry to shoot from half blown horses and that at comparatively close quarters: and we question whether the percentage of hits would be high, even though half the troopers engaged were marksmen. As regards the use of carbine or rifle in pursuit, it seems unnecessary to say much: manifestly firearms cannot be used with any reliable effect from the back of a horse at the gallop: and, we submit, there may be conditions under which literal pursuit may be far preferable to the use of small arms on the backs of a retreating foe. Certainly the sword might be employed in lieu of the lance: but we have it, on the authority of an expert witness before the War Commission, that our cavalry sword is the very worst weapon of its kind known to modern armament, and, so far at all events, we have not seen that a new pattern has been projected.

It does not seem necessary to notice the ridiculous objection that the lance is "barbarous." War itself is barbarous, if we may be excused for penning so obvious a truism: and if the barbarity of any modern military appliance depend upon the nature of the wound inflicted, the palm for barbarity should, in our judgment, be awarded to the shell whose splinters, so surgeons tell us, inflict an uglier and more cruel wound than does any edged weapon or small projectile. The objection shows the impossibility of eliminating sentiment from the severest practical affairs: but the reflection reminds us that sentiment in another shape may have something to do with the plea for retaining the lance. There is no more picturesque weapon in use in the army: it stands as the last survival of the old heroic days when battles were fought hand to hand and when individual muscle and pluck went for more than they can possibly do now-a-days. That is a form of sentiment entitled to respect, though it failed to furnish reason for retention of a weapon of proved inutility. We confess that we are rather impressed by the opinion expressed to Mr. Arnold Forster by an officer who said that "in general it did not really very much matter what weapon was put into a cavalry man's hand for shock tactics, provided he had confidence in it and mastery of it." Which utterance appears to have a good deal of wisdom in it while contributing nothing to the arguments for or against the lance. A hand weapon of some kind, we apprehend, is essential for what military science describes as "shock tactics," and unless these are to banished by the law of nations from the operations of war, we are yet to hear what weapon it is proposed to be substitute for the lance should the Army Council decide upon its abolition.

On several occasions the Cesarewitch has been won by animals who, in the earlier part of the season, have been considered practically worthless. A notable instance was Weathergage, winner of the long-distance event in 1852.

Originally the property of Mr. Armstrong, Weathergage was, by the advice of Admiral Rous, sold for forty pounds. Six months later he landed one of the biggest coups on record.

Sporting Notes.

A GENERAL meeting of the subscribers to the Calcutta Paperchases was held on the 10th instant at No. 12, Russell Street, Mr. R. H. A. Gresson presiding. It was decided, after same discussion, to raise the height for ponies to 14-2 on condition that ponies to qualify for the Pony Cup must qualify in the weekly pony chases. There will be another general meeting to-morrow to decide upon the conditions of the Pony Cup next coming season.

As taken by Benson's chronograph, the time occupied by Roseburn in winning the Chesterfield Handicap at Doncaster, distance one mile and a half, was 2mins. 30⅘secs. (details in our London Sporting Letter). This time creates a new record for that distance. The previous best, 2mins. 30⅘secs., was made by Avidity in the Alexandra Plate, Doncaster, September 1900. Other fast times for one mile and a half were made by Santoi (2mins. 31secs.) at Hurst Park, and King's Courier (2mins. 31⅘secs.) at the same enclosure.

Our Bangalore Correspondent writes:—All the horses entered at Mysore and Bangalore are being shoved along pretty strongly at present, and the course presents a most animated appearance in the early mornings. Nearly all the well-known jockeys in India are in the station, including Penton, Lansdowne, Koops, O'Neill, Wiles, Bennett, Melsom, Burns and Hoyt. With Bundook, Sister, Rapid Pilgrim, Nightingale, Wild Raven, Peppercorn, Tecoota and numerous other good horses for these well-known professionals to ride, there must infallibly be good sport at the two big sister meetings.

The bookmakers, jockeys and trainers, who are making their cricket and their projected match against the owners a serious function this year, played a scratch match against a team composed of members of the Bowring Institute on the 9th instant, and won by the handsome margin of 54 runs with a couple of wickets to spare. Nearly all the runs for the professionals were made by Godfrey and T. Ferguson, the well-known trainer, who scored 85 and 40 runs respectively. Both men also did good work in the bowling department. The owners will not have to consider their match too much as a "skittle" function if they wish to win it.

Particulars of a good day's sport, especially for the bookmakers, at the Bangalore Third Extra Meeting, will be found in our Turf columns.

Among the ponies on board the Fortunatus, which is expected to reach Calcutta shortly, are Silenus and Omelette for "Mr. Kelso" and several real good performers shipped by Messrs. McKellar, Smith, Norton, Burgess and Griffiths.

It is possible that Cissy J. will be sent up from Rangoon to run in Calcutta Monsoon Meetings.

The Gymkhana at Simla last Saturday once more provided a most enjoyable afternoon's sport. There were five events on the card, all of which attracted large entries. Tent-pegging over hurdles was the opening competition; seventeen entered, Captain Smith getting the award. Polo croquet for Ladies was won by Mrs. McLeod, with Mrs. Morgan next: conditions were to hit a Polo ball through three hoops and touch a stick. The Polo ball race was run off in heats, and was won by Captain Smith, Captain Brooke second. The Aunt Sally Stakes, competed for by teams of four, was carried off by Mrs. Robinson, Mrs. McLeod and Messrs. Lloyd and McLeod. Major and Mrs. Crocker secured the Bran Tub Stakes, which was the final event. Her Excellency Lady Ampthill kindly offered for competition the Viceroy's Cup, which she had won at the recent Horse Show with her mare Atlanta. Major Maxwell won with English Lord.

It has frequently been said—and no one seems to have the temerity to dispute the assertion—that there is no such thing as "luck," but perhaps the Turf careers of Mr. W. Bass and Mr. George Faber may be taken as disproving the theory. Mr. Bass, though he can have had little preliminary experience, never seems to make a bad deal, and though he gave a lot of money for Sceptre, the stakes she has since won, with a margin allowed for moderate speculation, would fully recoup the outlay. Then, again, Grey Tick, Lychnobite, and Wet Paint, who at different periods were purchased to lead the mare in her work, have each won good races on their own account, and if rumour speaks truthfully a good sum was landed over the first-named when he carried off the Cesarewitch. Mr. Faber, on the other hand, though he spends money in the most lavish manner in the purchase of thoroughbred stock, seems scarcely able to win a race of any sort, and Dame Fortune certainly could not have been smiling upon him when, offered choice between Sceptre and Duke of Westminster at the close of their two-year-old careers, he selected the colt instead of the filly.

The Simla Polo Tournament for the Beresford Cup began on the 6th instant when a large crowd turned out to see the opening matches. The first game was between the 12th Lancers and the Patiala team, a finely contested match resulting in a win for the Lancers by 2 goals and 2 subsidiaries to 1 goal and four subsidiaries. The teams were :—Patiala : Thukar Singh, Major Popham, Mr. Young and Chanda Singh (back). 12th Lancers : Lieutenant T. R. Badger, Lieutenant A. B. Reynolds, Captain Wormald and Captain Bailey. In the other game the Commander-in-Chief's Staff opposed the Bengal Cavalry, the former having an easy win by 9 goals and 4 subsidiaries to 3 goals. Teams :—Staff : Captain V. R. Brooke, Major F. A. Maxwell, Colonel Hamilton, and Barnes. Bengal Cavalry : Messrs. Binny, Crocker, Howell and Fasken. The third game in the first round was played off on the 7th instant before a large gathering of spectators, Their Excellencies Lord and Lady Ampthill being present. The Freebooters beat the Viceroy's Staff by six goals and 2 subsidiaries to 1 goal. It was a good game in spite of the score, the Staff being unlucky in not obtaining a larger number of points. Teams :—Freebooters : Davis, Smith, Mant and Mathew-Lannowe. Staff: Mortimer, Campbell, Popham and Keighley.

The semi-finals were played on the 9th instant. The first match was between the Freebooters and the 15th Hussars, a splendid game ending in favour of the Hussars by 5 goals and 3 subsidiaries to 4 goals 1 subsidiary. The Freebooters played a plucky game but could not get another goal. The Hussars team :—Lieutenant C. J. Ratcliff, Major L. E. Kennard, Captain A Courage, Lieutenant L. T. C. Livingstone-Learmouth (back). The Freebooters were as before. The second game between the 12th Lancers and the Chief's Staff provided a fine struggle, resulting in a draw. They were prevented from continuing by a storm, but on the 11th instant the teams met once more, with widened goals. The Lancers pressed hard at the start and scored a minor point, but their opponents soon got possession and put through, thus winning on the two days' play for 4 goals, 4 subsidiaries to 3 goals, 5 subsidiaries. Teams as before.

If dogged determination and pegging away at accomplishing an object in the face of repeated disappointment deserves success, the Fish Acclimatisation Society have well merited it in what it has achieved in the trout introduction line. We learn that the country-reared fish have commenced breeding, so may take it for granted that the problem of introducing this grand fish into tropical waters has been at length solved. As it turns out the chief food of the rainbow trout is fresh water crabs an incentive is offered for essaying acclimatisation in other mountain tracts. In the plains we should have to reckon with the schools of others whose ravages it would be well nigh impossible to control, but high up in Northern India, about 6,000 feet, the water cat is seldom met with. Fresh water crustaceans abound in the Assam mid range, so a promising field lies open there for the pisiculturist. Imported spawn or developed fish are not likely to thrive in the vicinity of Shillong, for clear as the water looks, it is impregnated with peaty properties. To succeed one must set up the hatcheries or turn down the fish farther to the eastward, towards Ja-ai, and the valleys to the north. The Nurtiang lake and its feeders offers a suitable field, being free from mineral contaminations. The pretty little speckled fellows mentioned as present in the minor pools and streams in the neighbourhood of Lakhat might be netted and taken up ; should they thrive we may consider the larger kind would, for true trout these undoubtedly are.

That prince of distillers and rare good judge of a horse, a dog or a yacht, Sir Thomas R. Dewar, has a page of biographical sketch in the Licensed Victuallers' Gazette, in which the writer takes us rapidly through the leading incidents in the life of one of Scotland's most prominent sons and gives details of the growth of a most remarkably successful enterprise. Referring to the light side of the picture the chronicler says :—

"He is a thorough sportsman, and is always ready to encourage genuine sport. In order to commemorate his year of Shrievalty for the City of London he presented a committee with a valuable Challenge Shield, said to be the best in the world, called the 'Sheriff of London Football Charity Shield.' It is of more than usual value, and is highly prized by the winning team, and is played for each year between a selected team of Amateurs and a well-known Professional eleven. The proceeds of the matches are distributed amongst the various charities in the metropolis and in the district from which the visiting team hails. Up to the present there have been six contests, and the total sum distributed is very little short of £1,300.

"He is an expert whip, and for some few years ran the coach from London to Boxhill during the season. He is now an ardent motorist, having a 16-horse power Panhard and two other small cars of different makes. Although he has done over 30,000 miles on his Panhard in various parts of England, he has as yet not had the honour of an official interview with a county bench of magistrates. He is a Justice of the Peace for the county of Kent, and on the Commission of Lieutenancy for the City of London.

"Although much occupied with business and parliamentary duties (meetings in his constituency and the like), during the shooting season he generally manages to get in a week-end in Kent. During the summer he spends week-ends on his houseboat, the Fair Maid of Perth, on the Thames.

"Though a good all-round sportsman and fond of shooting, driving and racing (keeping a good stud in training at Newmarket), Sir Thomas sets an example in the fact that he never bets."

A stirring account of how a monster crocodile was captured in the Kranji river by some local sportsmen the other day has been sent to The Straits Budget. The writer remarks that on Sunday a party went out pig-hunting, but they had little luck. The chase led them to the Kranji river far from the main road. It was decided to board a boat, which was then available, to land them at the 12th milestone on the Bukit Timah Road. On continuing their journey along the river, a huge crocodile was noticed on the left bank enjoying its midday siesta. At the moment a strong current was running and it was with difficulty that the boat's head was turned upstream. The boatman on seeing the crocodile dropped the oars and became nervous. His place was gallantly taken by one of the "braves," who in his elementary lesson in boating nearly brought the whole party to grief. At a distance of 200 yards, two shots were fired from a Winchester Rifle 50-110 and a sporting 303. The saurian took the bullets like a Scotsman taking porridge. About ten minutes elapsed and the brute raised its head wondering when the next few lumps of sugar were coming along. With its formidable jaws wide open (says our correspondent waxing enthusiastic) and bellowing like some monster of the deep engaged in deadly struggle, the crocodile began lashing its tail with such fury as to send the mangrove trees flying in all directions. With raised head it made for the water, but another tiny, though powerful 303 bullet sped on its fatal errand and checked immediately its progress. On the bullet striking the monster below its jaw, its head was seen to drop as if a sledge hammer had battered it down. This bullet was afterwards found to have penetrated the skull. The first two bullets hitting the brute on the neck would have put a powerful animal hors de combat, but even the third shot did not despatch it. It again bellowed with raised head and jaws open. About two hours afterwards, when all sign of life was extinct, it was hauled into the boat with the help of 12 men. On resuming the journey, and while in mid-stream, the tail was lashed furiously and the jaws moved again. This caused a great commotion in the boat which nearly swamped. The relief on standing again on solid ground after a short voyage of great excitement was never better experienced. Great difficulty was experienced in getting the huge monster ashore. It measured 20 feet and only 4 teeth were noticed. The boatman explained, when all danger was over, that he expected the crocodile's mate to attack the boat as they have often been known to do. This accounts for his—that is, the boatman's—peculiar behaviour.

Hunters of big game will be interested in the story which Mr. Basil Tozer, says the managing director of a mining syndicate operating not far from Pretoria, sends home in an official report. "About five o'clock on Sunday morning," says the writer, "at least seven lions (counting the incoming spoors) attacked our goats, killed five and mauled three, and also one native. About 3 P.M., a boy turned up badly scratched, saying that a lion was eating his companion ; so we all turned out, four of us, followed by 100 Kaffirs. My three companions stirred up a lion about 200 yards north-west of the camp. They fired several shots, but missed, so we followed the spoor. Suddenly a huge lioness jumped up about 60 feet ahead of us. I fired, and hit her in the chest. She turned on hind legs away from me and made a jump for L. When she reached L. a shot went off somewhere, and L. went down, with the lioness on top of him. I did not fire, for fear of hitting him. Two more shots went off, and the lioness left L., and I gave her another shot as she jumped a short distance in the bush. The affair lasted only a few minutes. L. got up and ran a short distance to the rear, and I hurried to attend to him. The lioness had torn his clothes and mauled his left arm. We carried him into camp, where he died a few minutes after our arrival, about 4 P. M. We buried him on Monday afternoon. On Monday night we were again attacked by lions. I had put the remaining goats in the wagon shed, and had thorn bushes piled up all round seven feet high, and had two lamps burning in the stable and the shed; but lions jumped over the thorn bushes, broke in the door, and killed several goats. Last night (two nights later) we were once more attacked, but the lions could do no damage, as we had set an armed guard in the stable. Judging by the spoors there were nine lions here on Sunday morning. They have been trying to dig under the stable again. We had another attack last night (two nights later) at about 10 o'clock. One lion was killed by the stable guard. I paid the boys the premium of one pound each. Last night a single lion got into the camp. He came in near my hut, walked down the row of huts, and went out near the dining room. I have learned more about lions in the last few days than I ever heard or read about them before. Sixty-one boys left us this morning. The stable boys won't go for water unless two armed men accompany them."

Premature old age is, of course, produced by a thousand and one other agencies besides over-indulgence in strong drink ; but the case of a certain Scottish gentleman, high up in the social scale, who has reduced himself to the condition of a physical wreck by the undue exercise of his muscles is, perhaps, uncommon. From his boyhood, gymnastics and athletic games of every description possessed a peculiar fascination for him, and nothing afforded him such genuine and perfect delight as to find himself applauded for some surprising deed demonstrating extraordinary strength. Five in the morning always found him at his dumb-bells and Indian clubs, and in the evening twilight his brow was still bathed in perspiration, the result of a ceaseless exertion to break some vaunted "record" or other. As he advanced in age he devoted more and more attention to his baneful hobbies. He studied his diet like a boxer training for the ring, and ardent liquors never passed his lips. Yet to-day, at the age of forty-five, he is bent, shrunk, and wrinkled, and easily mistaken for a person who has reached the allotted span. While recently attempting to raise two 56lbs. weights above his head —one in each hand—the overstrained muscles of both arms became suddenly paralysed, and he is since unable to raise them from his side. All this was told me (continues the correspondent) by his aggrieved father, who added that his son's curious and egregious infatuation had proved quite as ineradicable as the most insinuating and noxious forms of vice.

We have heard a great deal of late of "ambi-dexterity," and the advantages to be derived from the practice of using both hands. Now we read that "most men are stronger in one limb than in the fellow one. It has been ascertained that over 50 per cent. of mankind examined have the right arm stronger than the left ; 16·4 per cent. have the two arms of equal length and strength ; and 32·7 per cent. have the left arm stronger than the right. Of women, 46·9 per cent. have the right arm stronger than the left ; 24·5 per cent have the left stronger than the right. In order to arrive at the average length of limbs 50 skeletons were once measured, 25 of each sex. Of these 23 had the right arm and left leg longer, six the left arm and right leg, while in 17 cases all the members were more or less equal in length."

British sportsmen will learn with a good deal of pleasure that a public subscription is being raised at Johannesburg to send a Transvaal rifle team to compete at the forthcoming meeting at Bisley.

Shooting reaches a high level of excellence in Africa, and recent competitions have shown records superior to any made in England. Consequently, the team are very sanguine of success at the great meeting, and are not without hopes of bringing back the King's Prize. The belief of the Boer in his own abilities as a shot is self-evident, and, if he proves the best man, no one will grudge him the King's Prize. But we have yet to be satisfied that all that has been said of the Boer as a shot is quite true ; and a little ocular demonstration would, no doubt, clear up many doubts and dispel not a few delusions.

Athletic Notes.

We have received a couple of letters from ill-conditioned people complaining about the seating and other arrangements at recent football matches on the Calcutta maidan. We should like people of this class to understand that we cannot lend our columns to the abuse, anonymous or otherwise, of Club Executives in connection with matters such as these. The general, outside public are clean out of court when they grumble. They do not pay to see these matches, the matches are not played for their benefit, and as often as not those crowding round the ropes and encroaching on the field of play are a serious nuisance to the players; protests from these persons can only be classed as examples of gross impertinence. On the other hand, Club members ought surely to address their Committees and Honorary Secretaries if they have any complaints to make, rather than exhibit such indecent haste to "write to the papers." We are always open to publish letters concerning the objects to promote which this paper exists; but corespondence of this childish and petty nature will invariably find its way to the waste paper basket to be ultimately dealt with by the office "Plantagenet."

Jack McAuliffe and Bert Delaney were in Singapore last month giving boxing exhibitions at Harmston's Circus, the genial "Bob" Love presiding over the show in his accustomed fatherly manner. He was, when last we heard of him, offering to back McAuliffe to fight any man in Singapore for a sum not exceeding $10,000.

Votaries of the noble art of self-defence are not few nor wanting in enthusiasm at Mhow, writes a correspondent, and evidence thereof may be found in the fact that the York and Lancaster Regiment have just held a successful tournament, in which the rest of the garrison were kindly allowed to take part. The tournament occupied two evenings, 1st and 2nd June. The time-keeper was Q. M. S. Stewart; Judges, Captain Haines and Lieutenant Awdry; and Referee, Captain Ross, R. A. M. C. Twelve men entered for the Regimental Light Weights. In the semi-finals Private Draper beat Lance-Corporal Walsh, and Private Sauson beat Private Woollen. In the finals, Draper beat Sauson after a good fight. An extra round had to be fought to decide it. In the Garrison Light Weights semi-finals, Driver Tomlin, R. H. A., beat Private Higgins, Y. and L., and Private Farrah, Y. and L., beat Corporal Edwards, 10th Royal Hussars. In the finals Farrah beat Tomlin. There were seven entries for this match. Ten entered for the Garrison Middle Weights. In the semi-finals, Driver Dove, R. H. A., beat Trumpeter Mulligan, 10th R. H., and Trooper Sheppard, 10th R. H., was left a bye. In the finals Dove beat Sheppard. In the special six-round contest between Private Yates, Y. and L., and Trooper Webb, 10th R. H., the former was adjudged the victor. In the contest between Lance-Corporal Conlin, Y. and L., and Private Lacy, of the same regiment, the former bore off the palm. The prizes for the best fight in the competition were awarded to Lance-Corporal Walsh and Private Gregory, both of the York and Lancaster Regiment.

The following are among the most important cricket fixtures decided at home last week :—Kent beat Worcestershire by 204 runs; the South Africans beat Cambridge by 70 runs, Essex was defeated by Warwickshire by an innings and 110 runs; Lancashire beat Somerset by ten wickets; Yorkshire beat Surrey by 297 runs; the match between Sussex and Derbyshire ended in a win for the former by an innings and 65 runs; and that between Leicestershire and London County in a win for Leicestershire by 9 wickets.

On the 10th instant Lancashire beat Gloster by an innings and 43 runs; the South Africans beat Oxford University by an innings and 97 runs; Sussex was defeated by Essex by an innings and 204 runs. Derbyshire vs. M. C. C. resulted in a win for the former by eight wickets. Kent vs. Middlesex was won by Kent by eight wickets. On Saturday, the 11th instant, Worcester beat Hants by six wickets; Yorkshire beat Notts by ten wickets; and Surrey beat Cambridge University by 40 runs.

The Irish native Golf Championship played at Portmarnock, has been won by Mr. H. A. Boyd, who beat Mr. J. P. Todd by four holes and two to play.

As advices by last mail foreshadowed, Peter Latham easily defeated "Punch" Fairs and won the Tennis Championship by 7 sets to five. Details of the final stage of the contest appear in our London Sporting Letter.

The Calcutta Cricket Club ground is closed for the season.

Entries for the I. F. A. Challenge Shield Tournament close on the 11th July.

The movement in Bombay to start another Rugby Football Club has met with general approval; we trust to hear that the scheme has been carried to a successful issue. This reminds us that there is more than sufficient room for another Rugby Club or two in Calcutta. There are, we believe, many men in the C. F. C. who would like to play, but under existing arrangements cannot hope to get into the eleven, or see anything but second and practice games. That there exists good "footer" material in this Club alone for another Civilian Club we have no doubt whatever. Why not follow Bombay's example? What about a Calcutta Scottish or a Ballygunge team?

A brief reference was recently made to the huge score of 438 by Warwick Armstrong for Melbourne Club against Melbourne University. The University did not get a knock either on March 26th or April 9th, so that the eight wickets of M. C. C. represented the sum total of the cricket. As W. W. A.'s 438 beat all Australian records for the highest individual score, it will be well to give the full details of the Melbourne innings :—

Bruce, c Baird, b James	8
Armstrong, b Bailey	438
Rainsford, run out	42
Fry, c James, b Rainey	20
Down, c Graham, b James	14
Monfries, c L. Miller, b Rainey ...	123
Irwin, b James	11
Johnston, not out	16
Bowden, run out	0
Murray, not out	3
Sundries	24
Total (for 8 wickets) ...	699

Previous to this, J. Worrall's 417 for Carlton against the University in February 1896, held the Victorian record, with T. Warne's 402, also for Carlton v. Richmond, in December 1898, a good second C. J. Eady's 566, for Break-'o-Day v. Wellington, at Hobart, on March 8th, 15th, 22nd and April 4th, 1902, is the best so far for Australasia. Bailey, who finally bowled Armstrong, is a son of the Tasmanian cricketer, G. H. Bailey, who went to England as a member of the first Australian team, in 1878.

The first individual innings of two hundred at Home this season was made by J. E. Raphael, playing Oxford University v. Yorkshire. It is so unusual nowadays for a 'Varsity cricketer to do anything out of the ordinary that if the two hundred had been made against an ordinary County the feat would have attracted attention, but Raphael's innings was played against the full bowling strength of Yorkshire, and it takes some skill to make two hundred runs against Rhodes, Hirst, Haigh, Ringrose, and Myers.

Raphael was at school at Merchant Taylors, where he made a great schoolboy reputation. Dr. Grace soon spotted him and gave him plenty of chances of distinguishing himself for London County, but on the whole his play was as disappointing as that of so many other young players who have shown great promise at school. He can hit with tremendous power, as he showed in the Yorkshire match after he had made his first hundred runs, but often he contents himself with playing with great steadiness.

The final game in the Murree Football Tournament was won by the Gordon Highlanders who defeated the King's Royal Rifles by two goals to love.

De Rougemont, it appears, is not to have it all his own way with his bare-back riding on turtleback. "Truthful Tommy," we hear is challenging him to a race on mock turtles from Battersea Bridge to Broadstairs, the contest to be in the Græco-Roman or catch-as-catch-can style, spot stroke barred, and no heel-taps. This should prove an interesting sporting event.

London, Friday, 27th May 1904.

RUSSIA'S methods are giving rise to indignation. It is not yet conclusively proved that the defenders of Port Arthur are making it a practice to leave mines afloat on the high seas on the chance of an enemy's ship coming in contact with one: but if it be true that this has been, and is intentionally done, the authorities in this country hold such proceedings entirely a breach of international law. Manifestly these terrible engines may drift any distance into perfectly neutral waters and destroy perfectly neutral vessels: and Admiral de Horsey and others speak for not only this nation, but all nations, when they insist that enquiry into the practice and legality thereof should be undertaken.

* * * * * *

Of less immediate importance to neutrals, but not much more creditable to Russia, is the amazing policy indicated in a telegram from St. Petersburg published here on Tuesday: this gives the gist of the Viceregal order concerning the enlistment of the Sakhalin convicts. The principal terms are: that each two months of active service shall reckon as a year of penal servitude: any convict who takes part in an action shall de facto become a member of the colonist class: all brilliant feats of arms by convict volunteers will be reported to the Viceroy for further reduction of sentence or even for full pardon. There are other conditions affecting various classes of convicts, but these exhibit the general scheme. Now Sakhalin is the destination of all that is worst in Russian criminal circle, and the convict population is over 22,000. We need not perhaps attach much importance to the fact that about one-third of the total are murderers: a man otherwise estimable may in the moment of passion become a murderer whose sentence is the least part of the punishment he has to bear. But the very dregs of the Russian criminal population are sent to Sakhalin, and that staunch admirer—or patron—of Russia, Mr. Henry Norman, has told the world the Tzar's police "have to deal with a stratum of population far below any that exists with us—a brutish, hopeless, irreclaimable mass of human animals." And this is the material to which Russia entrusts the task of fighting her battles! No wonder the civilised nations stare.

* * * * * *

I take it that Japan is the nation that should take least objection to this remarkable recruiting scheme: a Russian convict will not make a very dangerous enemy: but he will make an uncommonly dangerous ally, and the unfortunate people, in whose country operations occur, will find this out. Where, we ask meantime, are the 3½ millions of men which constitute the Russian War Establishment? Is that railway proving a reed so broken that a convict near the seat of war is become a valuable military asset? In connection with this convict enlistment order, read the following which I clipped from Monday's Times. It comes from one of the Thunderer's Russian Correspondents:—The mother of one of the Jewish surgeons who have been sent out from Warsaw to the war recently received from her son a letter which throws a characteristic light on the results of Russian censorship. The letter is written in the usual official Russian style, and bears the stamp of the censor. It states that the writer is in good health, that admirable order prevails among the troops, who are certain of victory and are amply supplied with all necessaries, and that there is so little illness that the army surgeons have scarcely anything to do. It concludes with a request that his mother should send him some Hebrew books of which he gives the titles. These are:—"Famine and Destitution," "Consequent Fearful Epidemics," "Scarcely any Sanitary Appliances," "Demoralization of the Army Constantly Increasing," "End of Discipline," "Wish I were Taken Prisoner." Evidently the censor did not know Hebrew.

"Shaves" have been as numerous as usual since I wrote last: Tuesday evening saw a really fine effort, the ha'penny papers killing from fourteen to sixteen thousand Japs.

The Registrar-General is not an author, whose annual work has a very wide reading public: indeed I doubt whether you could get "vital statistics" at Mudie's: but when somebody who revels in acres of figures has digested the contents of the work for you, it proves to have "vital" interest. The outskirts of London, according to Mr. Registrar-General, are the healthiest places in Britain: the rate of mortality at Hornsey, somewhere on the north' was lowest, being 7·9 per 1,000 in 1903. Beckenham' somewhere in the South East, came next, with 9 per 1,000. Dublin was worst, with 22·9 per 1,000. Nearly all the metropolitan suburban towns had a lower death-rate than the recognised health resorts: but this is due in a measure, I surmise, to the circumstance that when people grow very mindful of their mortality they go, if they can afford it, to a health resort regardless of the circumstance that by dying there they render injustice to the health resort's death-rate. The death-rate for the whole of inner London last year was the lowest known, to wit 15·7 per 1,000. A rate due again, I imagine, to the increased affluence and charity which enables the sick to go or be removed to more airy situations. A serious item in the statistics is the increase of births over deaths in the kingdom: the net increase was 13 per 1,000: and this in a country where there is hardy elbow room as it is.

An adaptation of a French play is "Lady Flirt," produced on Wednesday at the Haymarket. It is a rather familiar game of cross purposes redeemed from the commonplace by the refinement and wit—often brilliancy—of the dialogue: but whether these factors have as much to do with its success as the clever acting of Mr. Cyril Maude, Mr. Fred Kerr, Miss Ellis Jeffreys and Miss Beatrice Beckley would be hard to say. M. le Comte de la Roche (Mr. Maude) is at the bottom of the trouble: he has been dallying about Lady Melborough (Miss Beckley) who has written him compromising letters—the usual packet tied with a ribbon. Ah! How well one knows those letters! Lady Melborough has kept her gallivantings a secret from her lord (Mr. Edmund Maurier) who is attached to our Embassy at Paris, but confides in Lady Tonbridge (Miss Jeffreys): and when the inevitable letters find their way into Lord Melborough's hands (the Comte had a curious habit of leaving them in an unaddressed envelope) Lady Tonbridge comes in at the psychological moment and claims it as hers: takes the Comte as her own admirer and relieves her friend. This self-denial gets her into trouble with her real adorer, Honourable Paul Harding, Lord Melborough's brother: happily he is a deserving fellow and the situation is not further complicated. Lady Tonbridge secures the whole budget of letters and "all is peas." Mr. Cyril Maude was admirably suited as the Comte, a grining, smirking, bowing Frenchman who withal has undeniable fascination: and uncommonly good was Mr. Kenneth Douglas as Tommy Gore, a boy who is madly in love with Lady Tonbridge. Miss Jeffreys has never been seen to better advantage than "Lady Flirt:" she has a train of admirers whom she handles to perfection. The first Act, at Melborough's Paris House, was a bit slow: the second and third—the last in Lady Tonbridge's flat—were much more animated. The piece should have a run.

The King and Queen gave the Military Tournament the advantage of their presence yesterday. The most interesting feature of the display is the pageant called "The Rise of the Royal Artillery," wherein we are shown field guns from the time of Crecy down to the present day: an excellent idea excellently carried out. "Push ball on Horseback," however, will probably appeal more nearly to the shilling crowd.

The Moody Manners Company gave "The Daughter of the Regiment" at Drury Lane on Tuesday night. The best performance was that of Mdlle. Zelie de Lussan as the Vivandière, but all the parts were well filled and the singing was admirable. An incident of the evening was Mr. Manners' pathetic appeal to the rather thin house for aid to establish National English Opera. He said that his company turned money away in provincial towns, but he reckoned his loss on Tuesday night at £100, whereas a full house would have left a profit of £150. I fear me Mr. Manners' appeal is thrown away: what the London public want is more than self-supporting and eleemosynary aid will not keep alive that which is not wanted. We are not a musical nation in the classical sense of the word and there is an end of it.

Writing of matters musical, I must not forget to mention the discovery, among a collection of old music at Leicester, of a work by Wagner hitherto unknown, to wit, the "Rule Britannia" overture. The critics conjecture that its interest will prove less musical than historical: it was written in 1837 when Wagner was conductor at Königsberg: and it seems likely was discarded by the composer as he gave a concert at Riga in 1838 which included "Rule Britannia" with a different overture.

From these high matters descend we to earth, and bid farewell to the "Chinese Honeymoon," which goes off after a record stay for musical comedy of 1,075 nights.

Arthur Roberts celebrated Whit Monday at the Palace by a new "sketch" called "Where's the Count," which opens in the manner of a farce and rapidly rages into careless incoherency. I have a dim recollection that at the beginning Joe Muggins (Arthur Roberts), the cabman, was engaged to marry the maid whose mistress is engaged to Captain Somebody, and that there were cross-misunderstandings over a certain Count who does not appear in the flesh. And I have a lively recollection of Arthur Roberts in inconsequent guises as a Society idiot and an Irish police inspector, burlesquing actors, uttering Robertsian quips and sallies, and making things generally hum.

The Whitsuntide programme at the Alhambra includes two good turns. The "Radium Dance" is a novelty, and though I don't quite see what radium has to do with it, the name, suggestive of mystery, is very suitable. It is a weird performance. The house is absolutely dark: orchestra and footlights out: stage draped in black: family vaults and charnel houses rise in your mind and when ten or more figures glide on, radiant with a suppressed glow-worm sort of radiance, you think of all the short stories you ever heard. Then music which ought in consistency to recall the Dance of Death, but does not: presumably the management fear to stir our feelings too deeply for the strains were suggestive rather of the too familiar cake walk. How the mysterious light, which illumines the clothing of the dancers only, is produced is an American secret. The rest of the ballet is pretty, but the Radium Dance is the feature of the entertainment. The other "turn" is that of Miss Caselli's Chihuahua (which doggy people pronounce "shewawa") dogs. I was the more interested in this, having regarded these very small canines as the least intelligent of their race. They walk tight ropes and do exercises on horizontal bars and trapezes: and one highly accomplished little beast, about the size of a well grown guinea pig, balanced himself on one fore-paw upon his trainer's thumb: a really clever trick which must have taken a lot of practice. "High Jinks" holds its place at the Empire defying Theatre managers and Law: the Sleepy Page dance goes as successfully as ever. May Yohé has reappeared: this time on the Music Hall stage to receive on ovation at the Tivoli where she sings a couple of coon songs. It was bad luck for the Whitsun visitors to town that Dan Leno should have fallen and hurt his foot, obliging him to take a week's rest just at the holiday time. His place at the "Pav." is taken for the time by Mr. Malcolm Scott, who does "The woman who knows" with a restrained humour and cleverness that struck me as more than excellent. There is nothing very striking among the new turns at the Hippodrome.

A fine day on Monday gave the Earl's Court show a brilliant start: nearly 76,500 people are said to have visited the place on the Bank Holiday. The Great Wheel takes rather a back seat now I am told, preference going to a new form of excitement which is planned on the lines of the "giant's stride familiar to school boys." To a lofty pillar are suspended fish-shaped cars, each of which carries a dozen people: the pillar is made to revolve by steam with ever-increasing rapidity until the cables suspending the cars are at nearly such an angle to the pillar as the ribs of a Japanese umbrella: having attained this desirable (?) speed and elevation, the speed is gradually reduced to let the cars down again. The danger of accident is minimised by the water into which a car would fall, did its cable snap. Whence I presume the suggestive fish-like form of the vehicle.

Yvette Guilbert has been giving an interviewer her ideas about the London Stage. She "names no names," mind: but "I have been to the play every night and I am dumbfounded at the vapidity of your playwrights and at the public finding pleasure in such stuff." "All your productions are almost in every case so childish, so void of sense and of the particular kind of fun which no longer amuses those who have passed the age of twelve." "It has actually hurt me to hear grown up men and women laugh over and applaud certain farces whose poverty of wit was heartrending." "A little art please, just a little bit of art. Have farce if you will, but have with it wit and especially put into it some sense and meaning." Whereto Max Beerbohm replies "It must not be forgoten that the French are apt to confuse the obstetric with the artistic and, in spite of the consciousness that the humour of farce is oftimes pitiful, I would add "and domestic sanitation with humour."

The Poet Laureate is coming out as a playwright. He sent anonymously, a comedietta called "A Lesson in Harmony," to Mr. Bourchier, stipulating that if accepted that actor manager should play the leading part. The reader accepted the play and lo! the author proved to be Mr. Alfred Austin.

Various items: Subscriptions are being invited to a fund for the purpose of paying Sir James Duke's expenses in the action brought against him by Mr. Sievier: the balance, if any, to be applied to a testimonial for sevices rendered. The last planks of the scaffolding are now being removed from the base of the Albert Memorial: and people are asking when the upper regions of the edifice are going to be renovated. The Cart Horse Parade on Whit Monday was a bigger function than ever: and its most ardent supporters recognise that steps must be taken to divide it if the affair is not to reach unmanageable proportions. The Committee of the Thames Barrage Scheme advocates full examination thereof before Parliament commits itself to the bill for municipalisati n of the London Docks: the Committee maintains that the Barrage Scheme will cost one-tenth what the other will cost. The new "Simpson's" opened on Wednesday with much flourish of paragraphs: a different Simpson's from the old whose knife board high backed settles on the horse-box pattern you would remember. It is many years since I dined at Simpson's and I confess that I have, in later years, preferred the East Room at the Cri, or other resort where you sit softer and dine equally well. The new Simpson's promises no extra charge for thick carpets, oak panelling and comfortable chairs: and chess will remain as of yore. The Great Northern Brompton Piccadilly Tube is to have a station opposite Baily's Hotel and the shaft sinkers are at work on the site of the houses demolished for the purpose. It is proposed to use the late Colonel North's house at Avery Hill as a training college for teachers. How this would square with a purchase made under the Open Spaces Act only the L. C. C. knows. The Times, having recovered its Encyclopædia Britanica advertising efforts, has opened the ball again with full page announcements of a daring scheme whereby you shall enjoy the Times for 23 per cent. less than the ordinary price if you pay one year's subscription or two, in advance. I don't doubt the merits of the scheme, but its novelty and originality do not seem to justify such a volcanic outburst of advertisement.

A West African potentate, the Alake of Abeokuta, is with us and is doing London with a rare combination of the country cousin and the orthodox man about town. We hear of his discerning questions at the Tower of London and of his gratification with the variety show at the Pav.: of his appreciation of the elephants at the Hippodrome and his comments on the street traffic. On the other hand, the reporters exhibit unanimous admiration for his clothes, particularly his topee, which they describe as "pure gold."

CHOLERA.

LIEUTENANT-COLONEL JOSHUA DUKE, I.M.S. (Retired), is a writer on many subjects. Our first acquaintance with his literary efforts was in respect of Bunting in India; years afterwards we saw more from his pen in the shape of Codes and Rules if we mistake not; quite recently he came before us in his Kashmir Handbook, and now he weighs in with Cholera—precautions and suggestions for the prevention and check of this fell disease—not "cure" be it noted, but "check." What he has to say is chiefly addressed to Thomas Atkins, Esquire, and those who in Cantonments dwell, but it is all concisely put, eminently practical and should be helpful in emergency, to say nothing of the assistance it should render those who are intent on keeping cholera at arm's length by attention to those matters of personal, domestic and kitchen hygiene which are alas! so often overlooked to our cost in this country.

A. "G. G." BOOK.

WITTY sayings by the score seem to come from "G. G." naturally. He turns them out with reckless profusion when the spirit moves him; and he finds it easier apparently, with pen in fist, to be humorous than to pull a long face. In his new novel this well-known contributor tells a good sporting story—not a so-called sporting story with a horse mentioned occasionally and the author generally at sea as to the essental matters of sport. Our author is all right, quite at home in the saddle, on the course, or when flying after fox. In effect, "G. G." knows what he is writing about, and possesses a neat literary style of his own. He has trained and ridden racehorses and hunters; sport has been the ruling passion of his life.

Several amusing characters are introduced into "A Fairy in the Pigskin." The heroine is Miss Kitty Smithers, daughter of a horse-dealer—old Jem Smithers, whose philosophical reflections are quaint and pithy. A gentleman jockey, R. Nibs, and his rich patron little Smifkins, help to keep the game alive; while there is such a brisk and beautiful love interest tenderly described that readers are sure to indulge in a number of hearty laughs Those will be worth much more than the price of admission; they are a sovereign cure for gloom, and here the charge is only three shillings and sixpence. We commend "G. G.'s" new story to the notice of all sportsmen, who are certain to be amused by its perusal and to yearn for more from the same tap—or pen. The latter seems to run on gamely.

CRICKET.

THE latest contribution to that world-renowned set of athletic books, 'The All-England Series,' comes from F. C. Holland, whose book on cricket, lavishly and well illustrated, takes rank as one of the best of the series. Fred. C. Holland, the Surrey professional, not only knows the game and plays it too, as we saw last season; but he can write on it in an interesting, practical and instructive style so that with the very helpful picture, he has succeeded in producing a little book of which every genuine cricketer should possess a copy.

THE BIRDS OF CALCUTTA.

WE tender our very good friend, Mr. Frank Finn, hearty congratulations on the appearance of the Second Edition of his now widely known and popular booklet on "The Birds of Calcutta." These interesting and delightfully written chapters on the feathered friends we see around us in our daily life in this big city and its environs received their original christening with printer's ink in a sporting journal we conducted some time ago. They obtained an immediate popularity and awakened an interest in the bird life of Calcutta in many who had never given the subject any attention, and when later on they re-appeared in book form the author had every reason to take full credit for having produced something the average man and woman exile in this sunny land had been seeking for in vain for many years. The general ignorance regarding the "common objects" of the town and suburbs—the birds, animals, trees and flowers—is really astonishing. Hundreds of those who spend years in Calcutta see certain birds almost daily, yet have no idea what they are, who cannot connect any "wild-wood notes of duty" they may hear with the feathered songster producing them and who would fail miserably if asked to identify the koel, brainfever bird, dhyal, mango bird, bush babbler, or the little owlet. The charge of apathy cannot justly be laid to the door of ninety per cent. of these good people; the cause of such want of knowledge has erstwhile been the lack of information ready to hand and popularly served up so as to be "understanded of the people." Often one gets enquiries on such matters and if one is in a position to "impart" it is seldom indeed that interest is not immediately aroused and further investigation stimulated. And surely one is the better for such knowledge? The person at home who couldn't immediately recognise the blackbird, thrush, robin, wren, starling or lark would be very properly regarded as wanting in common perception and ripe for some degree of official restraint; why then this ignorance of the birds of a foreign city in which many years of our lives are spent?

The illustrations, by Mr. Goodchild, are excellent and help the text more than a little. These, and a few minor addenda and corrigenda, necessary to bring the book thoroughly up to date, constitute the chief features of the second edition. We strongly recommend this book to all who dwell within and without "The Ditch."

THE OORIAL OF THE PUNJAB.

IT would, I think, be hard to find pleasanter shooting anywhere than that obtainable in the Salt Range of the Punjab. Unfortunately the range has shared the fate of the majority of good sporting districts in India, and has been so shot over as to make the bagging of a big head by no means a certainty. There are several places on the North-Western Frontier where Oorial can be got, but these are only accessible to sportsmen stationed there and not always to them. The Salt Range, however, is within easy distance from any part of the Punjab, thanks to the railway. A 30-inch head is now-a-days very rare in the Salt Range—once seen the beast becomes a local celebrity and is sought for by Europeans and natives alike until sooner or later he falls a victim to a well directed bullet. But good heads are still to be got provided the sportsman goes after them at the right time of year. During the winter months it is quite a toss-up whether one will come across a decent ram. Oorial will be met with in numbers, but the old rams keep much to themselvs, and although in a day's tramp several flocks of Oorial may be seen they will almost invariably be found to consist of small males and ewes. The rutting season is late in September and during October, and at this time a big head will be found with nearly every flock. The old rams, however, are uncommonly wary, even during the rutting season, and take very good care of themselves.

Shooting in the autumn in the Salt Range is not easy work. The red sandstone of which the range consists seems to retain the heat of the sun more than any other kind of soil. Water is extremely scarce, and what there is is brackish, while the gorges and ravines are stifling. Still, during the latter half of September and the beginning of October—intense as the heat is—fair sport should be got, and a 10 days' shoot during this time would probably result in a couple of good heads of 26 inches and over. March, too, is a good month—probably because the sun is very hot in the middle of the day, and the rams are less inclined to wander then during the cold months of the year. An old ram Oorial is a noble looking beast with his long beard and handsome horns, and a big head is a trophy to be proud of.

Oorial shooting in the Salt Range is rather tricky work. The wind in the gorges is always uncertain and the Oorial, like all his kind, has wonderfully keen scent. The low ridges rise so abruptly from the ravines that one is very apt to come suddenly on a beast lying down, when he is off like a flash and does not pull up until he has put half a mile or more between himself and his pursuer. His coat, too, is wonderfully adapted to blend with the colour of the ground he frequents and the stunted bushes on which he feeds are in places very numerous, so that he is by no means an easy animal to spot. The best way is to get on to a high ridge which commands likely looking ground and to move slowly along, sitting down at intervals to spy. Prism binoculars are the best things to use—a telescope does not give sufficient field, and is, moreover ill-suited for searching out the numerous ravines and ridges. One can hardly spy too much. The great thing, after the first general glance, is to make sure of the ground in the immediate neighbourhood, and having searched every nook and cranny likely to hold the sheep, finally to turn the glass on to the distant ground. The inclination is to cover too much ground at once with the spy glass. One is so apt to think that if the sheep are there one must see them, but the fallacy of this can easily be proved by picking out a flock in the distance, say, half a mile away, and then taking one's eyes off them. It will be found that unless the flock is a big one and in a conspicuous spot it will be quite an appreciable time varying from half to two or three minutes before they can be picked up again.

I may relate here as a case in point an incident which happened to myself when after Urin (Ovis vignei) in Astor—to all intents and purposes the same animal so far as its general appearance and habits are concerned as the Oorial of the Punjab. I had been out a week but had seen nothing but ewes and small rams. Eventually when my leave was almost up I got on to some very likely ground and sat down to spy. There was a long ravine running down the opposite hill which was perhaps 900 yards away. I had with me a powerful telescope and a moderate pair of binoculars, and my shikari, a native of Astor, had eyes like a hawk. The hill was perfectly open—not a tree or bush on it, merely being covered with young grass a few inches high.

The ravine intersecting it was composed of light-coloured shale. One would have supposed that a hare on the opposite hill could hardly have escaped observation. I sat there spying alternately with telescope and binoculars for over half an hour until I believed I had searched every blade of grass and every stone on the opposite slope. Not a thing was to be seen. My shikari had got sick of looking and was lolling on his back half asleep. I was on the point of getting up to try elsewhere when suddenly we were startled by a loud "baa" apparently from the ravine. I at once got the binoculars on to the spot and looked hard and carefully and at last made out the form of an Urin standing motionless in the centre of the ravine. Finding the binoculars inadequate I laid them down to take up the telescope and in doing so had to take my eyes for a second off the sheep. Although I now knew to within a few yards the exact spot it must have been a good minute before I was able to pick up the animal again and then to my surprise I counted no less than 8 rams with 4 good heads among them! They were all in the ravine slightly scattered, but a ring of 30 yards diameter would probably have enclosed the lot. As they were in an unstalkable position and it was after 4 P.M. when I saw them we decided to watch them till night-fall, and to go after them next day.

I amused myself by occasionally taking my eyes off them and trying to pick up again quickly, and the difficultly I found in doing so was almost inconceivable. Their brownish-grey coats so exactly matched the shale that they were invisible to the naked eye, and almost so when using binoculars, while even with the telescope unless one had known them to be there one would have passed them by—as indeed I had—time after time, and this not because of the distance, but entirely owing to their colour being so similar to that of the shale as to make a sheep look like a light-coloured stone. Of course had they been on the grass one must have seen them long before, but even so, in the shade of the hill I daresay it would have taken some time to make them out. As it was they fairly gave themselves away on that occasion with the result that next morning I bagged three good heads out of the flock. We found them much in the same place at 6 A. M. as they had occupied when we left them the evening before, and there they stayed till about 9 A. M. when off they went at a gallop luckily to a place I could stalk them in and I got my first shot some two hours later. I have never before or since heard Oorial or any of the wild sheep tribe bleat except when wounded and seized. I imagine on this occasion an old fellow—probably the lord of the flock had butted a recalcitrant subject and the call was one of remonstrance. Had there been ewes with them the call might have been from a ewe to her lamb—or vice versa, but there was not a ewe in the flock—moreover it was not the rutting season.

Once Oorial have been discovered they are not difficult beasts to stalk, and provided the sportsman makes sure of the wind and keeps carefully out of sight a shot can generally be obtained without much difficulty. It is, however, very necessary to mark carefully the bearings of the sheep before the stalk, for the sand-stone ridges of the Salt Range are so alike that it is an easy matter during the stalk—when the sheep are necessarily hidden from time to time—to mistake another ridge for the one they are on, with the probable result of either giving one's wind to them, or exposing oneself to view—or worse still topping the very ridge they are on under the impression that they are on the further side of the next one. Under any of these circumstances they will not stop to make enquiries. Although they are used to seeing natives and do not seem to mind them particularly they discriminate at once between the peaceful villager and the sportsman intent on slaughter, and it does not seem to matter whether the latter is dressed like a native or not—they see through the disguise at once. Probably the sportsman's movements are suspicious and give him away. Fortunately for him

Oorial when suddenly come upon and surprised—this applies chiefly to a flock—single beasts are usually very wary—frequently run for a short distance only, pulling up and huddling together to gaze back over their shoulders at the disturbing element, even after being fired at. Should, however, they get a suspicion of scent, or a glimpse of the sportsman while stalking goodby to all chance of a shot.

Chinkara (Indian Gazelle) are also found in many parts of the Salt Range, but they are very wild there and seldom allow one to get within a quarter of a mile of them. Wild pig are fairly common and an occasional leopard is sometimes seen. I once came almost face to face with one when returning to camp one evening after a day with Oorial, and missed him clean as he bounded off.

A ram sometimes takes a lot of lead to bring him down. I remember once hitting a beast fairly in the chest with a '303 expanding bullet as he turned round to gaze some 200 yards off. At the time I had no notion he was touched. The flock dashed off at a gallop at the shot and my ram with them, and disappeared over the crest line. Following them up I noticed the ram nearly half a mile away taking a line of his own, but still going strong. As it was late in the evening I returned to camp, but an hour later a villager came in to say that he had seen a ram lying down and thought it must be wounded as he had passed close to it and it had not moved. Early next morning I took him with me and he pointed out the place. There was my ram quite dead with the little bullet hole in the centre of the chest. On skinning and cutting him open I found that the bullet had penetrated to the intestines, torn his lungs and smashed him up terribly: but in spite of this he had galloped for the best part of a mile—probably until he fell dead.

As regards what constitutes a shootable head—I should put 25 inches as the limit and below which an Oorial should not be fired at. Twenty-six inches is a fair head in the Salt Range now-a-days, 27 a good head, and anything over this I should class as very good. It is very difficult for the beginner to say the first time whether the ram he is after has a good head or not. The horns always look bigger than they are and the bold sweep is deceptive. A safe rule is that when a ram stands broad side on at a distance of 500 yards or further, if the horn appears to form an almost complete circle it is a good head, probably 26 inches and over. If, however, the horn describes half a circle only or a little over, the head will vary from 16 to 24 inches and should be left sternly alone. Of course there are many heads of 26 inches and over which do not actually describe anything like a complete circle—nevertheless that is the impression conveyed at a distance, and when it is it is safe to go for the animal. On the other hand a small head never looks—even to the ardent imagination of the sportsman—more than a half or three-quarter circle—it suggests unmistakeably the probability of the animal being able to add several more inches of horn with age, and, however much the shooter may hope against hope that he is mistaken and that it may after all turn out to be—well, if not exactly a record—at all events a head he need not be ashamed to show—he is certain to find when the poor beast has bitten the dust that the big head proves to be a worthless 20 inches—fit only to be thrown away. Once a really good head is seen there can be no subsequent mistake as to what is or is not fair game. Disappointment can only occur when a big head in the flesh has never been seen at a distance.

Very high velocities.....most marvellous run of uniformity. In fact, it would be extremely difficult to find an instance where equally well authenticated experiments have shown such satisfactory readings."

It is extremely accurate, and, although heavier than the ordinary ·450 Express taking black powder, the difference in weight is not sufficient to prevent an ordinary European carrying it himself all day in a hot climate. Judge—MAJOR W. H. KEMP.

Clerk of the Scales and Starter.—MR. F. BEATY.

Honorary Secretary—W. H. SITWELL, ESQ., R. F. A.

First Day, Thursday, 9th June 1904.

THERE was some excellent racing witnessed last Thursday at the New Race Course. The entries were exceptionally good and in spite of much scratching the fields which turned out were also good and really "classy." Though the sky was cloudy the rain fortunately held off; the attendance too was better than on the previous occasion. In fact an improvement was noticeable all round. The far end of the course has been raised about 18 inches and this did away with the continual "pecking" so much remarked upon last month. The arrangements too were in every way better. The energy and ability of the Honorary Secretary have been the subject of praise on every side. The judging was done for the most part by Captains Ridgway and Walters Major Kemp's services not being available. Details :—

Second Day, Saturday, 11th June 1904.

The second day's racing proved better if anything than that on Thursday. There were some excellent finishes. The first and fifth races being especially exciting. The only mishap occurred in the Polo Handicap when Captain Holden was thrown; fortunately he escaped with a severe shaking, his excellent win in the Arab Handicap was all the more popular on this account, Lady Grace again showed bad temper in the last race and after giving no end of trouble had to be taken off the course.

All concerned with the meeting are to be congratulated on the excellent sport they provided us with and still more on their really good management. Details :—

CRITERION HANDICAP.—Rs 200 to the winner, Rs 50 to the second, and Rs. 25 to the third. A handicap for maiden Arabs and C.-B.'s 14-2 and under and other maiden ponies 14-1 and under. 5 furlongs.

BANGALORE RACES.

Third Extra Day.
Saturday, 11th June 1904.

WINDY and unpleasant but dry weather characterised the last of the three extra days' racing which have been organised this season in Bangalore. The attendance was a decided improvement on the other two days, a good many people having come in from the hills, and with the officers of the Essex Regiment "At Home", and the band of the 64th Madras Pioneers playing an excellent selection of music, the afternoon was a social success. Fields were unequal, and the racing likewise, but the afternoon ought to have been a real good one for the bookmakers. Bennett sustained what might have been a nasty fall in the second race, the big but sprawling Sacristan allowing his legs to slip from under him and coming down. But for this accident he would probably have won. Sister in the fourth race would even more probably have been the first to catch the judge's eye had she not been left half-a-dozen lengths or more in a half-mile race. Only a single favourite came home during the afternoon, and the only winners that were really much backed were St. Gris and Freda. Details:—

THE BEDOUIN PLATE.—Rs. 150, of which the second pony will receive Rs. 25. For Arab ponies. Weights—Handicap. ⅜ mile.

Capt A S Toogood's g a g St Gris, 8st ...	Hoyt	1
Major A C Hamilton's g a h Defendant 7st	Melsom	2
Major Smyth's g a h Diamond Rose, 8st 5lbs	Koops	3
Mr Richard's ch a g S'elp Me, 10st 3lbs ...	Capt Randall	0
Mr S W Webster's b a h Syndic, 8st 12lbs	Meah Jan	0

BETTING: 6 to 4 agst. S'elp Me, 2 to 1 St. Gris, 4 to 1 Syndic, 6 to 1 Diamond Rose and 7 to 1 Defendant.

Syndic was quickest away, but was passed at once by S'elp Me and St. Gris, these two making joint running to the five furlongs post, where Defendant, who had been left quite four lengths, raced past on the outside, and led the field into the straight for home by a couple of lengths. This lead he maintained until approaching the distance where S'elp Me was beaten, and St. Gris challenged the leader. Quickly getting the best of the struggle, Captain Toogood's pony forged ahead and won in a canter by a length and a half; a length between second and third. Time—1min. 29⅘secs.

THE CURZON PLATE.—Rs. 150, of which the second horse will receive Rs. 25. For horses. Weights—Handicap. 7 furlongs.

Major Logan-Home's b aus g Pope, 8st 12lbs	Penton	1
The Hon. H Thellusson's b nth am m Madeira, 9st	Hoyt	2
The Hon. A A Apcar's b aus g Sacristan, 8st 2lbs	Bennett	fell

BETTING: 5 to 4 on Sacristan, evens Madeira, and 5 to 2 agst. Pope.

Madeira got the worst of the start and Pope and Sacristan raced together for a couple of furlongs, when the latter got out of hand and near the half-mile post came down, unshipping Bennett who got rather a nasty shaking. Pope led Madeira for the rest of the distane, and though the latter ran pluckily under the whip she could never approach Major Logan-Home's horse, the latter winning comfortably by three lengths. Time—1min. 36secs.

THE SCURRY.—Rs. 150, of which the second pony will receive Rs. 25. For ponies. Weights—Handicap. 3 furlongs.

Mr R L Kindersley's br e m Freda, 9st 12lbs	Hoyt	1
Major R Hoare's b aus m Cossack, 7st 5lbs ...	Melsom	2
Major Smyth's b e g Laurier Rose, 9st 2lbs ...	F Koops	3

BETTING: 7 to 4 on Freda, 7 to 4 agst. Cossack, 8 to 1 Laurier Rose and 10 to 1 Referee.

The last named was badly left and never in the race. Of the other three, Cossack on the rails made strong running until a furlong from home when Laurier Rose was beaten and Freda on the outside challenged vigorously. She won with not a great deal to spare by half a length; two lengths between second and third. Time—40secs.

THE USEFUL PLATE.—Rs. 150, of which the second horse will receive Rs. 25. For horses which have never at any time been bought for more than Rs.1,100. Weights—Handicap. ½ mile.

Major A C Hamilton's b aus g Scissorman, 8st 2lbs	Melsom	1
The Hon A A Apcar's br aus m Sister 9st 8lbs	Penton	Dead heat

Mr A C Tate's g aus g Wadhurst, 8st 11lbs	Hoyt	0
Capt E J R Peel's b aus g The Gaffer, 9st 11b	Lansdowne	0

BETTING: 2 to 1 on Sister, 4 to 1 against Kingfisher, 5 to 1 The Gaffer and 6 to 1 each Scissorman and Wadhurst.

The favourite gave a great deal of trouble at the start, and was ultimately left half a dozen lengths behind everything. The others raced in a cluster with Scissorman at the head of affairs until half the distance had been traversed, when Sister having caught her horses took third place. Kingfisher and the mare both made a fair bid for victory, but Major Hamilton's almost unbacked horse won by a length, the other two dead heating for second place. Time—53⅕secs.

THE ARAB CONSOLATION.—Rs. 150, of which the second pony will receive Rs. 25. For Arab ponies which have run and not won at the meetings.

Mr L H Queripel's g a h Quince, 8st 7lbs...	Krishna	0
Mr Mirza M Ismail's g a h Khusrow, 7st 4lbs	Jooloo	0
Mr Jacob Sait's g a h Jacob, 6st 10lbs ...	Melsom	0

BETTING: Evens Bisthan, 3 to 1 agst Matussan, 4 to 1 each Baronet, Jack Horner and Bayleaf, 6 to 1 each Jacob and Quince and 8 to 1 Khusrow.
