LONDON, Friday, 8th July 1904.

LAST summer manufacturers of motor cycles experienced difficulty in keeping pace with the orders that kept pouring in, and not a few had to reduce further instructions owing to their inability to execute them in anything like reasonable time Naturally, during the winter that followed such a successful season many houses made a large stock in anticipation of a similar demand this year, but to the surprise and not to mention loss of the trade, the demand never came. Motor cycles have been sold but in nothing like the same quantities as last year, and now the trade is wondering why this sudden change, and in some instances are only building motor bicycles against order devoting their attention more to the sociable forecarriage or quad. Personally we believe the motor bicycle will never be popular in its present form and if a brisk trade is to be raised some radical changes will have to be made.

Looking at a motor bicycle one is satisfied with its appearance, lifting it, one is disgusted, more than that horrified at its colossal weight. Here is the stumbling block. From whence is the army of motor cyclists to be recruited? Why, from the members of the push bike brigade who have been in the habit of riding machines scaling a matter of twenty-four pounds. One can imagine the impression lifting a hundred pounds motor bicycle would have on a cyclist used to his feather-weight. Is it likely he would be prevailed upon to become a purchaser of such a heavy-weight. Nor is it necessary that a motor cycle should be built so ponderous as there are many ways in which weight could be saved, principally in the engine. Engines now-a-days weight anything up to 60lbs.; reduce this by half for a 2 horse-power engine, cut down the weight of the accumulators, coils and tanks by like proportion—all possible reduction—and the result will be a motor cycle on rational lines Of course some people will say that a 2 horse-power engine would not be powerful enough to carry a rider up very steep hills. This we will grant but very steep hills are not numerous in this country and it would be a pity to fit a more powerful engine solely to mount a hill which might only be encountered once or twice in a year.

Last week I referred in this column to the grand ride achieved by G. P. Mills on a motor bicycle when he made a second journey from Land's End to John o' Groats, and now I have to report an equally meritorious performance over the same course by Dr. F. M. Wesley on an ordinary push bike. Dr. Wesley is a member of the North Road C. C. a club composed of some of the finest road riders of the day, whose annual twelve and twenty four hours' races on the road some fifteen years ago were two of the most exciting fixtures of the year. He is thirty-four years of age and an enthusiastic cyclist invariably taking long rides that many riders would not equal in a week. But still, his performance over the Land's End to John o' Groats' course is sufficient in itself to show what stamp of rider he is. Mounted on a full roadster machine fitted with two rim brakes-mudguards, gearcase, three speed gear, and free wheel, Dr. Wesley covered the 886 miles unpaced, in four days 7 hours 25 minutes beating the previous best for the distance standing to the credit of J. O. Mather, by no less than 21 hours 47 minutes. For the first 415 miles Dr. Wesley did not leave his saddle having ridden for thirty-eight hours without sleep.

The fourth race for the second Carwardine Cup was held at the Crystal Palace track last Saturday and was watched by a fair assembly of spectators who came to see the struggle between the two long distance cracks G. A. Olley who hold two shares in the Cup, and Leon Meredith who held but one. The conditions of the race stipulate that a rider must win three times before the Cup is handed over to him as his own property. So it will be seen that Olley had only to win last Saturday to win the cup outright. But such was not to be his luck. Meredith was riding exceptionally well and from the start established a lead which he held to the end of the hundred miles which he completed in the record time of 3 hours 37 minutes 46½ seconds. Olley retired soon after the fiftieth mile hopelessly beaten, partly because he was not in the best of condition, party because he experienced bad luck with his machine, and party because he cannot ride a losing race. I was speaking with one of the riders who assisted Olley in pacing and he told me that Olley lost the race because he had no heart; that is, when a rival competitor passes him he goes all to pieces, possesses no style and not the remotest chance of winning owing to the want of pluck and go.

The Motor Cycling Club held its third important event of the season last Saturday when the 100 miles reliability test for Motor Cycles for two passengers, for the special trophy presented by Mr. S. F. Edge, was decided over a twenty-five miles course starting from Godstone Village in Surrey. The combined weights of driver and passenger were not to be less than eighteen stones and the weight of the machine loaded with petrol lubricating oil, etc, sufficient for the whole journey of 100 miles, was not to be more than 4 cwt. At the finish of the first fifty miles the drivers were permitted to refil the petrol and oil tanks from supplies carried on their machines. The machines entered consisted of various types of forecarriages, side-cars, trailers, quads, and tandems to the number of seventeen and in striking contrast to last year when nearly all the competitors came through the first round only five completed the fifty miles. In the second run over the last fifty-four drivers came through and in order to decide the winner a further test was held on somewhat novel lines. An out and home course of about half a mile each way was marked out and at every 200 yards marshals were stationed. At each of these points and at the turn the four competitors had to come to a dead stop re-start their engine, and proceed to the next stop. The ultimate winner turned up in J van Hooydonk on a Phœnix Trimo to whom was awarded the twenty guinea trophy.

Limping and leaning on his cycle, a man entered the workshop of a cycle repairer, and to him unfolded a tale of how he had met with an accident and so badly injured his ankle as to prevent his ever riding again; would the cycle agent give him 36 for the machine? No! the agent would not, and so with difficulty the lame cyclist left the shop wheeling his machine with him. He had paid little attention to a customer who was in the shop when he offered the machine for sale, nor did he observe him leave and follow him down the street. Turning a corner had a miraculous effect on the cyclist for his lameness seemed suddenly to have left him and he was on the point of mounting the cycle to ride off when the customer put his hand on his shoulder and explained that he was an officer in plain clothes and that he arrested him for having a stolen cycle in his possession. It turned out afterwards that the man was an old offender having served six months imprisonment for a similar offence.

One's mind is carried back many a year when hearing the information that the old tricycle has been seen out again, and what's more moving to the tune of record. Age is added to the announcement by the time-keeper being no other than Mr. F. T. Bidlake, who in his day was the finest rider of the three-wheeler ever seen. The record to be broken last week was the 100 miles unpaced road record, and it was accomplished by Mr. R. Seymour Cobley, of the North Road C. C., in 5 hours 48 minutes 25 seconds. Mr. Seymour Cobley selected an unusual time for his record starting at 7 o'clock in the evening and consequently riding for more than half the distance in the dark. In this way he secured deserted roads and avoided the heat of the day.

CRICKET CHAT.

INDIAN cricketers who knew him in the "nineties" will be glad to see E. H. D. Sewell's name so high up in the first-class batting averages. The old Madras cricketer has at last fulfilled the promise of his Indian form and can, up to 30th June, point to an average of 35·78 for 19 completed innings. He has made three centuries and has on three other occasions scored between fifty and a hundred. It will probably surprise not a few Indian lovers of the game to learn that on June 30th K. S. Ranjitsinhji headed the first-class batting averages topping C. B. Fry's average of 82 44 by nearly a point, the Indian cricketer's average working out at 83·30.

A number of prominent Anglo-Indian cricketers were in evidence in home club cricket the week the mail of 30th June left. I have already alluded in last week's "Chat" to the share that T. B. Nicholson bore in the match between the South Africans and London County, but find that I made a mistake in giving his score for the first innings. The old Madras player did even better than I thought, scoring 68 out of a total of 168 and with the exception of L. Walker being the only batsman on the side who could make anything of the bowling of Kotze. In a match for the West India Regiment against Spencer, on 15th June the same player scored 52. Captain R. E. E. Krickenbeck, a well-known Bombay Presidency player, playing for Surbiton versus Upper Tooting scored 17 and took two wickets. J. D. Guise, the Calcutta cricketer, playing for Incogniti versus Northaw Place scored 24 and captured four wickets for 38 runs. For the same club against the Gentlemen of Herts he only made two and took two of the four Gentlemen of Herts' wickets that fell but was very expensive. He did better in a later match for Oatlands Park versus Upper Tooting making 44 (top score) and taking two wickets. Captain P. Whetham, who will be remembered in connection with Northern India cricket a few seasons ago playing for Shorncliffe Garrison versus Incogniti scored 32 and 21.

Cricket at Lahore in July can scarcely be pleasant but such is the enthusiasm of Lahore and Mian Mir cricketers that a game was arranged between the two stations for two evenings last week which after an exciting finish ended in a victory for Mian Mir by the narrow margin of four runs. The defeat of the Lahore team was brought about by one of their own players F. H Humphreys, the old Satopian and Oxford University cricketer to wit who for some reason although stationed at Lahore played for Mian Mir. Humphreys has a big reputation as a bowler in Northern India cricket and on this occasion certainly played up to it capturing seven Lahore wickets for 24 runs, a capital performance under such disadvantageous climatic conditions. He also did very well with the bat, scoring 80, the second highest score on the side. D. Russell, another cricketer who occasionally assisted Lahore last cold weather (made 31 top score) for Mian Mir, while A. G. Hutchinson, A. Crocker, F. Heron, and F. Raikes all contributed double figure scores. Captain Frizelle met with phenomenal success with the ball c-pturing five wickets in three overs for 9 runs. The Lahore team missed the services of several of their best men, notably S. M. Robinson, and L. C. Glascock, and but for two good displays by V. H. Wilson the old Radician and T. C. Fisher who scored 39 and 22 respectively, would have fared very badly. It is doubtful if the experiment of playing cricket in the hot weather at Lahore will be repeated.

Hardly anything has been heard this season of the doings of Mhow cricketers where there are at least half a dozen players quite above the average, but I see from the scores of a match played between the Gymkhana and the 10th Hussars that several of the best players in the station are in good form. The 10th Hussars can place a very strong team in the field including Major Hon. T. W. Brand and Captain Hon. G. W. S. Cadogan who both played for Eton, H P. Chaplin who was one of the best bats in the Sandhurst XI. a couple of years ago, Captain Hon. Anderson Pelham who played for the Bombay Presidency against the Authentics, and A. G. Davies-Cooke. Three of these players, Brand, Cadogan, and Chaplin, are candidates for places in this year's Presidency team and all three are fully deserving of the honour of being selected. Chaplin, in the match under notice, played a fine innings of 53 (retired) and captured four wickets. Brand did not get going properly with the bat but bowled well capturing four wickets for seven runs apiece. Cadogan, like Brand, only scored a few runs but is one of the best bats in Mhow. Captain H. K. Colston bowled extremely well for the Gymkhana capturing seven wickets. Besides Chaplin for the Hussars Davies-Cooke (31), Private Bart (24 not out), and Sergeant Mitchell (26), batted well, while of the Gymkhana batsmen I notice that Captain E. Sandlez, an old Presidency player, made 25, Captain Colston 25, Private Troupe 21, and H. G. Manson 15. I hope the Bombay Selection Committee will keep their eyes on these Mhow players.

Perhaps one of the most pleasant features of the Poona season is the success that has attended A. D. Wilkins' efforts with the bat up to date. The old Bedfordshire county cricketer is a veteran in the strict sense of the term eighteen years having passed since he made his great score of 218 for North versus South of the Presidency and over 25 years since he made his debut in Indian cricket. This season he has been to the wickets five times up to date and has taken two centuries his scores in the other three innings being insignificant. His aggregate of 234, however, gives him an average of 46 4, and his latest performance against the Telegu C C. when he scored 101 and retired entitles him to a Place among the first three batsman in Poona. The Telegu C. C. (local Hindus), who usually give the Poona Gymkhana a good game, were quite outplayed on this occasion and their bowlers came in for handsome punishment from Greig (besides Wilkins) who scored 84 in his best style. The Hindus lost seven wickets for 94 runs and time alone saved them from a severe defeat. The Gymkhana totaled 243 for three wickets (only) two wickets actually fell Wilkins retiring). Greig I am glad to see, can still bowl more than a bit and took three wickets for 24 runs.

The Karachi Gymkhana, fresh from their 16 runs' victory over the local Parsees, won their next game against the Sind Volunteers also by a narrow margin, in fact 10 runs.

A recent match between the British Service and the Indian Army at Bellary resulted in a win for the former by 69 runs. de Hoghton (59), Hove (42) and Watney (36), all batted well for the victors and Cowan (41) for the Indian Army.

Several very interesting games have been played at Rajkot this season where there are more European cricketers than are usually to be found in this small station. C. A. Kincaid is perhaps the best batsman, and his claims which should come up for consideration when the Presidency team is being selected. He has scored well in nearly every match he has played this season and has a very attractive style. Bombay cricketers may remember that he scored a century for Kathiawar against the Gymkhana in 1901. On 16th July Rajkot Gymkhana had the best of a drawn game with the Sanrastra High School scoring 132 for seven wickets against their opponents 149. Bad wicketing lost the Gymkhana the match extras amounting to no less than 39. The best innings of the match was Captain Savile's 45, while the second highest as well as second best was D. B. Redkar's 36 for the School. Captain Bennett who played all last season and the season before for Broach bowled better than he has done for some time taking six wickets for 31 runs.

I. F. A. CHALLENGE SHIELD.

HARE SPORTING vs. CALCUTTA.—These teams met on the Calcutta ground, the homesters winning by two goals to nil. In spite of their win the Calcutta forwards gave a poor display, their shooting not being up to the usual standard. The scoring was done in the first half, Cooper and V. Sherman finding the net. In the second moiety the home team did all the attacking but were unable to score. Teams :—

CALCUTTA.—Dod's, goal; Gahan and Wickham, backs; Maunder, Crawford, and Ansell, half-backs; H. Sherman, MacDonald, V. Cooper, V. Sherman, and Cudlip, forwards.

HARE SPORTING :—Karmokar, goal; S. Sarbadhicary and J. Sarbadhicary, backs; Bose, Kauri, and Moni, half-backs; Mookerjee, Dey, S. Mookerjee, Hazra, and Bhattacherjee, forwards.

Referee.—Mr. E. E. Rope.

RANGERS vs. Y.M.C.A.—This was played on the Rangers' ground on the 20th instant, and the home team having the best of matters won by four goals to nil. They put on one goal in the opening half and three after the interval—O'Laughlin (2), Pollock and Mulholland being responsible. Teams :—

RANGERS.—Behrend, goal; Margrett and Lees, backs; Mulholland, Affleck and Russell, half-backs; Maclay, Pollock, Hill, Johnstone and Gault, forwards.

Y.M.C.A.—Curtis, goal; Glover and Collingwood, backs; Young, Pooler and Trusler, half backs; Gordon, Watts, Schaumberg, Vanspal and Wilson, forwards.

Referee.—Sergeant Morrell.

DALHOUSIE vs. HORNETS.—The second meeting of these teams last Saturday, produced an exciting game, the Trades' Club winning by two goals to one. The Hornets were the first to attack and had the best of matters for a time. Then the Dals went away with the ball and forced a corner, which they failed to turn to account. The Hornets next obtained a corner, it was not converted but they continued to press and before half-time Rosser put through. The Dalhousie men showed greatly improved form in the second half and Bonar was not long in equalising. The play then became very interesting but in spite of great efforts by both sides the score was one all when the whistle was blown. Russell was ordered off just before time for foul play. Extra time was played and the Dals had the best of it, and Watts finding the net gave them the victory. Teams :—

DALHOUSIE.—Street, goal; Templeton and Stimson, backs; Phelps, Butler and Wallace, half-backs; Holly, Stewart, Watts, Bonar, and Prike, forwards.

HORNETS.—Gomes, goal; Yakchee and Anderson backs; Hollow, Simmons and A. Rosser, half-backs; Tancred, Apear, L. Rosser, Cooper, and Russell, forwards.

Referee.—Mr. J. Grieg.

SECOND ROUND.

CALCUTTA vs. RANGERS.—Played last Saturday on the Rangers' ground before a large crowd, the visitors avenging their defeat in the League match. The opening exchanges were even, then Calcutta got going and rushing down found the net. Following on this the visitors continued to press for a spell. Then led by Hill the Rangers attacked and Dods was called upon to save which he did in good style. On resuming Calcutta kept the ball in the homesters' territory and the Rangers' backdivision were kept busy. They cleared, however, and the forwards got away. Pollock sending in a hot shot, which Dods fisted out. Gahan transferred to his forward line and Sherman getting possession, put in a brilliant run culminating in another goal. The remaining play was up and down but the Rangers were unable to score and Calcutta thus won by two goals to nil. Teams :—

CALCUTTA.—Dods, goal; Wickham and Gahan, backs; Maunder, Crawford, and Ansell, half-backs; H. Sherman, MacDonald, V. Cooper, V. Sherman, and Cudlip, forwards.

RANGERS.—Behrend, goal; Margrett and Lees, backs; Affleck, Mulholland and Cuthbert, half-backs; Pollock, McCready, Hill, Maclay and Vears, forwards.

Referee.—Mr. E. E. Rope.

KING'S OWN vs. CHINSURAH.—This match was played on the 23rd instant and needs no description, the military team running rings round their opponents, scoring at will. They put on twelve goals to love, Ennis (5), Ashworth (3), Whittingham (2), Standish and Quin being responsible for the goals.

DALHOUSIE vs. ROYAL IRISH RIFLES.—A huge gathering witnessed the above match on the Dalhousie ground on the 25th instant. The Rifles went away at the start and gave a good exhibition of passing but were slow in front of goal. They had the best of the game during most of the initial stages, then the Dals had a spell, but were forced back again and had to concede four corners in succession—nothing came of them, however, and the teams crossed over with a blank sheet. In the second moiety Dalhousie worked hard and after some very even play began to keep the Irish men to their twenty-five. But neither side were able to score and time arrived with the game a pointless draw. The teams took the field again for extra play and shortly after resuming Watts put through for Dalhousie. The Rifles made great efforts but were unable to score, the Trades' Club thus winning by a goal to nil. Teams :—

DALHOUSIE.—Street, goal; Stimson and Templeton, backs; Dalling, Wallace and Phelps, half-backs; Holly, Stewart, Watts, Bonar, and Prike, forwards.

ROYAL IRISH RIFLES.—Kansley, goal; Hannah and Hagerty, backs; Creig, Morris, and Wallace, half-backs; Wilson, Crea, Lewis, Smith, and Ross, forwards.

Referee.—Mr. Cudlip, C.F.C.

CALEDONIANS vs. SOVA BAZAR.—The Caledonians drew with Sova Bazar on Saturday on the ground of the latter. The visitor's forwards missed several good opportunities while the goalkeeper had nothing to do. There was not much scientific play, but both teams kept the ball going at a good pace till time was called with no goals scored. With apologies to the I. F. Association the Caledonians confess to another pointless drawn game with the old native club on Monday. The football was of a very low standard, both sides failing to realize what is expected, in the premier Association. For the Caledonians and the Association Park's failure to score from a penalty kick was unfortunate. Tierny and Harrington played best for the European team while Mitter and Roy showed up very well for Sova Bazar.

The third encounter between the above teams brought the second round of the competition to an end. A well-contested game on the Rangers' ground resulted in a pointless draw. Extra time was played, however, during which Nicols scored for the Caledonians who thus won by a goal to nil.

Teams :—

CALEDONIANS.—Nicols, goal; Kelly and Wade, backs; Dewsbury, Park, and Harrington, half-backs; Ten Brücke, Tierny, Chandler, Williams, Sculthorpe, forwards.

SOVA BAZAR.—G. Mukerjee, goal; K. Mukerjee and Mitter, backs; Laha Sen Gupta, and L. Roy half-backs; Gupta, Roy, Bagchi, Saidhu, and Bhattacharjee, forwards.

Referee.—Corporal Stokes, K.O.R.

FOOTBALL NOTES.

ALL but one of the matches in the first round of the Shield Tournament went off very tamely. The Rangers walked round the Y.M.C.A. and the King's Own had no difficulty in disposing of Howrah. Calcutta, too, beat Hare Sporting as anticipated, though the latter were by no means overwhelmed. They put up a very good fight and proved themselves to be quite in the first flight of native football teams. From the score, two to love in favour of Calcutta, it will be deduced that the Calcutta men did not display any improvement in their shooting.

The most interesting match was that between Dalhousie and the Hornets, the issue of which was in doubt till the whistle went for time. The Hornets had out a powerful line of forwards and time after time it seemed certain they would score, but the home backs and Street managed to somehow save the situation. Both sides played all they knew and excitement among the spectators was intense. A goal was scored by each side, both rather soft ones, and the game eventually ended in a draw, the referee refusing to play extra time as the light was failing.

I understand that the Dalhousie F. C. protested against the playing by the Hornets in this match of two or three men, who were said to have only arrived in Calcutta that morning, and could not therefore have complied with the I.F.A. rule that they should have actually played in a match for that club in the current season, prior to the commencement of the Shield Competition. The Hornets, I understand, proved that the men had arrived the day before and had played in a practice match that evening, and the prostest therefore fell through. But there is no doubt that apart from the I.F.A. rules having been complied with to the letter, the men protested against were not what anyone who has the interests of amateur football at heart would call recognized playing members of the club. The opinion of the majority of local sportsmen with regard to players, who are imported by clubs to play for the Shield only, is that such are in no way bonâ-fide and recognized playing members of the club concerned, in the way that bonâ fide is meant to be translated. To take an imaginary (?) case. A man comes down from a station away in the mofussil, plays in perhaps three matches for a club in which he has absolutely no real interest, and then returns to the wilds and most probably does not see or hear anything of the club for another year. He may have paid his subscription right through and therefore be a member but is he a recognized playing member? I think not. This tendency of clubs to import outside help for the Shield matches only is one which, in whatever way it is looked at, can only lead to the deterioration of local football, even as it has already perverted the amateur spirit of the contest and provoked more enmity and bitter feeling among clubs and players than any amount of rough play or indifferent refereeing, and the sooner the I.F.A. takes steps to more fully define the meaning of 'recognized playing member" the better.

Now I am on "the stump" there is another matter which has caused a deal of ill-feeling this season and that is the playing of soldiers by nominally purely civilian clubs. No one has any grievance against such soldiers; they as a rule play a good game and do all they can for their side, but they are only imported that some "pot" or other may be secured with their assistance, and not in any way as bonâ fide members of the club. When a football match is on they are there and do their share but are not otherwise treated as members. They do not enter into the social life of the club nor care how it is conducted, etc., and though they are recognized playing members and no ruling can possibly be made to debar them from playing it would be more in keeping with the tenets of a civilian club if such outside help were not obtained. No one should blame "T. A." He wants a game and why should he not get one if he can. It is the clubs that are to blame if anyone; but after all it is not a question of blame at all, it's the sporting instinct which if not present cannot be instilled. These remarks are not meant to apply to any club in particular but to the leaning in general towards "outside help" which is going far towards ruining amateur football in Calcutta. As matters are trending now there is only one thing wanting to bring organised professionalism into Calcutta and that is an enclosed ground and a regular "gate," and much as one would like a pucca enclosed neutral ground for important matches, for this one reason, it is not advisable that such a ground should be established here.

To return to the progress of this year's Shield Tournament. Dalhousie and the Hornets met again on Saturday and the game was every bit as exciting as at their first meeting. The Hornets had the better of the first half and scored one goal but after the interval Dalhousie asserted themselves and equalised through Bonar. Time arrived with the score still one all but the referee decided to play an extra quarter and, amid great enthusiasm, Dalhousie put on another goal and thus won the match. The crowd was enormous and the excitement intense throughout and the win a most popular one.

On the Rangers' ground Calcutta defeated the homesters by two goals to love and well deserved their victory. The chances seemed all in favour of the Rangers, especially after the poor display of Calcutta against the Hare Sporting Club, but the visitors were never in better form and played a winning game throughout. There were several exciting moments; once Dodds was nearly charged through the goal when holding the ball, but the referee held that the ball was not over the line, and on another occasion a splendid shot of the elder Sherman's hit the post and the ball bounced on to the line but Behrend cleared in great style. Both goalkeepers were in excellent form throughout and saved marvellously but the honours of the evening were with the forwards and halves. For Calcutta H. Sherman was particularly conspicuous and the passing between him, Macdonald and Cooper was first class. Ansell, Maunder, and Crawford played their usual sound game and came in for a large share of the applause. For the Rangers McCready, Vears, and MacClay were in good form in the forward line and Mullholand, Lees and Margrett in the back division, and it was due to the excellent defence of the latter that Calcutta did not win by a larger margin.

The remaining matches on Saturday were anything but interesting. The King's Own walked over Chinsurah to the extent of 12 goals to nil, and a very tame game between the Caledonian A. C. and Sova Bazar resulted in a draw, neither side being able to score. In the Trades' Cup Seebpur managed at last to beat the Nationals by one goal to love and the Medicals disposed of Mohun Bagan with a similar score. Gaurangdi beat Calcutta United by two goals to nil and thus qualified for the final.

On Monday, Dalhousie met the Royal Irish Rifles and after a great game, came out winners by one goal to nil. The Irish had much the better of the first half but although they played a dashing game the home defence was more than they could tackle and no score resulted. In the second half the exchanges were slightly in favour of Dalhousie but they could not get the ball through the goal and "time" arrived with the score sheet blank. The referee decided there was sufficient light for an extra quarter's play and after about six minutes play Dalhousie scored, Watts netting the ball amidst great applause. After this the Irish fell off and Dalhousie ran out winners of one of the hardest fought games of the season. The Irish had several opportunities of scoring but were slow to shoot. They played an excellent game throughout but their forwards were too tricky with the ball and time and again indulged in short passing and clever displays of dribbling in front of goal when they should have shot and these tactics practically lost them the game. Dalhousie displayed the best form of the season and on the evening's play would have beaten any team in Calcutta.

I understand that the Nationals have put in a protest re their match against Seebpur on the grounds that the field of play was not the correct size and Seebpur should therefore not have selected it to play on. Should this protest be sustained by the I. F. A. Council the two teams will have to meet again and the competition for the Trades' Cup will be still further extended. With the number of drawn games there been in this competition, and the absurd disputes and protests the Secretary has had to deal with it is surprising anyone can be found to run it as an Honorary Secretary. It is a pity some teams cannot take a defeat in a sporting manner.

THE GOLD MEDAL.—This competition, which consisted of two rounds of twelve holes on the Guindy links and two rounds of nine holes on the Island links, was played on the 2nd, 9th, and 16th instant. Heavy rain on the 16th instant made putting on the Island links very fluky and under the circumstances Mr. J. M. Brown's score of 80 for the 18 holes was a fine performance and enabled him to win the Medal for the third time. Scores :—

CLEEK MATCH.

The usual nine holes Cleek Competition which was concluded on Saturday last brought this Club's overlong annual season to a definite end. The heavy rain had played havoc with the course, and with so many hoof marks about accurate Cleek play was a sheer impossibility. Mr. Beaumont's winning score of 46 nett may therefore be regarded as distinctly creditable, but another year it would certainly be better to have the Cleek Competition before the close of the hot weather. The best cards sent in were as follows :—

THE TOLLYGUNGE CLUB.

Here, too, the season closed with a Cleek Competition, in this instance over the fourteen holes which constitute the present club course. In spite of its being so late in the year the ground was in very good order, and Major Drury who won with 73 less 8=65 and Mr. N. A. Macleod put in very creditable rounds. GOLF IN THE BRITISH ISLES.

23rd June 1904.

THE contest for the Amateur Championship of Yorkshire commenced on Monday, 13th June. On the links of the Sheffield and District Club on Lindrick Common the meeting to decide the champion of both sexes and also of teams extends annually over a whole week. The gathering began with the Ladies' Championship which is decided partly by medal and partly by match play. The four ladies, having the requisite qualification for play in Yorkshire (birth in the county or two years' residence) who return the lowest gross scores in a Stroke Competition play each other in a tournament afterwards; the four who qualified this year were: Miss Bertha Thompson (Scarborough), 89. Miss K. G. Moeller (Ilkley), 93. Miss Evelyn Steele (holder Sheffield), 94, and Miss J. C. Robson (Cleveland), 94. In the semi-final Miss Steele beat Miss Robson by 6 up and 4, and Miss Thompson defeated Miss Moeller by 3 up and 2. The match between Miss Thompson and Miss Steele was very close throughout, the holder had the best of the luck and eventually won by 2 up and 1. Next on the programme were mixed foursomes in which 38 couples took part. The first prize were won by Miss Vickerman and Mr. G. Gosland with 88 – 9½ = 78½ and second place was tied for by 3 couples in 85 net. Next day (Wednesday, 15th) the Men's Team Championship was decided. No less than 22 teams of four players had entered and a keen struggle took place for the Ilkley Bowl with whom goes the title of champion club in the county. Already the Huddersfield Club had possessed this treasure six times out of the ten occasions on which it had been contested. The Competition being a 36-hole one there was great excitement at lunch when it was found that the Bradford Club led by 5 strokes, the holders being second. They were unable, however, to retain their lead and the holders again secured the coveted title by 8 strokes with an aggregate total of 664 as against Bradford's 672. The contest proper for the Individual Championship was played on Thursday, 16th, in delightful though rather wind weather. The surprise of the first round was the defeat of the Light Blue and Bradford player, Mr. Hoffmann, by Mr. Woodland, the Secretary of the Yorkshire Union, by 1 hole.

The finals were played in most beautiful weather on Saturday and resulted as follows:—Mr. Barker (Huddersfield) beat Dr. Morrison (Scarbrough) by 4 holes up and 2 to play in 36 holes. Mr. Barker drove a longer ball than his opponent, but the latter putted extremely well, and gave his antagonist a closer match than was anticipated.

At the Royal Norwich Ladies' Clubs Summer Meeting a somewhat novel system of handicapping in a Bogey Competition was adopted, namely, by "bisques:" we know or used to know those bisques at Tennis, and Croquet players are familiar with them, but it is an innovation at the Royal and ancient game, and one that could only be adopted in Tournament or Bogey play, but in these two games, certainly it seems very feasible and interesting. In the mixed foursome Competition versus Bogey with the aid of 1 bisque Miss Cozens-Hardy and Mr. M. Crick succeeded in defeating their Military foe by 7 up. A long space separated them from the second couples who tied for next place with 2 down, aided by 2 and 4 bisques respectively.

On 11th June an Open Amateur Meeting was held at Enfield n Middlesex when the Bogey Competition was tied for by three players—Mr. A. C. Tumy, H. A. Ford, and C. B. Weir all 4 up. Mr. Tumy's score was 78 equalling Henry Vardon's record for the Green. The Medal Competition prize under handicap went to Mr. F. H. Collin 87 – 12 = 75, whilst Mr. T. Holt (scratch), with 77, carried off the scratch reward. There were 78 entries in this meeting and everything went off without a hitch.

On Tuesday, 14th, the club held Open Doors to lady players. About 60 entered amongst whom were Mrs. George Hunter (Littlestone), Captain of the Middlesex County Club, Miss Sparrow Miss Sant. As seemed most appropriate the county Captain swept the board of all within the radius of a scratch player. With 93 in the Stroke Competition, she carried off the scratch prize, with 43 for best 9 holes, and after lunch with

The successful players under handicap were Mrs. Graves (Woolford) 104 – 9 = 95, Mrs. F. Hume (handicap over 10) 101 – 16 = 85, and best 9 holes under handicap Mrs. Olden 51 – 10 = 41. Meantime the Parliamentary Handicap is still going slowly on, the fifth round was completed, having Mr. Soames Mr. Tennyson, Mr. J. Wilson and Mr. Croal to contest the penultimate heat, when Mr. Soames beat Mr. Thompson by 5 up and 4 to play, and Mr. Wilson won by 4 and 2 against Mr. Croal.

Under the auspices of the Société de Golf de Paris the first competition for the Amateur Championship of France was played at Versailles on 16th, 17th, and 18th June. The meeting was by Tournament and included the Gordon-Bennet Challenge Trophy. In the third round Mr. Overbury, Mr. Follet, Mr. Beeche, and Mr. Forbes won their matches, and of these Mr. Overbury and Mr. Beeche survived the forth round and contested the final when the latter won by 7 holes up and 5 to play and gained the proud destinction of being the first Amateur Champion of la belle France! The International Handicap Competition was won by M. Francois de Bellet with 90—10=80. M. A. de Heeren being second with 91—10=84.

Mr Marshall Hall, K. C. M. P., got together a House of Commons team to oppose the Formby Club at Formby, on Saturday, 18th June. There were only six players a side. The home club proved victorious by winning four matches to 2 in the single and 2 to 0 in the foursomes. The teams were made up as follows :—

The Liverpool Shipping Annual Tournament was concluded over the West Lancashire Club Links at Blundellsands on Saturday, 18th June. The result was a win for Mr. John Esplin who defeated Mr. W. H. Jones in the finals by 5 up and 4 to play. The donors of the prize were Messrs. T. and J. Harrison, shipowners. This annual meeting evokes much interest in the circles involved and some very good play is usually called forth.

It is interesting to all golfers whoever and wherever they be to know that old Tom Morris attained his 84th Birthday on 16th June, in celebration of which he played a round at St Andrew's with Mr. H. S. C. Everard, and, despite the gale which was blowing, he played a wonderfully fine game. The Hanger Hill Club's Open Amateur Tournament, on Saturday, 18th June, attracted some fine golfers. The scratch prize was tied for in 79 by Mr. S. H. Fry, and Mr. A. C. Lincoln, Mr. H. H. Hilton, and Mr. W. Lunnon each returned 83. The best handicap return was by Mr J. W. Cowan 85—8=77. The Bogey Competition produced some fine play by Mr. Livingston (Mid Surrey) who playing from scratch finished 2 holes up.

The final match for the Cup presented by to the Press Gallery of Parliament by Dr. Arnott of the Irish Times was played on Saturday, 18th June, at Tooting and won by Mr. W. Jeans who defeated Mr. Croal in a 36-hole match, with a handicap allowance of 5 strokes in the round by 6 holes up and 4 to play. Mr. Croal, it will be remembered, did remarkably well in the Parliamentary only succumbing to Mr. Wilson in the penultimate heat.

THE BANGALORE HORSE AND DOG SHOW.

BANGALORE, 23*rd July* 1904.

THE Horse and Dog Show in Bangalore this year has been by far the most successful function of the kind which has taken place here of late years. The well wooded grounds of the Residency were most kindly lent for the purpose by Sir James Bourdillon, British Resident in Mysore, and the Resident and his staff were "At Home" to their friends on both days of the Show. The arrangements made by Major W. Dougall, the Honorary Secretary, and Major Smyth, D. S. O., the Honorary Treasurer, were perfect, and everything went without a hitch from start to finish. The pretty grounds in which the tents, jumps show ring, etc., had been arranged looked quite like an English park, the climate with the exception of a few light showers was all that could be wished, and expressions of pleasure were rife on all sides. The show of horses and ponies was also very fine, and in this particular, well-known judges declare it to be superior to anything which has been seen in South India. It has been a great show, but as each competition is commented on in its place, it is unnecessary to say very much about them here. The jumping all round was quite good, although certain brave young officers experienced rather rough passages upon animals which required additional tuition. In the thoroughbred class we got a glimpse of a couple of Mr. Apcar's new importations and right good-looking animals they are—both Mallard and Martinique. The numerous entries are sufficient to show how much good horse flesh there is in Bangalore at present, and the tasks presented to the judges were anything but sinecures. The Carabiniers, hospitable as usual, had a breakfast as well as refreshments on the ground. Details of the competitions :—

CLASS I.—HEAVY-WEIGHT HUNTERS (over 12-1.)

(Judges.—Colonel J. P. Grant and Major Birdwood.)

Major Logan-Home's br aus g Harkaway 1

Also competed : Mr. Boyd's Rupert and Mrs. Sharpe Smith's All Fours.

Captain Randall handled the winner, a well-known horse in the hunter class. He would be bad to beat in first-rate company and won easily here.

CLASS II. LIGHT-WEIGHT HUNTERS (under 12st.)

(Judges.—Mr. R. Kindersley, Major Birdwood, and General Percy Smith.)

Captain F Adams' b w g Gaylad 2

Also competed : Major Logan-Home's Marquise, Mr. T. W. Pragnell's St. Amant, Mr. D. Devaraj Urs' Musketeer, General J. Eccles Nixon's Yeoman, Mrs. Arthur Porter's the Mormon, Mrs. Georges' Comma, Mr. Gwyer's Rufus, Mrs. Sharpe-Smith's All Fours, Colonel H. Armstrong's Yabba, Mrs. Gibbs' Kitty Stoner, Colonel J. P. Grant's Angeline, Mr. A. West's Cracksman, Mr. J. N. Kidd's Paddy, Mr. C. Robertson's Punch, and Major W. Dougall's Quandong.

A very fine class indeed. The judges kept seven in the ring, namely, Gaylad, Yabba, Grand Duke, Quandong, Angeline, Yeoman, and St. Amant, and then called in General Percy Smith as a third judge to assist them in arriving at a decision. The winner is a beautiful chestnut horse with immense depth of girth and grand shoulders. He looks bigger and better when stripped then when he has his saddle on. Gaylad is a picture of a light-weight hunter, is as hard as nails and has won several paper-chases here in a canter. Lance-Corporal Lloyd, 6th Dragoon Guards rode the winner, and Mr. Hawley, 28th Light Cavalry, the second.

CLASS III. PONY HUNTERS (over 11st. 7lbs.)

(Judges.—General Eccles Nixon and Colonel Grant.)

Major Logan-Home's ch aus m Mary Jane ... 1

Also competed : Captain T. S. Francis' Sensation, Major Birdwood's Gaylad (not to be confounded with Captain Adams' horse which won the second prize in the light-weight hunter class), Major W. Dougall's Lancer, Mr. A. Swifte's Cossack, Mr. R. Anketell-Jones' Badger, Major A. G. Pratt's Ahmed, Captain E. J. Peel's Rose, and Mr. Gwyer's The Bee. Captain Randall was on the winner, a nice mare which lately won the first prize in a similar class in Ootacamund.

CLASS IV. PONY HUNTERS. (under 11st. 7lbs.)

(Judges.—General Eccles Nixon and Colonel G. P. Grant.)

Mr. R. Kindersley's b e m Ella 1
Mr S W Webster's b aus m Flight 2

Also competed : Lieutenant-Colonel J. Desaraj Urs' Countess, Mrs. Birdwood's Bantam, Major Smyth's Lawrier Rose, Mr. R. Anketell-Jone's Lady Abbess, Badger, and Tight Rope, Major J. de Lotbiniere's Friar Grey, Captain S. M. Rice's Larna Doove, Mrs. Arthur Porter's the Mormon, Mr. W. Cottrell-Dormer's Chemisette, Mr. W. G. Hawley's blk w g Assegai, Captain E. G. R. Peel's Game, Major A. C. Hamilton's Tom Tucker, Mr. G. Guyer's The Bee and Colonel Stevens' Black Puffin.

The judges remarked that it was a fair class. It is perhaps hardly fair as a rule to comment on the judging of a class, for like that of referee in a game it is at best a thankless office. But surprise was widely expressed that Bantam, Chemisette, and Game—especially the first of his trio were entirely unnoticed.

CLASS V. (a). CHARGERS—CAVALRY AND ARTILLERY.

Captain A T Cole's Bay Waler Mare 1
Mr F C Rasch' ch aus g Rag 2
Mr A Gwyer's b w m Missus 3

Also competed : Major W. Howe's Ninety-one, Captain Hope's Skittles, Mr. A. O. Boyd's Rupert, Major J. E. Johnson's Jackson, Mr. R. Anketell-Jones' Grand Duke, Captain O. L. Francis Charmion, Mr. W. Cotterll Dorner's Swordfish, Mr. P. H. Compton's Black Prince, Mr. Robinson's Star, Mr. Young's Blackcap, and Major M. Dougall's Molly.

The judges remarked that the class on the whole was an excellent one, but that some of the horses appeared to be imperfectly trained. Private Coatin, of the Carabiniers, rode the winner. Mr. Rasch rode his own horse—a picture of what a short-legged powerful charger should be—and Sergeant Studdert for two years the best mounted man-at-arms in Southern India was on the third.

CLASS V. (b) INFANTRY CHARGERS.

A PRIZE, presented by Lieutenant-Colonel G. B. Stevens and Lieutenant-Colonel H. V. Cox.

(Judges.—Major Dougall and Major Birdwood.)

Lieut-Col Stevens' blk aus m Black Puffin ... 1

Also competed : Captain Dredge's Sweetheart, Mr. A. A. Crookshank's Batcha, Major A. G Pratt's Ahmed, Captain Scott Elliott's Smudge and Mr. R. Abboy's Chance Shot.

Fairly easily won by Colonel Stevens' nice little mare. The owner was subsequently heard to remark that he was glad he had not particularised the competition for which the Cup presented by himself and Colonel Cox was to be given.

CLASS XXI. BEST TURNED-OUT MOUNTED MAN.

THE CARABINIERS.

(Judges.—Colonel Georges and Major Johnson.)

Lieut-Col. Edwards, "C" Squadron 1

Both cavalry and artillery made a grand show, and were an object lesson to the enemies of the empire, only unfortunately none were present to see them. The men could not possibly have been better turned out, and it is a matter of common remark from commanding officers down to troopers and drivers, that they are infinitely better horsed here than in England. The driver who was placed third this year has won the competition for two years running and it was the toss up of a half-penny between the three prize-winners on this occasion. So well were all the competitors turned out, that the tiniest details had to be gone into by the judges before the awards could be made.

CLASS VI. HACKS (Horses.)

(Judges.—Major Birdwood and Captain Clarke, A V D.)

Lieut-Col J Desaraj Urs' blk aus m Black Jess ... 1
Col H Armstrong's b aus g Yabba 2
Gen J Eccles Nixon's b w g Yeoman 3

Also competed : Mr. A. O. Boyd's Rupert, Major W. Dougall's Molly, Mrs. Sharpe Smith's All Fours, Mr. D. Devaraj Urs Express, Mr. R. Anketell-Jones' Grand Duke, Captain W. E. Watson's Matilda and Speculation, Mr. Robinson's Star, Mr. Young's Blackcap, Mr. G. N. Kidd's Paddy, Mrs. Arthur Porter's Mona, Captain F. Adams' Gaylad, Mr. Robertson's Punch.

The judges remarked that the class was an excellent one, but that the winner easily stood out as the best.

CLASS VII. HACKS (Ponies).

(Judges.—Colonel H. Armstrong and Major Dougall.)

Mr Swifte's b w m Cossack 2

Also competed : Mr. R. Kindersley's Ella, Mr. A. Gwyer's Maisie, Major Birdwood's Christopher, Major J de Lotbiniere's Friar Grey, Mr A. B. Boyd's Goldflow, Mr. H. Dawson's Pony, Mr. A. A. Crookshank's Sheikh, Lieutenant-Colonel J. Desaraj Urs' Swireller, Mr. R. Anketell-Jones' Lady Abbes's and Badger, Mr. S. W. Webster's Flight, Captain W. E. Watson's Matilda, and Major A. C. Hamilton's Simple Simon (late Astronomer).

This was a very good class indeed and the toughest of tough things between the last four ponies in the ring, all of whom the judges tried personally.

These were Bantam, Christopher, Cossack, and Chemisette, and the award eventually made was received with applause.

CLASS. VIII. LADIES' SADDLE HORSES (over 11-2.)

(Judges.—General Percy Smith and Major Birdwood.)

Lieut.-Col. J. Desaraj Urs bk aus m Black Jess ... 2

Also competed : Mrs. Sharpe-Smith's All Fours, Mr. A. Gwyer's Rufus, Mrs Georges' Comma, Mrs. Arthur Porter's The Marmon, Major Logan Home's Harkaway, General J. Eccles Nixon's Yeoman, Mrs. Gibbs' Kitty Stoner, Major W. Dougall's Molly, Mr. J. N. Kidd's Paddy, and Mr. Robertson's Punch.

Miss Anderson rode the winner, and Mrs. Tubnell the second horse. The judges remarked that the second animal would be very formidable in any company when a little better broken. Her moderate manners lost her the first prize.

CLASS IX. LADIES' HACKS (Ponies.)

(Judges.—Colonel Armstrong and Major Dougall.)

Mr A Swifte's b aus m Cossack 2

Also competed : Captain R. Selby's Elfi, Mrs. Dredge's Sweetheart, Mr. Gwyer's Monie Maisie, Major J. de Lotbiniere's Friar Grey, Miss de Salis' Cricket, Lieutenant-Colonel J. Desaraj Ur's Kitty O'Shea Mrs. Arthur Porter's The Mormon, Mrs. Gibbs' Nora, Mr. E. D. Raymond's Vixen, and Mr. A. B. Boyd's Goldflow.

Miss Schalk rode the winner beautifully, and Miss Hyacinth Irwin was also most successful in her handling of Cossack. The judges remarked that it was a fair class in which the winner was pretty easily the best.

CLASS XVIII. (a). JUMPING COMPETITION (Horses.)

(Judges.—General Percy Smith, General Eccles Nixon, Colonel J. P Grant, Major W. Dougall, Captain E. J. Peel, and Mr. Swifte.)

Mr A O Boyd's bk aus g Rupert 1
Mrs Georges' b w g Corunna 3

Also competed : Mr. Sadler's Rusty, Mr. Queripel's Quick silver, Captain Hope's Skittles, Mr. J. N. Kidd's Paddy, Mrs Sharpe-Smith's All Fours, Mr. Gwyer's Rufus, Captain Moncrieff's Mare, Mr. D. Devaraj Urs' Musketeer, Mr. R. Anketell

Jones' Grand Duke, Major W. Home's Kirbey, Mr. T. W. Pragnell's St. Amant, Captain J. Randall's Goldcrest, Mrs. Robinson's Star, Mr. A. West's Cracksman, Miss Kidd's Buzz, and Major N M. Smyth's David. There were also a few additional post entries.

The course was a fair one, and the competition keen. Mr. A. West, R.A., rode the winner, and Captain Randall steered both the second and third horses, having to give each an extra run before they could be placed. Mr. Kidd's Paddy, last year's winner, put his chance out by refusing the water once.

CLASS XV. CHILDRENS' PONIES.

Miss Phyllis Morris' Barty 1
Master Mahomed Abdul Hamed Khan's Pony Sultan ... 2
Master Jack Whiteley's Greylegs 3
Master Willy Copeland's Pony 4

Most amu-ing. The winner is a pony once well-known in the small Arab racing class in Bangalore. He now takes great care of his little mistress and cantering like an arm chair won the blue rosette.

CLASS XIV. COBS.

(Judges.—Genera : ercy Smith and Major Dougall.)

Colonel H Armstrong's b aus g Yabba 1

Also competed: Major Birdwood's Gaylad, Mr. D. Devaraj Urs' Express, Mr. R. Anketell-Jones' Prudence, Mr. R. Kindersley's Ella, and Mr. Swifte's Cossack.

Some people remarked that there were only two genuine "Cobs" in the class, viz. :—Gaylad and Badger, but the judges awarded the prize to Yabba who certainly stepped out beautifully in Colonel Armstrong's hands. Nevertheless very many good judges seemed to think that the verdict should have gone to Gaylad.

CLASS XIII. (a). POLO PONIES (other than Arabs.)

(Judges.- General Eccles Nixon and Major Birdwood.)

Lieut-Col J Desaraj Urs' br aus g Swiveller 2

Also competed: Mr. Raymond's Vixen, Captain Peel's Game, Major Hamilton's Simple Simon (late Astronomer), and Tom Tucker, Captain Watson's Matilda and Dainty, Mr. Gwyer's The Rabbit, Mattie, and The Bee, Major Smyth's Lawrier Rose, Captain O. L. Francis' Sensation, Mr. R. Anketell-Jones' Lady Abbess and Badger, Mr. Thomson's Venus, and Mr. A. M. Swifte's Cossack.

Both the winner and the second are well-known polo ponies in the South of India, indeed the whole class were handy, and stood the twining and stopping tests applied well.

CLASS XIII (b). POLO PONIES (Arabs.)

Mr R Neave's br a h Mintmaster... 2

Also competed: Major Smyth's Diamond Rose, Mr. Gwyer's The Cat, Lieutenant-Colonel J. Desaraj Urs' Rubric, Captain A. T. Cole's Factor, Mr. W. Cottrell-Dormer's Bonny Lad and Grey Wing, Captain W. E. Watson's Whiteface, Mr. A. A. Crookshank's Sheikh, Mr. A. F. Hartley's Goojah and Bijili, Mr F. C. Rasch's Carabiniere, Mr G. Swifte's Leander, Captain E. J. R. Peel's Mahomet, Major A. C. Hamilton's Jack Horner, and Mr. S. W. Webster's Spur Fowl.

The judges remarked that this was a particularly good class, there being very few coarse ones, and all the ponies being well trained. Mintmaster, Sheikh, Goojah, Bijili, After Dark, Jack Horner, and Spur Fowl were the seven left in for the final test.

CLASS X. THOROUGHBRED HORSES.

Hon Mr A A Apcar's ch aus h Great Scot ... 1

Also competed: Lieutenant-Colonel J. Desaraj Urs' Courara Major Logan-Home's Pope, Miss Anderson's Angeline, Mr. N. R Chowdhury's Wild Raven and Nightingale, and the Hon'ble Mr. A. Apcar's Mallard and Martinique.

Whilst placing Great Scot first, the judges passed many encomiums upon Mallard, one of Mr. Apcar's new horses, and remarked that had he not been only in "boat condition" he might have bothered the well-known winner.

CLASS XI. ARAB PONIES.

Lieutenant-Colonel J Desaraj Urs' g a h Ptarmigan ... 1
Mr Moss King's b a h King Cobweb 2

Also competed: Major Smyth's Diamond Rose, Mr. H. Davson's Pony, Mr. A. A. Crookshank's Sheikh, Mr. T. W. Pragnell's St. Amant, Captain A. T. Cole's Essex General J. Eccles Nixon's Amaranth Mr. S. W. Webster's Syndic, and Major R. M. Bell's Scattercash.

The judges remarked that it was a very close thing between the first and second both of which were peculiarly fine specimens of Arab ponies.

CLASS XII. C.-B. HORSES AND PONIES.

(Judge.—Colonel G. J. Jones.)

Colonel J. P Grant's be b h Prime 1

Also competed: Captain J. Randall's Miss Ascot, Colonel J. P. Grant's Philistine, and Mr. J. Watson's Phil.

CLASS XXI BEST TURNED-OUT SECTION OF NATIVE CAVALRY.

CLASS XVIII. JUMPING (Ponies.)

(Judges.—General Eccles Nixon, Colonel Georges, Colonel J. P. Grant, Major Dougall, and Mr Kindersley.)

Mr S W Webster's b aus m Flight 1
Capt E J Peel's b a p Rose 3

Mr. Webster himself rode the pretty little mare who is dear to Bangalore owing to associations, and her win was most popular. Captain Randall naturally rode Mary Jane, and Captain Peel himself rode the third pony. It may be remarked that the jumping was excellent as a whole, and Mr Wagstaffe's Snowball (a South African pony with the owner up) was especially good besides the three placed ponies.

Also competed: Lieutenant Colonel J. Desaraj Urs' Counters, Major Smyth's Lawrier Rose, Mr. H. N. Abbey's Chance Shot, Mr. Sadler's Mayca, Mr. W. G. Hawley's Assegai, Mr. A. F. Hartley's, Noble, Mr. Wagstaffe's Snowball and Lady Dic.

Captain Randall's Goldcrest, Mr. Anketell Jones' Lady Abbess, and Captain Peel's Game.

An excellent display, but Flight never touched a thing and added to her already great reputation. Moreover she was not carrying a feather-weight. Rose put her chance out for second place at the post and rails.

CLASS XVI. SINGLE HARNESS HORSES.

(Judges.—Colonel Grant and Major Dougall.)

Mr R Anketell-Jones' b aus m Morn 1

Also competed: Mr. A. Sundara Moodelliar's horse and Mr. G. Watson's ch sb g Phil.

CLASS XVII. HARNESS PONIES.

Mr F C Carr's b aus g Robin 2

Also competed: Mr. Gwyer's Mooie Maisie, Colonel Stevens' Black Puffin, Mr. H. Davson's pony, Mr. R. Anketell-Jones' Badger, Mr. A. E. Staley's Prudence, Captain W. E. Watson's Golden Sunshine, Mrs. Dredge's Sweetheart, Mr. J. N. Kidd's Nellie, Mr. H. F. Wilkieson's pony and Mrs. J. Watson's Dolly. A good class. Golden Sunshine besides the prize-winners was an absolute picture and Mr. Wilkieson's turn-out was also first-rate.

CLASS XIX. BEST TURN-OUT DRIVEN BY A LADY.

Mr Gwyer's ch e m Mooie Maisie, driven by Mr Schalch) 1
Mrs Birdwood's turn-out, driven by Mrs Birdwood ... 2

Also competed: Mrs. Scott-Elliott's turn-out, Mrs. Anketell-Jones' turn-out, Mrs. Gibbs' Nora, Captain W. E. Watson's turn-out, and Mr. J. N. Kidd's Nellie.

The fair drivers of both the prize-winners handled the ribbons beautifully and were loudly applauded.

CLASS XX. TEAMS.

Won by Major Birdwood's team of bays. Also entered the 28th Light Cavalry team and the R. A. team. Sir James Bourdillon in the course of a very happy and humourous speech then said that before he asked Mrs. Nixon to present the prizes for the Bangalore Horse and Dog Show of 1904 he wished to say a few words. He thought that they must, all be experiencing very mixed feelings. Everyone must feel that they had had two very pleasant days, and everyone must be sorry that it was all over. He thought in the first place their thanks were due to the committee, and especially to the working members of it, Major Dougall and Smyth. (Hear hear.) Perhaps he was better able than anyone else to judge of the amount of work they had done, for he had seen them up in the Residency grounds, and passing up and down at all hours of the day, and almost of the night Their thanks were also due to Mr. Anketell-Jones and Mr. Watson for the help they had given towards the dog show. Then there were the judges, gentlemen who undertook a most thankless duty. It was impossible to please everyone and he remembered one gentleman who had been judging at the Ootacamund Horse Show, who after came sadly into the pavilion and remarked that he was conscious of having made at least thirty deadly enemies that day. (Laughter) It was impossible to please everybody, but he thought that on the whole the judging at the show which was just concluded had given general satisfaction. The classes had been good, the jumping, both of horses and ponies, had been good, and as at Ootacamund, the jumping of the ponies had been better than the horses. He also thought that in this particular they were considerably indebted to the riders, there had been several excellent exhibitions of riding. (Hear, hear.) The show given by the Carabiniere troopers again had been as good if not better than anything which could be seen in England. (Hear, hear.) The horses were of a fine stamp and the men splendidly turned out. He did not know what eventually decided the judges, but the competitions must have been very close. He had heard a story (he did not know whether it was true), where an infantry competition of this sort, the judges had come to a decision by finding a mark in the winner's prayer book at the correct passages for the following Sunday. (Laughter.) He did not know whether the present competition had been quite so keen as that. Another point was the extraordinary useful class of horses they had in Bangalore. He was not sure whether at every show you found the same horses entered in five or six classes. But here in Bangalore they were cobs, light-weight hunter, polo ponies, trappers, and ladies' hacks. (Laughter.) It reminded him of a gentleman in Poona who wished to dispose of an animal and put rather a long price on it. He was not quite sure about getting it, so he added to the advertisement, this is not an ordinary animal, it has a W. I. T. C. certificate of 13-3 for life, and a charger's certificate of 14-2. (Laughter.) He did not think there was much more to say except to again thank the judges, but before he asked Mrs. Nixon to give away the prizes he wished to say a word or two to the prize winners. They were standing there with smug satisfaction on their faces, they were laughing now but they would not laugh next year. (Laughter.) Everyone who lost now was going to win next year, and he felt as though three or four prizes were safe in his pocket. He would ask Mrs. Nixon to present the prizes. (Laughter and applause.) Mrs. Nixon then presented the prizes to the winners, and hearty cheers for Mrs. Nixon and Majors Dougall and Smyth brought the Bangalore Horse and Dog Show of 1904 to a most successful close.

The Story Teller.

THE HAT TRICK.

WHEN I first came to know Tom Harbury he trained a few horses, of no particular class, on the Yorkshire Wolds; but he subsequently migrated to Minsterley, where I found him located when I went there for the annual June meeting a couple of seasons ago. The racecourse was the property of the Minsterley Corporation, a grand expanse of fine old turf, on which the local trainers had been for years accustomed to prepare their animals.

I had "travelled down with the horses," as the advertising tipster is so fond of saying, though, contrary to that gentleman's usual experience, not a single gee-gee of them all ever so much as hinted to me that he was likely to win anything, nor even whether he felt like winning if his trainer told him his head was loose I have never had any luck that way. The only time a horse ever spoke to me was once in a paddock, close to the weighing room door. His remark was: "Get out of the way!" and, although he only said it with his heels, there could be no mistaking his meaning. However, I escaped with the loss of a new silk hat.

At Minsterley one always goes on the course in the early morning to see the thoroughbreds put through their paces, and, incidentally, to get a ravenous appetite for breakfast. If not up with the lark (a bird for whose habits I have the utmost contempt), yet I found myself leaning against the rails, smoking a cigar, when the Minster clock chimed eight. The horses were doing their gallops on what our Yankee friends would call "the track," a proceeding only allowed during race times, although it was said that some of the local trainers used it on other occasions—when nobody was looking. I subsequently discovered, in a rather peculiar way, there was some truth in the rumour.

The business of the morning proved rather uninteresting, and I was turning away with a yawn, when I collided with something very big and heavy, and naturally recoiled. The solid body did not budge an inch.

"Hullo!" said a familiar voice; "who are you shoving?"

"Why, Tom!" I exclaimed, and we shook hands.

"I spotted you a long way off," he said, and forthwith we proceeded to swop news. He explained that he had removed to Minsterley the previous back-end, and my natural query on the instant was: had he anything running, and if so was it worth backing? Your true punter is never bashful if he can get anything for the asking.

"Well, 'pon my soul," he returned, taking off a huge, battered old Panama and scratching his head dubiously, "I can hardly say. I have a colt in the two-year-old selling that I think 'll very nearly win, but there's an if or two in the case."

"Yes?"

"You see, it's this way. I've pretty well weighed up everything in the race, and I think I have the measure of all but one, and that's a filly as I owned myself till about a month ago. Well, I'll be d—d!"

He broke off suddenly with this rather forcible ejaculation—uttered under his breadth—as a man strolling by bade him a friendly good-morning, to which Tom returned the very briefest of grunts

"You don't seem very much in love with that gentleman," I observed, noting the malevolent scowl he sent after the retreating form.

"I should think not," he growled. "That chap did me a very dirty trick not long ago, and—curious coincidence, too—it was over the very filly I was just talking about—Brownie is her name. I ran her in a selling race at Castleton in May—wanting a bit of ready, as usual—and she won easy enough, but when it came to buying her in, that cad—Evans they call him—queered my pitch. None of the other owners would bid against me, because they knew I was hard up, and particularly wanted to keep the filly; but this dodgasted Evans runs her up far beyond my figure in less than no time, and I had to let her go. I swore then I'd be even with him some day, and I shouldn't be surprised if I got a bit back this afternoon. He's running Brownie in the selling."

"And you think you can beat him?"

"That's as maybe—it all depends. My colt, Speedwell, is backward yet, though he'll be a right good 'un in a month or two. As it is, I feel pretty confident he can account for all but Brownie. And if a little dodge I've got in my head comes off all right he'll beat her, too."

"May I be let into the secret?"

"Well, no; I think not You see, it hangs upon a hair, in a manner of speaking—the least thing might crab it. All I can say is that if you've got a fiver you can afford to lose you might throw it away on Speedwell. You'll get a good price, for it's his first time out, and nobody knows anything about him But, mind, mum's the word."

I swore the most inviolable secrecy, and we parted till the afternoon. I had a good look at the pair I was interested in as they walked round the paddock. Brownie was a neat filly, one of the small and early sort, and looking as fit as hands could make her. Speedwell was a fine, upstanding colt, built on a much bigger scale, and it was most likely that before the end of the season he would be able to show a clean pair of heels to the filly; at present she would be too quick on her pins for him.

I presently I met Tom, and, of course, he asked my opinion.

"Yes," he said, when the oracle had spoken, "you're about right. The youngster will be a tip-topper one of these days, but he wants time."

"What sort of a jockey have you got?"

"One of my own lads; a smart, cool-headed little chap, too. And he has one merit that's rather scarce among our budding jockeys—you can depend upon him to do exactly as he's told."

Well, on the face of it, it appeared to me as if the filly would win easily enough, but I knew Tom Harbury of old, and when he advised anybody to back an off chance it mostly proved remunerative to do so. So I took a hundred to eight about Speedwell—Brownie was a strong order at two's. Then, having called at the buffet to drink the colt's health, I went up on the stand to look at the race.

Tom saw his colt out of the paddock, and then, somewhat to my surprise, he walked down the course on the far side, and stood leaning against the rails about a hundred yards from the winning-post. The field mustered about a dozen, and there appeared to be several unruly, excitable youngsters among them, so that the starter had considerable difficulty in getting them into line. At last, however, the barrier flew up to a fairly good start. Brownie was first to show in advance, and before they had covered half-a-mile she was two or three lengths in front of her nearest attendants, and to all appearance had her race well won. Speedwell was among the ruck, though I could see he was going as well as any of the others, bar the favourite, who was winning in a canter.

"Just my luck!" I sighed. "Fancied the filly, and wouldn't back her."

A furlong from home it looked any odds on Brownie, although Speedwell's great stride was telling, and he had considerably lessened the gap between them. Still, it seemed impossible for him to get up in time. Already shouts were going up—"The favourite wins! The favourite wins!" when a curious thing happened.

I had put down my glasses, and at that moment my eyes fell upon Tom. He was leaning well over the rails, and as the horses drew near he took off his big hat and held it in his hand. Brownie had almost come opposite to him when she swerved violently in his direction, and lost her place. Her jockey got her straight again in a moment, but Speedwell had got the lead, while another horse, ridden by a crack jockey, was pressing him hard.

Harbury's lad knew his business, and rode with the coolness and skill of a veteran It was a splendid set-to, but Speedwell was as game as a pebble, and won a most exciting race by a neck. The favourite was only third, so backers were not inclined to be enthusiastic over the result.

"Want to know how it was done do you?" said Tom that evening, after we had enjoyed a capital dinner at the Cross Keys. "Oh! well, it's very simple—when you come to know it. When I trained Brownie I always used to gallop her on the course itself whenever I wanted her to do anything better than ordinary exercise—Yorkshire gallops, as we call 'em, and that sort of thing. Of course, it was against the rules but I chanced that The spins used always to finish about where you saw me standing when the race was run, and to encourage the little mare to do her best I never missed giving here a little tit-bit of some sort, a lump or two of sugar, a carrot—always something. And she used to eat them out of my hat."

"By Jove!" I exclaimed.

"Ah! you begin to see, do you? Yes; that was how it happened. Brownie would have won right enough if she hadn't caught sight of my old hat; then she remembered what used to be in it, and made a dive for me. That lost her the race, poor thing. Of course, if I had told you my idea you would only have laughed at me, and really it was very long odds against it coming off. But you can always rely upon a thoroughbred's memory, whether it's a grudge he has got to pay off or a treat that he used to enjoy. And Brownie hadn't been so long away from me as to forget. Hope you've had a good win."

"A hundred of the best, thanks," I returned. "By the way, how did Evans bear the blow?"

"Oh! Evans!" Tom fairly roared. "I got level with him proper, I can tell you He's lost pretty nearly all he had, and he was so cocksure of winning that he never made any arrangements for having the filly claimed if she got beaten. But I hadn't forgotten that little point, and now I have got Brownie back again. Eh! what!"—S. ketches.

An Americanized Britisher, who now plays with one of our prominent Philadelphia clubs, tells the following interesting anecdote: "I was entertaining my brother's fiancée (now for many years an esteemed sister-in-law) while he was batting for our home club on our pretty little village ground in the county of Essex. She was a London girl, and knew very little of the game, but was making an effort to learn, as our family of boys were all cricketers. After a remarkably brilliant delivery, I exclaimed, with enthusiasm, 'My! but didn't that ball break?' 'Oh,' said she, 'Now they will have to get a new ball, won't they?'"

THE AMATEUR AND HIS EXPENSES.

THE Amateur Athletic Association, at its last general annual meeting, held in London occupied its time in discussing what the Sportsman with pardonable impatience described as "The Eternal Expenses Question;" and it is a tribute to the insolubility of this difficult matter that the gentlemen present made speeches remarkable for their ability and directness for a solid two hours without coming to a more definite decision than to leave the Rules on the point just where they were before. The debate arose out of a motion set down by Mr. G. V. A. Scholfield in the following terms: "To insert in constitution Rules, page 10, clause F. before the word 'travelling' in the fourth line, the word 'hotel,' and immediately after the words 'travelling' the words 'or other' so that the clause may read 'who asks for or receives hotel, travelling or other expenses ceases to be an amateur.'"

Now, while we cordially esteem the single mindedness which prompted Mr. Scholfield to propose so radical a change in the rule, which at present is open to the objection of vagueness we cannot think that his motion was wholly expedient: it aimed too high: it sought to place the amateur on the strictly, old fashioned amateur footing, and much as all athletes and sportsmen would like to see that step adopted the vast majority are agreed that, under existing circumstances, it is an impossible step to take. Mr. Scholfield, in proposing his motion, touched upon the indefinite character of the existing rule and the desirability of making it clear and distinct. He urged that the law should apply impartially to all, and that rich clubs which can induce champion athletes to attend their meetings and entertain them with lavish hospitality should be thus disabled from enjoyment of advantages which are not available to poor clubs. Dr. Badger, who opposed the motion, took the view which suggests itself to us, urging that there is danger in setting up too high a standard of amateurism. He granted existence of the tendency among amateurs to "get about, beyond their means;" but he was of opinion that it did no harm to give them a good and enjoyable time which they could not otherwise afford. He thought that the law, as it stands, had not been greatly abused and would not have it altered. Obviously there is much to be said in favor of Dr. Badger's view: it is a cardinal error to make rules so strict and rigid that men cast about for means to circumvent them, even as the wiser school of politicians object to the imposition of vexatious taxes, on the ground that taxpayers at once cast about for methods to evade payment. Mr. H. Venn, of the London Athletic Club, spoke in support of Mr. Scholfield's scheme, and brings our sympathies over to the purity view of the question. He averred (and who shall dispute his assertion?) that "the proper amateur is a man who enjoys himself in his legitimate hours for recreation: if a man accepts great hospitality on account of his athletic ability he destroys the natural beauty of amateur recreation." In the result Mr. Scholfield's motion was rejected by 50 votes to 34 and the Rule remains as it stands. A further amendment proposed by the same gentleman to effect that "this clause does not prohibit clubs paying reasonable hotel expenses of competitors at their meetings. If required by the A. A. A. clubs must produce accounts in connection with such expenses ; " was carried by a large majority on a show of hands : but a poll being demanded Mr. Scholfield obtained leave to withdraw his proposal in deference to the representatives who urged that their committees had had no opportunity of discussing the matter.

It seems to us hopeless to expect that the expenses question shall ever be settled on a basis acceptable to all : it is manifestly impossible to eliminate the pecuniary factor for sports and athletics in a country where the first axiom of sport is that rich and poor shall meet and compete in the same events. Assuming that the Rule were altered in such wise that an amateur forfeited his status if he accepted the hospitality of an athletic club in an hotel : would it be possible to claim forfeiture supposing the same amateur accepted the hospitality of a member, or of say two or three members, of a club if the one member or the two or three put him up in his or their private house ? It would be foolish to suggest that an amateur living, say, in York, should forfeit his status if he stayed with a personal friend in Northampton or Rochdale for the night before and the night after the A. A. A.'s championship meeting. And what degree of intimacy is to constitute personal friendship ? Is Mr. A. to make an affidavit that he has known Mr. B. for so many years, has met him so many times and has exchanged a specified number of letters with him ? The thing is absurd. And yet if an amateur be not fortunate enough to possess, acquaintances who can put him up there is nothing to prevent him from receiving such hospitality on the strength of a letter of introduction given him by a mutual friend for the purpose : and such evidence of good will towards an athlete might make the difference between his appearance at a meeting and his inability to attend. It appears to us that if the advocates for rigid amateurism press their views in opposition to the advocates of what we will take leave to call the assisted amateur, the ultimate result must be the division of athletes, cricketers, and possibly football players into two new camps. On the one we shall find assembled those who having money and leisure are averse from the amateur going anywhere save at his own exclusive expense ; on the other we shall find the well-to-do with the poor athletes whom they wish to encourage. It is not right to say that the rich athlete is the one who profits by the present system ; it is the rich club, which can afford to finance to their own advantage and help the poor athlete. The majority of those who do take part in athletic competitions are men not over well endowed with this world's goods, who nevertheless shrink from the social disability implied by a declaration of professionalism and who yet depend upon the bounty of others, clubs or individuals to " go about."

The question is one that bristles with difficulty and which at the same time cries loud for speedy settlement lest the amateur athlete drift into the equivocal position of the amateur cricketer. We have before us a letter written to a home sporting journal in which the writer declares that in cricket circles " many amateurs are more highly paid than professionals." He says " the latter do not like it," but the feelings of the professional, though worthy of all consideration are not the first point that should carry weight. Says the indignant writer. " County cricket is approaching by degrees slowly but surely to Association Football as played under the auspices of the league. We hear of ' winter money ' in cricket circles ; of men being signed on for a periods of years at so much a year." He quotes a case within his own knowledge of a North County amateur accepting a sum of £8 to go and play a match in a Southern county. " He went : stayed with a cousin and took his £8." This is merely an example of what goes on and what everybody knows does go on every season in increasing degree : and unless the term Amateur is to be brought wholly into contempt, one of two things must be done. The dividing line between Amateur and Professional must be wiped out altogether, or the bodies interested in preserving amateurism must appoint delegates to meet and form a Central Committee with Jockey Club powers whose authority shall be accepted by all concerned, the County Cricket Council, the A. A. A. and other associations. We do not envy that central authority the task we propose for it ; but knotty though we acknowledge the question of " expenses " to be we do not believe it incapable of solution and of settlement on a basis at once fair to the rich amateur and the poor one. If it prove incapable of solution there is nothing for it but to own up and admit that money is the bedrock on which rich and poor amateurs must split ; that the rich who can pay their own way shall form associations of their own while their poorer brethren must form independent associations that each class shall go their own way.

Sporting Notes.

THE complete entries for the St. Leger are published among our Turf news to-day.

Reports of the two concluding days of the Secunderabad race meeting will be found among our Turf news. The meeting has been so successful that the executive have been encouraged to announce a small meeting for November and another big meeting this time next year.

The proposal to start a Racing Club in Rangoon has, we hear, been rejected by a very large majority.

Some of our readers may be interested to know that on the 20th ultimo Mr. J. D. Scott became the father of a daughter. Congratulations.

The race of races this year, writes " Vigilant " in The Sportsman, will be the St. Leger, and here, while I am fully satisfied in my own mind that Pretty Polly will win, I none the less recognise that the adherents of several other candidates can give good show of reason for the faith that is in them. It is, for instance, a sound general rule to back Derby form, and it may well be that St. Amant is relatively a much better three year old than he was a two year old. Certainly he won no races last year in such smashing style as he did the Two Thousand Guineas and Derby this year, so if all goes well with him, St. Amant will have a host of supporters at Doncaster. Then there is the unbeaten Ajax, with the Flying Fox glamour, giving him a halo almost of romance—for what four year old ever achieved such a stud triumph as Flying Fox has done ? This, with the piles of French money that will go on him and him only, means sound backing for Ajax, if only M. Blanc will send him over. Here, however, we see the strong point against the Doncaster people for not adding money to the St. Leger and making it a good deal more valuable. A foreign owner naturally is influenced by the value of the stake when deciding whether he will or will not send his best colt such a long distance to run, and if Ajax is not sent the people of Doncaster will be the losers, for the French visitors and many others who would have come and spent their money freely in the town will be absentees. It was the same last year when Vinicius, but for breaking down, might have been sent, but it had been decided not to send him as he had more valuable engagements on the Continent. It is, of course, possible that Gouvernant may accompany Ajax, but not probable. Then there is John o' Gaunt, for whose defeats more than usually plausible excuses can be made. Many good judges persist in the belief that this really is the best colt of the year, and that had he been in the hands of a good English trainer from the first he would have never known defeat. He has certainly been coming on nicely throughout this year, and we shall doubtless see him win at Liverpool, as Mr. Thursby is now riding in great form. The policy of not giving John o' Gaunt another severe race until the St. Leger is a very wise one, as, staunch and game colt though he is, he has a lot to forget before he can come to regard training and racing with proper equanimity. I am inclined to think we shall not see him at his best until next year, and he may then develop into a Cup champion, but I do not doubt that he will run very well at Doncaster, as he is a fine stayer and the course will just suit him.

The Secunderabad Junior Polo Tournament, as will be seen from our report, ended in a win for the 4th Hussars who beat the 20th Deccan Horse by 6 goals and 2 subsidiaries to 4 goals and 3 subsidiaries.

Our Poona Correspondent writes:—I am sorry to have to state that young Mr. Ross who met with such a serious accident at polo is still in a most precarious condition. He has, up to the time of writing, been unconscious for fourteen days and has of late been delirious and very restless. Strangely enough a careful examination of the head has discovered no sign of either fracture or bruise. In one so young and healthy there is every hope while there is life, but the condition of this sporting and popular young officer naturally causes great anxiety.

Stonehill, the jockey, who came to grief as I have already mentioned while riding "Fire Up" in a gallop, sustaining a nasty fracture of the leg is, I am grieved to hear, not doing so well as he might, and it is feared he wi l not be able to ride during the ensuing season, though we must wish him better luck.

Yet further disaster. Tom Scott, the trainer, has just lost the English mare Parody from, I understand, colic and complications. No one seems to know what Parody's form really was, but Tom Scott does not purchase animals for four hundred golden sovereigns and bring them to India merely to see if they like the climate.

That sporting educational establishment for young India, the Deccan College took on the Poona Gymkhana at cricket. There is not such a plethora of champions on the Gymkhana side as one might dare hope for and when Wilkins was dismissed for but 23 and Greig for a miserable unit one scarcely knew what might happen. Luckly five other men got into double figures including the three last points of the "tail" though no one topped thirty and the Gymkhana innings closed for 150, a poor total considering the excellence and fastness of the wicket. For this the Deccan College trundler, Tora, was mainly responsible, he capturing no less than 8 wickets—an excellent performance more specially as it included the best of the batsmen.

The Deccanites batting display was terribly disappointing for in their first effort, suffering evidently from nerves, they could do no better than 47. In their second attempt they did considerably better, compiling 164 of which Modak was responsible for 63, and Prince Shivrajirao 46, both most admirable performances against the excellent bowling they had to contend with. This left the Gymkhana 63 runs to get which they did with the loss of 2 wickets. Greig 34 with a let off. In Tora the Deccan students have a good bowler and when they acquire more confidence they should be a very useful eleven.

The First Extra Meeting of the Poona Racing Season is come and gone and may well be declared an unqualified success, and while one must not forget the master mind of Mr. Cecil Gray, who is responsible for getting the large and complicated machinery into such wonderfully smooth working order, every credit must be accorded to his locum tenens, Mr. Cursetjee Dunjeesha, for the admirable manner in which he has kept things going, for the vast machinery worked without a hitch from first to last. The whole enclosure was beautifully tidy, while the lawn, looking wonderfully green and soothing despite the scarcity of rain, was beautifully arrayed with shrubs and flowers and formed a very pleasant resort between whiles. A new and very much more strict system has been adopted at the entrance gates, and this was evidently a move in the right direction, and will, according to popular opinion, tend to materially increase the official exchequer.

For a long time past, too, the erection of an additional room at the end of the building hitherto devoted to the weighing and dressing rooms and next to the measuring place has been exciting mild curiosity, and it was wondered if it was in any way connected with the mystic rites of that dread magician, the Official Measurer, and his divining rod. It turns out, however, to be a very excellent and completely appointed surgery and on the day of the races I noticed what must, I fancy, be the very latest thing in ambulances on rubber tyred wheels in attendance. In looking to the comfort of helpless lads who come, as in the order of things they must some times come, to grief in the pursuit of their calling, the executive have taken a step deserving of the utmost approval.

Close on the hour fixed for opening the ball a darkened sky and a heavy shower of rain temporarily damped the spirits of many, and after the long continued semi-drought it would have been the hardest of luck if the flood gates of heaven had selected such an inauspicious time to open. The shower, however, was fortunately brief and stopped in time to allow of the first race being started to the stroke of the clock and the commendable punctuality, than which nothing points more clearly to the excellence of organization, continued right through the card.

"Wheresoever the carcase is there will the eagles be gathered together," and the bookmaking brotherhood thronged in strength, indeed I hear the number of these clarion-throated artists beat the record for extra meetings—and as two excellent totalizators, as far as could be judged a great improvement on the primitive one hitherto in use were provided, the public could not complain of golden opportunities. Golden fleece I fear it was, found to be by many!

I must not poach on the demesne of the talented gentleman who deals with the actual racing, which requires a technical knowledge of this exciting game of kings and princes, beyond mentioning that the honour of "first blood" for the season fell to those sporting owners, Messrs. Mathuradass Goculdass and Ananjee Nandjee, by means of their pony Calcutta, whose win reflected great credit on that astute and capable trainer F. Pearson.

But the excitement of the day was in the second race of six furlongs when the judge, Colonel Bull (who has the reputation of being one of the, if not the best in India) could not separate Turn of Luck and Berlin, and the excitement did not end here, for since the owner refused to divide the tie was run off with the thrilling result that while there was at no period of the duel more than half a length between the competitors, the decision was eventually a head in favour of Berlin.

Calcutta—Berlin—Capital!

The efforts of a few of the little gentlemen of the pigskin in the race proper was not, by the way, of a very artistic description, at least three of the horses finishing on or near the outer litter track. Bendigo in the same stable as the winner looked indeed very like a winner at the distance, when he set the bad example of deviating from the straight path, with the result that he failed to sustain the ancient adage of the longest way round being the shortest way home.

Titus II. in disposing quite comfortably of such ponies as Tigris, Shah Jehan, Achilles and Grey Fox proved, in spite of having such "bolstery" forelegs, what a great pony he still is and what a complete gift for him the last Army Cup should have been.

It is a healthy sign of the times that no less than eight English, Australian and country-bred ponies ridden by G. R's. went to the post for the first closed race of the meeting. This was somewhat unexpectedly won by the Government House representative, Captain Stewart Balmain's Australian pony Lady Dean, admirably handled by Captain Meynell, who is quite in the front rank of G. R's. on this side. Indeed in this instance, as a celebrated murderer once exclaimed in gruesome appreciation of the forensic efforts of the counsel who was responsible for his sentence of death, it was probably "the riding did it."

Snipe have already arrived in the neighbourhood of Calcutta and it is reported that some over-eager sportsmen have already made small bags. This is hardly playing the game; the season runs from the 15th instant to the 15th March, seven months so that there exists no reason for such precipitancy.

The individual who was responsible for the neglect to place a notice at the foot of the Zeerut Bridge (Belvedere side), thereby causing annoyance to many people who drove up to the bridge to find it closed for repairs was either trying a clumsy practical joke or exhibiting his incompetence in a marked degree. We commend him to the attention of his superiors whoever they may be.

Poor old Donnabie, Mr. Bell Irving's big grey, who will be remembered in Calcutta as the winner of the Paperchase Cup, had to be shot the other day. He had been up in Behar for some months, but never recovered from the strained back he got out paperchasing some time ago.

The engagement is announced of Colonel the Hon'ble Everard Baring, Military Secretary to Lord Curzon, to Lady Ulrica Duncombe, who recently spent some months with Lord and Lady Curzon at Simla. We beg to tender our congratulations.

The advertisement of Messrs. O. M. D. Bell and Company, regarding their recent shipment per Wardha, will be found further on. The lot includes such real good ones as the three year old Wee Macgregor by Lochiel—Countess Aberdeen; Claribell (late Little Clarrie) by Beauchamp—Clarrie, two years old, 14-2¾; Rose Bell (late Rose Park) by Carlyon—Maryatville, three years old, 14-0¼, having won eight races; My Bell (late Myanamee) by Blarny, four years old, winner of several races; Bellary (late Conery) by Corinth—Charlotte Urara, a perfect jumper; Bellis (late Chynus) five years old, 14-1, by Cambria, having won on four occasions. The firm advises clients to call early and inspect these gees, and buyers will, we think, find such advice sound.

Many racehorses, as people who have anything to do with them are well aware, have what in the case of human beings would be called their "fads," but only in the cases of thoroughbreds which achieve celebrity are these paid much attention to. Pretty Polly, as is generally known, enjoys the society of a hackney mare, who accompanies the daughter of Gallinule and Admiration on all her journeys, and apparently Rock Sand has a similar affection for Pharisee, who is generally to be found in the paddock at any meeting where last year's Derby winner is performing. The chestnut was allowed to go a step further at Lingfield the other day, for he accompanied his stable-companion to the post, and they had the edifying spectacle of an animal ridden by a stable-boy in ordinary costume leading the parade! One shudders to think what a Derby field would look like if every competitor were allowed to go through the preliminaries similarly attended.

We really must give up the hunting of the Dongarh maneater he is a veritable "Boojum." After rejecting two reports of his demise as unreliable, we received a personal narrative the other day that seemed to account for him without a doubt. We thereupon wrote his obituary notice. We are told on the best authority we were wrong, for Captain Goring Jones, while admitting the bagging of a very large tiger and the finding of the remains of a dead tigress, tells us the rest of our paragraph is inaccurate, and that he is not under the impression that he can claim to be the destroyer of this phantom feline.

The Nilgiri Game Association is carefully considering the draft Game and Fish Preservation Bill and, with a view to sending a valuable and complete expression of opinion thereon to Government, held a meeting at Ooty on the 25th ultimo, a full report of which, (for which we are indebted to a Madras contemporary,) we reproduce in our Shikar columns.

The decision of the Jockey Club to be stricter in matters of equine nomenclature in future has evoked the following observation from "Pharos" to a London paper :—

SIR,—"As I see the Jockey Club are wisely intending to put an end to the reproduction of honoured names for racehorses, do not you think it would be a good thing if they put a stop to the silly innovation of calling horses "saints?" There are now quite a hundred of them. People may say they all virtually come from St. Simon, but he was named after a great friend of Count Bathyany, not a saint, but merely Monsieur de Saint Simon."

Major R. G. Burton, who some time ago was mauled by a panther, Hyderabad way, tells the story (with illustrations by E. Caldwell) in the Illustrated Sporting and Dramatic News to hand this week. We are glad to learn that he has made a complete recovery from his wounds and that he hopes, as soon as he returns to India, to give the big game, especially the carnivora, some more of his attention.

Dr. M'Culloch, of Edinburgh, has ascertained that sugar will preserve fish in most excellent condition. He states that fish may be preserved in a dry state, and perfectly fresh, by means of sugar alone, and even with a very small quantity of it. He has thus kept salmon, whiting, and cod for an indefinite length of time, and by this simple means fresh fish may be kept in that state for some days so as to be as good when boiled as when just caught. It is added that if dried and kept free from mouldiness, there seems no limit to their preservation, and they are much better this way than when salted. The sugar gives no disagreeable taste. This process is particularly valuable in making what is called kippered salmon; and the fish preserved in this manner are far superior in quality and flavour to those which are salted or smoked. If desired, as much salt may be used as to give the taste that may be required; but this substance does not conduce to their preservation. In the preparation it is only necessary to open the fish, and to apply the sugar in the muscular part, placing it in a horizontal position for two or three days that this substance may penetrate. After this it may be dried, and it is only further necessary to wipe and ventilate it occasionally to prevent mouldiness. A tablespoonful of brown sugar is sufficient in this manner for a salmon of 5lbs. or 6lbs. weight, and if salt is desired, a teaspoonful or more may be added. Saltpetre may be used instead in the same proportion if it is desired to make the kipper hard.

Mr. Tom Uphill's auction sale of horses which is to be held at "Tattersalls," 1, Bhowanipore Road, Calcutta, on the 12th instant, will give buyers a rare opportunity. There are forty T. B. horses and ponies by fashionable sires and all selected by Mr. Uphill with a special eye to the Indian market backed by many years' experience of the Indian horse trade. Full details appear in our advertisement columns.

We publish elsewhere the entries for the first Calcutta Monsoon Meeting. With the exception of the Trial Hurdle Race, for which only three were entered, the card has filled very satisfactorily. A Handicap Hurdle Race has been substituted for the Trial Hurdles: this may or may not fill, though we are inclined to fancy that a "closed" race, either on the flat, or for hunter class over hurdles, would have had a better chance of providing a satisfactory field. Taking a line from the past season, both monsoon and cold weather, it will be seen that the races which, without exception, drew large fields were the closed races, either with selling conditions or for horses which have not won a race value Rs. 100 or Rs. 1,500. There are also plenty of hunter class horses in work at present, and a hurdle race of that description would have been likely to fill well.

The Stand Plate has drawn ten entries, of which four are old friends, viz., Yuletide, First Guide, The Owl, and Irish. The last named, it will be remembered, ran rather disappointingly at Tollygunge last cold weather, but six months may have made a big difference. Five furlongs is scarcely far enough to suit either Yuletide or First Guide, though provided the going be deep enough, we shall expect to see the former there or thereabouts at the finish. Moonlight and Pat are hardly ready as yet, and Energy, we think, will hardly get home through the mud with 9st. 8lbs. on her back. Lall and Mademoiselle are both unknown quantities, and The Owl, though she has probably the legs of the rest, was, when we last saw her, wearing a somewhat hungry and dejected look. On the whole, however, we like Yuletide and The Owl about the best of the lot.

Nine have been entered for the July Plate, and the class is pretty warm. So little fast work has been done as yet that it is impossible to say what horses are the most nearly fit to go five furlongs in the heavy going which we shall probably have to face on Saturday, but of the nine we are inclined to pick Clynder, with Rathcoon and Pylara to fill the situation. The distance is hardly far enough for Hello, who shines more over six or seven furlongs. Belmeath, we think, is scarcely ready yet. Bell Brand does not strike us as being at his best. Profit is an almost unknown quantity, and old Trollop is altogether outclassed.

Of the eight entered for the Pony Trial Plate, there should be nothing else in it but Blue Bell if she is fit and well, but of this we cannot speak with any certainty, having seen little or nothing of her at work. Moss Rose should follow her home, unless the perverse Little Doris takes it into her head to behave herself at the gate, in which case she might upset the pot.

Thirteen have been named for the Maiden Horse Plate, and the majority being unknown quantities, it is no safe or easy task to endeavour to make a selection. Morris, Cheer-Up and Winklet, however, should run well, and we look to these to finish one, two, three in some order or other.

Notes about the training on the Calcutta Course will be found further on.

Athletic Notes.

THE Indian Football Association Challenge Shield Tournament closed last Saturday, when the Calcutta Football Club beat the King's Own Regiment by a goal to nothing. This is the fourth win of the Calcutta Football Club. Details elsewhere.

A full report of the Calcutta Rowing Club Second Regatta will be found in the usual place. With regard to the racing we are of opinion that it was the most successful regatta the Club has held of recent years. The race for Class Fours was won by the Service crew who just beat the Merchants, after a close race, in 2mins. 53secs. The Junior Sculls also produced a good race, Mr. W.C. Burke winning by six feet and making record time.—2min 52secs. The Ladies' race went to Mrs. R. C. Wilson, and the programme closed with Scratch Fours, four crews competing. The next regatta will be held in September, when the executive intend to include in the programme the Junior Fours for the Hoare Challenge Cup: other items will be the Senior Fours over the full course and the Senior Pairs.

Mr. Massey Dawson, who was to have steered the Merchants' crew in the C.R.C. regatta last Saturday, was unable to hold the tiller ropes owing to a serious carriage accident which befel him when returning from the Club on Friday night. As he was turning into Camac Sheet from Lower Circular Road on his bicycle, the carriage of some native—driven on the wrong side of the road of course—ran over him, injured him badly, smashed his machine, and following their invariable practice, the brutes whipped up and soon disappeared in the darkness. Mr. Massey Dawson, when he regained consciousness, had reason to congratulate himself on a really marvellous escape. The carriage and pair of big walers went right over him; but, though he was most extensively bruised and lacerated, besides being kicked in the face, no bones were broken. We congratulate the victim on his good luck, while we deplore the fact that those responsible for the accident will not be traced.

The following are important cricket results at home last week:—Lancashire beat Gloster by an innings and 79 runs; Somerset beat Surrey by an innings and 43; Warwick beat Essex by eight wickets: The matches—Notts vs. Yorkshire, Derbyshire vs. Sussex were abandoned.

On the 30th ultimo Essex beat Middlesex by ten wickets, Lancashire beat Worcester by 192 runs; the match between Surrey and Hampshire was drawn, and the matches between Notts and Derbyshire, Somerset and Sussex and Yorkshire and the South Africans were all abandoned.

Oh, promise me, that some day you and I
Will take our golf clubs to some other sky,
Where stews and stones and libraries are not,
And dachshunds do not spoil my iron shot,
Those first weak strokes without a swing,
Which land the ball in bunker deep, and bring
A word unspeakable that 'gins with D.
Oh, promise me! Oh, promise me!

Oh, promise me that you will take some sand
And make a tee, the hollow of your hand,
And after driving, I shall find my lies
Such as are found in Golfers' Paradise,
Watching with eager eye the Haskell roll
A slow and steady course, plump in the hole
No game's a game like golf with thee,
Oh, promise me! Oh, promise me!

C. F. Larner, who is now unquestionably in the front rank of English "wobblers," put up a remarkable record of the Herne Hill Harriers sports last month when, in the three miles walk, he succeeded in reducing the existing best figures, standing to the credit of W. J. Sturgess, of 21mins. 14secs., by no less than 40secs. It was an ideal day for such an achievement, but few of those present would have ventured to predict that Larner could get through in the wonderful time of 20mins. 34secs., both the official watches agreeing to a "tick." The Sussex man's walking throughout was unimpeachable; indeed, he is without doubt the fairest walker seen on the path for many a long day.

The recent victory of Leander in the Grand Challenge Cup at Henley has revived the grumbling which their wins of late years have always evoked in some quarters. There is something to be said on both sides, and in this connection the most sensible contribution to the discussion that we have seen comes from Mr. Jasper W. Knight, who writes to The Sportsman as follows:—

"Sir,—There has been quite a lot of grumbling about the so-called "unfair" and "unsportsmanlike" competition of Leander at Henley, which is undoubtedly spoiling rowing in general, and the race for the Grand Challenge Cup in particular ; but, so far as I know, nobody has suggested a workable regulation to remedy it. I can see nothing "unfair" and "unsportsmanlike" in Leander's action ; it is quite natural that every captain of Leander should raise the fastest crew possible out of his available material, and seeing that Leander have got the call of practically the whole of the rowing world, it is obviously nearly hopeless for other clubs to attempt to beat Leander, with crews formed out of Leander's leavings. May I, therefore, suggest that a rule should be adopted here, which I am told is at present in force in Germany, and which is framed to prevent combinations of clubs, viz., that no man may race for more than one club in the same year. Of course, in this connection a College Boat Club would have to be regarded as a branch of its University Boat Club.

The result of this would be that Leander would be weakened by being debarred from rowing any competitors in the University Boat Race or the college races of the current year, and the Metropolitan clubs would ultimately be greatly benefited by being forced to stop the abominable practice of keeping places vacant, up to within fourteen days of Henley, for University men who are still in residence, a system which does incalculable harm to a club by disheartening its junior members, on whom it should rely for material, if it is to do any real good.

The general reply to my suggestion probably is that the proposed rule would prove a very considerable handicap to Leander, if it became necessary for them to raise a very fast crew against some foreign entry. All I can say is, that, if the Grand Challenge Cup can only be kept in the country by raising practically an all-England crew to beat a single foreign or colonial club, there must be something very radically wrong with English rowing, and the cup had better be allowed to go.

In any case, it must be quite obvious to all rowing men, Leander men included, that something must soon be done to weaken Leander, if any competition for the Grand Challenge Cup is to be maintained."

Says Golfing. The British Amateur Championship Cup has evidently had a narrow escape of being squelched—though our own American friends tone it down a little by telling us it had been "badly battered"—on its voyage across. The trophy seems to have been carelessly packed, for there are big dents on the front and back. Each of them is large enough to lay a jacknife into. The trophy also seems to have received upward pressure, as it does not stand true on its base.

We would have thought Mr. Travis would have personally seen to the packing of this emblem of his greatness, but he has carried away so many pots and things in course of his golfing wanderings, that he has evidently grown callous of their well-being.

The above reminds us that we have heard nothing more of the fate of the Sir Allan Arthur Native Army Championship Shield which was perforated by three bullets when a miscreant in the 27th Light Cavalry ran amok. It was sent down to Calcutta, but the Colonel of the regiment considering the estimate for repairs submitted by one of our local firms too high, has, we believe, taken the Shield to England with him. We trust it will be on hand by the time the Bengal Presidency Athletic Association holds its next Championship meeting.

Our Bombay Correspondent writes.—The Rugger match last Monday between Scotland and the World, which had been looked forward to with a considerable amount of interest, was a most disappointing affair. To begin with neither side put a complete team in the field, the World having no full back and only seven forwards, while Scotland, too, had only seven forwards. For a big match like this, one would imagine that no difficulty would have been experienced in getting together full teams, and it reflects rather badly on the enthusiasm of Rugger votaries that only twenty-seven men could be got to turn out. Regarding the play the World, although playing with only thirteen men and without a full back, and moreover against a stronger three-quarter line, managed to win a rather scrambling game by a goal and a try to a try.

The final meeting of the Indian Cricket Team for England Committee came off on Thursday, the 28th. There were only seven members present, but sufficient to form a quorum. The report of the Sub-Committee which had been entrusted with the refund of subscriptions and winding up of affairs generally having been read and passed the Meeting was dissolved. Thus ended the last phase of a scheme which at one time gave promise of success.

I learn on good authority that an invitation has been extended to J. Curtis, of the Telegraph Department, who is stationed at Quetta to play for the Presidency in the match against the Parsees next month. Captain Greig regards Curtis as one of the best bats in India. Apropos of Captain Greig I further learn that after the match between the Bombay and Poona Gymkhanas, on the 6th and 7th August, he will be going up to Mhow to play in a match, and will make a careful study of the form of the best players there.

I made a mistake last week when I said that the Gymkhana would have the services of F. K. D. Joy, the old Wykhamist, for the remainder of the season. As a matter of fact this player, who is only on a brief visit to India as the guest of a native chief, was passing through Bombay and has already left for some place up-country.

The weekly mounted sports call for very little notice owing to the paucity of entries which were fewer than usual. Bombay is in a moribund condition for riding men, and with the old lot fast disappearing and few, if any, of the younger and newer generation able to fill their places, the mounted sports at one time so popular are now very nearly devoid of all interest. It becomes rather monotonous week after week to see the same select few competing for the various events. The first event on last Wednesday's card was Tent-pegging on horses and ponies which were won by Messrs. Heyland and Fischer respectively, with Messrs. Fischer and Barraclough second in the respective classes. The next event for ladies brought out three competitors, and was won by Mrs. Dyson. Each lady had to gallop under a bar supported on gold posts, and throw a ball over the bar and catch it on the other side. A bending race, in which competitors had to ride in and out between sticks driven into the ground brought out seven competitors. There were two preliminary heats, the final being won by Mr. Graham with Captain Ashe second. There were only three competitors for the putting stakes, a mixed event which was won by Mrs. Fischer and Mrs. McCausland. The usual pony scurry was won by Hira ridden by Mr. Fischer with Agincourt ridden by Mr. McCausland second. The Horse Scurry was also won by Mr. Fischer on Dart with Mr. Wright's Bloke ridder by Mr. Matthew second.

Turning to soccer doings the Cheshire "B" team met the Rovers in the return league fixture and beat them by two goals to one. The Rovers, although beaten, really had the best of the game, and with a little luck in front of goal should have equalised. The Royal Garrison Artillery defeated the Bombay Gymkhana in the return game by two goals to nil. The Gunners had much the best of the game, and but for faulty tactics in front of goal would have largely increased their score. The Telegraph Club suffered their ninth successive defeat in the league this season in their return match with the Cheshire "A" team. Considering that they were opposed to the strongest team in the league their defeat by three goals to nil was, however, not overwhelming.

A Rugger match between scratch teams of the Gymkhana and Casuals was played on Friday evening, and after a fast game resulted in a win for the Gym. by two goals and three tries to one try.

The meeting between the Bombay Gymkhana and the Hindu Gymkhana cricketers on the latter's ground on Saturday attracted a lot of interest, as the Hindus are far and away the strongest club team in Bombay this season. The Bombay Gymkhana eleven was hardly the strongest that could have been placed in the field and, in the enforced absence of Milne, Richardson and Stileman through injuries, had no change bowlers of any calibre to relieve Ainsworth and Coombs. The batting, too, suffered in the absence of A. P. Langhorne and Milne. The Hindu Gymkhana was represented at its strongest and when Captain Carnegy lost the toss for the Europeans and the Hindus took first service of a plumb wicket the spectators settled themselves down to witness some attractive cricket and were not disappointed. In the course of two hours the Hindus compiled 189 for the loss of four wickets, every one who went in making runs freely. Bandu, who this year is in splendid form, was going strong for a century when he fell a victim to one of Aston's slows who was put on as a last resource. His 73 included 13 boundaries and was a most finished display. Neither Ainsworth nor Coombs could do anything with the ball on the billiard table like wicket. The Gymkhana were left with 189 runs to make in an hour and a half, an impossible task, but it became a question whether they would be able to play out time as the first three wickets fell with only 20 up. Afterwards Philbrick and Captain J. A. D. Langhorne became associated and made an invaluable stand for the fourth wicket which practically saved the Gymkhana from defeat. The Gymkhana total was considerably increased by the number of byes given away, and when the bell went at 6 o'clock the telegraph showed 100 for four wickets. The draw was, of course, all in favour of the Hindus who have not lost a match this year.

There is some talk of Bombay entering a team for the Junior Polo Tournament at Poona which commences on 22nd August, and for the Open Tournament which is set down to begin on the 22nd September.

The Poona Challenge Lawn Tennis Tournament, open to the services and recognised clubs throughout India, will be held between the 12th and 17th proximo. There are three competitions, the Gentlemen's Singles for which a Silver Challenge Cup and a prize are offered; the Gentlemen's Doubles for two Silver Challenge Cups and two first prizes, and the mixed doubles, the latter subject to sufficiency of entries. The Open Badminton Tournament will also be held at the same time when a Silver Challenge Cup and a first prize will be offered for Gentlemen's Doubles. All entries close on Monday, the 5th September. The committee are Captain F. W. Bagshawe, Major F. de B. Young, F. H. Vincent, Esq., and Lieutenant-Colonel J. A. Bell, Honorary Secretary.

In the Eton vs. Harrow match at Lords on the 8th ultimo, D. C. Boles scored 183 for Eton and thus holds the record for the matches between the two schools. In these days of high scoring it is remarkable that the previous record 152 by Sir Emilius Bayley for Eton, has stood for 63 years, his score having been made in 1841. Boles also took 2 wickets for 9 runs, so that he had a brilliantly successful day. The record score by a Harrovian is 142 by T. G. O. Cole, who now plays chiefly for the Liverpool Cricket Club. His score was made in 1897.

Motoring in the Alps promises to become as popular a sport as Alpine climbing. Captain Deasy is at the time of writing exploring various passes in Switzerland, and some details have just come to hand of an interesting trip taken on a 4-cylinder 16 horse-power Peugeot by Mr. A. J. Fentiman, of Malden. Starting from Havre with a friend, he crossed the length of France to Marseilles, thence to Nice, and northward to Grenoble, from which the passage of the Alps was made. They covered about 3,000 miles and had no serious trouble on the way. Coming down a steep pass the band of one of the brakes was burnt through, and the usual slight adjustments and replacements to tyres, brakes, and chains had to be made; but no engine or electrical worries were experienced. The increase of genuine pleasure tours of this nature successfully accomplished proves the efficiency of the modern light car for give and take work on the road. The Calcutta Agent for Peugeot motors is Mr. A. A. Bachman of 10 Dalhousie Square.

Some really wonderful stuff is being introduced to India in the shape of "Kleeno," a preparation which will be found advertised on page V of this paper. A severe trial or two to which we personally subjected "Kleeno" convinces us that it does all its manufacturers claim for it: indeed it removes oil, dirt, ink and other messy things in a way that is magical in its completeness and celerity. Cyclists, motorists, althletes and others will find it almost invaluable.

It is interesting to note that the four first places in the English first-class batting averages are held by Tyldesley with 78·5, Iremonger with 76·11, Ranjitsinghji with 74·07, and C. B. Fry with 71·47. Then comes a big drop to 54·66, which is W. H. B. Evans' average: P. F. Warner stands sixteenth in the list with an average of 43·66, while A. C. Maclaren is thirty-second with 36·05. It might further be mentioned that the latter had 18 innings to Warner's 14 though it must be conceded that in the number of runs Maclaren beats Warner by something like 89. Rhodes, Bosanquet, Foster, Humphreys, Wood, and Storer are all down in the thirties.

London Week by Week.

London, Friday, 15th July 1904.

EVIDENCE is abundant on all sides that we are assisting at the demise of the season. Station omnibuses, loaded with luggage and bicycles, are more numerous than is usual in the middle of July, and the railway stations already present the charming features one generally associates with August. There is undeniably an increasing tendency to leave town earlier than was the case a few years ago; partly no doubt from a natural and laudable desire to escape the horrors of the usual holiday crowd, but the change is also in a great measure the result of the now well established little winter season. The almost defunct season, has not, I am told, been a success from the commercial point of view; a decided tendency towards retrenchment showing itself among those in all classes who retain a Philistine propensity for paying their bill. The railway companies are preparing for the exodus; the Midland in particular is adding to and accelerating its Scotch expresses, and the L. S. W. is much improving its service between London and the West of England.

The visit of the German Squadron to Plymouth should serve, if anything would, to open the eyes of even the most rabid peace-at-any price member of the British public to the success attending the German Emperor's efforts to make his country a first-class Naval power. Eight battleships and seven armoured cruisers anchored in the Sound on Sunday, and remained until Wednesday, and during that time the officers and men were given every facility for inspecting our warships and workshops. Not that our visitors appear to have much to learn, for the almost unanimous opinion of experts who visited the ships seems to be, that whatever may be thought of the German navy as a whole, there is no question that the sample of it now sent for our inspection and edification is, as a fighting force, as near perfection as may be. All the ships comprising the squadron have been completed during the past six years, they represent an outlay of over eleven millions, and they carry a total complement of upwards of 9,000 officers and men. The marke dinclination of the German Navy to visit our naval ports gives food for reflection. Other Navies wait until they are invited; and British visits to German waters are by no means common. It is said that this is the ninth visit paid by a German Squadron to a British Naval port, and two years ago the German manœuvre fleet remained several days in Berehaven. However no one grudges any hospitality we are able to grant to a friendly fleet, and the present visit could have deserved the nations gratitude had it been possible to arrange for C. B., John Morley and Company, to be personally conducted over the fleet and the moral of the show well rubbed in.

The production of "George Paston's" play "The Pharisee's Wife," at the Duke of York's, is the chief—indeed almost the only—theatrical event of the week worth noting. The first act is unquestionably extremely fine, and shows dramatic instinct of a high order. The characters are well drawn, and the dialogue is natural, and holds the attention of the audience. Henry Carrington, a barrister, is the co-respondent in the case of "Lewis vs. Lewis and Carrington" Problem—what should Mrs. Carrington do? Mrs. Ralfe, a shrewd and not unkindly woman, urges her to follow her example, get a legal separation, and enjoy her freedom. Mrs. Maxwell, Mrs. Carrington's mother to whom life has taught many lessons, counsels her daughter to make the best of it, to go on, outwardly at least, as before, and to trust to the world's exceedingly short memory. Carrington himself is repentant, and honestly desirous to make any reparation that may be possible. These four characters live in the first act, and are intensely interesting. The second and third acts though good are weaker, and somewhat theatrical. Carrington objects to his wife remaining on friendly terms with a lady with whose name scandal is busy. "I will forgive you, when you have learnt how to forgive," is Mrs. Carrington's slightly stagey rejoinder. She falls in love, or is on the point of falling in love, with Pagnell, but comes to her senses, and he goes off to China. Time passes, and when Mrs. Carrington goes to her husband's chambers with the intention of effecting a reconciliation, she runs up against Mrs. Lewis. Nothing comes of the meeting, and it is not easy to see the purpose of the scene. Carrington returns, his wife asks his forgiveness in words that naturally lead him to think the worst; but he, saying that it does not matter what she has done, embraces her. Her explanation relieves his mind, and the curtain falls on a scene of reconciliation. Had the two last acts been equal to the first, we could have welcomed a play of very exceptional power. The acting was extremely good. Mr. Aubrey Smith and Miss Madge McIntosh are excellent as Mr. and Mrs. Carrington; as is also Miss Hilda Rivers as Mrs. Ralfe, and Miss Darragh as Mrs. Lewis, in the only scene in which that lady appears.

Sergeant Brue has migrated from the Strand Theatre to the Prince of Wales', Miss Ethel Irving is no longer in the cast, and nothing quite compensates for her loss. In other respects the changes are for the better, and the piece is, on the whole, a good example of the musical farce. "The Conversion of Nat Sturge" by Malcolm Watson, which caused so much amusement when it was produced at the Clement Scott Matinee, has been promoted to the regular bill at the Garrick, as curtain raiser to the "Fairy's Dilemma." The part of the urbane old Bishop is again taken admirably by Mr. Bourchier, and Mr. Webb Darleigh is again the most fascinating of burglars. Miss Caroline Ewell replaces Miss Nancy Price, and makes a capital Julia.

Mr. Alexander, who is not going on tour, announces that he will re-open the St. James's early in September with an adaptation by Mr. Sidney Grundy of Mr. Forman's Story "The Garden of Lies." The heroine will be played by Miss Lilian Braithwaite. Mrs. Patrick Campbell is to give some performances of "The Second Mrs. Tanqueray", before she leaves the Vaudeville. The part of Tanqueray will be taken by Mr. Aubrey Smith.

As was generally expected the Government refused Sir Charles Elliot's demand for a public inquiry into the circumstances attending his resignation and the concession to the East African Syndicate. It has now published the complete correspondence on the subject, which is characterised by some unusually plain speaking, and its publication is to be deplored. The Commissioner complains that Lord Lansdowne, while willing to grant a concession of 500 square miles to the East African Syndicate, a speculative company, on unusually favourable terms, and with practically no restrictions; and also offering a Jewish Syndicate a concession of 5,000 square miles, refuses to endorse an agreement he had entered into with two private individuals for the sale of 100 square miles. The ground on which the F. O. declines to sanction the agreement made by Sir Charles Elliot, is that it would interfere with the grazing rights of the Mosaic tribe; which strikes one as hardly logical, as I believe it is not disputed that the concession made to the East African Syndicate is the pick of the Mosaic grazing ground.

The whole story is another proof, if one were needed, of the absolute unfitness of the F. O. to deal with semi-native colonial questions. It appoints a gentleman of position and standing in diplomacy to a post of exceptional difficulty, and expects him to accept a position that a managing clerk of average ability, in a private concern, would hardly consent to hold. The Government strongly desires to attract settlers to the country, and it is small wonder that Sir Charles Elliot seeing that concessions of 5,000 and 500 square miles were so easily and readily made, should consider himself free to follow in the same lines and to sell the comparatively small area of 100 square miles to private individuals to whom no objection can be taken on personal grounds. It is true that the Deputy Commissioner and the Sub-Commissioner, whom Lord Lansdowne consulted, as they happened to be in England, disapproved of the proposed interference with native grazing rights, but they objected equally to the concession to the East African Syndicate, on the same grounds. Mr. Herbert Samuel, M. P., has withdrawn his motion for the appointment of a Select Committee to consider and report on Sir Charles Elliot's resignation, as he understands there is no prospect of the Government assenting to it.

The Eton and Harrow match brought a crowd even larger than usual to Lords on Friday and Saturday. Luck has turned, and the Etonians are making up for the evil years with a vengeance. Last year they beat Harrow by an innings and a hundred and fifty-four runs, and this year by an innings and twelve runs. This year will be memorable for the record score of one hundred and eighty-three made by Mr. Boles for the winning side; and also for the splendid effort Harrow made in the second innings to avert defeat. The struggle was a game one and they kept their opponents in the field for over six hours; Baily, their captain, despite his severe accident the day before, offering a masterly resistance to the Eton bowling for nearly three hours. The heat was intense and both elevens deserve credit for the plucky fashion in which they maintained their form to the last.

The attendance at Bisley yesterday, the Public Schools' Day, was the largest ever known. There was an exciting contest between Winchester and Clifton for the Ashburton Shield; the former winning with a total of 476, Clifton a very close second with a score of 475. Forty-two school teams took part in the match. Among other school events was the Cadets match, won by St. Paul's School. The Spencer Cup won by Cripps of Marlboroughs, with 34 points out of a possible 35, and the Public Schools Veterans' match won by Cheltenham. Dulwich were the winners in a rapid firing contest.

The news of the death of Mr. Kruger, in Switzerland, calls for small comment, except that the evil that he did will undoubtedly live long after him. Sympathy with him will be confined to the hearts—so tender to all enemies of their country—of Miss Hobhouse, Messrs. Leonard Courtney, Stead, and a few others of that ilk. No doubt the wish he is said to have expressed that he might be buried by the side of his wife, will be respected, though it is not possible to forget how equally he bore separation from her during life; and how, while he carefully carried with him the coin from the Transvaal Treasury, he left her to the tender mercies of the British soldiers, whose ways are ways of barbarism, as our C. B. tells us.

The meeting in the Albert Hall last evening organised by the Liberal Unionist Council, and presided over by Mr. Chamberlain, was large and decidedly enthusiastic. Practically every seat was filled, and when Mr. Chamberlain appeared he received an ovation. His speech may be read elsewhere by those who incline thereto. I will only say that in my capacity of an Onlooker it struck me that the references to the over-representation of Ireland and to the wrecking of the Alien's Bill evoked more applause and sympathy, if possible, than anything else.

That the wrecking of the Alien's Bill will not be allowed to be forgotten when the day of election comes, is devoutly to be hoped. Mr. Balfour's Assurance, in answer to a question in the House, that the Government proposes to re-introduce the Bill early next session, is satisfactory, and if the blunder be not repeated of sending the Bill to the Grand Committee, it may possibly have become law before this time next year.

From Gyangtse comes the welcome news that the move to Lhassa has begun, and Colonel Younghusband's declaration that the reparation and satisfaction required can only be obtained at Lhassa itself, leads one to hope that time will be no more dallying with unaccredited agents by the way. If the so-called peace delegates are at Nagartse and the Kara-la is held by two thousand men, as is reported, the Tibetans have probably not given up all hope of preventing the expedition reaching Lhassa. That they will exhaust all the wiles at their command to delay the expedition goes without saying.

Various items: An important casket of wonderful jewels, the property of an Indian Prince, was offered for sale by auction by Phillips, Sons, and Neale, at 73, New Bond Street, last Tuesday. Among them is, according to experts, one of the finest emeralds in the world. Surrounded by diamonds it forms the centre of a magnificent pendant, with a drop emerald weighing 15½ carats. For this Mrs. Harris gave £4,100. A ruby fetched £340, an emerald button £400, and a nine row pearl collar, with brilliant bars, £480. As the highest prices were given by dealers, who it is to be presumed know their business, it follows that the end of high prices for jewels is not yet. The largest gathering of mounted infantry ever brought together in England was inspected last week at Aldershot by F. M. His Royal Highness, the Inspector-General of the Forces. About 25 per cent. of the men wore the South African medal. Capital reports have been received from the Grouse Moore in the North and East of Scotland. There is no disease, the broods are large, and the birds are in splendid condition. On the Argyllshire Moore a large number of eggs was destroyed by the floods in May. Water was let into the new dock at Gibralter (named after King Edward) last Friday. The ceremony was performed by Lady Acland, in the presence of the Governor and a large company. It seems not unlikely that the Volunteer force may be improved out of existence. The returns issued last week show a decrease in the number of enrolled officers and men of more than fifteen thousand, as compared with last year. An Irish Athlete achieved a remarkable series of successes at the St. Louis' Exhibition. He won four firsts out of nine events, in a general competition for an All-world Championship. The growing love of gold is the feature of the report of the Royal Mint for 1903. The gold coinage having been unusually large during the year, while the demand for silver and bronze coins was much smaller. Two small collection of valuable silver plate, were sold at Christies last week and good prices were realized. A plain octagonal caster, by Adam, 1718, fetched 68s. per oz., and another caster, date 1762, and a pair of muffineers, temp. George I. made 77s. per oz. An old Dublin helmet-shaped cream jug realized 56s. per oz. Eighteen panels of old glass which are said to have been removed from the Star Chamber Westminster, after the fire, 1834, were sold at Fosters Rooms, Pall Mall, last week. At the meeting the other day of the Committee of the Cancer Research Fund, presided over by the Prince of Wales, the Hon'ble Treasurer stated that up to the present only three hundred and twenty-eight individuals and the City Guilds have contributed to the funds. An unfortunate impression prevails that a few very wealthy men are sufficiently interested in the subject to subscribe all that is needed if other sources fail. The urn containing the ashes of Mr. G. F. Watts, was interred last Friday in the cemetery at Compton, Surrey, close to Limmerslease. The beautiful chapel of the cemetery was a gift from Mrs. Watts to the parish. It was announced in the Brighton Bankruptcy Court last week that the widow of the late Mr. C. S. Parnell was so ill that she probably will never be able to attend the Court. The case therefore was adjourned indefinitely. Captain William Noble, an astronomer of some repute, has just died at his house in Sussex. He served for a time in the Rifle Brigade, but devoted the greater part of his life to astronomy.

Review.

THE JOURNAL OF THE BOMBAY NATURAL HISTORY SOCIETY.

VOL. XV. No. 4.

WE were very pleased to receive this number which for general excellence wants nothing. Another of those beautiful plates by Mr. H. Gronvöld illustrating Mr. Stuart Baker's "Indian Ducks and their allies" is given as a frontis-piece. It represents the Tufted Duck (Nyroca fuligula, linn.) The drawing is exceedingly good and well represents the squat and roundish form of this species. Adult males are usually of a deeper black on the breast and upper plumage. Of course no chromo could ever picture the sleek glossiness of the silky texture of the white plumage in that sex. This is XVIII plate of this series; we trust in time to see all our remaining ducks illustrated. It would then form a most valuable addition to the ornithologist's library, these plates especially those by Lodge and the present artist far surpassing any in Hume and Marshall's beautiful volumes. This latter work also is so rare and expensive now that those ornithologists who have not been fortunate in getting it can hardly hope to obtain it now, and so this series should prove a boon to every body.

Plants are well represented in this number and so are insects, most of the heavy part of the Journal being comprised of these: there is only one article on birds and a couple on animals.

Of those on plants there is an interesting article by Mr. G M. Ryan I.F.S. on the Wild Plantain (Musa superba Roxb). The economic properties of this plant are gone into and they appear to be of some value. The base of the suberborescent stem and the subterranean root-stock are eaten by the natives, but are not nutritious and we fancy are only eaten by them as a cheap means of getting a good stomach-full. The fibre is used for ropes, etc, perhaps the most interesting properties attributed to it are from a medicinal point of view. The seeds are eaten as a prophylactic against small-pox and also taken as a specific in hydrophobia when powdered, and mixed with water. It would be interesting to know the medical profession's opinions on it, whether there is any real value in the seeds in this respect.

The Catalogue of the Flora in Northern Ganjam by Mr. Cecil E. C. Fischera I.F.S., is got up in good style, giving all necessary information in a terse business, like way. Economic Entomology is not forgetton and forms one of the most valuable papers in this number. It concerns two notorious insect pests Pyrausta machæralis and Hybæa puera which infest the teak tree Tectona grandis. It is to be hoped that other observers will publish their results of the observations they may make so that a complete account may be published and so lead to the protection of these grand and valuable trees. This article is illustratedby five plates one of which is coloured and represents these pests in their different stages.

Sir G. F. Hampson, Bart., is much to the fore in two articles, one in conjunction with Messrs G. C. Dudgeon and H. I. Elves; on the Heterocera of Sikhim and Bhutan and the other in his "Moths of India," which are supplementary papers to the volumes in "The Fauna of British India." He starts the third series in this number, and writes on the Sphingidæ which as he says have been lately carefully classified by the Hon'ble W. Rothschild and Dr. Jordan. We have had the pleasure of dipping into these volumes These "Moths of India" are not interesting to the general reader being like dry bones with no flesh on them. It is a pity that all the information can't be put in a more palatable form. The plate to this paper is to appear in a subsequent number which is a pity.

The Birds of Travancore, by Messrs. Ferguson and T. F. Bourdillon, is as interesting as ever. The present part (part II) comprises those birds given in Blanford's III Volume of the Fauna of British India Series. We should like to have seen more light thrown on the breeding of the woodpeckers and cuckoos, especially the latter. Information is badly wanted with regard to the breeding habits of the Malabar Great Black Woodpecker (Thriponax trodgsoni, Jerdon) and it is to be hoped that Mr. Bourdillon may later on be able to enlighten us on them. We may here mention that we understand Mr. E. C. Stuart Baker is engaged upon an article in the Cuculidæ and as our knowledge on this subject is very scant we hope all ornithologists will send him any notes and specimens, both of skins and eggs, especially eggs extracted from the oviducts of the females, and which we are certain would be most gratefully acknowledged.

No mention is made of the clinging propensities of the Small Green Barbet (Thereiceryx viridis, Bodd.) as stated by Davison. It would be interesting to know if this habit has been noticed by the authors of the present paper. It is also a pity we are told nothing about the contents of the Kingfishers' stomachs, these always prove interesting. The Malabar Grey Hornbill (Lophoceros griseus, Lath.) is shown to ascend the hills 2,000 feet higher than mentioned by Blanford.

On animals there are one or two interesting articles. One is on the Habits of the Hoolock (Hylobates hoolock Harl.) by Geo. Candler, M.B., which is a reprint from the Proceedings of the Zoological Society of London. His notes were taken in Cachar where these animals are very numerous and often come to the jungles on the verge of the cultivation. He says he has never seen a wild Hoolock on the ground; we have, though very seldom. We remember once having one caught which had wandered some distance from its natural haunts and was on the ground amongst some newly planted tea. What he notes about their swimming abilities is most interesting and probably as he says is the reason for Hoolocks being confined to a comparatively limited stretch of country. As to the Hindu coolies never killing a Hoolock he is mistaken as we have had specimens brought to us shot by them. They don't care to do so any more than we do, as there is nothing so pitiful as the expression of a wounded Hoolock.

Mr. R. Lyddeker writing to the Field, a reprint of which is given in the present number, considers our thoroughbreds to belong to a species distinct from the Equus cabellus of W. Europe, as a distinct vestige of the tear gland cavity is noticeable in the skull of Bend Or; this also appears in the skull of an Indian domesticated horse sent by the late Mr. Brian Hodgson, and doesn't appear in the skulls of other horses, asses, and zebras. It would be interesting to note whether any others of our thoroughbreds had this peculiarity. Neither does he consider Equus prejewalski of Mongolia a distinct species. This is a subject that might easily be worked up, and Mr. Lyddeker would be glad to receive other skulls of Indian domesticated horses.

The miscellaneous notes are as interesting as usual and birds receive a large proportion of notice. H.H. the Rao Sahib of Cutch sends a beautiful photo of the Nest and eggs of the Common Flamingo (Phœnicopterus roseus Pall), this has been well reproduced by Mintern Brothers. He also sends an interesting note on the subject. This comes as a useful adjunct to the plates illustrating our Indian Ducks and their allies, the flamingoes being amongst the latter. We read with pleasure Lieutenant General Osborn's note on the Himalayan Nutcracker (Nucifraga hemispila, Vig.) and other nut eating birds, but are afraid we are not as yet convinced of their walnut eating propensities. When this number reached us we had the pleasure of having a conversation on this subject with a naturalist (not Mr. Osmaston) who had collected birds for many years in Sikhim and got his views on the matter. These birds (N. hemispila) are never found in Sikhim at lower elevations than 9,000 feet and the wild walnut (Inglans regia, Linn.) is seldom found so high the Forest Department and not planting it above 6,500 feet. But putting this aside, the walnuts in Sikhim are extremely hard and it takes a strong blow with a very heavy hammer to break one and when broken what does it contain, only a thin streak of woody flesh, food that no bird would appreciate. It is absolutely impossible for any bird to make a hole in the wild walnut got in Sikhim, but perhaps the kind got in Kullu is softer. If these holes are not made by a rodent as suggested by Mr. Osmaston, who is by the way a well-known ornithologist, they might, perhaps be formed by a grub which had got into the walnut before the shell hardened and which had either worked its way through or else eaten the inner coating of the shell and thus made it thinner. As nutcrackers sometimes and woodpeckers always, feed on insects, they might probably be noticed probing these holes in search of the larvæ which they contain. We make this suggestion so that ornithologist who have the opportunity may look into the matter and see if this is really the case.

We are glad to see that the Members' Roll is visibly increasing and trust that this satisfactory state of affairs will continue. There is an appeal from the Honorary Secretary of the Entomological Section for Specimens of Indian Orthoptera (grasshoppers, earwigs, crickets, cockroaches, mantises, and stick and leaf insects) and we hope many members will help in filling up the blanas in the Society's collection.

THE GAME AND FISH PRESERVATION BILL.

OOTACAMUND, 25th July.

A WELL ATTENDED Meeting of the Committee of the Nilgiri Game Association was held at the Collector's Office this afternoon, to consider the draft Bill for the Preservation and Protection of Game and Fish in British India, sent by the Government for an expression of opinion. Mr. C. M. Mullaly, the Collector, presided, and there were also present Sir Frederick Price, the Hon'ble Mr. H. P. Hodgson, Captain Beadnell, Captain Swan, Messrs. Pascoe, Edmiston Wapshare, H. Brown, G. Oakes, Hannyngton, and A. B. Jackson (Secretary).

SIR FREDERICK PRICE'S SPEECH.

After some desultory discussion the Meeting was opened and Sir Frederick Price spoke as follows:—

I consider that a general game law for India is highly necessary, not only for the protection of bird and beast for the purpose of actual sport, but also for the prevention of the wholesale destruction which, in consequence of there being no close season, goes on all the year through, of what, though it may be to some extent regarded as a luxury, is at the same time a not inappreciable source of food supply. The objections to such an enactment stated by the Government of India do not appear to me to outweigh the advantages which would be derived from it and seem to have been given an importance which they do not altogether merit. Take to begin with, the protection of crops, which I quite admit to be a cardinal necessity; although, in the case of the elephant, it has certainly, not been recognised as such by Government. If the cultivator merely protected his crops no undue or really appreciable decrease of game would be the result, but, as is well known, he does not confine himself to this or anything like it.

For the purpose of considering how far protection justifies the killing of game this must be divided into two classes—winged and four-footed. It is only the latter that does any damage to crops. The birds which injure them do not come within the category of game. The cultivator makes protection the pretext for killing so long as it is edible, everything that he can, no matter whether it is injurious to his crops or not. I can see no injustice in taking measures to put a stop to this state of things and no valid reason why, if the cultivator wishes to kill game which does no harm to his crops he should not, as the Government of India lay down that others must, take out a license for so doing, submit to the imposition of a close season and be precluded from using the many poaching devices for the capture of game birds in which he at present indulges.

Large four-footed beasts undoubtedly do much damage—antelope and pig being in this respect conspicuous—and if the ryot confined himself, within reasonable distance of his cultivation, to such of these as are destructive to his crops, there would be nothing to be said in the way of objection. He is, however, not content with this, for the gun, which he holds for the protection of his crops alone, is used by him as an engine of destruction when sitting up in the hot weather over a water hole miles away from his fields, which at that time of the year, have no crop on them, or when harrying on the sly, or at times with the connivance of Forest subordinates, Government jungles equally distant from his home. He kills regardless of age, sex or season ; as the Government of India aptly puts it. "The bird on her eggs or with chicks at foot, the gravid doe and the sucking fawn" are alike considered fair sport by him. In the case of large game where a market is handy, he makes a comfortable little income selling the flesh ; where there is none what he and his family cannot consume is wasted. I can see no hardship in putting a stop to this kind of thing. One remedy, beyond a Game Act, would be to insist on care in the issue of licenses for guns for the protection of crops. I fear that at present considerable laxity exists in this respect and that licenses are frequently given where there is not the slightest necessity for them.

As for the Forest tribes which depend on the capture of game for their subsistence (by which I understand actual food), they are confined, I believe, entirely to jungles under the control of the Forest Department and in all such tracts rules as to the protection of game and fish already exist. The Forest tribes would, therefore, apparently not be affected in any way by the introduction of the proposed game law.

As regards the objection that a game law would create new penal offences, the sections of the Bill which do this already practically exist in either the Forest law or the Nilgiri Game Act. I have never heard of these being seriously objected to, or systematically used as a vehicle for extortion. The proposed enactment merely makes general what is at present local. As far as I can remember, the existing law in this Presidency, the only new penal clause introduced by the Bill proposed by the Government of India, is Section 16. It is one which is not likely to be of extensive application and would affect only Europeans and wealthy and sporting natives. It seems desirable and I see no reasonable objection to it. With reference to the request conveyed in paragraph 4 of the Government of India letter, I give two instances with which I am acquainted of the depletion of game over large areas. One is partly within my personal knowledge ; the other entirely so. They are as follows :—

When I joined the Salem District as Sub-Collector in 1866, sambur and spotted deer abounded in the jungles along the banks of the Cauvery for many miles about the Hargynakal Falls near Pennagaram, and this tract ran back a long way from the river. At many places in it pea-fowl and jungle-fowl swarmed. Within three or four years after I came to the District, these latter were absolutely cleared out, as were the bush quail, by the professional trappers, who came down from the Mysore country and took their captures up to the market at Bangalore, about 100 miles away. During the famine of 1876-77 he practice of sitting up at night over water holes came into vogue, and this having started, the taste for killing and deer's meat was followed by the introduction of systematic shikar parties, which made their way into the jungles far from any village or cultivation and drove off to other country what they did not kill. The consequence of these constant attacks by night as well as by day on the game soon rendered what was, when I first knew it, a shikar paradise as regards deer and small game, a desert as far as shooting of any sort was concerned. The matter of the destruction of small game in this piece of country is within my personal knowledge. That of the large game is not. I, however, heard of the latter from men who used to go out with me in former days, from a friend who, tempted by its former reputation, tried the ground some three or four years after the famine, and found it an utter blank, and from another friend, who still later on had another look at it and had a like experience. The other instance is that of the tract of country between the Vandalur and Atcheravakum Stations on the South Indian Railway. This is some forty miles long by—I should say—fifteen or twenty miles wide, and consists mostly of scrub jungle, with dry and wet cultivation scattered about it. I shot over this first in the winter of 1878, not very long after the railway had been opened for traffic, and there was then all through it an abundance of partridges, hares, and bush quail (not a migrant), and they were to be found both in the fields and jungle. In about five years time the whole of this game had been cleared off. The engine drivers and railway subordinates made short work of anything near the stations and professional trappers and the ryots did the rest. When out shooting, as I constantly was, I found, both in the fields and jungle, reserved as well as open, snares and the thorn fences put up when netting hares, and I repeatedly saw live partridges and bush quail being taking into Madras for sale during the breeding season. If one asked where they were caught, the reply either was that they were obtained in a mutta or some distant jungle in South Arcot. As proof to the contrary was impossible, nothing could be done, although there was morally not a scrap of doubt as to where the birds came from

I continued shooting in this part of the District until the beginning of 1897. Attempting to beat for partridges or hares had long become useless. I tried from time to time beating grounds which formerly were safe and satisfactory finds, but as they always turned out to be practically blank, I gave it up and confined myself to snipe. To the last, however, I beat a great deal of scrub in search of these, as they take to it in large numbers towards the close of the season ; but the results, as regards other small game, were always as I have already stated. I must say that I do not quite understand what the Government of India say with regard to licenses. In the beginning of paragraph 9 of their letter they propose that a general license should be granted to have effect through the whole of British India, and they do so on the ground that "it would be intolerable for a sportsman to be compelled to apply for a new license every time that he crossed the border of a Province." But at the close of the same paragraph it remarks that a general license will not empower its holder to shoot (which I take it means kill any game whatsoever) in Government forests. The system which at present holds as regards these is that, in each District in the Presidency in which he may shoot in Government jungles the sportsman must take out and pay for fresh license—a condition of things which appears to me to be very much more intolerable than that which the Government of India seeks to guard against. As no big game, excepting antelope, is to be found in Southern India away from real forest, the whole of that which is worth a button for shikar, and is not in Zemindary or Native States, is reserved it comes practically to this that the general license will cover only small game shooting, and not even that, in the many large tracts of scrub, jungle dignified with the name of Government forests which does not and never will hold anything in the way of four-footed game larger than a hare, but which contain quite enough small game to render beating them forth attractive ; and that to shoot big game, another license, which will have to be renewed in every District to which the sportsmen go, will have to be taken out in addition to the general one Why not increase the charge for a license and make it include shooting in all Government forests or, if that is objectionable from the revenue point of view, have two classes of licenses, one for small and the other for big game and credit the whole of the latter to "Forests" on which practically devolves, and always must, the protection of large game? I consider —and I speak with no bias as I am too old to care to go out after big game—the proposal to make a distinction between the official and non-official residents in the matter of fees per head for killing certain animals, not only unwise, but unjust. In the Soudan and East Africa the circumstances of the life of an official may be such as to render such an arrangement fair enough, but in India the conditions are on a totally different footing, and I fail to see any valid ground for putting, say, the Lieutenant-General Commanding the Forces, in any way as regards shooting matter, on a better footing than the solitary planter on an outlying estate on the Annamalais. From the working of the Soudan rules, and from the great difference between the two rates of fee tenable under them, it appears to me that their real object is not to create a favoured class, but to keep within reasonable bounds the number of bag-seeking globe-trotters, who have made it a favourite hunting ground, and so preserve to a reasonable extent the shooting for residents of whom Officers are always to be considered as "approved."

To keep the bag-hunter of non-dangerous animals within bounds in India too, is, I think, quite fair, and I suggest, therefore, that there should be only two classes —residents and non-residents—and that to prevent evasion the word "resident" should be defined by law. I do not feel sure that it would be unjust to charge the shooting visitor, as is done in Ceylon, as regards fishing, Rs. 40 instead of Rs. 20 for a license. He comes merely to shoot, he is only a bird of passage, he can afford to pay, and there seems no reason why he should not contribute something more than residents to the protection of the game to destroy which is his sole object in visiting the country. But although I hold what may be regarded as a selfish view as to the treatment of the shooting visitor from other countries, I do not quite see how, when the killing of dangerous wild beasts is spoken of as "a destruction which we are doing our best to promote by the offer of a reward" demanding a heavy fee—for that alone would be a deterrent—from the visitor who takes his sport in the form of destroying tigers, can be justified. As far as the principle of the clearing out of these brutes is concerned, it is quite immaterial by whom they are killed, so long as many as possible are disposed of. I am quite in accord with the view that when it can fairly be done a curb should be put upon the sporting globe-trotter ; but I fail to see how one can justly reward A and fine B for each doing an act which Government avowedly seeks to promote. Bag-shooting for tigerstis, I may observe, not confined in India to visitors alone.

I am decidedly of opinion that any Game Act for this country should make sitting up over water holes to shoot game—which is a common and most destructive form of poaching—a punishable offence. I do not see why the fact that the offence would be one committed at night would make the fabrication of false charges any more easy than in the case of several other acts, most frequently done under the cover of darkness, which are at present punishable offences. One cannot condemn a law merely because under it false charges might arise. If one did there would be no penal law for India.

I do not consider that it would be expedient, without further enquiry, to impose an export duty upon horns, skins, and other trophies of games. What go out from here are, I am inclined to believe, almost universally the trophies obtained by the persons exporting them. It may, however, be otherwise elsewhere, for I saw in a recently published book, "Leaves from an Indian Jungle" in a chapter headed "By the Camp Fire," a detailed account of wholesale and systematic destruction of game for the sole purpose of supplying the trophy market. The taking of eggs of game birds, excepting under a special permit from the chief local authority, should certainly be prohibited. The practice as regards eggs large enough to be eaten is not at all uncommon.

I doubt very much if a special Game Officer would be of any real use ; I would much rather see matters managed by the head of each District, with whom the material can be found, a consultative and advisory body of local sportsmen, and the District Forest Officer as Honorary Secretary. The plan has, on these hills, been on the whole very successful, and to its existence is undoubtedly owing the very much improved condition, during recent years, of shooting on the Nilgiris. It would be impossible to find one man with any real knowledge of the natives from Peshawar to Cape Comorin or in sympathy with every class of them. Even if such a person should be discovered, he would cost a good deal and his inspections spread as they would have to be over all British India, would, as regards each individual place, necessarily be few and far between, and then could not be by any means complete. I would give local management a trial and leave for further consideration the question of whether overlooking by a costly official is necessary. I think that the revenue from licenses will be very much better devoted, for the present at any rate, to the protection of game, which will require, if it is to be at all effective, a special establishment, and to the re-stocking of depleted tracts, and I consider that the funds raised from this source should be spent in the local area from which it is obtained. In conclusion I will offer one or two remarks on the Bill.

Section 6 provides only for closing for part of a year, i.e., an annual close season. Circumstances might however arise which rendered it desirable to close streams flowing through hilly tracts or the head waters of a river for a year or more at a time. For example, what has been done here now—introducing the Rainbow Trout which has been found so successful in Ceylon. I do not think that the provisions of Section 7 are sufficiently preventive. It appears to me—as there are many places which although not Municipalities or Cantonments, are of some size—that the power to prohibit should be made general.

I am afraid that the second proviso in Section 10 will lead to a good deal of poaching, which it will be difficult to check. I suppose, nowever, that something of the sort is necessary, although I cannot see how it can be satisfactorily worked.

I think as regards the importation of plumages, the words "for sale" should be inserted after "importation." It is, I believe, this alone that it is desired to check.

I would suggest that in Section 15 (b) and (c) the imposition of both imprisonment and fine should not be made as they are imperative, and that these clauses should be altered so as to allow of the infliction of imprisonment or fine, or both.

Mr. Edmiston thought that Section 13 of the Bill would affect the revenue of the Nilgiri Game Association.

The Hon'ble Mr Hodgson said he thought that Rs. 20 for a license was too small, and suggested Rs. 30 at the least, that would make the fee the same as the Association charged.

Mr. Jackson pointed out that the general license provided for under the new Bill did not empower its holder to shoot in Government Forest. It would be necessary to take out another license for shooting in Forest and a separate license would be required for each District. The Association would not, therefore, be affected

THE HON'BLE MR. HODGSON'S SPEECH.

The Hon'ble Mr. H. P. Hodgson then made the following observations on the Bill :—

With regard to paragraph 4 of Mr. Risley's letter regarding the extent to which wild birds and wild life have been destroyed anyone with knowledge of the country extending for a period of years, and taking an interest in the same must have noticed the gradual diminution, amounting in many cases to practical extermination which have been going on, I would instance one tract where, within my own knowledge, this has taken place, viz., the valley of the Bhowani river extending up the river from Mettapollium to Attapadi, a distance of over 30 miles When I first visited the valley some 25 years ago, it was well stocked with cheetah and sambur, and of small game, jungle-fowl and spur-fowl were plentiful. Now there is hardly a living thing left, the big game having been shot down and the small game netted and trapped. Here this cannot be said to be due to the extension of cultivation which has always been and still is inconsiderable, the patches being small and widely separated. It is undoubtedly due to shooting with guns which have been indiscriminately issued nominally for the protection of crops, at all times and seasons, and without regard to age or sex and to continuous netting and trapping throughout the breeding season as well as during the rest of the year. It is contended that such killing has been done by the natives for their subsistence, then it is clear that their methods are improvident, and that they have destroyed their own source of supply, but I do not believe for a moment that the people have benfited by the food supply thus obtained. On the contrary they waste much time in the pursuit and capture of game which should have been more profitably employed in work. The above applies to other localities which I could name, viz., large areas in south east Wynaad, where the Chetties with the guns taken out for the "protection" of crops have destroyed every living thing, and around the Badaga villages on the Nilgiri plateau. Then as regards paragraph 7—as the Law is to be for the most part merely an "empowering" instrument this should go far to satisfy the cavillers, who are certain to come forward, urging the infringement it will bring on established rights, etc., as the provision can be modified to suit local areas according to their several conditions and requirements. But I can hardly endorse the remark "that in the case of Forest tribes (whose supply of food is endangered by the diminution of game) must be provided for by special local exemptions" or the paragraph, immediately following referring to the "professional" shikari. If the game supply is necessary to the one as a means of subsistence, and the other as a means of livelihood, it is the more imperative that in their own interests the supply should be saved from the extermination which must be the result if allowed to follow their own methods without legalised instruction nor, can I see why the native gentleman in India should be allowed a partridge for his dinner, without regard as to whether the said partridge has been taken off its roost or from its young, more than any other gentleman in this or any other country. I quite concur with the three cardinal rules, which are to be the leading principles on which the Bill is to be founded, provided that the use and not the abuse of them is enforced. That the planter as well as the native cultivator will expect to have unrestricted powers for the protection of his crops is undoubted, and is only reasonable, but let there be ample provision from punishment for abuse of these privileges or the proposed Bill will be ineffective over large areas where it is most urgently needed. It is quite true, as stated in paragraph 4 of Mr. Risley's letter, "that almost every gun which is held under license, for whatever purpose the license may have been granted or is owned by a person, who is exempted from the necessity for a license is used more or less commonly for the destruction of game. Guns nominally for the preservation of crops have been issued in enormous numbers, without discrimination, by Tahsildars, often to people who own no land, and in places where the game is practically already extinct, and are used in following game in the jungles and in places far removed from the licensees' homes. I consider, therefore, that while every ryot should be allowed a gun to protect his crops, he should show first that such protection is required, and, secondly, he should use the gun only on the land where the damage is being done: I submit that it is only by killing the actual animal doing the damage that the crop is really protected, and that the going into the adjoining jungle and killing any animal he chances to come across it is to the last degree unlikely the ryot will stop the depredation to his own particular field. It is well known that out of a large number of animals in the forest it is only individuals which will be bold enough to enter cultivation or approach human habitation and to effect relief it is these particular individuals which must be killed. If this is done I consider that the powers proposed to be given to local Governments in paragraph 8 of Mr. Risley's letter are satisfactory. Then regarding paragraph 9 it would seem advisable that a license under the Act to kill game should, as suggested, have effect throughout India to avoid inconvenience when used in different districts; but I consider that the proposed fee of Rs. 20 is far too small, and that it should be at least Rs. 30 and preferably Rs. 40 or 50. It must be remembered that not only does the license carry the right to kill game, but the game also is provided for the sportsman, insomuch as it conveys the right to shoot over immense areas of Government waste in which the game will be preserved. In England and most other countries the game has to be paid for quite apart from the license. I entirely approve of the proposal to limit the numbers of heads to be killed, under each license of certain kinds of large game, the same to be decided upon local conditions. In paragraph 10 the power to levy an extra fee from visitors to India is quite fair. It is done now by the Ceylon Fishing Club, as in the rivers stocked with imported trout, the fee for the season being Rs. 60 to a resident, and Rs. 120 to a visitor. With regard to the proposed division of sportsmen into three classes, it is in my opinion quite unfair to the "other residents," and I see no reason why they should be classed differently to "natives of the country and residents in India in the service of the Crown." Surely the European resident in India, whether engaged in commerce, agriculture, or any other business, who spends the best part of his life in the country, and has probably vested interest in it, is entitled to at least the same consideration in the matter of sport and amusements as the resident in the service of the Crown, who is paid by the country to reside in it. I consider such a distinction would be to the last degree unfair and unpopular, and should not be made. I therefore propose that the classes be divided into No. 1, to include the proposed Nos. 1 and 2, and No. 2, the proposed No. 3. Regarding paragraph 4 I am sure that protection of fish in the rivers and streams of South India is an urgently needed measure, not merely for the protection of the sport of fishing, but in the real interests of the natives themselves as a protection of an important food supply. The native is absolutely improvident in his methods of fish capture if left to himself, and I can speak to the damage done in that fine fishing river, the Bhavani, within my own experience. I first visited the river with Mr. Thomas [the author of the "Rod in India"] in 1882 and continued to fish it every year, often several times in the year, up to 1898, when I discontinued my visits as the fishing had been yearly falling off till it was no longer worth doing. In the early days I often killed 8 to 10 Mahseer in a day, ranging from 10 to 40 lbs. with occasional fish weighing 60 to 70 lbs., and Carnatic Carp could be caught in large numbers with a fly. Murrell and other river fish were also plentiful. By degrees the fishing became worse till my last visit, when two rods fishing for five days accounted for only one Mahseer of 11 lbs. weight, and other fish were less in proportion. This deplorable state of affairs was due to my certain knowledge to the use of dynamite, of fixed weirs, of night lines and poisoning the pools, and the damage was chiefly done between the months of February and June, when the water is very low, and every sort of poaching can be carried on with the best results. To remedy this the use of dynamite, fixed weirs and poison should be absolutely prohibited, and fishing with nets restricted to a certain sized mesh. From the 1st February to 1st July fishing should be restricted to the use of hand rods and lines only, by which means an ample supply of fishing for food purposes could be caught, or the river closed entirely from the 15th February to the 15th June. The description of the waters it is proposed to preserve should, I think, be sufficient if read with Section 6 Sub-Section 2 of the Bill, Regarding paragraph 14 (a) the prohibition of sitting up over water holes should certainly in my opinion be a condition. It is to the last degree a destructive, unsportsmanlike, and cruel way of killing game at a season when the scarcity of water compels animals to seek the few remaining pools in spite of the presence of the poacher, and I do not see why the fabrication of false charges need be anticipated more in this than any other form of poaching rather the contrary, as to be successful would necessitate sitting for perhaps hours in the same spot, and would, therefore, increase the chance of the poacher being caught in the act. (b) An export duty on horns, skins, and other trophies of game including the skins of dangerous-wild beasts, is I think very desirable. (c) I regard the protection of all birds' eggs, at all times, as imperative. An immense number of these are destroyed annually by cattle boys and people cutting grass and wood, out of sheer wantonness without any profit to themselves. With regard to the treatment of the revenue from license fees, it is to be hoped that in this District at least they will be permitted, as heretofore, to be paid in for the use of the Game Association. They are the only means of revenue by which the game watchers can be paid, and the introduction of game birds and fish can be carried out. I would suggest that in all Districts where the residents are sufficiently interested in the preservation and introduction of game to form themselves into Associations similar to the one that has existed on the Nilgiris for the past 25 years, and that such Associations be recognised by Government and receive some support by the allotment of such proportion of the revenue raised by license fees as Government may decide in each case may be necessary. This would stimulate the interest of the public in the preservation of game and assist in the prevention of infringement of the law. With regard to the employment of a special officer, the immense area to come under the Bill, the varied conditions of the people, their language, manners, and customs the great variety of game and difference of their habits of breeding, shedding their horns, etc., which often differ entirely even in the north and south of this Presidency, would make such an appointment of doubtful utility. I think the objects of the Bill would be better served by interesting the residents (native and European) in the various local areas by encouraging and subsidising them, as before suggested, to form Associations to be worked by Committees under the Collector or Commissioner, as the case might be. I need not say on its general principles I welcome the Bill as a long wished-for measure of protection to the game beasts and birds of India, which has only just come in time to arrest the universal destruction, and in many places closely approaching extermination, of Indian game.

Mr. Jackson said he had received a letter from Mr. Longmore opposing the Bill altogether, and a proxy from Mr. Kinloch also opposing the Bill. Mr. Longmore's letter was partly read, but as the members were agreed that he had written it under a misapprehension, it was not finished.

Captain Swan said the subject was a very large one, and suggested that a Sub Committee be formed which should draw up a report to be discussed at a General Meeting

Mr. Edmiston seconded.

The Chairman said that the Planter's Association had asked to be allowed until the 1st September to send in its opinion on the Bill, but he thought the Game Association Resolution should be forwarded to Government before then. What was wanted was a Resolution on various points of the Bill.

Mr. Hodgson said that if it was the intention of the Government of India to include the Wild Birds Protection Law in this Bill he thought it should be made clearer.

Mr. Edmiston said that special stress should be laid on the waste of fish that took place. His experience was that every native fisherman, after selecting from the fish he had caught what he wanted, left the remainder on the bank and never in any case returned the small fish to the water.

A long and somewhat heated discussion followed with regard to a suggestion of Mr. Edmiston that a special European officer should be appointed for the District, to be paid partly by the Association and partly by Government. In his letter Mr. Edmiston offered himself for the post he suggested, and said that if the Association was prepared to pay what it could afford, he had very good authority for saying that the Government would give it help.

The Chairman pointed out that this had nothing to do with the subject before the Meeting. The Bill before them referred to the whole of India, whereas Mr. Edmiston's letter, he understood, referred to an application for the appointment of himself as a special Game Officer for this District. That was a question for the consideration of the Committee at another time.

Mr. Edmiston said that Mr. Hodgson and Sir F. Price had both opposed the appointment of a special Game Officer, and he thought that if their opinion only was sent to Government, it would be understood that the Association generally vetoed such an appointment.

Sir F. Price said that his remarks applied to the suggestion to appoint a special officer for the whole of India. They were not met to consider the question of the appointment of an officer to this District.

Mr. Edmiston said that he was in favour of appointing special officers in each Presidency say two for each, or even more. It was madness to expect one man to be able to look after all India.

Mr. Hodgson said that no such thing as a veto on Mr. Edmiston's proposal was intended by his remarks, and he had not the intention of making his remarks as the subject of special Game Officers personal in any way.

Mr. Edmiston said he did not suggest that anything personal was thought of, but he was of opinion that if the remarks of Sir Frederick Price and Mr. Hodgson only were sent to Government, it would be thought that the Association did not approve of anything like his proposal. He insisted that his proposal should be considered, but it was pointed out that this was a matter that did not have any bearing on the Bill now under consideration.

A good deal of discussion followed and Sir Frederick Price said that he could not serve on any Sub Committee unless the point raised by Mr. Edmiston were settled by the Meeting, who might instruct the Sub-Committee as to what were their views.

Finally nothing was done in the matter, and the following Sub-Committee was appointed to prepare a Resolution which is to be submitted at an early date. Mr. C. M. Mullaly, the Collector, Mr. G. Oakes, the Hon'ble Mr. H. P. Hodgson, W. L. Edmiston, and Mr. A. B. Jackson.

The Meeting then terminated.

A KHEDDAH.

A FEW years ago it was my good fortune to fall in with a "kheddah" or elephant hunt. It was the latter half of Christmas week, the climate was perfect, the scenery beautiful, and the company of ladies and gentlemen of good size and cheery. The camp was pitched on the banks of one of the principal rivers in the country. Not far away to the north the outer ranges of the Himalayas stood out in bold relief, and at some distance from the foot of the hills the river emerged and wound its way through forest-clad banks, looking in its higher stretches, like a broad silver band. Rapids and pools followed one another in tolerably quick succession. Right underneath the camp lay a large, deep, broad pool, with water as clear as crystal, in which shoals of enormous Mahseer could be seen swimming leisurely about during the day. On the other side of the river, opposite the camp a forest of heterogeneous trees, brushwood and grass stretched inland, until it met the western extremities of the Garhwal hills, which, thickly clad with sal trees, formed a sombre background to the picture In those hills the wild elephants, some of which were shortly to be captured, roamed about at ease.

The camp was, by no means, a small one. Besides the kheddah party there were several other smaller parties; all encamped in the same spacious mango tope, enjoying their Christmas week under conditions of climate and scenery as perfect, probably, as any in the world. Some fished, some shot, others just "lounged about in a jolly long laze," after the fashion of the subaltern who found life at Perim so pleasant! Everyone was in excellent humour, and when an elephant hunt was on, those running it, very kindly, asked as many of us as wished to see the tamasha, to accompany them. Very nearly 100 elephants were engaged in the operations. A considerable number of these were trained to pursue and capture their wild brethren, others were for purposes of escorting the prisoners into camp, others for miscellaneous duties. This great array of kathis, with their army of attendants, were in two camps—one some distance to the south of our camp, on the same side of the river, the other across the river, very nearly opposite elephant camp No 1 Captured elephants were kept in camp No. 2. A herd of wild elephants was known to be in the thick sal forest over the river. Trackers were out every day, trying to locate them. For two or three days no news came in, but, at last, a more than usual bustle in the camp about 9 A.M. betokened something satisfactory. And sure enough it was so. The herd had been marked down and a "kheddah" was to take place. Everyone in camp, who was able or willing to go, was very kindly, provided with a seat on an elephant and shortly after 10 A.M. or so the party left the camp. A large number of elephants fell in as we went past elephant camp No. 1, and the passage of the river was a fine spectacle, as the line of quite 70 elephants moved in single file slowly through the water. The river was deep, the current stronger than was apparent to the eye, and the bed strewn with slippery boulders. It was interesting to watch the kathis working their way across.

No animal would put his foot down until he had made certain it was on firm ground: now and again one of the smaller kathis would find the current a bit too strong and would either lurch slightly inwards and put the whole weight of his body against the current, or else would move at an angle to the stream, so as to reduce the area of pressure against its body. Thus, in a slow and stately manner, the crossing of the river was effected. Something under a mile from the river, we came to elephant camp No. 2. Here a few elephants, which had already been captured, were tethered securely to trees. Finding incessant struggles to get free both wearisome and useless, they were, slowly, resigning themselves to their fate. As we went past No. 2 camp, a few more elephants joined the procession, which now moved forward in a single file to the hunting grounds. There must have been quite 90 (ninety) elephants moving along, one after the other, and it was a fine spectacle to see the long line zigzagging through forest, or along isolated patches of cultivation, or moving straight along some open glade. At last, close on midday, the forest, where the wild elephants were, was reached: a momentary halt was called and then the long line of elephants moved slowly along a forest road, with dense sal, elephant creepers, and brushwood on each side. We proceeded along the forest road for some distance and then, quite quietly, an evolution was performed whereby the long line split up into three sections, each section wheeled to the left and entered the forest in three parallel lines. Slowly each line moved forward and the occasional breaking of a branch, alone, disturbed the slumbers of the dense forest.

And here it becomes necessary to describe the organisation for the capturing of the wild kathis. At the head of each of the three sections came the mugreewallas, viz., the elephants which did the actual chasing and capturing of the wild ones. There were some 10 or 12 of these in each section tin. Next came some pad elephants to assist the mugreewallas in securing an elephant when it had been noosed, and lastly, came the spectators on pad elephants. Each section was complete in itself: the mugreewallas, however, claim a special notice. The elephants selected for this duty are highly trained and fleet of foot, and are driven by "mahouts" who must be men absolutely devoid of fear, with eyes like hawks and the agility of cats. The "mahout" sits close to the withers of the animal, with his feet in loops, which hang behind the elephant's ears, and which answer the purposes of stirrups. In the centre of the animal's back is fastened a small pad, some 2 or 2½ feet square, the sole encumbrance in the way of "furniture," on which is placed the noose, neatly coiled up. To the pad is also attached a loop, which the man, who sits on the tail of the elephant, and who gets every inch of pace out of the beast by beating it on the root of the tail with the "mugree," a heavy wooden club studded with nails, hangs on to for all he is worth. This man, like the "mahout" must be devoid of fear and equally sharp-sighted and agile. His seat depends entirely on the firmness of his grip on the loop, assisted by as much additional purchase as he can get by putting his legs underneath the rope which is looped round the elephant's tail. Thus, on each chasing elephant, there is the "mahout," the mugreewalla or club man, after whom the chasing elephant is named, and the small pad with the noose sloop. What the "mahout" has to hang on to, besides his "stirrups," was not clear—apparently nothing. Once the chase starts there is no stopping—bar accidents—unless the quarry makes good its escape or is captured. Trees, creepers, in fact every king, has to be dodged as best as possible and as a wild elephant, which is being pursued, moves along at a pace which is perfectly astounding, those on the chasing elephant get their money's worth in danger and excitement at any rate! More than one sahib of the party did muggeewalla; whenever a hunt was on, and the bruised condition of their arms and legs testified to the post being no sinecure! In fact how any one, on a chasing elephant, ever came out of the "kheddah" whole seems a marvel.

There were no signs of animal life in that dense forest. As we moved along a wild looking individual, armed with a blunderbuss, would occasionally appear from behind some cover and complacently watch the elephants moving by. This was one of the stops, who, by firing off their guns when the wild elephants were afoot, prevented them from breaking out of the forest. The three parallel lines of elephants worked well together and we had, perhaps, been in the forest half an hour or so, when a din arose which would have awakened the dead! A small herd of elephants was joined close between two of the parallel lines and the fun commenced. The trumpeting of elephants, the shouting of "mahouts," the crashing of branches, and the banging of the blunderbusses used by the stops simply rent the air! I was on a pad elephant, with another spectator! To our right a small elephant was quickly surrounded and caught, and beyond that again a hot pursuit was in progress, the sounds of which died away in the distance. Close to our left a fine, sturdy, young, tusker broke and fled at an appalling pace, hotlypursued by a muggeewalla. Runaway looomotives and would not have been in it in that chase! Pursuers pursued went crashing through the forest and were very soon and lost to sight. The tusker succeeded in making good his escape. Shortly after the tusker broke cover, a sturdy, half-grown, female, which had been noosed was seen making off at a good pace, apparently dragging the muggeewalla along. Away went two or three other elephants to assist and soon captured the runaway. My companion and myself just came up in time to see the noose secured. By this time the three parallel lines, which originally entered the forest, were completely broken up. Elephants had, apparently, been pursued in all directions. By degrees the "din of war" died out, from all points of the compass, muggeewallas and others commenced to appear, the "prisoners"—the sturdy female and two small ones—were collected and the procession started for home. It was interesting to see the "prisoners" being taken along. The noosing elephant, with the noose still round the neck of each captive, led the way. Two "policemen" were told off to escort each captured kathi and prevent it from getting obstreperous. Sometimes a captive would stop dead and try to break away, whereupon the "policemen" would quietly lean to and gently, but firmly, push the beast along, until they got it into a proper frame of mind. The journey back was performed without any mishap. On arrival at elephant camp No. 2, the captives were speedily secured to trees, the work being very neatly done by trained members of the native staff, with the assistance of tame elephants. It was curious to see the antics of the newly-captured ones, after they had been made hard and fast. They did their utmost to break the ropes by which they were tied, but all to no purpose and, no doubt, they, like those which had been captured before, resigned themselves to their fate after a few days of fertile struggle. The captive secured, we re-crossed the river and were back in camp before the afternoon was far advanced, and thus ended a very interesting and exciting day.

FISHING IN KODAIKANAL.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE INDIAN FIELD."

SIR,—In answer to your correspondent regarding fishing at Kodaikanal, the lake still swarms with lesser Basils, which have doubtless fed and thrived on the Carp and Marseer he referred to. Beyond fishing with bent pins, a favourite amusement among the fair sex—fishing does not exist.

THE RECENT SIMLA RACES.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE INDIAN FIELD."

SIR,—I desire to draw your attention to the manner in which the Consolation Race in the recent Simla Races was run. I had a pony in that race, the distance being 2½ furlongs, and thinking I had a good chance I backed my pony with confidence; but on going to the paddock what was my surprise to find that the race was to be run in "heats." I think the Honorary Secretary should have informed the owners before they backed their ponies, that the race was to be run in such a manner, as it is obvious that a pony, which may run well once may quite probably be unable to do anything like so well in a second or third attempt the same day. As there were three objections to this race put in the following day, I did not think it necessary to make a fourth, not thinking for a moment that these owners would withdraw their objections. I subsequently put in my own objection, only to be met by a reference to the Rules of Racing regarding a time limit to objections. It appears to me, and my view is corroborated by experts in Racing Law, to whom I have referred, that in any case the Stewards of the Calcutta Turf Club have no option but to declare the race in question null and void, as it is against the rules of racing, which do not provide for a race being run in "heats," and that they are bound to do this on receipt of the Stewards' report of the races irrespective of any objection having been made.

W. E. B.

[This point, we believe, has been ventilated in other papers. It appears to us very simple. The Simla Stewards were wrong in running this race in heats. There is no special mention in either the C. T. C. or Jockey Club Rules about a race being run in heats: but no programme is sanctioned which proposes any race to be run in heats. And this is the only prohibition against it. Obviously our correspondent's objection was an afterthought, and as it was clean out of time, was very properly overruled by the Simla Stewards. The race has been declared null and void. ED.]

NATURALISTS' STRAY NOTES.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE INDIAN FIELD."

SIR,—I have read the Rev. Mr. S. A. Hauxwell's letter in your issue of July 14th instant, anent black panthers, and I can corroborate what he says. Some time in 1876 or 1877, Mr Lowis, the then Commissioner of Chittagong, shot a black panther behind the then Telegraph Office of Chittagong. I was present at the time, but not lucky enough to get a shot. One of the cubs was yellow and two black, or vice versâ, I am not quite sure which. The father who was seen, but escaped, was of the ordinary variety. Some of the tribes of the Hill Tracts say that though when in a free state the melanoid male will only consort with a melanoid female, yet the latter, like most of her sex, is not so particular, and preferring a wider range of choice, will take up with the yellow variety. In an article of mine in a contemporary I have called leopards by two names. The tree leopard (or panther) and the grass leopard or panther and I described their differences. One point is that the grass leopard has a bony ridge along the top of the hinder part of his skull. I wish some of your readers could inform me if the melanoid variety has this ridge on its skull. Its presence or absence, if a considerable number of skulls could be cited would go far to prove or disprove the question of inter-breeding. Does the melanoid female consort with either variety or with only one. If she only chooses one kind it would help to strengthen the argument for two distinct varieties of leopards.

In 1878 or 1879 the Mughs at Maniksurri, about six miles below Rungamutti, the headquarters of the Chittagong Hill Tracts, declared that there was a black tiger knocking about. I have also met Quamis on the upper Songoo river who said they had seen a black tiger. If there are such things they must be a freak and that being so goes far to prove the melanoid leopard is just a freak also.

"A shipment of well-bred horses and ponies carefully selected by Mr. Bell, the shipper and owner of last year's Civil Service Cup Winner, 'Idlebell' has just arrived, and include the following Race Ponies:—

'My Bell' late 'Myamea,' 'Bellis,' late 'Chynas' and 'Esther.'

"'Also the famous horses 'Bellroy' and 'Wee Macgregor.'

"Next shipment arrives in October and as many of the animals of this shipment are to order, intending buyers, to avoid disappointment, should write their requirements. This will not bind them in any way.

"The Sydney Referee, of 29th June last, states that Myamea' represents top form in the 14-0 class at the present, time."

Third Day, Thursday, 28th July 1904.

THE third day opened with fair weather and very luckily the rain kept off until just after the last event when a heavy shower came down. Consequent upon the success of the Meeting the Committee have decided to run an extra day on Saturday. There was another large attendance of all the elite of Hyderabad and Secunderabad Society and the Middlesex Regiment were "At Home" in the reserved enclosure, where amongst other distinguished personages were Prince Shahab Zadahk (the Nizam's son) the Hon'ble Colonel Sir David Barr, British Resident, Brigadier-General Sir James Willcocks, and most of the military officers of the two garrisons.

The racing was fair. The pencillers O'Brien, Artie Tully, and Salamat did a fairly good business, but the totalisator was not at all popular The following are the results:—

THE RESIDENCY PURSE.—Rs. 150 and Rs. 50 to the second. 1 mile.
For Horses Weights—Handicap.
Major Logan-Home's Corrie Roy, 11st ... Meah Jan 1
Capt Plunkett's Gun Metal, 9st 3lbs (car 9st 10½lbs) ... ... Mr Stewart 2
Mr Walker's Impolita, 9st ... ... Capt Harding 0

Gun Metal cut away, followed by Corrie Roy and Impolita last. At the half mile Corrie Roy closed up to Gun Metal and both raced abreast to the straight. At the distance Corrie Roy came away and won by three quarters of a length; half a length between second and third. Time—1min. 53⅕secs.

BETTING: 5 to 2 on Corrie Boy, 4 to 1 Gun Metal, 5 to 1 Impolita, 6 to 1 Shubnum.

THE SUBALTERNS' CUP.—Rs. 150, and Rs. 50 to the second. Presented by Br.-Genl. Sir James Willcocks, K. C. M. G., D. S. O., For bonâ-fide Polo ponies the property of Subalterns' officers of the garrison who have played Polo regularly up to within one week of the race meeting that have not cost more than Rs. 1,000 to be ridden by members of the Gymkhana. 4 furlongs
Mr Moir's Delta, 10st 11lbs ... ... Capt Darley 1
Mr Stewart's Welcome, 10st 5lbs ... Owner 2
Mr Bellingham's Michael, 7st 7lbs (car, 9st) ... ... Owner 3
Mr Skaife's Kaiser Roum, 7st 3lbs (car, 9st 11lbs) .. .. Captn Roome 0

There were four false starts. Welcome then made the running attended by Delta to the four furlongs when Delta drew away and won by a length; a head between second and third. Time—56⅖secs.

BETTING: 5 to 2 on Delta, 5 to 4 Welcome, 6 to 1 Michael, 8 to 1 Kaiser Roum.

STEWARDS' PLATE. Rs. 600, of which Rs. 100 goes to the second and Rs. 50 to the third. For Ponies 14-1 and under. Weights—Handicap. 7 furlongs.
Mr Nazir Beg's Investment, 10st 13lbs ... Mirza 1
Capt Darley and Mr Nelson's Felicity, 11st Capt Darley 2
Mr Wormald's Ivan, 9st ... ... Capt Harding 3
Capt Barr's Mana, 9st 3lbs ... ... Meah Jan 0
Mr Bett's Marjory, 8st 12lbs ... ... Owner 0
Mr Walker's Rob Roy, 8st ... .. Rajoo 0

A good start. Investment getting well in front followed by Mana and the remainder at his heels. At five furlongs Investment had increased the lead by two lengths, the remainder tailing off. At three furlongs Felicity managed to get up to Investment and challenged, but could make no impression and Investment won by a length; a head between second and third. Time—1min. 41⅗secs.

BETTING: Evens Felicity and Investment, 6 to 1 the others.

THE LAIK-UD-DOWLA CUP. Rs. 150, and Rs. 50 to the second. For Arabs and C.-B. Ponies 14-1 and under. Weights Handicap. 5 furlongs.

Extra Day, Saturday, 30th July 1904.

THE most successful race meeting held for years in Secunderabad concluded to-day. Thanks to the excellent working committee every detail throughout the meeting went off without a hitch, there was not a single complaint from any quarter, a fact which augurs well for future meetings. It has been decided to hold another small meeting in November and a big meet this time next year. The thanks of the public, owners and riders are due to Captain Roome, the Honorary Secretary, who has done yeoman service for the races; and no less are thanks due to the British Resident who took a very active interest, all through the meeting. To-day's races were somewhat marred by a very heavy shower at 2 o'clock, but the sky cleared at 3 P.M enabling the races to go on, although the ground was spongy, causing several spills at the outset. The 4th Hussars were "At Home" in the reserved enclosure and their band played during the afternoon. To-day's programme included a very sporting match between Captain Darley's Felicity and Captain Barr's Mana for Rs. 500 a side. Details:—

(Winner traind by G. Dally.)

BETTING: 7 to 1 agst. The Scout, 8 to 1 Pierrot, 10 to 1 Airly, 11 to 1 Sir Peter Teazle, 12 to 1 each Quo Vadis, Antique, Kudos, 14 to 1 each Acrobat, Bellis, 20 to 1 each Corral, Matong, The Merry Prince, Zircon, 25 to 1 each Cynic, Sarasati, 50 to 1 Mercury.

Prompt to time the barrier went up to a good start, of which Quo Vadis, Kudos, Acrobat, and Sarasati were the first to take advantage, while Zircon was last to get going. As they moved past the judge's box Acrobat shot to the front and led. Sarasati, The Scout, Quo Vadis, Airly, The Merry Prince, and Matong, while Cynic, Antique, and Zircon formed the rear division. As they turned out of the straight Sarasati ranged up alongside Acrobat, the pair being three lengths in front of The Scout, Kudos, Airly, The Merry Prince, and Pierrot, after whom came Matong, Corral, and Quo Vadis. Racing along the river side Sarasati took charge from Kudos, The Scout, Airly, and Acrobat, and they were followed by The Merry Prince, Corral, and Quo Vadis, while Cynic and Antique brought up the rear. As they neared the bridge The Scout ran past Sarasati and Kudos, who were succeeded by Corral, Airly, Acrobat, The Merry Prince, Matong, and Quo Vadis, with Cynic last, but as they swept along the back stretch Corral shot through, and at the abattoirs was five lengths clear from The Scout and Sarasati, who were closely attended by Kudos, The Merry Prince, Airly, Quo Vadis, Matong, and Bellis, with Acrobat at the head of the others, and the last pair were Mercury and Cynic. Coming round the turn Sarasati ran up level with Corral, and they were closely followed by The Merry Prince, The Scout Kudos, Quo Vadis, and Acrobat. Sarasati swung into the straight just in advance of Corral, The Merry Prince, The Scout, Bellis, and Kudos, while Acrobat came down over the first hurdle in the straight, and the second brought Matong to the grass. Sarasati drew clear as they neared the judge's box, and passed that point four lengths from Corral who was two in front of The Scout, The Merry Prince, and Kudos who were followed by Airly, Sir Peter Teazle, Antique, Quo Vadis, Bellis, Pierrot, Zircon, and Mercury in order named, with Cynic last. Without change, they turned out of the straight and Sarasati showed the way along the river side well clear from The Scout, Kudos, Airly, Pierrot, Bellis, and Corral, who were succeeded by Quo Vadis, and The Merry Prince When they reached the bridge Kudos ranged up level with Sarasati, the pair being three lengths in front of The Scout, Airly, Pierrot, Bellis, The Merry Prince, Antique, and Quo Vadis, while Mercury was tailed off last. Without change they ran along the back stretch, and at the abattoirs Sarasati, Kudos, Airly, and The Scout were almost on terms four lengths clear from Bellis and Pierrot, then after a four lengths, gap came The Merry Prince and Antique, with the other strung out. At the next hurdle Sarasati was showing slightly in front of Airly, Kudos, Bellis and Pierrot, with The Merry Prince next. Sarasati came round the turn with Airly and Kudos at his heels, then after three lengths' gap came The Scout and Bellis six lengths in front of The Merry Prince, Antique, and Sir Peter Teazle. Without material change they turned into the straight, and Sarasati drawing out crossed the last hurdle a couple lengths from Kudos, Airly, Bellis, and Pierrot. Sarasati then went away and won easily by three lengths from Bellis, who beat Pierrot by a length and a half for second place, Kudos was half a length off fourth, followed at short intervals by The Merry Prince, Airly, The Scout, Sir Peter Teazle, then after a gap of a dozen lengths came Quo Vadis, Antique, Mercury, Zircon, and Cynic, with Corral a bad last. Time—5mins. 56secs.

CALCUTTA COURSE CHAT.

LAST Thursday, owing to the rain, was productive of nothing of a very important character, the course being closed and gallops confined to the open stretch, and twice round canters with here and there a finish, separated under the headings of fast, medium, and slow.

The very first out—as is their wont—were Coal Queen (Howie) and Regan on Pat C., who smartly did their little bit, the Queen in an attractive manner. She is a very nice mover, and the way she strides along portends something to do for those who are to take her number down, at her initial debut on the Monsoon course.

Hello (Regan), Bell Brand (Howie), and Thunder Queen (native), went past fairly fast together. Then trotting and cantering round they came in a buster across the open, Bell Brand in command.

Norman and Mademoiselle did a nice canter, and Rosalea and Not Yet put in an appearance later, footing it as best they could in the heavy going. Smallman's were all being exercised, Bellmeath and Planet were sent along a bit by Mr. Dudley, and W. White, and as the former has been doing no jumping, it is but natural to conjecture he's going to have a cut in for the July Stakes; in which case I wish his sporting owner, Mr. Dudley, all the good luck possible.

Mr. Dudley had Rezia doing a few flights of the hurdles: each time this pony is out there is an improvement in her jumping, but will she stay the course when the whole journey has to be got over is the question.

Saturday was an ideal morning for work, trials, or what not; but unfortunately the course was not deemed in fit fettle to be opened, though from an inspection at the Stand end, it did not appear to be too soft. This, however, may not have been applicable to the whole six furlongs of going; however the hurdles were there in all their attractive beauty!

Young Rake (Regan), and Norman (Howie), put in a clean bit of lepping. There is "no possible doubt whatever," as to the proficiency of these two ponies at the jumping game, and being speedy as well, they are sure of being in the fore front, when a finish is on, and do credit to their respective trainers, Mr. Bert Allen and Frank Small man.

Daffodil (Shelldrake) Blue Bell, (Mr. H. Smith) and Kittylea had a fast go over the hurdles, all doing fairly well until the hurdle on the far side of the course, near the 6 furlong post, was reached, when the first named came to grief, giving Shelldrake what might have been a bad crumpler; but as he pluckily was up, and about a little later, nothing more than the annexation of a trifle of mud, I think, resulted. There appears to be a good bit of pace about the horse, and if his jumping could only be relied upon some of them would get a pretty smart chasing home; as it was on this particular morning, Blue Bell and Kittylea did their finish alone.

Wall had Macedon over a couple of flights. Though I observed nothing reminiscent of the good old Stepaside days.

Shylock, Shelldrake up, none the worse apparently for his cropper, did an admirable bit of fencing with Daphne (Mr. Harold Smith). Here I prostrate myself before this rider for having inadvertently on a former occasion in my notes taken him for a native.

Pat C. and Coal Queen, also Hello, Bell Brand Thunder Qneen, Flash and Fusilier did their usual morning's work. Whatever may be the opinion of those that "really do know" there is no disguising the fact that Bell Brand strides along well within himself, giving an onlooker the impression that when "asked" he'll be all there.

Winklet (Jack Spillian) and The Owl (Bloss) went a good full course. Winklet was a little green, but jumping with great promise, and it must be remembered there was no Commodore Nut upstairs.

Mr. Galstaun went out quietly on Clynder, when most people had left the course, and put in a bit of fast going. This mare will have to be reckoned with in the July Stakes, and on her breeding, she is good enough to finish first. I observed Mulwala being exercised. He's on the thin side certainly, but always a dangerous element in these short races and should he be considered by and by it won't do to let him run loose.

Tuesday morning was another disappointment, as far as work was concerned, the course not being opened. I do not remember training operations having been so retarded as they have been during the initial preparation this season, and I fear trainers will have to send their respective charges to the post, not as they would wish, or probably not at all. One well-known Tollygunge amateur, in fact, did not bother to have his string near the course at all this morning for work.

But in spite of the general depression and want of go in the way of trials, I noticed a couple of interesting bouts across the open, viz., Young Rake (Howie), Pat C (Regan) from Mr. Bert Allen's string, in which 'twas a case of you pays your money and takes your choice. Then followed (Coal Queen (Regan), and Stellarine (Howie) from the same stable, but the latter being so green, the pace was not put on.

Miss Beryl, late Vera, from Wishart's went a burst under O'Neil's pilotage which cleared the way for —Bell Band (Howie). Hello (native), Thunder Queen (Regan) This trio did the full stretch across the open, and it certainly did seem as if the Queen was racing on strongest, as they were being eased up; but the sprint, could not have been more than two to three furlongs, and the extra three more might produce another picture.

Mr. Rees was out on his grey, and shoved along smartly. Blue Bell and Daffodil went a school on the flat, followed by Flash, (Johnston), Fusilier (Howie), and later Norman and Madamoiselle, Howie and Regan in the saddle. The latter four from Smallman's stable.

Not Yet went twice round, very attractively each time she passed the stand, keeping away on the good going or as much of it as there was. This pony seems just about as fit as possible.

Howie popped the little 13 hand pony, "Rosebud," twice over a flight of the horse hurdles, and the way the business was put through was an object lesson to many a horse and his rider. The little chap has cleared 5 feet 8 inches "down under" so it is said.

Mr. Galstaun was again out on Clynder, taking her quietly away over by the New Stand, cantering her till nearly reaching the stretch across from the 5 furlong post, when she was put going fast, and galloped very satisfactorily.

THE TURF.

LINGFIELD PARK.

FEW meetings are better stage-managed than Lingfield Park, and the pretty venue was never seen to better advantage than on the 8th instant. The event of the day was, of course, the Lingfield Park Plate of 3,000sovs., than which no richer prize is offered for competition in the Garden of Surrey. Previously to last July (when Love Charm upset the presumed good thing, Fariman) it was a mile contest, but the distance has been increased by a couple of furlongs The fact that only a trio did duty was compensated for by the presence of Rock Sand, who looked at his best and moved to the post in much better style than he usually does. He was preceded both in the parade and canter by his stable companion Pharisee, a non-combatant, who had been selected to accompany the "crack" on his journey from Newmarket. As for the race, it was quite an exhilarating sight. The favourite won very cleverly in the end, but he had to put his best foot foremost to shake off the attentions of Lochryan, who stuck to him with dogged pertinacity and was only beaten by three-quarters of a length. The further they went the more Rock Sand liked it, and he was beginning to draw away from Mr. Houldsworth's handsome colt in the last few strides. The latter was in receipt of the full maiden allowance, and it was no disgrace for Henry the First to succumb by three-parts of a length in a gallant endeavour to concede the son of Enthusiast and Spring Ray 23lbs. It is a thousand pities that Rock Sand is not in the Eclipse Stakes, as his meeting with St. Amant would have proved a rare draw for the Sandown Park executive. He will not be seen out again till October. It was appropriate that Maher should have carried off the chief prize to-day, for it was on the corresponding afternoon a twelvemonth ago, on his return from this meeting, that he met with the terrible motor accident which so nearly cut the popular American jockey off in his prime. He was, in fact, reported killed.

THE LINGFIELD PARK PLATE of 2,420sovs. ; weight for age etc. One mile and a quarter.

Sir J Miller's br c Rock Sand, by Sainfoin—Roquebrune, 4yrs, 9st 9lbs ...	D Maher	1
Mr J H Houldsworth's ch c Lochryan, 3yrs, 7st 2lbs	J Jarvis	2
Mr J Musker's br c Henry the First, 3yrs, 8st 11lbs	O Madden	3

(Winner trained by Blackwell.)

BETTING : 3 to 1 on Rock Sand, 5 to 1 agst Lochryan, and 7 to 1 Henry the First.

Won by three-quarters of a length after an exhilarating struggle ; a like distance separated the second and third. Time, by Benson's chronograph, 2mins. 15⅕secs.

THE SUMMER STAKES of 242sovs. ; weight for age, etc. One mile and a half.

Mr H Bottomley's b h Wargrave, by Carbine—Warble, 6yrs, 8st 9lbs ...	J Hare	1
Lord Carnarvon's br h Robert le Diable, 5yrs, 9st 12lbs	J H Martin	2
Mr Heinemann's b c Lucid, 3yrs, 7st 5lbs	Griggs	3
Mr T Corns's Sir Joshua, 4yrs, 7st 11lbs ...	O Madden	0

(Winner trained by Batho.)

BETTING : 6 to 5 on Robert le Diable, 9 to 4 agst Wargrave, and 10 to 1 any other.

Won a fine race by a head ; a bad third.

There were doubtless a certain number of Society folks who, whilst they would have infinitely preferred to spend the day at Lingfield, felt themselves in duty bound to attend the ultra-fashionable Eton and Harrow match, and the clashing with Haydock Park accounted for the absence of a few habitual racegoers. Even so, the muster at the pretty venue on the 9th instant so admirably controlled by Mr. Robert Fowler reached flattering proportions, and folks sweltered in the heat of a gorgeous July day such as had not been experienced for a couple of years.

THE NINTH YEAR OF THE GREAT FOAL PLATE of 835 sovs. for two year olds ; colts 9st, fillies and gelding 8st 11lbs, with penalties and allowances. Five furlongs.

Capt J Orr Ewing's b c Thrush, by Missel-thrush—Chemistry, 8st 9lbs ...	Randall	1
Capt Laing's br c Padrone, 8st 11b ...	Halsey	2
Mr E Dresden's ch f Galantine, 9st 2lbs ...	K Cannon	3
Mr A James's Mirabelle, 8st 8lbs ...	H Jones	0
Mr J Musker's Fondling, 7st 12lbs ...	O Madden	0

THE TANDRIDGE COURT WELTER HANDICAP of 170sovs. One mile.

Mr A Walton's ch h Mazzaroth, by Orion—Saint Blane, 5yrs, 7st 10lbs ...	O Madden	1
Mr J Wallis's b g Logan Rock, 4yrs, 7st 7lbs	Trigg	2
Mr A Hamblin's ch g Belosselsky, 4yrs, 7st 8lbs*	Butchers	3

(Winner trained by W. Grey.)

BETTING : 2 to 1 agst Mazzaroth, 9 to 4 Logan Rock, 7 to 2 Petroleur, 7 to 1 Belosselsky, and 20 to 1 Doochary.

Won by a length and a half ; four lengths between second and third. Petroleur was fourth.

NEWMARKET.

The "Second July" is in the least pretentious of the many meetings held at Headquarters during the year, and it is regarded more in the light of an al fresco picnic than a serious business undertaking. Messrs Tattersall's bloodstock sales always play an important part in the proceedings, and so momentous have they become on the present occasion that they are arousing more general interest than the racing itself. Owing to his absence at Kiel the King had to forego the pleasure of visiting Newmarket a fortnight ago, but His Majesty journeyed from London by motor-car yesterday afternoon, and the Royal patronage stamped the gathering with the hallmark of success from a social point of view. The Prince of Wales and Prince Christian were also present during racing hours on the 12th instant, and the attendance, if somewhat meagre in proportion, was aristocratic to a degree. A cool breeze tempered the tropical heat of the solar rays, and the going was decidedly hard.

THE SOLTYKOFF STAKES of 305sovs., for two year olds, colts 8st. 12lbs ; fillies and gelding 8st 8lbs ; penalties, etc. Five furlongs and 140 yards.

Heavy banks of sullen thunder-clouds loomed black against the western horizon on the evening of the 12th instant, and there seemed good grounds for anticipating a welcome downpour The hopes of trainers and agriculturists were doomed to disappointment, however, for, though blinding flashes of lightning tore jagged rents in the leaden canopy for a couple of hours, the much needed rain held off, and the Heath the next day was as brown as a hare's back. The drought, the effects of which are everywhere so apparent, will not be of much longer duration, judging by the present outlook. The wind veered round from the east into the south-west during the night, and the change was followed by an appreciable rise in the temperature.

Whilst fine weather is generally associated with the July Meetings at headquarters, the two fixtures have seldom been favoured with more delightful conditions than this year. Hardly for a moment did the sun cease to shine, and a pleasant breeze was always in evidence. The King and Prince of Wales extended their visit over yesterday, remaining until the close of the proceedings, but there was a falling off in the general attendance, which was more noticeable in the Club enclosure than in the public rings. Happily the ground is abnormally well protected with herbage behind the Ditch, otherwise the going would have been as hard as a turnpike road. The dust flew in clouds as the horses swept across the Heath, but the consistency of the galloping was far from prohibitive, as evidenced by the strength of the fields.

With the presence of His Majesty together with the Prince of Wales, the prestige of the Eclipse Stakes Day at Sandown was kept, albeit the quality of the field for the race was far below that of last year. Brilliant sunshine of Midsummer splendour favoured the big gathering, and the Club enclosure rivalled Ascot and Goodwood for gaiety of scene and smartness of feminine attire. I have already wired you the result of the big race and append details of the principal races on to-day's card.—

CRICKET.

GENTLEMEN vs. PLAYERS.—Played at the Oval on 7th, 8th, and 9th, July. The Gentlemen won by an innings and 39 runs. So many counties had arranged matches for the last three days of last week that from the elevens which appeared at the Oval the names of several famous players were missing although the teams were both very strong. On paper the Players had by far the better bowlers, but as the match was played on a perfect wicket this did not seem to make much difference, for nowadays one good bowler seems very much like another unless there is something wrong with the pitch. At the last moment Holland and R. A. Sheppard were chosen to play, and on Friday P. F. Warner and G. W. Beldam were unwell and unable to appear, and their names on the card were replaced by those of L. V. Harper and W. L. Murdoch. Beldam had bowled fourteen overs on the previous day, but Warner had only fielded. On the first day the light in the morning was almost like that of a foggy November day, and it was found impossible to begin the match until half-past two, when the Players began the batting with Hayward and Bowley. There was nothing remarkable about the day's cricket except the batting of Hayward and Quaife. The former went in first, and was bowled with the last ball of the day. He was at the wickets for three hours and three-quarters, and among many brilliant hits which he made were twenty-three 4's. His innings was from first to last most attractive to watch. The light was always bad until he had made about a hundred, and up to that time he played with his usual caution and steadiness, but afterwards he hit fearlessly and made his second hundred in an hour and ten minutes. Quaife, who helped Hayward to put on 119 runs in an hour and a half played an excellent innings. When stumps were drawn the total was 353 for five wickets. On Friday morning the innings was finished in a most abrupt manner for an addition of only nine runs. This result was brought about by some good bowling by Hunt and Napier and some brilliant fielding which included three fine one-handed catches in the slips; in fact, everything came off for the Gentlemen. The Gentlemen began badly enough by losing Kingston and Ranjitsinhji for nine runs between them, but E. A. Beldam played a useful innings, and then, Bosanquet and Steel mastered the bowling after the latter had got over the first few uncomfortable minutes. For a time during this partnership, which produced 141 runs in an hour and thirty-five minutes, the scoring was slow, but Bosanquet soon began to make some fine drives, and altogether his innings was delightful to watch, although he might have been caught two or three times; his innings lasted for three hours and a half, and included two fives and fifteen 4's. Later in the day Murdoch and Hunt took charge of the bowling, and when stumps were drawn with the total at 357 for six wickets, the former was not out 58, and the latter not out 41. On the next morning these two men successfully defied the bowling until the total was 519; their partnership produced 249 runs. Each man was at the wickets for about four hours, and their batting was most attractive from first to last. When the innings came to an end the Gentlemen had a lead of 216, but as only three hours remained for play, and as the bowling of the amateurs was, at any rate on paper, almost ridiculously weak, there seemed not the least prospect that the match would be finished. But it was one of Bosanquet's days, and after Napier had disposed of Hayward and Hayes, the two most dangerous batsmen on the side of the Players, he bowled with so much success that his opponents seemed to become quite demoralised. Lees and Trott were the only two men who made any serious resistance to him. Trott hit with great power, but it was then too late to save the game.

ETON vs. HARROW.—Played at Lord's on 8th and 9th July. Eton won by an innings and 12 runs. It was evident from the appearance of the ground at Lord's on Friday and Saturday that there is little likelihood that the Eton vs. Harrow match will be deposed for some time to come from its position as the leading event in the Society season. The weather was perfect, and during the periods of promenading the scene was fascinating in the extreme. The cricket on the first day was very one-sided, for whereas Harrow were disposed of for 102, Eton made 375 for six wickets. For the most part the batting of the Harrovians was hesitating, and the players seemed disheartened by the loss of the first three wickets for 16 runs. The only man who rose to the occasion was Bolton, who played the bowling with the ease of a finished batsman. The Eton innings was chiefly noticeable for the fine display of D. C. Boles, who, going in first, played a careful and scientific game until he had made his hundred in three hours and three-quarters when he began to hit out with such vigour that he made his next 80 runs in about three-quarters of an hour. Towards the end of his fine innings he made 19 off an over from Bolton—four 4's and a 3—and 16 off the next over from Reunert—four 4's. His hits included twenty-seven 4s. His total of 183 is a record for these matches. The straight drive by which he beat the previous record—152 by Sir Emilius Bayley, in 1841, was a very hard hit which the bowler just managed to touch with his fingers—the sort of hit which much more frequently results in a damaged finger than a catch. The partnership between Boles and W. T. Tod, who hit with great power, produced 143 runs in two hours, while that between Cumberbatch and Boles produced 175 in an hour and a half. Cumberbatch was not out 42 at the close of play. R. E. H. Baily, the Harrow captain, was hit in the eye by a rising ball when keeping wicket and had to retire. On Saturday the remaining Eton batsmen sacrificed their wickets in the effort to make runs as quickly as possible, and Harrow went in a second time at a quarter to twelve with a balance of 297 against them. Harrow made a most plucky effort to bring about a drawn game, and very nearly accomplished their object. They lost their first two wickets for 88, but Baily, who pluckily came out to bat with a shade over his eye, and Eiloart increased the score to 92, and things began to look a little better. Baily played a beautiful game for two hours and three-quarters, but when he was dismissed at 134 five wickets were down. As the next wicket fell at 145 the game seemed nearly over, but Crake then joined Brandt, and a stubborn resistance was offered to the bowling. The partnership produced 101 runs in two hours, and while it lasted Harrow always seemed to have a chance of saving the game. Both men played the right game, and their plucky stand was deserving of the very highest praise. When Crake was out, seven wickets were down for 248. The eighth wicket fell at 253, and the ninth at 258. When the last two men came together 39 runs were still required to avoid the innings defeat, and an hour and a quarter remained for play. For three-quarters of an hour the two plucky Harrovians, Morris and Humphreys, held out, and their efforts to stave off disaster will long be remembered by the boys of the two schools.

YORKSHIRE vs. HAMPSHIRE.—Played at Portsmouth on 11th 12th and 13th July. Yorkshire won by an innings and 18 runs

By the end of the first day's play in this match the unfortunate Hampshire team seemed likely to be beaten once more; for Yorkshire, with only seven wickets down, had made 462 runs. Yorkshire did not begin well, and three wickets were down for 84. But when Tunnicliffe was joined by Hurst the bowling was so completely mastered that the total was taken to 342 before the partnership producing 258 runs was broken. The two men were together for about two hours and three-quarters. At the end of the day, Rhodes and Rothery hit the bowling all over the field, and when stumps were drawn the former was not out 70 and the latter not out 35. On Tuesday, Rhodes and Rothery kept together until their partnership had produced 152 runs in an hour, and Hampshire had to face a very large total. Their first wicket put up 54 runs in fifty minutes, Webb hitting with great vigour. Sprot then joined Webb and played an admirable game. While they were in partnership the two men scored 134 runs for the second wicket in seventy-five minutes. Webb batted so well that a collection was made for him on the ground. Sprot's splendid innings lasted for two hours and a quarter, and his hits included eighteen 4's. Later Hill played a brilliant game, but when stumps were drawn Hampshire, with nine wickets down, were still 220 runs behind. Yesterday Hill played another good innings, and Webb, Sprot, Bowell and Chignell all made useful scores, but the game was over soon after a quarter past three.

OXFORD UNIVERSITY vs. WORCESTERSHIRE.—Played at Worcester on 11th, 12th and 13th July Oxford University won by three wickets. So greatly superior was the batting to the bowling in this match that 1,492 runs were scored, the previous record for England being beaten by 66 runs. On the first day the Worcestershire innings came to a conclusion just before stumps were drawn every man on the side except one scoring double figures. W. B. Burns played brilliant cricket for three hours for his 165. The batting of the Oxford men on the next day was less consistent than that of their opponents, but Carlisle and Raphael both played fine cricket. At the end of the day Worcestershire had scored 147 in their second innings for five wickets, and were 292 runs on. Worcestershire declared on Saturday with six wickets down, and Oxford, with a little over four hours before them in which to make 400 runs, made a determined and successful effort to knock off the runs. Raphael was only at the wickets for an hour and three-quarters for his 111, Bennett and Carlisle both played a bold game, and in the end Oxford won a splendid victory by three wickets when only four minutes remained for play.

THE SOUTH AFRICANS' TOUR.

MATCH vs. HAMPSHIRE.—Played at Alton on 7th and 8th July. The South Africans won by an innings and 19 runs. The experiment of playing a first-class match on the pretty ground at Alton was attended with success, and the game attracted a good crowd. The wicket was excellent, the outfielding rough, and the boundaries short. During the first day 467 runs were scored, the South Africans making 380 and dismissing seven Hampshire men for 87, so that the result of the match seemed a foregone conclusion. Tancred played a wounderfully good innings; his score stood at 98 at lunch time, but he was bowled by Hesketh-Prichard before he had reached his hundred. Good cricket was played by Shalders, Schwarz and several others of the team. Hathorn alone playing a single-figure innings. When Hampshire went in Kotze was in great form and took five of the wickets which fell. On Friday Powell and Stone made a great effort to save the follow-on, but were not successful in their object. When Hampshire went in again Sprot and Llewellyn made a fine stand for the fifth wicket putting on 102 runs in three-quarters of an hour by most attractive cricket. The rest of the team failed and the South Africans had the easiest of victories.

MATCH vs. SOMERSET.—Played at Taunton on 11th and 12th July. South Africans won by an innings and 86 runs. Considerable progress was made with this match on Monday. Against the Somerset total of 198 the visitors scored 229 for six wickets. The only outstanding innings on the Somerset side was the 79 not out by F. M. Lee, who alone of all the batsmen played Kotze with any confidence. For the South Africans, Tancred and Shalders put up 198 in an hour and a half for the first wicket, and although there was no long stand after this, the South Africans ended the day with a lead of 31, Schwarz being not out 33. On Tuesday Schwarz hit tremendously hard, his brilliant innings of 93 including seventeen 4's; he was only batting for an hour. The innings was by no means over, for Shepstone and Halliwell played the most delightful cricket, and put on 106 runs in an hour for the ninth wicket. Somerset had to go in against a balance of 240, and fared very badly.

TENNIS.

OXFORD vs. CAMBRIDGE.

Still another "battle of the Blues" took place on the 8th instant when, in the Court at Lord's Cricket Ground, the Singles Tennis match was decided between the champions of the two Universities. A. M. Robertson, who was just beaten by the Cambridge cricket captain, F. B. Wilson last year, and A. Buxton. The struggle aroused considerable interest and the play was watched by a large number of people, who preferred the comparative cool of the court to the tropical sunshine favouring the cricketers in the Eton vs. Harrow match, on the turf outside. The contest turned out a particularly stubborn one, and, after being two sets all and four games all in the first set, Robertson just managed to scramble home, each man winning twenty four games during the match. The tennis was not of great quality. Buxton possessed the more brilliance and variety of strokes, but he was inclined to be somewhat erratic, and the superior steadiness of Robertson wore him down. The Oxonian's returns were of fairly accurate length, and he often got the ball well up when it appeared quite out of his reach. Details:—

Oxford (A. M. Robertson, Rugby School and University College) beat Cambridge (A. Buxton, Harrow School and Trinity College) by three sets to two (6—5, 1—6, 6—3, 5—6, and 6—4).

Buxton began in splendid style, but, after getting to 4—1, Robertson found his length, and only allowed the Cantab to win one more game in the opening set. The old Harrovian had the second set practically all to himself, and from 2—1. Buxton ran right out, Robertson's steadiness being negatived by his opponent's brilliance. In the third set, however, Robertson began to wear his rival down, and, being always in front, won comfortably at 6—3, but at the fourth meeting the light blue came again, and, after eleven games had been played, the marker called the match "two sets all." The fifth and final struggle proved wonderfully interesting. Buxton led well at 2—0, but Robertson drew level, and, equalising at two all, alternate games were won until four all. The dark blue then scored twice and won the match for Oxford by the odd set. Time—2hrs 10mins.

On Saturday, the 9th instant, the Doubles were won in pronounced fashion, the decision of F. B. Wilson not to compete being a great blow to the chances of Cambridge. There was a crowded declans, Lord Alverston being among those present, but the tennis witnessed was of poor quality, and, after seventy minutes' play, the Cantabs were beaten by three sets to love, the scores being 6-3, 6-1 6-2. A. M. Robertson (Rugby and University) and O. V. G. Hoare (Harrow and Trinity), who had been beaten by Robertson in the Singles, being partnered on behalf of Cambridge by J. L. Dewrance (Charterhouse and Trinity). Cambridge took the first two games but then, chiefly through Robertson's good play, the total reached 5-2 in Oxford's favour. A third game to Cambridge, and then the Dark Blues ran out at 6-3. In the second set, Oxford won the first three off the reel, Cambridge then securing a love game. This proved, however their only success, as three more to the Oxonians, the last another love game, won the set by 6-1. In the third and final set Oxford took the first and second games, and Cambridge the third. Hoare was now playing in much improved form and largely through his efforts, Oxford ran to 5-1. A second game to Cambridge, and then after "deuce" had been called twice, Oxford took the next, which gave them the set by 6-2, and the match by three sets to love, their margin of game being 18 to 6. J. Fennel marked and called the match.

Cambridge have won the Singles 33 times to Oxford's 12, and the Doubles on 31 occasions to the Oxonians' 14.

SWIMMING

THE MILE CHAMPIONSHIP.

There was a record crowd around the ornamental lake at Sefton Park, Liverpool, on Saturday, the 9th instant when the Westminster Swimming Club held an open air gala and, besides four open events, decided the mile championship of England. The entries for the latter event were: David Billington, Bacup (holder), W A. Curwen, Westminster S. C. F. (Liverpool), C. E. Forsyth, Hyde Seal S. C., N. Potter, Tyldesley, H. D. Herring jun., Hyde Seal S. C., W. Holt, Birkenhead S. C., Hayes, Everton S. C., W. Stocks, Birkenhead S. C., F. Wadsworth, Sudley, A. G. Harvey, Ravensbourne S. C., W. Hamer, Mark Addy S. C, and T. Wildgoose, Hyde Seal S. C. Last year, when the event took place at Leicester, Billington covered the distance in the record time of 24mins 56⅗secs. Of the entries, eleven went to the post, the absentee being W. A. Curwen, the Mersey Champion. The race needs little description, for after going 300 yards, during which time Forsyth led, Billington drew to the front and won easily. Details:—

D Billington Bacup (holder), 27mins. 18secs.,1 ; T. Wildgoose, Hyde Seal S. C., 28mins 50secs., 2 ; A. G. Harvey, Ravensbourne S. C., 28mins. 51secs., 3 ; N. Potter, Tydlesley, 30mins. 47secs., 4 ; H. D. Herring, jun., Hyde Seals, 31mins. 54secs., 5 ; T. Wadsworth, Sudley, 32mins 3secs., 6 ; W. Hamer, Mark Addy S. C., 32mins. 3secs., 7 ; W. Stocks, Birkenhead, 34mins, 15secs., 8 ; F. Hayes, Everton, 35mins. 21secs., 9. W. Holt, Birkenhead, and C. E. Forsyth, Hyde, also swam, but retired.

Forsyth led for two lengths when he retired and Billington took the lead followed by Wildgoose, Harvey, and Potter. For a short distance Harvey was second but Wildgoose again went on second, 220 yards from home, Billington, however, was never approached, and won very easily. A good race between Harvey and Wildgoose for second place resulted in favour of the latter.

POLO.

HURLINGHAM.

INTER-REGIMENTAL FINAL.—Seldom has such a numerous company assembled at the Hurlingham enclosure as that of Saturday, when the final tie of the Inter-Regimental Tournament was decided. Among those present we noticed the following: Prince and Princess Alexander of Teck, Prince Arthur of Connaught, Lord and Lady Harrington, the Duke of Westminster, Lady Tweedmouth, the Earl of Shrewsbury, Lord Castle-reagh, General J. R. S. Sayer, Major-General, Reverley Mitford, Major-General Sir H. P. and Lady Evelyn Ewart, and Captain Fitzwilliam (aide-de-camp to Prince Alexander of Teck) and Mrs. Fitzwilliam eighteen teams had participated in the competition—one in excess of last year—and one of these the Royal Horse Guards and the 17th Lancers had worked their way to the final. The sides were arranged thus: 17th Lancers—Captain R. J. W. Carden, Major W. A. Tilney, Mr. A. F. Fletcher and Cololonel B. P. Portal (back); Royal Horse Guards—Lord Ingestre, Captain G.J. Fitzgerald, Mr.H.E. Brassey and Captain the Honble Dudley Marjoribanks (back). Umpires: Mr. W. S. Buckmaster and Mr. Pat Nickalls. After a combined run by the Lancers Captain Carden opened the scoring on their behalf three minutes from the start. On the change of ends Mr. Brassey equalised. Nearing the end of the period a combined attack by the Lancers resulted in Major Tilney scoring, and at the remount the Blues were a point behind at 2—1. On resuming the Guards made strenuous efforts to draw level, but Mr. Brassey then rode right through the ranks of the opposition and finished up with an excellent goal. The same player afterwards made a fine run, and Lord Ingestre, following in his wake, obtained a goal and for the first time in the match the Blues flattered their supporters by being in front. Soon after resuming a melee took place in front of the Guards' posts, from which Major Tilney luckily scraped through, and thus the score was "three all." The Lancers, who had pressed towards the end of the next "ten" went ahead with a goal by Captain Cardent, but on a further exchange of territory a goal by Captain Fitzgerald equalised. The Blues subsequently experienced hard luck, as they drove the ball within inches of their antagonists' posts on several occasions. At half-time, therefore, the record was four goals all. The Lancers then took a useful lead with further goals by Mr. Fletcher, Captain Carden, and Major W. A. Tilney, who brought off a very neat backhander, and were three points in front at the beginning of the final period. The Blues had simply all the play from now to the end but time was against them, and they were just beaten by seven goals to six, their last two points coming from the sticks of Mr. Bassey and Lord Ingestre. Though the Lancers won for the second year in succession, they had to go all the way, and moreover, they had decidedly the better of the luck. Major Tilney played a great game on behalf of the winners, and Mr. H. E. Brassey, for the Blues, was distinctly the best player on the field. Both sides were well mounted, and the play was very fast from the start. Princess Alexander of Teck presented the cup to the winners. A Hurlingham quartette next opposed Mr. Menzies's team, whom they defeated by four goals to three, after a most stubborn encounter. Sides: Hurlingham—Lord Harrington, Mr. W. Roylance Court, Mr. F. Gay Mackey, and Colonel W. Gordon Renton (back); Mr. Menzies's Team—Mr. C. Wood, Mr. F. C. G. Menzies, Lord Villiers, and Captain H. Wilson (back). The band of the Royal Horse Guards played at intervals during the afternoon. The following is a record of the winners of the Inter-Regimental Tournament:—

Previous Regimental Tournament Winners.—1878, 5th Lancers; 1879, 5th Lancers; 1880, 16th Lancers; 1881, 16th Lancers; 1882, 5th Lancers; 1883, 7th Hussars; 1884, 7th Hussars; 1885, 7th Hussars; 1886, 7th Hussars; 1887, 5th Lancers; 1888, 10th Hussars; 1889, 9th Lancers; 1890, 9th Lancers; 1891, 9th Lancers; 1892, 13th Hussars; 1893, 10th Hussars; 1894, 13th Hussars; 1895, 13th Hussars; 1896, 9th Lancers; 1897, 6th Inniskillings; 1898, 6th Inniskillings; †1899, 7th Hussars; †1903, 17th Lancers; 1904, 17th Lancers. †There was no tournament between these dates, owing to the war in South Africa.

Hunting.

THE OOTACAMUND HUNT.

AGAIN this week we have had three meets, Saturday being a bye day. That day (23rd July) we met at Golf Corner, and though it was as good a hunting morning as anyone could wish only ten or a dozen people turned up. The first draw was the swamp above Pearl Crossing and along the west side of Bagman to Mills' covert. We did not find but a little further on, just above Trible Crossing hounds hit off a line and ran very fast up Blackmoor Vale to Rallywood. Just short of this a second jack crossed in front of hounds and was followed by about five couple who ran over the hill to Bluegums.

In Rallywood a third jack was on foot and the rest of the jack divided one lot hunting into Monkey Shola and thence to Baikie. The rest hunted the first jack over the hill to the top of Parlock and then left-handed into Sheffield wood through this and down the nullah below Swamyar Bluegums. Doubling back the jack took us up through Tiger Shola and out on to the Krummund Road. He then turned again to the left through Audy Plantation, beyond which he ran the path for about a mile and finally beat us in the rocks of Hecuba Cliff.

Meanwhile the hounds that had changed jacks at Rallywood had had an extremely fine run. They ran through Bluegums and across the valley to Staircase, through the lower part of this and then over the ridge to Briar Shola. Leaving this on their left they crossed the top of Dartmoor Vale and went on by Windy Gap and Wenlock Wood, through the top of Khed Shola, past Toda Coffee Shop Shola and parallel to the Pykara Falls bridle path for quite three miles more. At last a check on the path enabled Captain Kennard who was the only man with hounds to stop them.

On Monday (25th) there was a much larger field at the meet. This was at Brooklands and again it was an ideal hunting morning. The first draw in Brooklands was successful and we got away from the lower side on a line which took us back to Bingham Shola. Near this, however, hounds were stopped, and there was another draw from the point where the Pykara Road and Sholur Road meet round the spur above the waterfall stream and past Beadnell's Shola. In the nullah just west of Beadnell's as hounds came out of the covert in which the Todamund is situated, having drawn the covert blank they picked up a line and went away very fast. The jack took us parallel to the old Pykara Road for some distance, crossing it twice. At the seventh mile he turned away to the right and we had some good galloping over the grass slopes above the big swamp. He then bore as if for Toda Coffee Shop Shola, but on nearing the ridge swung again righthanded and took us through the big Shola on the east side. He then went straight away to the Ghauts down which we lost him in the thick scrub and rocks. Sambur were on foot and two hinds trotted apparently right through the pack, without, however, any riot on their part, unfortunately jungle sheep also turned up and a few hounds gave trouble, nobody being able to get near them. On getting hounds out of the cliffs we returned home.

On Thursday (28th) the meet was at Sandy Nullah Toll Bar and we had a very long day of it. The morning was bright with a very heavy dew, and a large field turned out. We drew up the swamp from Pamela's Crossing and over the top of Dartmoor Valley to Briar Shola. Briar Shola was blank, but we picked up a line on Windy Saddle above Wapshare's Hare shola. After some very pretty work hounds settled to the line and hunted down into Wapshare's Hare Shola. The jack was still on the covert and they bustled him up and down it for a few minutes until he broke on the north side with hounds close behind him. Beadnell's Shola or Dunsandle was his point but he never reached it, hounds pulling him down after a short sharp burst, which took us across the Old Pykara Road to the swamp which lies south-west of Beadnell's Shola. We then drew along parallel with the Old Pykara Road on the north side, as far as the ridge above Toda Coffee Shop Shola. Here we turned into Road Shola and emerged into the open between Parmarwood and the Pykara River. After drawing for a short distance along the river bank we found again and ran nearly to the north of the Yemakal stream, short of which hounds swung left-handed towards Chemmund and we viewed three jacks in front of us. This was confusing work for hounds, but in another five minutes they had accounted for two of them, working one to ground and killing another. We then drew on up the valley and were just turning homewards when a sambur hind jumped up out of a nullah right in front of hounds. They were excited with blood and most of them broke away, so that we had a quarter of an hour's bad riot before they could be stopped. They were then whipped off and brought home.

BLUE GUM.

POONA AND KIRKEE FOXHOUNDS.

A MEET at Yerowda Jail on the 24th attracted what I have been told by several was the largest field on record, and I have been given five computations varying from seventy-nine to eighty-four, as the number of lovely women and brave men who turned up. I may add that there was a considerable amount of indignation at the action of someone—who the actual sinner was, I haven't been informed and don't want to inquire—who postponed the hour of the meet from the usual hour of 6 A.M. to 6-30 (and this on a dry, bad scenting morning), to, it is said, suit the convenience of a high official who apparently after all failed to put in an appearance. There seems to be a very general idea, that the idea was not a very happy one, and that hunting, like love, "levels all ranks," and it seems to be the earnest desire of the members of the hunt that the experiment will not be repeated. The language of a good few who (failing to see the somewhat belated and unexpected notice of the postponement), turned up at the usual hour and had to wait idle for thirty minutes is popularly reputed to have had the serious effect of withering up the little grass the drought had left us.

The Master first tried the gardens at the back of the Jail Superintendent's bungalow but in vain, and a move was next made for a small babul grove a quarter of a mile distant from the main buildings. From this a jack broke away almost before hounds entered the sparse sanctuary, but instead of making his point right handed towards the hills took, what I am told, is a most unusual line left handed towards the Aga Khan's Palace. At a great pace apparently he led hounds towards the Bund Hill skirting it and crossing a large area of sheet rock and quarries (which must have been encouraging sort of going for those who rode the line!) and this was apparently the crisis in this speedy jackal's career, as over the sheet rock and stones scent was, as was but natural, very poor and some of the field were from what I gather a trifle over inquisitive. Working the line cleverly to the Ahmednagar road a pariah from a gypsy encampment close by scootled away for dear life and led hounds astray for the nonce, and by the time they were turned back to the path of rectitude, the scent had become well nigh impossible. Along the river bank and close to the railings surrounding His Highness the Aga's summer residence, hounds worked a fitful scent with great patience and recrossing the road worked it to a large stoney hillock covered with prickly pear where some one, I believe, tallyhoed something, but my accounts vary as to whether it was the hunted jack or a sprightly little fox. At any rate, though the Master dismounted and encouraged hounds to renewed efforts no practical result came of it, and Colonel Sheringham had to yield to the inevitable of a hopeless scent and admit defeat. After a brief rest, chiefly occupied I believe, in extracting the venemous prickly pear needless from hound's feet, some wild stoney nullahs were drawn, but save for a fox and a hare, blank. On the way home a chink jumped up right in front of hounds who ran for a mile to view, but the large Yerowda nullah afforded the little animal a favourable opportunity of evading the foe which he promptly availed himself, and as it was getting unpleasantly hot, Colonel Sheringham wisely took advantage of the check to have hounds stopped and so ended a not very brilliant day.

The bridge beyond Kirkee on the way to Dapuri and called after that great and good sportsman Lord Harris, was the tryst for the 28th, and once again an exceptionally large field assembled to make obeisance to the Master and have a gallop, and in neither praiseworthy object were they disappointed. Every one was glad and probably no one more so than Colonel Sheringham, to see the first whip Mr. Sydney Armstrong out again after an enforced idleness from a bad strain, and without I hear one moment's law for the lie-a-beds, the Master moved off towards some babul coverts close to the river on the right of the old Bombay trunk road. The babul was drawn blank and a move was next made to a small patch of sugercane from which a few days previously the Master, throwing a few couples of hounds in at a venture, excited a brace of jackals. But to the disappointment of all it on this critical occasion proved tenantless. A move was next made to a patch hard bye, the field though of late have been showing a inclination, to excess of zeal at the wrong time being kept in strict subjection. Hounds were scarcely well in this little cover when the keener eared of the field, heard what many have complained, was a not very decided or far reaching "gone-away" and a few of the unholy even dared to assert that the Master's horn was less musical than under the circumstances it might have been. For obstreperousness on the part of the field there is no excuse. At the same time provided they are honestly showing a disposition to restraint any disinclination to let them get reasonably well away when hounds are well clear of cover can only have an irritating effect and defeat the object in view But to return to the glories of the chase the hero of the occasion was, I am assured by all, a wild rover of the most galloping sort, and those who failed from one reason or another to secure a satisfactory start had for the first ten minutes or so to ride a stern chase, and even the lucky few in the flight had to gallop all they knew to keep with the leading hounds—for apparently although there was a comparatively small pack of about twelve couple out, about three couple raced clean away from the rest, which deprived this glorious little run of some of its charm to at least a few of the men I have heard speaking of it in terms of otherwise unalloyed praise and rapture. For about twelve splendid minutes hounds raced away to evidently an excellent scent, this racing jack heading first of all to the customary point of the Sister Hills. Then apparently out of sheer frolicsomeness, for none of my informants can assign any reason, he, as if gloating in his speed and vigour gave up the idea of almost certain sanctuary on the heights of the twin hills, and turning half right made curiously enough over the Dhanore rifle ranges for Yerowda, a most unusual line I hear. But this gallant jack evidently knew a thing or two and had a bit "up his sleeve." For after twelve minutes of the best and fastest "over a good hunting country,"—as the Deccan goes—hounds began to get into difficulties with the scent and those in the first rank grumbled at the perversity of unkind Fate, while those who were toiling away in the rear blessed their luck-bringing stars, and, I have no doubt, got into prominent positions in a matter of fact as if they had been there all along—for human nature is human nature all the world over. Hounds soon hit off the line again, but from all I gather, the pace was never the same again though the few gallant hounds who had run so bravely and worked so staunchly did all they could to crown their efforts. But Diana of the Chase had evidently willed that the balance of luck was in favour of the gallant little varmint who had led them such a merry a dance and after working the line in a more or less desultory fashion to within, I am assured pistol shot of the jail precincts, hounds had to submit to a defeat little less glorious than victory. Twenty-three minutes was, I believe, near as possible, the time, of which the first half was as fast as the hardest could yearn for and many horses had as much as they cared for. Among those who enjoyed the brilliant burst were H. E. Lord Lamington, Sir Archibald Hunter, Mr. Du Borlay, Private Secretary, and Captain Meynell, A.-D.-C., both from Government House; Colonel and Mrs. Carter, heading the gunner contingent from Kirkee; Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Lucas, Major and Mrs. Cleveland, Mr. and Mrs Charles Beatty, Colonel Bull, Colonel Channer, Major and Mrs. Jameson, Lady Cox, Captain and Mrs. Parry, Mrs. Sheringham, Mrs. Cameron, Miss Anderson, Captain Hopwood, Mr. Sheppard, the Collector of Poona, Mr. Enthoven, a keen supporter of this hunt, Major Buist, Major and Mrs. Anderson and scores of other lucky people.

After a reasonable time for breathing and a pull at the "holster Pistols," when the lucky "two horse" men effected a change, the Master drew back, and after a long jog (though I hear in this country walking is more popular than the good old "huntman's jog" we know so well at home), Colonel Sheringham worked back close to the cover, which held the jack which had succeeded in defeating him, in the hope presumably of taking vengeance on his mate, and sure enough hounds lost little time in proclaiming a find. Towards Diggi this second jack headed, but increasing heat made scent most uncertain, and after a merry, but very brief burst, hunting was, I hear, snatchy and fitful. Colonel Bull's well seasoned eyes and great experience in the lie of the country helped hounds for the time being, but even then scent was too bad to assure success, and Colonel Sheringham very judiciously stopped hounds for the day. A most delightful morning on the whole spent in the cream of the country.

SCARAMOUCH.

Among "animals which play games" the Sirus, or Indian crane (Grus Antigone), is, I think, entitled to a place, remarks a writer in a home paper. Some twelve or fourteen years ago in the Shahjahanpur district of Rohilkhand, I witnessed a dance by three of these birds, in which one, a female, stood in the centre, while the other two, males, described figures of eight round her, all three bowing to each other at regular intervals. The movements throughout were perfectly uniform and very graceful, and the birds were so absorbed in their dance which lasted for several minutes, that they took no notice of me, though I was within forty or fifty yards of them. I have also seen what I can only describe as a boxing match between two of these cranes, which was a most ludicrous sight. Twelve or fifteen Saruses formed a ring, in the middle of which the two combatants fought a number of rounds, squaring up at each other with their wings, and striking blows which could be heard several hundred yards off. There was no biting, or kicking, nothing but honest boxing with the wings. Each round lasted, perhaps, a minute or more, and in the intervals the two combatants strolled about in the ring until time was up, when they went at it again. I sat on my horse watching the fight for at least ten minutes, at the end of which the ring broke up and the birds dispersed. How long it had been going on before my arrival on the scene I cannot say. Neither pugilist showed any signs of temper during the combat, or appeared to be at all damaged, and the whole proceedings were characterised by the most decorous formality.

THE SECUNDERABAD JUNIOR TOURNAMENT.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

THE Semi-Final in the above was played off on the 27th ultimo on the 4th Hussars' ground, when the 4th Hussers met the 26th Light Cavalry "A" Team. The elite of Secunderabad were present to witness the game which was very exciting and there was great enthusiasm from start to finish. More than one veteran was heard to remark that the "Juniors" now bidding for polo fame will be players to be reckoned with in the near future in more important tournaments. By virtue of their reputation, of course, the 4th Hussars were favourites, but those who fancied the Cavalry team from the form they displayed had high hopes of them after the first chukker which ended in their favour. But the anticipations were doomed half way through the game by which time the Hussars proved themselves superior to their opponents in every way.

In the First Chukker there was very fast up and down play both goals being hotly attacked and many a "dead cert" frustrated, but the Cavalrymen put on one goal and one subsidiary, while the best effort of the Hussars was one subsidiary.

The Second Chukker saw more fast play, the Cavalry getting in two splendid runs to the Hussars flags, but failed to profit by them, whilst the Hussars crowned their three visits to the Cavalry flags by 2 goals and 1 subsidiary, and this chukker ended with the score thus—4th Hussars :—2 goals and 2 subsidiaries; 26th Cavalry 1 goal and 1 subsidiary.

The Third Chuckker opened by a desperate run by the Cavalry, who getting clean away scored a grand goal in 15 seconds. This fairly put the Hussars on their mettle and with surprising form, which they seemed to have reserved, soon added another goal which, with another subsidiary, put the figures at the end of this chukker at—4th Hussars 3 goals and 3 subsidiaries ; 26th Cavalry 2 goals and 1 subsidiary.

The Fourth Chukker was of a very good character, both teams playing fast and well. The Hussars got a goal at the outset and the Cavalry tried hard to get through the Hussars' flags, but there was no other score in this chukker which ended—4th Hussars 4 goals and 3 subsidiaries ; 26th Cavalry 2 goals and 1 subsidiary.

In the Fifth Chukker there was some more fine play on both sides, but the superiority of the Hussars over their opponents was very marked. The Hussars put on one goal and a subsidiary more and then seemed to box the Cavalry up altogether, ultimately coming out victors by 5 goals and 4 subsidiaries to 2 goals and 1 subsidiary.

Final.

The Finals were played on the 29th ultimo in rather dull weather with rain threatening every moment, but it fortunately kept off, and a splendid game was witnessed. The Royal Artillery were "At Home,' and there was a fair attendance of Society and a very large crowd of the general public.

As the 26th Light Cavalry "B" Team had scratched, the 20th Deccan Horse had to face the 4th Hussars. The former were represented by Mr. A. R. Steele, Mr. E. P. Black-Hawkins, Mr. W. Neilson, and Captain H. G. Watkin (back), and the latter by Sowar Sili Ali Kumar, Naick Abdul Nur Khan, Major Jones and Captain Campbell Ross (back).

Punctually at 5 the bell rang, and the umpires, Major Hayes and Captain Barr, announced the start.

First Chukker.—This opened by the Deccan Horse scoring two subsidiaries in quick succession, followed almost immediately by a long run down by Mr. Steele and a goal for his side in one and a half minutes. Taking up the offensive, the Hussars heavily pressed their opponents and had scored another goal at the end of the chukker.

Second Chukker.—The Hussars at once took the offensive and managed to keep in the Deccan Horse territory most of the time, thus giving Mr. Ross lots of work. A clever pass by Mr. Neilson to Captain Watkin, gave the latter a fine opportunity which he took, and notched another goal for the Hussars and the chukker ended :—4th Hussars 3 goals 1 subsidiary ; 29th Deccan Horse 2 subsidiaries.

Third Chukker.—This commenced with fast up and down play in which the Naick did some splendid riding off. It was three minutes before there was any score, and then the 20th Deccan got in a ripping goal which was followed by some exceptionally fast runs by the Hussars, Mr. Neilson at this time playing a grand game. Hussars had repeated chances, but they failed again and again to score owing to the gallant defence of the two native riders, who were working like Trojans for their side, Mr. Campbell Ross seeming to fall of in form and dash.

Fourth Chukker.—Deccan Horse had some splendid chances in this chukker, especially, when through a nasty fall which Mr. Steele sustained, they had matters practically all their own for a few minutes But Mr. Steele, was with his comrades in a jiffy, and prevented the Deccans from adding more than one goal and subsidiary to their score. Although the Hussars seemed sore pressed at times, their ponies too were not up their opponents' in this chukker. Great excitement prevailed at the prospects of the next chukker, the Deccan seeming to have considerably bucked up.

Fifth Chukker.—Ten seconds from the bell the Hussars hit a very clever goal and keeping on the offensive played one of the neatest games ever seen on this ground. Mr. Black-Hawkins and Captain Watkin scored a goal each for their side, and altogether the Hussars made rings round the Deccan Horse by the finish of the chukker, which ended 4th Hussars 6 goals 2 subsidiaries ; 20th Deccan Horse 3 goals 3 subsidiaries.

But there was another two minutes and eight seconds to play and excitement was at fever height again, although the odds were great against the Deccan Horse. Nothing daunted both Major Jones and Captain Ross made a splendid dash to reduce the score, at least and by a brilliant run and a magnificent stroke at the end of it, Captain Campbell Ross scored another goal which left the 4th Hussars victors by 6 goals 2 subsidiaries to 4 goals and 3 subsidiaries.

The principal speaker at an election meeting in the North, in the early eighties, was continually interrupted by a cry of "What did Gladstone say in '68?" from a man at the back of the hall where the crowd was at its thickest. "Shut up," "Put him out," etc., arose on all sides, but this only seemed to encourage the individual in question to further efforts, and it was not until the chuckers-out had done their duty the peace reigned once more. Some friends, afterwards, amazed at his unwonted interest in political matters, asked him, "What did Gladstone say in '68, anyhow?" "Oh, ah dunno," he replied. "ah wanted a drink, and ah cuddn't get out."

At school little Charlie, being one of the geography class was deeply interested in learning the points of the compass. Said the teacher : "You have in front of you the north ; on your right the east on your left the west. What have you behind you ? After a moment's reflect on Charlie exclaimed, "A patch on my pants."

Starter and Umpire—Mr. F. E. H. Power.
Judge—Mr. W. S. Burke.

Saturday, 30th July 1904.

THE first regatta of the season having been abandoned, the Committee of the Calcutta Rowing Club apparently made up their minds that there should be no mistake with their second fixture. This was brought to a conclusion this afternoon before a small but appreciative gallery, who were agreed that the afternoon's doings were replete with interest and the racing considerably above the average in quality. The preliminary heats were brought off on Thursday and Friday, and of course it rained heavily on the first day, and even this afternoon the proceedings were ushered in with a couple of smart showers. Much interest was taken in the preparation of the crews for the Class Fours, but this was not carried out without incidents which threatened to wreck the event. The temporary indisposition of two members of the Peepulputty crew ended in their scratching : the Merchants for the same reason had to find a substitute for number 2 the day before the finals, while on Friday evening their cox fell a victim to a carriage accident ! But the preliminary heat and the final gave us two pretty races, the winners in each case securing the verdict by a few feet and in better time than has yet been done over the half mile course in tub fours The victory of the Services was somewhat of a surprise, for three of the crew were novices ; they, however, had the advantage of all being extremely fit, and this, together with sheer hard plugging, brought them through Wilson was most fancied for the Junior Sculls and Watson was second favourite, but they both succombed to Burke, (Jr.) who, sculling in one of the old skiffs, managed to beat them and at the same time knock very many seconds off the previous best time The Ladies' Sculling Race, viewed in the light of the keenness of the contestants and the closeness of the finishes, was one of the best features in the regatta. The usual scratch fours brought the afternoon to a close, and the prizes were distributed by Mrs R. P. Wilson. Details :—

CLASS FOURS—¼ Mile.

First Heat.

Kidderpore Station. The Services,				Calcutta Station. The Banks,
Capt. H.W Gardiner	Bow			H. Langford,	Bow
Lieut. H E. Szczepanski	2			A. J. M. Carroll	2
Capt. R P. Wilson	3	beat		L. R. Carter	3
Dr. W. C. Hossack	Stroke			C. V. Green,	Stroke
Mrs. Szczepanski	Cox			D. Carvill,	Cox

They were sent off to a fairly good start and were level for a couple of hundred yards, the Services rowing a short quick stroke and the Bankers keeping it fairly long. The Service boat quickened up about the middle of the course and were more than half a length ahead when they were two hundred yards from the post. After this the Bankers began a good spurt which was, however, timed too late, for, though they were overhauling the leaders at every stroke at the finish and had got the nose of their boat in front two strokes past the post, they were beaten by about a yard, after a most excellent race. Time—2mins 56⅕secs.

Second Heat.

The Merchants.				Peepulputty.
H. W. Hales	Bow			G. Watson	Bow
H. S. Bull	2			G. Peddie	2
C. S. Wilson	3	vs.		J. Graves	3
J. M. LeCocq	Stroke			F. R. S. Charles	Stroke
J. Massey Dawson	Cox			Miss Maxwell	Cox

Peepulputty having scratched, the Merchants had a row over and went straight into the final.

Final.

The Services	beat	The Merchants

Despatched on level terms, the Services crept ahead till at the half distance they had a lead of about three quarters of a length and looked as if they might draw away. The Merchants, however hung on and came up fast in their finishing spurt (which was unfortunateiy spoilt by their stroke unshipping his oar) and were beaten by about two feet. Time—2mins 53secs.

JUNIOR SCULLS.—¼ mile.

First Heat.

C. S. Wilson vs. H. S Bull (scratched.)

G. Watson	beat	H. W. Hales.

This was practically a paddle over for the winner, who having disposed of his opponent after three hundred yards increased his lead to about five lengths, an advantage he maintained to the finish. Time—3mins. 15⅕secs.

Third Heat.

W. C. Burke, a bye.

Fourth Heat.

W. C. Burke	beat	C. S. Wilson.

They were let go to a good start Burke soon getting a lead which he increased to about two lengths when half the course had been sculled : Wilson began to decrease the gap from this course and in a capital finish Burke lasted out and won by something less than the length of his canvas. Time—2mins. 49secs.

Final.

Calcutta Station.		Kidderpore Station
W. C. Burke	beat	G. Watson

Burke shot ahead at once and maintaining the lead throughout, while encouraged by yells of "go it Dryden" from an old Oundelian on the bank, won by six feet. Time—2mins. 52 secs. (record).

LADIES' RACE—300 YARDS.

Mrs. R. P. Wilson vs. Miss Norman (scratched.)

Mrs. Hume Spry	beat	Miss. Hingley
H. Langford cox		Mrs. Oakley cox

The winner established a lead soon after the start and won easily by two lengths. Time—1 min 43secs.

Third Heat.

Miss Maxwell beat Mrs. Scott (scratched).

Fourth Heat.

Mrs. Szczepanski a bye.

Semi-Final.

Mrs. R. P. Wilson	beat	Mrs. Szczepanski
Dr. W. C. Hossack Cox		Mrs. Beachcroft Cox

Mrs. Hume Spry	beat	Miss. Maxwell
H. Langford Cox		F. R. S. Charles Cox

A capital race. They kept together till a hundred yards from home when Miss Maxwell had a lead of half a length, but a strong spurt by her opponent brought them level before they came abreast of the pontoon and gave Mrs. Spry the victory by about three feet. Time—1min. 40secs.

Final.

Calcutta Station.		Kidderpore Station.
Mrs. R. C. Wilson	beat	Mrs. Hume Spry
Dr. W. C. Hossack Cox		H. Langford Cox

H. W. Hales	Bow			W. D. Braithwaite	Bow
Lt. H. E. Szczepanski	2			A. J. Carroll	2
L. R. Carter	3	beat		J. Black	3
F. R. S. Charles	Stroke			C. V. Green	Stroke
Mrs. Szczepanski	Cox			D. Carvill Cox

Dr. W. C. Hossack	Bow			H. Langford	Bow
H. A. Smyth	2			Lt. W. Hume Spry	2
J. A. Tassie	3	beat		Capt. R. P. Wilson	3
J. M. LeCocq	Stroke			J. W. Barrett	Stroke
Mrs. R. P. Wilson	Cox			D. Carvill Cox

Final.

Mr. J. M. LeCocq's crew	beat	Mr F. R. S. Charles' crew.

Won easily by two and a half lengths. Time—1min. 12secs.

London, Friday, 15th July 1904.

FROM the commencement of the motor movement, or rather from the time that motor cars proved practical conveyances, there has been a demand for a cheap car that would not be beyond the dreams of men with moderate means. We refer more to a car costing about £100 to £150. It was some time before manufacturers devoted their attention to the requirements of the humbler members of the community ; they could not turn out the eight or ten hundred pounds cars quick enough, so it was not likely they were going to trouble about the cheaper car. At last a few makers put on the market a small cheap car which they termed a voiturette. but as these were invariably fitted with an engine only developing 3½ or 4½ horse-power, it is not surprising that they failed to give satisfaction. Apart from frequent breakdowns, the engines were nothing like sufficiently powerful to mount an ordinary hill and the passengers were obliged to alight and frequently help in the undignified process of pushing the car up. It was not long before the discovery was made that these so termed cheap cars were expensive luxuries and a continual source of worry into the bargain.

Here we are in 1904 and the man of moderate means is still waiting for his motor. How much longer he will have to wait rests entirely with the members of the trade, for there is no doubt that if they were so inclined a car costing about £150 could be produced to-morrow: not a toy that carries the outward appearance of a motor but possesses no insides, but a sturdy reliable car that would go up hill and down dale at a speed well up to the legal limit. What the public require is an inexpensive car ; simple, reliable and possessing seating accommodation for three or four persons. High speed must not be entertained, sixteen or eighteen miles an hour would be sufficient, but the engine must develop sufficient power to easily mount any ordinary hills. The wheels might be shod with solid tyres since speed is not required, and this would reduce the initial cost as well as keep down the cost of upkeep. The aim of the maker who comes to the rescue of the middle-class man must be to simplify the engine and works, discarding as much as possible the formidable mechanical devices found in the high priced cars which require a skilled mechanic to understand, and, to produce a car which anyone with ordinary ability or intelligence could manage himself.

I did not stay in London last Saturday to attend the cycle meeting at Crystal Palace track, but accepted a seat on a friend's car and ran up to Manchester, starting on the Friday evening and so covering the best part of a hundred miles over night. As to the run up I do not intend saying more than that we arrived in Manchester in nice time for a good lunch before making our way to the race track where the Manchester Wheelers were holding their coming of age meeting. My object in travelling so far afield was to confirm my opinion as to the riding of E. Payne, the promising rider—indeed, I should say the crack rider—of Worcester. My opinion of this rider was more than substantiated, indeed, he is a marvel, possessing a wonderful turn of speed and judgment that few riders have ever equalled. One can only regret that he has not the facility of training on an up-to-date track ; if he had, no one could touch him. It was in the race for the new Muratti Gold Vase a little trophy valued at 110 guineas, that Payne displayed such judgment. The distance was ten miles and the starters consisted of the leading speedmen of the northern counties :—T. Sherratt of Wigan, H. Monks, E. Payne, J. S. Benyon, Lawcock, Banks, and several others. Early in the race Sherratt bent on breaking up the field, piled on the pace with Benyon freezing on to his back wheel. Faster and faster he went, but Benyon would not be dropped and the pair established a good lead from the crowd. But they gained the lead at a great price for all the while Payne was riding at an even pace and eventually caught up the two exhausted riders and even did a little pacing Towards the finish of the race he took an easy position about third or fourth place, and awaited the bell signaling the last lap. When the bell rang out, Payne's head dropped, and he started on his long lap sprint arriving home a good two lengths ahead of Benyon in 24mins. 57⅗secs. It was a grand race at a grand meeting, which the 20,000 spectators fully appreciated. I have not seen a better attended meeting for some considerable time, and the Manchester Wheelers must have reaped a harvest of about £1,000 over the afternoon's sport. They have always been fortunate in having fine weather : in the twenty-one years that they have held meetings rain only interfering on one occasion.

A gentleman living in Croydon, through which the famous Brighton Road runs, devoted two hours of a recent Sunday morning in counting the numbers of motors and cycles that passed a certain point on the outskirts of the town. Motor-cars numbered 125 containing 178 men and 50 ladies ; there were 125 lady cyclists and 1,797 male cyclists, in all 2,047 or 17 per minute. The small number of lady cylists would almost indicate that there was a falling off in lady riders, but it must be remembered that a large majority of ladies never ride on Sundays, since they have the whole week to devote to cycling, while many of those who do, prefer to seek out less frequented roads where they would not be inconvenienced by the clouds of dust raised by cars and cycles.

Major R. Skeffington Smyth (Coldstream Guards) says.
January 23rd, 1904.

"Your ·360 Cordite rifle put a soft nosed nickel bullet through the neck of a Hippopotamus at 170 yards range. The bullet passed through the neck and came out the farside. I am extremely pleased with the above Rifle and its excellent stopping powers."

Mr. T. P. A. Holford writes :

"I am writing to tell you about the Double Hammerless Ejector ·360 Cordite Rifle you built for me, and which I used on my last Big Game shoot in British East Africa and Uganda. I consider it the most perfect and reliable weapon I have used for Big Game. With it I killed everything from the size of a Guinea Fowl to Rhinoceros, including Lion, Zebra. Wildebeeste, Waterbuck, and many other Antelope and Gazelle. Its accuracy, striking and stopping powers are extraordinary : of the latter, the bullets cut out of dead game, which I also forward, will give you a very good idea. While writing this I might also add, that I am very pleased with the Double Hammerless ·450 Cordite Rifle you built me having done very good work with it in the Rocky Mountain."

Evans' High Velocity "Magazine" Cordite Rifle.

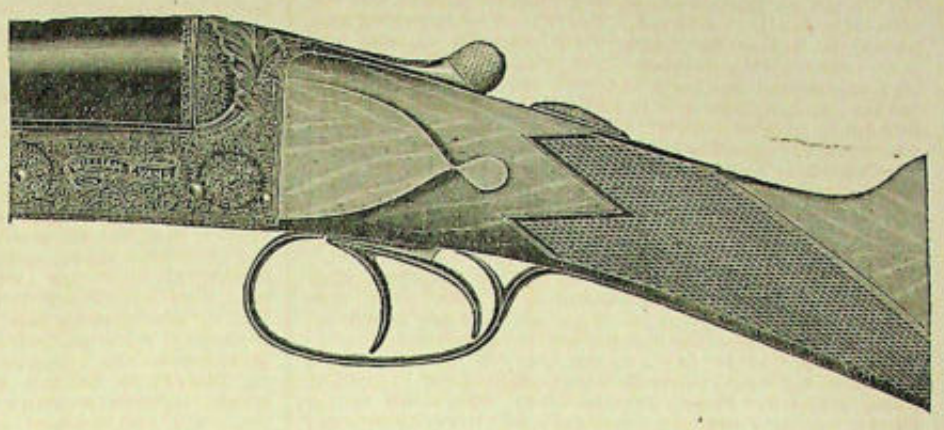
12, 15, and 17 Guineas.
Weight about 7½ lbs.

The charge of powder is 40 grains of Cordite and 270 grain Bullet, either solid nickel, soft nosed lead or lead nose split.



The above Rifle has been specially designed for those sportsmen requiring a Magazine Rifle, burning a modern high velocity charge and heavy bullet. The Magazine takes a clip holding five Cartridges. The bolt of action is fitted with a safety catch. This is a thoroughly reliable weapon for Deer Stalking, light and handy. The striking energy of this Rifle will be found very much more effective on game than the Mannlicher, Mauser, or 303 Lee Metford.

At last there are hopes of the long standing dispute between the National Cyclists' Union and the Scottish Cyclists' Union on the one part, and the Irish Cyclists' Association on the other part, being satisfactorily settled. Some two or three years ago the Irish lady, annoyed at the International Union suspending two of their best amateurs, resigned from that body without even giving necessary notice as stipulated in the agreement, with the result that the Irish riders have been unable to compete in England or Scotland and the riders affiliated to the Unions of these two countries from racing in Ireland, an unfortunate state of affairs that has fallen much harder on the Irishmen, since their area of racing is more restricted. The National Cyclists' Union, however, has now offered to arrange a Conference in London with the view of terminating the International dispute and the Irish Cyclists' Association have unanimously agreed to the basis of arbitration as suggested by the National Cyclists' Union. In the interest of the pastime it is to be hoped that a satisfactory arrangement will be arrived at.

There is a police officer at Skyness who possesses great determination and pluck, but unfortunately lacks the ability of effecting a dignified capture when mounted on a bicycle. Not long ago a man had stolen a ladies' bicycle from a lady of the town, and hearing that the thief had taken a certain road the constable mounted his bicycle and started in hot pursuit. After some miles of fast riding he had the satisfaction of coming up with his man, and the capture appeared an easy matter. But not so. The officer had never experienced capturing a man whilst mounted on a cycle and his first attempt resulted in the dignified officer falling on to the roadway. Nothing daunted, the brave man again mounted his machine and after a chase of another eight miles in length he was once more alongside of the thief. This time he displayed more caution in collaring the man and they rode along together neck and neck for several more miles and still the thief was free. At last the officer fearing that he might lose his man altogether, adopted the effectual though undignified method of charging the thief's cycle, and the pair rolled over together into a ditch, the policeman's cycle, being a complete wreck.

The oldest newspaper in the world is the Chinese journal King-Pau or Capital Sheet, which was first published at Peking in the year 911. For nearly two centuries and a half the paper only appeared at irregular intervals, but after the year 1351 it was published weekly for over 500 years until 1882, when it started to bring out three editions every day.

A correspondent, inspired by recent events on the links, sends us a golfing question :—When was it that Alex. Herd Johnny Ball? The answer, of course, is when James Braid.

"One of the scientists says virtue is merely a disease with some people." "My goodness!" exclaimed the lady who was preparing for a season in New York society, "I wonder if it's catching?"

"For ten years," said the new boarder, "my habits were as regular as clockwork. I rose on the stroke of six; half an hour later was down at breakfast; at seven I was at work; dined at twelve; ate supper at six, and was in bed at 9-30; ate only hearty food, and hadn't a day's illness all the time."

"Dear me," said a hearer, in sympathetic tones; "and what were you in for?"

CRICKET AT BANGALORE.

BANGALORE vs. BELLARY.—This two days' fixture was concluded on the 28th ultimo, and resulted in a win for Bangalore by 50 runs. The scoring was low, H. P. Ainslie (35 not out), doing best for the visitors, while H. A. Harris (31) and B. A. Manson (30) were top scorers for Bangalore. Manson also bowled with success, taking 8 wickets for 48 runs in the second innings. Standage secured five for 19 in the first innings. Score :—

CRICKET CHAT.

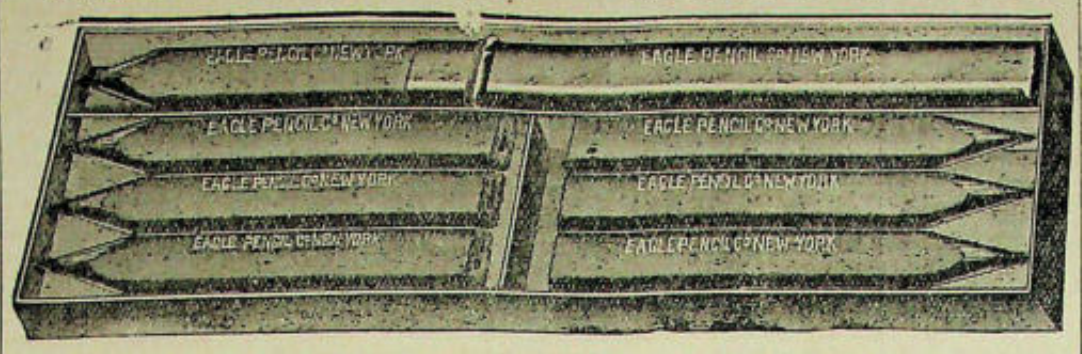
E. H. D. SEWELL, the erstwhile Madras cricketer and Essex County player took, a little relaxation from the exigences of first-class cricket during the week, 1st to 7th July, and played in two club games with very different results. In the first games for Moor Hall vs. Incogniti he only scored 4 and 6, but his failure with the bat was in large degree atoned for by his success with the ball as he captured eight wickets for six runs apiece. In the second match the old Bedfordian accomplished a rare feat. Playing for Essex Club and Ground vs. Forest School he scored 232 which included twenty-nine fours and a six, and only just missed taking all ten wickets in his opponents' innings accounting for nine of them for 41 runs. T. G. M. Harris, the old Reptonian and Bombay Presidency cricketer playing for the old Reptonians vs. Hampstead C.C. was not very successful only scoring 6 and taking one wicket Captain R. E. E. Krickenbeck, another well-known Bombay player, was equally unsuccessful in a match for Surbiton against the Wanderers, being only able to notch 2.

Ernest Steel, the old Bombay cricketer, scored 39 and 12 for Liverpool and District against Cambridge University and captured six wickets in the first innings for 65 runs. Major C. E. Greenway, the old Calcutta cricketer, has been batting in very fine form for Incogniti and in a recent club match—Married vs. Single—scored 42.

The first news I have had this season of the doings of the Quetta cricketers, will be particularly interesting to Bombay Presidency cricketers by reason of the success of Captain L. M. R. Deas, the Presidency fast bowler, who only arrived in the Station from England a few weeks ago. Playing for the Gymkhana against a Garrison eleven he curiously enough proved a comparative failure as a bowler, but met with great success with the bat scoring 92 out of the total of 197 made by his side, and having the bad luck to be given out caught off a bump ball. The only other batsman on the side who did at all well was Captain Sarel a brother of the player of the same name, who has occasionally helped Surrey this year. The Garrison team gave a poor display being dismissed twice for an aggregate of 115. In the first innings they could not make head or tail of T. Pearce's deliveries, the old Sukkur, who had the remarkably fine figures of 9 wickets for 13 runs. In the second innings, Vernon Harcourt secured seven wickets for 21 runs, also a useful performance. The Presidency Selection Committee might go further and fare worse than look for a couple of bowlers at Quetta.

It's a far cry from Quetta to Bangalore, but to the latter station I must turn next where two very interesting games have been played during the past week. In the first of these which was between the Subalterns of the station and The Rest the Subalterns won an exciting game by 13 runs. Their team was a strong one and included B. E. A. Manson, the Madras and Bombay Presidency player, E. R. Udal, one of the members of the cricketing brotherhood of that name, H. J. H. Davson, who has earned a great reputation in Bellary cricket as a bat during the past two years, H. A. Hildebrand, the old Marlburian, C. S. Rolland and R. Cooper. Manson proved to be the highest contributor in their innings of 135 with 27, and Cooper 20, and Hanson 17 did best of the other six men who obtained double figures. Captain Standage and Major Jollie bowled well for The Rest, each taking three wickets for 15 and 26 runs, respectively. The feature of the match from a batting point of view was the fine innings of 57 by P. L. Moore for The Rest. Captain Copeland (14), Buckle (14), and Dredge (12), were the only other men who entered double figures, most of the side being completely at sea with the bowling of Ruck who captured four wickets for 11 runs. The other match was between teams got up by Captain Standage and Major Jollie, the chief feature of which was the excellent innings played by E. R. Udal, for the latter side which won by 17 runs. The old Wykehamist scored 49 out of the total of 108, the only other double figures on the side being J. Russell's 15, and General Nixon's 13. The first-named bowled well, taking six wickets for 32 runs. H. A. Harris with 22 was the largest contributor to the total of Captain Standage's side. Captain Standage who showed such fine form last season has not been able to do much so far this season, but will doubtless come on later.

Cricket at Bellary seems to have taken a new lease of life, but I hardly dare put this down to the remarks I made a couple of weeks ago, regarding the slackness of cricketers of the station. Anyhow the game is being played with greater keenness now, and in a recent match between the Musketry School and The Rest of Bellary, some good cricket was shown by both sides. Captain Ainslie played a fine innings of 57 for the school which with double figure contributions from de Hoghton, Matthews, Jeffreys, Homan, and Strickland brought the total up to 179. The Rest had unfortunately to bat two short and were only able to compile 129. H. C. Sinclair, the old Dharwar player, scored 60, and C. W. Watney, the old Sherbornian, 33. The latter also bowled well taking five wickets.



My notes this week take me practically all over India and I must cover a long distance from Bellary to Mhow. Matches at the latter station are invested with considerable interest to Presidency supporters in view of the probable selection of one or more Mhow players for the match against the Parsees. In a game last Thursday between the Gymkhana and the York and Lancaster Regiment several good performances were recorded. The Gymkhana who totalled 165 had chiefly to thank Captain E. Sanlez, who contributed 53 and then had to retire as scores were limited to 50. Another player, H. P. Chaplin, who is considered to have a good chance of being selected to play for the Presidency scored 32, while Colonel Aspinall contributed 23. The York and Lancaster scored 118 for four wickets, Lieutenant Pratt with 52 and Lieutenant Bird with 36 doing best. A. C. Cameron who captured five wickets bowled well for the regiment.

The curtain has rung down on the Naini Tal season which this year has been more interesting than usual. In the last match of the season which was between the Gymkhana and The Station, the former won easily by 99 runs. Harris (70), Marr-Johnstone (34), Norrington (33), Campbell (29), and Guest (17), all had successful knocks for the Gymkhana and the total was 214. The natives all wonder Ram Lall failed with the bat for The Station and only one batsman—Muttra Dutt—who carried his bat through the inning for 51 out of the total of 115 was able to do anything with the bowling. The P. and O. Co.'s mail steamer Oceana last Saturday carried away a number of well-known cricketers who are proceeding home on leave. Among them I noticed the names of Major Hon'ble F. W. Brand, the old Etonian and Mhow cricketer, J. Cornes, of the Bengal I. C. S. the old Cliftonian, Lieutenant R. M. Logan, who bowled so well for the Outstation vs. Simla this season, J. L. Maffy, of the United Provinces C. S., the old Rugbean, B. N. Bosworth-Smith, of the Punjab C. S., the old Harrovian and Middlesex County cricketer, Major W. C. Cox, Captain A. b. Longden, Lieutenant-Colonel T. H. Plumer, Major E. E. Norris, and Major S. Browne. Authentic reports of the wonderful batting form shown by Major Clifford this season reach me from Ahmedabad. In four matches played up to the beginning of last week this batsman was able to point to an average of over 200, his innings including two of three figures and several topping the half century. He was not out of course on several occasions which gives him his high average. 200 is a useful kind of average to have and makes one wonder what manner of batsman Major Clifford is. An indifferent batsman could certainly never hope to look near an average like this even if the bowling were the greatest tosh ever sent down.

The Dharwar Gymkhana recently took on the local school and defeated them by 48 runs on the first innings. J. Monteath was not playing, but L. C. Crump and Greyfoot, the local medico batted well while Oliver and Crump bowled effectively.

SEMI-FINALS.

CALCUTTA vs. DALHOUSIE.—The meeting of these teams on the 27th instant was looked forward to with the greatest interest. The Dals had won two splendid games but were not in anything like good form when they met the premier club. The weather conditions were miserable and the ground in a very slippery state. The play throughout the first moiety was not very brilliant V. Sherman scored the first goal for Calcutta and the home team led at the interval. On changing ends Calcutta got going and quite out-played their opponents. H. Cooper and V. Sherman netted a goal each, the Dalhousie team being thus defeated by three goals to nil. Teams :—

Final.

CALCUTTA vs. THE KING'S OWN.—The final in the tournament was played on the Calcutta ground last Saturday There was a huge crowd, and the charities, to whom the gate receipts went, must have benefited to a large extent. The rain came down at the beginning of the match and made the ground very greasy, play being very slow in consequence. The Soldiers went away at at the start, but Calcutta soon found their feet and began to press, and after one or two unsuccessful attacks a pass by Cudlip was banged through by H. Cooper. The game was very even till the interval. On resuming the rain spoilt the play and the game was very unintersting. Then the Soldiers made a great effort and pressed hard. They forced corner after corner but could not get through, and the game ended a win for Calcutta by a goal to nil. Teams:—

CALCUTTA F. C.—Dodds, goal; Gahan and V Cooper, backs; Ansell, Crawford and Maunder, half-backs; Cudlip, MacDonald, H. Cooper, V. Sherman and Ismay, forwards.

KING'S OWN.—Sinker, goal; Stokes and Mellor, backs; Quin, Standish and Leonard, half-backs; Whittingham, Carman, Ennis, Diggle and Jones, forwards.

Referee,—Mr. J. Grieg, D. F. C.

The following are complete results of the tournament :—

First Round.

King's Own beat Howrah United by 3 to 0.
Rangers beat Y M C A by 4 to 0.
Calcutta beat Hare Sporting by 2 to 0.
Dalhousie beat Hornets by 2 to 1, after a drawn of one all.

Second Round.

Calcutta beat Rangers by 2 to 0.
King's Own beat Chinsurah by 12 to 0.
Dalhousie beat the Royal Irish by 1 to 0.

Semi-Finals.

Calcutta beat Dalhousie by 3 to 0.
King's Own beat Sova Bazar by 13 to 0.

Final.

Calcutta F C beat King's Own by 1 to 0.

FOOTBALL NOTES.

THE King's Own defeated Sova Bazar on Thursday last by 12 or 13 goals to nil. One lost count of the score during the second half as goals were added so rapidly. Rain fell in torrents and the ground was more like a duck-pond than a football field, but the referee and both teams were determined the fixture should come off. As may be imagined, the game was more like water polo than football and needs no description.

Calcutta and the King's Own met on Saturday in the final struggle for the I. F. A. Shield, but unfortunately what should have been a great match was spoiled by rain. The ground was in splendid condition, but the heavy showers that fell at intervals during the evening made the turf so greasy that the players could at times hardly keep their feet, and the ball was so difficult to control that miskicks were frequent. The King's Own started off with a great rush, and Calcutta had a bad quarter of an hour, but their defence, though sorely tried, was equal to all emergencies, the halves and V. Cooper at back playing an excellent game, after getting over the nervousness of the first few minutes. Calcutta now and then got away, but it was not until nearly half time that their forwards became dangerous, and H. Cooper scored from an excellent pass by Cudlip. The teams crossed over with the score one to love in favour of the Civilians, and further scoring was confidently anticipated by the spectators, but although both teams seemed to have plenty of chances, the state of the ball prevented anything like accurate passing or shooting. During the final ten minutes the King's Own gained no less than five corners and pressed for all they were worth, so that it seemed almost certain they would make a draw of it, but Dodds and the back division were not to be beaten, and the game ended with the score as at half time.

Sinker played a good game in goal for the King's Own and the halves were in fairly good form, but the best man in the team was undoubtedly Mellor, who played a splendid game at back. Ennis was the pick of the forwards, but the others, although they played well, indulged in too much of the usual dodging in front of goal, and lost many an opportunity by playing too close together. It was unfortunate for Calcutta that H. Sherman, who played such a good game throughout the League, was unable to play owing to injuries received in the Dalhousie match, but Ismay, who took his place, was a good substitute and worked well throughout. H. Cooper was, as usual, the mainstay of the team, and considering the conditions, played a splendid passing game. Ansell was back in the half line, much to the relief of the Club's supporters, and considerably enhanced his reputation, and Crawford and Maunder were as good as ever. V. Cooper was the best of the backs, but in spite of a few miskicks, played excellently, and Dodds in goal was as safe as the proverbial church. The game cannot be compared with last year's magnificent struggle, but Calcutta deserved their win and Maunder, who has worked so hard to keep the team together, must have felt extremely proud when presented with the much coveted Shield.

Barring the final fight for the Trades' Cup and several minor pots in which native teams are chiefly interested, the Calcutta soccer season is over. We may not have had such brilliant football as in 1903, but competition has been as keen as ever and the close finish between the first four teams in the League, to say nothing of the Civil vs. Military match and the games played by Dalhousie in the Shield tournament, have provided lovers of the game with plenty of sensational incidents and some excellent sport.

It will be seen that Calcutta went through the tournament without having a single goal scored against them—a very creditable performance

In closing these "Notes" for the season it is but fitting that some mention should be made of those gentlemen who have given up so much of their spare time to act as referees, and in other ways to further the interests of the game. The hearty thanks of the sporting public are their due, and the best appreciation of their services we can offer is the wish that we may see the conduct of football affairs in the same hands next season.

TOUCH.

INDIA AT FOOTBALL.

AN IMPRESSION.

"TOOT TOOT" goes the Referee's whistle; then the brain grows dizzy with the babel of technicalities. You see as in a dream groups of panting, perspiring, mud bespattered figures, some in multicoloured raiment, and others almost in puris naturalibis. They rush, they push, they run a joust crab fashion with arms akimbo, they wallow in the sad coloured slush and rise to wallow again. Shins barked, hair dishevelled, faces flushed and eyes bloodshot, they bear down on the checkered posts with their bellying network. There is a frantic rush, a scrambling, tearing, bumping; down goes the goalkeeper, through the posts shoots the slimy leathern sphere, and then a hoarse shout of "Goal!" from thousands of voices. This is football on the Calcutta maidan.

The general tactics are the same all the world over perhaps, but then we have a special element in Calcutta; we have a distinct individuality in the matter of football crowds, and above all, we have variety. Variety of expression, variety of colour, variety of fragrance, and finally variety of ethics. If you don't believe it go and see for yourself. Don't go to see Calcutta play or New York or Regent Street, or the East Walkings, nor yet the Heaven's Own, the Pride of Champtollah 45th Lane, or the Spensarian aborigines of College Street; but go to see India play football. Stroll aimlessly on to our breezy inheritance. From our national note of exclamation, (revelling in the grandoise misnomer of the Ochterlony Monument) thread your way haltingly, observantly, past boundary flags and goal posts, right away into the armpits of our ancient popgun store and see what you see. Then tell me, if you can, that our great white civilization is not Heaven sent, that Britain should not have conscription, or that the feet you see are not feet of clay!

I was on the maidan one evening. It doesn't matter which evening, but, if you really care, say Saturday evening, July, which, like "No. 1 Calcutta" is neither here nor there. The birds, etcetera, were chirping and so forth and the crows were noisily discussing the utility of the park of silent jingals from the jong which occupy a picturesque position under a clump of trees on the north of Ochterlony Road. On the base of the "Munimint" were littered the Cosmopolitan Cherubim and Seraphim of Bentinck Street, Crooked Lane, the purlieus of Esplanade East and Chowringhee, while around and about, as far as the eye could reach, was football.

Ahsin, little slanteyed Ahsin, with his pigtail writhing over his body, was beside me. There were also Ahsin's team and the team of Yuhsin : five and-a-half in all, and a variegated rubber sphere copiously pitted, but withal a thing to be tossed on the little square toes of Ahsin and Yuhsin and the other venial sins. There was not much of a crowd watching the game, notwithstanding its celestial importance, so I had no difficulty in getting a favourable position. Ahsin had just scored his six hundred and fifth goal from a magnificent pass from the half when I moved on.

* * * * *

Here a dense crowd was watching a game between soldiers and an active Bengalee team. Suddenly there was a goal scored, and in the confusion of exultation I contrived to deftly occupy a front place much to the chagrin of a brawny Scot who amused himself by squirting jets of fragrant nicotine with unerring aim into the fold of my trouser leg.

"Its nae gude (squirt) tae shute frae theer mon" bawled the chiel over my ear.

"Drubble it up an' centher" roared another.

"Now ye have it! Shute! Shute!! from a hundred throats.

Then "Goal! What? Weel if that's nae gule I'll be—"

"Hoot awa mon, canna ye see he was offside?

Whar did ye larn futeball? roars another.

"Chuck him oot" says a third. "Yer mighty shairp with yer whustle—and so forth and so on. It was getting too exciting. I pitied the Referee, but left him to his fate; for who could check the strident voice of the barracker?

* * * * *

Here was peace. It was half time on the Bagh Bazaar Rangers' ground. I leant wearily against a tree and watched the checkered sunlight playing on a score of pink and white guernseys as the erstwhile muddied oafs denuded two sweetmen's trays of their greasy contents. Bepin had scored a goal in the first half and Bepin was "excellent player forsooth" Nobin was "shentre forward" and told of how by a "most beautiful" shot he had missed the posts by a fractional part of an inch. How radiant they looked! surely was he a great man who had brought this civilization into the land! I would have gone on soliliquising rapturously had not a fiendish meat pasty vendor near me stirred up his dying embers with a drop of oil and almost chocked me.

I must hasten if I would see more football. I cross a road and come on another field, another crowd and another lot of footballers. It is a nice gentlemanly game. Silence among the players, a judicious enthusiasm among the audience and the occasional "toot toot" of the Referee. In fact a model game with nothing eventful, not even a foul to break the monotony of the ding donging and sky kicking There will be a goal perhaps, but I cannot wait to see it.

Through the crowds and the trees I discern more matche in progress. Round one is a solid wall of khaki—an inters company game I learn from enquiry. Here you see Tommy at his best. Every fibre in his anatomy is alive. He is fighting for honour—honour in the barrack room, round the mess table and in the canteen—in his own little world. It matters not to him what the civilians think, if they think at all, but at his supper of froth and Virginia he must be able to say how "A" won, how Gibson of the inner left took a clinking shot from a corner, how Jones saved a stinger, how he himself headed into goal out of a hot scrimmage, and all in the reek of the gurgling grog and the haze of a hundred pipes. So he plays on grim and determined.

But this is only half of what you can see on the maidan. I must now cross the Via Appia with its double stream of silently gliding vehicles and liveried coachmen. I almost fear to tread on the sacred red dust for there up and down and down and up again go the Monsoon Gods and Goddesses, gazing languidly yet pityingly withal on the common herd of grovelling mortals below who knew not the joys of rubber tyres nor yet the pleasant rat tat of the bill collecting sircar. I hover for an instant over the wreck of a road lamp and then on and across, cowering under the withering glance of a Juno with two poodles. This by the way.

I am soon in the thick of the football again. I stand for awhile to watch a scrimmage near a goal. The custodian—I believe this is the correct word to use—is on pins and needles Would it come! and when? Ah here it is. Bounding, bumping. like a living thing it flies out of the riot of feet and is coming down strait for the posts. "Look out Smith." Smith is a burly back and of imminent resource. He looks out accordingly, but it is a warped vision, for he bears down on the ball and as it reaches his Trilbies he deftly and, I sorrow to say, most deliberately kicks it into touch. "Toot" goes the whistle and the goal is saved. What ingenuity! But it's football all the same—Calcutta football.

* * * * *

All around me is a bewildering maze of active humanity. I stroll on slowly, watching now this game now that and before I know where I am I have come upon Jhuggroo's Night Hawks in desperate conflict with the Hogg Market Rovers under the distinguished leadership of Pultoo. I regret to say that just as I arrived a dispute was in progress as to the extact position of Pultoo's loincloth which served as one of the goal posts. Jhuggroo, with all the pride of race, was denouncing Pultoo and his following for having sinned most revoltingly in lessening the width of his goal posts. Of course it is questionable whether the umbrella and walking stick, which did duty as Jhuggroo's goal posts, had not already made for an entente cordiale, but I did not feel called upon to lend my face to the mutual recriminations in transit, and left accordingly having recorded my respectful protest on behalf of the I. F. A.

* * * * *

Maung Bah's side had scarlet lungies on and Maung Tha Din's men were attired in a blue and white check. I don't know Burmese, I regret to acknowledge, so that when Kyan Maung jumped into the middle of Loong Quan's back, I did not understand the affectionate terms in which the latter spoke of the former's pretty Mah Thewe in distant Poozundaung. It must have been a foul, however, for Moung Thein Maung blew a syren whistle and Moung Bah had a free kick which little Pah O could not stop. I might mention, en passant, that I do not think much of the lungi as a football costume.

* * * * *

"Along" as an old friend of mine used to say when he wanted us to get along. There is a vast concourse of people over there yonder. On barrels, boxes, benches, tables, stools, in fact on anything a few feet above terra firma, are people mounted. Beneath them: thousands, and below them, squatting on the sward or on chairs, thousands again. On the fringe are vendors of meat pies, monkey nuts, beetle, cigarettes and the like, crying their viands and wares loud above the cacophony of the crowd. I would tell you what they were calling and how they called it, were it not "bad form" to know Hindustani. I would have you believe, therefore that I know more vernacular than my friend who went with the coronation contingent to London. I am within ten yards of the crowd when I feel it. Like St. Anthony of old, I am beset by evil things, some carry small stools, others jabber and point frantically at already groaning tables They promise me the best view of the game that anybody could wish to have. Then comes one who calls me "Papa." I am touched. I reward him munificently with a two anna bit and clamber up beside a fine upstanding pair of grey tweeds. I am out-classed, however, and can but indistinctly see flashes of red darting about the field. But there is one kinder than the others, he makes room by taking off a bashfully drooping panama, and I see. They are playing a fine and fast game. Out of a scrimmage on the left wing shoots the ball. A man is on it in the instant and dribbles it rapidly up while the crowd shouts encouragement. Now others are charging down upon him and he is near to losing the ball. Quick as though he passes, but alas it is intercepted and hard kicking back sends the leather spinning into the opposite country.

Five minutes more "to play" says a man at my side, "They must look sharp now."

And so they do. They know as much as the man who spoke and perhaps more. There is another rush: They come down in a gallant line, passing from head to head and foot to foot, and so they work it up to within a few yards of the goal posts. Now or never! Into the centre shoots the ball, an active young fellow steadies it a moment, then shoots straight, hard and low. The goal keeper is beaten at last, and by one of the prettiest shots I have ever seen. There is a roar of applause, hats and umbrellas fly high in the air. But this is no time to gloat. They must still play the game and the other side must have a chance before the time whistle goes. The ball is kicked off again and smarting under reverse, the losers brace themselves up to a final effort. But it is too late. A long drawn note on the Referee's whistle and the game is won. Then the cheering bursts out afresh as West mingles with East and the twain scurry off the ground.

How soon the light is failing. I traverse the scenes of all I've seen but everywhere is the hurrying crowd and nowhere that which a short half hour before had come to me.

And now dusk. Fleeting, chattering knots moving faster and faster. Perchance those little figures trailing away beyond the view are Pultoo and his iniquitous following, or weeny Ahsin, or Nobin and his pink guernsey. Let them go: They will be back anon.

Then dark and—desolation.

MADRAS 28*th July* 1904.

THIS tournament opened on the M.C.C. ground on Monday, the 25th ultimo, originally ten teams entered, but two, the M.C.C. "B" Team and the Bangalore Gymkhana scratched, leaving in the M.C.C. "A" team, the 1st Durham L. I. (the holders of the cup), the Leicestershire Regiment (last year's runners up), the Lincoln and Middlesex Regimental teams from Secunderabad, the Essex Regiment from Bangalore, the 52nd Co., R.G.A., from the Fort and the St. Thomas' Mount Hockey Club composed of officers and men of the R. F. A. Batteries stationed there. The scratching of the two teams mentioned let the M.C.C. "A" Team into the semi-finals without an effort and the preliminary tie call for little notice as the results were in each case a foregone conclusion. On Monday two matches were played. That between the Durham L. I. and the Lincolns ended in a runaway victory for the Durhams by 5 goals to nil; and, on the same day, the Leicesters defeated the Essex by 4 goals to 2. On Tuesday the Leicesters beat the Mount team by 3 goals to 1 without any difficulty while the Middlesex, of course, disposed of the Garrison Gunners by 3 goals to nil. In the semi-finals yesterday the M.C.C. met the D.L.I. and the game which resulted was so good as to call for a more detailed description than has been possible in regard to the preliminary ties. It was evidently the match of the tournament. Everything now points to the M.C.C. winning the tournament.

M.C.C. vs. DURHAM L.I.—The first round in the semi-finals of this tournament between the M.C.C. and the Durham L.I. was played off on the M.C.C. ground and resulted in one of the hardest fought and finest games that has been witnessed yet in this or any tournament played under the auspices of the Madras Cricket Club. Naturally it attracted a large and very representative gathering, both sides having numerous supporters. With the general public the military team were the favourites, but the local team having been playing a very fine game recently and those who had seen them playing up to their best form in practice games and trial matches felt that on that form they were quite equal to giving a good account of themselves in their struggle with their formidable opponents.

The game started very much later than usual, it being a good deal past the quarter when Bowers and Partridge faced each other for the bully off from which the Durhams were the first to get to work, making an incursion at once into the M.C.C. ground and calling upon Dawes to save, and a little later forcing a corner. The M.C.C. forwards had by this time got into their stride and got away on the left. Partridge and O'Reilly being conspicuous for a fine run. They were stopped, however, but the game still continued in the Durham's ground until McIver sent the ball behind. A fine bit of passing by the M.C.C. resulted in an obvious chance being given to Partridge who missed and later Ogden from the left wing came down before he could take advantage of the good chance sent him by his half-back. The M.C.C. halves, especially Strouts and Ross, were rendering yomen service at this stage of the game, and had their efforts been adequately supported by the forwards the M.C.C. score would have opened sooner. Greenwell and Bowers, always brilliant performers for the Durhams, were noticeable now for some determined efforts to get away and they received much support from Manghan on the left. A run by the first-named officer was well stopped by Atkinson and the ball quickly found its way back to Durham's ground, where the M.C.C. forwards and halves put in some play that drew repeated applause. It was good combined work and against less doughty opponents would have borne fruit in a crop of goals. As it was the Durhams were very hardpressed and it took all the work of their forwards to relieve the pressure. Greenwell, Cushway and Bowers working like Trojans to come out and keep out; but they found in W. Pelly a hard nut to crack. Play of the pace and quality that an appreciative gallery were now being treated to was found to have some result, and a fine combined rush by the entire front division resulted in Partridge drawing first blood in the shape of a goal for the M.C.C. The Durhams got away from the restart, and Manghan missed a good chance of scoring, and the M.C.C. got away and were getting very dangerous when Fraser was ruled offside. The local team came again and again and shortly before the period closed they were rewarded with a second goal, through the efforts of O'Reilly and Partridge, the actual shot again being taken by the latter. The Durham forwards again got away but only temporarily, again finding in Pelly a back whom it was almost impossible to pass, and when the whistle sounded Madras had still the upper hand. If the first half of the game, was a revelation to the uninitiated of the capabilities of the game the second half was even more so. Crossing over with a lead of two goals to nil it might have been thought that the M.C.C. had the result comparatively safe; but those who have seen the Durhams play know that they are never so dangerous as in the second half. It was with the consciousness that they had to meet a desperate and determined opponent that the M.C.C. team took the field again, and the result was again brilliant in the extreme and so fast as to almost defy all attempts to chronicle its varying phases, the forward division of both teams showing up grandly and playing with that mechanical combination which is the acme of good play. Greenwell and Bowers were playing all they knew, and supporters of the Durhams felt confident that if anything was to be done to retrieve the situation it would come from them, and they were not disappointed. Bowers taking advantage of a splendid opportunity scored with one of this characteristic strokes, and with the opening of their score the Wellington team worked like heroes only to meet with an opposition that did not confine itself to defensive measures and more than once Madras looked within an ace of adding to their score. A foul against O'Reilly stopped what was a certain score and then the Durhams got away and delivered their last and most sustained attack, and from a melee in front of goal they managed to equalise. The excitement became breathlessly intent with barely a couple of minutes left for play a drawn game seemed inevitable, but at the critical moment Strouts, Partridge, and Fraser rose to the occasion, and by one of the grandest exhibitions of passing scored the third and winning goal for the M.C.C. and both teams left the ground amidst the plaudits of a crowd who felt that irrespective of the result both teams had covered themselves with honour and glory. The following is the score :—

M.C.C., 3 goals; Durhan L.I. 2 goals.

The following are the teams :—

DURHAM L.I.—Goal, MacWilliams; backs, Manghan and, Trotter; Half-backs, Cook, Ellison, and Hill; forwards, Gardiner Greenwell, Bowers, Cushway, and Manghan.

MADRAS C.C.—Goal, Dawes; backs, Atkinson and Pelly; Half-backs, McIver, Strouts and Ross; forwards, Layards, Fraser, Partridge, O'Reilly and Ogden.

Schools on Saturday, the 23rd July, the venue being the North Point ground. A great deal of interest centred in this match as, unless the unforeseen happens, the Cup should fall to one of the two schools. The match was played in real Darjeeling weather. A heavy mist hung over the ground while rain fell almost throughout the game. However, in spite of the sloppy nature of the ground, the game was a very fast one. St. Joseph's put in two goals in the first half and St. Paul's one. No other points were scored although frequent attacks were made on both goals. St. Joseph's had the better of the exchanges as their back line was very strong. P. Read at back and Smart at centre-half played a very strong game and continually fed their forwards. In the front line, J. Owens who scored the two goals for the winners made many a brilliant run across the field and but for the strong defence of Sharling in goal would have added to the St. Joseph's score. He was well helped by McCoy and Greenway at the wings. For St. Paul's, August, who put in the goal for his side played a good game and was well supported by Mirza and Alison. The game evoked a deal of interest and the form displayed by the two schools was of a high order. Teams :—

ST. JOSEPH'S.—Goal, F. Singleton ; backs, P. Read, J. Martin, half-backs, Augier, Smart. J. Read ; forwards, McCoy, Owens; Stubbs, Robinson, Greenway.

ST. PAUL'S.—Goal, Sharling ; backs, McIntosh, Egan ; half-backs, Shaw, Beale, Campbell ; forwards, Alison, Corbett, August, Mirza, Kenny.

St. Joseph's College, North Point, and the Jalapahar team played off their tie on Thursday, the 28th ultimo. The venue was the North Point ground. The boys won easily to the tune of seven goals to one. The Military played a fast game but their defence was weak while the boys are in the pink of training. C. Stubbs was responsible for three goals while J. Owens and J. Robinson added a couple each.

The Naturalist.

BURROWING MAMMALS.

AS some mammals have taken to an arboreal mode of life, so others have adopted a fossorial or burrowing existence; the main reasons for this departure from the normal being apparently similar in the two instances, namely, in the first place to secure protection from enemies, and, secondly, in order to tap a food-supply inaccessible to dwellers on the surface. It is, however, mainly the completely subterraneous species, such as moles and mole-rats, that depend on an underground supply of food, the other, like rabbits and otters obtaining their nutriment above-ground, or in the water. Obviously, then, it was for the sake of protection that mammals first became dwellers in holes; the adoption of a completely subterranean existence being, so to speak, an after-thought. It is probable, indeed, that animals resorted to natural holes in the ground, before they took to excavating burrows for themselves; and also that from the practice of excavating such burrows as dwelling-places gradually arose, in some species, the habit of driving subterranean tunnels for the purpose of obtaining food, and the consequent adoption of a completely subterranean existence. Although it is exclusively the species which pass the whole of their time below ground that also depend entirely on a subterranean food-supply, yet it must not be supposed that none of the partially fossorial forms seek food at times below ground. For example, the fox burrows into rabbit-warrens for the purpose of preying on the young and helpless denizens of the latter; this, by the way, affording an instance where the burrowing habit has failed in its primary object;—namely, defence. Again, the whole tribe of weasels, stoats, and polecats have assumed their characteristic lithe and slender form of body is order to penetrate the burrows and tunnels of subterranean dwellers; the stoat and polecat hunting in this manner the rabbit, while the smaller weasel is enabled to pursue the the mole in its underground fastnesses.

That mammals should have been thus specially modified in form in order to be adapted to pursue other species below ground implies a long lapse of time; and this again serves to emphasize the extreme length of the period which must have elapsed since the pursued species themselves first took to a subterranean existence. Whether the pursuing species first took to following mere burrowers like rabbits, or tunnel-makers, like moles, may, however, have an important bearing on the time question, as the tunnel-borers may have undergone part of their own structural modifications subsequently to the time that the weasel tribe took to hunting below ground.

Be this as it may, the extent to which burrowing mammals have been modified away from the type characteristic of their above-ground relatives may be taken, to a great extent, as evidence of the relative length of time which has elapsed since they adopted an underground existence. Not that we are entitled to assume from this that a mole may have been a burrower for a longer period than a rabbit; since the rabbit is as perfectly adapted to its own particular mode of life as is the mole to the one selected by its ancestors. On the contrary, we must limit our comparisons to cases where all the conditions are similar; and can, therefore, only contrast with the mole species that are as completely subterranean in their parts as is that animal. When we find such a species presenting much less structural modification than the mole, we are entitled to say that it has probably taken to a subterranean existence at a later date than that animal

The nature of the modifications which have taken place in fossorial mammals in order to adapt them to the needs of a subterranean existence forms the subject of an article by Mr. H. M. Skimer in a recent issue of our contemporary the "American Naturalist;" the article in question forming part of the Series devoted to special modifications of an analogour nature, as exemplified by the one on arboreal modifications to which allusion has been previously made in our columns.

Amplyfying what we have said above as to the essential difference in this respect between a rabbit and a mole, the author observes that, as we should naturally expect, the modification and specialisation have been greatest in those forms which secure not only their safety but likewise find all their food underground. Such forms are completely fossorial. On the other hand, the use of the burrow merely as a place of refuge and repose, where the young may be produced in safety, while food is procured mainly above, ground, or, at all events, not in the burrow itself, requires much less structural modification. For mammals of this latter type the term semi fossorial is appropriate; although it must always be borne in mind that between completely fossorial and semi-fossorial forms no hard-and-fast line of demarcation can be drawn.

As regards the completely fossorial types, Mr. Skimer notices that the following are the chief lines on which external modification has taken place. In the first place, the body tends to assume a more or less spindle-like shape—fusiform—as being the one best adapted for progression in such a dense medium as earth. The moles for example, have the greatest girth at the shoulder, whence there is a gradual diminution in this respect to the muzzle. In certain semi-fossorial types, such as the marmots and wombats, the body is, however remarkable for its great thickness and bulk.

The rudimentary, or obsolete, condition of the eyes forms the next most important characteristic of the completely fossorial types or tunnel drivers. To an animal which spends the whole of its time underground in complete darkness eyes are not only useless, but are actually harmful, owing to the likelihood of their becoming inflamed by the intrusion of particles of earth. Consequently, in the case of completely fossorial mammalas the longer a species has been below ground and completely shut off from light, the more completely ought its eyes to have become degenerate. In other words, the degree of degeneration of the eyes ought to form a measure of the relative length of time which has elapsed since the species took to an underground mode of life. But here we must be careful to distinguish—more careful than is Mr. Skimer—between completely and partially fossorial types; or, in other words, between occasional and perpetual burrowers.

In the American pocket-gophers and the African sand moles for example, the eyes although relatively small, are still well developed and functional. But, since these creatures come periodically to the surface where the pocket-gophers at any rate obtain their food—it would obviously be wrong to say that they have taken to a subterranean existence at a later date than moles. The two cases are not comparable.

Among the completely fossorial types, in the mole-rats, the eyes, although complex in structure, are reduced to mere shining black specks among the muscles. On the other hand, in the marsupial mole of Australia they are very imperfectly developed and have become quite functionless. Again, in the true moles the eyes are completely vertigial, being in one species covered with skin, while in a second they are free; and their condition is much the same in the golden moles of South and East Africa, in which they are always overgrown with skin. Here, then, we are perhaps entitled to say that the mole has been longer subterranean than the mole-rat, as indeed we should infer from its more specialised limbs.

It will, of course, be obvious that, in accordance with their different habits, species like the moles and golden moles, in which the eyes have been most aborted, display much greater modification in the structure of the limbs than is the case with creatures like the pocket-gophers which retain well, developed eyes. In connection with diet, it may be mentioned that whereas the moles and golden moles drive their tunnels in search of earth-worms and grubs, the subterranean galleries of the mole-rats are constructed for the purpose of obtaining access to bulbs and other succulent roots.

The third external feature on which Mr. Skimer lays stress as being distinctive of burrowing animals is the small size or absence of the external ears, which if largely developed would clearly be a hindrance to their owners. In this respect fossorial mammals resemble there aquatic brethren; large external ears being a hindrance to "swimming' in both water and earth. Among burrowers, we find that the pocket-gophers and otters have the ears very small; while in the ratels they are minute, and in the sand-moles they become reduced to mere rings round the aperture of the internal ear. Finally, in the moles, the golden moles, and the marsupial mole, they have completely disappeared; as is also the case with the Australian duckbill, which is both a burrower and a swimmer. Many semi-fossorial species, to which acute hearing is of the utmost importance, such as the rabbit, the fennecs and the aard-vark of Africa, and the pig-footed bandicoot of Australia retain, however, ears of great length.

A large percentage of semi-fossorial mammals likewise depend upon their swiftness of foot for reaching their homes in safety, and to these length of limb is no less important than length of ear. In truly fossorial species, on the other hand, in which power and rapidity in digging are the essential qualifications so far as motion is concerned, we find the limbs greatly reduced in length, as is well exemplified in the case of the duckbill, the shiny ant-eater or echidna, the moles, golden moles, etc. The limbs are also shortened in the African aard-vark, which as we just seen, retains long ears; and the reason of this unusual correlation is not far to seek. For the aard-vark which spends the whole of the daylight hour deep down in the recess of its burrow, never wanders far from the entrance of the latter, and when abroad has to dig out the whitcants from their strongholds. Consequently long ears to give timely warning of the approach of danger, together with powerful limbs and claws for digging, are the two prime exigencies in the mode of existence of this creature, which can bury itself on the spot. Although certain semi-fossorial species, such as fennecs, pangolins, the long-tailed mammot, the rice-tenrec, and the aard-vark, retain a long tail, the length of this appendage is very frequently greatly reduced even in members of their group, as in well exemplified in the case of the rabbit, the wombat, and the tenrec of Madagascar. To completely fossorial species a long tail would obviously be an incumbrance without the slightest compensating advantage, and we accordingly find the caudal appendage reduced to a mere stump in moles, mole-rats, golden moles, and the marsupial mole.

As regards the feet of the truly fossorial mammals, a marked difference may, as Mr. Skimer well observes, be noticed between the front and hind pairs as regards the nature of the modification and specialisation they have undergone. This is due to the marked difference between their respective functions; the office of the fore-paws being to loosen the earth at the head of the boring, while the task of the hind pair is merely to throw further backwards the soil thus loosened and broken up. Accordingly, we find the front paws more or less broadened and expanded with their toes developed into powerful claws, so as to act as shovels. The greatest specialisation in this respect is displayed, perhaps, by the moles, in which the broad and hand-like form of the front paws is too well known to require more than passing mention. In the American star-nosed mole the fore-paw is as wide as the body, so that the creature can dig with exceeding rapidity, excavating with a single sweep of the limb a passage wide enough to admit the body In the Australian spiny anteater the fore-paws are also of great width; but in most other fossorial mammals, even those which pass most of their time underground, such as the golden moles, and the marsupial mole, the paw is much narrower, although always armed with powerful claws. Such powerful claws are also noticeable in the majority of species which dig deep burrows for themselves, such as aard varks, pangolins, pocket-gophers, and wombats.

In the hind-feet the claws, although powerful, are not nearly so strongly developed as in the front pair. The partial connection by skin of some of the toes of the wombat, as well as the webbing of those of the water opossum and the water-mole, although primarily developed for other purposes, are considered by Mr. Skimer to afford important assistance in the work of excavation. And if this be so, it would seem that the webbed feet of the Australian duckbill would likewise be specially well adapted for digging purposes. It may be added that the naked sand-rats of North-Eastern Africa are furnished with long stiff hairs at the base of the claws.

The last-named mammals are the only completely fossorial species which have lost their hairy coat; although the aard-vard, which, as we have seen, spends the quarter part of its time in its burrow, has but a very sparse coat of hair. In other completely fossorial types, such as the moles, golden moles, and mole-rats, the hair is more or less completely reversible in direction; thus facilitating movements either backwards or forwards in the burrow.

Such are some of the leading external characteristics of burrowing mammals, as given by Mr. Skimer, with some amplifications of our own. In the original article the author also discusses the modifications for the purpose of a subterranean existence of the skeleton; but into these we have not space to enter in detail, and must, therefore, content ourselves with mentioning that among the completely fossorial types one of the most characteristic features is the triangular and pointed form of the skull.

In conclusion, Mr. Skimer expresses the opinion that the great majority of the completely fossorial types of mammals have originated at an early epoch from primitive, unspecialised, and defenceless rodents, insectivora, and edentata. On the other hand, although certain forms, such as foxes, badgers, otters, ratels, and hyraces, are in the habit of dwelling in burrows, the carnivora, the ungulata, and the primates, have, as a rule, failed to find protection from enemies or to secure a special food-supply by resorting to a completely fossorial existence. In fact it may be safely asserted that not a single representative of either of the three last-named orders has become completely fossorial;—that is to say, depends both for protection and for food on subterranean habits.

"Please have me lunch ready at 1; strong cheese (roasted) and dog biscuits to match, and a pail of water and two clean tumblers, as I may have a friend or two with me." Such was a request written on a postcard forwarded to an innkeeper in West Lothian recently.

The Story Teller.

"LOOK BEFORE YOU LEAP.

THERE were half-a-dozen fellows I knew well, when I strolled the other day into the bar of the "Catherine Wheel." at Henley.

"Hallo! Charlie, how are you?" was the general cry, supplemented by, "Where on earth have you been?"

"Have not seen you this season," as Harry Westupp added.

"Come down to secure diggings for the week," I said, "being too busy to start river life yet. Here's luck!" and I took a good pull at the cool tankard.

"Not going to sleep on a dinghy—or a punt, was it?—this year, eh! Charley?" cried Tom Hunter.

"Not much," I answered, wishing him and his memory at the bottom of the river.

"Hallo? What's that?" exclaimed two or three, in chorus "See, the chap's blushing!" (This I deny.)

"Spin us a yarn, Charlie—all pals here—or, if he won't, do you tell us about it, Tom"

"It's a long story," said the latter. "Don't open an old wound, you fellows. I assure you he had it very bad. I would not split for the world, you know, Charlie."

"Confound you?" I cried; "I'm in for it now. Anything rather than your mangling the story. It's no tale, mind—only an episode.

"It was three years ago, and the people it refers to don't frequent the river now. Glass Thornton, and I were very chummy. His people had a small houseboat on the river, and a little before Henley, Glass proposed that he, I, Tom there, and a fellow named Raikes should pull her up here instead of having a tug.

"'What we want is work,' said Thornton; 'it will do us all a lot of good you bet'

"He was a beggar to talk of work, was Glass; but when it came to the push, we had to do most of it. Anyway, he had two very pretty sisters, and I own I was getting very fond of Nelly, the elder one. Sweet, pretty girl she was too. Poor Nelly!"

"Daisy, or, as her people called her, Baby, was a jolly girl, too, but barely out of her kittenhood, and full of mischief. Whenever I and her sister got together, and I was making strong running, she would be sure to put in an appearance, looking demurely as a cat at a pet canary.

"Well, we took it pretty easy, and when off duty with the pole. I had a very pleasant time of it, getting more in love every hour. All in good time we passed through Hamb'edon Lock, and got moored off here in our right place. We were too far out for a plank, and had to use a dinghy.

"Tom had written and secured rooms, so he declared, but on our getting to the cottage we found there was a mistake somewhere, the landlady when we at length unearthed her, declaring only one bedroom had been retained.

"It was late, we were tired, and though I hunted about, no apartment was to be found. We went odd man for who should be left in the cold and with my usual luck, it fell to me.

"I knew the old people being on board—that there was no room; nevertheless, I returned to the boat and explained what had happened. Thornton had got a tent arrangement rigged up forward for himself, and small as it was, proposed that I should share it with him. Miss Daisy, however, suggested the dinghy.

"'I can get you a blanket, a rug, and a cushion for a pillow,' she exclaimed, 'and you'll do fine!'

"I did not think much of the plan, but, as we could hit on nothing better, agreed to it. Whilst Glass and I smoked a pipe, the girls looked after the wraps.

"I was just thinking how I should manage to say good night to Nelly alone, when there was a splash, a scream, and Miss Daisy came rushing to us.

"'Nelly's fallen in!' she shrieked. 'Oh, save her! Quick!'

"I ran along the gangway, saw a straw hat floating on the water, and plunged in. But though I dived again and again, I could see nothing of her. I tell you, I felt bitter bad when at length I gave it up as a bad job.

"Well, the family got together in the cabin, and as, after all, I was not one of them, there was nothing for it but to get into the dinghy. I lit a pipe and lay quiet, listening to the wash of the water and the murmur of voices from the other boats. I thought of the poor drowned girl, and quite made up my mind never to marry now she was gone.

"Presently, in spite of my beastly cramped position, I fell off to sleep. What woke me I don't know, but anyway it was daylight; so, feeling sore and stiff, I got up, meaning to shove the dinghy ashore and walk about a bit.

"Stooping over to get hold of the rope, what was my horror to see, as I thought, Nelly's body caught on it, evidently drifted there by an eddy. I sprang up with a cry, forgetting where I was, and toppled overboard.

"When I rose to the surface and got the water out of my eyes I could see Glass looking over the side, and two or three female figures in deshabille rushing out of the cabin.

"I clambered on board the houseboat—Thornton had lent me dry flannels the night before, and I had slept in them—but if Glass had not caught me, I should have tumbled back again into the river to a dead certainty, for there was Nelly looking prettier than ever, in a loose dressing-gown, with her hair down her back.

"Then it all came out It was a hoax of Miss Daisy's "'But I did not mean to keep it up so long,' she explained, trying to look penitent. 'You see, I weighted Nelly's old skirt, just enough, as I thought, to keep it bobbing about, so that you could jump in and gallantly rescue it, you know: but it was too heavy, and sank. Then I thought how fine it would be for you to come on board to breakfast and find Nelly all safe and sound: we should have the fun of seeing your face when first you set eyes on her. I had a lot of trouble in getting leave to keep it up. But what made you shout and fall out of the dinghy?'

"Then I had to explain how the weight must have slipped out and the skirt got caught on the rope.

"Of course everybody apologized—that is, after they were dressed—and presently Nelly came along to where I was sulking by myself, and said how sorry she was, and how much she thought of the devotion I had shown when I believed she was drowning, till I forgot all about their letting me lie there along and miserable in the beastly little boat, and told her outright how fond I was of her, and asked her to marry me.

"So we were engaged for a month or two, but it dropped through. I could not quite forget what I considered their heartlessness, and I believed she never looked at me without feeling inclined to laugh; so we broke it off."

"And a good job, too!" exclaimed Tom "And the moral is, 'Look before you leap.' I've heard she is married to a stock-broking fellow now, and I wish him joy of Miss Daisy for a sister-in-law. Pass the beer, there's a good chap!"

BOAT RACING AND ITS LAWS.

BOAT racing has been termed, and with much justice, "the cleanest of sports:" it stands almost alone among pastimes, or sports, in the matter of professionalism, for there is in the Laws of the Amateur Rowing Association a sharpness of division between the professional and the amateur which other sports may well envy. It is much to the credit of those who have legislated for rowing that they should have faced the invidious and thankless task of properly defining an amateur in straightforward terms: for it would not be difficult to trace the many troubles which have arisen over this vexed question in other departments of sport to the squeamishness of the lawgivers who shrank from defining an amateur in the only terms which can prevent trespass from the professional element. It is no doubt a beautiful theory that all men, whatever their social position, are equals in the world of sport: but the theory is one which has ignominiously failed in practice: in no other department of human affairs is it attempted to place men who have means and men who have none on the same footing: and it is only the mistaken generosity of the sportsmanlike spirit which endeavours to achieve the impossible. Rowing legislation has been directed in a more level-headed fashon, as witness the remorseless definition of a professional under the rules: and the Law which forbids the money-prize or value-prize goes far to keep the sport clean: it does not offer temptations to the man who would row for profit. For this reason any changes in the Laws of Boat Racing claim attention: we look anxiously to see whether the modern tendency to paint the professional in amateur colours finds any echo in the deliberations of the Committee of the A. R. A., which recently appointed a Sub-Committe to deal with various details and to suggest alterations where needed. An important alteration has been made in Law 6, which disposes of the "neutral water" fiction. The amended Law, as accepted by a large majority at the Committee meeting held on 15th June, now reads:—"A boat's own water is the best course it can take from the station assigned to it at the start to the finish, provided that it leaves ample water for any boat, which started upon either side of it, to pass on that side when such boat is in a position to enforce its right to that water." Mr. R. C. Lehmann, we observe, voiced the opinion of a minority in proposing a different alteration. His view was that the following should be the Law:—"A crew shall be entitled to retain throughout the race the station assigned to it at the start in relation to the other competitors." On a straight course like that of Henley, Mr. Lehmann's proposition would no doubt answer all purposes: a crew asks nothing better of its coxswain than that he shall steer them by the straightest possible route from start to finish, but it would manifestly be productive of difficulties if, rowing a course with a bend or bends, a boat leading by, say, two clear lengths, should lay itself open to objection by leaving its own middle, or outside, station to gain a legitimate advantage by hugging the shore when it could do so without impeding competitors. It would be impossible in practice to preserve to the worst crew the advantage it had gained by luck in drawing for stations, throughout the race; and this would be the effect of Mr. Lehmann's proposed alteration were it accepted as Law. An inclination to allow more latitude in infliction of penalty is apparent in the change which has been adopted, unanimously, in connection with fouls. Law VII declared that "no fouling whatever shall be allowed: a boat or boats committing a foul shall be disqualified." This left the umpire no discretion, and it was admitted that occasional hardship was caused by the firm administration of the rule: there can be no reasonable objection to the new wording which makes a boat only "liable to disqualification," leaving it to the umpire to determine whether the penalty has been earned. Most of us have seen cases of fouling for which the exaction of the penalty was the exercise of the letter rather than the spirit of the Law. We should be loth to see carelessness or bad management on the course lightly passed over, when such defects in a crew or its coxswain interfered, however unintentionally, with the chances of a competitor: but in every sport something is left to the discretion of the umpire, and we can see no objection to the latitude suggested by this alteration. The same tendency to give more power or responsibility to the umpire is manifest in the addition to Law 12, "but he may disqualify a competitor for a foul without an appeal being made, provided that he does so immediately upon the foul occurring;" and again in Law 17, which is amended to fall into line with Law 12 as altered, and allows the umpire, when he thinks proper, to reserve his decision.

Improvements in modern racing shells, the longer slide more especially, have given rise to some little difficulty in properly observing the rule about dress. An oarsman may comply with the regatta rule which require him to "wear complete clothing from the shoulders to the knee—including a sleeved jersey," but the long slide is liable to work the shorts up the thigh; wherefore the Committee of the A. R. A. have enjoined the Honorary Secretary to send notice to affiliated clubs calling attention to infractions of the rule in respect of the length of rowing shorts. This is a trifle, but it serves to demonstrate the resolve of the legislative body to keep rowing men up to the mark in details, and as such is welcome. The Committee recognise frankly that while it is difficult to obey the letter of the Law, but it points out that "oarsmen can comply with its spirit and thereby preserve that decency in dress it was intended to safeguard." It becomes a body which seeks to maintain on a high plane the sport whose interests are its care to be strict in such matters, and the Committee, in our judgment, does well to see that its Laws are respected in all particulars; a little slackness here, a little indulgence there, and the thin end of the wedge driven into one crack will inevitably be driven into others. It has never been suggested that the general average of amateur oarsmanship could be improved by more elasticity in defining the status of an amateur: and the professional sculler or oarsman has never expressed any soreness of feeling because he is confined to a class with his fellows. In Rowing, and in Rowing only, are the classes kept sharply apart to the immense advantage of the sport and without any shade of detriment to the waterman who makes, or adds to, his living by his skill. These reflections suggest themselves at the time when Henley Regatta, the most picturesque and enjoyable of summer sporting assemblies, is just over. The executive of Henley have made rules of its own: but these in all essentials square with those of the A. R. A., and to these strict observance Henley owes much of its success and popularity.

Sporting Notes.

IN spite of the truly awful state of the going, resulting from the heavy deluge of Friday night and early Saturday morning, a real good day's sport was witnessed at the opening meeting of the Calcutta Moonsoon Races. The previous night's rain had reduced the course to, practically speaking, a swamp, the hurdle course being particularly marshy, in fact when the leading horses turned the hospital corner in a bunch they were almost hidden from view by the water thrown up. The flat course, though not as bad as this, was still fearfully heavy and times were correspondingly bad. The attendance was a fair average one, and the ring was well represented. Three of the pitches in the enclosure bore the name of Mr. James Pymn, and there were also Messrs. Charles Goldspink, Coutts, Russell Pymn, Atkinson and Champion and Company, the latter for the first time at a Monsoon Meeting. All seemed to be doing plenty of business. The rain, which seemed to have made up its mind to clear off for the day, came down once more just before the fourth race, but not for long, and the last two races were run in the dry, though the state of the going was rendered even worse than before.

Fields were good throughout the day and only in the hurdle race did the number fall below the limit required for 1, 2, 3 betting. Only two favourites got home, and in each case favouritism was shared with another, so that on the whole the bookies had a bit the best of it.

Eight were weighed out for the first race, the Pony Trial Plate, and Blue Bell was installed favourite at 6-4. Little Doris was also greatly fancied, and it was generally held that provided she got well away and refrained from displaying the vagaries to which she is occasionally addicted at the gate the race would be all over bar shouting—and drawing the cash. The "if" being a big one, however, her price never shortened beyond threes. She got away well enough, and led the field to the two furlongs where she tired and was passed by Rezia who had been lying second throughout, and also by Golden Tip, the former going on and winning very easily by a length, Little Doris being third a length and a half away from Golden Tip.

The Bhowanipur Plate, for which seven went out, provided the best race of the day. Kittylea and Parole were equally supported at the not very tempting price, for a jump race, of 6-4. It is hard to say on what grounds the latter was so greatly fancied as he has given no show in public to warrant so much confidence. We suppose, however, that he must have been tried to do something highly satisfactory in private. His backers at any rate were soon put out of their misery as he was never in it from the start, and the further he went the further he was left behind. Kittylea not only had her old reputation as a real good performer over timber, but was evidently in the pink of condition and fit to battle it out to the end. Naiades was not greatly fancied as she was reported to be short of work, but it is a general rule with all the 'Ascots" that they do not require much galloping, and in this case, as it proved, there was not much wrong with her as regards condition. Bob, though a performer over hurdles in Australia, was evidently very much on the big side, but he acquitted himself creditably and will repay a little attention later on when he has had another gallop or two. In the race Kittylea and Florence closely followed by Odin and Bob led to the new stand where Naiades closed up and, gradually drawing away, led to the home turn, where Kittylea overtook her and after a great race home landed the verdict by half a length. We think, however, that the chestnut mare, on whom Shelldrake rode a finely judged race, was not quite all out, but still had a bit left in her if it had been required. Hard on the other hand had to ride one of his very strongest finishes to get as close as he did.

A big field of eleven went to the post for the Maiden Race—described we notice in an esteemed contemporary as the "Maidan Horse Plate"—and Morris and Winklet divided the popular fancy. March was best away, but she soon tired in the mud, and Flash assumed a long lead which he held to the two furlongs where Winklet came through on the rails and though he seemed to run a bit green, O'Neil nursed him home very judiciously half a length in front of Morris with May B. third. Thunder Cloud got away very badly and was left at least six or eight lengths, but when she did get going, the rest appeared to be standing still, though the distance did not admit of her making up all the lost ground, and she just failed to get a place.

Eight faced the barrier for the fourth race, or rather seven faced it, while Irish, who together with the countrybred Moonlight, carried the bulk of the money, whipped round as the machine rose, and was left so far that she took no part in the race. Moonlight jumped off in front and led the field a cracker for half a mile when he was done with, and Mademoiselle coming to the front won very comfortably by a length from The Owl who came with a run on the outside, Yuletide, a length and a half away, third.

Hello was made a hot favourite for the July Plate but could get no nearer than fourth to Clynder, Profit and his stable companion Pylara. Profit cut out the work and at the turn was leading by five or six lengths, but Mr. Galstaun who was waiting with Clynder, tackled him at the distance and drawing away won hands down by a length and a half. Further details appear among our race reports.

A telegram from Colombo gives us the result of the race for the Governor's Cup:—Prince Lyon 1, Rapier 2, Regalia II. 3. The winner belongs to Mr. R. Farquharson who is also the owner of the third horse with which he won the Macpherson Cup at the Calcutta Races last year.

The American racing authorities drop on jockeys whose mounts swerve at the finish of a race, even when there is no doubt as to its being accidental. At a meeting at Hawthorne (Chicago) a horse named Commodore interfered with a couple of other runners, owing to his rider, a mite of a lad, not being able to control him. The horse was disqualified, and the rider fined £20.

A report of the first day of the interesting race meet held at Bellary is published to-day.

The Jubbulpore Open Gymkhana Races have been fixed for Saturday, the 5th November, entries closing as per details in the usual place.

We have to thank the Calcutta Turf Club for a copy of The Racing Calendar from April 1903 to March 1904. It is as neatly compiled, accurate and well turned out as ever.

The Ootacamund Hunt Races have been fixed for the 15th and 17th proximo. Racing on the first day will be held on the Ooty Racecourse and on the second day at Newmarket. The programme for the first day is the Stand Plate, the Hobart Park Plate, and the Willow Bund Stakes, all for horses, and the Ladies' Plate and the Scurry for ponies. The Stand Plate, the Hobart Park Plate, and the Ladies' Plate are only open to animals, the bonâ fide property of subscribers to the Hunt, and which have been regularly hunted during the current season.

The events on the Steeplechasing programme are the same as in former years. First entries close on the 1st proximo, and second entries on the 10th idem.

The first entries for the Poona Races and Steeplechases are published to-day and most excellent they are. Second entries close on the 23rd instant.

The English Sheet "Calendar," dated Thursday, 21st July, gives the entries for The Derby and The Oaks of 1906. The former which closed with 293 entries, including five which were made in Paris and eleven in New York, shows a decided increase upon the 282, which were received for next year. The Oaks has also advanced from 229 to 236, the latter number including eleven entries made in Paris and New York. His Majesty has three nominations in The Derby and two in The Oaks.

I cannot help thinking, writes "Vigilant" in The Sportsman, that steps should be taken to make The Derby the most valuable race of the year. This might easily be done without costing much more money, were the scale of entries arranged something after the fashion of those for some of our "ten-thousand-pounders," and, if this were done, there seems little doubt that 500, or even more, entries might be obtained for The Derby, which would then assume the position to which it is fully entitled. As things are the Grand Prix de Paris is a much more valuable race, and invariably attracts a larger entry, whilst this season the French Derby was worth considerably more than our own, which certainly should not be.

It has been rumoured for some time past that the Heir to the throne would shortly show his love for the thoroughbred by becoming an owner of race horses, and the Express states that the Prince of Wales has now definitely decided to take up horse racing. His Royal Highness will not buy yearlings and put them into training; neither will he acquire older horses for this purpose. He intends to breed every horse he runs, and will breed for racing purposes only and not for sale. A start has already been made with three brood mares, which are now quartered at Lord Marcus Beresford's stud farm at Newmarket. These mares are Gold Paste, Lily Palmer, and Luscious. Gold Paste has a filly-foal at foot by Persimmon, and has been to the same sire again It is hoped that Lily Palmer and Luscious are in foal to Persimmon. Other mares are soon to be purchased, and will go to swell the number of candidates for a training stable. King Edward has given the Prince a couple of yearlings, and there is every chance of their making an appearance next season. One is a colt by Persimmon; the other a filly by Florizel II. With these two exceptions, however, it is improbable that the Prince's colours will be seen before 1906. The question of colours is not yet definitely decided, but the Prince's colours will be modelled on the Royal livery, as are His Majesty's, with the exception that there will be more scarlet—or royal red—in the jacket and cap. Although it is early yet to speculate as to whom the Prince will choose as trainer, it may be taken as practically certain that the horses will go to Egerton House, Newmarket, and be under the care of Richard Marsh, the King's trainer.

Double event betting by means of the Totalisator promises to become very popular in New Zealand:

a machine specially for the business has been invented by a Christchurch man.. The face of the machine is occupied by small tin metal receptacles each of which exhibits a numbered ticket, representing a horse in two events. The number required is traceable by running the eye horizontally along the top and perpendicularly down the left-hand side, in which manner is shown the names of the horses starting in the two races. On naming the "double" required the ticket is taken from the receptacle, stamped, and handed to the investor. The action of removing the ticket automatically releases a steel marble, which, running through pipes, acts upon the registering gear denoting the total investment. The machine has, it is said, been favorably criticised by New Zealand officials.

A lament reaches us from Lower Assam as to flooding out of big game from the Borpeta subdivision of Kamrup; the land subsided during the earthquake of 1897: but there seems little to complain of except that the shikari who could bag his couple of deer before office hours need only go some thirty miles further to the North-West for the animals have no doubt taken refuge in the Bijni reserve upland forest, which was unaffected by the shake up.

It has been remarked to us more than once that of late the interesting contributions of Mr. F. Finn, the well-known naturalist and writer on ornithological subjects, have not been appearing in this paper for some time. A letter from him, received by the mail to hand this week, explains the reason—indisposition. But as he is good enough to promise us some pabulum soon, we trust we shall ere long be able to offer our readers further of his very interesting writings. He wishes to be remembered to his many old friends who, we feel sure, will join us in wishing him all good luck in his work at home, and that he may soon be fit and well. He is much missed by us all.

The "Journal of the Society of Arts" contains an interesting account of the progress of the zebra domestication experiments at Morendat in British East Africa. A mixed mob of stallions, mares, and foals, which were caught and confined in a large "boma" or corral, became so rapidly used to the natives bringing in cut grass that in five weeks' time they would feed from their hands. Harnessing the zebras was set about by getting the animals into an enclosed way, roughly resembling a duck decoy, which led to a succession of boxes, diminishing in size and shut off by dropping or folding doors; when they were confined at close quarters the natives found no very great difficulty in roping and harnessing them. In from five to eight months' time many of the animals were both ridden and driven without resenting it. In view of the rather disastrous results of the zebra-taming experiments at the London Zoological Gardens, it may be noted that these wild zebras were found to vary very greatly in temperament, some resenting interference very much more strongly than others. It is when it becomes possible to carry out the training with young animals born in a state of domestication that these interesting experiments are likely to become of really practical value by the provision of a new beast of burden.

In reference to certain remarks we recently made on the subject of expanding bullets Kynoch's Journal writes:—"Our contemporary The Indian Field, in a resumè on our article on 'Expanding Bullets' has misinterpreted in one or two respects the results of our experiments. Apparently our description of the experiments was not sufficiently explicit, as the following sentence from The Indian Field shews: 'It was found that the soft nosed copper tube bullet of soft lead with thin nickel envelope penetrated whole from 8 inches to 12 inches then smashed into small fragments.' As far as could be ascertained the expansion actually took place immediately on impact, as when a number of shot bags, each about 4 inches thick, were placed one in front of the other the first bag was blown to pieces with more violence than the others in the case of bullets which expanded readily. The distance penetrated was determined from the position in which the fragments were found when the bullets were fired into a long box packed tightly with wet sawdust, this experiment being quite distinct from the one with the bags. The explosive effect on the bags is, of course, due to the pressure set up by the displacement of the sawdust in front of the mushroomed bullet, the intensity of the effect depending upon the size of the mushroom and the velocity at which it was travelling. When the bullet came to rest, the explosive pressure was no longer exerted. The Indian Field considers that velocities of 1,350 feet corresponding to a range of 425 yards need not be considered, being outside the extreme range at which shots would be taken in India. Such ranges, however, are, we believe, not uncommon in South African sport, and it is for this reason that we include the 1,350 feet velocity in our experiments."

We remind our readers of Mr. Tom Uphill's Auction Sale at "Tattersails" Tomorrow. Further details will be found in our advertisement columns.

Our Poona Correspondent writes:—There is, I am sorry to say, little improvement in poor young Mr. Ross' condition. He is still practically unconscious and his strength is not quite so satisfactory as it has hitherto been, and while everyone earnestly hopes for the best, the lad's condition is naturally such as causes the gravest anxiety to his many friends.

Yet further calamities in the equine world—Lady Jenkin's friends in Calcutta and Bombay will regret to hear that in her absence she has lost her useful hunter and paperchase horse Perth, who died of fever in Wanowrie while in the care of some Parsee.

But what is one to think of the bad luck which is dogging the Kour Saheb of Patiala who having lost his lately imported four hundred guinea Parody has within about a week lost that brilliant little chestnut horse Northumberland who must have been dangerous in more than one of the big long distance races here this season. Even the recently acquired honour of being an uncle will, it is to be feared, scarcely compensate Tom Scott for this double misfortune.

Cholera has been permitted to creep into the Poona Cantonments, and the first, and let us earnestly pray, the only victim to this terrible scourge in the camp has been, Mrs. Pym, wife of the Lord Bishop of Bombay, with whom every one will sympathize in his sad affliction. It was well known that this fell desease was prevalent at a big religious fair at a place called Punderapur some miles away, and there seems something deficient in an arrangment which permits of pilgrims, from such a death-spreading centre being allowed to enter at their will into neighbouring large cities when it is practically certain that they will bring the infection with them. We seem all too prone to listen to the senseless yelping of Eastern fanatics in such matters.

A club modestly dubbing themselves the Poona Young Cricketers inflicted severe chastisement on the Gymkhana XI who in their first effort could do no better than 67, and less than a hundred more in their second venture. The young cricketers responding with 103 and 134 for 4. Verily a little chastisement is good for the soul of man, and no excuse could be offered for the collapse of the Gymkhana though it is fair to add Captain Greig did not perform on this occasion.

The second extra race meeting was as great a success as the first, and Mr. Cursetjee Dhunjeeshaw had everything running in the smoothest manner possible from beginning to end.

As on the previous day the well-known Bhattia owners, Messrs. Anandjee Nanjee and Mathuradass Gokuldass, opened proceedings with a win, on this occasion with that beautiful rogue Grey Fox who in Foster's gentle handling seemed to be in quite a good temper and when so and in form takes a deal of beating.

In the next race Messrs. G. K. and D. D.'s. brace of three year colts Bendigo and Berlin reversed their respective form of the first day, as on this occasion Melsom was able to keep the former on a straight course and he won comfortably, as indeed in my opinion, he would have done on the previous occasion, under similar circumstances. Young Kohinoor separated the stable companions and the policy of the owners of racing this brace of smart colts against each other in this fashion seems wholly indiscreet.

An interesting event was the August Plate for all horses over six furlongs for which several useful animals that have been heard of in the past, and will be heard of in the future, went to the post, though on this occasion some were so obviously big in condition that their chances of success could not seriously be taken into consideration. The public plumped for their old favourite Tubal Cain, but the speedy mare Blue Blood with 2 stone seven pounds the best of the weights streaked away making every post—including, in this instance the last—a winning post—with the much talked of Child's Guide third. An objection was afterwards lodged against Blue Blood on the grounds of an undeclared partnership, and this was enquired into by the Stewards, but no decision was given pending some further evidence I believe.

Fourteen Arabs of the 14 hand class contested the Little Maiden Plate of 5 furlongs and an excellent race ensued, Moreed who won several races last season winning from Calcutta—(a victor last Saturday) with a very promising pony in Bandit II., third, and several in a cluster close up.

The public were delighted to see their old favourite of many years—the redoubtable "Jimmy" have a win on Mr. Galstaun's Gun Metal—a very magnificent type of the dwarf thoroughbred, and she had little trouble in shaking off Min and Olga when it came to racing up the straight. There was a very considerable delay at the post owing to the fractiousness of some of the competitors, but Mr. O'Gorman's starting on both days has been quite up to his best form.

As on the first day the closed race, on this occasion for Arab ponies filled excellently, no less than nine coming under the staters orders. The public doubtless following the wise adage of "going for the rider in Captains Races" went strong for Fiddler for whom the services of Captain Meynell had been retained, while a few would be knowing ones thought the dark but fantastically named Check-a-dee might be a rod in pickle. It was very soon, however, apparently that Fiddler had things all his own way and Captain Meynell had but to sit still and look pleasant.

We publish elsewhere the entries for the second Monsoon Meeting, which are on the whole very satisfactory with the exception of the Pony Plate, which has only drawn six. In the absence of the weights, which will not appear until after we go to press, it is idle to indulge in prophecies as to probable winners except in the case of the Hunter's Plate, and the Fort Plate, both of which are on terms. Of the eight nominated for the former of these two events we like Planet better than anything else. He is a neat lepper and moreover showed us at Tollygunge that he has a great dash of foot, plenty fast enough for hunter class. Glancing casually at the entries it strikes us that the Stewards will require to stretch their consciences a bit to declare some of the other candidates "bonâ-fide paperchases," as we do not remember to have heard of either Whisper or Orphan Boy in connection with the paperchasing so far, but no doubt the Stewards' consciences will prove equal to the occasion. Next to Planet we fancy Blue Bell II as likely to obtain a situation.

For the Fort Plate we should say there is only one in it, namely, Thunder Cloud, always supposing she can arrange to get on the move a bit quicker than was the case last Saturday. Morris should get a place, and Daffodil should also run well if he elects to go for this in preference to the hurdle race as is not unlikely, since we should imagine that there will not be much competition for the mount on him over timber, owing to his supreme contempt for the obstacles. Possibly, however, his tumble the other morning has done him a bit of good.

WHEN a child, Robert Peck showed a deeply-rooted passion for horses. At the early age of seven he frequently accompanied his father on to the Wold for the purpose of seeing thoroughbreds at exercise. Songstress, the Oaks winner of 1852, was one of the earliest fancies of this juvenile critic. During the same year he was greatly impressed by the manner in which West Australian did his work, and Robert Peck's first prophecy was made in connection with this famous horse. One morning John Scott was on the Wold in company with the late Lord Derby. It was exercise time, and Scott called "Bob" to the carriage in order to ask some question. Lord Derby was pleased by the boy's confident yet quiet manner, and half-chaffingly asked him what would win the Derby.

"West Australian, my lord," the youngster replied.

"The little 'un is not a bad judge," said Scott, on hearing his choice.

Two years later Lord Derby proved the he had not forgotten the youthful prophet. He was down at Malton in the spring of '51, confident that the Derby would at last fall to the black and white cap.

"Now this year I can tell you what will win the Derby," he said to Robert. Dervish will win."

The youngster replied that he preferred Acrobat. Although Dervish started at 5 to 2 he was not successful, and according to the Great Yorkshire and Doncaster Stakes form, Acrobat was much the better animal of the two.

Athletic Notes.

A RACKET tournament, open to all India, is to be held at Poona, under the auspices of the Club of Western India, from the 21st to the 27th September. In the open doubles, each pair must be representative of a corps, or a department, or a club, or a station, and the trophy is a £25 challenge cup. There are five other events, singles and doubles.

A boxing tournament was held at Coonoor on the 29th ultimo and was successfully carried through. Competitors entered from Bangalore, Secunderabad, and other stations and the boxing was most interesting. The piece de resistance was the fight for the Nilgiri Championship Medal between Private Harris, Durham Light Infantry, and Trumpeter Austin of the Carabiniers. It was to be a ten round contest. Harris went slow for the first five rounds, then got to work, and hitting hard, soon had his man beaten, the last round being abandoned, and the fight awarded to Harris. Colonel Mayne, the Officer Commanding the Southern District, presented the medal.

Captain Toogood was judge, Lieutenants Franklyn and Woodhouse acted as referees, and Colour-Sergeant Mansfield as timekeeper and master of ceremonies.

Our London Sporting letter this week gives full details of the long distance Swimming Championship, and a most remarkable race it appears to have been. J. A. Jarvis won in 1hr. 7mins. 32⅗secs., and thereby scored his seventh successive win in the event. Details are also given of the fine running at Chelmsford, in connection with Essex County Amateur Sports. Perhaps the most interesting events were the three miles and quarter mile scratch races. In the former Shrubb, who holds the trophy known as the Atalanta Cup, again won in good style from his old opponent, Aldridge; while in the quarter the Rev. H. W. Workman scored in the good time of 51secs. after a good race with that improving runner, H. B. Montague, of the South London Harriers. Evidently his clerical duties have not impaired Workman's speed; he is one of the best all-round runners ever sent out from either University.

An account of the race for the Wingfield Sculls is also included. This was won by Mr. St. George Ashe of the Thames R. C. who beat Mr. A. H. Cloutte, London R., C. very easily by six lengths It is said that Cloutte's arm gave way. Several features of the contest demand notice. It is rarely the "Wingfields" have resolved themselves into a duel. Then the retirement of the holder (Mr. F. S. Kelly), the defeat of Mr. Cloutte, and the brilliant form of Mr. Ashe, all render the contest a remarkable one. And "It's a long lane that has no turning" is evidently still a truism, when applied to Mr. Ashe himself or the Thames R. C. It is some time since the red, white, and black colours were in the ascendant either at up-river regattas or the race under notice. Since Royal Henley, however, the Thames R. C. have asserted themselves in no unmistakable fashion, and now one of their members is Champion of England. Does not this emphasize the fact that the vicissitudes of boat clubs are like the dicebox?—one year there is a plethora of talent, the next a positive dearth of it. Who would have thought two months' ago that Mr. Kelly would have lost the "Diamonds," declined competition for the "Wingfields," and that Mr. Ashe would be Champion of England?

Among important cricket results at home last week are the following.—Kent beat Essex by 220 runs; Notts beat Surrey by two wickets; Gloster beat Sussex by 160. The matches between Worcester and Warwickshire, Leicester and the South Africans, and Yorkshire and Lancashire were all drawn.

Kent beat Surrey by six wickets; Sussex beat Hants by an innings and 81 runs; Gloucester beat Middlesex by sixty runs and the matches between Warwickshire and Derbyshire, Leicestershire and Yorkshire, Essex and Notts, and Lancashire and South Africans were all drawn.

Probably no one is more helpless than a person in a rowing boat on a river when pelted from the bank; and when Captain Winter, R. F. A. (well known in Bombay) who was rowing on the River Ouse, near Bedford, was undergoing this exasperating annoyance at the hands of a number of rough lads on the towing path, he not unnaturally landed and did what he could to stop them, taking with him one of the sculls of the boat. It appears from the evidence that they advanced quite close, pelting him with clods, and were probably assaulting him in a most unpleasant way. He swept the scull round, and as one of the boys ducked, the scull hit his head and caused his death. Sympathy will lie largely with the oarsman who was acquitted, for he first had his boat appropriated and was afterwards pelted, than with the aggressors. But it is not a little surprising how fatal accidents may be caused by persons who intend only to make a display of force, or even of skill. It is a fact that a visitor to a house once killed two children in two minutes unintentionally. He picked a little boy up, holding it with his hands under the sides of the jaws. When set down the child staggered and fell unconscious. The causer of the mischief said, "Why, I did nothing, I only picked him up like this," and did the same to another child standing by. Both died from dislocated vertebræ of the neck.

Our Bombay correspondent writes:—Association football has absorbed nearly all the interest in local sporting circles during the past week, and several of the games played in the Harwood League were very closely contested. Nearly all the teams in the League have improved and there has been as a consequence more interest in League games especially those between the two Cheshire teams and the teams that figure low down in the table. The Cheshires "A" team which is the only team in the League that can point to an unbeaten record remains at the head of the list and is showing form just now that would tax the resources of the strongest teams in the country. When the Cheshires put their full team in the field for the tournament next month they will be warm favourites.

Two games were played on Tuesday afternoon, the Royal Artillery meeting the Perseus eleven on the Cooperage and the Cheshire "A" and "B" teams playing off their return at Colaba. In the first game the sailors gave a really fine display against their formidable opponents, and after a hard contested fight had the satisfaction of leaving the ground victors by one goal to nil. The form shown by the backs and goal-keepers was particularly good, and in this connection it would be difficult to say which side showed to the best advantage. The return game between the Cheshire "A" and "B" teams proved a most exciting one, and resulted in a draw, each side scoring a goal. The "A" team is now practically certain to annex the cup this season, and up to date has the good record of seven matches won and two drawn. Twenty-four goals have been scored for the side and only two against it. On Wednesday last the Gymkhana and the Rovers met for the first time in a League fixture, and after a very in and out game in which each side scored one goal no definite result was arrived at. Thursday's game, which was between the Gymkhana and the Telegraph Club, resulted in an unexpected defeat of the Gymkhana by the heavy margin of five goals to one. For two-thirds of the game the Telegraph men quite outplayed their opponents scoring three goals in the first half and two others early in the second period. The Gymkhana scored their only point a few minutes before the whistle went. This was the Telegraph team's first victory, in League games this season.

A Rugger match between the Gymkhana and the Casuals last Monday resulted in an easy victory for the Gymkhana by four goals and one try to nil. T. Reed, who six or seven years ago held a good reputation as a sprinter, played a great game at three-quarters, and his speed enabled him to score two tries in excellent positions. None of the opposing backs could get near him, and in the second half he got in again after a fine run down half the length of the ground. The Casuals were completely out-classed and are not improving as much as was hoped from the form they showed earlier in the season.

The best thing that can be said this week about the usual Gymkhana Mounted Sports is that the entries were better than they have been for some weeks, and the attendance was larger. The opening event, tent-pegging by half sections, was won by Messrs. D. Graham and W. E. Crum with Messrs. Fiscber (P. F.) and Heyland second. The Jumping Competition for Horses, for which there was a much better entry than usual, was won by Mr. Greig, Mr. Rummell and Mr. Rutherford being second and third respectively. The Ladies' Tilting was won by Mrs. S. McCausland, and a Victoria Cross Race which followed was practically a walk over for Mr. Matthews, in spite of a bad start. The pre-Raphaelite Stakes were annexed by Mr. P. F. Fischer and Miss Bowack with Mr. D. Graham and Mrs. Carnegy and Mr. Barraclough and Mrs. Dyson second and third respectively. The usual Horse and Pony Scurries were won by Mr. Matthews on Bloke and Mr. D. Graham on Johad respectively, with Mr. Heyland's Xerxes ridden by Mr. Monteath and Mr. Spence's Pepper ridden by Mr. McCausland second in the respective events.

Turning to cricket matters I am glad to say that the Presidency Selection Committee have determined to leave no stone unturned in their efforts to unearth promising players in the districts. In connection with the match at Bombay this month I hear that Captain L. M. R. Deas has accepted an invitation to play, and that it is quite on the cards that Captain M. D. Wood, the old Wellingtonian, will also accept the invitation extended to him. Assuming that Deas and Wood will play, and with Greig back once more, the Presidency team will take a lot of beating this year. It seems pretty safe to predict that the following players are "probables":—Captain J. G. Greig, B. M. Carroll, H. P. Chaplin, J. Monteath, Captain M. D. Wood, Captain L. M. R. Deas, T. Curtis, of the Telegraph Department at Quetta, and Captain H. K. Umfreville. Should all these players be able to turn out, only three places will remain to fill up, one of which will be the wicket keeper's. With Deas, Wood, Greig, Umfreville, to say nothing of Carroll, Chaplin, and Curtis all bowlers, the first four good enough to open the attack, only one of the three remaining places is likely to go to a bowler pure and simple. As there seems no chance of Sprott being able to get up to Bombay the wicket-keeper's place should be filled by either E. H. Philbrick, R. H. C. Kearsey or C. Walcote. Personally I think Philbrick has first claim to play in the Bombay match, and I hope he will be selected. One other place remains to be filled up, supposing all the players previously mentioned are selected and that should go to a batsman. It will be a difficult place to fill as at least half a dozen players have equal claims.

One of the biggest disappointments Bombay cricketers have experienced this season was on Saturday last when the Bombay Gymkhana met the Parsee Gymkhana in the first of the two annual fixtures between these clubs with half their best men away. The Bombay Gymkhana was deprived of the services of its four bowlers, its wicket-keeper, and three of its best bats. The Parsees on the other hand, with the exception of A. H. Mehta, and D. D. Kanga who were absent had their strongest side out. Of course it was freely predicted that the Parsees would inflict a severe defeat on their opponents and although expectations in this respect were partially realised I am surprised at the good show made by the Gymkhana. [As will be seen from the scores further on. ED.]

While the Gymkhana first eleven was having a bad time at the hands of the Parsees the Reserves were giving the Eastern Telegraph an equally bad time. The Telegraph team were dismissed for 63, Douglas taking seven wickets and to this the Gymkhana Reserves replied with 185 for nine wickets, H. Dawson making 55, and T. Reed 49. Both batsmen lost their wickets though being run out.

The Soccer League game on the Cooperage on Saturday evening between the Cheshire "A" team who are at the top of the League table and the Gymkhana team does not call for much comment as the result was a foregone conclusion. The Gymkhana team at no point of the game ever extended their opponents, who in the last half slackened their efforts perceptibly and were content to keep the Gymkhana penned up near their goal line.

The final match in the Trades Cup competition was played on the Dalhousie ground on the 8th instant. The contesting teams were the Medical College and Gaurangdi, and a good game resulted in a win for the Medicos by a goal to nil. This is the second year in succession that the College has won the Trades Cup.

The Calcutta Rowing Club Committee are not letting the grass grow under their feet, but following up their recent success, have got out the programme for their third regatta, which is to be held on the 3rd September. The card includes the race for Senior Fours, three-quarter mile in light fours, and the Senior Pairs over the same distance in light gigs. Entries close on the 18th instant. The race for the Hoare Cup, half mile for novices in fixed seat tub fours, will be rowed on the 24th September. Entries closing on the 27th instant. There ought to be several crews in for the four oared events and we hope to see some good racing.

The Peepulputty Dug Ups, who had to scratch to the Merchants in the Class Fours at the recent Calcutta Rowing Club Regatta, met the winners of the event, in a sporting match over the same course last Friday. The heavy downpour during the evening looked like postponing the race, but it cleared up sufficiently for the match to be brought off. Away to a good start the Dug Ups got the lead, but after six strokes the Service boat passed them and going away were a length to the good at the half distance. They increased their lead and rowing hard won by a length and a half. Crews :—

A mile in 30 seconds is surely within measurable distance? At the Ostend Motor Races on the 23rd ultimo the mile was covered in 48⅗secs., the last 600 yards being travelled at a rate exceeding 100 miles per hour!

At the Calcutta Swimming Baths on Saturday the 6th instant Mr. A. E. B. Siddons secured the Gold Time Badge given by the Club for members swimming the 100 yards in 1min. 18secs. Mr. Siddons swam the three legths in 1min. 16⅘secs. the next best time to that put up by Mr. H. P. Henderson some years ago. On the same afternoon Mr. W. Govan gained the Silver Time Badge, covering the three lengths in 1min. 18⅗secs. We congratulate both swimmers on their success.

From the last annual report of the London and Lancashire Life Assurance Company we learn that the New Assurances under Proposals received amounted to 2,663 for £822,971 and deducting £122,945 for those declined or not completed, the Policies issued were 2,362 for £700,026, giving a New Premium Income of £31,667 11s. 9d., showing an increase over the previous year of £15,222 in sums assured and £910 6s. 9d. in New Premiums.

The total Premium Income of the year amounted to £295,096 14s 5d., and deducting £9,055 14s. 0d. paid to other Offices for Re-assurances, the net amount is £286,041 0s. 5d., showing an increase of £11,254 11s. 3d. over the previous year. The Audited Accounts show that the Total Income of the Company is £358,243 10s. 9d., including £72,122 5s. 9d., from Interest and Dividends, the average rate yielded on invested and uninvested Funds being £4 0s. 11d. per cent. The Claims by death, with Bonus additions, amount to £119,113 2s. 7d., andare still well within the expectancy. The Claims under matured Endowment Policies amount to £40,989. The increase in the Funds during the year amounts to £109,715, and the total Funds now stand at £1,872,783. In ten years the Net Premium Income shows an increase of over £100,000, whilst the Funds during the same period have been increased by nearly £1,000,000.

London Week by Week.

LONDON, Friday, 22nd July 1904.

SOME hope is held out by optimists that the remaining business of the session may be disposed of in time to allow the prorogation to take place on Saturday the 13th of August. It is devoutly to be hoped that these prophecies of smooth things may be verified, but at present there seems small prospect thereof. True, the committee stage of the Licensing Bill has been brought to an end—not an untimely one—by the aid of the guillotine, but when the report stage is reached another time-limit debate is threatened. And in view of the amount of business still to be put through, and the perfection to which the opposition has brought the art of "scandalous, wilful, and deliberate obstruction," the prospect of an early release seems well nigh hopeless. Few things have been more discreditable in the record of this discredited Opposition than the motion for the adjournment to discuss the conduct of Lord Dundonald. Mr. Lloyd George—that Cabinet Minister in embryo—and his worthy ally Mr. Churchill, thought they saw in the recent regrettable occurrence in Canada an opportunity of snatching some advantage to themselves. Mr. George is—Mr. George,—and acts after his kind; no regard for the public interest would restrain him from any course which promised a party advantage. Mr. Churchill is moved probably by a desire for a cheap notoriety, and an impish desire to make mischief.

How often have I marvelled at the unfortunate law of Nature, or dispensation of Providence, which ordains—or seems to me to ordain—that all things of interest above the common should happen toward the end of the week—just too late to receive proper attention in my Friday's letter. Hitherto with stoical resolve I have refrained from lifting up my voice in lamentations, but none the less did I hail with joy last Saturday the outpouring of the Saturday's Reviewer anent the same grievance. He, with a sweet reasonableness that is to his credit, merely complains that an undue proportion of things, good from his point of view, came off towards the week end; and if ever a week excused an outburst of injured feeling it assuredly was the week that ended last Saturday. It was a cruel fate for a Saturday's Reviewer that prompted both the Secretary of State for war, and Mr. Joseph Chamberlain to make their long looked for statements on a Thursday, and the much injured gentleman has my warmest sympathy.

Mr. Gilbert's "Rosencrantz and Guildenstern" played at the Garrick on Tuesday afternoon by a company of dramatic authors and authoresses, is a piece of excellent fooling. Some thirty years ago it appeared in Fun, and has since been played several times—more or less publicly—by amateurs. I believe it was also acted at a Vaudeville Matinee some years ago. The piece is described by Mr. Gilbert as "a Tragic episode in Three Tableaux, founded on an old Danish Legend." This is the ancient Danish legend according to Mr. Gilbert. The King, in the days of his youth, was the perpetrator of a five act tragedy, which was withdrawn after a single performance, as it proved "more than even sycophancy could stand." The King withdrew the book, and any references to it was treated as a capital offence. Ophelia is betrothed to Hamlet who is generally thought to be "idiotically sane with lucid intervals of lunacy." But though she is betrothed to Hamlet her love is given to Rosencrantz. Hamlet has developed a bad habit of soliloquising, and his mother thinks his mind might be diverted by private theatricals. Rosencrantz and Ophelia here see their opportunity of getting rid of him. If he can only be tricked into acting the King's play all will be well. Only one copy of it exists, the one deposited with Polonius as Lord Chamberlain, Ophelia steals it, and shows it to Hamlet, who, finding it a part play and seeing himself a success in that part, presents it before the Court. As soon as the King recognizes the play he stops the performance and it is with difficulty that he is persuaded not to kill Hamlet on the spot. It is decided at last that banishment to England shall be his punishment. In the course of the piece Mr. Gilbert makes fun of some of the incidents of Hamlet, and has some telling hits at the ways of stage Hamlets, and the selfishness of some actor managers, which caused much amusement, and were keenly appreciated by both actors and audience on Tuesday. Mr. Gilbert was extremely good as the King; acting the part with the utmost gravity, and thereby giving an object lesson to many actors of his plays. Captain Robert Marshall was an excellent Hamlet, and nothing could have been better than Mr. Leo Trevor's Rosencrantz. There was a very large audience, so it must be hoped that the Bushey Heath Cottage Hospital for the benefit of which the performance was given, will benefit largely.

On Saturday evening Mrs. Patrick Campbell revived "The Second Mrs. Tanqueray" at the Vaudeville, and has repeated it every evening this week—the last of Mrs. Campbell's season. So long as we can see Mrs. Patrick Campbell in the part of Paula so long will the piece draw crowded houses; otherwise there is not much to attract in it, and it strikes one as now slightly out of date. Mr. C. Aubrey Smith gave a fine personation of the part of Tanqueray. In addition to "the Garden of Lies" with which Mr. Alexander proposes to re-open the St. James's Theatre on 3rd September, he will probably produce during the season a poetic play dealing with the story of King Arthur and Lancelot, by Mr. John Davidson; and a new play by Mr. Stephen Phillips, the title of which was not divulged. On 1st September Mr. Wilson Barrett proposes to produce "Lucy Durham" at the Comedy, and in the middle of September Mr. Otho Stuart and Mr. Oscar Asche promise us Mr. J. B. Fagan's romantic play "The Prayer of the Sword," with a strong and mainly Bensonian cast, which will include Mr Oscar Asche, Miss Lily Brayton, Mr. Alfred Brydone, Mr. Walter Hampden, Miss Pamela Gaythorne, and other well-known names. Mr. Percy Anderson designs the dresses, and Mr. W. T. Helmsley and Mr. Joseph Harker will be responsible for the scenery. The interregnum this year will last barely five weeks—a shorter time than usual if my memory serves me.

"Lest we forget!" Only four years ago how indignantly were we disposed to repudiate any suggestion that such a warning could be necessary, and now it appears that we have very effectually forgotten a great deal. Four years ago, taught by bitter experiences in South Africa, we thought ourselves awake to the danger that threatened us should we find ourselves at war with a first class continental power. Then, the pressing need was for men—and yet more men; now the most pressing of our needs is a reduction of the estimates, and many of us hear unmoved that our army is larger than we need, and that the imperative duty of our War Minister is to proceed with all possible despatch, to reduce it. Mr. Arnold Forster's acknowledgment that his military colleagues are not at one with him, disproves the statement made in some quarters that General Lyttelton's declaration that he was "not happy" was merely a personal indiscretion. The part of the scheme relating to the Militia is hung up for the present, the War Minister stating that he proposes to "take counsel" on it during the autumn. It is no doubt a well meant effort towards an ideal; whether it will survive, in anything like its present form, the hostile criticism it is likely to receive during the recess, remains to be seen. The conference which Mr. Arnold Forster was to have had yesterday with members representing the Volunteers has been postponed.

The German Emperor has again been indulging in his pet amusement of letting fly aggressive telegrams. As Honorary Colonel-in-Chief of the 85th Russian Infantry he takes the opportunity of the regiment being ordered to the front to assure it that he is proud that it has the honour of fighting "for the Emperor, the Fatherland, and the fame of Russia," and that his sincere wishes go with it and he prays that God will bless its standards. The message is, to say the least of it, an unusual one for the head of a Neutral State to send; and Tokio will probably remember it. Even as Britons remember the one of like import with which his German Majesty honoured the late Mr. Kruger. It is consolatary to reflect that the Russians will probably not be a whit the better, nor the Japs, a penny the worse, for the effusion while it has doubtless relieved the feelings of the august sender.

Those most affected by it are to be found in the ranks of his own subjects, if report, be true. It is said that when the tenor of the telegram became known, men of all parties were aghast. There is much enthusiasm for Japan in Germany just now and among German soldiers the feeling is especially strong, holding as they do, that much of the credit of every victory the Japs score is due to their German military instruction. The German Press is unanimous in assuring the world that the message meant just nothing at all, but in fact it is but one of a series of indiscretions. The famous message to the Tsar "Russia's sorrow is Germany's sorrow" is still remembered.

A good deal of interest has been evoked by the description of a mechanical apparatus of which a demonstration is to be given before long and which it is claimed will effect a revolution in the parcel and mail traffic of London. For several years past the postal authorities in the United States have used large pneumatic tubes for carrying mails between post offices, railway stations, etc. It is now proposed to organise a like system in London, and a bill is to be brought up in Parliament next session to provide for laying down tubes capable of transporting five-sixths of the parcels and all the mails, now carried. For the purpose of the demonstration mentioned above, tubes are now being erected. They are twelve inches in diameter—four inches larger than those in use in New York, and if the demonstration prove a success, and the project is carried out there will be at least a hundred and fifty receiving and despatching stations. I understand that Sir John Wolfe Barry is to be the engineer. Any scheme that will result in the reduction of street traffic will receive a cordial welcome.

The laying of the foundation stone of the Union Jack Club in Waterloo Road, by the Prince of Wales yesterday, was a pleasant function, characterized by a touch of warmer personal interest than is often the case at formal proceedings of a like nature. The prince made a capital little speech; one sentence of it, in which he reminded his audience that "the enthusiasm naturally evoked by war soon abates when the nation relapses into a condition of peace," it is to be hoped will be marked, learned, and inwardly digested. The Club has the advantage of an excellent position being exactly opposite Waterloo Station.

The seizure by a "Russian volunteer fleet" of the P. and O. Steamship Malacca in the Red Sea, naturally led to what is diplomatically described as a "very serious situation." The ship, it is stated, had no contraband of war for Japan, but was carrying a cargo of three thousand tons, including forty ton of explosive for Hong Kong. The St. Petersburgh which seized her is neither more nor less than a privateer, and Sir Charles Hardinge, in the strongly worded protest which he has addressed to the Russian Government, laid emphasis on this fact, and also on the one that the amumnition seized was the property of the British Government. and was intended for the British China Squadron, all the cases being plainly marked with the broad arrow. The Malacca arrived at Port Said in charge of a Russian naval captain, officers, and crew, and flying the Russian flag, which was hoisted when the British one, which the captain had nailed to the mast, was torn down. The Malacca's passengers among whom are two British officers, and four ladies, have been transhipped to the P. and O. liner Marmora outward bound. The crew were declared prisoners, and the Malacca has now left Port Said in charge of a Russian prize crew, for a destination which has not been declared. Mr. Balfour from his place in the house, stated last night in answer to a question put by his hon'ble friend Mr. T. G. Bowler, that "this is a most serious question" and one upon which he would make a statement before the close of the session.

The presentation of the Freedom of the City to Lord Curzon on Wednesday was made the occasion of a remarkable outburst of cordiality and appreciation. Lord Curzon's speech was in every respect one worthy of the audience and the occasion, and made a lofty appeal to all Imperial instincts. The most matter of fact of Britons can scarcely fail to be roused to some measure of enthusiasm as he reads the record of splendid work done which Lord Curzon unfolded in his speech at the Guildhall. That so much is done, and so splendidly done, is due no doubt in the first instance to our magnificent Indian Civil Service—but let our thanks be given when they are due. It is also largely owing to the indifference of the average British M. P. to India and all things Indian. Were our Messrs. Caldewell, John Burns, Cremer, Lough, Lloyd, George, etc., etc., to bring all the resources of their gigantic intellects, and extensive knowledge of parochial affairs, to bear no questions of Indian policy, dire would be the result. We all know the dictum of our much respected John, that he knows no man who is worth more than £300 a year. Imagination refuses to paint an Indian Civil Service recruited from the acquaintance of the Member for Battersea.

The first underground tramway in London, now in course of construction between the Strand and the districts north thereof, will not be completed it is feared for over a year, owing in a great measure to the unexpected slowness in coming to an agreement with the owners of property en route. The tramway, when completed will connect the Thames embankment with Theobald's Road, crossing the Strand, following the western horn of crescent-shaped Aldenych, and the whole length of Kingsway, passing under High Holborn and ending in Southampton Row, whence surface rails are to join it to the old tramways in Theobald's Road. At each end passengers will be able to enter and alight at the street level, while the two intermediate stations will be reached by staircases only about eighteen feet deep. This new venture is the child of the L. C. C. and should prove one of the most useful of its schemes, and should it prove a financial success it may be the pioneer of many subways, which may do much towards the solution of how to deal with the street traffic. It is said that the L. C. C.'s estimate of £282,000 per mile for construction, is too low a one. The maximum height of the subway is to be sixteen feet, and two lines worked by electricity will be laid. There will be a station at the junction of Aldenych and Kingsway, and another at Great Queen Street. Immediately after reaching Southampton Row the tramway will rise to the surface by an incline of one in ten. The length of the tramway from the embankment to Theobald road will be a trifle over three-quarters of a mile.

Various items. The evidence at the inquest held on the body of Mr. Kent Loomis which was washed ashore near Kingsbridge, Devonshire, on Saturday does not go far towards clearing up the mystery of his death, Mr. Loomis, a journalist by profession, was at the time of his death in the diplomatic service of the United States Government, and was carrying important papers from Washington to Paris. He was making the voyage from New York to Cherbourg, viâ Plymouth, on board the steamship Kaiser Wilhelm II—he was last seen alive just before the arrival of the vessel at Plymouth; on its arrival at Cherbourg he was missed and although every inquiry was made no evidence as to his movements was forthcoming. For some reason, of which I have seen no explanation, Mr. Loomis soon after he went on board at New York, handed the important papers he had charge of to the safe keeping of a friend on board, but that he had not been robbed was proved by the finding of his watch and chain on his body, together with some gold and silver coins, and American notes. The watch had stopped at six o'clock—one o'clock English time—about the time the Kaiser Wilhelm II was leaving Plymouth. The medical evidence attributes death to a severe blow on the head, which might have been caused by a fall, and which was so severe that it is improbable Mr. Loomis could have recovered from it even had he not fallen into the water. The body was identified mainly by means of a ring which Mr. Loomis was known to be wearing. There is not a scrap of evidence that anyone had on interest in obtaining the papers that had been intrusted to Mr. Loomis, and it was in the highest degree improbable that he would be carrying them about on his person. On the other hand there is no evidence that he wished to take his own life, or that he met with an accident on board. The open verdict returned by the jury was the only one possible under the circumstances.

The latest Cunard liner the Caronia, which has just been launched at the Clydebank yard by Mrs. Choate, is described by the American Ambassador in a poetic flight, as "the noblest vessel that had ever kissed British waters." In plain and unadorned prose, she exceeds in size and tonnage any vessel ever floated on the Clyde. Her length is 676 feet, breadth 72 feet, she is to be fitted with engines of 21,000 horse-power, and her speed is expected to be 18 knots. The Caronia will have accommodation for 2,650 passengers, and a crew of 450 officers and men. Messrs. Brown have just laid the keel blocks of the sister ships to the Caronia, in which is to be made the first experiment on a large scale with turbine engines. From the reference made by Lord Inverclyde in his speech at the launch, to the present rate "war" on the North Atlantic it is plain that he and his co-directors intend to stand firmly by their policy of independence.

A specially attractive programme is on just now at the Alhambra. In addition to the brilliant ballet "all the year round," which shows no symtom of waning popularity, though it has passed its 150th performance, there is a series of remarkably vivid living pictures, of scenes from the Russo-Japanese war shown by the "Urban Bioscope." The photographs have been quite recently taken and bring home with unusual realism the actualities ofwar. Some exciting incidents of the great fire at Toronto are also shown. A combination of passive resistance and woman's right is truly formindable. The logical lady in whose person the combination is effected, declines to pay her income tax on the voting of taxes they should not be called upon to pay, and as evidence of her earnestness has sacrificed a sideboard, some chairs, a writing desk, a bicycle, and various other items, to satisfy the law's demand. An interesting double balloon ascent took place from the Crystal Palace last week, One balloon of forty-five thousand feet capacity, ascended to a height of nine thousand feet and landed at Saffran Walden after a two hour's voyage, the velocity of the wind being twenty-five miles per hour. A first class torpedo boat propelled by a combination of turbine and reciprocating machinery, built by Messrs. Yarrow, made a trip lately from Greenwich to Thames Haven. The value of the arrangement is that when full consumption is of great consideration in enabling the boat to make long distance runs, the triple-expansion reciprocating engine alone is used, but when the maximum speed has to be obtained the two turbines as well as the reciprocating engine are set in motion. The boat is built of steel, and her armament will be three decked torpedo tubes and two 3 pounder quick firing guns. Her speed, carrying a load of 20 tons, is 25 knots. The trip was perfectly successful, her vibrations when at full speed being less than that of a mail train.

Messrs. Hooley and Lawson surrendered to their bail before Mr. Fenwick at Bow Street on Saturday to answer the adjourned charge of conspiring to obtain money by false pretences from Mr. Paine, a licensed victualler. The charge preferred against Mr. Sievier of having committed "wilful and corrupt perjury" when he was privately examined in bankruptcy has been dismissed. The Magistrate having come to the conclusion that having regard to the length of time that had elapsed since the offence was alleged to have been committed, and that perjury must be "wilful and corrupt," no jury would convict. It is not easy to see how a different conclusion could have been arrived at, but nevertheless there is a distinct impression that Mr. Sievier has had luck on his side in this instance. The trial of Mr. Marshall, Solicitor, and ex-Mayor of Retford, on a charge of misappropriating money, the property of the Duke of Newcastle, was concluded yesterday at the Nottinghamshire Assizes, by a verdict of guilty, coupled with a recommendation to mercy on the score of age. The facts are fresh in the memory of most of us. Mr. Marshall came up to London in the June of last year to complete the purchase of some property for the Duke of Newcastle. He brought with him a case, containing, he alleges, about £12,000 in bank-notes, and of these notes he states he was robbed, while staying at the Hôtel Metropole. Mr. Marshall was unable to give the numbers of the missing notes, and he accounted for his failure to do this by saying that he kept the paper on which the numbers were written in the same case with the notes. A curiously unbusiness-like proceeding for a business man. Mr. Justice Bray deferred sentence until to-day. Lord Milner and the Transvaal Government have acceded, as was generally expected they would, to Mr. Kruger's last request that he might be buried in Pretoria. In answer to a question in the House of Commons Mr. Balfour stated that no request on the subject had been addressed to the English Government; and a further question from that redoubtable Boer champion, Mr. Swift McNeil, as to whether a British man-of-war would not be detailed to convey the body to Cape Town, Mr. Balfour treated with the silence it deserved. Some of the Nelson relics stolen from Greenwich in December 1900 have been recovered, and a seaman, named Carter, was on Saturday committed for trial at the Greenwich Police Court on the charge of stealing and receiving the various articles which are valued at £5,000. American papers and their Editors are said to have been considerably mystified by the cables they have received anent the Tibetan Expedition. On receiving news that Colonel Younghusband's force had been fired on "by jingals from a jong" they proceeded to print the intelligence with the j's in capitals. Comments were freely made of the ferocity and prowess of "the Jingalls," but the most industrious search in their maps did not enable them to locate the position of Jong. I will just note the release from prison of Mrs. Maybrick.

SHIKAR POSSIBILITIES IN A NATIVE STATE.

A FEW years back I was in camp with Mr. F. A. A. the Commissioner of Chota Nagpur, in one of the Native States, the Chief of which had arranged to give him a day's shooting at a place called D—A—some twenty miles from his gurh, and the camp was accordingly sent down there. Mrs. F. and her niece, Miss H., were also with the camp. The D—A—village is situated close to some small hills well wooded, as are also the valleys among them, a small river runs under the hills and so long as there is water in it, that is up to the end of March, the place is an ideal resort for large game. Sambhur and spotted deer abound, and tiger and leopards are frequently to be found there, while peacock, jungle-fowl, and partridge are always to be had. We reached the camp about 10 A.M. and the rest of the day the Commissioner spent among his office bundles in order to get the next day free to himself, this also allowed the Rajah time to see for himself that all the shikar arrangements were complete. The following morning we started after an early breakfast riding out to the maichans, these were very substantially built with boarded floors on which a comfortable seat on a morah was possible, and all were completely screened round with fresh green branches. I was placed in the first one we came to, the Rajah's was the next to my left, and about seventy yards off, while Mr. F.'s and Miss H.'s, which were supposed to be in the best positions, were beyond it. The Rajah, after politely seeing them seated, got into his own maichan and we were all ready by 11 A.M. Some 1,500 coolies had been collected for the beat, which we had heard commencing a long way off some time before we were all seated; it however took a long time for them to come our way, for fully an hour and a half we occasionally heard the tom-toms beating, or the coolies shouting, and an occasional report of guns booming through the hills, then as the beaters descended to some lowlying valley, we were screened by the spur of a hill. All was again silent for a time, presently on a sudden the whole countryside would again appear to be alive with shouts, firearms, tom toms, trumpets and all manner of music, still nothing stirred near us except now and again a monkey leaping among the trees, or a peacock running among the undergrowth in the jungle. Each time a gun was fired in the distance a frantic shout arose along the whole line of beaters, but we had no means of knowing from all this whether anything was really afoot or not. When the beaters were apparently about a quarter of a mile off, some large animals rushed through the jungles to the left of the Rajah towards Mr. F.'s maichans, but as no gun was fired in that direction they probably turned off elsewhere. Shortly after this, I heard something moving in front and between the Rajah's and my own maichans and I could see he had also heard it and was on the alert. The beat came on nearer and the animal in front, whatever it was, approached closer and again stood, but still nothing was to be seen, then another move forward and I suddenly saw a very fine sambhur stag come out under a tree about thirty yards in front of me. It stood looking back intently towards the beaters. I fired and hit him well back and low down in the neck, he swung round at once, but I was able to get another ball into his shoulder and dropped him. Just then a number of spotted deer passed to the Rajah's left, he fired but apparently missed them, and immediately after the coolies appearing the first beat was over. The stag I had shot was a very large full grown animal, but had poor horns. After examining it we sent it on to the camp, and mounting our nags, we all moved on to another ground about a mile and a half to the last. Here the maichans were in a line a little way up and along the face of a long low hill and looked down on the strong bed of a small stream, then almost dry, and across it over a well-wooded rising ground down which the coolies were to beat towards us, Mr F. took the first maichan to the west, Miss H's was the second, mine the third, and the Rajah's was beyond to my right. I could not see him or Mr. F. but Miss H. was only about ninety yards from me, and I could see her maichan clearly. It was nearly 2 P.M. before we were all posted. The coolies had gone back a long way and were to beat up a stretch of about two miles to us, so it was a considerable time before we heard anything of them. The day was hot and the waiting weary, sleepy work. Occasionally a peacock or two rustled through the undergrowth past us, or a troop of lungoors disturbed by something galloped past with long lolloping strides, the females carrying their young ones clinging on under them. After some time distant shouts or the report of a gun would reach us and again for a bit all would be quiet. For a long time I watched a large lizard, about fifteen inches long, a kind of Iguana I should think. As it sat on the branch of a tree in front of me, its general colour was yellowish brown, deepening into a rusty purple towards the back, which was frilled with a row of spikes the whole length of its body and tail; it had very prominent red eyes and a very large pendulous throat like a pouch. It sat perfectly motionless, blinking its eyes and apparently basking in the sun. I flicked No. 4 shot at it, but beyond raising its neck up and down a bit, it took no notice of them, suddenly a huge lungoor sprang from the next tree on to the branch on which the lizard sat when it dropped with a loud thud among the dry leaves on the ground and then scuttled away on to a large rock where it endeavoured to look quiet unconcerned and as if nothing had happened. Just then the coolie sitting behind me in the maichan, touched my back and whispered, "Saheb, Bagh," but I could see nothing, he kept pointing to the rising ground opposite and in front of Mr. F. and almost immediatly I heard the double report of the latter's rifle and a loud looof looof followed by two shots from Miss H.'s maichan, next a streak of yellow dashed back up the hill in front of her, but she had missed, for it emitted no sound. It seemed that two tigers had broken cover and come down together in front of Mr. F. who knocked one over when the other galloped down the bed of the stream towards Miss H. Several spotted deer also came down to the west near the Rajah who bagged one. I, however, saw nothing, but a number of peacock and monkeys, though we afterwards learnt that a bear had broken back among the beaters in front of me. Mr. F.'s tiger measured a little under ten feet and proved to be a very well marked young male animal. It was slung on a pole and carried along with us and we walked up a bit till we got on to our path, where we found the coolies had collected, and had brought in several deer, pig, and peacock, which had been killed by some of the Rajah's people. It appeared that it was the practice in the State for the musicians among the beaters to dance and play before a successful Shikar party on its return home, so a procession was formed, the coolies carrying all the trophies in front of us and headed by all the musicians, it was certainly a novel and curious spectacle. The musicians, dancing along the path backwards, facing us, and playing for all they were worth. Every now and then they would pull up and dance and sing in circle, now bowing almost to the ground, then frantically leaping high in the air. The tom-toms were artistically covered with a net work of thin coloured leather strips and had spotted deer's antlers fastened on to their upper edges, and projecting in front, while some of their elegantly shaped copper trumpets were five to six feet long and others were short and wide mouthed, and of fastastically twisted shapes, all were gaudiously painted in curious patterns with scarlet, blue, and yellow colours, all which lent a vivid aspect to the proceedings in the uncertain light of the fast sinking sun. The performance delayed our homeward progress a good deal, but under the circumstances as it was all done in one honour and was, of course vastly amusing, we were fain to acquiese. On arrival at the tents the spoils of the day were laid out in a long line, first Mr. F.'s tiger, then my sambhur, next two spotted deer stags with fairly good horns, a spotted deer doe, two pigs, four peacocks, and three jungle fowl, after all were duly inspected and the Rajah had been given his "rooksat" we were not sorry to turn to at tea and cakes to be followed by a good bath. The following day the camp was broken up and the Commissioner proceeded on his tour. About three months later I again visited D——A——with a friend, when we worked the same beats as above described, but though sambhur were turned out in the first one, none of them came near us; in the second one, however, a small sambhur stag was put up, which fell to my gun, and a great number of spotted deer were driven up, of which four stags were shot by my friend. Towards the end of the beat I had just heard him fire seven or eight shots, when suddenly a herd of six or seven spotted deer, headed by a splendid stag, galloped past me at a tremendous pace. I aimed at the stag and put a ball through his head dropping him dead and the others passed on. When the beat was over, I got down to the ground, and after noting the wound my ball had made on the left side of the head, I walked down the slope a bit to where I saw my friend examining one of his victims, and told him I too had got a very fine stag. He went on quietly examining the animal before him and then after about half a minute said in a casual sort of way, "Yes, but I think that was my stag too; you will find my bullet in him." I was rather astonished that he should claim a beast that I had positively dropped dead at full gallop, but I said nothing, as I make a point of never disputing a first shot, so we went up to the animal together when he quietly pulled the body over from its right to its left side, and showed me a scarcely perceptible mark in the lower part of the neck and then another large one on the right side of the rump. He had used a Mannlicher rifle and the bullet had literally torn the animal's insides to pieces, yet, as I had seen, it had galloped off at full speed; it would no doubt have dropped a few paces further on had I not hit it. At any rate, it was clearly his first shot and there was nothing more to be said about it. He had had uncommon good luck that day—four very fine stags in a morning! There is still much good shooting to be had in several of the Native States in the Chota Nagpur Division, with, of course, the assistance of their Chiefs, but without this, arrangements for supplies and coolies would be quite impossible.

BRIDGE QUERY.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE INDIAN FIELD."

SIR,—In playing a game of Bridge the other day, the dealer dropped a card face upwards on the table. A dispute arose as to whether the dealer at any time could expose a card. The dealer himself asserted that he could lay his hand on the table face upwards and no card could be called or considered exposed. Perhaps you could kindly answer this question.

R. P.

CACHAR, 6th August, 1904.

[The dealer suffers no penalty for exposing any card or cards during the play. Of course if a card is exposed whilst dealing, the adversaries can claim a fresh deal. ED.]

THE WORLD'S ONE HOUR CYCLING RECORD.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE INDIAN FIELD."

SIR,—I should be obliged it you could let me know in your columns, to settle a bet, the greatest distance ridden by any cyclist in one hour paced. I believe I am right in stating that it is 54·27 miles by Hall an English rider in 1903.

M. H.

QUETTA, 27th July, 1904.

THE EDITOR OF "THE INDIAN FIELD."

SIR,—I note one of your contemporaries has been ventilating the subject of all round guns but with forty odd years' experience I have never come across a real shikari who did not scout the idea. For Sunderbund shooting in the good old days it was usual to have heavy and light guns ready to hand on the deck roof of the pinnace or cockloft of the steamer, as although the game sought was either deer, buffalo, tiger or mugger, an occasional jungle cock, pheasant, or other bird now and again turned up: but on land, whether in the open country round the old indigo factories or the bheels of Bengal, the gunner issued forth with but one kind of game in his mind's eye. On newly opened tea gardens it used to be the custom to load one barrel with shot and the other with ball. Those being the days before breechloaders the sportsman was often in an exasperating delemma, having secured perhaps a bird the report would send a deer scampering off far out of range and: again were stripes roused it became a very ticklish question whether it were prudent to chance killing or disabling him with the only bullet available. Two serious mishaps occurred in fact from this very practice.

The weapons for the jaunt should be chosen for the game sought; if after deer or other big game all letting drive at birds etc., ought to be tabooed for that day, entire attention being concentrated on the business in hand. Even in these days the most rapid handler of a gun when rousing the smaller deer in the spinnies of the Nilghiris is seldom adept enough to change his shot cartridges or snatch the ball bearing piece from his henchman, and after all there is no great disappointment in tramping blank so far as the particular game sought for is concerned if it results in your rousing other, for you know next day what to go out prepared for. It stands to reason that where called upon to rid the country side of a maneater, rogue katti or as in the Backergunge southern pergunnahs to help drive back the trampling moesh from the ripening grain, you must go equipped for that duty only; potting at anything that presents itself on such occasions only gives the enemy khubber thus defeating the object. If, as often happens the villagers volunteer to accompany one on such latter expeditions, it is as well to make them thoroughly understand that nothing else will be fired at.

With regard to following up wounded game which is also being mooted, the first consideration is that of self-preservation. Common humanity dictates putting a maimed animal out of pain, but a good deal depends on the character of the cover the refuge consists of; few shikaris are a match for the big bear among rocks, for brain possesses intuitive knowledge in the way of selecting coigns of vantage, so that when blood stains show he is badly hit, it is better to follow up jumping from boulder to boulder or if that is not possible scrambling up, never, if it can be avoided, tracking on the ground. One can generally tell from the blood marks whether the beast is mortally hit, as in all cases where pools show, you make sure that some important blood vessel is injured so death from loss of blood is but a question of a very short time. Even if the trail is not so pronounced or on examination it is flecked with froth, you are pretty certain the lungs have been perforated so death is as certain and as quick. A tiger if only wounded generally loses no time in letting you know, but the males especially at this season from being bullied at home on account of the cubbing season are more inclined to sneak off, in which case, the greatest circumspection is needed even in following up in such comparatively open forest as Deva Sholah where General Dormer got grabbed.

A regular beat should be organised and a goodly number of bombs carried by the beaters if on foot, but when elephants are available, and the ground admits, they should always be brought into requisition, for close as the injured creature lies, a bomb from the pad or howdah invariable sets him going or if badly crippled forces him to roar. Monkeys will betray his whereabouts, and instances are on record where when beaters, bombs and hattis have failed in detecting the wounded beast's refuge, these agile trackers, who never lose sight of a crippled enemy, have led to his lair being revealed. The Garos have a proverb that means "if the shrees are quiet overhead the path underneath is free from danger." In fact undue excitement among branches is a certain sign there is something uncanny below. To follow a tiger or leopard into grass jungle or foot would qualify the venturesome person for residence in a lunatic asylum. Even if a man has been carried off, a little reflection will prove you can do no good, and though instances have occurred of the victim being dropped he is generally past all hope, at least if the a tiger has had a fair grip. Leopards are different, but the mauling by them is often so severe when inflicted in the open as to be fatal. Spots, however, can and has been, successfully mobbed and with a good axe, in tree jungle, may be floored single handed. A rogue elephant is really a dangerous customer from his rapid way of esconcing himself in the most unexpected places. On a still calm day the flapping of the ears betrays him, but with wind soughing through the branches water tumbling through a rapid or cascading down a course, this sound is either imperceptible or may be mistaken for the flapping of a fowl's wings. When on the trail the slightest bend in a twig or oosing of water into a fresh foot mark, needs careful examination; the twittering of small birds should even be noted while if the ground is encumbered with rocks, as in the Terais, not even a boulder should be approached without minute inspection from a distance. A good trained parish is the best elephant tracker out. Constant treeing should be resorted to. If the creature enters tall grass jungle, it is madness to follow, but, as a rule, when hit he sticks to forest shade and for some unexplained reason will clamber up a hill side in preference to seeking the moist ground of the semiswamp he affects under ordinary circumstances.

First Meeting, Saturday, 6th August 1904.

THE opening meeting of the monsoon races was held this afternoon and for the first part of the proceedings the weather was unpleasantly warm, then Old Sol hid his face and the rain had an innings, a heavy shower making things uncomfortable and delaying the start for the Stand Plate. The going was heavy at the beginning of the racing, but the course became a marsh after the rain. The "talent" was well represented and appeared to be doing good business, Messrs. Champion, Coutts, Russell, James Pymm, Charley Goldspink, and Atkinson all standing up, while outside the enclosure the Aryan bookie mustered very strong. The attendance was large and the sport good, Mr. Dass won the Pony Trial Plate with Rezia and the July Plate with Clynder; Kittylea was first past the post in the Hurdle Race after a desperate finish with Naiades, Winklet, the popular fancy, won the Maiden Horse Plate; and the Stand Plate went to Mademoiselle. Further comments on the afternoon's racing will be found among our sporting notes. Details:—

THE PONY TRIAL PLATE.—Rs. 500 to the winner, Rs. 100 to the second, and Rs. 50 to the third. For Arabs 14-2, C.-B.'s 14-1, and other ponies 14-0 and under, which have never won a flat race, value Rs. 500 or upwards. Above heights to carry 10st. W.I. Penalties.—Winners once, 7lbs.; twice, 10lbs.; oftener, 14lbs. Allowances.—Arabs, 14lbs.; C.-B.'s, 7lbs.—Five furlongs.

Saturday, 6th August 1904.

ANOTHER large attendance witnessed the racing at Poona to-day. Fields were good and the sport excellent. Proceedings opened with the Little Trial Plate for which Shah Jehan was favourite, but Grey Fox came though and won. There was nothing in the Arab Trial Plate but Bendigo, and he justified expectations, leaving his field standing and winning easily.

Tubal Cain was the street corner tip for the August Plate and went out at evens, but Blue Blood romped away and won by two lengths. Mooreed was first past the post in the Little Maiden Plate and Gun Metal cantered home an easy first in the Medium Pony Plate. The Closed Plate brought the programme to an end. Here Fiddler was most fancied and gladdened the hearts of his backers, Captain Meynell steering him to victory. Details :—

THE LITTLE TRIAL PLATE.—Winner, Rs. 200; second, Rs. 100; third, Rs. 50. For Arabs 13-3 and under, new measurement, which have never won flat race value Rs. 1,500 or over. 13-3 to carry 9st. 10lbs. CALCUTTA COURSE CHAT.

THURSDAY was a morning that was wanted in view of the very close proximity to Saturday's racing, giving as it did, with the course open, an opportunity to most of the horses engaged to move in extended order, and so let their trainers gain some little line to go upon, as during the preparation, so far, the fates had not been too kind, and most of the horses are short of work. But the major portion of the horses sent out were, strange enough, not those figuring on Saturday, hence my chronicling their doings, as otherwise this would be stale news after the races were over.

Daphne and Shylock from Wishart's went a smart dust up; the latter having the call, as they were pulling up. Next Shelldrake came along quickly on Black Patch.

Howie and Regan brought along Fusilier and Flash from Smallman's, also Hello and Bell Brand, put in a smart 5 furlongs. These were followed by Norman and Mademoiselle from the same stable, whilst Johnson sent Lall a breather over half a mile.

Reinzette, with Walker up, did a serviceable gallop, and subsequently Johnson was out on Moonlight.

Trollop and Mr. Dass' new brown, came along from inside the 5 furlongs.

The square quartered Macedon (Wall) was put at it with Trenton Prince over the 5 furlongs and had the best of the deal, if that is anything, considering the nature of the Prince's preparation prior thereto.

Western Queen (Mr. Galstaun), Not Yet (Mr. Chater) went a fast half mile. Morris from Wishart's had the foot of Calm in a five furlong spin, and Moccasin was quicker than Good Chap in their little go. Walker and W. White tried conclusions with Little Doris and Reveille; the uncertain little starter having the best of the argument.

Mr. Bert Allen, as usual, had his string at work, Howie and Regan putting in work with Pat C., Young Rake, Coal Queen, Natalina and Stellnarain.

In the jumping Steliform did a bit of an extender over a few flights, in view of Saturday and performed creditably.

It was quite refreshing to have such a fine morning as that which greeted us on Saturday, in spite of the heavy rain that fell the preceding evening and during the night. In fact, everything was bustle, and it was easy to see something out of the usual was on. Quite a number of the sporting fraternity foregathered at the old stand, and the chances of the various candidates engaged in the afternoon's struggle were enquired into, weighed up, and finally settled—on paper.

Howie took Young Rake across the open followed by Hello (native) and another from Smallman's. In view of the afternoon's racing O'Neil was out on Miss Beryl, and Kellnerain later. These horses cantered twice round, with a bit of a spurt thrown in on the far side of the course.

Mr. Bert Allen's Stellnarain was exercised by little Regan. This string is daily becoming larger, the latest addition being a fine upstanding horse of Mr. Harold Smith's named Glenista. Pat C. (Regan), and Coal Queen (Howie) went a fast 3 furlongs and did not seem to mind the mud. Fusilier and Flash had their usual little flare up and Not Yet went twice round.

Naiades with Hard in command jumped like a deer over the two flights she was put at. This is the first time, this season, I've seen the mare over the sticks. Daphne and Shylock did the pony jump course, in a manner that left little to complain of.

Mr. Dudley dusted (or splashed) Rezia a good long stretch over the open. This mare is going with great dash and freedom at present.

Tuesday morning really left nothing to be desired—save the opening of the track. There was something so exhilarating in the morning that its influence was not confined to the Pharisees, but even the Scribes caught the infection and one of them could not resist the temptation of having a lep with his good old gee, which was done in a most workmanlike manner.

Mr. Bert Allen's string did most of their work outside, down by the serpentine, but little Regan had his appetite whetted for a bit of lepping, as jumping off at the third hurdle on young Rake, he went round and jumped the horse hurdle by the new stand, thence the remainder of the pony course, finishing well.

Norman (Howie) from Smallman's, did the whole pony course in a light hearted manner.

Fusilier (Hard), and Flash (Johnson), went a good working gallop of 3 furlongs, followed by Not Yet and Rosalea (Mr. Chater), the former doing her usual twice round.

Daphne (Shelldrake), and Shylock (native), as usual, went their course.

A fresh aspirant for jump honors appeared in Mr. Roy's new purchase, Road Metal. He was taken the whole horse hurdle course by Johnson, and gave a good exhibition of going and sound jumping.

Mr. Galstaun seems to be in for riding the kind of cattle that will give him a prime show for the average place, as besides Clynder he is paying particular attention to Reinzette and Second Thought, both of whom he had out going half speed.

Mr. Chater had out Western Queen, who moves freely enough.

Wall had his usual roll round on Macedon, accompanied by another: solid going.

Moss Rose made her first appearance this morning and, ridden by her owner, Mr. S. McCall, went the full pony course in company with Rezia with Mr. Dudley in the saddle. Her performance was distinctly first class, slipping away from her companion at every jump, and in the heavy going that's on I can't see whose going to beat her, even though she'll be meeting Yuletide on less favourable weights than she did last year when she won the Pony Hurdles.

Monday was a quiet morning, and very few of the amateur division were moving. Gauntlet was sent a working gallop over a mile of the hurdle race course, leaving out the jumps; we hear that Mr. Rees met with a nasty fall two or three days ago, his horse after bucking him off, kicking him on the head; fortunately he had a strong sola hat on, otherwise the damage might have been more serious than it was. As it is I hear that his head is badly cut, but I am glad to see that he was well enough to be out driving this morning. Most of the other horses were pottering about under the trees.

This morning (Tuesday) there was more doing, and I saw several candidates for Saturday's hurdle races schooling. Yuletide (Mr. Cowper), and Good Chap (Mr. Evers), went the full pony course, both jumping well, the black pony holding her own comfortably all the way. Whisper (Mr. Evers), and Orphan Boy, were the next to appear, and after they had jumped four flights Gauntlet (Mr. Wilmot), and Sylvia (Mr. Turner), went the whole course at a moderate pace. The former struck the first hurdle badly, but afte wards jumped better; the little mare, however, always appeared to have the best of him and finished quite fresh. Odin was also doing slow work, having had a good gruelling at the opening meeting in which he made quite a good show. He looks well but is as usual very fine drawn. Later on Cheer Up, Sunshine, March and the Maid of Kent, sprinted a couple of furlongs.

There will be none too many entries for the Hunter's Race on Saturday; I hear that Flamingo is hors de combat, and that Mr. Paris does not intend to race his nice hunter Twilight. Mr Holmes' Jacinth is another that has been on the sick list and will consequently be a non-starter. With these three away we shall be lucky if we see a bare half dozen at the post The following may put in an appearance:—Odin, True Blue, Daffodil, Blue Bell, Planet, Day Dream, Gauntlet, Sylvia and Hail Storm.

CURSETJEE DHUNJEESHAW,
for Secretary, W. I. T. C.

POONA, 3rd August 1904.

One morning, as old John Day the jockey, was crossing Newmarket Heath., he heard a man, standing on a tub, preaching, so he stopped and listened.

"There," said the preacher, "stands John Day, one of the greatest of Jockeys. We do not run in the earthly race, but in the great race for the Cup of Salvation."

"Yes," roared old John, "and I'll bet you ten to one you don't get a place!"

SANDOWN PARK.

It is not easy to ascribe a reason for the diminution in the attendance at Sandown Park on the present anniversary, but the falling off, as compared with a twelvemonth ago, extended over each stage of the gathering. The officials of the London and South-Western Railway Company tell of a decrease of over three thousand passengers on Eclipse Stakes day, but the muster last July was doubtless quite abnormal owing to the historic meeting between Ard Patrick, Sceptre, and Rock Sand (which proved a well-nigh irresistible draw), and the strength of the company, on the 15th and 16th instant, was probably little below the average. The extreme heat deterred a few from conferring their patronage on the entertainment, but the fair sex were present again in considerable numbers, and the King and Prince Christain honoured the proceedings once more. The ground was dry and parched, and clouds of dust flew on occasions, but the going was in very fair order considering the recent drought. There was just sufficient breeze to prevent the heat from being oppressive and the sport panned out well.

The Royal Handicap of 368sovs. One mile.

Mr. A. Hamblin's ch m Thopo, by Loved One—Nimble Kitty, 5yrs., 6st. 9lbs.* (car. 6st. 12lbs.)	Butchers	1
M. E. de Blaskovits's b h Hazafi, 5 yrs., 9st.	Halsey	2
Mr. C. Hibbert's b f Camphor, 3yrs., 7st. ...	Trigg	3
Mr. J. S. Crawford's Captain Kettle, aged, 7st. 13lbs.	J. Dillon	0
Lord Dunraven's Salute, 4yrs., 7st. 12lbs.	W. Lane	0
Mr. W. M. G. Singer's Gascony, 5yrs., 7st. 8lbs.	O. Madden	0
Mr. C. Powneeby's Icon, 5yrs., 6st. 4lbs. (car. 6st. 5lbs.)	Plant	0
Mr. Heath's Bastion, 3yrs., 5st. 12lbs.* ...	E. Pratt	0

(Winner trained by H. Escott.)

Betting: 7 to 2 agst. Captain Kettle, 9 to 2 each Hazafi, Salute, and Topo, 7 to 1 Gascony, 8 to 1 Camphor, and 100 to 8 any other.

Won by a length: a like distance separated the second and third. Gascony was fourth, Salute fifth, Icon next, and Bastion last. Time, by Benson's chronograph, 1min. 44⅘secs.

The National Breeders' Produce Stakes of 487sovs. for two year olds; colts 9st., fillies and geldings 8st. 11lbs.; penalties and allowances. Five furlongs.

Lord Carnarvon's b f Grandiflora, 8st. 11b.	J. H. Martin	2
Duke of Devonshire's b f Full Cry, 8st. 11lbs.	O. Madden	3
Lord Crewe's Polymelus, 9st.	M. Cannon	0
Mr. E. Hobson's Aspiration, 8st. 9lbs. ...	Hardy	0
Mr. H. Peel's Laughter, 8st. 4lbs. ...	W. Lane	0
Major Edwards's Sir Charles, 9st. ...	B. Lynham	0

Betting: 6 to 4 agst. Cicero, 85 to 40 Laughter, 100 to 8 Polymelus 100 to 12 Full Cry, 100 to 10, Grandiflora, 33 to 1 any other.

Aspiration caused some delay by refusing to face the barrier, and when the tapes were released Sir James and Sir Charles were slow off the mark. Laughter was the quickest away, in the centre, and led from Full Cry (on the extreme right), Grandiflora (in the centre), and Cicero, with Polymelus next, and Sir James last behind Sir Charles for about half-way, when Cicero shot to the front, attended by Grandiflora, Laughter and Full Cry, and, making the remainder of the running, won easily by two lengths; a length and a half divided the second and third. Laughter was fourth, Aspiration fifth, Polymelus next, and Sir James tailed off last. Time by Benson's chronograph, 1min 3⅘secs.

The Coombe July Plate of 269sovs.: weight for age, etc. About one mile and a quarter.

Mr. C. Trimmer's b c Laurier, by Bentworth—Filepa, 3yrs., 8st. 11b. ...	O. Madden	1
Lord Carnavon's ch c Vril, 3yrs., 8st. 4lbs.	Martin	2
Mr. R. McCreery's Seymour, 3yrs., 7st. 3lbs.	Pike	0

(Winner trained by Walters, Jun.)

Betting: 5 to 4 on Laurier, 9 to 4 agst. Vril, 9 to 2 Vernham, and 20 to 1 Seymour.

Won by three-quarters of a length; four lengths divided the second and third. Time, by Benson's chronograph, 2mins. 13⅘secs.

LEICESTER.

When the mercury in the thermometer approaches the 9st. mark, even the most enthusiastic followers of racing begin to waver in their allegiance to the sport of kings, especially where it involves long journeys by train. The traffic between London and Leicester was extremely light each day, and the greater part of the company at Oadby was recruited from local sources. To tell the truth, there was little about the programme to allure folks to the pretty venue adjoining the London-road. With the exception of the Prince of Wales's Stakes, there was a lack of quality about the competitors. Moreover, the proceedings were summarily curtailed by the last race cutting down to a walk over. The Belvoir Castle Handicap had doubtless given the official weight adjuster many hours of labour, but it was a sad waste of energy, for only three of the thirty-one nominees coloured on the card came out to do battle.

The Prince of Wales's Plate (handicap) of 462sovs. One mile.

Mr. W. H. Schwind's b h Kilteel, by Kilwarlin—Bright Star, 5yrs., 8st. 11lbs.	B. Lynham	1
Mr. C. Lawman's b c Ventriloquist, 4yrs., 7st. 13lbs.	O. Madden	2
Mr. G. Cottrill's b f Debutante, 4yrs., 8st. 11b.*	Butchers	3
Mr R. Sherwood's Salute, 4yrs., 8st. 7lbs ...	Croft	0
Mr. W. Bass's Lychnobite, 5yrs., 8st. 2lbs.	Hardy	0
Mr. A. W. Fox's Va Ve, 3yrs., 7st. 8lbs. (inc. (5lbs. ex.)	E. Wheatley	0
Mr. R. Henning's Retrieve, 3yrs., 7st. 11b.*	Sharples	0
Mr. T. W. Pratt's The Kid II., 3yrs., 7st. 4lbs.	Griggs	0

* 5lbs. apprentice allowance deducted.

(Winner trained by Owner.)

Betting: 9 to 4 agst. Debutante, 9 to 2 Kilteel, 11 to 2 Ventriloquist, 6 to 1 each Lychnobite and Retrieve, 100 to 12 Salute, and 100 to 8 each Va Ve and The Kid II.

Won easily by three lengths; a like distance separated the second and third, Salute was fourth, Retrieve fifth, Va Ve next, and The Kid II. last.

The Belvoir Castle Handicap of 100sovs. Seven furlongs.

Mr. W. McKenna's br g Country Bumpkin, by Pride—Lady Gwendoline, 4yrs., 8st. 11lb.	J. McKenna	1
Mr. W. G. Stevens's b c Isterico, 3yrs., 6st. 7lbs.	East	2
Mr. H. Bibby's br f Dot, 4yrs., 6st. 8lbs. ...	Plant	3

Betting: 11 to 10 agst. Dot, 2 to 1 Country Bumpkin, and 11 to 4 Isterico.

Won easily by three lengths from Isterico, who took second place at the distance: four lengths divided the second and third.

LIVERPOOL JULY.

Seldom is a more richly-endowed programme placed before the public than that arranged at Liverpool on the 20th comprising as it did a couple of events each of the value of 2,000sovs., but great as were the inducements for owners to have a cut in for the tempting prizes the fields were restricted within a narrow compass owing to the recent drought. This is no new experience in July, and it remains to be seen whether the Liverpool executive will derive any substantial benefit from the addition of a third day to their summer fixture. Precautions had been taken to water the course and the moisture was supplemented by a light shower on the 19th, but it was of no avail, and the ground was so hard that in certain cases horses who had made long journeys with the object of competing were at the last moment withdrawn from their engagements. One of them was John o' Gaunt, for whom the rich St. George Stakes was voted almost a certainty. The son of Isinglass and La Fleche was ridden an exercise gallop by Mr. Thursby this morning, and much against his will, the Boveridge amateur decided not to risk his St. Leger charge on the adamantine going. This left only a quartette to do duty.

The St. George Stakes of 1,719sovs., for three year olds; colts 9st., fillies 8st. 9lbs.; penalties and allowances. One mile and three furlongs.

Duke of Westminster's b c Rydal Head, 9st. 8lbs.	M. Cannon	3
Mr. L. Neumann's Sertorious, 8st. 4lbs. ...	W. Lane	0

(Winner trained by Mr. G. Lambton.)

Betting: 7 to 4 agst. Sertorius, 2 to 1 Rydal Head, 3 to 1 Pace Egger colt, 7 to 1 Leucadia

Won in a canter by three lengths; three-quarters of a length separated the second and third. Time, by Benson's chronograph, 2mins. 21⅗secs.

The Great Lancashire Breeders' Produce Stakes of 1,611sovs., for two year olds; colts 9st., fillies and geldings 8st. 11lbs.; penalties and allowances. Five furlongs.

Mr. E. Dresden's ch f Galantine, by Gallinule—Volant, 9st. 2lbs. ...	O. Madden	1
Lord Derby's b f Brilliancy, 8st. 11b. ...	H. Aylin	2
Lord Carnarvon's b f Grandiflora, 8st. 11b.	J. H. Martin	3

Duke of Portland's f by St. Simon—Gay Duchess, 8st. 11lbs.	M. Cannon	0
Mr. W. Hall Walker's Cherry Lass, 8st 11lbs	G. McCall	0
Mr. J. D. Wardell's Tea Rose, 9st. ...	W. Lane	0
Mr. J. S. Curtis's Nuncastle, 8st. 6lbs. ...	Hardy	0

(Winner trained by Archer.)

Betting: 9 to 4 agst. Grandiflora, 5 to 2 Cherry Lass, 11 to 2 Shah Jehan, 7 to 1 Galantine, 100 to 8 Brilliancy, and 100 to 7 any other (offered).

Won by three-quarters of a length; five lengths divided the second and third. Cherry Lass was placed fourth, Tea Rose was fifth, Gay Duchess filly sixth, Shah Jehan next, and Feather Bed last. Time, by Benson's chronograph, 1min. 8secs.

It is a fact, and one to the truth of which clerks of the courses would be the first to attest, that selling races are the barometer by which the strength and vitality of the Turf system are registered with almost infallible precision. This is even more applicable to races for which the entries close overnight and which are happily dying out. When the subscriptions for contests to which a selling clause is attached are numerous it is a sure sign that things are going with a swing, and no more accurate index of the stagnation which prevails in racing circles at the moment could be forthcoming than the closing of the Riverside Plate last night with three nominations, two of whom belonged to the same owner. The recent drought (which has almost put a stop to training operations) and general langour begotton of semi-tropical heat are mainly responsible for the present inaction and against such forces the executive are powerless to contend. There are no signs as yet of any change in the conditions.

The Mersey Stakes of 680sovs., for two year olds: colts 8st. 7lbs., fillies 8st. 4lbs.: penalties and allowances. Five furlongs and a half.

Mr. W. Hall Walker's b f Cherry Lass, by Isinglass—Black Cherry, 7st. 13lbs.	G. McCall	1

Betting: 5 to 2 agst. Cherry Lass, 3 to 1 Carita, 6 to 1 each Verdiana and the Lecture colt, 100 to 14 Koorhaan, and 10 to 1 any other.

Won by a length; a short head separated the second and third. Lecture colt was placed fourth. Verdiana was fifth, and Special Pleader last. Time, by Benson's chronograph, 1min. 10⅖secs.

The Molyneux Plate (handicap) of 700sovs. Six furlongs.

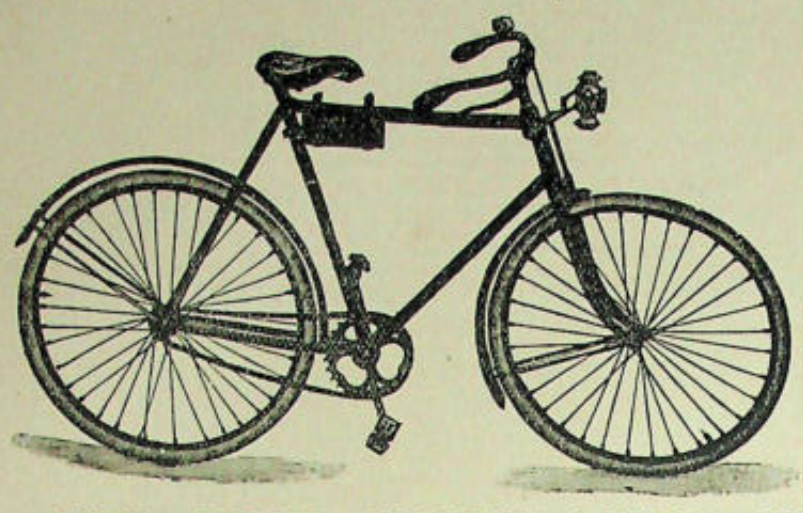
DEATH OF MR R. K. MAINWARING.

I regret to announce the death of Mr. R. K. Mainwaring, the well-known handicapper and racing official, which took place on Sunday. The news of his passing away, from lung trouble, in a London nursing home, came as a surprise, it not being generally known that he was ill, and he had, in fact, only been so a little while. Born in 1847, Mr Reginald Kynaston Mainwaring was the second son of Mr Townshend Mainwaring, who for many years sat in Parliament as the representative of the Denbigh Boroughs. He was educated at Eton and Christ Church, Oxford. His sporting proclivities found vent while at Christ Church in the management of the "Grinds," and he rode several winners of steeplechases. One year he managed the Aylesbury Meeting, and owned a horse in partnership with the late Lord Randolph Churchill. His favourite study, apart from the ordinary course laid down for undergraduates, was handicapping, which procured for him among his intimates the apt nickname of "Rous." At Aylesbury in 1871 his colours, "French grey and rose," were to the fore in a Hunters' Steeplechase on Arundel, a son of the Derby winner, Wild Dayrell, out of Princess, by The Merry Monarch (also a Derby winner).



Mr. Mainwaring was a very busy man, for, in addition to framing all the handicaps at Liverpool, he had for years past been Clerk of the Course at Hurst Park and Chester, while formerly he was associated in an official capacity with other gatherings, including the big Hunt Meeting at Bangor. A good deal of the success of the three meetings last named was undoubtedly due to the business capabilities and intimate knowledge of racing matters of the deceased gentleman, whose untimely death has brought sorrow to all who knew him.

Somerset vs. Hampshire.—Played at Taunton on 14th, 15th, and 16th July. Somerset won by 222 runs. The ground at Taunton is a paradise for batsman when there has been fine weather for some time, for the wickets are splendid and the boundaries not at all difficult to reach. On the first day of the match Somerset not only scored 378 but left Hampshire with an hour and forty minutes to bat before stumps were drawn, and getting down four wickets for 196 a very good day's work indeed. The chief feature of the Somerset innings was the batting of S. M. J. Woods, who, after leading the bowlers to imagine that he would speedily fall a victim to their strategy, played himself into form, and made 136 by exceedingly attractive cricket. He was at the wickets for only a little more than an hour and three-quarters, but he managed to reach the boundary twenty-four times. During his partnership with Lewis the two men hit tremendously hard after lunch, putting on 85 runs in a little over half an hour. Palairet made some brilliant strokes in his 57, but it was hardly one of his best innings. It seemed likely that Somerset would make a very large total, but some fine bowling by Steel brought about a startling change in the fortunes of the game. On Friday morning two Hampshire men were run out, and the innings seemed about over when Langford and Martin made a fine stand for the last wicket which produced 76 runs, and saved the follow on. When Somerset went in again with a lead of 104, Palairet, Hedley, Robson and Martin all played finely, while Lewis almost succeeded in scoring a hundred for the second time in the match. The result of all this good batting was a total of 363 for seven wickets, so that Somerset were now 467 runs on. Martin and Newton added 47 to the total in a quarter of an hour on Saturday morning, and when the former was out the innings was declared closed. Hampshire had the formidable task of making 515 to win, or of keeping up their wickets all day. At lunch time only two wickets had fallen, thanks to a fine stand by Bowell and Captain Palmer. Afterwards Somerset always seemed to have the game in hand. Bowell played excellent cricket for an hour and three-quarters, and Captain Palmer and Llewellyn both played a sound game; but when they were out wickets fell rapidly, and a plucky stand of 48 for the last wicket only served to prolong the game for half-an-hour. Somerset were victorious at four o'clock.

GLOUCESTERSHIRE vs NOTTS.—Played at Trent Bridge on 18th 19th and 20th July. Gloucestershire won by an innings and 1 run. On a perfect Trent Bridge wicket G. L. Jessop delighted the spectators for about two hours and a quarter on Monday. He went to the wickets soon after lunch, when the Notts bowlers had lost much of their sting owing to some brilliant hitting by Wrathall and Board, who put up 154 for the first wicket in an hour and ten minutes. His first partner was Brownlee, the Oxford Blue, who was in such form that he made 57 while Jessop was making 54 in three quarters of an hour, the partnership producing 113 runs. Brownlee's innings was admirable in every way, and he was only an hour and a quarter in scoring his 94. Jessop continued to play a wonderful game, not hitting at everything, but choosing his ball, and when at last he was dismissed his score was 206, which had taken him two hours and twenty minutes to compile. At the end of the day the Gloucestershire score was 501 for nine wickets. This was increased by 45 on the next morning. Notts began well enough by putting up 100 for the first wicket, 71 of these being made by Jones, who played beautiful cricket. Iremonger did not play one of his long innings, and of the rest only Day and Hardstaff made runs. Notts had to follow on, with arrears of 394 to wipe off, and when 32 had been scored without loss rain stopped play. When the game was resumed the total was taken to 122 without loss, Iremonger being not out 50 and Jones not out 67. These two men played brilliant cricket yesterday, and their partnership produced 308 runs for the first wicket in four hours and a half before they were separated. After such a splendid beginning Notts seemed safe enough from defeat, but Spry brought about a break-down in the batting, and Gloucestershire won a great and unexpected victory.

MIDDLESEX vs. LANCASHIRE.—Played at Old Trafford on 18th, 19th and 20th July. Lancashire won by eight wickets. Although Middlesex batted first on an excellent pitch, they did so badly for some time against the bowling of Kermode that half their wickets were down for 36. When things were in this desperate position, Stogdon and Trott considerably altered the appearance of the game, the former playing the steadiest of games, while the latter hit in his usual forceful style. The partnership produced 101 runs in less than an hour, Trott claiming 67 of them; his hits included twelve 4's. Stogdon was at the wickets for forty minutes for his first two runs, but towards the end of his innings he made some fine hits. The tail played up manfully, and the result was a fairly good total. More bit very hard and well for his 53. Lancashire went in at a quarter to five, and at the end of the day their total was 156 for two wickets, so that they were only 103 runs behind. Spooner and Tyldesley put on 80 runs for the second wicket. When stumps were drawn Tyldesley was not out 63 and Hallows not out 22. The partnership was not broken on Tuesday until it had produced 92. Tyldesley was batting for two hours for his 102. After his departure Hallows played a fine game, but could get no one to stay with him for any length of time, and in the end he carried his bat for 137, after batting for three hours and a half. The last four men only made 6 runs between them. When they went in again Middlesex began even worse than in the first innings, and five wickets were down for 51. Stogdon and Trott then made a most useful stand. In an hour and a half these two men raised the total to 149, and when stumps were drawn Stogdon was not out 49. The total was 156 for six wickets, so that Middlesex were 45 runs ahead, with the prospect of a severe defeat before them. Yesterday they could not get out of their difficulty, and Lancashire only had to make 105 to win.

ESSEX vs. DERBYSHIRE.—Played at Chesterfield on 18th, 19th, and 20th July. Derbyshire won by nine wickets. Short boundaries, a fine wicket, an extremely hot day, weak bowling, and brilliant batting by Perrin resulted in the highest individual innings of the season on Monday. Perrin was in magnificent form, and showed, as usual, such command over the bowling and so little intention of getting himself out, that the Derbyshire men must have been disheartened long before stumps were drawn. He was batting for five hours, and, when the day's play ended, was not out 295, thus beating the record individual score of the season, the 273 not out by Hayes for Surrey against Derbyshire. Nearly all Perrin's runs were made by means of boundary hits, the ball travelling over the dry grass and rapidly to the short boundary that the fieldsmen had very little chance of getting to it. In partnership with Fane, Perrin helped to put on 120 for the second wicket in an hour and ten minutes; with Gillingham as a partner 121 runs were made in an hour and five minutes, and a third long partnership which produced 130 in an hour and a quarter ensued between him and Douglas. At the end of the day Essex, with two wickets in hand, had made 524 runs. On Tuesday morning Perrin soon passed his third hundred, and making runs quickly he reached a score of 343 before the innings came to an end. He was still unconquered after batting for five hours and three-quarters; his hits included no fewer than sixty-eight 4's. Derbyshire had apparently a thankless task before them, but they set to work in such a determined way that at lunch time the score was 144 with no wickets down. The total was 190 before Wright was caught for a splendid 66 Ollivierre, who had gone in first with him, took risks and hit with the utmost boldness; but his boldness met with such success that when only two wickets were down he reached his second hundred. Storer and Ollivierre added 128 in an hour and a quarter for the second wicket. When Ollivierre's great innings came to an end he had been batting for three hours and three-quarters, and his hits included a five and thirty-seven 4's. When one considers the position of his side when he began his innings his feat seems magnificent. When stump were drawn the Derbyshire total was 446 for four wickets, so that only 2 runs were required to save the follow-on. Of the third day's cricket there is a remarkable tale to tell. The remaining six Derbyshire batsmen added 102 runs to the total, so that their side was only 49 runs behind when Essex went in a second time. Then ensued an inexplicable breakdown on the part of Essex, and before lunch six wickets were down for 26. Afterwards Sewell and Douglas made a most plucky effort to pull their side out of a dangerous position, but despite all they could do the total of the innings was only 97. Warren bowled splendidly. Derbyshire were now left to make 147 in two hours and ten minutes, and with such an entirely unexpected chance of victory offered to them they set to work with such determination that, although they lost Wright for 1 run, they won a glorious victory by nine wickets. Ollivierre again played a splendid game.

THE SOUTH AFRICAN'S TOUR.

MATCH vs. AN ENGLAND XI.—Played at Lord's on 14th, 15th and 16th July. South Africans won by 189 runs.

The team which opposed the South Africans in this match was strong in its way, but most unrepresentative of the strength of England, and was particularly weak in bowling. But for all that it might have made a good fight with the strong eleven of the South Africans if the fielding had been even moderately good on the first day. The South Africans have so greatly improved since they have become acclimatised, and accustomed to turf wickets, that their victory can have surprised nobody. On the first day they were batting until a few minutes from time. Shalders and Hathorn played a fine game after Tancred was dismissed for a duck's egg, and Mitchell showed all his old skill. These three men gave the visitors an excellent send off, and the third wicket did not fall till the total was 138. When 186 appeared on the board half the wickets were down, but Schwarz and Mitchell added 75 to the score, and then Schwarz, who hit with great power, received such useful assistance from Shepstone and Halliwell that the score began to mount rapidly. Schwarz eventually made his first hundred of the tour after batting for about a couple of hours; his hits included seventeen 4's, and his innings was decidedly the most attractive of the day, although it was a little lucky. Before stumps were drawn the home team lost MacGregor and the total was eight. On the next day they gave a most uninteresting display of batting, King alone making over fifty. Schwarz seemed to puzzle everybody by the peculiarities of his bowling, and Sinclair was in excellent form with the ball. With a lead of 185 the South Africans seemed to have an easy victory in prospect, but most of them did not shine much in their second innings. Hathorn played with great steadiness and caution for two hours and a half, while at the end of the day Halliwell made a most useful 39 not out. When play ended the total was 176 for eight wickets, so that the South Africans had a lead of 361. On Saturday morning they increased their overnight total by 41, the ninth wicket partnership producing 59 runs. Halliwell batted very well indeed for his 57 not out. The England eleven had now to make 393 to win, and again gave a most disappointing display of batting. King, for the second time in the match, played excellent cricket, but neither Ranjitsinhji, or Jessop on whom so much depended, did anything of note. On the other hand Sinclair and Schwarz both bowled uncommonly well, and their share in the success of their side was considerable. The wicket-keeping of Halliwell was greatly admired in both innings, and many good judges of the game consider him to be the best wicket-keeper in the world at the present time. The South Africans are to be greatly congratulated on their well earned victory, and the only thing that is to be regretted is that it was not gained over a stronger team, but this is not their fault, for they would much have preferred to meet the full strength of England.

MATCH v. SCOTLAND.—Played at Edinburgh on 18th and 19th July. South Africans won by an innings and 188 runs. Fresh from their easy victory over the England XI. at Lord's last week the South Africans gave such a good account of themselves on the first day of the match against Scotland, that when stumps were drawn they had scored 257 for the loss of a wicket, against a total of 128, and were thus 129 runs on. The skill of the Scotsmen was inadequate to cope with the bowling of Kotze and Sinclair. Tancred and Shalders put up 132 for the first wicket, and soon after the latter was out Tancred reached his hundred for the third time during the tour. He was not out 157 at the time of the day, and Hathorn not out 31. The Scottish bowlers had a bad time again on Tuesday. Tancred increased his score to 250, which he had put together in three hours and three-quarters. Scotland could do very little in the second innings and experienced a severe defeat. It may be stated that in the second innings of Scotland a substitute was allowed to bat in place of Gowans, who had batted in the first innings.

SCULLING.

THE AMATEUR CHAMPIONSHIP.

THE WINGFIELD SCULLS.

The seventy-fourth race for the Wingfield Sculls representing the Amateur Sculling Championship of Great Britain and Ireland, took place yesterday over the championship course, Putney to Mortlake, about four miles and a quarter, and resulted in a win for Mr. St. George Ashe, of the Thames.

THE WINGFIELD CHALLENGE SCULLS.

Established in 1830 (open to recognised amateurs of Great Britain and Ireland). Holder, F. S. Kelly (Balliol College, Oxford, and Leander). University course, Putney to the Ship, Mortlake.

Middlesex Station—St. George Ashe, Thames R. C. .. 1
Surrey Station—A. H. Cloutte, London R. C ... 2

Cloutte won the toss and, selecting the Surrey Station, was first out. He was piloted by the Captain, Mr. F. S. Lowe, from a cutter manned by A. N. Other, Messrs. C. F. Ray, J. Compton, M. Leggatt, W. Towers, A. Hay Currie, and W. Field (stroke), Ted Phelps being cox. St. George Ashe was assisted by Mr. J. M. Heath, number two being his trainer, young Tom Green, and the cox the famous old Royal waterman, Tom Green, Barnes.

There was little delay at the start, and Mr. Pitman sent them off like a shot. In the first minute Ashe struck thirty nine and Cloutte fourty-four, and passing his club house the Londoner went away doing forty to the Thamesman's steady thirty-eight. At the Steps, reached by Cloutte in 3mins. 15secs., there was very little between them, but after this a rough piece of water was encountered and the times for

ATHLETICS.

ESSEX COUNTY AMATEUR SPORTS.

With the weather all that could be possibly desired, the entries numerous and of high class, and the proceedings patronised by between 7,000 and 8,000 spectators, the Essex County Cycling and Athletic Association scored another success at Chelmsford on Saturday. The twenty-third annual meeting may, indeed, be put down as one of the most interesting of the long series held in the picturesque grounds kindly lent year by year by the Lord Bishop, as from every point of view the runion was satisfactory.

100 YARDS FLAT HANDICAP (open)

FINAL HEAT.

J. A. Miller, L.A.C., 3 yards start	... 1
S. Smithson, Grays Thurrock H., 6 ...	... 2
H. Layton, Highgate H. 9	... 3
C. Stanfield, Hill Herne, H., 6½	... 4

A splendid start was made, and at the half distance, Layton held a clear lead. From here the virtual scratch came along at a rare pace, and finishing with a fine burst, he won by two feet; same between second and third. Time—9⅘secs.

ONE MILE BICYCLE HANDICAP (open).

FINAL HEAT.

G. W. Bishop, Thames Ironworks C.C. ...	... 4
Geo. Kendall, South-West Ham Rovers ...	... 0
W. V. Solomon, Essex Beagles	... 0

Soon after the start, Vogelsang fell, and the competitors were brought back to the post. At the bell, John Bishop was leading his brother two yards, but, halfway through the last lap, Taylerson got in front and scored a popular victory by three lengths; five between the next two. Time—2mins. 32⅘secs.

100 YARDS FLAT LEVEL RACE (ESSEX CHAMPIONSHIP).

(First two in each heat to run in final.)

Heat 1: J. Austin Miller, Woodford Lacrosse Club (holder), 1; Sidney Smithson, Grays Thurrock H., 2; W. J. Smith, Harwich Crusaders F.C., 3. Miller won, without being pushed, by two yards. Time—10⅕secs. Heat 2: Frederick Smithson, Grays Thurrock H., 1; S. A. Morris, Essex Beagles, 2; W. T. Turrall, Chelmsford F. C. 3. Won in a trot. Time—10⅖secs.

FINAL HEAT.

Brew, Hampstead H., 190.

Shrubb retired after running two laps, and when the bell rang for the final circuit Driver was showing the way to Browning. Half-way round the last-named got the lead, and, coming away, he won by six yards; fifteen between second and third. Time—4mins. 17secs.

SPECIAL QUARTER MILE INVITATION SCRATCH FLAT RACE.

(First two in each heat to run in the final.)

FINAL HEAT.

Rev. H. W. Workman	... 1
F. H. Montague	... 2
J. B. Densham	... 3
L. J. de. B. Reed	... 4
B. J. Blunden	... 5
C. Stanfield	... 0

Densham broke away with the lead, closely followed by Workman and Montague, with Stanfield last. At the half-distance Workman drew up to the South London harrier, but Densham, responding, turned into the straight, with a yard the best of it. Down the straight, however, Workman drew out and won by five feet. Montague got up and beat Densham by half a yard for second place. Time—51secs.

QUARTER-MILE LEVEL RACE (ESSEX CHAMPIONSHIP).

(First two in each heat to run in the final.)

FINAL HEAT.

S. G. Best, Essex Beagles	... 1

G. W. Chesher, Northampton, I.H. (Essex Div.)	... 3
S. J. Britton, Arc Works A.C. ...	... 4

Eleven started, Baker led for the best part of the distance. Six hundred yards from the finish however, he was overhauled by the holder and, having the speed of his opponents, O'Gorman drew away and won by twenty-five yards: ten divided the second and third. Time—16mins. 12⅘secs.

SWIMMING.

LONG-DISTANCE CHAMPIONSHIP.

Those swimming enthusiasts who missed witnessing the Long-distance Championship on Saturday last have something to regret, for never in the history of the famous race, which was inaugurated in 1877, has there been such a wonderful struggle. It is almost impossible to believe, yet perfectly true, as hundreds will testify, that for two miles and a half of the journey J. A. Jarvis, of Leicester, and David Billington, of Bacup, were, so to speak locked together; in fact, at no period was there more than five yards between them. The most remarkable feature of this wonderful race was the fact that all this while both men were going at their fastest pace. Billington set out with the intention of making the pace a cracker, and did so but Jarvis, instead of lying second as he did last year, not only kept level, but led most of the time. They ploughed along at great speed until Thorneycroft's Works were passed, when, unfortunately, Billington, who was then four yards in front, complained of cramp. He turned on his back and took several strokes in that style, a move that cost him quite thirty yards, after which he again went after Jarvis in his usual method, double overarm. The Leicester representative could not get any further away, and the Bacup man looked like making a race of it. However, at Harrod's Wharf he was again affected by the swimmer's evil, cramp, and although he again tried to master it, failed, and on this occasion had to be lifted into his boat. After this Jarvis went home alone, for none of the other competitors were within a quarter of a mile of him. Billington is to be symphatised with, for the same thing occurred on Saturday as a year ago. Then, after leading for three miles, he had cramp at the Doves, and only by the greatest pluck and endurance managed to take second position. However, it is extremely doubtful whether the stroke that he uses is best adapted for such an exhausting race as the Long-distance Championship, which means travelling five miles and sixty yards, and on Saturday, owing to the men being started before reaching the Anglian Boathouse, fully 140 yards more. It was noticeable that the Bacup man repeatedly lost sight of his boat, and thus was rather erratic. Indeed, up to the moment that he left the water he must have swum a matter of quite 200 yards more than Jarvis This was in no way due to the coaching but was probably caused by Billington, whose face was immersed for the better part of the time, being unable to sight his boat directly he brought his head out of the stream. On the other hand, Jarvis, with his remarkable leg kick and powerful overarm side stroke, never lost sight of his coach, and thus had the full benefit of the tide throughout the race As a matter of fact, he has never swum in better form throughout his whole career, He is bigger than he was a year ago but that in no way affected his swimming Indeed, his performance on Saturday was remarkable, and to some extent indicates what he would have been capable of a few years ago had there been a man good enough to extend him. It was his seventh successive win in the event, which is in itself a record, for no other man has ever won a championship swimming race for more than six years on end, and his twenty-third success in Amateur Swimming Association Championships.

The times and positions of the men that finished were:—

D. Billington, Bacup S. C.; J. J. Crichton, Napier S. C., London; and R. J. Lobb, Hammersmith S. C. did not finish, and W. A. Curwen, Westminster S. C., Liverpool; T. Wildgoose, Hyde Seal S. C.; and B. Law, Chadderton S. C., did not start.

THE WEASEL.

A WRITER in a daily paper raises the quetion, à propos of the sun and sunshades, why stripes should be cool in appearance and spots hot. No one would think of choosing a spotted pattern, say, for an awning, while the cool effect of stripes of blue and white or green and white is probably felt by every one. Association, no doubt, is at the bottom of the heated and unrestful appearance of a spotted pattern, and it is probably largely due to the fact that spotted eruptions are the characteristic outward symptom of all kinds of fevers and feverish irritations. The cool effect of stripes, moreover, depends more on the skilful choice of colour than the actual pattern.

Hunting.

THE OOTACAMUND HUNT.

WE had another bye day on Saturday (30th July) and in spite of a very strong cold wind there was a large field out at Rees' Corner at 7-30. The morning was fine and bright and promised good sport Rallywood was the first draw, and as the lower part of this was blank we went on and on the saddle of Newmarket hounds picked up a line. After a moment's hesitation they settled down to it and went away very fast straight along the top of Newmarket. Half way down they swung sharply to the right and crossed Blackmore Vale to the west side of Bagman, turning again right handed and streaming back towards Jackal Shola, through this and up to the road at the top, where they checked. Thinking that the jack had gone on to Monkey Shola, the Master held them on to the line, but, failing to recover it tried back again towards the top of Baikie. On the side of one Tree Hill the line was hit off again and once more we got going. Rounding one Tree Hill we turned away from Baikie and crossing the road swung down to Jackal Shola We then saw that we had a brace of jacks in front of us as they were viewed away towards Rallywood, running side by side. They took us through Rallywood and over the hill into Bluegums where there was a long check. One of the jacks then broke back, with six couple of hounds on him, and skirting the top of Rallywood crossed into Monkey Shola He then went on into the upper part of Baikie Wood and down over Baikie Crossing into the big wood. Scent was getting rapidly worse, so the Master stopped these hounds and went back to the rest of the pack. These had hunted their jack into Governor's Shola and there lost him. Scent was poor all the morning, probably on account of the high wind, but in spite of this we had a very enjoyable day.

On Monday (1st instant) Sheffield Corner was the meet and the weather was both mild and misty. This seemed to have had no effect on the size of the field, which was fairly large. After drawing the coverts beyond Audy Plantation blank we went on and, rounding the head of the swamp, picked up a line which hounds could only hunt for a few hundred yards. We drew on down Parson's Valley for some distance, but the mist grew thicker. A sounder of pig was seen, hares kept jumping up among the hounds and it was at last decided to turn back towards the home country. We found in Rallywood, the jack taking us over the hill into Bluegums, where a fresh one jumped up and hounds divided. Five couple went on with what was probably the hunted jack across the valley to Round Shola and then, by way of the lower part of Governor's Shola, back to Bluegums, where we lost him. The remainder hunted their jack into Governor's Shola when a third jack was on foot, and another division of the pack took place Six couple came out at the top of Governor's Shola above the Toda School and crossed the head of Parson's Valley, running very first. At the stream the Master's horse got a hind leg wedged between two rocks and it took quite five minutes to extricate him. In the meantime the others went on but could not keep the hounds in view. When last seen they were running in the direction of Vokal Hill. They returned to kennels later in the day very tired.

On Thursday (4th instant) we met at Kandal Cross Roads. It was a very wet morning, but there was not much wind, a fairly large field turned out. We first drew Mills covert blank, hounds just speaking to a stale line. A jack was viewed from the top of Bagman, going towards Jackal Shola, but the Master decided we might do better and did not, therefore, lay hounds on Just above the Double Crossing we picked up a line and hounds went away very fast. Crossing the lower end of Newmarket they raced away up the right bank of the Gold Mine stream to the foot of Sawling's Nullah, where they crossed and it looked as if we were bound for Staircase. We re-crossed the stream immediately, however, and went on towards Governor's Shola. After passing the stream which runs down from Bluegums, they bore to the left and ran along the spur towards Porlock. Short of this they swung again to the left and ascended the hill between Porlock and Bluegums. There was a short check on reaching the Bridle Road and then they turned into the upper part of Bluegums. By the music which followed in the next five minutes they must have been very close to their jack, who now began to run short in the heavy covert. They hunted him up and down for some time, but at last he slipped away and got another long start of hounds. Rain was now falling in torrents and scent was weak in consequence. Hounds stuck to the line, however, across the valley to Martyn's Shola, at the edge of which a herd of buffaloes caused a check. They hit it off again and hunted steadily to the foot of Shaw's Plantation, where another check occurred and the Master had them stopped. We then drew down Lawley's Course without finding again, and as everybody was drenched, came home.

POONA AND KIRKEE FOXHOUNDS.

A Red Letter Day.

It is an ill shower that does nobody any good and the shower that caused such anxiety to the racing fraternity on the preceding afternoon must have rejoiced the heart of Colonel Sheringham and filled the breasts of foxhunters with joy and gladness and when they had the "southerly wind and the cloudy sky" of the ballad but little of the requisite preliminaries of the successful chase was lacking. Nothing certainly was lacking in the shape of "jumping powder" for that and provender galore was provided by the ever hospitable Gunners at their ancient and historical mess which on this occasion was the place of meeting. That keenest of all good sportsmen Colonel Channer gave tidings I hear of jacks soothing him to sweet nightly with their lullaby in a babul and brushwood covert close to his residence, and it must assuredly be called "Channer Covert" from this day. On the stroke of six Colonel Sheringham moved off at a brisk trot to sample this good thing with the laudable ambition of reducing the strength of the nightly choristers by one. Under a railway arch the hounds were thrown into the covert in question and all anxiety was speedily put an end to by a cheery "gone away" from a whip at the far corner and hounds were seen simply racing over the level. But it was not all beer and skittles for a quarter of a mile ahead was the canal which it may be remembered caused such ravages in the ranks some weeks ago. It is I am assured nothing of a lep—nothing that an intelligent mule could not squirm over but it caused that delay fatal to success in the career of many and those that dwelt on the brink and those that chosing the lesser of two ends had to go round to the nearest bridge saw nothing of the cream of this brilliant little gallop. Two of my kind hearted informants admit with lamentation being among this hapless brigade but one at least was among the favoured of fortune. After crossing the water it seems that the jack headed straight for Government House and it was not till he got close to the A. D. C.'s cottages that he changed his mind and wheeled off right handed, crossing the avenues and taking the field over some smaller water courses and over some excellent, though rather holding, going slap for the railway, a few hundred yards to the Bombay side of Kirkee railway, station where jack and hounds crossed the line at right angles. The wire fencing found an impossible obstacle and those who were in the first flight had nothing for it but to gallop along the fencing to the crossing—which let up some of the second flight division—a better slice of luck than they deserved. Down along the king's hard highway to where hounds crossed and then right handed straight, I hear, to the river bank where the first check occurred, twenty-one minutes and galloping every yard and hunters were, I am told, in a rare lather and many of the riders a bit short of breath. There was apparently some slight delay before hounds were thrown into some garden land (of what particular sort my informants wot not) close at hand and at the first venture hounds evidently missed their jack but being thrown again into the remaining half an ear piercing shriek proclaimed glad tidings and Colonel Sheringham soon had hounds on the line again, along the river bank to Harris Bridge. Across the trunk road and under the Railway Bridge and the now dead beat jack sought refuge in one expiring effort, in a large cactus cover outside the village of Bopri (which is as near I can get to the name). If ever hounds deserved the blood of their victim these hounds must have, and they went into the abominable growth with a pluck that would take no denial and after a brief delay crowned their admirable work with a kill. No one went better in this run I am assured than Mrs. Charles Beatty whom Colonel Sheringham presented with the brush, and among the other gallant few who were "bang up" were Colonel Channer, Mr. Enthoven, Mr. Hugh Seymour (from Bombay), Colonel Bull, Mr. Armstrong and needless to add Colonel Sheringham and if there are any gallant sportsmen I have omitted I can only apologise and ungenerously, transfer all blame to my informants.

Such a delightful gallop as this must have been would, one would suppose, have been enough (as indeed it was enough) for most people, but Colonel Sheringham and several ardent followers had evidently merely had their sporting appetites whetted, for after performing the funeral obsequies with all rites as so gallant a galloping a jack deserved a move was made in the direction of the Governor's Body Guard Lines to a covert which' is said to more often than not hold a jack. For what followed I am indebted to various sources for not one of my three special "correspondents" participated in the second run and to a humble protest on my part I received the very pertinent suggestion that I might provide horseflesh if I required two of Colonel Sheringham's good things in one day. "It's deuced easy going two runs with a quill pen over the cream of a foolscap country in an arm chair", quoth my flip ant friend, "but twenty odd minutes of that sort is enough for my old quad, and if you want a second dose you must provide the necessary quadruped." My tale must consequently I fear be incomplete and unworthy of the occasion. But from what I gather hounds were put into the garden covert referred to (jumping into which the master I believe, took a toss but a soft one) and an outlying jack streaked out, making straight for the neighbouring hill range. Straight up this hounds and horses climbed—a stout hearted score or so—at what seemed a wonderful pace till they reached the summit. What a case of bellows to mend in must have been—along the plateau and down into the valley beneath across the plain and over a second range of rocky hills towards the lake of Pashan; more hill hunting till jack, hounds and horses were well nigh beaten. But Colonel Sheringham and his beauties seemed to have been irresistable and hunting with what must have been wonderful determination—Well may it be termed "dogged" ("houndy" determination in this instance)—rolled over an absolutely fairly and squarely hunted and beaten jack after anything between as far as I can gather 35 and 40 minutes. A great hunting run it must have been. No one saw more of it I am told than that hard bitten veteran Colonel Channer and it is hard to believe as I am assured is the fact that he rode this second run on the same horse that carried him so brilliantly in the first. In the van, too, were Mr. Armstrong who is apparently always on a galloper, Colonel Bull on one of his weight carriers, the Master a stranger from Bombay and last but by no means least and deserving of all praise, the only lady who sportingly rode this fine run Miss Anderson (daughter, I hear, of Colonel John Anderson, the well-known and popular Veterinary Surgeon of Bombay) who must be proud of the brush the Master rewarded her with. A red letter day in very truth.

Such excellent scenting weather was too good—and alas rare just now—to lose and as the strength of this year's pack permits of liberties, so Colonel Sheringham sportingly provided a bye day for gluttons in sport and a good many "accepted his kind invitation" to meet at the kennels on Tuesday.

A move was made towards and then for a mile along the Sholapur road at a walk so slow and solemn, I here that it reminded one of the sad and solemn processions that take place along the road in question. Some time elapsed therefore (which might I gather have been well saved) before hounds were thrown on to the end of Gibbet Hill while the feld were held in obedient subjection on either side. After drawing patiently along the ridge for about three-quarters of a mile hounds were seen to be busy, and shortly after burst left handed down the hill into the level in full cry—and a pretty and inspiriting sight it must have been from all accounts. First towards the village of Harupsur and then left handed towards the railway where a frisky little fox was viewed and racing along the side of the line found sanctuary in the rocks on the hill he started from. This served an enjoyable wind opener Then towards Harupsar where hounds were sent into a patch of sugar cane and speedily announced the joyful fact that a tenant was at home, and forthwith evicted him. At an excellent pace the jack led his pursuers across the railway line and to the range of hills, but recently left—travelling apparently much on the line the field had come. Up the rocky heights and on the plateau hounds seemed to hesitate, but a cast by the Master hit it off again and at a fair hunting pace hounds carried the line down the hill on the far side towards Kondwar. But the relentless hunting told the inevitable tale and it was a leg weary jack that made one effort to save his tag in some cactus growth, but all in vain and a few minutes chivveying on the undergrowth signed his death knell, the brush being presented by the Master to Mr. Deane who went, I hear, very well indeed in this nice hunting run of about 40 minutes. Some watches I believe made it a few minutes more.

CYCLING AND MOTORING AT HOME.

London, Friday, 22nd July 1904.

THE daily Press lately has been supplying the public with so much misleading information respecting the behaviour of a motor car when one of its tyres suddenly bursts as to the driver losing control of the steering and he and all other occupants of the car being thrown out with more or less serious results, that it was with particular thirst after knowledge that I attended the Crystal Palace on Tuesday last to witness a series of experiments to demonstrate that even on a car travelling at a high rate of speed a tyre might puncture, or even leave the rim without the passengers being put to any danger. The experiments were organized by Mr. S. F. Edge and were carried out on the lower terrace a broad straight course most suitable for the object selected for. The preparations made for bursting the tyres were on business like lines, large quantity of broken bottles, an iron plate with two inch nails sticking up on a correct angle to catch the tyres and lengths of wood through which joiners' chisels had been driven were layed in the track. Over this hot-bed of puncturing instruments a 15 horse-power touring car was driven with three passengers on board, and to the surprise of the onlookers no puncture occurred but on the second attempt a front tyre went but the car kept on its straight course. Then Mr. Edge brought out his 90 horse-power racing car and although the tyre was punctured it did not effect the steering in the least. He then detached one side of a cover and drove up the terrace at a rate of 45 miles an hour, swerving from side to side in order to wrench the cover from the felloe, but without success indeed, he had to repeat the performance four times before the cover left the rim and rolled along by itself faster than the car, but without any effect whatever on the car. The demonstration was most successful it being conclusively proved to all onlookers that a properly designed car, under the control of a careful driver, was perfectly safe in the event of a puncture occurring. As Mr. Edge remarked, when an accident occurs through a tyre puncturing, the mishap is caused by the driver losing his head on the burst happening and leaving hold of the steering wheel.

Royal patronage for the World's Championships has been secured by the National Cyclists' Union in the distinguished personage of the Prince and Princess of Wales who have consented to patronize the meeting. If they should attend cyclists will greatly appreciate their condescension for their is little doubt that Royalty at such a meeting will greatly benefit the sport and pastime. I cannot believe, however, that His Royal Highness will be leaving the Partridges for a cycle race meeting, however important it may be; it is well known that he is one of the best shots in the country and no man keen with the gun is likely to leave it during the month of September. Speaking of the World's Championships, regulations have been decided upon respecting pacing. Motors pacing competitors must not scale more than 150 lbs. nor develop more than a certain horse-power and the wind-shields too, are to be restricted to 25×12 inches. In this way speed will be kept down so that the races may be carried out in safety, for the Crystal Palace track is not sufficiently banked for racing above 40 miles an hour.

The Liverpool Centre of the National Cyclists' Union ran off two of their championships—the half mile and fifty miles—last Saturday at the new Brighton Tower track, but the racing was not of a very exciting nature owing to the absence of several of the leading Lancashire riders. If it had not been for the spirited riding of Ben Jones who won both events the few spectators there would have had but poor return for their money. As it was Jones was riding at his best and achieved the somewhat unusual feat of winning a short and long distance championship on the same afternoon, he coming home first in the half mile and fifty miles events.

Despite many warnings, cyclists will continue to "hang on" as the expression goes, to motor car and motor cycles on the road. In many cases the drivers of the cars warn the men of the danger in so doing, but more often than not the wheelmen refuse to take heed. The consequence is that accidents are not infrequent. The class of men who generally ride behind cars in this way are those whose machines are not adequately fitted with brake power, so that any slight momentary stop in the progress of the car, or the changing on to a slower speed up a hill, is likely to cause the cyclist to touch. If he does, the fall is almost unavoidable, and if others are hanging on behind, they too come to earth.

For some time now the yearly reports and balance sheet of the National Cyclists' Union have proved very unsatisfactory reading the balance invariably appearing on the wrong side and were it not for the fact that the Union had a satisfactory reserve fund its days of usefulness would be surely numbered. There is, however, a proposal on foot to re-organise the Unions' present system of working which is for the country to be divided up into centres governed by the General Committee in London. The proposed decentralisation of the Union originated from the Derby and District Centre, and all but two of the other Centres have intimated their intention of supporting the new proposal when it is put to the vote. Under the new scheme, considerable savings will be effected.

This morning I indulged in an early morning run and was surprised to find so few other wheelmen about. When the air is cool and the sun shines bright without that burning heat noticeable as the day advances one can secure far more pleasure from cycling than in a ride taken in the burning heat of a July sun. The roads, too, provide additional enjoyment to the pastime by reason of their almost deserted state, only a few market carts and the ubiquitous milkman robbing the early cyclist of sole possession. Some people will not dream of starting for a run until a good hearty breakfast has been given ample time to digest but it is a mistake. Although one may continually harp upon the charms of an early morning run, for such is its due, very few wheelmen, indeed, not more than one in a hundred, ever think of experiencing the pleasures. Laziness, I am afraid, is too deeply rooted to allow wheelmen to arise before the recognised hour which allows for a hasty breakfast before rushing off for the duties of the day.

One may gather a very good idea of the rapid strides that motoring is making in this country by studying the import returns published by the Board of Trade. When considering the figures, however, the amount of home trade must not be overlooked and this alone runs into considerable figures. There are now many motor car manufactories in England, as well as in Scotland and it is satisfactory to know that the product of home factories is daily increasing and securing more and more confidence from the purchasing public. The number of motor cars imported into this country during the month of June reached 581, representing a value of £48,579 and if we add to this the value of parts imported there is a grand total of £295,312. For the first six months of this year—from 1st January to 30th June—cars and parts to the value of £1,267,830 have arrived from foreign countries, nearly £203,000 more than in the corresponding period last year. Against these figures must be shown the returns of exports which for June is exceedingly disappointing, only 27 British made cycles leaving the country, but for the six months the exports are returned at £139,930 over £7,000 more than the returns for the first six months in 1903.

Major R. Skeffington Smyth (Coldstream Guards) says.

January 23rd, 1904.

"Your ·360 Cordite Rifle put a soft nosed nickel bullet through the neck of a Hippopotamus at 170 yards range. The bullet passed through the neck and came out the farside. I am extremely pleased with the above Rifle and its excellent stopping powers."

Mr. T. P. A. Holford writes :

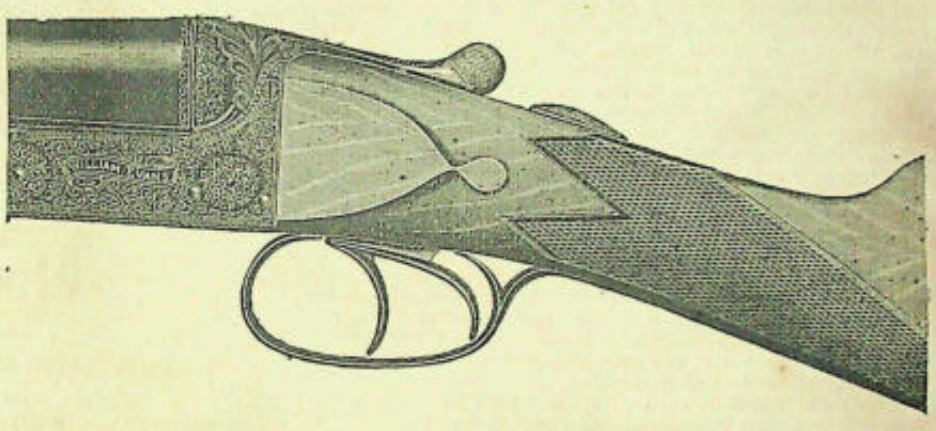
"I am writing to tell you about the Double Hammerless Ejector ·360 Cordite Rifle you built for me, and which I used on my last Big Game shoot in British East Africa and Uganda. I consider it the most perfect and reliable weapon I have used for Big Game. With it I killed everything from the size of a Guinea Fowl, to Rhinoceros, including Lion, Zebra, Wildebeeste, Waterbuck, and many other Antelope and Gazelle. Its accuracy, striking and stopping powers are extraordinary : of the latter, the bullets cut out of dead game, which I also forward, will give you a very good idea. While writing this I might also add, that I am very pleased with the Double Hammerless ·450 Cordite Rifle you built me, having done very good work with it in the Rocky Mountain."

Clip with Cartridges.

Evans' High Velocity "Magazine" Cordite Rifle. ·450.

12, 15, and 17 Guineas.
Weight about 7½ lbs.

The charge of powder is 40 grains of Cordite and 270 grain Bullet, either solid nickel, soft nosed lead or lead nose split.



The above Rifle has been specially designed for those sportsmen requiring a Magazine Rifle, burning a modern high velocity charge and heavy bullet. The Magazine takes a clip holding five Cartridges. The bolt of action is fitted with a safety catch. This is a thoroughly reliable weapon for Deer Stalking, light and handy. The striking energy of this Rifle will be found very much more effective on game than the Mannlicher, Mauser, or 303 Lee Metford.

CRICKET AT BANGALORE.

CIVIL vs. MILITARY.—This match was played on the 29th and 30th ultimo and resulted in a draw. Hanson played a fine game for the Military, putting up 48 and 93; while Rolland bowled well for the Civilians taking 5 wickets for 18 runs in the second innings and performing the hat trick. He dismissed Berger, Galloway, and Puckle with successive balls. Score:—

CRICKET CHAT.

THE home papers to hand by last week's mail are more than usually interesting in regard to scores of matches in which well-known Indian players have participated. On Thursday of the week the mail of 15th July left three Indian players were assisting London County against Warwickshire in the persons of E. H. D. Sewell, T. B. Nicholson, and B Jaya Ram all of them curiously enough contemporary Madras players of the middle and later nineties.

Ranjitsinhji failed in the Gentlemen vs. Players match at the Oval, but Ernest Steel, the erstwhile Bombay player, scored 62, and in partnership with Bosanquet put on 141 in an hour and thirty-five minutes. Major R. M. Poole, the Hampshire and ex Bombay player, made his first appearance this season in a match in England, scoring 42 for I. Zingari against the Green-jackets. Ranjitsinhji playing for Sussex against Kent on 11th, 12th, and 13th July, scored 13 and 135. G. G. S. Brander, the young batsman who scored so heavily in Bombay last cold weather is playing for the Hampshire Hogs and doing so well that it is not unlikely that his performances will attract the attention of the County authorities who have already given his younger brother a trial in the County eleven.

In searching through scores in club matches I have come across the name of H. Cheetham, the well-known Bombay player, for the first time this season. Cheetham, it will interest Western India cricket lovers to know, is playing for Manchester and Heaton Mersey For the former club against Cheadle Hulme he only scored 9. Against Brooklands he made 15 and captured four out of the nine wickets that fell for nine runs apiece. Against Cheadle Royal he made 1 run. Playing for Heaton Mersey against Manchester University he scored 36 and captured five wickets for 30 runs. Three well-known old Calcutta cricketers were assisting Incogniti against Wimbledon on 8th and 9th July in the persons of Major C. E. Greenway who made 0 and 38, Major Fleming who made 56 and 2, and E A. Leach whose scores were 0 and 7.

Captain L. S. Browne, the Mooltan player, is assisting Streatham this season and in three successive matches against the Wanderers, Surrey Club and Ground, and Mr. H. D. Leveson-Gower's XI only scored 8, 2, and 1 respectively. He, however, played a very fine innings of 73 against Incogniti and another of 49 against London County. Against M. C. C. and Ground we only made 1. J. D. Guise was playing for Incogniti and made 64, while Major Greenway made 12. Two well-known Nilgiri cricketers were playing in a recent match between Bourn mouth and the Hampshire Hogs, E. R. Kindersley and A. Edgington to wit. The last, named made 30 for the Hogs.

Lahore cricketers seem determined to keep it up. The scores of a match bettween the Station and the N.-W. Railway played on the evenings of the 27th and 28th July have just reached me The Railway who had the services of several well-known Lahore players compiled 140 towards which Captain F. A. E. Freeland, the old Bedfordian, contributed 37 W. M. Cargill 30, F. B. Clough 24 not out, and C. C Fink 12. D. H. R. Russell was the most successful bowler, capturing 6 wickets, and in the absence of S. M. Robinson and L. C. Glascock, is the mainstay of Lahore in that department. The Station who batted two short were disposed of for 104 A. G. Hutchinson making 24 and C. Crocker 27 not out, while V. H. Wilson contributed 19. I notice that the latter does not bowl much now.

Thanks to a fine innings by F. L. Sprott, the old Presidency player Karachi Gymkhana were able to inflict a defeat by 140 runs on the local Parsees. Sprott's innings of 72, the highest he has played this season up to date, included 9 fours.

The Parsee batsmen shaped very poorly against the bowling of E. B. Newton who captured seven wickets for 25 runs.

The glories of Kolar cricket seem to have passed away if one may judge from the extremely poor way the team has shaped against Bangalore teams this season. Fresh from a crushing defeat at the hands of the Bangalore Volunteers, the Kolarites fared hardly any better against Bangalore Gymkhana being disposed of twice for totals of 46 and 78. It cannot be said that the side was particularly badly represented as included in the team were C. H. Richards, R. H. Bullen, W. G. Poole, W. M. Pritchard, W. J. More, N. Richards, and J. D. Cosens all of whom would find a place in the strongest team the Gold Fields has been able to put in the field for some years. It is some years since this annual fixture ended so disastrously for Kolar. The only grain of comfort that the Kolarites got out of their trip to Bangalore was in the single innings match which was arranged to fill up the afternoon of the second day, for the result proved that the form shown by the Kolarites in the more important match had been all wrong.

The second of three important matches played at Bangalore last week was against Bellary, and judging from the form that cricketers at the latter station had been showing lately, an even and exciting game was anticipated. Bellary on paper was quite as strong as Bangalore. The bowlers on a wicket that gave them considerable assistance kept the runs down, with the result that only 386 runs were made for four completed innings. In only one innings did the total run into three figures—the second innings of Bangalore—and there were only six scores of 20 and upwards in the whole match.

The bowlers had a good time and L. D. Rollo's record for Bellary in the match—twelve wickets for 85 runs—was an excellent one Rollo, who is an old Wellingborough Grammar School Cricketer, was stationed at Quetta last year where several good performances of his with the ball failed to obtain for him an invitation to play for the Presidency.

The third match of this eventful Bangalore week between the Civil and Military furnished some of the best cricket seen this season and was particularly remarkable for the fine double display with the bat by G. J. G. Hanson for the Military, who made 48 and 93, and the bowling of C. Rolland for the Civil in the second innings, who took five wickets for 18 runs and did the hat trick. The match was drawn if anything in favour of the Military.

Despite the batting strength of the teams the Poona Gymkhana has been able to place in the field this season, there has been nothing even approaching sensational scoring. Against the Deccan College bowlers a strong side including Greig, Umfreville, Hartley, Langton, Wilkins, Stevens, and Kearsey could only total 150 and 66 for two wickets, Greig's 34 in the second innings being the highest score on the side.

Another interesting match was played at Lahore on the 25th and 26th July between the Subalterns of the station and the Rest. The feature of the match from a batting point of view, was the innings of Lieutenant A. G. Hutchinson who made 54 out of the total of 202. The most successful trundlers were Humphreys for the Subs and Fothergill-Cooke for the Rest who each took four wickets.

Two players whose performances in Bangalore cricket have attracted considerable attention this season are O L. Ruck and and G. J. G. Hanson who, it will interest old public school cricketers to learn, hail from Haileybury and Clifton respectively. Ruck was in the Haileybury eleven of 1898 and had a batting average of 16·70 and a bowling average of 15·04 for 21 wickets. It is as a bowler that he has met with most success in matches at Bangalore and on his day he has no equal in that department of the game in the station. Hanson was in the Clifton eleven of 1900 and had a batting average of 12·00. His batting powers had evidently not developed then, but he is now a very dangerous batsman and likely to make runs under any conditions At the present time he has very few equals and no superiors in Bangalore.

Details have reached me of a match played at Quetta recently between the Gymkhana and the West Yorkshire Regiment. The former won by 109 runs and the principal factors in their easy victory were the batting of Captain Lane (42) and Lieutenant Fleming (56) who between them scored more than half the runs made from the bat by their side, (the names of both players are strange to me but I notice that they have scored consistently in Quetta matches, and the bowling of L. M. R. Deas whose fast deliveries accounted for six wickets at a cost of only 15 runs. Lieutenant F. H. Hawley, who played for the Poona Gymkhana last season, was the only batsman on the West Yorkshire side who could play Deas properly and his 34 was a valuable innings.

STATISTICIAN.

A certain jockey, whose name is very well known in Turf circles even now, used to tell a tale of a good thing that he was once riding.

The horse was much fancied, and the jockey had gone a "raker" on him. By some means he, to his great annoyance, was late in getting down to the post, and consequently found all the good positions occupied. His fellow-riders, however, were very considerate, and "You can have my place, Joe," or "Come on the inside, Joe," were the kind offers made.

"Joe" speedily tumbled to the fact that they had all backed his mount, and though the opportunity too good to be wasted. He therefore told the starter that he had broken a stirrup-leather, and contriving to see a friend in the Ring, gave him a commission to take another three hundred to two. As he expected, the others did not trouble him in the least, and it simply remained for him to win as he pleased.

RUGBY IN CALCUTTA.

WEST RIDINGS vs. CALCUTTA.—A Calcutta team went up to Dum Dum last Saturday to play the West Ridings. A good game was witnessed in spite of the wretched state of the ground. The home team won by 10 points to eight. The Regiment started the game and rushed down, but Martelli relieved. After some midfield scrums the Ridings brought the ball back and Marshall dropped a goal. Following up this success they continued to press and Roberts crossed the line. They failed to convert, however, and from the drop out the visitors got possession and Heilgers scored a try. The place failed but Calcutta got going once more and from a good run down Pearson went over with a try, Martelli adding the major points. The teams crossed over with the visitors leading. Then the Ridings forwards showed some good play, working the scrimmages in great form and keeping the Calcutta backs busy. The game was for the most part in the visitors' territory, but it was not till nearing the end of the game that the soldiers got through. Lieutenant Gill obtaining a try; the home thus won as stated.

FOOTBALL NOTES.

THE prospects this season of good Rugby and lots of it seem bright enough. The following clubs are in practice and more than half of these will probably enter for the Senior Competition. C. F. C., City, Customs, Hornets, King's Own, the West Ridings from Dum-Dum and United Services.

During the week the C F.C. has been playing a number of practice games with sides drawn from among its own members. The matches have not been interesting, but have afforded an opportunity of showing what old blood is turning out again, and what new talent has been unearthed. Curtis Hayward is in command and although he plays forward is just the man for the work in hand. Among the old players, I noticed Dick (of whom much is expected again). F. G. Siddons, Ismay, MacDonald, Martelli, Heilgers, Dunlop, Curtis Hayward, Langford, Black, Clayden and Vick. Most prominent amongst new arrivals were, A. E. Todd, Baker, Barnes, Duncan, Graham and Grayburn. Dick I suppose will play back regularly as Newton has signified his intention of appearing but occasionally.

This decision will be greatly regreted by the Rugby loving public of Calcutta: he will only turn out to do battle for the Thistle against the Rose, when the annual game takes place. Calcutta are fortunate in having the services of that all-round athlete Ismay. He has been away upcountry for some time but is back again and will strengthen the three-quarter line very considerably. The elder Siddons is in fine form just now and gives promise of playing his usual sound game. I am sorry to say his brother has been advised medically not to play this season.

Martelli, the old Irish International and popular Secretary of the C. F. C., is going great guns and his side will find him very useful, as besides being an excellent exponent of the game, he has had a long and varied experience. The club is very badly off for half-backs. If MacDonald's ankle does not worry him, his services will be again in requisition : Legge, the other half of last year's team, is away from Calcutta, and I fancy the vacancy will be filled by MacLaren who was here two seasons ago. Heilgers the "London Scot." Dunlop and Curtis Hayward will again appear in the pack. All three are fair gluttons for work and keep going the whole while. Berridge's services are doubtful ; but it is to be hoped that he will be found in his old position when the cup ties come round.

The West Ridings from Dum-Dum play rugby and soccer equally well as they have shewn us, although they are really a Rugger playing Regiment. They won the Calcutta Rugby Cup last year at the first time of asking, and are likely to repeat the performance unless we get something classy in the way of a foreign invasion. For the last few months two fifteens have been in constant practices, one at Dinapore (their first string), and one at Dum-Dum. The officers take an interest in the games of their men, and the combinations are likely to be very hot ones. On Saturday the Ridings were at home to the C. F. C. who journeyed out with a scratch fifteen. The rain came down in torrents and rendered all accurate play out of the question. The Tommies win of ten points to eight just about denotes their superiority. For the winners Reeves was in fine form as was Coldwell. Roberts, the soccer custodian, distinguished himself in the scrum and got over with a try. For the losers Grayburn played a great game at full-back, and Todd, MacLeod, Heilgers, and Dunlop put in a lot of conscientious work forward. The homesters had out what they consider their second string while the visitors were without some regular men.

The King's Own Regiment in the Fort play the game they do in Lancashire, but few officers with the men are very sportingly running a fifteen which, with a little more practice, ought to give a good account of themselves. They have had a couple of practice games with teams got up by Dunlop of the C. F. C., and won handsomely on both occasions.

In their engagement with the City F. C. last Wednesday week they got over by three points to nil. The game on account of the loose state of the turf was of a scrambling description and mostly confined to the forwards.

C. M. Brown, Captain Gardiner, Captain Wilson, the English international forward, Szczepanski, Hogg and Stevenson are available for the Services, and with some good new ones Captain Gardiner should have no difficulty in whipping together a really good lot. They had hard lines in being drawn against Calcutta in the second round of the Rugby Cup, when they were still in embryo; but with some practice together, they ought to go further this season.

Great things are expected of the City F. C. The material at hand is good and plentiful and there seems a chance of their getting back the form they shewed some years ago when they twice ran into the final for the Calcutta Cup. Lees, I hear, is playing back ; in the second line of defence will be found Schaumberg who is a strong runner and smart tackler, Hemingway and Glanily who have both migrated from C. F. C. The constitution of the forwards is as yet unknown to me, but Grief, Cunliffe, and Warden will be found all there when the time comes.

Very little is known of the composition of the Customs team. Anderson, Templeton, and Fitzgerald are their best men and are available once more. I think the fifteen will not be as good this year as it was last, and I doubt if they anticipate doing very well with so many strong combinations against them.

I have not seen the Hornets at work yet, but if the way they play hockey and soccer is any criterion, they should do very well. Their strength, of course, will lie in the back line. Yaekjee, Apear, Simmons, and Mahbert all possess a very fine turn of speed and have played the game at school. I fancy it will be difficult to get together a heavy pack of forwards, though I hear they are to receive valuable assistance in this department, from the Old Armenians who have broken up and joined various clubs this year.

Apropos of hazards, and what is the nature thereof an interesting point is raised by Mr. F. O. Lindley, of Cairo. Playing on the Cairo Course, his ball from the Tee lodged in a Mimosa Tree, 20 feet from the ground, and was quite visible. Mr. Lindley threw up his niblick and brought the ball down counting this action as one stroke. The usual penalty under similar circumstances (now on inland greens of frequent occurrence) is to recover the ball, drop it behind with loss of a stroke. But it would be well for the Cairo Golf Club to pass a local rule bearing on the case, and adjudicate the penalty, should there be no local rule when this occurred providing for the tree, the question could only be dealt with according to the rules, which provide in match play that "a ball must be played where it lies or the hole be given up"— "for nothing shall be done to improve its lie" "and the ball must be fairly struck at!" Of course in stroke play there is always the option of "teeing the ball with loss of two strokes."

There was a large gathering of members of the Felixstowe Club for the Throgmorton Base Competition which began on 18th June, and which was most keenly contested from start to finish. Thirty-six players entered, and of these 27 had byes. There were no very close matches in the first heat, but in the second round with the exception of one match when Mr. H. J. W. Jervis beat Mr. C. J. Crisp, by 7 up and 5, all the games were closely contested, two of them being carried to the 19th hole. In the third round, Mr. H. Walton only succeeded in snatching a win from Mr. C. H. Clarke at the 20th hole, and most of the others were particularly close, ending often on the 17th Green. The fourth round was uneventful. In the semi-finals Mr. H. E. Taylor beat Mr. W. C. Anderson by 3 and 2. Mr. O. B. Clarke beat Mr. H. Frisby by 2 up. The final was a remarkably run-away match for H. E. Taylor, who finished the game on the 10th Green by 9 holes up and 8 to play.

Delightful weather favoured the Hanger Hill Club's Open Amateur Meeting on Saturday, 18th June. Ninety players entered, among them being Mr. H. H. Hilton Mr. S. H. Fry, Mr. A. C. Lincoln. The scratch prize was tied for in 79 by Messrs. A. C. Lincoln and S. H. Fry, while Messrs. Hilton and Lurmon ran them very close both accomplishing the round in 80 strokes. In the Bogey Competition after lunch Mr. Livingston played an excellent game from scratch and won with 2 holes up. The Ladies were also invited to take part in an open meeting at this Club on the following Tuesday, this competition has begun to be regarded as one of the most delightful of the many annual Golfing Fixtures, but alas! this year there was a lamentable and conspicuous absence of the shining lights among Lady players, and the entries numbered but 51. The scratch prize went to Mrs. Weston, of Chiswick, with 93—this Lady also with a discount of two strokes won the second handicap prize, the first going to a member of the home club, Mrs. Litton Taylor in 113 less 24 = 89. Mrs. Taylor partnered in the afternoon with Mr. A. H. Proctor won the mixed foresome competition with 95 less 14 = 81.

There is just now going on much criticism on American Balls, American Putters, and of course the American Amateur Champion, who, by the bye, has arrived home safely, and was received with great honours and rejoicing "over there." He is loud in his praise of the unrivalled excellence of British Links, with which he affirms none in America can compare, and whilst he is eulogising us far away and paying many a generous spontaneous tribute to British sportsmen, we are criticising his game none too favourably, is it the green-eyed monster once again? one wonders and hopes not, for he won his championship by the sheer consistency and excellence of his game, and his putting was beyond a doubt supersteady and unrivalled. Anyhow, we in Britain are eagerly buying and trying the Schenecktady Putter, we have long ago forsaken the old gutty ball, and cling tenaciously and wildly to the American Rubber Core! Our clubs still are English, I mean our wooden ones! Irons for the universally adopted Socket Club is certainly not a Yankee Patent, but was conceived in the brain of one who lived in Bonnee Scotland. So far then the prediction that the American players influx would influence players greatly in the introduction and adoption of American Clubs has not been fulfilled, and impartially considered the influence upon Golf of the Yankees has been distinctly beneficial in many ways, for is there not something to be learnt everyday and in every walk in life.

The Annual Amateur Tournament at Cruden Bay was held on 23rd, 24th, and 25th June. On the opening day a stroke competition under handicap was held for no less than nine prizes, while the 16 lowest scores qualified to play off for the Challenge Trophy by match play. In the final of which Mr. D. Davidson beat J. A. Donaldson by 4 up and 3 to play. The runner up had his work cut out in his match with J. S. Smith (ex-champion of India), but eventually disposed of him by playing fine golf on the 18th Green —and the winner had close matches with M. M. Duncan, and W. Christie, against both of whom he only won on the 18th Green.

The Ladies' Tournament had to be abandoned owing to insufficient entries, a golden opportunity missed by the fair sex of reaping a silver harvest, but in the South Ladies' Golf has been in full swing, following close on each other come the open meetings, Sussex County has been as it were en fete Clubs anywhere in the county have striven to 'out rival each other in hospitality to members of any recognized Golf Club. St. Leonards and East Sussex held an open meeting on their course at Felsham Park on 24th June. There was a capital entry, but the very scratch of very scratch were also conspicious by their absence—an unfortunate incident deprived the Honorary Secretary of the Surrey County Club, Mrs. Horace Martin, of the Bowl and 1st Prize. Her caddie led her to the wrong Tee and the penalty was disqualification! Then Bexhill-on-Sea invited the Ladies to a free day on these beautiful course, the same golfing eagles gathered together round the carcases—and there Mrs. Martin had better luck, for with a fine 85—3 = 82 she won the scratch prize and the Challenge Bowl. Miss Carry, of Ashdown Forest, has lately found open meetings vastly remunerative concerns for in the three held in Sussex during the month of June she has won, two if not three prizes, at each. Mustering a strong team Sussex Ladies inflicted a severe defeat on a weak Surrey Team at Seaford by 5 matches to 2, and at Ilkley, Yorkshire defeated Cheshire by the same number of points, in this match Miss D. Chambers, of Cheshire, played remarkably fine game, accomplishing the round from the Men's Teas in 81 stokes, the champion, Miss. L. Dod, also playing for Cheshire, took 84 strokes, both remarkably good performances.

Mr. H. W. Forster organised a Strong House of Commons Team against Sundridge Park on 25th June, an excellent day's golf resulted in a win of the home team by 6½ points to 3½. Mr. Balfour playing steadily holed some long putts and halved his match with W. Hardy, and Mr. Guy Pym owed his victory over J. M. Cripps to a 10 yards putt on the home green. It may be remembered that Sundridge Park Course was formally opened about a year ago by the Prime Minister, it is most beautifully situated and easy of access from London. In the Old Deer Park at Richmond, the London Solicitors, Golfing Society, were busy on 23rd June holding their revels ; the Competition for the Captain's Prize was won by Mr. J. Hall with 86 less 7 = 79. He also carried off the prize for the best 9 holes under handicap. It is impossible to describe all the competition held by the various golfing societies now existent, their name is fast approaching Legion, but before closing these notes mention should be made of a very fine Amateur Record made at Cobble Hall, Leeds, on Saturday, 25th June, by a member of the club, one J. H. Barry, whose round of 68 was made up as follows :—Out 5, 4, 4, 5, 4, 5, 4, 3, 4 = 38. In 3, 4, 3, 3, 4, 3, 5, 3, 2 = 30. The score coming in is truly wonderful, 6 out of the 9 holes totalling 17 only, and then in spite of a lost ball at the 16th and a 12 inch putt missed as well!

By winning the final tie against Mr. John Wilson, M. P., at Mitcham of the 14th Annual Parliamentary Tournament on 4th July, Mr. A. W. Soames, member for South Norfork credited Liberal side of the House of Commons with its first victory in this event. Mr. Soames (12) defeated Mr. Wilson (15) by 7 up and 6 to play.

Before posting, the news comes of further matches in the Army Cup Competition. The Service Battalion, R. E., Chetham, beat the R. A., Woolwich, by 3 holes, and the 1st K.O. S.B. beat the 2nd Seaforth Highlanders by 9 holes. The H. L. I. get a W. O. from the 2nd Royal Warwick, and the School of Gunnery give a W. O. to the 2nd York and Lancaster Regiments, and the 3rd Grenadier Guards have scratched to the 2nd Bedfordshire Regiment. In the Ladies' Inter-County Match between Glamorganshire and Somersetshire some closely contested fights resulted—Miss E. Young (Glam.) and Miss H. Evans (Somerset) only concluded matters on the 21st Green, and the match between Mrs. Ward and Mrs. Evans was carried to the 20th Green. The match itself resulted in a win for the home club (Glamorgan) by 5 points to 2.

THE EROOM CUP.—On Thursday, the 4th instant, the Nondescripts met St. Joseph's College, North Point, for the Eroom Cup. The boys established quite a record in the League Tournament by scoring eleven goals to nil. The Nondescript team possesses many good individual players but combination was wanting and this constitutes the strong point of the School team. St. Joseph's team has won all its matches so far in the League tournament. Their meeting with the Military team of Lebong will be an interesting one. Should the boys win, they will become the holders of the Challenge Cup.

THE MADRAS TOURNAMENT.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

M. C. C. vs. THE LEICESTERS. MADRAS, 6th August:—This Tournament after being unduly protracted for reasons to be stated presently, came to an end on Friday evening when a Madras team for the first time won one of the several Cups they have offered for competition in Tournaments. When I last wrote the Tournament had reached the semi-final stage in which the M. C. C. beat the 1st Durham L. I. the holders of the Cup. The other match in the tie that remained to be played was that between the Leicesters, last year's runners-up and the Middlesex; but this took a tremendous lot of deciding, the teams having to meet no less than four times before the Leicesters gained the ascendency on Monday last, by 3 goals to nil. Captain Challenor on their behalf then made a representation to the M. C. C. Committee stating that in view of the hard struggle the Leicesters had had, the finals might be postponed till Wednesday, thus giving the Leicesters a necessary rest on Tuesday. The Committee, unwilling to create a precedent, refused to take action on the request; but left it to the M. C. C. team who, in a very sporting way, agreed to give the Leicesters the respite asked for. Shortly before 5 P.M. on Wednesday, however, a heavy shower of rain flooded the hockey ground at Chepauk, making play impossible, and the final was again postponed till Friday, Thursday being English mail day and a very inconvenient one for the majority of the M. C. C. team to turn out. In threatening weather yesterday, the match was decided, and the M. C. C. won readily enough by 2 goals to nil and thus justified the confidence of their supporters, who fully expected them to win especially after the fine display they gave against the Durhams when they only won on the call of time by 3 goals to 2. The M. C. C. have this year had the call on a large number of really good hockey players as was shown by their entering two teams for the Tournament. The first team to whom they trusted in the Tournament was got together early in the season and was kept together both in practices and in matches, with the result that in the Tournament a really first class team was put into the field, every individual of which knew the play of the other, and for good, scientific combined play they were more conspicuous than any of the other teams entered, though in this matter, the Durhams ran them very close indeed. The Leicesters, too, had their supporters. There were many who could not forget the splendid form they displayed last year, when although they had been a very short time in the country, they got together a team, pluckily entered the Tournament and fought their way into the finals, beating among others the formidable Bangalore team. This year they were called upon to do much hard work, as including the finals, they played no less than seven games. This was a severe strain indeed and it speaks volumes for their pluck and tenacity that in the finals they gave their formidable opponents such a great fight. They were beaten but at no time were they disgraced. I understand that a movement is on foot among the M. C. C. members to present each member of the Leicesters team with a special medal as a Souvenir of the plucky and sporting fight they made in the Madras Hockey Tournament of 1904.

This long preliminary leaves little room for anything more than a very brief description of the play. Nor is more desirable, since both teams, playing with excellent combination, were conspicuous for good play throughout and attack and counter-attack in quick succession proved the energy and activity of the forward line and the stout defence of the backs. Half way through the first half a fine bit of combined play between Ogden, Gordon Fraser, and Partridge resulted in the latter scoring from a favourable position in front of the Leicesters goal. Though strenuous efforts were made by both teams the period closed without any further score and the home team crossed over for the second half leading by the only goal that had been secured. Play in the second half was a replica of that in the first half even to the second goal scored by Partridge, only this time the assistance came from Atkinson and Layard. This made the victory for the M. C. C. absolutely certain and towards the end of the period the soldiers efforts were mainly devoted to preventing any further toll being exacted. I may mention more as a tribute to the splendid combined play of the M. C. C. than to the individual merit of a very fine player that every goal, except one scored by the M. C. C. on this Tournament has been put through by Partridge the centre forward, The exception was that splendid deciding third goal shot by Gordon Fraser when the issue of the match between the home team and the Durhams hung in the balance.

To particularise individuals in teams for which every man worked his hardest and his best would in this instance be worse than invidious. The M. C. C. played the same team with which they entered the Tournament but the exigencies of the struggle in which the Leicesters had been engaged, necessitated more than one change being made in the composition of their side and they were fortunate in their last two matches to secure the assistance of Lieutenant Yates who had only just returned from Poona. Appended I give the names of the teams:—

The final will be swum off at the Baths to-morrow evening.

At many of the little country gatherings, long since judiciously "outed" by at the reigning powers, some curious conditions were frequently found. It was at certain places stipulated that all horses running at the meeting should be stabled at a place appointed by the clerk of the course, who not infrequently owned a share in the wretched hovels for which owners had to pay so dearly. On other occasions it was required that every animal taking part in a race should be shod by the farrier appointed by the officials. For many years this state of affairs existed, until a somewhat barefaced scandal caused an investigation from headquarters.

To a rather pleasant reunion, where the lastmentioned rule was rigidly enforced, a gentleman took a couple of fair-class animals. Though not a plunger, the owner did not usually let his cattle run without backing them, and as a rule the betting at the meeting in question was not of the limited order that might have been expected.

On form it seemed that neither of the visitor's horses could be beaten. When, therefore, the first of them was seen to be ridden by a well-known jockey, the horse was backed as though defeat was out of the question. Despite the right money going on, however, there always seemed a disposition to lay against the favourite, and in the race he went no better than in the market.

Punters expected to get back their losses on the next of the good things, and went for this to a man. Once again the metallicians peppered the "pinch," and when it finished down the course the unsatisfactory performance did not altogether come as a shock to backers. The owner was completely mystified by the bad form his animals had shown, for, knowing how much better class they were than the other runners, he had exceeded his usual investment. That the jockey was not at fault he also felt certain, and for the time being gave up hope of solving the mystery.

In response to a communication from his trainer the puzzled proprietor set out for the stables the next morning. Not having been at the meeting, the trainer was astonished at hearing how badly his charges had run, and closely questioned the lads in charge, but without eliciting anything that would explain the strange circumstance. Upon examining the horses, however, he made a discovery. Both had, in obediance to the local law, been shod by an authorised farrier. The plates had, however, been put on in a manner that would cause the unfortunate animal great pain directly any extra pressure was necessary, though it would not entail lameness. It was apparent that this was the result of design rather than accident, and the suspicious market movements further confirmed the theory.

An appeal to the authorities was decided on by the justly indignant owner. Coming from a man as to whose integrity there could be no doubt, the case was thoroughly investigated, and the clause which rendered the process of "plating" by a privileged person necessary was ruthlessly struck out.

The Naturalist.

PART III.

UNLESS otherwise stated the following notes refer to the month of March.

A beech marten (Mustela foina) was trapped at an elevation of 7,000 feet in the Kashmiri Valley, this animal is common in Gilgit, Astor, and Ladak, and is reported from Kumaon, but the specimen referred to is the only one I have obtained south of the Snowy Passes.

The fur was blackish brown, with very little white on the throat, and breast, a poor looking pelt when compared with the pretty skins from the higher altitudes and from the colder climates of Baltistan. This is the skin eagerly bought up by the visitors to Srinagar and known by the native name of "Missr," I think I mentioned in a letter to The Indian Field that a very fine specimen was killed in a stack of wood in Astor when in winter time the beech marten comes close to habitations.

The length of an ordinary specimen is 16 to 17 inches, the tail exclusive of hair, about 9 inches with a long hairy tip.

Two eggs of the Bearded Vulture, (Gypaëtus barbatus) were collected, both were feebly marked with red and brown the larger one measured 3·7 inches by 2·75 inches. A good many of these birds breed near Murree. All nests I have found were very difficult of access—this applies also to those of the Griffon Vulture (Gyps fulvus); although three large colonies of them were found on their breeding grounds, only one egg was gathered, it was more marked with minute reddish blotches than is any other I have previously obtained. The egg measured 3·65 inches by 2·9 inches. Gyps himalayaensis, the Himalaya Griffon lays a slightly larger egg, those obtained are variously marked with reddish blotches, in a lesser or greater degree—none were plain white.

The Rock-horned Owl (Bubo bengalensis) is common. I have never found more than two eggs in a clutch, the nesting place is in a hollow tree or amongst rocks, one nest that completely baffled my collectors was in a slit in a precipice, but as a rule this Owl chooses a more accessible place. An oviduct egg was obtained in May. Both the Wood Owls (Syrnium biddulphi and S. nivicola) appear to lay in March, all the nests I have obtained were in trees—two appears to be the usual number of eggs, the young are easily brought up, and become quite tame, I had three of S. Nivicola (the Himalayan Wood Owl) that travelled about with my baggage for years; they were caged when on the move and were let loose on arrival at camp. Scully's Wood Owl (S. biddulphi) is also easily reconciled to captivity and the young have been frequently brought to me in April and May. One fully fledged was caught on 5th May. When in captivity they appeared to partially lose their nocturnal habits and would come to be fed at any hour. A large number of wagtails migrate at this time of the year and we have yet to learn which pass through or reside in these hill, probably Motacilla alba certainly M. personata, M. hodgsoni this was in summer plumage and had changed into the stage of having a black throat, etc. The back had also lost its grey coloring. Motacilla maderaspatensis, the large Pied Wagtail I have not yet obtained, but M. melanope is common, so at times is M. Beema. Both the Yellow-headed Wagtails Citreola and citreloides can be met with, sometimes in large flocks they roost at nights closely packed together, when crossing the hills; but this migration does not as a rule occur until June.

THE INDIAN GAME PRESERVATION BILL.

TO all sportsmen and lovers of natural history resident in India the news that the Government of India is at last definitely concerning itself with the question of a general scheme of game and fish preservation will have brought sincere pleasure and relief, and to these feelings must be added a sense of admiration for the essentially sound propositions set forth in the correspondence now circulating between Simla and Local Governments and their subordinate offices.

This correspondence consists of a Draft Bill for the preservation of game and fish in India, and a covering letter. The letter discusses with extreme care and minuteness, and from all the various points of view, the questions involved in the framing of the new legislation. In addition to tapping all the sources of official advice which the Government of India, has at its disposal, it invites special attention to the advisability of consulting "such persons and associations as are best qualified to express an opinion, whether from the point of view of the sportsman and the naturalist, or with regard to the interests of the people."

Such a thoroughly sensible and broad-minded method of investigation can only meet with the fullest appreciation and approbation of all classes concerned with the question of the preservation of Indian Game, and will go far to ensure the success of the forthcoming regulations which have so long been a crying necessity.

A short recapitulation of the views of Government on the question of game preservation methods in general is necessary in order to lead up to a discussion of those points which warrant special attention and regarding which there seems to be doubt. After this we shall refer to a few other matters which appear to deserve notice. There are probably yet more views of the question which would command attention and interest; and for the expression of such our correspondence columns will no doubt suggest a medium.

Taking the communications of the Government of India seriatim, we find the subject of Game Preservation introduced in the following words:

"The Governor-General in Council is unable to contemplate with equanimity the rapid diminution of game over the greater part of India. The subject is one which concerns not only the sportsman but also the naturalist and the lover of animal life. The pursuit of game is one of the few relaxations which render life in the plains more tolerable than it otherwise would be, and assist in preserving the health of Europeans in this country; and its disappearance would materially diminish the amenities of life in India. The sportsman is brought into relations with the natives of the country which show him the best side of their characters and assist him to acquire the spoken language of the peasantry,—results which possess a distinct value in the case of those whose work in life lies among the people. The number of natives who devote themselves to shikar as a means of livelihood is also considerable, and attendance upon sportsmen as trackers, hunters, or shikaris, provides a well paid occupation to many of the poorer classes who would greatly feel the loss of this employment, which is in many cases of a hereditary character and passes from father to son.

It is believed to be beyond doubt that in certain tracts, the diminution of forest game has compelled the beasts of prey to turn their attention to cattle, and even to human beings while the wholesale destruction of insectivorous birds can hardly be without injurious effect upon the crops of the country. Finally there seems no reason why those numerous wealthy Englishmen who yearly visit India for purpose of sport, should be allowed to indulge in it without payment or restriction, and to assist in reducing the fast diminishing facilities which are available to those who are resident in this country.

For all these reasons the Government of India, as at present advised, incline to the opinion that the time has come when a general Game Law may fairly and properly be applied to the whole of British India. At the present moment India is probably almost alone among civilised countries in possessing no such law. Even in such undeveloped provinces as the African Protectorates and the Soudan, legislation has been found necessary for the protection of the local fauna.

Any such law for British India should, however, at any rate as regards the greater part of its provisions, be merely empowering; it should be of general applicability, rather than of general application. If it is true that in some parts of India game has almost disappeared, it is also true that in other parts it is so numerous as to render cultivation almost or altogether impossible. The Government of India have had instances of this quite recently under their notice and in some cases it has even been found necessary to resort to special and costly measures in order to reduce the number of herbivorous wild animals. In such places it would be most wrong to impose any special restraints upon the destruction of such animals. In many parts again while it would be perfectly legitimate to protect game in general, there are certain species—such, for instance; as antelope or wild pig (which latter indeed are game only where the country is such that they can be ridden), which are so destructive that their slaughter should be encouraged rather than the reverse.

Thus, the Indian Game Law should be an empowering Act, so framed as to afford the widest possible latitude of adaptation to the varying conditions of different localities and administrations, and to the claims and usages of all classes of the community. In framing and applying it, the Governor-General in Council is of opinion that three cardinal rules should be borne in mind; firstly, that wherever and so far as the preservation of game and the protection of crops are in substantial conflict, the former must give way to the latter; secondly, that no desire to preserve game, dangerous or otherwise, must be allowed to interfere with the destruction of wild beasts which are dangerous either to human beings or to cattle; and, thirdly, that whatever measures are adopted must apply equally to Europeans as well as to natives, without distinction of race."

Subsequently the Government of India's letter proceeds to record, as follows, the few objections that can be found to stand in the way of its propositions:—

"The objections which can be taken to a general Game Law for India are easily stated. The protection of the cultivator's crops is a consideration to which all others must give way; there are numerous, though strictly localised, forest tribes who, while forming but an infinitesimal portion of the total population, still depend largely upon the capture of game for their subsistence; and no law could be justified which did not amply provide for both these matters. Apart from them there is the general objection to the creation of new penal offences, the penalties for which must be enforced by a subordinate and often corrupt agency to whom the new provisions might afford new opportunities of extortion."

These interesting preliminary remarks are so entirely in accord with what seem to be the generally accepted views of all classes interested in the subject that they do not appear to call for any discussion. We may therefore proceed to a consideration of the Draft Bill itself.

The scheme of the Bill is simple. It provides fully for meeting all the widely differing requirements obtaining in different localities, by proposing to give local authorities a free hand to act as they consider suitable to local conditions. We shall therefore confine our remarks to such points only as appear open to discussion.

Clause 3 of the Bill exempts from its provisions

"Certain acts, among which the destruction of dangerous beasts, and the destruction by a cultivator of a large animal which is damaging his crops, are included."

This appears to us to be a likely source of weakness, and seems dangerously liable to abuse; especially with regard to the "large animal which is destroying his crops." Some method of stiffening this weak point seems necessary.

Clause 9 discusses the suitability of limiting the number which may be destroyed of an animal which is comparatively rare, but of which it is unnecessary to prohibit the killing altogether—and our opinion coincides with the view that, generally speaking, it is necessary to impose such limitations in reserved forests only.

Further.—

"The Government of India think that sportsmen in India might well be divided into three classes: (1) natives of the country and residents in India in the service of the Crown; 2) other residents in India, and (3) visitors; and that higher rate might be demanded from the third than from the second, and from the second than from the first."

But here we do not feel at all inclined to agree. We see no kind of reason to differentiate between official and non-official residents in this country: such a discrimination would be as invidious as indefensible. But while including both the above classes together with natives of the country in the first group of licensees, we would sound a note of warning as to the too easy acceptance of the term "resident," and suggest that most convincing definite proof be given in doubtful cases.

Visitors of all kinds we would group quite separately; and in view of the high license rates prevailing for this class in countries so undeveloped and so full of game as the African Protectorates, and considering the peculiar conditions prevailing in India, where the visitor is almost invariably an individual who can well afford to pay for permission to diminish the few facilities for sport available to residents, we would strongly recommend the imposition of a fairly large fee. The license for visitors shooting in the African Protectorates costs £50. That for India should be at least £100.

In addition it would be advisable to limit the visitor as regards the number of head of game he would be permitted to shoot. Six tigers, for instance, appear to us amply sufficient for a vistor, considering the fact that tiger shooting is almost entirely a matter of means and "connection"; and the one quantity frequently argues the other. Besides which, unless so restricted, a visitor, being hampered by no interest in the country, might feel inclined to extract "large value" in return for his enhanced fee.

While on this subject it may be useful to remark that although shooting in Native States might still be open to such visitors free of charge the imposition of a really stiff export duty on all sporting trophies taken from India by any visitor would help to automatically bring about the desired effect. And in this latter precaution would be included a direct and heavy blow at all trading in sporting trophies, since the purchase of such by wealthy visitors is what lends an impetus to the iniquities of those who provide them.

Combined with this supervision of the export of visitors' trophies there should be that of the large quantities of deer's horns despatched from India in trade pure and simple. We doubt whether anything like all the enormous quantities of deer's horns continually exported come through the Forest Officer's hands, or were shed by their owners in the ordinary course of events.

With regard to the protection of fish, the idea seems to be that, generally speaking, it is only the hilly portions of rivers that provide sport; and the Bill proposes to provide a close season in such portions alone. The few exceptions to this otherwise useful decision would be provided for by authorizing some special local ruling where necessary.

Since quite the most deadly method of the poacher consists in sitting up over water, it seems imperative that this should be made a penal offence, in spite of the opening it might give to the fabrication of false charges. The latter consideration would add to the deterrent nature of the measure, and go far to check poaching on the part of irresponsible and untrustworthy persons, who would thus be unable to easily practise their destructive methods during night or at dusk. Genuine offences should be particularly easy to detect, since some preparation—such as a machan or other hiding place—is nearly always a necessity in these cases, and should lead to exposure of the offender.

In conclusion the Government of India, anticipating a considerable revenue from the provisions of the new Bill, makes two suggestions for its application.

The first is to employ a special officer who would advise both themselves and Local Governments on the administration of the Game Law. His duty would be to move about the country and report in what parts game was diminishing from want of sufficient protection, and advise generally on the local restrictions in force. "He would also"—it is presumed—"be in touch with sportsmen and sporting associations all over India. The objection that this officer might regard the subject from the point of view of the sportsman, or the naturalist, and might urge action injurious to the interests of the people is met by proposing care in the selection of the individual appointed."

The second or alternative suggestion is "that the expected revenue be devoted to supplying guns gratis to those who hold licences for crop protection or for the destruction of dangerous animals; such weapons being the property of Government, and held on loan."

Now to both of these proposals we would return an emphatic "No!"—although we think that weapons confiscated for breaches of the law might well be isssued free and on loan to deserving cultivators after being cut down to a barrel length f one foot as hereafter referred to.

As to the special officer, the appointment itself would, no doubt, be one earnestly sought after, for it is difficult to imagine a more congenial employment for a man of active habits and a taste for sport, travel and the study of natural history. But we do not see how such an official could possibly be "in touch with sportsman and sporting associations all over India," or in the least degree capable of himself forming a useful opinion on the local conditions prevailing over the enormous extent of countries he would be supposed to supervise.

To be in touch with such local requirements, even to a limited extent, necessitates long and intimate acquaintance; and this the special officer—nor indeed a pretty large staff of such officers—could never hope to acquire in the meteoric progresses which would be necessary in order to work over a tithe of the ground per annum. An official of this kind would, of necessity, have to depend for his information on the local authorities, and would, therefore, be nothing but a superfluous collector of statistics; while his occasional unavoidable interference with local administrations might create friction.

To our mind the solution of the problem lies in another direction.

Since it is only the district officers who are both officially and privately in a position to acquire that reliable and continuous information which can render one capable of grappling with the question of local requirements, we would suggest that the fixing of local game rules should be left to them to effect, in consultation with each other and as a matter of joint agreement; while we think that the best results as regards the application and enforcement of the Game Laws, general and local, would be attained by similar joint action, all district officials—Executive, Forest, and Police alike—being empowered to deal with cases as they occurred in their immediate neighbourhood or jurisdiction. The enforcing of the Game Laws would, therefore, gain by the fact that all district officials were equally interested, while the little extra work entailed would be more easily absorbed by the extra working surface so available.

To co-operate with the district officials we would recommend quite a small but very select staff of superior subordinate assistants—specialists in fact whose duty would be confined to nothing but work under the Game Laws, the detection of offences, and the acquirement of a thorough knowledge of the smallest details affecting the question of Game Preservation in its general and local aspects. These officials might be of the class of the highest native ranks of the Police or Public Works Department, and preference might be given to selected Eurasians, Parsis, etc. Such posts should be well paid, up to, say, Rs. 150 per mensem.

In order to prevent jealous practices on the part of district officials in reserving shooting for themselves or for their personal friends—a state of affairs which is not altogether unknown—we would suggest that licence-holders entitled to shoot in reserved forests or to kill big game should be considered as all equally entitled to sport, whether they be local or other officials or private individuals, and that district and other officials should in no case be permitted by virtue of their position to reserve any special facilities to themselves. The acceptance by Government of a licence fee should entitle the complaint of a licencee to a careful hearing in this connection.

To turn now to a consideration of certain points not included in the new Bill or its explanatory correspondence, the following suggestions are tabulated:—

I. Tribes permitted to pursue game for a livelihood might be allowed the use of their own methods of trapping and snaring, etc., but should not be encouraged in the use of guns of any kind.

II. The destruction of wild-dogs and other harmful vermin should be encouraged by means of fairly large rewards.

III. Agencies for the collection and supply of sporting "trophies" should be suppressed.

IV. All guns licenced for the purpose of crop-protection should be invariably cut down to a maximum limit of 1 feet barrel length, and no other guns licenced for this purpose. All such weapons to be licenced free of charge.

V. Attention of a special kind should be paid to the use of weapons carried by the Police or by Forest subordinates in their official capacity. Such arms have, it is known, been used for the purpose of destroying game.

VI. The actions of jagirdars, inamdars, and other native gentlemen of leisure should be subject to scrutiny, even when in possession of game licences.

VII. Slaughtering protected animals during floods or heavy snowfall to be suppressed.

	Rs.
"A" Licence to kill and take Big Game...	25
"B" Licence to kill and take Small Game	15
"C" Licence to kill and take Ground Game and Birds	5

	Rs.
"A" Licence	1,500
"B" Licence	30
"C" Licence	10

[In all cases the greater Licence to include the less.]

The different kinds of game might be classed as follows:—

Small Game.—Nilgae—Indian Antelope—Chinkara—Hog Deer—Four-horned Antelope—Barking Deer—Mouse Deer.

Big Game—All other animals, except Wolves—hyxnas—wild-dogs—wild-cats and pigs when not near rideable country—which might be classed with the lesser similar fauna as vermin.

IX. Wanton destruction of game by licence-holders to be suppressed ; but a reasonable distinction to be made between "wanton destruction" as a matter of sentiment on the one hand, and as a term implying harmful and unnecessary slaughter on the other. The definition would vary in different localities and circumstances.

X. Unlimited tiger-shooting should be regarded with a certain amount of disfavour, as otherwise there is a tendency for certain favoured persons to reserve to themselves and diminish for others those "facilities for sport" which the Government of India acknowledge to "materially increase the amenities of life in India."

Tiger-shooting is largely a matter of connection and the command of the services of subordinates and interested persons, and we do not see why the unlimited tiger-shooting in which some persons are thereby permitted to indulge should not be brought under the term of "wanton destruction," both as a matter of sentiment and necessity.

Six to ten tigers per annum appears quite large enough a "bag" for anybody. Native licence-holders for the destruction of dangerous animals might be encouraged and charged only a nominal fee in parts of the country where tigers were too numerous to justify their existence as a natural check on crop-destroying animals.

We see very little difference between unlimited tiger-shooting a la Lord Chief Executioner and the murdering of herds of buffalo and deer by means of Magazine rifles.

In concluding these remarks on the Game Preservation proposals we will permit ourselves to prophesy that the question of preservation of the fauna of India will find more salvation in the automatic action of a thoughtfully imposed scheme of licence fees framed in three separate forms, and in the application of the suggestion contained in our No. IV above, than in any of the other reforms to which we have had the pleasure of drawing attention.

A certain Bishop of London was a very powerful man, and when he first preached in a church in the East End some of the policemen came to hear him. The Rector afterwards asked one of them what he thought of the new Bishop.
"Well," said the man, "I think it would take two of us to run him in!"

Sporting Notes.

THE weather at the Second Calcutta Monsoon Meeting was about as bad as it could well be, and the sport consequently inferior to that witnessed on the opening day. After blowing a gale all the morning and deluding sanguine sportsmen into believing that there was a reasonable hope of decent going in the afternoon, the clerk of the weather elected to damp their hopes, in a literal as well as a metaphorical guise, by turning on a veritable deluge about 2 P.M. which continued at intervals and with varying force during the rest of the day.

As a result the whole of the hurdle course was practically under water, as was also the flat course at the big tree turn. The paddock was a swamp and the space in front of the penciller's pitches, and under the humorous apology for a shelter (save the mark !) which has been introduced this year was more than ankle deep in slush. The employment of flimsy red bazar cloth for an awning in rainy weather is not only an ingenious form of economy, but is also quite above the average as a practical joke, as it not only fails to keep the water off, but by dying it red, causes the crowd of speculators to resemble a Hindu rabble after a Holi festival.

Some dissatisfaction was expressed at the handicapping and as a result the open flat race was reduced to a field of three. We do not propose to criticize the handicaps ourselves, the more so as it is always easy to be wise after the event, but we cannot help thinking that the mere fact of all the horses but three, out of a very fair entry, having the big "J" drawn through their names as soon as the weights appear speaks for itself. In the pony hurdles also, to judge from the confidence with which the winner was supported, and the ease with which he won, the burden had not apparently been too skilfully allotted.

We were not treated to the close finishes or the large fields which characterised the first meeting, but the racing was not without interest, though happiest were those who, untrammelled by the cares of ownership or the thirst for speculation, could watch the mudlarking in comparative comfort from the stand without the necessity of paddling about below.

The open hurdle race was robbed of most of its interest through Naiades' starting declaration being behind time ; but though it would have been a better race had she started, the result would in all probability have been the same so far as the winner was concerned.

Proceedings opened with the Pony Plate for which there were five starters. The public almost to a man selected Second Thought as being the pea and backed her to even money. The selection was right as Mr. Galstaun after waiting till Moonlight, who went off as if it was a half mile sprint, was done with came quietly to the front and won hands down by a couple of lengths.

Another hot favourite and an even easier winner was Shylock in the pony hurdles, indeed the only possible doubt of his winning was the chance of something coming near enough to cause him to play his old game of cutting it. Since being added to the list, however, his temper appears to have improved, and, at any rate, there were no signs of stopping last Saturday when he sailed in by two lengths, which might just as easily have been twenty. Yuletide, who was a good deal fancied for a place, ran very disappointingly, but possibly she was not quite herself, and will render a better account on a future occasion.

Another "moral" came off in the August Plate in which, in the absence of Naiades, Kittylea was backed to 6 to 4 on, a prohibitive price with the possibility of a fall to be taken into consideration. Road Metal cut out the work at a great pace followed by the chestnut mare to the flight by the Ellenborough, where the latter went to the front, and, drawing away, won very easily by five lengths. Bob, who ran a much better horse for his gallop last week was second, and Road Metal third. Belmeath was pulled up.

Another field of five went out for the Hunters' Plate and Planet was made a hot favourite at even money, the fortune which had hitherto favoured the public selections struck work at this point, and for the rest of the day favourites were off. Planet ran a shocking bad horse, but, we are told, that he cannot act in the mud, and under more favourable conditions he will no doubt give a very much better show. Blue Bell II. cantered home an easy winner followed at some distance by Odin, to whom the race was subsequently awarded as the result of an objection to the winner for going the wrong side of the first drum at the home turn. The objection occupied the Stewards over an hour !

Clynder was made favourite for the Monsoon Plate, though, had the going been hard, Invincible should have had the race at his mercy at the weights. Clynder had the race won at the distance and Mr. Galstaun had dropped his hands to canter home, when Sunshine came with another run, and as Mr. Galstaun set his mare going again, she put her foot in a hole, nearly coming down, and was unable to get on her legs again in time to save the race.

The best field of the day went out for the Fort Plate, with Thunder Cloud an even money favourite, and Morris and Reinzette next in demand. The winner turned up in Euryalus who won pretty comfortably by a length and-a-half from Reinzette. Morris a length away, third. Further details of the racing appear in the usual place.

The Calcutta Light Horse have arranged a Gymkhana for Saturday, the 27th instant. The venue will be on the maidan opposite No. 40 Chowringhee and the Card will consist of six items :—Tent pegging, saddle, cigar and umbrella race, jumping and needle and thread competitions, menagerie and pumpkin races. Entries close on Monday, the 22nd instant.

The programmes of the Jubbulpore Autumn Meeting, fixed for the 1st and 3rd November, and that of the Open Gymkhana, set down for the 5th idem, appear under "Races to Come" this week. Mr. Tom Uphill held his sale of horses at "Tattersalls" Bhowanipore Road, Calcutta on the 12th instant. The attendance was poor, owing most probably to the wretched state of the weather. A splendid lot of horses was put up, but the prices obtained were far below expectation, in fact it appeared to us that many of those to whom the lots were knocked down might well shake hands with themselves on having made real good bargains, for many years' experience has taught us that when Mr. Tom Uphill says he has brought up a first class lot he states what is the fact. Most of the lots were in good condition, but in the prevailing slush they could not be shown to the best advantage, which was a pity. Among the more important purchases we may note the following :—

A bay filly, 2 years, by Comedian (brother to Tim Swiveller) from Busy Bee (dam of Hymettus, Cordite, Viking, Hive, Honey-bee, Fuse, etc.), by The Marquis (imp.) from Beeswing (sister to Tom Kirk), by Lady Kirk from Spa (imp.), (dam of Newminster), by Lemington from Satanella, by Newminster, etc., Rs. 3,000.

The Ilk, chestnut mare, 3 years, by Thunderbolt (son of Musket), from De Novo (sister to Response), by Richmond from Biss Biss (a record holder), by Countryman (imp.) from Miss Heslop (imp.), by Plaudit or Casta from Serenity (imp.), whose descendants have won £15,000 in Australia, Rs. 1,150.

A bay mare, 6 years, by Priam (sire of Mairp), from Sivia by Boolk from Collyrie, by Panic (imp.), dam Sea Kale by Lady Kirk from Saucepan (imp.), by Costerdale from sister to Gridiron by Daniel O'Rourke from Monges, dam by Bay Middleton from Gray Momons, dam by Cervantes, Rs. 875.

Dingo, chestnut gelding, 5 years, by Chronograph from Bess, Bathurst, a great performer, by Maribyrnong. Dingo is a first class jumper over any country, Rs. 810.

A brown gelding, 4 years, by Trentside (son of Trenton and Lady Disdain (imp.) from Wiora, by Neckersgat from Auroona by The Marquis (imp.), from Sunrise (imp.) by Saunterer from Sunset, by Dundee from Sunbeam (winner of the English St. Leger), by Chanticleer Rs. 800.

A brown mare, 6 years, full sister to Shrine by Lonsdale (winner of the Maribyrnong Plate), dam Voatress by Off Colour, from The Nun (winner of the Oaks) by First King (winner of two Champion races), from Pilgrimage by Kelpie, from Young Emily by Cossack, from Young Lady Emily by Whisker, from Lady Emily (imp.) by Manfred Rs. 1,000.

A chestnut pony mare, 4 years, by Glengarry—Aileen, Rs. 825.

A chestnut gelding, 4 years, by Hankar from Lady Matsep, Rs. 625.

Following the above sale some of Messrs. Mackellar and Smith's animals were put up for sale. Glenister by Paulus—Rita, went for Rs. 1,000 ; Stelliform by Lord Cochrane—Stella, realised Rs. 810.

There are a few good race-horses now on their way to India from Australia, notably Charleston, Hidalgo and Banker.

A. there will be a solid silver bowl presented by "Kader" for the best Great Dane. It is to be won outright, and similar specials will be given for two more years, with a view to encouraging the Great Dane, not necessarily at Mussoorie, but at other shows held under N. I. K. A. rules.

While all the stories of telepathy between human beings remain as incapable of proof or explanation as they do at present, it is hardly to be expected that everyone will accept a story, however credibly attested, of the same mysterious sort of communication between a man and his dog. But, none the less, there are some very striking and curious suggestions in the letter recounting what purports to be an odd experience of this kind, which is contributed to the Times by Mr. Rider Haggard. Briefly, the well-known writer decribes how he was disturbed by a very vivid dream, in which it seemed to him that his retriever was struggling for his life, and trying to tell him that he wanted help. The retriever's body was afterwards found in a stream, into which it seems to have been knocked by a train. Mr. Haggard does not rush to any conclusions on the matter, but is clearly inclined to believe that this was an instance of the kind of mental telegraphy at a critical moment, of which everybody knows cases as reported to have occurred between a couple of brothers, or a husband and his wife. For all we know, science may eventually establish the possibility of such a communication between the "friend of man" and man himself, but at present it is not able to form any conclusions deserving acceptance as to the authenticity or character of such messages even between man and man. And, in the meantime, not much good can come from laymen in matters psychological attempting to meddle with the question at all.

The Naini Tal Polo Tournament begins on the 26th September, entries closing on the 22nd idem.

Our Madras Correspondent writes :—"I have just received a number of official papers from Mysore describing a very virulent outbreak of bubonic disease, attended almost invariably with fatal results among the elephants, cattle and wild beasts in the Kakenkote Division of the Mysore District. Kakenkote, it may be remembered, was one of the centres of the Mysore kheddah operations and even now there is maintained a large stud of trained elephants for catching their wild brethren by the 'surround' system, and, for draught purposes, in connection with timber cutting in the forests. The disease was first noticed among these trained elephants, four of which were almost simultaneously seized with the disease and died within three days. The symptoms are a big swelling between the hind legs which gradually travelled towards the neck when the infected beasts quickly succumbed. Four wild elephants, three males and one female, were found dead in the Kakenkote Forest, also one bison, five sambhur, and deer and other animals. Later one of the Mysore Palace elephants caught the disease and died very suddenly. It also attacks cattle very seriously, and the Mysore Government are taking prompt steps to segregate all healthy cattle on the appearance of the disease among village cattle, and in as small groups as possible to avoid wholesale destruction should the disease make its appearance among the segregated cattle."

Our Bangalore Correspondent writes :—Paperchasing has been postponed from week to week owing to execrable weather, but a "chase" was at last brought off on the 9th instant from the Imperial Service Lancer lines to the Officers' Mess of the Queen's Own Sappers and Miners in St. John's Hill. Captain Cole and Major Smyth led, riding side by side, almost throughout and finished together, Mrs. Scott-Elliott being the first lady home. There was a numerous field including many ladies, and the hospitable Sappers dispensed refreshment to one and all at the finish. After the paperchase a most amusing skittle polo match on mules was played between the Carabiniers and the Sappers, the latter winning. Some of the mules decidedly objected to the pursuit of the ball, and one irritated animal deposited his rider on the turf, but others—notably that ridden by Mr. Wagstaffe, R.E.—seemed to enter into the spirit of the game as keenly as their riders, and were quite handy. A skittle gymkhana was organised by Mr. Anketell-Jones on the 6th instant which was distinctly successful, but with the exception of the competition for the tent pegging challenge cup, the events hardly came under the heading of legitimate sport. This competition was won by Captain Cole of the Carabiniers, Captain Watson of the same regiment being second.

The following are the entries for the Poona Junior Polo Tournament:—The Royal Dragoons, the 29th and 30th Lancers, 26th and 23rd (two teams) Cavalry, the 93rd Highlanders, Sappers (two teams), Royal Artillery, Connaught Rangers, East Lancashires and Freebooters.

The semi-barbarians, who attend the bull fights and other disgusting exhibitions in Spain, usually view these revolting spectacles from the safety afforded by seats perched high up round the arena. But they are not always safe from harm as is proved by a recent incident, for though the miserable combatants may not reach them and maul them they are liable to be shot and killed by a panic-stricken and brutal soldiery. The case we refer to occurred at San Sebastian. A fight between a Bengal tiger and an Andalusian bull was announced, and had attracted an enormous crowd on Sunday, 14th July. Guards, armed with Mausers, were stationed in the arena. The two animals were brought on separately and the bull eyed his opponent savagely, but the wretched tiger at first refused to get out of the cart. Eventually some brute fired a squib which dislodged him. Instantly the bull dashed at him with horns down. The tiger was gored, but caught his opponent in the neck. The bull shaking him off, remained stamping the ground, while the tiger retired crouching for a leap. The same tactics were repeated over and over again for half an hour, when the spectators, impatient because they had expected something more exciting, began to hoot. A bloodthirsty photographer got into the arena and prodded the tiger with a pole over the barrier. The poor beasts attacked each other again, but soon fell apart, and stood looking at one another, apparently having not the least inclination to fight.

The fiendish spectators, in a fury, thereupon jumped into the arena, and shouted all the names they could think of at the animals, hissed, lit squibs, and danced like mad creatures round the cage. The bull, excited by the noise, gored the tiger once more, and got him against the bars of the enclosure. At that moment the latter barrier was seen to yield. In a few seconds it fell, and the cage was open.

Then there were yells of terror, and the brutish crowd fled in a wild panic. Simultaneous reports of firearms were heard, and several men fell wounded. The guards and everyone possessing a gun had blazed away indiscriminately. Fifty persons were hit; twelve by Mauser bullets. [We are pleased to read of it Ed. I. F.] Fourteen were severely hurt, three were in a critical condition, and one man was dead. An American, one Livingstone, of New York, who ought to be whipped for being at the show, was injured, and will bring an action for damages. The fusillade eventually killed the tiger, which, for that matter, had made no attempt to attack anyone, he, being too badly mauled.

The bull all the while stood calmly in the middle of the arena, as peaceful as his dead adversary had been. He was eventually led off, when the spectators fell like savages on the tiger's carcase, actually hacking off the head, the tail, the paws, and pieces of the skin, to take away as mementos.

The Countess Lizariturri, who was wounded in the course of the panic, succumbed to her injuries on 25th July.

We publish to-day a report of the second day of the Bellary Races which we regret reached us too late for inclusion in our last issue. The little meeting was quite a success.

The danger attendant on disturbing bees during operations in the jungle is well recognised by shakaris out here ; some of us have had experience of apiarian attacks more or less severe, to others it is a treat in store ! An instance occurred recently in Pahang, down in the Straits Settlements, when a surveyor had the bad luck to disturb a bees' nest. On seeing what he had done, he turned and bolted through the jungle. But it was of no use ; for a large number of the insects pursued him and stung him on the eyes, nose, cheeks, neck, and hands. After a run of about a quarter of a mile, with the insects at work all the time, he fell and the bees appeared to pass over him. But shortly afterwards saveral of them returned to the charge. During his wild rush through the jungle the unfortunate surveyor tore and cut himself badly with thorns. Finally, one of his coolies discovered him and took him back to his quarters. During this encounter some of the surveyor's coolies took refuge in an adjacent stream, but they were also attacked and finally had to bolt through the jungle.

We have to thank Messrs. Thacker, Spink and Company for a copy of the last number of The Bookshelf, a publication ever welcomed to those in this country who read and endeavour to keep themselves in touch with current literature. We have further to thank the writer of Currente Calamo for the following notice of our last little book :—"The success that has attended The Indian Field Shikar Book" is a little bewildering and only serves to show the great need there evidently was for such a work. The handy size of the volume commends it at once, and then the information is so concise and precise. If for no other purpose than that of settling bets, a copy should be in every club house and chummery in India. The first edition (a very large one) was disposed of in a little over a fortnight and the second edition cannot be in print much longer at the rate it is being bought up at the present time."

In connection with the present agitation on the subject of Game Preservation—an agitation which the Editor of this paper began some time ago in another journal—the following is of interest :—

"We, Members of the Committee of the Nilgiri Game and Fish Preservation Association desire to record our opinion on the Bill for protection of Game and Fish throughout India and on Mr. Risley's letter which accompanies it—

(1) We would represent that the very raison d'être for the proposed legislation is the waste of fish and game, both as food supplies and as objects of sport.

(2) That the primary object should therefore be to efficiently safeguard what game and fish now exist and to foster the same and encourage their reproduction.

(3) That where protective measures have been for years in existence the Forest Subordinates, the Police Subordinates and the special game watchers (all save those under the immediate eyes of the many sportsmen resident on the Nilgiri plateau) have not only proved themselves utterly useless in controlling the havoc and evil practices for the following reasons :—

(a) General laxity and sympathy with offenders ; (b) Paucity of numbers and therefore lack of time ; (c) Corruption and venality ; and (d) Fear :—But have in many instances within our personal knowledge condoned and even assisted in breaches of the law.

(4) We therefore think and we would strongly urge, that whatever legislation may be decided on, the first and most important thing for its enforcement is to organise reliable means for supervision and prevention; and we feel assured that this cannot be properly done unless it is made the duty of special and carefully selected officers and staffs for the purpose, each officer to be in protective charge of the forests and upper waters of the rivers of as large an area as it may be deemed he can efficiently control (say, for instance, three, or at the least two for the Madras Presidency, and so forth.)

(5) These officers should, of course, be men possessing a knowledge of the people, the country, and the languages as far as possible in their charge, and men who have shown an interest in the object in view.

(It would not do to put a Madras man into a charge in Beluchistan, for instance, or a Bengal man into Southern Madras.)

We therefore urge that under the heading of "Application of Funds" in Mr. Risley's letter, the funds realized by sale of licenses and accruing from penalties under the act should be applied as follows :—

First.—To the expenses of European officers and staffs to protect the existing game and fish, who would explain the law where it is most necessary, i.e., in the very jungles where the finest game and fish, perhaps in the world, exist, and would breed if permitted, and where offences are most rife, and to encourage the people who now waste the fish food supply and the game supply that has been put within their reach to conserve the same and to foster it for their own benefit.

Second.—(The above being completely provided for) towards the introduction of new, or foreign species of fish or game.

Constant representations having resulted in inducing officials, in most parts of the country, to establish a close time for preservation of mature game, we may as well put in a plea for similar restrictions being framed for preventing the capture of immature animals and birds ; few people realising the large number of these which at this season are brought in to perish miserably from sudden deprivation of their natural sustenance. Unweaned young of all animals are of course more easily captured so the temptation to secure them in that stage is strong, but few natives, and even Europeans, understand how to bring up wild creatures, fewer still care to take the trouble to conform to nature's demands. Milk is by no means plentiful even in this pastoral country, so some mucky mixture of conjee, sugared water or other substitute is resorted to, and is forced down the throat at odd times and without the least regard to its condition, hence the wretched little cub, etc., is sacrificed. Could the captive be quickly conveyed to the hands of the collecting agents, where they would receive intelligent attention, no great harm would ensue, but as a rule attempts are made to retain them in the villages till opportunity is afforded of sending them off. Thus, we believe that, speaking well within the mark, full 80 per cent. of the captives die off.

In inviting the attention of the authorities and collectors to this subject we propose that no systemstic capture of young animals should be permitted before the middle of November, by which time in Northern and Central India the graminivorii can pick a bit and the other creatures have developed a taste for something stronger than milk ; the parents of the latter, at any rate, display less ferocity in defence of their offspring as soon as they become less dependent on a mother's care. The postponement would in reality make capture more easy, for on the one hand the crops are ripening, drawing deer, etc., to the outskirts of cultivation, while the Carnivora find village goats and cattle more getable than the denizens of the forests, who are more easily alarmed and show much greater and prolonged solicitude for their progeny.

There would seem to be an increasing demand for imported deer for the forests and even private parks in Europe and the United Kingdom, and no wonder, when we read of such a partially crippled sportsman as the Kaisar talking about having grassed his thousandth stag ! Royalty generally set the example, so we must be prepared to hear less of abnormal head trophies than of the number of monarchs of the glades or glens laid low. That this must tell as time goes on is inevitable, and as the importation of foxes is now a recognised business, the day is not far distant when most of our regular liner vessels, plying in the early spring, will carry regular consignments of deer home, for with but very moderate shelter the whole of our antlered tribe, would soon accommodate themselves to the northern climates, if allowed their first season in the southern counties.

Our Poona Correspondent writes :—Lady Gorringe's Necklace is a somewhat ambitious effort for amateurs, and I must confess that when I found it had been selected as the comedy to be played at Government House, I was a little timid as to the critique I was to receive from my tame dramatic critic who has the entrée to high official circles, since it is altogether unfashionable and unforgiveable to publish unfavourable comments on amateur efforts. I need not, however, have felt any qualms on the subject, for his verdict is extremely flattering, as I know he is not given to rhapsody or fulsome compliment. Place aux dames. Mrs. Crowe as the vivacious and irrepressible Mrs. Gorringe was admirably clever, he says, while Mrs. Baddeley sacrificed herself unstintingly to give a realistic representation of the very trying Mrs. Jardine.

Of Mrs. Bonus as Isabel Kirke, however, my critic declares he can scarcely speak too highly. It was, he assures me, an effort of a very high order. Nor were the male dramatis personæ less ably represented. Mr. Jeaffreson, as Captain Mowbray, gave a clever rendering of the difficult part of Captain Mowbray—apt at times to sink from extreme virtue to the brink of priggishness. Captain Bayford played the fussy, good-intentioned Colonel Jardine cleverly and admirably avoided the temptation of falling into exaggeration. As the thick-skulled detective Jeringars, Mr. du Boulay was excellent, and finally the weak, selfish villain of the piece, who expiated all his weakness and offence in one great renunciation, was splendidly portrayed by Mr. Fry. The piece was, as one may easily believe, admirably staged and the whole performance was, my art critic declares, far above the ordinary amateur description of comedy acting and reflected the utmost credit on all concerned.

With reference to the objection against Blue Blood in the August Plate on the previous Saturday, the Stewards, on the grounds of incorrect declaration of ownership, fined Mr. Mehta, the owner, Rs. 500, but decided that in the circumstances of the case there was no necessity to disqualify the mare.

The Third Extra meeting passed off smoothly and provided a very pleasant day's racing, including two hurdle races of 1¼ miles over six flights. In the pony race the public went for whilom flat racers, but it was satisfactory to see a genuine "lepper" score, and Colonel Hazelton's wonderfully quick hurdler, Patrician, practically won his race at the first hurdle and gaining several lengths at each obstacle came sailing home, A. Hoyte pulling up to a veritable canter.

But if the first event was a trifle tame, the public had lots of excitement for their money in the Horse Hurdles, for Dumbell, who was greatly fancied, turned turtle at the first bit of brushwood, Bond taking his annual toss luckily with only a scraped face, and barring the diminutive Vixen (who was quite out of her class in such company) it was at the penultimate hurdle anyone's race. Here, however, Mr. Bass' Stoddart, taking off too soon, "came it," giving what seemed at first a nasty spill to the distinguished General Officer riding under the name of Mr. Bryan, who was piloting him, and it was a relief to all to see the rider quickly on his feet again. This left the result to Daroji, Badger, and Fitzeros, and the first name, almost unbacked, struggled home (with A. Hoyte revelling in even a hurdle race when he can't take a turn over the big fences) from Badger (with Hoyte the younger up), who was slowly but surely overhauling the leader.

Then came a little bunch of no less than 18 starters over 5 furlongs, and it was quite one of Mr. O'Gorman's happiest efforts, for he got them despatched to a wonderfully level start with very little delay. In a great cluster they came into the straight and two or three candidates made futile attempts to get through the vanguard and possibly Calcutta was unfortunate in getting no closer than third. Out of the throng at the finish Jimmy Robinson gradually squeezed ahead in characteristic manner on Delerjung with Caravan second, and quite a number all in a cluster close up.

That beautiful blood pony, Grey Fox once again showed that he is quite on the top of his form as despite getting, as is his custom, none too good a start, he gradually overhauled his field and Foster, riding a very determined finish, was able to secure a victory; all the more creditable as I heard he was very severely kicked at the post and was in great pain.

Sixteen went under Mr. O'Gorman's orders for the fifth race, and once again he was in his best form, Arabian Flag with little Heeroo up winning from Captain Bayford's Borderer—a very excellent performance over 7 furlongs for an animal that was till quite recently playing polo.

The curtain was rung down with a closed welter-weight race for horses and it is surely worth noting that in this event no less than two very distinguished General Officers competed. If this is not sport, what is? The public thought they were following a sound principle in sticking to that fine horseman "Mr. Locke," who once at any rate was, I believe, quite in a class by himself, and considerable support was accorded to Half a Crown, owned and ridden by Major Moore. Young Mr. Deane, however, was not to be denied, and pegging along on the large-striding Moroney drew away and won quite comfortably, a very creditable performance for a novice, as he trained as well as steered the winner.

The entries for the Third Calcutta Monsoon Meeting are on the whole satisfactory, with the exception of the hurdle race, which has only drawn five names, and has therefore, strictly speaking, not filled. The Stewards, however, decided to allow the race to stand, and in point of fact it would not have been easy to have framed a substitute likely to draw a field, as all other classes, unless we except a pony hurdle race, have already been catered for. The race, however, will probably not be of great interest, as in all likelihood not more than three will start, and the winner, unless some considerable alteration be made in the weights, will be the same as on the last two occasions.

The remaining events have drawn nine or ten horses apiece, and even allowing for a few double entries there should be no lack of starters. As with the exception of the Amateur Plate, all the races on the card are handicaps, it would be idle to indulge in speculations before seeing the weights allotted. As regards the terms race, however, we like March (provided the going is fairly dry), Road Metal, and Quicksilver, and shall look to them to finish in that order. Should the course be very heavy we do not fancy March, but would substitute Daffodil.

We were somewhat edified the other morning on the course by a flow of Billingsgate from the lips of a certain monsoon racing official directed at a well-known Calcutta G. R. As a flow of rhetoric it was sublime, re-calling the best efforts of the immortal Teddy Weekes, and in fact, as the historic 'bus-driver remarked, "Lor lumme it's a gift." At the same time, however, we have yet to learn that the position of a minor official at a race meeting warrants his expressing his disapprobation of a G. R.'s breach of course rules in quite so forcible a manner, and we cannot refrain from remarking that the ebullition appeared to us wholly unnecessary.

Athletic Notes.

WE draw attention to the advertisement regarding the Durand Football Tournament which will be found among our casual notifications. Entries close on Tuesday, the 22nd instant.

The report of the Committee of the Bombay Gymkhana for the half-year ending 30th June last to be submitted to the General Meeting to be held in the Pavilion on Monday, the 29th instant, shows that the total number of members of the Gymkhana is 2,224, of whom 442 were resident on the 30th June; 63 new members have been elected during the past half-year, and 17 members have resigned; 54 temporary members were elected during the half-year. During the six months just ended Mr. P. W. Cresswell undertook the duties of Golf Secretary in place of Mr. C. M. Gray, resigned, and Mr. N. R. Medley accepted the invitation of the Managing Committee to be a member of the Ballotting Committee in place of Mr. H. Cheetham, left for England.

The report states that the season has opened very well, and owing to the large attendance at the nets and the keenness of members to play in matches, there is no difficulty in selecting men for the two teams. The absence of one or two old players will be a distinct loss, but the advent of fresh blood promises to be useful, and there is every reason to believe that the Gymkhana will have a good record at the end of the season. The ground is in a more satisfactory condition as the rain water drains off more quickly than it previously did.

Polo is being fairly supported this season, and prospects are well up to the average.

The Racquets court was fairly well attended during the half-year under report, the average number of players per month being 15 (in 19th June). The Annual Single Tournament was held during February, for which there were seven entries. The Cup was won by Mr. A. H. C. Kearsey, Y. and L. Regiment. Very thorough improvements to the roof were taken in hand at the end of April and completed by the end of May. The annual cost (last year Rs. 252) of repairing the roof, which had become very leaky and almost impossible to keep water tight, will now be greatly reduced.

The Lawn Tennis courts were regularly used throughout the half-year. The Open Challenge Cup (Singles) was won by Mr. R. Kidd, and the Open Challenge Cup (Doubles) by Messrs. J. S. Milne and R. Kidd. Mr. W. Reid again carried off the Marryat Cup. The Annual Handicaps attracted a fair number of entries. Messrs. J. S. Milne and A. Crichton owing 4/6ths won the Doubles and Mr. C. Thomson receiving 3/6ths won the Singles.

All the boats have been kept in good condition during the past six months, but they have not been patronized very frequently.

The interest in golf was well sustained, even during the hot weather, when the course necessarily becomes somewhat uninteresting. The ground is in good condition now, and the team matches, which were so successful last monsoon, are again being played. The results of the concluding competitions of the season were as follows:—Blackheath Medal Scratch won by Mr. J. Stiven; Wimbledon Silver Cup Scratch, Mr. O. Marshall; St. George's Medal Scratch, Mr. C. M. Gray; Forty-twa Medal Handicap, Mr. A. W. Daldy; Golfers' Cup Handicap, Mr. E. E. Coombs.

In football Rugby games have not started this season, and great keenness is being displayed. It is hoped to put in a good team for the Tournament in September. An Association eleven has been entered for the Harwood League and has played several matches.

Hockey was begun in April and ended with the usual Open Tournament for the Aga Khan Challenge Cup, for which there were eighteen entries—a record number considering that Military Regulations prevented any teams from native regiments entering. The Gymkhana Team beat the R.G.A. from Colaba in the first tie, but were knocked out in the second round by the Royal Scots The Middlesex Regiment eventually won the Cup.

Owing to the bad condition of the bowling green before the rains, the attendance was not so good. One competition was held, the winner being Mr. G. C. Anderson.

A statement of assets and liabilities and the balance sheet for the past half-year is issued and in regard to this the Committee point out that there is still a balance of liabilities over assets of Rs. 1,667-8-5. During the past half-year the roof of the Bar was thoroughly repaired at a cost of Rs. 764-4-0. The racquet court roof was also found to be in very bad repair, and extensive altera ions have, therefore, been made to it at a cost of about Rs. 2,000, as this is not of the nature of an ordinary repair, but is a structural improvement to the building, the estimated value of the racquet court has been increased from Rs. 22,700 to Rs. 24,700 in the Statement of Assets.

The nett proceeds realised from the Indian Football Association charity match, after paying Rs. 311-4-0 for expenses, amounted to Rs. 2,289-6-6. This is rather less than last year, but not unsatisfactory. The whole sum will be paid to the Calcutta Hospital Nurses' Institution.

Our Footballers are doing well for local charities this year. The Calcutta League charity match provided Rs. 1,111 which, with the above, makes a total of Rs. 3,400-6-6. Not too bad!

The Bengal Automobile Association held a general meeting on the 11th instant at the new rooms of the Association in the Asiatic Society's buildings. Dr. J. Nield Cook was in the chair and opened the meeting with a short review of the position and prospects of the Association and the work done by the Committee. It was shown that the Association was solvent, the income exceeding the present expenses by about Rs. 50 a month; that the membership was increasing; that the Association was provided with comfortable quarters in a central situation, which had been furnished by the liberality of some of the members, and that the Committee had done a good deal of useful work in connection with Rules and Regulations affecting the motor industry and the convenience of private motorists. Dates were fixed for a run to Barrackpore and back and an inaugural dinner to be held in the new rooms. After some discussion on motor topics, the meeting ended with a vote of thanks to the Chairman and the Committee.

The Bombay Gymkhana Rugby Football Tournament will be held from the 26th September to 1st October. The winners will hold the Bombay Gymkhana Challenge Cup for one year, which must not be taken out of India. The tournament will be played under the Rugby Union Rules. Entries must be made before 17th September. The Cup is at present held by the Calcutta F. C.

In our London Sporting Letter will be found full details of the International Athletics, in which the American Colleges defeated Oxford and Cambridge in a decided manner by six events to three. The events won by Oxford and Cambridge were the half mile—H. E. Holding, Oriel Coll., Oxford; the mile—H. W. Gregson, the Old Oundelian and Light Blue President; and the two miles—M. H. Godby, Christchurch, Oxford.

In the course of some remarks on this meeting, communicated to a London sporting paper, that well known athlete, the Rev. W. H. Workman, says:—"I do hope and implore our University men to learn a lesson from the meeting. They cannot hope to compete with Americans unless they train for a long period beforehand and get more experience in racing, not merely running. Throughout the meeting nearly all our men bore the stamp of being but half trained. In the summer one needs to train gently for at least two months; in hot weather it is impossible to suddenly get really fit in a month. Undoubtedly the Americans deserved to win. May we learn a lesson, and in a year or two send a team to America that shall wipe Saturday's little account off the slate." There is no doubt that until we conform more generally to American methods in Athletics we can never hope to beat them.

Our Bombay Correspondent writes:—In view of the attempt that is to be made to enter teams for the Poona Junior and Open Polo Tournaments, Bombay polo players have during the past fortnight been practising hard and already an appreciable improvement is noticeable in their play. I fear, however, that if Bombay is represented at Poona the team will find itself handicapped in respect of the inferior class of ponies it will have to use. With the game languishing as it has for year, it is not to be expected that its few votaries in Bombay would care to spend heavy sums on highly trained, fast animals, so that if a team can be sent to Poona and fares badly it will be as much due to the inferior qualifications of the ponies as to the want of form of the players. All hope that the ancient greatness of Bombay as an Indian Polo centre will ever be restored must be dismissed for good, as the consummation of such a hope could only be realised by a large increase in the military population. Polo is essentially a military game and if the authorities were to convert Bombay into a first class military station there would be a Phœnix-like rise in the fortunes of the game in the Western India capital. In the halcyon days of Bombay polo there happened to be a number of civilians of more than average ability as players, and to this fact may be traced the position that Bombay held in the polo world. When these civilians retired from the game, or left the country, polo commenced to languish and has been languishing ever since for want of the same skill to take their place. It has frequently been stated that the chief cause of the game being in such a parlous state is the want of a ground which polo players could have the exclusive right to use, and the centre of the racecourse at Mahalaxmi has been mentioned as the most suitable place in Bombay for this purpose. Granting for the sake of argument that the Western India Turf Club were willing to give poloists a lien of this ground, and that sufficient funds were forthcoming to put the ground in order for polo—a large sum would be required for this purpose—I fail to see how the acquisition of a ground would in any way revive an interest in the game, especially a ground so distant as Mahalaxmi.

Since writing the above the entries for the Junior Polo Tournament have been published and the name of the Bombay Gymkhana is not in the list. Personally I think it was wise not to enter a team for the Junior Tournament, as it could only have been a very imperfectly trained one. All hope of entering a team for the Open Tournament has not, however, been abandoned, and during the next few weeks the maidan on Tuesday and Thursday evenings should be the scene of some hard practice.

Golf is being played in Bombay, although I have made no mention of the fact in my notes lately, chiefly because what play there is, is of a desultory nature and has no interest for golfers in general and not much for the actual participants themselves. Next month local golfers will begin to wake up and there will be plenty to write about.

The Honorary Secretaries of the Mounted Sports, Messrs. W. E. Crum and F. R. Hill, introduced a little variation into the programme last Wednesday, which was appreciated by both competitors and spectators. In the tent-pegging competition riders had to knock a ball off a post with the butt of their spear before taking the peg, and at this new game Mr. G. D. Heyland proved himself a dabster, winning easily. Messrs. Ashe and J. St. G. Graham were second and third respectively. A lemon race for ladies, in which the lady had to catch a lemon hanging on a string and drop it into a bucket a few yards further on, a feat by no means as easy as it seemed, was won by Mrs. S. McCausland with Mrs. de Saone second. One of the outcomes of the revived interest in Polo was the inclusion in the programme of a Polo ball race for the first time this season, and there were sufficient entries for two preliminary heats. In the first heat Mr. Barraclough and Mr. Cook were first and second, and in the second heat Mr. J. Graham and Mr. D. Graham. The final was won by Mr. D. Graham with Mr. Barraclough second. The mixed event was novel and amusing. Gentlemen had to ride over a given course and ladies then handed them umbrellas, of the latest colours and styles, and cigars. The lady had to light the cigar and the gentleman then returned over the former course. The winners were Mr. S. McCausland and Mrs. de Saone, and Mr. D. Graham and Mrs. S. McCausland second. The usual pony scurry was won by Mr. D. Graham's Johad with Mr. Heyland's Nemesis second, and the horse scurry by Mr. P. F. Fischer's Dart with Mr. Matthew's Bloke second. Mr. Monteath rode Nemesis and the others were ridden by owners.

A Rugger match on Monday evening between the Civil and United Services was won by the former by three tries to a try. The United Services were not as strongly represented as they might have been, and their backs, particularly the halves, were outplayed by the opposing backs. The forwards were, however, well matched and as a result play was mostly confined to them.

The matches in the Harwood League during the week attracted considerable attention, but were somewhat interfered with by showery weather. On Tuesday the Cheshire B team met the Rovers in the return match and had no difficulty in repeating their victory of last month. From start to finish the military team had practically matters all their own way. During the first half the Rovers struggled gamely to hold their own, but without avail, and they changed over with two goals registered against them. In the second half the weakness of the Rovers' forwards told heavily against them and the military team were able to add three more goals to their score, eventually running out victors by five goals to nil. On Wednesday, the Royal Garrison Artillery and the Telegraph met in the return game, when the former won by three goals to nil. The Telegraph, who had been showing improved form lately, gave a disappointing exhibition and were lucky to escape a severer defeat. The return game between the Perseus and Gymkhana elevens was another disappointing exhibition so far as the Gymkhana are concerned, and the naval team, who played a really fine game, ran out victors by four goals to nil. The Gymkhana had several chances of scoring, particularly during the last quarter of the second half, but failed to take advantage of the openings afforded them.

The latest news from Quetta, where there are three players who have received invitations to play for the Presidency at Bombay on the 23rd, 24th, and 25th instant is that J. H. Curtis will not be able to play, but hopes to do so in the return match at Poona on the 15th, 16th, and 17th September. Captain M. D. Wood has also been obliged to refuse the invitation, but like Curtis may play at Poona. Captain L. M. R. Deas, the third player in question, has accepted the invitation and his acceptance has caused great jubilation amongst Presidency supporters as his fast bowling will be simply invaluable. The only other players who have up to date definitely received invitations and have promised to play are Captain J. G. Greig and H. P. Chaplin, the Mhow player.

A Rugger match, the second played during the week, was played on Friday afternoon between the Casuals and a team representing the United Services, the latter running out winners by 2 goals and 1 try to 1 goal and 1 try.

No event during the season has excited half as much interest up to date as the first of the two annual matches between the Bombay and Poona Gymkhanas.

The most sanguine supporters of the Bombay eleven, even after they had won the toss and had the advantage of first knock on a perfect batsman's wicket, did not give them more than 150 and this total all things considered was as much as the side could be expected to make, having in mind the form that the chief batsman had been showing this season. Bombay supporters, however, were agreeably surprised as play progressed to find that the bowling was made to appear quite simple by the first few batsmen and when after two and a quarter hours' play the total had been carried to 123 for the loss of only three wickets, their surprise was great. But this was nothing to what had to follow and when after tiffin on Friday the batsmen proceeded to make hay of the bowling, which in an hour was changed eight times, their astonishment was unbounded. In vain did Greig with his tricky deliveries, Umfreville, Stevens, Carroll, Butler, and Hartley endeavour to cut short the innings, the batsmen treated all the bowlers alike and when at last the whole side was out an hour and ten minutes before the time arranged for drawing stumps. Bombay had the satisfaction of knowing that their total of 323 created a record, it being the largest total ever put together by a Bombay Gymkhana team in the whole series of matches between the two Gymkhanas at Bombay. I was surprised not to say disappointed with the Poona bowling after all I had heard of it. Far and away the best display was that of A. P. Langhorne who scored 52. He made his runs by good sound cricket and as far as I could see only gave one difficult chance in the slips when his score was about 20. Powell who made 55 top score had some luck and is a very unattractive batsman to watch. Milne and Coombs made 43 and 41 by hard hitting, but the innings of Carnegy (34) Philbrik (25) and Aston (24) were the result of better cricket. The Poona batsmen with one notable exception gave a very disappointing display against the bowling of Ainsworth, Coombs, and Milne and were all out quarter of an hour before the tiffin adjournment on the second day for 210, of which Captain Greig claimed 108. The famous batsman was in great form and treated all the bowlers impartially, treating Ainsworth in particular with great severity. His innings included 14 fours and was a masterpiece. He received very little assistance from the rest of the side. Being over 100 runs in arrears Poona had to follow on and during the ten minutes they had before tiffin lost the wickets of Umfreville and Wilkins for 9 runs. Afterwards they fared very badly indeed, only Greig who made 40, French, who was batting some time for his 38, and Kennedy, who made 15, making any stand against the bowling of Milne and Ainsworth who took six wickets for 47 runs and had five catches missed off his bowling and four wickets for 14 runs respectively. The Bombay Gymkhana who were left with only 9 runs to win got these without loss and so won a great victory by ten wickets, the severest defeat they have ever inflicted on the Poona Gymkhana.

Among important cricket results at home last week are the following:—Worcester beat Somerset by five wickets; Middlesex beat Notts by 8 wickets; Gloster beat Worcester by 67 runs; Leicester beat Hampshire by an innings and 95 runs; Warwick beat Yorkshire by 6 runs; Kent beat Somerset by 210 runs: the following matches were drawn: Surrey vs. Sussex, Essex vs. Lancashire, Yorkshire vs. Middlesex, Surrey vs. Warwickshire, Sussex vs. Lancashire, Kent vs. Gloster, and Notts vs. South Africans.

Our Madras Correspondent writes:—The M. C. C. have issued their cricket fixture list, from which I see that the Ceylon team propose to pay us another visit during Christmas week, playing two matches one against the M. C. C. and the other against the Madras Presidency If the visit comes off, this will make the third time in three seasons that Madras-Ceylon matches have been played. I am unable to consult my references at this moment and speaking from memory I fancy that Madras has up to date had the best of the exchanges, so that Ceylon will have to send up a good team if they are going to get level. It is impossible at this early period to pick out any of the team that Madras will put into the field to do battle for her; but one thing is fairly certain and that is that neither the M. C. C. nor the Presidency will be able to rely on the services of Capt Challenor of the Leicestershire Regiment, who played so well against the Ceylon team that visited Madras shortly after the Authentics' tour. He is under orders to proceed Home to do duty with the Depôt of the Regiment. The Leicesters lose in him a popular officer and one of their finest hockey players.

We append a list of several innings of 100 made in English cricket this season:—

Among the entries for the Durand Football Tournament, which opens at Simla on the 14th September, are those of the Blackwatch, Gordon Highlanders, Royal Scots Fusiliers and South Staffords.

It is stated that the Oxford and Cambridge match next season will be played a week later than usual, and will commence at Lord's on Thursday, 6th July. This will also put back the Gentlemen vs. Players, which will, it is understood, be decided at Lord's on Monday, 10th July, and following days, whilst Eton vs. Harrow is fixed for Friday and Saturday, 14th and 15th July.

The Bangalore Tennis Tournament produced numerous entries for the handicap events, but not sufficient competitors in the open items to warrant their being carried out. But whilst the handicap entries have been so numerous that a full return of them would occupy much space, the tennis has been unequal, and in some cases hardly of a sufficiently high class to warrant a lengthy description. The final stages of the tournament have now been reached, and in the semi-finals for the ladies' singles, Mrs. Eagles (—⅚) beat Mrs. Robertson (scratch) by two sets to love, whilst Miss Anderson (—⅚) beat Miss Cameron (+15), by two sets to one. Mrs. Eagles and Miss Anderson will accordingly meet in the final. There are still four pairs in for the ladies' doubles, for which Mrs. Eagles and Mrs. Abraham are now the favourites. Captain Copeland and Major Jollie, who lately won the open doubles at Ootacamund, have won all their matches with consummate ease although handicapped at (—30). In the third ties, Rolland and Babington (scratch) got four games in the second set against them though beaten a love set to begin with, but there was only one pair really in it, and in the semi-finals they beat Bridges and Bell, 6—2, 6—1, although the latter were in receipt of ⅔ besides their opponents owed odds. Copeland will probably win the handicap singles also and Mr. and Mrs. Rolland are scarcely likely to beat the combination of Copeland and Mrs. Hogg in the mixed doubles.

The Motor Union of Western India has organised a reliability trial for Christmas week. The trial is to be between Delhi and Bombay. It is not to be a race, but a trial of the best car under all conditions. Indeed, fast speed will cause a disqualification, the maximum speed allowed being 30 miles an hour. The trial is open to any motor car whatever of any shape, of any size, of any horse power and with any fuel, and practically the only reservation made is to the effect that cars shall be privately owned and shall be driven by amateurs. The trial will consist of an eight days' run, the distance between Delhi and Bombay being about 880 miles. The track follows the old Agra Road, which is in a good state of repair throughout the greater portion of its length. The maximum mileage to be covered in one day will be about 150 miles, the minimum being about 75. The Gaekwar of Baroda has offered a valuable cup to be competed for outright, and to be presented to the owner of the car which comes through the trial with the least number of unauthorised stops.

The Poona District Hockey Tournament for which five teams have entered begins on the 29th instant. The matches will be played in Poona and Kirkee and the final will be played in Poona.

The following are the entries in the Walter Locke Challenge Cup and Rugby Cup competitions, to be held at Rangoon under the auspices of the Burma Amateur Athletic Association :—

Walter Locke Challenge Cup.—1. Burma Oil Company's F.C.; 2. East Rangoon Junior Club; 3. Goverment Collegiate School; 4. Port Defence; 5. King's Own Scottish Borderers; 6. Gymkhana; 7. Border Regiment; 8. Eastern Burma F.C.; 9. The King's; 10 United School Club; 11. East Yorks; 12. 70th R.G.A.; 13. Burma United Club; 14. 89th Company, R.G.A.; 15. Burma Union Club.

Rugby Cup.—1. Gymkhana; 2. King's Own Scottish Borderers; 3. Garrison Officers; 4. Border Regiment (holders); 5.Y.M.C.A.

Towns beat Tressider in the Sculling Match for the Championship of the World at Sydney last month. He covered the three miles 300 yards in 21mins. 48secs. and could undoubtedly have knocked a good deal off this time for he had the outclassed Tressider beaten at the half distance and came in practically paddling fifteen lengths ahead.

A boxing entertainment was held at the Port Defence Volunteer Head-quarters, Rangoon, on the 8th instant and proved a great success. Proceedings opened with a six-round contest in which Bett, R.G.A., beat Foster(the King's)in three rounds. This was followed by a four-round bout between Griffiths of the King's and Shervington, R.G.A. The Gunner disposed of his man in two rounds. The next bout was equally brief, Coones beating McDoughall, R.G.A. The contest of the evening was between Kane of the King's and Connelly, R.G.A., in which the Gunner was victorious. The bout between Page and Cunliffe went to the former. The next fight gave us some pretty boxing, Smith of the Liverpool's beating Mackin.

L. Duke, "heavy-weight champion of Western New York" and the Far East, and McGuinness, R.G.A., Burma's light-weight champion, then sparred three exhibition rounds. There was, of course, no heavy hitting, as Duke was too heavy for McGuinness, nevertheless the spectators were well pleased with the cleverness displayed by both men. Duke had the best of matters.

Exhibition sparring between Connelly and McGuinness and Bett and McGuinness closed the programme. Mr. L. Duke officiated as referee, Mr. C. Stewart as time-keeper and Mr. Duberu as judge.

London Week by Week.

London, Friday, 29th July 1904.

THE fact of the Court Circular being issued from "Goodwood House" betokens that the curtain has been rung down on the season of 1904, and for its epitaph that on "Fred" may be resuscitated, abridged, and adapted. "It was alive, and is dead: there's no more to be said." The craze of raising money for charities—no matter which—has been even more virulent this year than last, when the high water mark of that particular form of amusement was supposed to have been reached. No device has been left untried, the newest being the exhibition of "living bridge" for the benefit of the St. Helena Hospital Home. Experts on the question of charitable finance seem agreed that the result of these heroic exertions is not a larger sum total for charity, but simply that the money is diverted from one object to another—by no means always the result to be desired. The amount expended on the decorations of many of these functions is said to be out of all proportion to the amount realized.

The King and Queen have earned their holiday even more unequivocally than have most hard-working folk. In a July temperature that reduced most of their subjects to a condition of limp incapacity, the foundation-stone of Liverpool Cathedral was laid; the first sod of the new dock at Swansea was cut; and the Birmingham Waterworks in Mid Wales inaugurated; and in addition Their Majesties underwent—and underwent as though they enjoyed them—a series of receptions, speeches, luncheons and ceremonies, that exhausted one to read of with the thermometer well up in the eighties.

Mr. Arthur Bourchier, who brought his present season at the Garrick Theatre to a close on Friday evening, announces that after a very brief holiday he proposes to produce a new and original comedy by Mr. Henry Arthur Jones. Mr. Bourchier mentioned that during the season just ended (which, by the way, began on 13th July 1903) he had successfully produced plays by Haddon Chambers, "John Oliver Hobbes," Charles Dickens, Charles Kingsley, Eugène Brieusé, Alfred Austen, Alfred Sutro, from whom he has just accepted a four-act play, Malcolm Watson, and W. S. Gilbert. That Mr. Gilbert has been pursuaded to turn his pen stagewards once more is a matter for congratulation. Mr. Bourchier intends to continue his policy of producing one-act plays as occasion serves; and he claims that although he is that quintessence of selfishness and vanity, the actor manager, he has been the instrument of enhancing the reputation of many members of his company during the past season. A propos my remarks anent the disproportion between expenditure and receipts at certain charitable functions, it is worthy of note that at the recent matinée at the Garrick in aid of the Bushey Heath Cottage Hospital the entire expenses were covered by the sale of the programmes and photographs. This is "good business." Of forthcoming events, in addition to those mentioned in my last letter, I may note that on Tuesday, 30th August, Messrs. Maude and Harrison produce at the New Theatre Messrs. W. W. Jacobs and L. N. Parker's new play, "The Beauty and the Bargee." And on Thursday, 1st September, will be seen at the Criterion, for the first time in London, Mr. Malcolm Watson's Comedy "Winnie Brooke, Widow." The same evening will see "The Duke of Killicrankie" transferred from the Comedy to Wyndham's; and the resumption of "Miss Elizabeth's Prisoner" at the Imperial.

1st September was the date fixed upon for the London production of Mr. Wilson Barrett's "Lucky Durham" at the Comedy. It is said that the arrangement will hold good, and that the play will be produced with a well-known actor in the leading part; but it will be difficult to find anybody to fill the place of Mr. Barrett.

* * * * * *

The death of Mr. Wilson Barrett occurred last Friday after an operation for cancer. The son of a farmer, he took to the stage in his teens, playing small parts in the provinces. In the sixties he married Miss Heath, an actress who had attracted some notice at the Princess under Charles Kean's management, and he made his first appearance in London with her at the Surrey Theatre in "East Lynne." Miss Heath made only one notable London success with Wills' "Jane Shore," but she was popular in the provinces. She died several years ago. Mr. Barrett made his first essay in management at the Court in 1879, when his opening piece was Sardou's "Fernande," and Miss Winifred Emery was included in the cast. In 1881 he began his five years' successful management of the Prince's, during which he produced Mr. G. R. Sim's "The Lights o'London," and played Harold Armytage for two hundred and eighty nights. A year later his most legitimate success came to him in the part of Wilfred Denver in "The Silver King," which ran for three hundred consecutive nights. In 1883 he created the part of Claudian in the melodrama of that name by Messrs. Wills and Herman, which attained a success which is well nigh unintelligible to us in this present year of grace. It ran, also, for three hundred nights. In 1884 he made his first appearance as Hamlet, and the following year "Hoodman Blind" was produced. It was written by Mr. Henry Arthur Jones and himself, and had a certain success. At the close of his five years' management Mr. Barrett went on tour in America with Miss Eastlake, who had been his "leading lady" at the Princess; and on his return he produced, in collaboration with Mr. G. R. Sims, "The Golden Ladder," and with Mr. Hall Caine, "The Good Old Times." He afterwards made a tour in Australia, and revisited America, and later made another venture in management—this time at the New Olympic, which proved disastrous to himself. It was during his tenancy of the Lyric in 1896 that he produced the religious play "The Sign of the Cross," which evidently appealed to a large section of the middle-class play-going public and had a phenomenal run. During his later years he made sundry attempts to renew this success with "Daughters of Babylon," "The Christian King," etc., etc., but one play of the kind sufficed for one generation, and the attempts resulted in failure.

Some of the obituary notices of Mr. Barrett note his geniality and charitableness. He was always ready to relieve distress to the utmost of his ability—oft times almost beyond it—since his runs of ill-luck must have almost counterbalanced his successes. I have heard it stated that he gave away in charity not less than £20,000, and with so little ostentation that few knew anything of it. He was generous, too, in foregoing his advantage when he found he had made much the best of a bargain. He was indebted to Wills' for two of his greatest successes, "Jane Shore" and "Claudian." He contracted to pay Wills £200 for "Jane Shore," but when he found it was filling the treasury he sent Wills a handsome cheque every week, and he did the same with "Claudian." Mr. Wilson Barrett lived for several years at the Priory, Regent's Park, which was at one time the home of George Eliot and George Henry Lewes.

After many more than the regulation three fine days allotted to us by tradition the thunderstorm which had been so long brewing fell upon us last Monday. We in London came in for only the fag end of the thunderstorm proper, but we had our fair share of the rain with the usual happy results. That the Underground was flooded and traffic stopped for some hours goes without saying. Is it not a law of nature that it should be so when the rainfall is above the normal? The years must be few in which some of us have not enjoyed the pleasing excitement of having to turn out and wade to the nearest platfrom, and each rainstorm finds the company unprepared And it is the same with our grandmotherly—and costly—and not much respected L.C.C. For how long have we not suffered (far from gladly) under its rate-laying powers, and yet I read in my morning paper of Tuesday that the inhabitants of certain roads in Holloway "always fear heavy rains, as the main sewer is unable to take the water quickly enough with the inevitable result that the houses become flooded in the basement and ground floors." On Monday night the "inevitable result" followed the rain. The roads in question were like small rivers and numbers of people were unable to reach their houses. It were well if the L.C.C. would condescend to things of low estate instead of aspiring to things which are too high for them.

An unusual result of the storm was the flooding of Westminster Hall. The rain had fallen in such torrents that the lower part of New Palace Yard was flooded and the water rushed into the hall. The little excitement was evidently a welcome distraction from the deadly dulness of the Finance Bill, and Members took an amusing interest in the two inches of water on the floor.

Although the release of the Malacca and the Formosa has been announced, it cannot be said that the relations between ourselves and Russia have returned to anything like a satisfactory footing. Russia has given assurances that the Volunteer Fleet will be withdrawn from the Red Sea, and has met the British Government in regard to these particular "regrettable incidents," but not by any means on the general principle, and the questions still at issue are important. The sinking of the Knight Commander, ordered, it is said, by the Russian Admiral himself, is, on the authority of Mr. Balfour a more serious question; but the most serious question of all is the passage of the Volunteer Fleet, and the "escape" of the Russian cruiser though the Dardanelles. The most accomplished Russian casuist could not wriggle out of the dilemma that a vessel which passes though the Dardanelles as a merchant vessel has no right to assume the character of a man-of-war in the Red Sea, and that if she passed through as a man-of-war she did so in defiance of treaties. That is the broad issue. and beside, if such futile excuses as that the Russian captain was unacquainted with the significance of the broad arrow on the Malacca's consignment of ammunition falls to the ground. The Russians have been trying for years on one pretext or another to break down the neutrality of the Dardanelles. Vessels of the Volunteer Fleet pass through, sometimes as hospital ships, another time as transports with time-expired men on board. Any excuse serves. It is satisfactory to hear from Lord Lansdowne that the Government considers this state of things "intolerble" and has lodged a "strong protest" against it, and should such "regrettable incidents" recur it is to be hoped that strong measures may take the place of strong protests.

The news of the assassination of M. de Plehve horrible though it be, has caused little surprise except, perhaps, that the Russian police should have failed to protect him. It is but two years since his predecessor in the office of Minister of the Interior was also assassinated, and M. de Plehve was promoted from the office of Secretary of State for Finland. Since that time his influence over the Czar is said to have been almost unbounded, until the Russian reverses in the war with Japan and his failure to suppress the revolutionary movement which of late has sprung into fresh life somewhat weakened his position. The part he played in the atrocious Kishineff massacres is well known, and is possibly a factor in his death.

Matters are not going well with Russia at the seat of war. General Kuropatkin's modest bulletins are interesting and instructive. After an action in which the valour and determination evinced by the Russian troops receive, it is inferred, their due reward, the Russian Commander for some unexplained, but all sufficient, reason finds it desirable to withdraw his successful troops to a position some distance in the rear of that which they had so ably defended. The last of these strategetic movements occurred at Ta-shi-chiao, and the Japanese now occupy the town. It is just four years since the Russians thought fit to occupy the treaty port of Neu-Chiang and completely usurped the functions of the local authorities. To-day the Japanese are in possession, and a new order of things is established, the advantages of which will soon be manifest.

Various items. The last performance has taken place in the Surrey Theatre, which for over a century has been the home of melodrama on the south side of the river. The old building was filled to overflowing, and at the close of the performance, the lessee, Mr. George Conquest, expressed the regret with which he was closing the doors of the old Surrey in consequence of the conditions the L.C.C. sought to impose on him, which would reduce the seating accommodation of the theatre by one half. Private Perry, of the Canadian Rifle team and the winner of the King's Prize, is to be congratulated. For the second time the chief prize goes to the Dominion. Private Hayhurst having won it in 1895. The Bisley Meeting of this year is noticeable for the success of Britons from Beyond the Seas. The gold medal goes to Canada; the silver medal has been won by a Missionary from India; New Zealand takes the Kholapore Cup, and Natal the Mappin Prize, while the St. George's goes to Nova Scotia. It is to be hoped that next year the Australian Commonwealth will be in less parsimonious mood and will incur the expense of sending a team to Bisley. Mr. Scholes, the winner of the Diamond Sculls at Henley, had a triumphant reception on his return to Toronto, where the Mayor presented him on behalf of the city with a magnificent service of tableware. The Recorder in charging the grand jury at the Old Bailey on Monday referred to the charges against private detectives in connection with the Pollard divorce case, and advised them to return true bills against each of the defendants, to the end that the case might be fully investigated before a petty jury. The Recorder opined that, judging from the number of private detective agencies existing in London, the business of "shadowing" people for divorce proceedings must be extremely lucrative. In consequence of an application before Mr. Justice Ridley, it has been arranged that the case shall stand over until the October Sessions, in the event of a true bill being found; the recognisance of the defendants being considerably enlarged meanwhile. Carter, who is accused of having stolen some of the Nelson relics from Greenwich, has been charged before the Recorder and pleaded not guilty. The case was postponed until the next Sessions in the hope that some evidence respecting the rest of the missing property may be forthcoming, Carter kindly promising meanwhile to consider whether he will help the police by divulging further particulars of the theft.

A new species of flying machine has been devised by the inventor of the Holland Submarine. The new invention takes the simple form of a double set of wings, to be attached to the person of the would-be aërial traveller, who will thereby go like a bird. Does the Nonconformist Conscience (a very big C. please, Mr. Editor) inculcate passive resistance to the bonds of matrimony? The L.C.C. statistics just published tell us that of the people married in London last year only four and a half per cent. were Nonconformists. The Thames Conservancy Board had before them at their last meeting the report of their Upper River Committee with reference to complaints of the disorderly conduct of persons on board the large launches either let to parties or plying for hire, and it is satisfactory to know that the Secretary has been instructed to call the attention of owners of launches for hire to said complaints, and request their assistance in checking the annoyance, which is undoubtedly a serious and increasing one. Mr. Herbert Campbell was buried at Abney Park last Friday. There was a large gathering of the music hall and theatrical profession, and the number and beauty of the wreaths was unusual. Had it not been for his long connection with Drury Lane pantomime Mr. Camphell's name would hardly have been known to West End theatre-goers. As it was, it was a familiar name under Sir Augustus Harris's management. Justice was tempered with mercy in the sentence Mr Justice Bray passed on Mr. George Marshall for appropriating £19,000 belonging to the Duke of Newcastle for whom he acted as agent. The crime was aggravated by the story of the hotel robbery of the missing notes, and the sentence of five years' penal servitude cannot be said to be excessive, even when the age and position of the prisoner are taken into consideration.

The prizegiving to the Worcester cadets by the Prince and Princes of Wales was a pleasant function, carried out in perfect weather. The Prince in his speech reminded the cadets that Admiral Togo, whose fame as a Naval Commander stands so high just now, served for eighteen months on board the Worcester. A Silver Cup, the gift of a hundred and seventy-eight of his colleagues, has been presented to Mr. Spencer Charrington in commemoration of the twenty-five hours sitting of the House of Commons, 19th to 20th July, when he, at the age of eighty-six, voted in nineteen divisions and remained in attendence until the rising of the House. An example which many of his party would do well to follow—even at a distance. Mr. Swift Macneill's tender heart is still concerned about the caning of lads in the Navy and his last question is as to whether they are informed before they join what they may expect. Mr. Pretyman, with his Eton recollections fresh upon him, heartlessly responded that "all boys expect to be caned."

ASSAM'S MID-MOUNTAIN RANGE.

THE diversion of traffic from old roads to the new routes opened by the railways in these hills is already beginning to have effect in emboldling game to approach nearer the former partially deserted ones, and as these ancient tracks wind round about and through isolated woods, the sportsman will find what he is in quest of without having to go so far from the beaten track as formerly, at least in the hills, although matters are different down in the plains; deer especially appreciating the more open spots, where they can look well round, so baffling their prowling enemies. Villages again are being drawn towards the fresh lines of communications, the patches of old cultivation thus abandoned, with the light second growth forming snug quarters for all sorts of animals to lie perdue in. Were it possible to stop grass firing there would be no finer stalking grounds, while the valleys intersecting them, have fine open glades of waist high grass, interspersed with moss covered outcrops of quartz and sandstone rock, in the crevices of which the botanist may revel in the wealth of pitcher plants, anœstochitis, C. crystdo and other ground orchids. Many of these ravines are traversed by built stone causeways from which the hunter can sweep extensive fields with his binocular, though it is almost needless to say he must, in such an exposed position, be pretty circumspect in his movements, for in the clear mountain atmosphere animals can see immense distances, the human form being instantly detected where gesticulation out of the ordinary is indulged in. On the other hand, the sportsman, in addition to an extensive field for observation, can use the numberless cromlechs that are grouped about as coigns of vantage for approaching his quarry, all wild beasts hereabouts being accustomed to these heavy monuments.

Although sambhur and other larger animals seldom come up into these valleys until the monsoon is about due, the short grass, much resembling that known as sabi in the Central Provinces, gives cover to the pretty little mouse and hog deer, although I am in doubt as to classifying the creatures found with either. He or she, then, stands about eighteen inches shoulder height, a true deer of dark chocolate color, white belly with tiny six-tined horns; it is neither spotted or striped as the true mouse generally is. It lies close if no great noise is made in wading through the grass, and when roused runs off in a zigzag manner, necessitating considerable skill to secure it with ball, success being better assured with buckshot. The good snapshot hunter gets his chance with bullet now and again, as these little chaps bound high in the air when encountering a fallen log or other obstacle, frequently also, when obtaining what they deem a safe distance, springing onto a rock and looking round as if to ascertain the cause of disturbance. As a torrent, great or small, tumbles through every ravine, the sides of it should be adhered to when after this game, but if the field proves blank, one may make pretty certain that dholes are about, but so close do these skulking brutes lie that one may pass through a pack without being aware of their presence.

Should there be a village in the glen the hunter may just as likely as not drop on a leopard, for large herds of goats are kept, proving an inducement for the spotted beauty to remain in the small woods all the year round. Tiger are seldom seen in the spring, though more to the westward, where cattle supplant the buckri, he also lurks; it is just as well therefore to be provided with ball cartridge in case of an encounter with one or the other. Except on the Assam side hares are rarely seen, and then only when the valley opens direct into the plains; birds also mostly remain in the lowlands till later in the season, but on a short trip from the village of Jarain, some eleven miles south of the Iaai subdivision, to Nong-Krem, a two days' journey, I got six of the small deer, sighted three black bears, securing half a dozen bronzewing pigeons without diverging from the path in the least—the Mungat Valley adding to the bag three others and a couple of bamboo partridge in the Dingling, next day. Quite sufficient to confirm the certainty that a sojourn of a week in either would well repay the sportsman of moderate aspirations.

The scenery is something to be remembered, especially looking down from Jarain, as the spurs jutting out from the main ranges are well wooded half way up, contrasting with the rugged red and grey rocks above them; while the bottom of the glen is a mass of bright green verdure, the torrents rushing down the centre in a series of cascades, eventually whirling round a most romantic promontory into the Sylhet plains at a village called Darrung. Other birds there were in the timber, but being pressed for time there was none to spare in beating, though many feathers of the polyplectron were come upon in the undergrowth of the woods. My men, all from Jarain, informed me that in the rains all deer and many (massoi) metna seek refuge in the Mungat from the flooded terai. And as this tallies with what the people in and about the Lakat Bazar aver as to the migration of the animals found in their neighbourhood in the cold weather, this ground, to which attention has never been drawn before, should prove a grand one for exploration, either in the hot weather, or just before the end of the rains in late September. One or more of those small waterproof tents, weighing but 40lbs., would be necessary in the latter month.

In the Dingling there may be some fishing, but in the other torrent I could see nothing. Black squirrel seemed plentiful enough, while the pied dyal, the hoopoo and several of the prettily plumaged little birds figured by Goodwin Austen appear to find a home in these glens. At the eastern end of the Dingling good goggles would prove of service, for the glint off the pure crystal rocks gets absolutely painful when one is outside the sheltering timber. Even the people of the country in traversing the place protect their eyes with a shade improvised from dock or plantain leaves. The whole of May might be divided between these two glens, and he who found such a sojourn monotonous would be a hard one to please, for the artist, geologist, botanist, sportsman, or one requiring a rest from business cares could each and all find occupation or relaxation. These places are but the type of many in these hills, and as the country is now being opened up such should receive the patronage of those in search of fresh fields and pastures new. Nongkrem is but nine miles S.-E. of Shillong, if the tourist wishes to try the trip the other way round, and he can either return the same way to the station or get down from Jarain to the plains at Janitiapur thence to Sylhet.

SYNTENG.

Having vainly attempted to disperse the crowd around one of the bald men in Paris who hire out their bare scalps for advertisement purposes, an ingenious policeman walked up to him and said: "Are you stamped?" "I don't understant the joke," replied the man.

Thereupon the policeman examined his head carefully, and telling him he would soon show him it was no joke, arrested him, says the "Figaro," on the charge of being an unlicensed advertisement to which the official stamp had not been affixed as required by French law.

Fishing.

THE KUMAON LAKES IN 1904.

The habits of the Mahseer in these beautiful Tals have altered so much during the past few years, that sportsmen who visit Bhim Tal in the expectation of enjoying fair fly fishing, are likely to be sadly disappointed.

The salient features of these hill lakes are clear water and rocky shores; numerous trees close to, often indeed actually overhanging the crystal water, and last, owing to the protecting hills, a general absence of strong breezes. The above conditions are all eminently favourable to surface feeding; and as there is seldom wind to blow insects far those flies which fall into the water, do so close to the edges. This is the reason why the fly fisherman in the Kumaon Tals casts his fly close to the shore.

As nearly all the surface food is found along the edges of the lakes, it follows that if the Mahseer are so harried as to make them distrustful of venturing into shallow water during the day time, they will eventually give up feeding at the surface, except just at dusk.

This is what has actually occcured, Bhim Tal and Nankuchia Tal have been tremendously over-fished. Natives by dozens have been wont to sit along the rocky shores of the former lake and in order to economize ground-bait, throw in stones in the belief that it attracts the fish. Numerous boats circle round the banks, while the occupants wildly flourish lengthy ringols, and DREAM they are fly-fishing.

What have been the consequences? Now no self-respecting Mahseer in Bhim Tal ever goes near the shore until it is dusk. The stopping of all atta fishing, which is to come into force next year is not sufficient remedy; for in Nankuchia Tal where bottom fishing is already prohibited, the fishing is likewise poor. Continual fly fishing, especially by poor performers, also deteriorates the fishing. I have observed that the little hill Barils swarm in Bhim Tal in spite of the Mahseer. I would, therefore, suggest that the big Indian trout (Barilios Bola) be introduced into the Kumaon Lakes, and given a thorough trial. If these excellent fish could be thoroughly established, the fly-fishing would be immensely improved. Also why should not Rohu be introduced, they would not interfere with the Mahseer and would improve the bottom fishing. The licence to fish is at present two rupees a month for each lake. This simply encourages natives to fish for the market, as Mahseer fetch six annas a pound in Naini Tal. A clever fisherman could readily make thirty or forty rupees a month.

I would propose that the rate be raised to fifteen rupees a month, but this sum to make one free of the three lakes Bhim Tal, Nankuchia, and Sath Tal.

Atta fishing to be permitted on the island in Bhim Tal, and for two hundred and fifty yards along the bank on the Dâk bungalow side. Limits to be marked with posts.

Also to be permitted in Nankuchia Tal, but not in Sath Tal. (In Nankuchia there are so few places for atta fishing that it can do no harm.)

Throwing of stones into the water to be strictly prohibited. British non-commissioned officers and soldiers to be allowed to bottom or fly fish free in Bhim Tal within the prescribed limits, and in Nankuchia, but only to fly fish in Sath Tal.

Fish, under a certain length, say 11 inches, to be returned: anglers to have this length marked on their rods.

Barilius Bola and various Labeo and Cirrhina to be introduced and given a thorough trial.

A Fishery Inspector with a thorough knowledge of the subject, to be put in charge for a few years until the lakes have been got into a satisfactory condition.

All boats on the lakes to be Government ones, and shikaris to be licenced and to wear badges.

The fish in Bhim Tal still take atta well, and there is no difficulty with this bait in making good bags.

I examined into the methods of the professional native fishermen, and soon found that certain alterations and refinements in tackle resulted in enormously increased bags: as, however, atta fishing is to be stopped, it is superfluous to describe my little improvements; nor perhaps would it be advisable to let out dodges which might assist the native fishermen who supply the Naini Tal market. Instead of that I will describe a really sporting method of fly-fishing at dusk, which will still bring fish to bag from these persecuted lakes. The fishing should be from the shore, and the angler should wear tennis shoes so as to move as quietly as possible. Just at dusk the Mahseer come to the edges to feed on flies and beetles which fall in numbers on the water. The fisherman's tackle should consist of a tapered fly cast, the gut at the point being as fine as he cares to use. At the end of the cast is a tiny double hook. The angler should provide himself with a bottle of beetles, flies, grasshoppers, etc. The little double hook is inserted between the shoulders of the insect, and it is cast like a fly, any fair fly fisher can throw the natural fly after a few minutes practice. At dusk the Masheer take a live fly boldly, and if they miss it will rise again and again, until a good shot is made. This is infinitely better sport that the poaching dodge of using a white cotton fly with a thick cast from a boat. This latter is a poaching dodge; there is no skill in it, and one does not even see the fish rise; the fly is taken under water. I am sorry to say that most of the fish said to have been caught with a fly in the Kumaon lakes, are really poached in the dark with this white cotton invention. I ask any true angler, can throwing a short line with a big white fly towards the shore, and drawing it towards one under water, the whole operation being performed in pitch darkness, be dignified by the name of fly-fishing? This is a method of getting fish which I should like to see sternly prohibited.

Using the live fly at dusk, I frequently got good fish; my best taken in Nankuchia was just under three pounds. The tales of large fish in the Kumaon lakes must be received cum grano: the best Mahseer taken during the month I was at Bhim Tal, was a five and a half pounder caught by a fisherman staying in the Dâk bungalow, with atta off the island. My own two best (also from the island, with atta) were three pounds each The average weight of an adult Mahseer in Bhim Tal is one and three quarters to two and a half pounds Very few fish reach three pounds, and still fewer exceed that weight.

A REAL GOOD COUNTRY-BRED.

THE EDITOR OF "THE INDIAN FIELD."

SIR,—Seeing your correspondent J. B.'s querry as to country-breds and the Viceroy's Cup I may remark I ran a country-bred horse named Tangri in 1890 or 1891 for the Ceylon Turf Club Plate against several good horses, Australian and English, distance 2 miles and won the same to the surprise of most sportsmen. If you refer to the records you will find weight and runners up.

H. DRUMMOND DEANE.

PRESENTATION TO MR. D. COATS NIVEN.

On Saturday, the 6th instant, an interesting meeting took place at the Town Offices of the Oriental Gas Company, No. 25, Chowringhee (Calcutta), when the staff and workmen met to take farewell from Mr. D. Coats Niven, who some time ago relinquished the post of Engineer and Manager to the Gas Company after 21 years' service. It being impossible under the special exigencies of the Company's operation for all the staff to be present, the several departments sent their delegates as well as the senior members of the clerical staff.

Mr. J. C. Watson, the present Engineer and General Manager of the Company in giving expression to the feelings of those present referred to the long connection of Mr. D. Coats Niven with the Oriental Gas Company, and also Mr. Niven's many acts of generosity to the staff and workmen as well as outside cases of distress to which he ever lent a willing ear. Severances were always painful, but one thing was certain, Mr. Niven's thoughts and sympathies would always be with India, where so many years of his life had been spent. So far his work was finished, but in the old country his thoughts would revert to Calcutta and no one would begrudge the well-earned years of repose to which Mr. Niven was now looking forward. Those present would often reflect upon the acts of kindness of their long time friend, Mr. Niven, with whom they had been so closely associated. Although long delayed owing to the severe illness of the recipient he had the greatest pleasure in presenting to Mr. Niven on behalf of the staff and workmen, an illuminated and framed address, together with a gold watch and chain as a token of their respect with best wishes for his future happiness and welfare. It was not so much the value of the gift but the unanimity with which the idea of the testimonial was taken up and the readiness with which the collection was made by all concerned. Mr. Niven had always displayed a tendency to give rather than to receive, and his natural modesty had ever been shown on this occasion, for so soon as it was intimated that it was their wish to present him with some token of their regard, he first reluctantly, and afterwards gracefully, consented to accept the sign of their good-will. Mr. Watson on behalf of them assembled wished Mr. Niven all health and prosperity and trusted the gift presented to him would always call up pleasant recollections of Calcutta. (Applause.)

Mr. Niven in reply said he was touched by the kind remarks that had been made, and assured those present that he would not easily forget their good wishes. Some time ago the Directors of the Company gave him a handsome inkstand with a cheque which he highly valued as a token of their esteem, and this in conjunction with the valuable gifts now presented to him would make every thing complete. He was very pleased to know that Mr. Watson had succeeded him, and he knew of no one better fitted or more capable of carrying out the work entrusted to him. He had known Mr. Watson for over seven years, and had always found him a very excellent co-adjutor and he knew the best interests of the Company were in safe hands. He asked all to support Mr. Watson to the best of their ability, and to strengthen his hands in every possible way. As a shareholder he would always watch the progress of the Company and would always be pleased to hear of their prosperity. Already he could see signs of advances in all directions and would ever be on the watch to hear of the Company's success. He took leave of them all with regret; but it was unavoidable, as naturally, in the course of time, the older men had to give place to the younger, and it was only right it should be so. Continuity of management was the correct course, and Mr. Watson by understanding the business was able to take full charge without unnecessary dislocation and trouble. He was soon leaving India and would carry with him the presents they had so generously given him, and would always value them and the spirit in which they had been offered. Hearty applause followed, and the meeting separated.

Second Meeting, Saturday, 13th August 1904.

The racing this afternoon was marred by the wretched weather. The rain came down in torrents before the races and there were showers at intervals during the rest of the afternoon. The going was, of course, very heavy, the hurdle track being for the most part under water. Fields ruled small, the Fort Plate and the Pony Hurdles being the only two races in which place money could be obtained for the third horse. There was a large attendance in spite of the inclement weather, and the public were rewarded with an interesting afternoon's sport. Proceedings opened with the Fort Plate, for which Second Thought was the tip and, though carrying top weight, she won easily. The Pony Hurdles was considered a gift for Shylock at the weights, and Mr. Rodocanachi's horse made no mistake, winning comfortably by two lengths. Kittylea went out an odds on favourite in the August Plate and coming through, had no trouble in beating her field. The Hunters' Plate brought out five, of whom Planet II. was considered a good thing. Sylvia fell at the fourth hurdle, and Blue Bell, who had been in front the whole journey, romped home. An objection against the winner for going the wrong side of the first flag at the top bend was upheld and the race given to Odin. There was nothing in it for the Monsoon Plate but Clynder, and she might have won had her rider not committed an error of judgment and overlooked the well known racing axiom that the finish of a race is not the place where one can ease one's mount and expect to set her going again when she is collared. The last race provided another big upset. Thunder Cloud was most fancied, but could not do better than fourth, Euryalus coming away at the finish securing the verdict by a length and a half. The Totalisator paid Rs. 230 on this win ! Details :—

THE PONY PLATE.—Rs. 500 to the winner, Rs. 100 to the second, and Rs. 50 to the third. A High-weight Handicap for Arabs and C.-B.'s 14-2, and other ponies 14-1 and under. 6 furlongs.

THE BANGALORE RACES.

FIRST EXTRA DAY.

Saturday, 13th August 1904.

SOME good sport was witnessed at the first extra day's racing in Bangalore. Fields were quite fair and finishes sometimes close. Musketeer won his race in great style and will win in better company than he met here. The attendance was very moderate, evidence of the rapidly waning Bangalore season, but the weather was pleasant and the afternoon's sport was altogether a success. Details:—

THE DESERT PLATE.—Rs. 150, of which the second pony will receive Rs. 25. For Arab ponies. Weights—Handicap. 5 furlongs.

Capt. A. S. Toogood's g a g St. Gris, 9st. 6lbs. ... ... Meah Jan 1
Mr. S. W. Webster's b a g Derision, 9st. 10lbs. ... ... Col. Armstrong 2

Mr. R. Neave's br a h Mintmaster, 8st. 12lbs. Owner 0
Mr. Jacob Sait's g a h Jacob, 6st. 10lbs. ... Gooloo 0

BETTING: 6 to 4 on St. Gris, evens Diamond Rose, 4 to 1 Derision, 10 to 1 Mintmaster, and 20 to 1 Jacob.

Derision got away after one false start, and led from St. Gris and Diamond Rose until the distance. Here St. Gris challenged and getting the best of a good finish won by half a length: a length and a half between second and third. Time—1min. 12⅗secs.

THE LOWER PLATE.—Rs. 150, of which the second horse will receive Rs. 25. For horses that have never fetched more than Rs. 1,000. Weights—Handicap. 5 furlongs.

The Hon. Mr. A. A. Apcar's br aus m Sister, 9st. 10lbs. ... ... Burns 1

Mr. R. Anketell; Jones' ch aus g Grand Duke, 9st. ... ... — Meah Jan 0
Mr. A. C. Tate's g aus g Wadhurst, 8st. 6lbs. Gooloo 0

BETTING: 2 to 1 on Sister, 4 to 1 each agst. Grand Duke, Scissorman, and Firecat, and 6 to 1 Wadhurst.

After a considerable delay Sister jumped away with a clear lead of Scissorman, the latter being well in front of Wadhurst. Mr. Apcar's mare rapidly left her field and won with consummate ease by three lengths from Scissorman, the latter being the same distance in front of Firecat who beat Wadhurst for third place on the post. Time—1min. 6⅘secs.

THE STAND PLATE.—Rs. 150, of which the second pony will receive Rs. 25. For ponies Weights—Handicap. ¼ mile.

Major N. M. Smyth's b e g Laurier Rose, 8st. 4lbs. ... ... Koops 1

Major A. C. Hamilton's ch e h Astrologer, 9st. 2lbs. ... ... Thompson 0
Mr. R. Anketell-Jones' ch aus g Tight Rope, 7st. 8lbs. ... ... Bennett 0

BETTING: Evens Swiveller, 3 to 1 agst. Tight Rope, 4 to 1 each Firebrand, Dandenong, and Laurier Rose, 6 to 1 Shield, and 10 to 1 Astrologer.

Laurier Rose got the best of a fair start, with the rest close together. When fairly in the straight Shield improved his position and Firebrand also came through. The favourite was early beaten and Laurier Rose won comfortably by a length and-a-half; half a length between second and third. Time—51⅘secs.

THE BANGALORE PLATE.—Rs 150, of which the second horse will receive Rs,25. For horses. Weights—Handicap. 7 furlongs

Mr. D. Devaraj Urs' br aus g Musketeer, 7st. 12lbs. ... ... Meah Jan 1

The Hon. Mr. A. A. Apcar's b e g Simon, 10st. 3lbs. ... ... Burns 3
Major F. C. Logan-Home's ch aus g Kingfisher, 6st. 10lbs. ... ... Bennett 0

BETTING: 2 to 1 on Musketeer, 3 to 1 each agst. De Wet and Simon, and 4 to 1 Kingfisher.

Musketeer quickly established a clear lead from Kingfisher with De Wet next and Simon last. Coming round the turn for home Simon momentarily improved his position, but the weight told and he died away in the straight. Musketeer won without being challenged by a length from De Wet, the other two finishing almost together about four lengths further back. Time—1min. 35secs.

THE POLO SCURRY.—Rs. 150, of which the second pony will receive Rs. 25. For bonâ-fide Arab polo ponies. Weights—Handicap. 3 furlongs.

The Hon. Mr. A. Thellusson's g a h Charley II., 9st. 8lbs. ... . Capt. Randall 1

Mr. T. G. Strickland's ch a h Baronet, 10st. 13lbs. ... ... Mr. P. L. Reeves 3
Lieut.-Col. J. Desaraj Urs' b a h Delight, 12st. 7lbs. ... ... Major Dougall 0
Captain E. G. R. Peel's b a h Bayleaf 11st. 4lbs. ... ... Owner 0

BETTING: 5 to 2 on Charley II., 4 to 1 each Delight, Bayleaf, and Squib, and 10 to 4 Baronet.

After Baronet had run the course once in a false start, the lot got fairly well away and a great race resulted in the favourite getting up in the last stride and dead-heating with Squib, Baronet being a length and-a-half behind the dead-heaters.

In the run-off the betting was 3 to 1 on Charley II. who won easily by two lengths.

WELLINGTON GYMKHANA RACES.

Tuesday, 6th August 1904.

THE Gymkhana Race Meeting organised by the officers of the 1st Durham Light Infantry and Depôt details came off at Wellington to-day, under favourable condition. The weather was simply delightful, cool, and pleasant throughout the evening the card presented six races, all drew fair fields and some excellent sport was witnessed. Major Nason, D. S. O., Commandant of the Depôt, Captain Toogood, Cantonment Magistrate, Captain Northey, D. S. O., of the 1st Durham Light Infantry, and Mr. Shrief were the stewards, while Major Elwes was the starter, Captain Northey, judge, and Mr. Freel, clerk of the scales. Quartermaster-Sergeant Garside kept a totalisator and did some good business, while Mr. Mehraban, of Poona, kept a Table of Anchor and Crown, which was well patronized by the military element. The fine band of the Regiment, under the baton of Mr. A. Hind, furnished music. Major Buck, Officer Commanding the 1st Durham Light Infantry, was "At Home" on the ground, and the Sergeants and N.-C. O. had their own tents, where they received their friends. Details:—

MADRAS GYMKHANA RACES.

Tuesday, 9th August 1904.

AFTER two postponements on account of the weather, the first of the Gymkhana Race Meetings held during the hot season was brought off to-day on the Island, before a fairly large gathering, the public, other than members of the Gymkhana, being admitted on payment of the very moderate entrance fee of Re. 1, and all had unusual opportunities of backing their fancy, for in addition to the usual Rs. 2 Totalisator there was the unwonted luxury of a bookmaker. The pretty Island Course was looking its best after the recent rains, though the going was a bit heavy, especially at the bend leading into the straight where the flood water lodges. There were no accidents, however, though the timing of the races was a bit on the slow side. It was a favourite's day, the popular fancy coming off in every event. In the Island Cup, Comet and Harkaway were too classy for the rest of the field and too good for Skittle meetings. They swamped all opposition and had the race entirely to themselves; but on the whole a good and interesting afternoon's sport was provided. Appended are details:—

MAIDEN STAKES.—Rs. 39 to the winner and Rs. 10 to the second. For horses that have never won a race. Catch weights over 12 stone. ½ mile.

CALCUTTA COURSE CHAT.

ON Thursday Regan was first out with young Rake, jumping the two pony hurdles in front of the stand, but going out very wide before approaching the third hurdle. With only one beacon in evidence, the course marking here is a little puzzling, and so I should think little Regan found it. However, the remainder of the course was well negotiated, no rapping of hurdles, as on the first go.

Norman from Smallman's next went the course, and as is this pony's wont, put up a real clean bit of work, and he will want all the taking down that's going.

Mr. Raban on his old favourite Naiades, did a nice comfortable school in view of her coming encounter with the redoubtable Kittylea, Belmeath, Road Metal, etc.

Bell Brand (Howie), and Thundercloud had a rattling set to the "Cloud" apparently having it her way this time, and I look for her to improve upon her last rather annoying show.

Hello (Hard), Flash (Toe) from the same stable, put in a fast bit of going.

Mr. Chater had out Western Queen, doing a bright gallop with Not Yet. These ponies seem to be out more for the fun of it than anything else, as two of the meetings will have passed without an entry from Mr. Galstaun's stable.

Road Metal (Johnson), Mirage (native), and Moonlight (Cahill) went out together, but of course came home considerably separated. First the black, going freely, then the pony Mirage, whipped in by Cahill on the country-bred. The gallop was a mix up, without the possibility of a deduction.

Mr. Galstaun did a characteristic bit of work on Clynder, accompanied by a chestnut from Mr. Dass' string.

Hard had out Fusilier and Mademoiselle and W White went by on Calm.

Mr. Dudley went by to quick time on Planet, accompanied by Belmeath, and Bob was trotted by.

Second Thought (Mr. Galstaun) put up a smart five furlongs along with Walker on Reinzette, and Hard slipped Sylvia over a short course.

Maid of Kent (Mr. Wilmot) and Odin put in a useful bit of work.

Moss Rose (Mr. McCall), and Rezia (Mr. Dudley) went a sprightly three furlongs across the open, followed by Wall on Macedon with Johnson on another.

The trio, Quicksilver (White), Euryalus (Mr. Dudley), and Tadmore (Mr. S. McCall) wound up an interesting morning's work, so far as I saw, with a good dash across the stretch by the tank, of which Mr. Dudley appeared to get the best.

Though racing was on in the afternoon, there was not the usual bustle about things on Saturday morning, the gusty, cyclonic wind that blew, and a threatening sky overhead set many conjecturing as to how the day would pan out, and the work generally put through was more of the pipe-opening order, than anything else.

Most of Mr. Bert Allen's string confined themselves to a trot down the Serpentine, where the frolicsome English mare Natalina, popped Howie over her head.

Hard went a very taking extender across the open on Naiades. In marked contrast, did Macedon go by a few minutes later.

Hard exercised Fusilier, and Flash (Toe) was out a bit later. Mademoiselle had a breather in view of her contract for the afternoon; ditto Thundercloud.

Mr. McCall slipped Moss Rose along on her own, and Mr. Dudley, a little later, paid similar attention to Rezia.

Johnson went very fast on Road Metal. I'm told the black can only get three furlongs, after that he can go no faster than you can kick an old hat, or a man in boots can travel. If he does as well as some men in boots I wot of, he'll not run all his races alone.

W. White was out on Calm, and went by pretty calmly.

Next a cavalcade of new 'uns came along; they looked like a scouting party, or going to a muster or on a cut out job. The sort of thing that takes a bit of riding!

Regan was out on Hello, and Mr. Galstaun went twice round on Not Yet, putting in a fast finish. Clynder, Second Thought, and Reinzette were also worked.

The course being open, there were a number of racing candidates early on the track on Tuesday, but the morning was oppressively close. A sporting match that was to have come off between the Maid of Kent and Mascot over a five furlongs sprint, had, in consequence of the course being shut, to be postponed, just when quite a little gallery had gathered in anticipation of witnessing one of those pleasing little finishes, that our talented G. R.'s not unfrequently furnish us with.

Mr. Bert Allen's and Frank Smallman's strings were early at it. Bell Brand pacing by with Howie up, reminding me somewhat of that gay old deceiver Loch Arden, who, in all probability, has retired on his laurels (?). Bell Brand strides along freely enough by himself, giving one the impression of having the ability to put paid to his account in the near future.

Hard had out Flash, accompanied by Fusilier, a native in the saddle, dusting along a smart five furlongs. Trollop lolloped by, piloted by a native. He does not impress me as likely to do much more than blow, and this he does all right.

Kellnerin (O'Neil), Pylara (native), and Profit (Bloss), went a quick six furlongs, but were giving nothing of their form away, easing up, as they approached the stand. The same may be said of Daffodil, Shylock, and Daphne. Wall, on Macedon, had Pubna for a companion.

Howie shoved Hello along top speed about which there is nothing alarming, and he's not likely to squander any field he elects to take on. W. White raced Florence by in good taking style. Not Yet (Mr. Chater), Rosalea (Cahill), Western Queen (Galstaun) came fast away from the five furlongs, the black mare in command the whole distance, with Western Queen well up.

Miss Beryl (O'Neil), and Blue Bell (Bloss), put in a nice taking gallop; also Walker on Second Thought.

Stelliform went a rapping course over a few flights, in rather ragged form. In sharp contrast was Naiades, with Hard up; the mare jumping like a kangaroo, and getting well away with the running.

Mr. Dudley on Tadmore with two others from Mr. Dass's string, did a gallop, finishing before getting to the stand and then cantered on.

O'Neil had out Footlight. This pony is said to be a flyer, but in the absence of her owner in England, nothing like racing is contemplated till the cold weather. Mr. Galstaun on Clynder after letting Reveille (Walker) go away as he liked, came home in a trot.

Mr. Pugh on March, Cheer Up (Mr. Stewart), and Mr. Maurice Turner on Gauntlet, wound up an interesting morning's work, with a good dingdong go right up the course, from away past the bend.

THE TURF.

WINDSOR JULY.

OF late racegoers have become so accustomed to the hard going that it was indeed an agreeable surprise to find that the enterprising lessees of Windsor, rising superior to all natural difficulties, had provided a track for the meeting, which commenced on the 22nd instant, which afforded really excellent going. For fully three weeks the Messrs. Frail had daily had a pumping engine hard at work pouring a copious supply of water on to the track, and they are to be congratulated on the success which has attended their efforts. The weather was not so oppressively hot as usual, the sky being dappled with masses of fleecy clouds, which acted as a welcome screen between the thirsty earth and the sun, who only blazed through at intervals. The attendance was well up to the average for this meeting, which invariably clashes on the opening day with the concluding stage of Liverpool.

THE ROYAL PLATE of 263sovs. for two-year-olds. Five furlongs.

Mr. de Wend-Fenton's b or br c Vedas, by Florizel II—Agnostic, 9st. 2lbs.	G. McCall	1

(Winner trained by Grewsil.)

BETTING: 9 to 4 agst. Lapsang, 100 to 30 Colcu, 5 to 1 Royston, 6 to 1 Pradella, 100 to 14 Lucinda, and 10 to 1 any other (offered).

Won by a head, with Lapsang third, six lengths away. Pradella was fourth, Usher fifth, Thoas sixth, Wet Paint next, and Royston last.

As was the case thrice previously this week, at Leicester and Liverpool, the last race at Windsor on the 23rd instant fizzled out to a walkover, but runners were numerous in the other five events, and if the racing was of unpretentious character it was as diverting as could be expected. The executive must have been well pleased at the patronage accorded them by the half-holiday element, and the members also attended in strong force, so that Messrs. Frail were amply rewarded for their enterprise in transforming an arid and sun-dried track of ground into a verdant expanse of elastic turf by means of artificial irrigation. The air was close, and heavy thunder clouds brooded above, but the threatened downpour did not materialise.

THE JULY HANDICAP of 350sovs. One mile and a quarter.

Mr. H Escott's b f Hai, by Ayrshire—Melona, 3yrs., 6st. 7lbs.*	Butchers	1

BETTING: 9 to 4 agst. El Maestro, 5 to 2 Honours, 6 to 1 Early Bird, 7 to 1 Felo de Se, 8 to 1 Briar Patch, and 100 to 8 any other.

Won by three parts of a length; a head divided the second and third. Altnabreac was fourth, Lady Jummy colt fifth, El Maestro sixth, Briar Patch seventh, Damosel eight, Honours ninth, and Cherry Club last. Time, by Benson's chronograph. 1min. 2secs.

ASCOT.

Ascot is itself again. The floods of last year, which transformed the course into a treacherous swamp and brought desolation to its beautiful gardens, are forgotten in a feeling of gratitude which we all must share to the elemental god who spared us so much on the 26th instant. Granted that we are not always wont to associate leaden clouds with Ascot week, but, then, an overcast sky has its compensations. A tropical sun in a blue firmament on a June day in the open becomes a little too aggressive, and the result is that the lawns at the back of the grand stand are inconveniently crowded by those who love to bask in the shade of its umbrageous oaks and spreading firs, or seek the sheltered side of the giant rhododendrons which are the pride of the officials. To-day the weather conditions were perfect.

THE GOLD VASE of 760sovs.; weight for age, etc. Two miles.

Switchcap, on the inside, settled down with a slight lead of Prestwick, Imari, Wargrave, Pradella, and Pure Gold, with Thunderbolt, Percussion, Jupiter Pluvius, and Roe O'Neill heading the middle division and Beauquemare whipping-in, to the turn out of the straight, where Prestwick went on well clear of Switchcap, Pradella, Imari, and Pure Gold, Beauquemare being still last, behind Florinda and Love Game. As they swung into the Swinley Bottom, Imari took second place, with Love Game, Sandboy, Pure Gold, and Pradella next in advance of Thunderbolt, till about half a mile from home, where Pradella joined Prestwick, and the pair cut out the work from Imari, Pure Gold, Thunderbolt, and Merry Andrew. Turning into the straight, Prestwick dropped back beaten, and Pradella came on from Pure Gold, Merry Andrew, and Prestwick, but she was passed below the distance by Merry Andrew, who won easily by half a length; six lengths between second and third. Prestwick was fourth, Jupiter Pluvius fifth, Sandboy sixth, Roe O'Neil seventh, Wargrave eighth, Percussion ninth, Sir Laddo tenth, Bowery eleventh, Florinda twelfth, Imari next, and Switchcap last, except Beaquemare, who figured a long way in the rear throughout. Time, by Benson's chronograph, 3mins. 22⅗sec.

GOODWOOD.

The rain for which trainers and agriculturists had so earnestly prayed throughout the current month was very sparing in its favours on Monday night, and the country folk looked askance at the sunny skies, fearing a continuance of the drought. They were put out of suspense, and it was the turn of racegoers to regard the situation with apprehension when the clouds that hung like a fleecy shroud over Trundle Hill on the 24th instant began to discharge their content about breakfast time. Nor was the visitations of the temporary character that the optimists projected, showers fell at frequent intervals during the afternoon, and the conditions were almost as dismal as they had been a twelvemonth ago. The ladies of the Royal party were unhappily deterred from putting in an appearance, but the King and Prince of Wales honoured the proceedings, and strength of the company exceeded expectations. The going was in grand order, but in point of quality the sport was disappointing.

BETTING: 4 to 1 agst. Hammerkop, 85 to 20 Sandboy, 85 to 20 Hands Down, 8 to 1 Haresfield, 8 to 1 Merry Andrew, 100 to 12 Elba, 10 to 1 Bachelor's Button, 100 to 7 Prince Florizel, 20 to Truefit (offered).

The running was made by Elba from Sandboy. Prince Florizel, Truefitt, and Hands Down, with Hammerkop and Bachelor's Button next, and Haresfield bringing up the rear, for about half a mile, when Bachelor's Button dropped back last behind Hammerkop. So they ran till reappearing into view a mile from home, when Elba was followed by Sandboy and Merry Andrew, these being well clear of Hammerkop, Hands Down, and Haresfield, the whipper-in now being Prince Florizel behind Truefitt, but six furlongs from home Sandboy shot out clear of Merry Andrew, who in turn was three or four lengths in front of Elba, with Haresfield next and, making the remainder of the running, resisted the challenge of Haresfield who took second place below the distance, and won by three parts of a length: four lengths separated the second and third. Hands Down was fourth, Merry Andrew fifth, Prince Florizel sixth, Elba next, and Truefitt last. Time, by Benson's chronograph, 3mins 47secs.

The success of an outdoor social festival like Goodwood is almost wholly dependent on the weather and after the dismal experience of yesterday a fine day for the decision of the Cup was hailed with exultation. The penultimate stage of the gathering is always celebrated as a public holiday and the local folk turned out in unwonted strength a special incentive being forthcoming in the presence of Royalty. The arrival of the King and Queen accompanied by the Prince of Wales, Princess Victoria and the Duke of Sparta and preceded by liveried outriders was the signal for a loyal demonstration, a huge throng of eager sightseers congregating outside the Royal enclosure and cheering themselves hoarse. The conventional attire of Bond Street was again the order of the day amongst the occupants of the enclosures and the scene was sombre compared with that afforded by Trundle Hill in the background, the heights being dotted with pleasure seekers in their brightest costumes. The glory of the July sun remained undimmed throughout a typical midsummer afternoon and a slight improvement was noticeable in the character of the sport.

BETTING: 6 to 4 agst. Chatsworth, 5 to 2 Saltpetre, 11 to 4 William Rufus, 20 to 1 others (offered).

Chatsworth was the first to leave the paddock, and he was followed in the parade by Flor di Cuba, Dark Lantern, and Saltpetre, with William Rufus bringing up the rear. They cantered in the same order, and, the race being started by the flag by permission of the Stewards, there was a break away before the signal was given. Flor di Cuba whipped round and settled down a hundred yards in the rear of Dark Lantern, who showed the way to Saltpetre and William Rufus to the turn out of the straight, when Chatsworth took third place, Flor di Cuba pulled his way into fourth position, and William Rufus dropped into the rear. About a mile from home Flor di Cuba was beaten and dropped back last, and Saltpetre took close order with Dark Lantern, the pair being attended by Chatsworth to the straight, where Saltpetre drew out clear of Chatsworth and Dark Lantern and, making the remainder of the running, won easily by three lengths; four lengths divided the second and third. Dark Lantern, nearly a furlong behind, was fourth, and Flor di Cuba, who knocked down a man who ventured into the course, walked in with the crowd. Time, by Benson's chronograph, 4mins. 57⅗secs.

To-day's card at Goodwood did not look anything like so attractive as that of yesterday, and many who had been present earlier in the week absented themselves.

CRICKET.

SUSSEX vs. SURREY.—Played at Brighton on 21st, 22nd, and 23rd July. Drawn. Although Marlow, for whose benefit this match was played, has seldom represented Sussex of late years, he was one of the most useful men on the side for several seasons, and everybody was pleased that the weather was so good as to induce spectators to go to the match. Ranjitsinhji re-appeared in the Sussex team, but Tate was left out; from the Surrey side Hayes and Lees were absent, Sussex made 391 runs during the day for the loss of only three wickets, but although in the absence of Lees the Surrey bowling was very weak the batting was hardly up to Sussex form. True, C. B. Fry played one of his long innings, and was only batting for three hours and fifty minutes for his 181, while Ranjitsinhji made 93 not out, but there seemed a want of enterprise during the day which made the cricket seem slow. Fry's hits included a six and twenty-one fours. During his partnership with Vine 202 runs were put up for the first wicket in two hours and a half, and by the time that Vine was out there was not much sting left in the bowling. On Friday Ranjitsinhji added 59 to his overnight total; altogether he was at the wickets for three hours and a quarter for his 152. C. L. A. Smith, Newham and Brann all played well, and at lunch time the innings was declared closed. Afterwards Surrey lost six wickets for 213, Baker, Holland, Raphael, and Lord Dalmeny only making 14 runs between them. But Hayward kept in for three hours, and playing delightful cricket all the time, made 106, while Moulder helped him to put on 74 runs for the fourth wicket. At the end of the day Davis hit so hard that he made his 47 not out in a little over half an hour. When the game was resumed on Saturday Surrey, with four wickets in hand, still required 217 runs to save the follow on, so that their position was not very satisfactory. So well did Killick bowl on Saturday morning that he took the remaining six wickets for 32, and Surrey being 334 runs behind, of course had to follow on. Baker was caught in the slips in Relf's first over, and then Holland and Hayward made a splendid stand. At lunch time they were still together with the score at 137, and almost immediately after lunch Hayward reached his hundred for the second time in the match. He did not survive much longer, and fell with the total at 167, of which he claimed 112. He played a most attractive innings, and was batting for only an hour and forty minutes. His first 43 were made out of 50 in three quarters of an hour, Holland also played a great game, and Moulder did well, but at half-past four o'clock there still remained more than a hundred runs to be knocked off before Sussex could be put in again. At this critical time Raphael and Lord Dalmeny played a most plucky game, and increased the score from 225 to 301 before they were parted, and their stand was simply invaluable. Raphael kept up his wicket for two hours and a half. Both men were dismissed before Surrey was quite safe, and there was still a possibility that Sussex might win. But Nice and Steadman proved equal to the occasion, and the match was drawn.

WARWICKSHIRE vs. HAMPSHIRE.—Played at Edgbaston on 21st, 22nd and 23rd July. Warwickshire won by an innings and 154 runs. Major Poore has not been long in showing that he can make runs despite his long absence from first class cricket. He was batting for two hours against Warwickshire on the first day of the match, and although in that time he only made 52, he was evidently beginning to feel at home for some time before he was out, and it is to be hoped that in the course of the next month he will play some brilliant cricket. Hampshire needs his help very badly. Although the wicket was good the Hampshire men were not very successful with the bat, but Evans, Captain Palmer, Bowell and Stone all made useful scores. Warwickshire made 95 for the loss of one wicket before stumps were drawn. Quaife played a splendid innings on Friday, and was at the wickets for four hours and three-quarters, during which he made 193 by beautiful cricket. Several other men did very well indeed, and when stumps were drawn the total was 521 for nine wickets, or 306 runs on. Rain fell heavily on Friday night, and the Hampshire men had to face a most unpleasant situation, for as it was obvious that the wicket would prove very difficult the Warwickshire captain at once declared the innings closed, leaving Hampshire to make 306 runs with Hill absent ill. Rain fell twice during the day, but the Hampshire team is nowadays the sport of fortune, and it was not to be expected that sufficient rain would descend and save them from defeat. The batsmen struggled bravely against adversity, but in vain.

LANCASHIRE vs., ESSEX.—Played at Old Trafford on 21st 22nd and 23rd, July. Lancashire won by ten wickets. The wicket in this match was somewhat fiery, and as the Lancashire bowlers were far more capable of making use of it than their opponents, their side had much the best of the game. At the same time luck had no small share in the result, and if Essex had been fortunate instead of unfortunate the Lancashire first innings would have only produced a small total. As it was Lancashire began by losing Maclaren for a single, and then Spooner and Tyldesley made such a valuable stand despite the way in which the ball occasionally got up, that 166 runs were scored for the second wicket in an hour and forty minutes. Tyldesley played very bright and attractive cricket, while Spooner showed great caution and steadiness. After this partnership there was such a change in the fortunes of the game that six wickets were down for 205. Sharp and A. H. Hornby then began a long and productive partnership by demoralising the field by means of short runs; they were together for an hour and three quarters, during which they increased the total by 177 runs. Thus, thanks to four men, Lancashire had a fine total when the innings came to an end. Essex had to bat for less than a quarter of an hour, but they were at sea with the bowling of Kermode and Brearley and lost Fane, Sewell and Keigwin for 26. Heavy rain fell during the night, and the ball kicked more than ever. It was very difficult to make runs against good bowling, and McGahey alone succeeded in scoring over 20 in the first innings. As Essex were 322 runs behind they had to follow on, and when the day's play ended their total in the second innings was 303 for seven wickets, so that they were only 19 runs on. For a time the batsmen could do very little better than in the first innings, and three wickets fell to Brearley for 32 runs. But gradually the wicket was becoming easier, and when it was too late to save their side batsmen had some chance to distinguish themselves. The turning point of the innings came during the partnership of McGahey and Carpenter, who deserve the very greatest credit for putting on 76 runs at a time when the bowlers were in such great form. After their partnership ended the bowlers were becoming a little tired, while the wicket did not help them much, and the Essex men gave an excellent account of themselves Keigwin played a fine defensive innings, and late in the day Freeman batted so finely as to raise great hopes for his future. When stumps were drawn Keigwin was not out 64. On Saturday Essex saved the innings defeat by 5 runs.

SURREY vs. SOMERSETSHIRE.—Played at the Oval on 25th, 26th, and 27th July. Somersetshire won by an innings and 43 runs. There was not much cricket at the Oval on Monday, for owing to rain in the previous night, play did not begin until half-past two, while two showers interrupted the game so much that the available time was only two hours. Somerset had to do without the services of Braund and Poyntz, while there were several changes in the Surrey team, among them being the re-appearance of Abel, who made a brilliant catch at point which disposed of L. C. H. Palairet. After the rain the wicket played a little queerly at first, but gradually became easy, and in the time available for play on the first day, Somerset scored 147 runs for the loss of four wickets, the five men who batted all making over 20 runs. When stumps were drawn Woods was not out 37. On Tuesday, after a downpour on the previous evening, the wicket was soft and easy, and Woods and Martyn made excellent use of their opportunities. While they were together for an hour and a half they increased the total by 121 runs. They both played determined cricket and both made some fine hits. Woods survived until just before lunch, when, after an innings which lasted for nearly three hours, he was l.-b.-w. for a brilliant 123. He took his risks and at times was fortunate, but it was a fine innings and invaluable to his side. He hit two fives and twelve fours. The total was then 308 for seven wickets, and as the pitch was beginning to become difficult, the innings was declared closed, which showed excellent judgment on the part of the Somersetshire captain. Surrey met with disasters very soon. With the total at 10 Hayward was l.-b.-w. and at 13 Hayes was caught at point. Abel and Holland then made a useful stand and meeting with some good luck put on 57 runs in three-quarters of an hour. Three wickets were now down for 70 and at 74 Hayes was out. Sheppard played good innings, but no one else helped Abel, and Surrey had to follow on with arrears of 192 to knock off. This time Abel and Hayward revived memories of the combination which used to be so successful, but when they seemed likely to make a long stand together Hayward was out, with the total at 48. Before another run had been made Hayes was bowled, but the disasters ended here as far as Tuesday's play was concerned. When stumps were drawn the total was 61 for two wickets, Abel not out 26. Yesterday, three more wickets soon fell and half the side were out for 102. Meanwhile Abel had been playing a splendid uphill game, showing all the resourcefulness for which he has been famous for so many years, and he survived until the total was 139, of which he claimed 65. He was batting for two hours and a quarter, and he made a magnificent effort to save a beaten side. After Abel's dismissal the end was not long delayed, and Somersetshire gained a well-deserved victory. In the course of the morning Robson took five wickets for 12 runs. In the first innings of Surrey Hedley bowled exceedingly well.

LANCASHIRE vs. GLOUCESTERSHIRE.—Played on the Aigburth Ground, Liverpool, on 25th, 26th, and 27th July. Lancashire won by an innings and 79 runs. Rain had made the wicket soft and easy on the first day of this match. Play was interrupted for over half an hour by a rainstorm, and at five o'clock was given up for the day, owing to a further downpour. Lancashire scored 222 for the loss of half their wickets. Spooner and Garnett put up 58 for the first wicket, but at 64 two wickets were down. Tyldesley was then joined by Hallows, and before these two men were separated the total was increased by 108 runs. They both found the bowling sufficiently difficult to make them cautious, but they played good cricket. As there was a strong probability that more rain would fall, it seemed that by winning the toss Lancashire had done an excellent thing. The anticipations of heavy rain during the night were realised, and when the game was resumed shortly after twelve the light was bad, but the wicket was not yet very difficult. Sharp and Hornby both played fine cricket, while Findlay made a very useful score, so that Gloucestershire had to face a total which, as the wicket was getting more difficult, semed very large. The first Gloucestershire wicket fell in the first over, and although Spry and Wrathall played well for the second wicket, seven men were out for 78, Thomas and Brownlee then made a stand, but when the innings came to an end Gloucestershire were 221 runs behind. In the follow on they lost three wickets for 99, Thomas playing a fine defensive game for an hour and a half; he was not out 46. Yesterday three wickets fell in a few minutes, and at the end of an hour Lancashire were easily victorious.

ATHLETICS.

OXFORD AND CAMBRIDGE vs. HARVARD AND YALE.—America won the rubber and that, too, in no uncertain manner, at the Queen's Club on Saturday afternoon. It was the third meeting for athletic supremacy between the representatives of Oxford and Cambridge and Harvard and Yale and our friends from across the Atlantic came through with flying colours to the extent of six events to three. There was no fluke or luck attached to the victory, either. England might, perhaps, with the exercise of a little more judgment, have secured another race, but this would have made no difference to the actual result, and the young gentlemen from the other side of the water deserve all the credit one can give them for the brilliant all-round form they displayed and for the way in which they avenged the defeat inflicted by the Blues on the same ground five years ago. It was on 22nd July 1899, that Oxford and Cambridge beat Harvard and Yale at Queen's Club by five events to four. At Berkley Oval, New York, on 25th September 1901, the Americans made the score even by defeating the Englishmen by six events to three, and now they have, as stated, clinched the business and established their superiority beyond all doubt by making an aggregate for the three meetings of 16 events to 11. Although some very fine things were done on Saturday, the meeting suffered when compared with that of five years back. The weather was dull and uninviting and the attendance though good—something like 6,000—not up to the standard of that seen in 1899. His Majesty the King, who it was hoped would again honour the proceedings, was not present, while the last day at Bisley accounted no doubt for the absence of many who would otherwise have found their way to the enclosure at West Kensington. As crowds go now-a-days at athletics it was a goodly gathering, and, needless to say, representative to a degree. Americans were much in evidence, located chiefly in the grand stand near the members' entrance, and from here came the chant of victory at each success gained by the visitors.

ONE HUNDRED YARDS.

W. A. Schick, jun., Harvard 1
R. W. Barclay, Trinity College, Cambridge, and Private School 2
D. J. Torrey, Yale 3
H. H. Chipman, Trinity College, Oxford, and Malvern ... 4

The positions from the stand were Barclay, Torrey, Chipman, and Schick, jun. After the usual preliminary canters Wilkinson fired the men away. Barclay was the quickest off the mark, but Schick was soon in his stride, and before twenty yards had been covered he was level with the Cantab, who in turn was hotly pressed by Torrey, Chipman being last. At half distance the order was Schick, Barclay, Torrey, and Chipman. At this stage the Harvard captain looked from the Press seats to be about a yard in front. A score further on the order was unaltered. Schick improved his position, and finishing in grand fashion, won by three yards, although the official verdict made it a yard and a half. Barclay beat Torrey by a foot only, the latter defeating Chipman by a yard and a half. Time, 9⅘secs., which equals A. F. Duffey's British record of 20th July 1901. The figures were greeted with loud applause, and Schick, who had been indisposed on Friday night, was warmly congratulated on all hands.

A. R. Welsh, Trinity College, Cambridge, and Rugby ... 3
C. B. Alcott, Yale 0
C. D. Hill, Yale 0

Acting under orders Welsh started to cut out the work, closely followed by Gregson, Alcott, and Henderson-Hamilton, with Hill bringing up the rear. When 500 yards had been covered, Gregson went up to the leader and completed the first lap just clear of Welsh, while Henderson-Hamilton had deprived Alcott of third place. Hill being some distance behind his fellow collegian. The Oxonian, who was striding out in beautiful style, now quickened and passed Welsh just before half a mile had been covered, the Yale pair being quite outpaced. Gregson continued to show the way and entered up on the last circuit with a lead of ten yards. Drawing steadily away from the Dark Blue and Welsh, with Alcott toiling hopelessly in the rear, the Cambridge President, amid very hearty cheers, sailed home in fine style a winner by fully twenty yards; forty yards divided second and third, and eighty yards separated third and fourth. In this event Leader was disappointing, as although jumping just over 6ft. in practice he now failed to get beyond 5ft 10⅛ins. His partner, Doorly, however, improved on his previous work to the extent of tieing with the Cambridge first string. Victor, jumping with the half turning movement in the air common to Americans, cleared 5ft. 11ins., 6ft. and subsequently 6ft. 0⅛in. He made several attempts to add an additional inch but was not successful.

H. E. Holding, Oriel College, Oxford, and Tonbridge ... 1
K. Cornwallis, University College, Oxford and Haileybury 2
H. B. Young, Harvard 3
R. R. Parsons, Yale 4

This produced a very fine struggle between the Dark Blue couple. From the crack of the pistol, Holding commenced to make the running at a slow pace from Cornwallis and Young, with Parsons last. At the quarter Holding was about five yards to the good, with neither of the Americans appearing at all dangerous. Thus they ran until nearly two hundred yards from the tape, when Cornwallis put on a fine sprint, cut down Holding, and entered the finishing straight some two yards ahead. But Holding was not done with. He hung on to Cornwallis with amazing tenacity, and it soon became evident that the pair would make a great race of it. The battled desperately for every foot, but with Cornwallis faltering ever so slightly thirty yards from the post, Holding drew level in another ten yards. Running on splendidly, the old Tonbridge boy achieved a remarkable success by two feet; fifteen yards divided second and third, Parsons, from whom much had been expected, being badly beaten off. QUARTER MILE.

E. J. Dives, Harvard 2
R. W. Barclay, Trinity College, Cambridge, and Private ... 3
C. B. Long, Yale 1
T. B. Wilson, Pembroke College, Cambridge and Charterhouse 4

This was the race of the afternoon. Neither team was exactly confident as to the issue, and of the four men probably Barclay was slightly the favourite. Long and Dives were very evenly matched, having beaten each other in turn. Barclay had the inside station with Long and Wilson next, Dives being on the outside. It was a stiff battle all the way. At the start Barclay led Long by about a yard for the first hundred, then rounding the first corner very smartly the Yale man just forced his head in front, but a superb effort on the part of the Cantab enabled him to regain command. The pair ran neck and neck for a time, but Barclay was first to round the corner into the home straight. Instead of keeping his berth he now swerved into the middle of the track, but though manifestly tiring kept on with magnificent pluck. Loud cries went up for Barclay, who was still fighting out every inch with Long. However, all unperceived, Dives crept up on the inside, and twenty yards from the post shot past both, reaching the tape two feet ahead of Barclay who beat Long by a similar margin. Time—49⅕secs.

THROWING THE HAMMER (16lbs.)

M. Spicer, Trinity Hall, Cambridge, and Ley's School, 111ft. 7ins. 3
B. M. Tomlinson, University College, Oxford and Wellington, 101ft. 7⅕ins. 4

Each competitor had four throws. Shevlin recorded 152ft. 8ins., 148ft. 11⅕ins., 150ft. 0⅘in., and 148ft. 1⅕in. Glass did 142ft. 8⅕ins., 122ft. 6ins., 125ft. 11⅖ins., and finally 132ft. 3⅕ins. Spicer's first throw of note was 109ft. 7ins. which he followed with 111ft. 7ins. (his best) and 106ft. 6⅕ins. Tomlinson's initial throw was not measured. At his second attempt the hammer flew 103ft. 3ins., at the third 104ft. 7⅕ins., while the last was only 98ft. 5ins.

F. W. Bird, Harvard 2
F. H. Teall, Sidney-Sussex College, Cambridge and Dulwich 3
A. M. P. Lyle, Trinity College, Oxford and Fettes ... 4

Of the quartette, Bird was the quickest away with Clapp a good second. This couple soon had the race to themselves. The Harvard man took the first six hurdles a shade in advance of Clapp, but at the seventh both rose simultaneously. They were level until the last obstacle had been negotiated, but on the run in the Yale captain proved the faster winning by six inches. Teall finished a good third four yards away. Time—15⅕secs.

T. Leach, Brasenose College, Oxford and Winchester, 18ft. 11⅕ins. 4

Leach suffering from a recent strain was quite out of form and as a consequence could record nothing better than 18ft. 11⅕ins. Le Blanc Smith was perhaps the neatest in style of the four competitors. In five attempts his best jumps were 20ft. 6ins., 21ft. 1in., and 21ft. 6⅕ins. Sheffield was also somewhat off colour with 21ft. 1in. and 21ft. 6⅕ins. but his fifth leap 21ft. 10⅕ins. proved the winning one. Ayres did 21ft., 21ft. 7⅕ins., and at his third effort 21ft. 9⅕ins.

A. R. Churchill, Caius College, Cambridge and Harrow... 2
W. A. Colwell, Harvard 3
A. King, Harvard 4
H. W. Gregson, Christ's College, Cambridge and Oundle 0

The last event was looked upon as a certainty for the Blues, Churchill being the fancied candidate, but to general surprise, Godby, who could only get third to the Harrovian in March at the Inter-'Varsity Sports, carried off premier honours very easily. At the outset Churchill took the field along, with Gregson and Godby in close attendance, Colwell running in good style about five yards behind the Oxonian. The order for the first lap was Churchill, Gregson, and Godby and though the second named had one or two turns in front Churchill was at the head of affairs at the completion of the second lap, with Godby lying third scarcely two yards away; Colwell was ten yards in the rear of the latter, with King already going badly. At the mile Gregson dropped out, and Churchill went on from Godby, Colwell now being some twenty yards off third. Half way round the circuit the Oxonian went in front for the first time, the fourth lap seeing him possessed of a five yards lead. At this juncture Churchill showed signs of distress, suffering apparently from stitch in the side, and in consequence Godby speedily widened the gap. Recovering somewhat the Cantab kept pluckily on his way, though of course pursuit was hopeless. Maintaining an easy action and fine stride till the end Godby accomplished the best performance of his athletic career. He won by eighty yards, while Churchill finished about forty yards in front of Colwell, who had failed to make up much leeway by the Cantab's temporary trouble. King finished fully 200 yards behind his fellow-Collegian.

ROWING.

DOGGETT'S COAT AND BADGE.

Although there is very little in the fact that Tom Doggett desired to commemorate the Hanoverian succession to the throne now-a-days, the fact that he did so through the famous orange livery and silver badge, worn on the left arm, has had no small bearing on professional rowing and the ambitions of young water-men all among the river Thames. It need hardly be repeated that Doggett was an Irish comedian and a favourite of George I., and by his will left a certain amount of money for six "jolly young watermen" to row, the course to be from London Bridge to two boats moored off Chelsea Pier, a distance of about four miles and a quarter. As trustees of the livery and badge, he named the Fishmongers' Company, and that body, accepting the responsibility of the bequest, has entered thoroughly into the spirit of the race by not alone adding substantial amounts to the wager but by managing the race and arranging the preliminaries and all details as only a city company can. It is only due to the memory of Doggett to state that the race has produced some fine oarsmen, and even in recent years such grand scullers as W. G. East, who has the honour of being bargemaster to His Majesty the King; Tom Green Barnes; H. Messum, Richmond; little and popular Wag Harding, Chelsea; Bill Barry, undoubtedly one of the best scullers of the lot; his brother Ernest, who may in a year or two compete for championship honours; and Alf Brewer, son of mine host at the Duke's Head, Putney, 'Gus," one of the staunchest supporters of professional rowing in the country. Although the race should properly take place, according to the terms of the will, on 1st August, the Bank Holiday, of course, interfered with this arrangement, and Mr. Wrench Towse, clerk of the Fishmongers' Company, most advisedly advanced the date. Although rain fell slightly in the morning, the weather for the event was most favourable, and along both embankments, as well as on the several bridges and finish, huge crowds witnessed the contest, one of the best seen for years. Prior to the ancient struggle, which, for the second time in over thirty years, was won by a Lambeth lad, W. A. Pizzey, the Fishmongers' Company entertained a large number of guests at luncheon at the hall. Of course, many prominent oarsmen were present, amongst other the amateur champion, Mr. St. George Ashe (T. R. C.), Mr. Guy Rixon (K. R. C.), Mr. T. A. Cook (O. U. B. C.), Mr. B. Rixon (T. P. C.), etc. As to the actual race there were originally eleven entries, but only ten competed in the preliminary heats, first and second in each of the three qualifying for the final. The winner, after his good race on Monday, was fancied somewhat, and his victory was decidedly popular, as he rowed with race pluck and judgment, although at the same time the favourite Gobbett, gave his followers a good run for their money. For the race the officials were: Manager, Mr. J. Wrench Towse; starter, Mr A. Pocock (Bargemaster to the company); distance judge, Mr. Alf. Farmer.

THE WEASEL.

POONA AND KIRKEE FOX-HOUNDS.

AUNDH, celebrated for its ford across the river and as being the habitat of that majestic troop of cavalry—the Governor's Body-guard—was the place of meeting for the 4th. Government House and the Gunner contingent from Kirkee naturally turned out in force and His Excellency who is evidently a very keen sportsman was present. Among the others who swelled the glad throng were, I am told, Mr. and Mrs Arthur Lucas Colonel Channer, Colonel Bull, Colonel Richard Owen. Colonel Hume Henderson, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Beatty, Mr Enthoven. Mr. and Miss Anderson, Mr. and Mrs Sheppard, Colonel Lucas, Major Strange, two Major Englands, Mrs. Sheringham, the Master's wife, Lady Cox, Mrs. Hall, Mrs. Cameron. Mrs. Jameson, and scores of other good and true people. The Botanical Gardens, which I hear used to hold a jack or two in bygone years, has consistently proved blank this season and is apparently not a fashionable resort for the little grey rovers now a days and on this occasion it in no way belied its ill repute. Moving on into the demesne hounds were thrown into a patch, a cover where no less than a brace of jack broke away. Hounds at first got on to one which broke back for the Botanical Gardens, but the hard road and the horses foiled scent and in response to holloa from one of the whips the Master harked back and clapped hounds on to the line of the other jack who had raced away as if for the high lands of Bamburda. Reaching the Clock Tower on the other side of the Government House grounds hounds were clearly in doubt and even a cast by the Master apparently failed to recapture the line, so that scent must for some unaccountable reason have been atrociously bad and nothing more could be made of the line. The Master failed in this effort for blood, then worked back towards the Botanical Garden to see if peradventure he could have vengeance at any rate on the victorious jack's mate, but hounds had no luck this day. A long cast at a venture through the fields and round towards Bamburda was no more successful and so closed an uneventful morning—saving indeed for that excellent—but I believe sadly short-sighted sportsman of the Indian Civil Service who failing to see the gap (which I hear His Excellency most thoughtfully had cut) in the wire fencing round the demesne, went slap at the wire with the not unnatural result of coming an almighty crowner. It looked, I am told, a terribly nasty spill for a few moments, as horse and rider were tied into knots and Mr. Enthoven got out of it comparatively cheaply with a somewhat badly cut face.

Wagolei is, I gather, a very favourite meet with the really sporting contingent though its distance from Poona proper—9 miles—chokes off the fainter hearted, who find it difficult to steal the necessary extra half hour from the night's rest. Mrs. Beatty who seldom seems to miss a hunt or fails to be in the first flight when out was, I hear, the only lady who turned up; and among the somewhat select few who put in an appearance I can only hear of Colonel Bull, Colonel Channer (both as keen as mustard and always hang up with hounds however fast or long the run may be I am told), Colonel Money (Military Secretary to Sir Archibald Hunter), Major Hopwood and Major Chesney and everyone apparently was delighted to see two thrusters from the Bombay Hunt, Messrs Donald Graham and Harter, an ex Master, and a present whip, present to enjoy the good thing. A move was made towards some small patches of sugarcane from the third of which a jack was promptly evicted. His first effort to escape by seeking refuge in a sugar-cane patch half a mile or so further one was speedily frustrated and realizing that safety lay only in flight he straightway accepted the inevitable and pointed for the Moola - Mootha river. But he could not harden his heart to plunge into the flowing torrent and jerking in some cactus he changed his course and steered straight for the hill near Wagole over three miles off. Crossing the road to Ahmednagar someone tallyho-ed the jack away but he must have been still full of runningas, racing away he eventually beat hounds and made good his point. I have had to trust to scraps picked up from different sources, but from every side I hear the same account that it was quite one of the most enjoyable and fastest runs of the season, made all the more enjoyable by having to negotiate several little stone walls (apparently peculiar to this portion of the country) en route. It was, with the two entremely brief checks alluded to, galloping the whole time. The time "is authentically recorded" as 7 miles in 34 minutes, which I have heard one or two men suggest was almost too good to be true, though I must hasten to add that in each instance the doubters were men who were not out and who were obviously a bit sore at having missed so brilliant a thing. On the other hand I am told both distance and time are as near as need be. No one, I hear, went better throughout this run than Mrs. Beatty, Colonel Bull, and Colonel Channer. After a short spell to refill the bellows hounds were taken to a sugarcane cover not far from Wagole where a jack was found and a most cheery little gallop of nearly 10 minutes ensued when scent failed and Colonel Sheringham most wisely held that hounds had done enough. On the whole it seems to have been one of the most sporting mornings of the season and those who lost it through slothfulness and laziness have been a bit sore ever since. Even my old time-battered typewriter has been "click clacking" at a gallop with me as I tap out these humble chronicles and almost got out of hand for a moment now and again.

On Thursday, the 11th, the well-known Bund Bridge was the meet and a fairly large field including His Excellency who seldom misses a meet anywhere within a reasonable distance of Ganeshkhind. The first try was in some sugarcanes near the river bank and after that the extensive babul grove which often, I believe, holds a jack, and in no way belied its reputation for hounds soon began getting busy and drove their jack to the Sappers and Miners' earthworks. Here he was apparently headed and wheeling round ran along the river in the direction of the Bund, taking refuge in some sugar-cane which hounds had drawn on their way. Quite half an hour was spent in ousting this not very stout hearted jack out of his temporary sanctuary and when he at last hardened his pluck and made a dash for sweet liberty, a horseman who ought to have known better temporarily arrogated to himself the functions of a greyhound. Criticism on this ambitious effort has been free and unappreciative. Indeed I gather that the members of the hunt are unanimous in being satisfied with the efforts of their hounds and that any similar encroachments on the duties of those noble animals by two-legged aspirants will be distinctly resented in future. Verb. Sap. Sat. There seems to have been considerable satisfaction at the jack escaping and one can only hope that he lives to give a better run—under more favourable auspices. Chaste Diana—evidently offended at such attempted sacrilege of the sport she holds so dear—was unpropitious and so ended a not very brilliant morning.

SCARAMOUCH.

THE OOTACAMUND HUNT.

THERE was another bye day on Saturday (6th instant), the meet being at the Rifle Butts at 7-45 A.M. It was a fine bright morning but there was only a small field out. The first draw was through Hanging Shola and hounds found there, but it was quite ten minutes before we could induce the jack to break. When at last he came out at the west side of the Shola hounds were close behind him. He crossed the stream and pointed at first for the Black Bridge, but soon swinging to the right he went up to the Connemara Road, which he crossed. On nearing the top of the ghaut he again turned to the right and then stopped in a patch of thick covert, when hounds over-ran him.

As soon as they roused him again he went down the ghaut parallel to the Seegur Road, but, being hard pressed, went to ground in some rocks where hounds got in and killed him. He was a very large old dog jack. A fresh jack was on foot at the top of the ghaut and there was some difficulty in preventing hounds from hunting him. We then drew Brooklands blank and, as scent was not very good (for no apparent reason as it seemed a perfect hunting day) we came home.

On Monday (8th) the meet was at Bees' Corner, the morning being fine but with a very cold wind. There was a fairly large field out. We drew the upper part of Baikie, starting from the crossing and going upwards and hounds spoke to a line, which they just managed to carry across the road but could make nothing more of it as it was very stale.

The Master took them on through Rallywood, in the hope of hitting it off again, but without success. We then drew the lower part of Rallywood and hounds spoke to a line, which brought them to the crossing at the head of Blackmoor Vale, where they checked. The Master cast them up hill to the left and they picked it up again and went over the top of Newmarket to the corner of Bluegums, where they were again at fault. The Master tried through the covert and round the bottom and then over to the head of Rawlings' Nullah. Here they hit off the line either of the hunted jack or another and went away fast, pointing at first for Governor's Shola. Swinging to the right, however, they went up into Martyn's Shola. Here there was another jack on foot. The hunted jack took the body of the pack out at the top of Martyn's Shola and over the saddle towards the Yemakal Valley, then right handed along the slopes to the foot of Briar Shola where we lost him. The other jack went back to Governor's Shola with two and-a-half couple of hounds hunting him and he beat them there. The Master then drew parallel to the Pykara Road as far as the ridge above Toda Coffee Shop Shola and back north of the old Pykara Road, without finding again. Hounds found two porcupines in Bracken Covert and several were stuck with their quills The high wind made scent indifferent all the morning.

On Thursday (11th) the meet was at Sandy Nullah Toll Bar and it was a cold windy morning. We first drew the swamp above Pamela's Crossing and then Briar Shola, both blank although there was a touch of scent here and there. From the swamp below Wapshare's Hare Shola hounds took a very stale line into Wenlock Shola, but could not make any more of it. Between this and Chemmund there were fresh marks of pig and for a moment it looked as if we were in for trouble, but the Master hurried hounds into the open below Chemmund without mishap. We then drew on down the Yemakal Valley and crossed the line of a jack, which had apparently gone into Chemmund, so we did not persevere with it. After drawing for about two miles up the Pykara River a large boar was viewed out of a nullah and the Master thought the neighbourhood too dangerous to go on drawing. Hounds were, therefore, taken back by Briar to the Home country, and we found in Rawlings' Nullah. The jack took us into Bluegums and after running a ring there broke at the bottom and went across to Staircase He went up to the top side and turned along it towards Herbert Plantation, but, doubling short back, came out at the bottom again and went over to Rawlings' Nullah and then back to Bluegums. Here hounds gave him no rest, and after running another ring he came out again on the Rawlings'-Nullah side and went to ground in a water course. As soon as we got hounds away he bolted and again went into Bluegums, where hounds hunted him up and down for at least an hour until he at last beat them.

2. Capt. Henderson.	2. Lieut. Davies.
3. Lieut. Torrie.	3. Lieut. Hare.
Lieut. Walker (Back).	Capt. Dent (Back)

On Friday the 29th ultimo the Tournament was continued, another large attendance being present. The weather was wretched.

LEICESTER REGT. vs. 27TH L.C. "B" TEAM.—First Chukker.—After a good run by the Leicesters Thring got the ball and took it down, Mahomed Khan putting through. Hare then hit a goal for the Leicesters.

Second Chukker.—An even period, resulting in a goal to each team.

Final Score: 27th L.C. "B" Team 20 goals 3 subs. Leicester Regt. 14 goals 1 sub. Teams as before.

FREEBOOTERS vs. MUSKETRY SCHOOL.—First Chukker.—The Musketry School secured a minor point, and there was no further scoring during the period.

Second Chukker.—The Musketry School attacked and pressing hard scored two goals. Jeffreys and Wallace being responsible.

Final Score: Musketry School 10 goals 2 subs Freebooters 16 goals 3 subs. Teams as before.

GYMKHANA vs. 27TH L.C. "A" TEAM.—First Chukker.—Torrie hit a goal for the 27th, who had several more shots at goal all of which failed.

Second Chukker.—Henderson hit a subsidiary and a goal, and Torrie added another goal. Lake played a fine game at back for the Gymkhana

Final Score: 27th 10 goals 6 subs. (11 goals 2 subs.) Bellary Gymkhana, 14 goals 2 subs.

The Tournament was continued on the 5th instant when three more games were decided. Mr. Handcock was unable to play for the Freebooters having strained his side. His place was taken by Mr Irwin.

GYMKHANA vs. MUSKETRY SCHOOL.—First Chukker.—This was a very fast and even chukker and there was no scoring till near the end Lake hit a goal for the Gymkhana.

Second Chukker.—The game continued very even and the Musketry School put on a goal.

Final Score: Musketry School 11 goals 2 subs. Gymkhana 15 goals 2 subs.

LEICESTER REGT. vs. FREEBOOTERS.—First Chukker.—The Leicester Regiment got away but failed to score. Off-side against their opponents, however gave them a free hit from which a goal was scored: another was put through from a scrimmage shortly after

Second Chukker.—The Leicesters got on and hit a goal. They continued to press and put on a goal and three subsidiaries before the close of the chukker:

Final Score: Leicesters 18 goals 4 subs. Freebooters 16 goals 3 subs.

27TH L.C. ("A" TEAM) vs. 27TH L.C. ("B" TEAM.)—First Chukker.—"A" team had it all their own way and put on 4 goals and 3 subs.

Second Chukker.—"A" Team continued to outplay their opponents and put on another 4 goals and 1 sub.

Final Score: "A" Team 20 goals 2 subs. "B" Team 20 goals 3 subs.

The last games in the Tournament were contested on the 6th instant when the 27th L.C. "A" Team came out victors with 32 goals 2 subs. The "B" Team was second with 24 goals, and the Leicester Regiment third with 19 goals 1 sub. The Tournament has been a great success and Mr. Lake, A. V. D. the Honorary Secretary, is to be congratulated on the result. Mrs. Jermyn presented the Cup to the winning team.

LEICESTER REGT. vs. MUSKETRY SCHOOL.—First Chukker.—The Musketry School got away and Percy Smith hit a minor point and a goal Then Hare scored a subsidiary for the Leicesters. Off-side was given against the school but there was no scoring and they managed to put through another goal.

Second Chukker.—This was evenly contested but the Musketry School obtained a goal.

Final Score: Leicester Regiment 19 goals 1 sub. Musketry School, 14 goals 3 subs.

FREEBOOTERS vs. 27TH L.C. ("A" TEAM.)—First Chukker.—The Cavalry had matters all their own way and hit 6 goals and 2 subsidiaries.

Second Chukker.—Again the cavalry rushed away and obtained 5 goals and 2 subs.

Final Score: Freebooters 16 goals 3 subs. 27th L.C. "A" Team 32 goals 2 subs.

Second Chukker.—Another fast period, "B" Team playing in fine form put on 2 goals and a subsidiary.

Final Score: 27th L.C. "B" Team 24 goals Gymkhana 16 goals 3 subs.

Rowing.

THE WORLD'S SCULLING CHAMPIONSHIP.

AFTER all the "blow" on both sides, the long talked—of and much discussed meeting between Towns and Tressider came off at Sydney and resulted in a very easy win for Towns.

After half the distance had been covered the race was a procession, the champion rowing easily. Coolness, science, and experience won the race. Tressider admitting that he was beaten by a better man.

Tressider won the toss, and chose the southern side. It was a beautiful start. Tressider, rowing 35, led by a few feet from Towns who was rowing 36. After 300 yards had been covered Tressider led by half a length. Heading for the mile point, Tressider was three-quarters of a length to the good. The champion was then sculling a beautiful stroke with any amount of power. Inch by inch he lessened his rival's lead: Tressider, whose style had less life in it, tried gallantly to maintain an advantage, but his strokes were evidently without power at the finish. Half way across the bay Towns had decreased the lead to half a length, and with a splendid spurt the champion's boat drew level before Blaxlands was reached, which is the end of the first mile, which was got over in 6 minutes 30 seconds. A great race followed for the next quarter of a mile. With a splendid spurt Tressider brought matters almost on an equality, and a tremendous race ensued. Towns was sculling in such a self-contained manner that the hopes of Tressider's supporters sank lower and lower. The men passed the gasworks 11 minutes, 23 seconds, with Towns two lengths to the good. It was evident that Tressider was a beaten man when less than a mile and three-quarters had been covered. From this out the champion increased his lead easily. At Cabarita there were nearly four clear lengths between the boats. Tressider was rowing a wide course at this point. Towns steadied down after passing Cabarita, watching his opponent, and content to maintain the lead or increase it but slightly. Encouraged by the shouts of the spectators on the crowded steamers, Tressider roused himself for a final effort and for a furlong his best form was again shown, but Towns covered the rest of the distance at a medium rate, and passed the finishing post fully 15 lengths ahead of Tressider. The time was 21 minutes 48 seconds, and the distance, 3 miles 300 yards.

CYCLING AND MOTORING AT HOME.

LONDON, 29th July 1904.

IF I were asked who were the finest cycle riders in the world I would reply without the slightest hesitation—the London newspaper distributors. As old a stager of the wheel as I am, frequently turn sick and frightened as these riders rush through the heart of the city amidst the traffic with their canvas bags of newspapers slung over their shoulders. To appreciate their cleverness and daring, one must picture the streets of London, the side roads and crossings and the main arteries crowded with a ceaseless stream of traffic comprising every description of vehicles, from the errand boy with his truck to the heavy omnibus or railway delivery vans. Add to this wheeled vortex, the hurrying, scurrying pedestrians who thread their way in and out across the stream of traffic, frequently suddenly emerging from behind some cart right in the very course of the newspaper-boy. In spite of all the dangers that surround them these distributors rush at full speed from the regions of Fleet Street to their appointed station in the Metropolis, where small crowds of newsboys await their arrival and help themselves from the canvas bag whilst the rider is in motion; indeed, these men rarely dismount but swing round again for the return journey to the publishing offices, there to await the next edition. The way they dodge in and out of the traffic, swerving round this van, dashing between two buses, then crouching down to pass beneath a horse's head, is simply wonderful, and people often stop to watch them speed along through the maze of traffic expecting every moment to see them come to grief.

The British Empire Championships were held last Saturday on the Gosforth track, Newcastle-on-Tyne, and the 7,000 spectators were treated to some excellent racing by the English and Scottish representatives. These Championships were introduced in 1901 with the object of riders affiliated to the three Unions—the National Cyclists' Union, the Scottish Cyclists' Union and the Irish Cyclists' Association—all competing together for the Championships of the three countries. Unfortunately just on the eve of the first meeting the Irish body took offence at the disqualification of two of its best men by the officials of the N.C.U. and S.C.U. and withdrew from the triple agreement, remaining outside ever since. Ere, however, this letter leaves the shores of England, it is more than probable that the dispute will have been settled and a new agreement signed between the three Unions. But to the Championships. Three events were decided, viz., the quarter mile, one mile and five miles championships, and for the first time since their institution one of these fell to a Scottish representative. Dan Flynn, who is the successful rider to bring to his country an honour which had almost been despaired of, is riding extremely well this season; in the quarter mile event he finished a good second, in the mile he was only just defeated in his heat, and in the five miles he achieved the grandest ride of his life by winning after a hard fight with J. S. Benyon. Benyon won the quarter mile, and another promising rider H. D. Buck of the Anerley B.C., won the mile, defeating in his heat the London Champion A. L. Reed and the Scotchman, James Haig.

Early this year whilst riding a motor bicycle near Newcastle, a Mr. Williams was run into by a locomotive at a level crossing and sustained serious injuries. At the Durham Assizes, he claimed £10 compensation from the owners of the colliery where the engine was working. It appears from the evidence that high hedges by the road-sides hid from view the crossing, and when Mr. Williams approached no warning was given of the approach of the engine, it cutting across the road before he had time to pull up. Of course the defendants tried to put the blame on the cyclist, alleging that he was the cause of the accident and that there had been no negligence on their part. The jury, however, found for the cyclist and awarded £60 damages and costs, £20 more than what he claimed for.

One does not frequently hear of a racing man making a fraudulent entry when filling up an entry form for a race, but an instance has just come to light where this was done. A good rider in James Carter was charged at the Leicester County Police Court on remand with obtaining a clock valued £2 10·0 by means of false pretences. He had entered for some races at Wigston on 2nd July and had given wrong information respecting his previous performances, with the result that he was allotted a start of eighty yards instead of being placed on scratch. The entry had also been made under a false name. It was urged in defence that it was the first time he had ever gone astray and that he was induced to do so on this occasion owing to his wife's illness and pressing debts. He was again remanded on bail.

Since motor cycles have made their appearance on the roads the practice of riders of push bikes being towed has extensively grown, in spite of the warnings as to the dangers attaching this procedure which the cycle and motor press have from time to time given. No doubt it is extremely pleasant riding up hill and down dale without working, but the enjoyment is fraught with considerable danger should anything amiss occur. Only this week, a cyclist who was being towed by a motor cyclist by some means or other fell off his machine and was dragged a considerable distance before the motor bicycle was brought to a standstill. The cyclist was dangerously injured and is lying in a precarious condition. If one must indulge in the practice, the safest way is for the cyclist to hold the tow-line in his hands.

Motorists are to-day hurrying down to Southampton and Portsmouth and from there taking boats across the Solent to the Isle of Wight. There they will discard their cars and the hot dusty roads and watch the British International Motor Boat Cup Race which is to be decided to-morrow over a 7·7 knot course from Ryde Pier head to Osborne and back. Their Majesties the King and Queen have intimated their intention to watch the race, which is sure to attract a very fashionable crowd of spectators. The first race for the Cup was held last year in Queenstown Harbour and resulted in a win for Mr. S. F. Edge's boat the Napier Minor. England will be represented by three boats, France by a like number and America by one, and as all the boats possess engines of high horse power, a very fast race is expected.

In the Motor Car Act which came into force at the commencement of this year a kindly clause is inserted enabling any person charged under the Act and fined 20s and upwards to appeal to the Quarter Sessions. What consideration to be sure, but at what a price the appeal is obtained! The Motor Union reports that so far this right has been taken advantage of by eight motorists, with the result that the rulings of the lower courts have been reversed in six cases. In only two instances, however, have the Quarter Sessions allowed motorists costs, which in an appeal of this description is pretty considerable, so much so that the four unfortunate automobilists who had to pay their own costs were mulct in costs varying from £60 to £150. They really paid these amounts to disprove charges of which they were afterwards found to be innocent.

CRICKET IN BOMBAY.

BOMBAY GYMKHANA vs. POONA GYMKHANA.—The first of the two annual matches between the two Gymkhanas was concluded on the 13th instant, resulting in a win for Bombay by 10 wickets. Bombay batted first and put up 323, Messrs. Powell (55), A. Langhorne (52), Milne (43), Coombs (41), and Major Carnegy (34), all making useful scores. Poona compiled 210, the chief scorer being Captain Greig who made 108 in faultless style. They followed on and could only score 121. Captain Greig (40) and French (38) doing best. With 10 runs to make Bombay had no difficulty in winning. Score :—

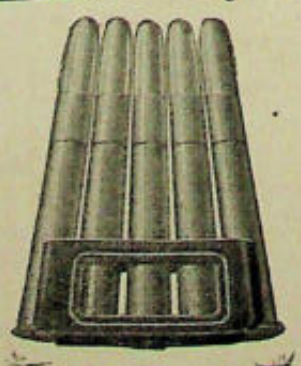
Major R. Skeffington Smyth (Coldstream Guards) says.

January 23rd, 1904.

"Your ·360 Cordite Rifle put a soft nosed nickel bullet through the neck of a Hippopotamus at 170 yards range. The bullet passed through the neck and came out the farside. I am extremely pleased with the above Rifle and its excellent stopping powers."

Mr. T. P. A. Holford writes:

"I am writing to tell you about the Double Hammerless Ejector ·360 Cordite Rifle you built for me, and which I used on my last Big Game shoot in British East Africa and Uganda. I consider it the most perfect and reliable weapon I have used for Big Game. With it I killed everything from the size of a Guinea Fowl to Rhinoceros, including Lion, Zebra, Wildebeeste, Waterbuck, and many other Antelope and Gazelle. Its accuracy, striking and stopping powers are extraordinary; of the latter, the bullets cut out of dead game which I also forward, will give you a very good idea. While writing this I might also add, that I am very pleased with the Double Hammerless ·450 Cordite Rifle you built me, having done very good work with it in the Rocky Mountain."



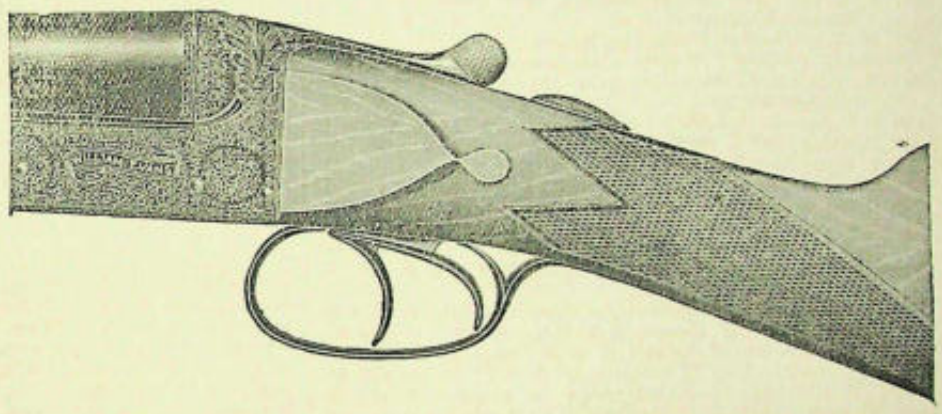
Evans' High Velocity "Magazine" Cordite Rifle. ·450.

12, 15, and 17 Guineas.

Weight about 7½ lbs.

Clip with Cartridges.

The charge of powder is 40 grains of Cordite and 270 grain Bullet, either solid nickel, soft nosed lead or lead nose split.



The above Rifle has been specially designed for those sportsmen requiring a Magazine Rifle, burning a modern high velocity charge and heavy bullet. The Magazine takes a clip holding five Cartridges. The bolt of action is fitted with a safety catch. This is a thoroughly reliable weapon for Deer Stalking, light and handy. The striking energy of this Rifle will be found very much more effective on game than the Mannlicher, Mauser, or ·303 Lee Metford.

CRICKET AT DARJEELING.

SENIOR OFFICERS vs. SUBALTERNS.—Played on "The Shrubbery" ground on Thursday, 11th August, "The Subalterns" gaining a meritorious victory by the substantial majority of 94. Fortunately the day proved fine, and with the exception of a small shower at tea time a full day's play was indulged in. There was a large number of people present, the ladies of Darjeeling being in strong force, while the fine band of the Royal Fusiliers discoursed sweet music during the afternoon. The Senior Officers won the toss and commenced their innings with Captains Clarke and Smallwood, who both played sound cricket and the century was hoisted before they were separated. The innings terminated shortly before lunch for the fair total of 209.

Mr. Peel and Mr. Quinan opened the Subalterns' innings, but the latter was sent back when he had made only 5, and an adjournment was made for lunch. On resuming Messrs. Peel and Dyer completely mastered the Seniors' bowling, and before Mr. Dyer was dismissed by one of Major Menzies' tricky lobs they had placed victory well within the reach of their side. Messrs. Uzielli and Mackenzie made useful scores, and Mr. Leake finished up with some Jessopian smiting for his 44. He made 20 from four balls in one over from Major Menzies, and half a dozen calls he sent over the boundary down the khud. Mr. Uzielli bowled very successfully, capturing 7 of "The Seniors" wickets at a cost of 12 runs each. The following were the scores :—

CRICKET CHAT.

MR. H. D. SEWELL, the old Madras cricketer and Essex county player, together with T. B. Nicholson and B. Jayaram, two contemporaries of his in the middle and later "nineties" were included in the London county team that met Warwickshire on the 14th, 15th and 16th July. None of the trio came off in the first innings, their scores being 7, 2, and 5 respectively. In the second innings Nicholson made 73 not out top score for the side the highest innings the old Cliftonian has played in first-class cricket Jayaram made 19, but Sewell again failed to reach double figures. Playing for his county against Derbyshire two days later in that wonderful match which ended in the defeat of Essex by nine wickets after they had put up 597 runs in the first innings Sewell was only able to contribute 10 to the large total, but in the second innings when his side collapsed before the Derbyshire attack he made 41 out of the total of 97 He also did a bit of bowling in this match, taking one wicket for 31 runs Ranjitsinhji made 28 and 29 in the match between an England XI and the South Africans. In the match between London County and the M. C. C. and Ground he was included in the former team together with B. Jayaram and T. B. Nicholson and the trio between them made only 24 runs. The first named, however, came off with the ball, taking four wickets in the first innings of M. C. C. for 63 runs Major R. M. Poore made his first appearance for Hampshire this season in the match against Worcestershire on the 18th, 19th and 20th and scored 16 and 11. He did better in the opening day's play in the following match against Warwickshire on the 21st, making 53 top score for his side as the result of two hours' batting. W. B. Bailey, the old Wellingtonian and Gurkha Brigade cricketer, playing for Incogniti against Henley scored 35 and captured three wickets. Major C. E. Greenway, the old Calcutta cricketer, playing for the same side scored 12. Against Beckenham the last-named player scored 0 and 33 and against Kensington Park he compiled 54, while against Mr. Palmer's XI he made 19. W. B. Bailey made 35 in the latter match. B. Jayaram playing for London County against Forest Hill made 38, top score for his side, but in a later match against Brixton Wanderers was not so successful, being dismissed for 6. Captain R. E. E. Krikenbeck, the Bombay player, made his first appearance for Surrey Club and Ground on 16th July against Brixton Wanderers and scored 12.

Last week against the Poona Young Cricketers in a two days' match the Gymkhana fared disastrously, especially in the first innings and lost the match by six wickets. It is true that Greig, Carroll (B. M.), and Hartley were all absentees, but on the other hand the side had the assistance of J. L. Ainsworth, the Bombay player, who is bowling so well this season and F. H. D. Joy the old Wykehamist and Oxford University cricketer who made a promising first appearance in a match at Bombay a few weeks ago. The bowling with these two players and Umfreville was therefore stronger than in any match this season played by the Gymkhana. Although the Gymkhana enjoyed the advantage of first knock on a good wicket they fared so badly that the whole side was out for 67, of which two batsmen, Thornton and Sutton-Rich, contributed 34 between them. The Young Cricketers introduced a bowler named Mehendale who took six wickets in the first innings for 28 runs and seven in the second for 66 runs. The Gymkhana gave a better display in the second innings, but for their total of 164 they had mainly to thank A. D. Wilkins (50) who should have a good chance of playing for the Presidency, Joy (33), and Umfreville who was absent in the first innings (29). who between them contributed 112. Ainsworth and Joy hardly came up to expectations with the ball, the old Marlburian's figures being five wickets for 73 runs and the old Wykehamist's four wickets for 64 runs.

The Karachi Parsees have fallen from their high estate and following a crushing defeat at the hands of the Karachi Gymkhana they suffered a second defeat in their match with the Sind volunteers by three wickets and 66 runs.

Two old opponents in the Ahmedabad Gymkhana and the Rajkot Gymkhana met at Rajkot last week in a two days' match which was won by the home team by 64 runs. The brothers C. and F. Pegge who with Major Clifford, J. E. C. Jukes, W. A. Hirst, and Captain Grove are the best cricketers in Ahmedabad this season, all did well in one innings or the other for their side, and the fine all-round cricket shown by C. Pegge in particular deserves special notice. He made 62 in the first innings and captured ten wickets in the match, five in the first innings of Rajkot for 37 runs. Seven of his wickets were clean bowled. Major Clifford (38) and Captain Grove (31) who are in charge of the detachment of the Cheshire Regiment stationed at Ahmedabad showed good cricket in the first and second innings respectively. Pegge had an off day and J. E. C. Jukes only made 16 runs in the match. The Rajkot team gave their supporters a bad fright in getting out for 76 in the first innings, of which total K. S. Lakhaji (21), F. W. Allison (18), and Captain Bennett (12) contributed 51 between them. In the second innings, however, C.A Kincaid of the I. C. S., who I should mention, joined the great army this week, came to the rescue of his side, contributing an excellent 51, his fourth innings over the half century this season. His claims to selection on the Presidency team are really very strong and I think if selection goes by merit he should get in before several Poona players whose names have been mentioned in this connection. He is not altogether unknown to Bombay and Poona players as three seasons he accompanied the Kathiawar team and made a fine century against the Bombay Gymkhana. They are very keen in Rajkot on cricket, both Europeans and natives, and hardly a day passes that a match of some kind is not played. In a twelve aside match with the Rajkumar College the Gymkhana who had not the assistance of Kincaid had the best of the draw which ensued.

In a game between the Dharwar Gymkhana and the local Hindu Club I notice that J. Monteath, the old Cliftonian and candidate for Presidency honours, made two useful scores of 29 and 43, the totals of his side being 86 and 106 for 8 wickets. The Hindus won on the result of the first innings by 31 runs.

Rain spoilt what might otherwise have been an interesting game between Bangalore Gymkhana and the Carabiniers last week. The latter did remarkably well to get eight Gymkhana wickets for 73, before rain stopped play, Ladbrooke obtaining five of them for 31 runs. Apropos of Bangalore cricket a school boy named Gillespie in a recent match between the Central College and St. Joseph's College performed the hat trick and captured the last five wickets of the Central College for 1 run. Cricket statisticians please note.

A match played at Quetta between the Gymkhana and the Supply and Transport Corps, the latter being assisted by Captains Deas Sarel, and Lane will have a particular interest for Bombay Presidency cricket-lovers by reason of the success of Curtis who has received an invitation to play for the Presidency. Going in first for the Gymkhana he carried his bat out for 148. the innings being declared on the fall of the eighth wicket for 301. His score included 24 fours. Against Deas' bowling this was a very fine performance and confirms the report that he is one of the best bats in India. Lieutenant Fleming (35). F. T. Pearce (32), and Sergeant Gamer (40 not out) were also in good form in this match. Deas took four wickets for 61 runs. The Supply and Transport Corps, gave a feeble batting display, being disposed of twice for totals of 37 and 51. Deas and Lane failed in both innings and Rowe (21) and Sarel (15) were the only batsmen who reached double figures. B. F. Vernon-Harcourt, Fleming, and Pearce bowled well for the Gymkhana, Harcourt taking five wickets for 24, Pearce nine for 40, and Fleming six for 17. The first century of the Minor season has fittingly enough fallen to the bat of Captain E. Saulez who has a longer connection with Indian cricket than anyone else in the station. Playing for an Indian Army XI vs. "C." Squadron 10th Royal Hussars he put together 148 not out, exactly the same score made by Curtis at Quetta on the same day. The next highest score on the side was 22. Captain H. P. Strong who last season scored heavily at home in club cricket was playing for the Indian Army but made a blob. For the "C." Squadron Sergeant Moon (38) and Corporal Edwards (35) were the highest contributors, H. P. Chaplin losing his wicket after he had made 14 through bad judgment in running. He has been run out three times this season just as he was getting set.

The most important fixture of the Poona Gymkhana so far was when they met the Baronet Club from Bombay, a club which is considered the strongest amongst the Parsee clubs. The first day of the match was a blank unfortunately owing to rain, so that there was never any chance of finishing the match. The visitors had first knock and failed badly against the bowling of Colonel Stevens and Captain Greig. The former took seven wickets for 23 runs, his best performance with the ball this season and one which is followed up with similar success at Bombay this week when the Poona Gymkhana meet the Bombay Gymkhana should give him a strong chance of being selected to play for the Presidency. Greig who bowled unchanged with Stevens took the other three wickets for 28 runs and when the Baronet went in for their second innings he captured all of the three wickets that fell for 15 runs. His record for the match was therefore six wickets for 43 runs. He, however, for the second time in ten days failed with the bat and is certainly not in the same form that he was before he went on active service The principal contributors to the Gymkhana total of 134 for six wickets were G. Thornton (44) who I regret to see is not one of the Poona team visiting Bombay this week, the Hon. B. D. Butler (33) and Colonel Stevens (20 not out). Captain Umfreville made a blob while A. D. Wilkins made 11. The Parsees having only made 52 were 82 behind when they began their second innings and had knocked off 47 of these for three wickets when rain again stopped play and the game was left drawn The batting of the Parsees was very weak, but the bowling with Kanadia, Madon, Writer and Kaka was fairly strong. A. H. C. Kearsey, who the Poona critics think has indisputable claims to play for the Presidency, kept wicket very finely, stumping three batsmen and not giving away a single bye.

The Parsee team to meet the Presidency next week has been selected, all but one man who will probably be a bowler. The ten selected are :—Dr. M. E. Pavri, D. D. Kanga, H. D. Kanga, R. P. Meherhomji, P. F Colahawalla, J. M. Raja, senior, A. H. Mehta, J. N. Mody, M. D. Bulsara, D. C. Daruwalla. K. M. Mistry of Patiala is unable to play and on the whole the team though fairly strong in bowling should Mehta and Bulsara be in form—neither of them have done anything this year can hardly be said to inspire confidence regarding the batting.

A match at Kamptee on the 6th August between the Nagpur Gymkhana and the Royal Field Artillery was won by the former by 30 runs. The totals were 86 and 56 and the only Nagpur batsmen who reached double figures were K. Ratnam (16), Leftwick (18 not out) and Cocoanut (13). Ali Hasan, the famous bowler, was not assisting Nagpur. Ceylon cricket, as a rule, has not much interest for Indian cricket lovers, but the big match of the year, Colombo vs. Up-country, has for Madras cricketers, at least, an interest almost as great as the Presidency-Parsee Match. The teams on paper this year were very strong, Colombo including in their eleven T. Leese, the old Wykehamist, A. J. Symons the old Rugbeian, W. E. M. Paterson, G. R. Waldock Captain M. Greer, R. W. Forbes, and E. G. B. Lover, most of them well known to Madras cricket. The Up-country eleven was even stronger on paper and included Mr. P. H. Papillon, the old Sherburnian, A. L. and G. H. Gibson, both of them old Wykehamists, J. MacTier, T. Y. Wright and H. B. T. Boucher. Up-country led on the first innings by 15 runs, the totals being 181 and 166 respectively. T. Y. Wright (50) and G. H Gibson (42 not out) were the principal contributors to the Up-country total towards which A. L Gibson, probably the best bat in the team, only contributed 6. West, Leese and Forbes were the chief scorers for Colombo with 27, 24 and 20 respectively. Colombo compiled 235 in their second innings, Paterson (56), Forbes (56) Waldock (31) West (29) and Walker (23 not out) making the bulk of the runs. Up-country fared badly when they went in again against the bowling of Lover who took six wickets for 23 runs, and only A. L. Gibson (23), Wright (21 not out), and Papillon (12) made double figure scores in the total of 124, forty of which were extras. Colombo won by 96 runs.

RUGBY IN CALCUTTA.

CITY vs. UNITED SERVICE.—These teams met on the City ground on the 18th instant the home team winning by 19 points to 3. The Services played hard, Captains Moberley and Gardiner and Lieutenants Szczepanski and Stevenson being most conspicuous, but they were unfortunate in not scoring. In the half Claydon Ewing, and Brown, got over with tries one of which was converted. After the interval the Services pressed and put in some good runs, and at length Mortimer scored a try. The place failed and the home team again broke away, and Hemmingway and Grieff obtained tries. Brown converting the first one. The City team thus won by 2 goals and 3 tries (19 points) to a try.

KING'S OWN vs. CALCUTTA.—The King's Own were to have played the West Ridings on Saturday last, but the Dum Dum team, owing to a late train arrived after six o'clock when the fort team had come over to the Calcutta ground for a game. The King's Own started the game but Calcutta brought the ball back and obtaining a free for an off side tackle, Martelli placed a goal. Play followed in midfield then the Calcutta forwards took the ball down and Siddons getting possession ran in with a good try. No goal resulted and the game ruled fairly even till the interval On resuming the King's Own kept the ball in the home twenty-five and after some hard scrummaging Ray got over with a try. The kick failed, but the game continued to be well contested till off side against the visitors gave Calcutta another free, and Martelli placed another goal. Even play followed till the end, Calcutta being victorious by 2 penalty goals and a try (9 points) another to a try (3 points).

CALCUTTA vs. CITY.—This match was played on the Calcutta ground on the 16th instant, the home team having an easy win. The visitors kicked off and taking the ball down had rather the best of matters for a time. At last the home forwards got away and Barns crossed the line with a try. No goal resulted, but after some scrums in midfield Calcutta came down again and Cumberlege scored a try, Martelli adding the major points The City were then kept on the defensive and the home team once more rushed through, Barns being credited with another try. The place failed, but Calcutta was back again in the visitors' 25, and Cumberlege got over with a fine try. Martelli did the needful and the interval arrived with Calcutta leading by 2 goals and 2 tries to nil. On resuming Calcutta pressed and an attempt to drop a goal by Martelli was frustrated, he being collared before he could kick. The visitors had very little of the play, but Martelli got over with two more tries for Calcutta. Neither of these were improved upon and Calcutta won by 2 goals and 4 tries (22 points) to nil.

FOOTBALL NOTES.

FROM the few engagements that the Calcutta F. C. have kept during the week it is clear that none of the local teams can cope successfully with the strong XV they are likely to put into the field this season.

There was some talk a short while back of getting together a team picked more or less from members of the C. F. C. and calling it a Ballygunge team.

There are many men who just miss their place in the first fifteen, who, formed into a team, would give their more fortunate brethren all the practice they need, and if results justified expectations might even enter for the Tournament.

Grayburn is still playing back while Dick is having a spell at three-quarter back. He is the safest man after Newton at back, and it will be a great pity if he is played out of his position.

The three-quarter line is innuitely superior this year to last, and when the final selection is made, Barnes, Siddons, Ismay, and Martelli will probably be found doing duty there.

Of the quartette, I consider, Siddons the most consistent performer: he is speedy and his tackling is always effective. Ismay and Martelli are both brilliant at times, the former is inclined to try and do too much himself, and the latter while sometimes taking a pass cleverly also muffs at other times in unaccountable fashion. Barnes, the new man, kicks and passes with discrimination and his weight will stand him in good stead against a side of tommies like the Welsh.

Calcutta have at last found what they have wanted for a couple of seasons, viz., a good half back to partner MacDonald. Cumberlege comes with a big home reputation having been a reserve for Durham county. He made his debut in Calcut a rugger in a game against the U. S., and, though perhaps a little out of condition, shewed resource and made many openings for his backs besides getting home himself on two occasions.

In this particular game the forwards played exceedingly well. The men packed and followed up throughout, and to them is greatly due the credit of the heavy scoring. Le Cocq, a new comer who appeared in the pack, struck me as being of the useful sort.

Calcutta's engagement with the Customs fell through as the latter could not raise a team and had to scratch at the last moment. The King's Own who were also disappointed by the late arrival of their opponents, played Calcutta a "friendly" on their ground. It poured with rain nearly the whole of Saturday and spoiled what should have been an afternoon's good rugger.

The C. F. C. started with fourteen men and soon after lost Dunlop who very unluckily broke his arm; with two forwards short they still had the upper hand in the scrums, which goes to prove that their is no lack of shoving capacity in the pack this year which last season contained too many men, who shone in the open to the detriment of honest hard work in the scrum.

Martelli placed two excellent goals from difficult angles and should go very near again winning the place kicking competition which was inaugurated at the end of last season. The three-quarter line did all that was required of them. Ismay being away, Siddons ran in with a pretty try after a bout of passing which Cumberlege initiated. MacLeod and Berridge made welcome re-appearances and made their presence felt among the scrummagers.

On the whole the chances of the premier club once again having a first rate fifteen look roseate enough, and the struggle that must ensue with the West Ridings in the Cup will be a sight worth seeing.

In their meeting with Calcutta the Services gave by no means an indifferent display, notwithstanding the fact that their line was crossed seven times. Outside the scrum they are very nippy and Lonsada, the speedy little winger, made some dodgey runs and kicked judiciously into touch at critical moments. Marshall, who really plays for his Regiment, was the pick of the halves. The forwards from want of practice packed loose and did not infuse that spirit into their movements which characterised their play last year. Moberley, Szczepanski, Scott, and Gardiner did their best to keep the scrum together and did sound work, the first-named being a really good man.

On Saturday they played some new men against the City who gave them a good game and a beating. Stevenson, Moberley and Gardiner made good forwards, while Hume Spry, and Garstin made valuable additions to the back line.

I hear there is every chance of Loudon and Margery turning out later in which case with Dr. Wilson back again amongst the scrummagers their Cup team will be considerably stronger than the ones they are at present placing in the field.

The Customs in their match with the soldiers in the Fort have proved conclusively that they are only a shadow of the team they were last year. There seems to be no new blood and but for a couple of brilliant exceptions, Rowe and Maitland, are a very poor lot indeed. As it was the fifteen that played the soldiers were raised from all points of the compass, while on Saturday they could not muster one at all. In my opinion they would be better advised if they broke up and threw in their lot with one of their neighbours, say the City, for a season at least.

There is absolutely no use in a large number of indifferent teams entering for the senior competition who have not the ghost of a chance at surviving the first round, while the amalgamation of a couple of clubs would produce a strong fifteen and better serve the interests of football in Calcutta.

Anderson, who plays back ought to do well once he has realised the responsibility at his position. He intermingles his play with too much soccer; I have often seen him take a flying kick at the leather when the opposing forwards are bearing down on him, instead of picking up or falling on the ball as circumstances necessitates. He is a fine kick and tackles better than most and with a little care would be a valuable asset to any side

The King's Own are coming on very well and in their games during the week have given more than mediocre displays. The officers, of whom there are five playing, are the mainstay of the team and there are one or two soldiers who seem to know the game.

The three-quarter line with Lieutenant Baker and Private Basonet is fairly strong; but the passing of the soldiers is erratic; there seems to be too much anxiety to get rid of the ball without any ground being gained.

Lieutenant Marshall makes an excellent half-back, but is not sufficiently supported by his partner. The forwards, among whom Lieutenants Ray, Scott, and Gribbin, figure conspicuously are smart and dribble well in the open and play a hard game throughout.

By their victories over the Services and a scratch team of Calcutta the City are to be counted as the best among the local clubs bar the C. F. C. whom they meet this week.

The Tykes only beat them after a well contested game by a few points.

The game was marred by rough play on both sides. The Civilians were the greater delinquents in this respect and the methods employed by some of them are not calculated to ensure the game being played in an amicable and sportsman-like spirit. This defect can easily be rectified under the captaincy of Williams and in the remaining fixtures the City ought to give a much better account of themselves.

Lees is playing back very well, and Warden, Hemingway, Schaumberg, and Brown make an excellent line

Of course Williams dominates all the play outside and plays a sterling game at half, but his partner Street has lots to learn yet.

Grief is a really good forward and would improve his play by appealing less frequently. If the Customs do join this club, they will have two of the finest halves in Calcutta, Rowe and Williams, and will receive reinforcements in other departments

The team from Dum Dum have only played one game here and were unfortunate enough to miss their engagement with the King's Own, thanks to a late train.

In the City match they seemed to be going as strong as ever, but their superiority in the scrum was not as marked as is usually the case. From all accounts the players at Dinapore are a first rate combination and a draft which came out contained some men who have made their mark on the rugger fields of Yorkshire. Armenian College gave Calcutta B team quite a good game early last week, it did one good to see these sturdy little fellows holding their own in the tight scrums against their so much heavier opponents. Apear and Simons helped in the back line and the former got over with a brilliant try after running away from the rest of this field.

As was to be expected the B team won with some points in hand.

THE EROOM CUP.—On Saturday, the 13th instant, St. Joseph's College, North Point, played their last tie for the Eroom Cup. The venue was the School ground. The game was a very interesting one, but though the Military played gamely to the end, the School defence was too strong to allow of a goal being scored The boys were repeatedly on the attack and in the first half put in 4 goals. After the interval they added 5 more thus finishing winners by 9 goals to nil. This victory gives St. Joseph's the Cup. They are the only team that have an unbroken record through the Tournament. They have beaten each team in turn and have only had 2 goals scored against them with 29 in their favour. They beat St. Paul's School by 2 to 1; the Jalapahar team by 7 to 1; the Nondescripts by 11 to nil, and now the Royal Fusiliers by 9 to nil.

Iolanthe.

It is but proper that the public should have the true version of the recent occurrences at Cyclonegunge, and I write to solicit on behalf of the Europeans of the male persuasion the sympathies of all India, and to seek for my much ill used sex, the advice and support of all true men Smallpox and cholera have we always with us, and with all of us we too have got used to the plague lost letters, false cases; but what are all these to the terrible event which has just befallen us here. Coming as it has done after such peaceful times, it is all the harder to bear. This is our grievance that we, the lords of creation are no longer allowed to take our ease at our inn, otherwise our Club. It has been raided, ruthlessly raided, and by whom? Not by an enemy, nor by the police not even by Congress, for then we could have withstood the matter to the death; or borne defeat in silence. No, it was left for the sweetheart of our desires, and the wives of our bosoms to do this thing. Without further complaint I will now state the plain facts of the case.

The hot weather began most auspiciously. With the call of the "Brain fever" bird the ladies of the station one and all took flight for the hills, not one remained.

North and South and East and West.
They went to where they better dressed.

So we men were left to follow the devices of our own hearts. What a delightful time we did have. We settled down to that last rubber of "Bridge" in peace none daring to make us afraid. Not as heretofore interrupted by female forms flitting across the card room doorway murmuring. "Dearest aren't you nearly finished, its half past eight" or "Fred, you know we are dining out to night" or most pathetic of all "Dad, I am so hungry." Then those nice little reunions! What cosy evenings at Carp's, the Collector's. What hilarious nights at the chota bungalow, when none knew which flowed the more freely the whiskey or the soda? What lovely dawns we witnessed at Mr. Brown's, what time that brazen one, the sun, once looked down upon us unashamed and saw a "No trumper" thrice redoubled e'er he was clear of the horizon. As for the Chummery words fail to depict the constant reckless play that went on there, at any and all hours. Marred by no thought of having our losses talked about, and comforted by sumptuous suppers, every declaration was doubled on principal. I heard that even the "Soi-disant" head of the station, the Lord High Sub Junta Walla himself once so far unbent as to take a glass of claret after dinner one evening. Knowing his frugal an economical mind it is difficult to believe, and as I was not present I will not vouch for its truth. Even the "Cat and Fiddle," a local private dak bungalow, left off "dishing" their spoons and tried to put on an air of chaste innocent enjoyment. Alas! and alas! all these things came to an end. Yes, and indeed it was through a lass. Now unfortunately, all or almost all our women folk had gone to the same hill station and amongst them the two Miss MacNacthings with their Governess. All three being under the charge of Mrs. Lord High Sub Junta Walla, who undertook to look after them in consideration of poor impecunious MacNacthing paying three-fourths of the expenses. This Governess, Miss Tyler, had left a love lorn swain in Cyclonegunge, a youth not long out from home, who sat a horse like a tailor, and who thought he could play "Bridge" because his losses never mounted to a hundred a month. He corresponded with her, and wishing to show how her absence affected him, and that he was not like other men, callous to the absence of their sweethearts and wives, he lost no opportunity of reporting to her what good times we were all having; but that he had not the heart to join in the merry goings on she, being so far from him. He dwelt at length on the enormity of married men gambling, and carefully entered into every detail of all our innocent gaieties. He told of Carp's losses. How Brown's syce had had to lead home histum-tum, with his master well corded up to the seat to prevent his falling out, and of Steel's champagne dinner.

Now it so happened that one day three or four of our station ladies were sunning themselves together in the little band-stand on the Mall of their hill retreat, when the post-peon passed by. Knowing them all he delivered to each her budget of letter there. With mutual apologies they were soon deep in their husband's letters. Shortly emerging therefrom with self-congratulatory smiles. That is all but Mrs. Steel.

"Poor dear fellows they cannot get on without us" warbled Mrs. Brown. "Yes, poor things" cooed. Mrs. Carp. "Dear Jack seems heart broken." "Heart broken!" Shrilled Mr. Steel "I know that John will feel heart broken when he gets my next letter. Fancy, in moving into the new house the Raj built for us, he has allowed the champagne sent over by the Raja for our house warming next month, to be carried over in open cases; not a straw cap amongst the lot and two dozen are smashed."

Just then a gasping "Oh" followed by a hysterical shriek of laughter from Miss Tyler, interrupted and caused her companions to think she was ill. Now, she too had received a letter from her mash, detailing as I have before said not only Steel's champagne dinner and its consequences to Brown; but also how "Poker" had been started and how Drills with his curious good luck won heavily from the Lord High Sub Junta Walla. I do hope my readers will forgive this long name. The fact is, it would give dire offence to the gentleman were I to curtail it. There is a story told of an impudent Deputy Magistrate who had his promotion stopped for two years because he proved that the proper name was simply "Junta Walla," without the Sub. Well as I was saying Mr. Leek's letter not only contained details of that dinner, but gave the sequel to it which doubtless had caused Miss Tyler's fit of laughter.

The letter went on to say that next day Steel saw his khansama taking away the empty champagne bottles, and forbade it. He ordered the khansama to have them artistically re corked, and wired in the bazaar The servant smelt a rat; every one new poor Steel was in mortal terror of his wife, so when the re-corked and tin-foiled bottles were brought to him, and he smashed them and told the man to keep the upper portions and show them to the mem saheb on her return, the servant promptly remainded an increase of pay, and the dismissal of the under kidmatghar (Mrs. Steel's pet man), whom he proposed supplant by his own nephew. Steel thus found himself between the devil and the deep sea, for if he complied, the kit would peach, and if not the khansama would.

Now Miss Tyler between whom and Mrs. Steel no love was lost, on recovering from her laughter without considering that other matters were disclosed, and only wanting to show what a tyrant Mrs. Steel must be to drive her husband to such tricks, and to generally "debash" her; impulsively thrust her letter into Mrs. L. H. S. J. Walla's hands with a sobbing giggle of "Read it out, oh! do read it out."

Nature had built that lady on a tall and generous scale, evidently intending her for a charming and genial mother of many. Art, however, in the shape of her husband had stepped in, surrounding her with an atmosphere of calm friged official priggishness with which Sub Junta Walla always wrapped himself and his belongings. This, though at times the ordinary mortal would show out, had frozen her till she had become nearly as priggish as her lord. After a glance through the letter, she remarked, in her husband's best Sessions court manner "Ladies, I think this is hardly the place or the time to read out such a communication, and as it seriously affects more of us than are here, the better course will be to convene a meeting. Will you ladies take tea with me this afternoon, and in the meanwhile I will write to the rest of us up here to be present." Saying which she rose and left. It must be confessed that Mrs. L. H. S. J. W. is still a graceful woman despite a considerable tendency towards embonpoint, not to say downright fat.

Tea time came, and found all the ladies of Cyclonegunge assembled in full conclave. It was not, however till all had finished their second cup that the important letter was produced and read out. As each man's name turned up exclamations of horror, not unmixed with desire for revenge, found expression from his spouse.

"What" exclaimed Mrs. Drills, "Won five hundred rupees did he? and the wretch positively refused to buy me a Rickshaw, his excuse being that there had been no card playing to speak of, and that he had had no luck of the few games there had been. "It can hardly be called ordinary card playing It occurs to me that its proper designation is, gambling." Frigidly observed Mrs L. H. S. J. W. keenly alive to the fact that her frugal minded husband wound certainly cut down some of her allowances to meet the loss.

"Oh the deceitful brute" shrilled Mrs. Brown "He wrote to me that he had been too unwell to leave the house for days." Just fancy I was nearly thinking of going down to nurse him.

"Why,—why,—who hoo why" stammered and sobbed Mrs. Carp. "Jack wrote that he had not seen a soul for a week. Oh I can never never trust him again."

When, however, Steel's falsing up empty bottles, his quarrel with the khansama, and dismissal of Mrs. Steel's pet kit, had been read out and then his version of the accident to the bottles given by Mrs. Steel, the silence grew ominous. Colder and colder grew Mrs. Steel's light blue eyes till they glittered like a snake. Thinner and thinner became the already too thin red line of her lips. Her square jaw clinched; a hectic sport appeared on each prominent cheek bone, as she recounted the version written to her. When it was over "Well" she snapped out "what are you all going to do about it. If, you don't do anything I shall."

Whether the other ladies thought, that poor old Duffer Steel's life was in danger and that by co-operating with her they might prevent man slaughter, I cannot say; but in a short time they had all sworn a solemn league and covenant to help her, and themselves at the same time to revenge. The first vote they passed was to keep the knowledge of the contents of the letter secret, and when, with the approaching cold weather they returned to Cyclonegunge surely men could not have had to all seeming humbler and more charming wives.

Now the club was in need of funds to repair the dancing floor, and there was some talk of raising the general subscription. This the bachelors (prompted as we afterwards discovered by their several mashes) objected to, and they said they thought that the ladies ought to pay full rates for their tennis and badminton and also for their tea. A meeting to decide this was fixed. It was unfortunately only found out when too late that two married officials would be in camp then. Steel never got an intimation, though the Secretary swore he posted one to him. As, however, Mrs. Steel always opened her husband's post bag, its non-delivery to Steel is accounted for. Mrs. Sub Junta Walla's little girl had a tooth growing wrong, and as she herself was in too delicate a state of health to travel, her husband had to take the child to Calcutta, strange to say on the very day of the meeting. The bachelors easily carried their proposal and the ladies had to pay.

Shortly after this the ladies started playing "Bridge" to fill in time while waiting for their husbands. The Secretary began to remark on the extra expense of cards and lights, as the reading-room could hardly be used for cards. After some bickering, it was voted that the ladies be made to pay for their cards and their husbands had to submit, as they one and all declared they would no longer wait till all hours for dinner while their ruder halves played "that last rubber." before dinner, unless they too could find amusement. Well, as I have said the ladies were made to pay, but then came the battle of Armageddon. It had been carefully planned out, and prepared for, as had all the foregoing matters. The ladies held a mass meeting.

A committee of married ones was appointed, each spin was quietly taken in hand and spoken to by them and solemnly assured that unless she did her best for the movement, and at least induce her mash to vote as they wished her chances of making a good marriage or indeed a marriage at all in that station would be nil, as not only the committee but all the married women had pledged themselves to prevent it by and means either fair or foul. Now there are many little matters about most girls which a man once married makes the best of, but which would have put him off proposing had he known in time; so the girls promised as desired, all but Miss Tyler. She was inclined to resent the advice of the committee, the more by reason that Mrs. Steel was on it, for the latter like most rigid economists always sponged whenever it was possible, and poor old MacNacthing was her most frequent victim. Under the pretence of looking after his dear motherless girls she would come and quarter, not only herself in his house, but invite friends to come too and that for long periods. It was at such times as there that she and Miss Tyler clashed. Miss Tyler had come of very decent people and was well connected and felt her come down in the world, when at her father's death she had had to become a Governess, and so was the less inclined to put up with Mrs. Steel's unwarrantable interference, who, if report said true have been but a shop girl in Calcutta before her marriage.

Matters came to a cliax one day when Mrs. Steel had lost her temper with Miss Tyler and had ordered her to leave the room. MacNacthing had been appealed to and Mrs. Steel had packed up and left. However, she has not a woman to forget, and, when the young lady showed signs of restiveness at the committee meeting she saw her chance. Miss Tyler was reminded that perhaps a little gossip might cool off the young civilian she had so nearly captured. At this she flamed up "she was afraid of no stories, no true ones, could be told about her and as for false ones why Mr Leek was much too astute to be taken in by such."

At this juncture Mrs Steel held up an old washing account book and said:—

"I do not suppose, ladies', that Miss Tyler will deny her handwriting. She pays her dhobie by the piece, and I ask would a man care to marry a girl whose economy so far outstrips her cleanliness as to limit her weekly wash to——"

Here Miss Tyler fell in a dead faint and as she did so contrived in falling to give Mrs. Steel a terrific kick on her knee-bone, which had serious after results; that however is on another line of rails.

The ladies' meeting was succeeded by a letter, signed by the requisite number of members requesting the Honorary Secretary to call a special General Meeting to discuss whether ladies should be given votes or not. Ten days was the usual time between the despatch of such notice and the day fixed for the meeting, but on such a momentous question the Secretary decided a full fortnight should be allowed. The ladies openly discussed the matter, they canvassed for votes in the most unblushing way, and of course they had the married men with them to a man. Their arguments were sound. Why should their husbands have to pay double? If they had to pay for tennis, badminton, cards, everything in fact the same as the men, they could no longer be considered guests. If they paid for things they had a right to vote about them, and if they could not vote why should their hubbies be made to pay double, and so forth, and so on. Of course after a few days it was soon pretty well-known, who would vote for, or against the ladies. The bachelors far outnumbered the married men and as was to be expected a large majoirity of them were against the ladies these were mostly railway men living at the neighbouring railway head-quarters It had been decided, as the discussion might prove lengthy, to hold the meeting after dinner, and there was to be a supper after it, at the cost of the defeated party. The hour fixed was 9-45 P.M. sharp and the railway men were coming in by special train to arrive at 9 30 P.M.

Now I have never been able to find out if it really was a case of the stars in their courses fighting against "Sisera." In otherwords, pure luck or whethery there was not a deus ex-machina. We all know the French proverb. "What woman wishes God wishes." Women certainly did wish for the detention of that train, so perhaps the Gods did take pity as that train never arrived at Cyclonegunge; but, I "hae ma doots." Four miles out from the station there is a level crossing, and the carriage of a heavy boiler on its way to a neighbouring factory, had broken down with its load at this crossing, the boiler lying right across the rails. Nothing could be done; it was night and no assistance to be got. The carters had fled from fright for they had no business to be travelling at night.

It was fortunate for the special that the gate-keeper not only kept his head, but had by the greatest chance two extra railway lanterns left at his gate by some trolly men to be handy on their return journey at dusk. They had not turned up, so when the special came along it had the ample warning of three red lights placed well up the line to prevent accidents. These, of course, stopped it, and then the cause was investigated. There was nothing else possible but to return and send a breakdown van with Jacks to remove the obstruction. Three of the youngsters, however, volunteered to stay there till the arrival of the van. The train, with the rest of them, had barely started on its way back then a man emerged from a hut close by, and said that he was bringing his master's tumtum from dak into the station and he felt sure that if the sahebs needed it his master, who was a native pleader, would have no objection to their using it. The offer was at once accepted and the three were soon on their way in the dogcart to Cyclonegunge Now it was curious that dogcart being there, and a still more curious point is that these three men, though all along protesting against the ladies having votes, yet at the last moment voted solid for them

Well whatever difference of opinion there may have been afterwards about the breakdown there was none about Mrs. Plaster's dinner. She had a big one on, openly and avowedly to try and gain over, even at the eleventh hour, such recalcitrants as still held to their determination to vote against the ladies. At the same time Mrs. Plaster made it clearly understood that the acceptance of the invitation entailed no obligation to vote one way or the other, only, if mild persuasion could induce anyone to side with the ladies, well and good. So the Innocents went down to their doom. Mrs. Plaster was blessed with one of those dispositions that smiled on you the more the more angry she was with you. In the phraseology of her friends; and she had some, as her dinners were frequent and good; she was such a charming sweet woman, and that evening she was as smooth as oil and sweet as honey. The dinner was a great social triumph. During its courses, arguments, smiles, blandishments, all were tried, and used in vain on those wrong headed men who still were against the fair sex. Even the threat that they might be cut by every lady had no effect.

"At any rate drink our healths in a parting glass just to show you won't bear animosity if we win," pleaded their hostess, as they all trooped out of the dining-room with the ladies, for there was no time to sit over the wine that evening. This the men were only too willing to do, and at Mrs. Plaster's bidding the old khansama brought a curious old liqueur bottle and a salver of glasses; and filled a glass for each as they stood grouped round Mrs. Plaster, while she proposed "To animosity." This little ceremony over, all went off to the club which was but just across the road. There they met the rest of the station and mofussil members, except, of course, the railway contingent and a few planters, who living in their direction had stopped croute to dine with them.

A quarter to ten o'clock was announced by the Honorary Secretary but no railway men had turned up.

"The meeting ought to begin at once" exclaimed Mrs. Steel. The bachelors looked uneasy.

"Oh I say" called out Youngbody. "We will be frozen out without them, give them a little grace."

"Yes Yes, let it be a decided triumph or a decided defeat, don't let us snatch at it." purred Mrs Plaster. "Give them to the hour."

During this wait, the uneasiness of one or two of the men began to increase.

"I,er, I think I'll just go down the road and see if I can hear them coming" mumbled old McNacthing. 'Youngbody come along too. They were no sooner out of hearing then McNacthing said:—

"Drive me home like a good chap will you, I did not like to let on but I have been awfully sick and I feel as if I had cholera. When I get home I, sign you a proxy'll I've stamps there and you can return and act for me."

Just then the three railway men turned up and in the midst of a flood of enquiries and explanations, Youngbody's and McNacthing's departure was not noticed.

Well the meeting began and after a few preliminaries the motion of the evening was proposed, and some really excellent speeches were made. In the middle of Steel's (it was really his wife's, for he never had two ideas to put together, and could not have put them together if he had got them) Mr. Rush begged permission to withdraw as he felt seriously unwell and indeed it was self—apparent. As he passed through the reading-room where all the ladies sat listening to the proceedings, he received much commisseration from them, Mrs. Plaster, whose guest he and McNacthing, Youngbody, and others had been, hoping with much solicitude that his dinner had not disagreed with him.

Mr. Leek who had also been one of her guests suddenly discovered that it was much later than he thought and that having some special morning work he could not sop longer and tendered a proxy which he had hastily written. Exception was taken to it as it was not stamped and during the heated wrangling over that point, Leek slipped through the reading room, when Mrs. Plaster commended him on his early habits. Miss Frills scowled at her as she did it. Miss Frills afterwards married Leek, when, of course, the true inwardness of that last toast at Mrs. Plaster's was explained, and there is now open and deadly feud between the two families. At last the point was put to the vote, it resulted in a walk over for the ladies. Four men away from illness, Youngbody had been taken ill at McNacthing's and so far from returning with a proxy he taken to his bed. The railway men absent: all but three, who ratted in at the eleventh hour. The remnant left to vote against the ladies felt like the survivors of some awful shipwreck, and were so knocked out of time by their defeat that they did not stop to the supper, where the victorious ones did themselves so well that it might have been thought they were welcoming home a defeated British General.

No sooner were the powers to vote conferred than the ladies called a second general meeting and elected a purely feminine committee, with Plaster as Secretary, and having fairly captured the club proceeded to frame a new set of rules.

No alcoholic drinks to be served before noon.

No member to be served with more than two such drinks on the same afternoon.

No game of cards to be begun after 7-15 P.M.

All lights to be put out at 8 P.M. punctually, no matter what game was in progress.

No game to be begun or continued unless there were at least two men left to sit and talk to the ladies.

No games allowed at all on Saturday night. It was to be given up to round games and music with the ladies.

The club would not open on Sundays. What need to proceed further, let us draw a veil over the sorrowful rest of it and as we cannot move the billiard tables or tennis courts, we have to grin and bear it but its precious hard. We had one satisfaction however Poor old McNacthing who had taken a second glass of the liqueur Mrs. Plaster produced for her no animosity toast, nearly died, when he did recover he did Plaster to the tune of five thousand Rupees damages in a civil suit. We all say that we ought to place it in the general fund we are getting up to send the ladies to England. What do you think Mr. Editor. Any way I have my own private bottle at the club kept behind the "Game birds of India" on the second shelf of the first almyrah, so if you visit us you know where to find it.

SHOES.

A DISCUSSION on the subject of plates for race horses which took place in a Home sporting daily some little time ago tempts us to enquire whether the search after the most suitable shoe for the turf ever led enterprising trainer to try the effect of the aluminium shoe. Shoes of this metal were used in the Russian cavalry some ten or eleven years back and were favourably reported on by the authorities at Petersburg who averred that aluminium "preserved the hoof" better than iron, wore so much better that they could be used over and over again, and were only one-third the weight of iron. The high character given these shoes in Russia led, if we remember rightly, to an enquiry in Parliament as to the intentions of the War Office to experiment in the same direction, and to the reply that no change was contemplated. There is reason to suppose that the aluminium shoes did not sustain the test of prolonged use in Russia: at all events there is no word about them in Captain Hayes' Horses in Russia: and we may be very sure that such a matter would not have escaped the notice of so able a horse-master.

Horsemen have contrived to make iron shoes answer for about fifteen centuries now, probably for much longer, and there is little chance that any radical change will ever be made in our method of shoeing, in material at all events; the changes in form and mode of application to the hoof have been numberless, but for the normally round hoof the ordinary shoe holds its own. It is curious to trace the changes that have been made in the shape of the shoe. The earliest known European example is that which was taken from the grave of Childeric who died in the middle of the fifth century; thanks to the ancient heroic custom of destroying a leader's charger for burial with him a shoe of Childeric's horse remains for our information: and with the exception that it is about twice the width of the modern shoe and was pierced for eight nails there is no very remarkable difference between this fifth century shoe and that of to-day. At a much later date the horse-shoe underwent considerable change. In that rarely visited and little known Museum under the Guildhall in London is a very instructive collection of early horse-shoes which have been unearthed from time to time by the diggers of foundations in the city. Among these are several examples of shoes of the thirteenth and fourteeth centuries: and the shape of these seems to indicate that the horsemasters of those days had modelled their horse-shoes on the Oriental plan: it is not straining the probabilities too far to suggest that they owed something to the experience gained in the Crusades, for the make of these shoes distinctly recalls the oval, or ovoid, plate with a hole in the middle which is the shoe used in Asia Minor, Syria, and adjacent regions to this day. It would appear that the nails employed at this period were less reliable than could be wished, for many of these old shoes are pierced for no fewer than twelve nails: another inch of metal, or less in some cases would convert these shoes into the quoit shape and make them in all respects similar to the Syrian and Arab shoes. The quantity of iron it was thought necessary to put on a horse's hoof seems to have been gradually reduced during subsequent periods but it is somewhat curious to observe that there is exceedingly little said about shoeing in the literature of the ages when the hackney or road horse was practically the only means of transport in England. "Homage" from early times often took the form of a set of horse shoes: a fact which some writers erroneously as we venture to think, have held to mean that high value attached to horse shoes in the middle ages: an assumption controverted by every established fact. In Cromwellian times the ordinary shoe was a heavy and clumsy attachment, and it is to be noted that in Stuart times we find first mention of light shoes or racing plates. Richard Blome in his "Gentleman's Recreation" published in 1686 refers to the likelihood of making a horse restless by putting on him "light shoes" the evening before a match. Thus does an old seventeenth century writer anticipate the discernment of modern authorities who hold that experienced horses can form a very good idea of the approach of a race day and who cite the effect of "plating" in much the same sense as Richard Blome. Unfortunately our ancestors who were addicted to racing paid a great deal more attention to "Dyet and sweats" than to shoeing: and thus while we have minute instructions concerning the use of canary, beer, cordials, fresh eggs, horse bread, and other comestibles we have no particulars about the weight and make of shoes for "running horses": we do not even know whether they were put on hot or cold.

The roads on which much of our riding and driving are done in this country are so much less wearing to shoes than the macadam universal in Europe that the question of hot vs. cold shoeing does not disturb us: we are content that the nahlband shall go his own way provided he does not prick his patients and refrains from too lavish a use of the drawing knife. The advantages of hot shoeing over cold have been fiercely debated in Europe from time to time, but the advocates of the latter have never succeeded in proving their case and an experiment on a large scale was made at the French cavalry depôt Saumur in the year 1840, when a certain Mons. Riquet, a veterinary surgeon of the Army pressed upon the military authorities the merits of cold shoeing. The military authorities of the Continent have ever shown themselves of open mind when such propositions are offered them and Mons. Riquet was allowed to organise a series of experiments which extended over three years. He divided the horses in the cavalry school at Saumur into two lots, one of which was shod hot and the other cold. It was found that "cold shoes" were cast in the proportion of about 3·20 to 1 "hot shoe," the experiment involving the wear of over 22,000 shoes altogether. Some years later another French Army "vet." Mons. Ambret, made an experiment on the horses of the cavalry regiment to which he was attached: he was a zealous advocate of cold shoes, and had the whole 650 horses under his care shod cold: the result was the loss of from 55 to 60 shoes cast per month, during a season of marches and manœuvres. The hot shoe system was then adopted and proved so greatly superior that Mons. Ambret appears not to have had the moral courage to publish results: the fact that hot shoeing was resumed and has continued ever since speaks for itself.

As regards the make of shoes, style of surface which shall give the horse the safest footing ingenuity has been busy for very many years. In countries where frost need not be provided for, the shoe that answers for sun-baked soil well answer all the year round. Even as the shoe which answers on macadam will answer on grass. The problem which the ingenious devisers of shoes have never yet solved and which they seem to have given up in despair if the patent announcements be any guide to their achievements, is to invent a shoe which be equally satisfactory on wood pavement, macadam, asphalte, and rubble paving: though this last barbarity we think is now seldom to be found in the same City as asphalte and wood-block. This is essentially a question of town shoeing, and when we consider the different fashions in which these different methods of street making respond to changes of weather we can feel no surprise at the failure of the ingenious to get abreast of the difficulty. In a single mile of streets in London, nay in half a furlong if we seek without great diligence, the horse must pass from asphalte to wood and from wood to macadam; and back again: too often to show by a heavy fall that the shoes which serve well enough on one surface are dangerous on its neighbour. Were it not for the defective system of street cleansing which permits the mud of the macadam and the foul grease of the wood, to spread per wheel and hoof to the adjacent surface and thus mercifully provide a few steps of mixed surface for the horse to pass from one to the other, falls would be even more frequent than they are.

A Bookmaker in the North of England was once matche to run a sprint race with a well-known ped. The bookie, although well up in his own business, knew next to nothing about foot racing. One day a friend of his who had heard about the match, said to him:

"Well, Bill, they tell me you're sure to get beat. This lad can do 'evens.'"

"D—n him and his evens!" Bill replied. "If he does evens, I'll do odds on."

"When I was a cabin boy," said an elderly sailor, "I often used to wonder, seein' birds thousands of miles out to sea, what they done for fresh water when they got thirsty. One day a squall answered that question for me It was a hot and glitterin' day in the tropics, and in the clear sky overhead a black rain cloud appeared all of a sudden. Then out of the empty space, over a hundred sea birds came dartin' from every direction. They got under the rain cloud and they waited there for about ten minutes, circlin' round and round, and when the rain began to fall they drank their fill. In the tropics, where the great sea-birds sail thousands of miles away from shore, they get their drinkin' water in that way. They smell out a storm a long way off; they travel a hundred miles, maybe, to get under it, and they swaller enough raindrops to keep them goin'."

Sporting Notes.

FOR the Third Calcutta Monsoon Meeting the weather once more proved unkind to the unfortunate race-goer, for after almost a week of fine weather, down came the rain as punctual as clock work in time for the first race. It was too late, however, to do more than make things uncomfortable for riders and spectators, and the going was very fairly good, and a great deal lighter than on the two former days. The attendance was much as usual, but fields were small throughout the day with the exception of the Small Pony Plate and the Amateur Plate for which nine and eight respectively turned out. We were treated to some good racing, but it was a regular outsider's day, and with the exception of one favourite and one second favourite the books appeared to have a good thing over almost every race. The solitary favourite who got home was Miss Beryl in the Pony Plate; she led throughout and won with the greatest ease from Rezia and Good Chap.

In the second race, the Ellenborough Plate, Kittylea and Naiades were almost equal favourites, the former being at a slightly shorter price. A small field of four being made up by Odin and Bob. Kittylea and Odin led over the first two flights, after which the gelding assumed command, Kittylea close up and Naiades whipping in some eight or ten lengths behind. At the flight by the Ellenborough the brown mare drew up and Odin fell back. Kittylea still led over the last two flights, but Naiades managed to catch her in the run in and landed the verdict by a length and a half.

Seven were weighed out for the Middleton Plate and Winklet was made a strong favourite, Morris being also a good deal fancied. The winner, however, turned up in the rankest of outsiders, namely Flash who jumped off in front and led from end to end, and though he ran very green when it came to a finish, Hard succeeded in squeezing him home a length in front of Winklet with May B a similar distance away third. An objection against Flash for crossing Winklet near the distance was overruled.

The tote paid Rs. 109 over this winner which was not a particularly big dividend all things considered.

The Pony Plate drew a field of six only, and here again the result was wholly unexpected. On paper it looked a good thing for Perfect, but the winner turned up in Moonlight, who was first out of the gate and making the pace a regular cracker, obtained so long a lead that he was never caught. At the same time it is more than likely that Perfect would have won had not her rider made sure of the leader coming back to him, and consequently delayed going in pursuit until just too late. An objection, we learn, has since been raised to Moonlight on the ground that he is not a country-bred, but an Australian pony. The objection was still under investigation when we went to press.

The best field of the day was that for the Amateur Plate which numbered nine, Planet was the popular selection, but once again the public were wrong, and a comparative outsider in Pierette, won very comfortably by three lengths from Daffodil. Quicksilver, true to his name, was first away and led to the big tree where he was replaced by Daffodil, Mr. Hamilton's mare coming through to the front at the distance.

Only six faced the machine for the last race, of whom one was Naiades, out for the second time. Kellnerin had the call of the market, though Pylara was also heavily backed. The former led for the first three furlongs where Pylara and Naiades took up the running until round the turn when Sunshine came to the front and staying on won easily by a length from Pylara, with Hello a length away third. Details appear elsewhere.

Calcutta racing men, particularly Mr. Bell Irving's friends, will be interested to hear that Metalwing, who was sent to England less than a year ago, won his first race at Irvine, beating eight others in the August Welter Handicap (one mile), carrying 8st. 11lbs. and having made all the running, got home by a length. We congratulate our friend on his success and the horse's old trainer "Mr. Cowper" who we hear was lucky enough to have his bit on him. Commenting on this race The Sporting Chronicle writes: "Metalwing was surrounded by considerable mystery at Irvine yesterday. Nobody seemed to know anything about him or his antecedents, but at the same time, coming out for the August Welter Handicap under the guidance of J. McCall he was at one time a good favourite. His merits, whatever they were, had to be taken on trust, but as events worked out there was solid ground for the support. Although he did give an exhibition of buck jumping at the gate in which McCall shone to advantage he, on moving up to the barrier, managed to jump right into his stride just as the tapes went up. The result was he soon established a commanding lead, and going away as if he liked it was never threatened and won easily."

Ceylon Sportsmen will again be represented at the Calcutta Races. This year we hear of several horses and ponies as probably coming up from Colombo, among them Gabelle, Regalia II., Goya, Prince Lyon, who won the Governor's Cup the other day, Rapier, Sacristan, and The Tart.

Mr. Fred. Greenhill, we see, will soon be putting another fine lot of English thoroughbreds on the Indian Market. At the Cobham Sale he bought a yearling bay or brown colt by Trenton—Lady Sterling for 100 guineas; Handelilian, a two-year-old colt by El Diablo—Galatia; Insurrection, a two-year-old gelding by The Rush—Riotus; Child Adopted, a two-year-old brown filly by Abercorn—Nandine; Bigamy, a two-year-old bay filly by Hopbine or Doblius—Gozo, and a filly by Trenton—Blew. If these and the rest he is getting together are up to the quality of his last shipment they will be good enough.

The Doorga Poojah Concession ticket announcement made by the Bengal-Nagpur Railway in our Special Advertisement Columns to-day is one which will concern sportsmen who about that time contemplate a holiday and a shoot.

We remind our readers of the Calcutta Light Horse Gymkhana fixed for Saturday next on their ground opposite the Stores in Chowringhee.

Just before the last received English mail left London the Racing Calendar published the flat-race fixtures for 1905. The campaign is to open at Lincoln on 27th March and end at Manchester on 26th November. On 11th April is to begin the Newmarket season, and for once in a way the October Meeting, so called, commences in the month from which its name is derived. The Two Thousand Guineas will be run on 3rd May and the Cambridgeshire on 1st November. All the Turf world will muster at Epsom on the last afternoon of May to witness the contest for the Derby, and the St. Leger day is 13th September. At Ascot a beginning is to be made on 20th June and at Goodwood on 1st August.

First entries for the Lucknow Autumn Sky Meeting close on Thursday next, the 1st September.

Lord Alington, who died last February, by his will bequeathed £100 each to the Queen and the Duchess of Connaught; a set of waistcoat-buttons to the King; a portrait of Lady Zetland to Viscountess Newport; £7,500 and all his racehorses, furniture, etc., to his wife, Lady Augusta Alington: £100 to Lady Rosaline, daughter of Lord Lucan; £300 to his butler, Richardson; £200 to his coachman, Golledge; and an annuity of £30 to his nurse, Ann Maria Seignior; £4,000 to his daughter, the Hon. Mabel B. Corbett and £1,000 each to his other daughters. He left the residue of his estate to his son. The total value of the estate is returned at £43,751 13s. 2d., including £12,849 7s. 6d. in net personalty.

Truth professes to have excellent authority for contradicting the report that the Prince of Wales has decided to start a racing stud. The circumstantial tale as to the horses presented to the Prince by His Majesty, and as to others privately purchased for him at Newmarket, are all fictions.

The Kulu Correspondent of the C. and M. Gazette records an extraordinary shikar story. It seems that a certain Gujar was grazing his buffaloes about sunset, when suddenly a couple of bears put in an appearance, one a monster the other about half-grown. They started stalking one of the buffaloes, that was somewhat separated from the others. He never thought they would be able to kill it, so lay low and watched their operations. They approached from different directions. At first the buffalo seemed to think it great sport, and chased them when they came too near him. All this time the big bear used now and then to run up to the little one and appeared to be giving him directions how to proceed. The little one gradually drew the buffalo towards a drop of about fifty feet. When the buffalo again made a rush at it the big bear, seeing his opportunity made a rush from behind, and over went the buffalo, breaking its neck at the bottom. The little bear was first on the carcase and thought he was going to have his share, but the big bear coming up gave him a couple of cuffs on the head and drove him away. The Gujar was horror-struck, but wishing for revenge, drove the other animals home and set out in quest of the local shikari.

By this time the moon was shining brightly, and when they came within some distance of the scene of the encounter they heard great growling and roaring going on, and thought that the young bear had returned for his share, instead of which they saw a large leopard and the bear at it tooth and nail. The sight was such an uncommon one that they waited within striking distance, the shikari knowing that he could take his shot whenever he liked, as one or other animal was sure to return to the kill. After a time the leopard, feeling he was getting the worst of it, gave a huge growl and fox-like seemed to subside as if dead. The bear sniffed at his enemy, long and lovingly, and after giving him a few more blows with his paws proceeded to enjoy the repast from which he had been disturbed. Before the men could recover from their astonishment, the leopard was up and on the bear's back, when, taking him at a disadvantage, he soon turned him over and got him by the throat. Then there was a regular "rough and tumble" for some minutes, but the bear could not free himself from the leopard, who clung like a leech to his throat, sucking away his life-blood. At last the bear fell dead, and as the leopard rose, the shikari gave him a bullet behind the shoulder rolling him over dead. Then arose a dispute, as the shikari claimed both skins with a view to the Government reward of Rs. 8 for each, Rs. 16 in all. So it was finally agreed that they should return in the morning; but the Gujar set a friend to work in the night, so when they returned at daybreak the bodies were there but the bear had been carefully skinned! The Gujar and shikari at once went away and filed civil suits against each other, and this weighty case is now in court.

In Germany, dogs are divided into three classes. The first-class includes dogs that are kept merely as pets by people in good circumstances. In the second-class are all sporting dogs—that is to say, dogs used actually for shooting and hunting; whilst the third-class comprises dogs used for drawing carts, etc., and for farmers' purposes. The first-class dogs have to pay a tax of 20 marks, or equal to our £1; the second-class ten marks, or 10s.; and the third-class 5s. per annum. The plan seems a fair and reasonable one, and, as there are no exemptions, every dog is well looked after.

This anti-gambling crusade is not confined to the purists and the newspapers observes an American Exchange. Business houses and corporations employing large numbers of people have taken the matter up, and orders have been issued by many firms to the effect that employés visiting race tracks and pool rooms will be discharged. The surety companies furnishing bonds for persons occupying positions of trust are refusing to write bonds for race goers on any terms. These acts on the part of business men are having their effect and racing is rapidly losing its position as the greatest of sports. There is nothing strange that such a condition of things should obtain. Whenever any sport falls into the hands of those whose only interest in it is the opportunity it affords them to gamble, it deteriorates and soon arouses the antagonism of organized society.

A sad drowning accident, of which long shore gunners might well make a note, occurred on the 16th instant at Cannanore. From a brief account of the tragedy which has reached us we learn that Lieutenant R. G. Lascelles, of the Durham L. I. went out along the beach to shoot curlew. He shot a bird, which dropped into the sea and was drifting out when he stripped and plunged in after it. The only person present was the bandy driver, who says he begged Mr. Lascelles not to go in as the coast was dangerous. He says his master swam out for a short distance, suddenly rose in the water, and then sank. The bandy driver waited a few minutes, and as his master did not rise again he ran across to the barracks and gave the alarm. In a very short time search parties were out, but up to dark the body had not been recovered.

Mr. Lascelles' death has given everyone a terrible shock, as he was popular with everyone, and the greatest sympathy is felt for his relations and also his regiment.

Though we should, perhaps, not be strictly accurate in describing whisky as "the wine of the country" in so far as India is concerned, we have little doubt that its consumption exceeds that of any other liquor out here. Almost every well-known brand has its patrons and most of us aspire to the knowledge that teaches which to avoid and which to absorb. Among the latter we have no hesitation in including (and placing high on the list) Messrs. Hyam and Company's "Royal Club Blend" of which an advertisement elsewhere gives full details and which is guaranteed to be eight years old, andone of the chief advantages claimed for it by the producers is its absolute uniformity of quality. The "Royal Club Blend" is medically certified to be not only pure, but a positively safe and wholesome stimulant. Again, the very fact that it was the brand selected for the Field Forces in Africa, and the further fact that it is patronised by the majority of the Regimental Messes at Home and abroad, to say nothing of its prominence at the leading West-end Clubs, is sufficient to establish its reputation.

To the purity of its flavour and its mellowness we can ourselves testify: we believe it to be a genuine spirit of the highest class. We may also remark that the whisky is perhaps not so well known out here as it might be, but we are told that Messrs. Hyam and Company (whose address is in their advertisement) desire to open negotiations with an Indian buying Agent—a chance for someone to do business.

Many of our readers especially those whose occupations or tastes tend towards engineering, surveying, mathematical and metereological work or scientific research should lose no time in becoming possessed of a copy of Messrs. P. Orr and Son's latest catalogue and price list of instruments necessary to such matters. It is very well got up and well illustrated, while the prices quoted seem to us to be extremely moderate.

Our Poona correspondent writes:—Talking of Alec Marsh reminds me that that genial songster has just been the hero of a joke which is too good to keep to this side of India. In the exuberance of humour he laid a pitfall into which some pompous bounder floundered on all fours to the huge delight of all Poona. This interfering idiot thought it worth his while to actually write to the Deccan Herald to the effect that while at Dhond station he saw in the remark book amongst other signatures, "most of them belonging to eminent and titled men," that of Alec Marsh and that after his name were the letters D. P. G. O. C. "What I would like to know, Sir, is Mr. Marsh the possessor of a title, and if not by what right does he sign the letters after his name? I need hardly add, Sir, that the gentleman in question is guilty of a very grave fault if he has assumed a title or honour to which he has no right." This enterprising idiot signed himself C. I. E. One must presume that he is of the number of the "eminent and titled men" authorized to do so. If so, it certainly helps us to understand the reluctance some really eminent men have to being enrolled in that distinguished Order. But retribution fell on "C. I. E." by the genial singer falling on him with a letter to the same paper explaining that while at the station in question either from his "somewhat extensive appearance or distinguished manner evidently mistook a poor wandering minstrel for a person of some importance" and so "solely to avoid hurting his feelings" he signed the book adding the letters D. P. G. O. C. as he considered himself entitled to them when at home in London, viz., "Daily Passenger General Omnibus Company."

And now people are endeavouring earnestly to identify "C. I. E." who must be devoutly praying that the earth may open and swallow him up.

More than one moral may well be deducted from the recent match between the Bombay and Poona Gymkhanas. One at any rate is that no eleven can hope to make a decent bid for victory without reasonably good bowling, and the other is that one even brilliant man cannot lift the odd ten out of mediocrity. How feeble was the Poona trundling may be judged from the fact that the Bombay XI who probably don't claim to be smashers, were able to accumulate the very useful total of 323. How "one man" a team Poona really was was painfully exemplified by the fact that out of the 210 with which Poona responded Captain Greig was responsible for 109. Consequently the Poona representatives were requested to take the floor again and did badly, securing but 121, of which the inexpressible Greig contributed 40. Miller 6 for 47 and Ainsworth 4 for 14 did the havoc referred to.

Scarcely recovered from the above defeat, the poor Poona Gymkhana received a further sadly severe chastisement from the Bombay Hindoos. That the latter were a tough lot to tackle everyone knew. The Bombay Hindoos can put a remarkably warm XI into the field, and there are many who cold that the Parsees cannot longer with any decency or respect to themselves refuse to meet them without giving strong grounds for the suspicion that they dread risking defeat. Without attempting to argue that the Poona Gymkhana XI as at present constituted affords any supreme test of efficiency, the decisiveness with which the Hindoos defeated them cannot be ignored. Taking advantage of their luck with the spin of the coin, the Hindoos wisely took possession and were not deprived of the privilege till they had amassed 326, of which K. A. Date contributed 118 not out and C. V. Mehta 80. To this Poona could only reply with 171, of which the trusty "one man," Captain Greig, was responsible for 100 not out. This, of course, necessitating the ignominy of a follow one and the "one man" on this occasion failing (as the greatest must fail at times) the rest collapsed for a miserable total of 69, and the Hindoos won by an innings and 63. Poona is scarcely likely to contribute many members for the Presidency match.

That unlucky horse Milos met his end the other morning on the Poona course. Ill fortune has dogged him ever since he arrived last year with a great reputation for sprinting over in Australia. First of all he fell ill. Then getting the better of a native riding boy called Sodah, the hapless fellow threw himself off and fractured his skull against the rails. Showing no return for the heavy sum paid for him it was believed that he was just beginning to show some of his real form when dashing into the railings beyond the Grand Stand he broke his neck on the spot, the native riding boy being hurled, I believe, over the railings on to some brushwood and having a most providential escape.

The fourth extra meeting afforded a most pleasant afternoon's racing and passed off without a hitch of any description, reflecting great credit on Mr. Cursetjee Dhunjishaw's organizing capability, as also on his handicapping power, for the public found the task of finding the pea as difficult as ever. Thirteen faced the gate for the first event, that sterling little pony Moreed struggling home once more to victory admirably handled by A. Hoyt.

That beautiful little racing machine Veera, one of the shapeliest Australians of the 14-hand class now running had no great difficulty in defeating the speedy La France even over her favourite distance, but the 14-hand class seems the one class of which there are no great numbers on this side, and the executive will probably compel them to run among the 14-1 lot till they can lay claim to quantities sufficient to justifiy claiming races for themselves.

In the Desert Handicap for Arabs over 1 mile Captain Bayford, A.-D.-C., had the proud distinction of supplying second and third with his beautiful pony Avatar and his greatly improved Borderer, Ali bin Amer's Young Kohinoor depriving them of premier honours.

The well-known Firecracker was served up very hot for the Summer Plate over 1 mile with the pleasant galloping weight of 7st. 3lbs., old Tubal Cain having the steadier of 10st. That fine horse struggled most gamely under his burden, but could get no nearer than third, the speedy Blue Blood (to the bottom of whose form the handicapper has evidently not yet got) winning very comfortably at the end.

The blood little chestnut pony Mint won over 5 furlongs from the ever-green and gallant Governor, and little Trahan got quite an ovation for the admirable manner in which he handled the winner, and one can only hope it is the beginning of a very successful career.

The closed races continue to fill in the most pleasing manner, no less than a full dozen ponies, several of them of very high quality, going out and once again a brace of General Officers, "Mr. Locke" and "Mr. Bryan," were in the pigskin. Gladstone, a very handsome blood pony, the property of the former, was made a warm favourite but failed, despite his eminent pilot's service, to secure even a place, though I shall be surprised if he does not win a race before long. The winner turned up in Mr. Bass' brown English mare Filbert, ridden in the most workmanlike manner by the other General Officer referred to, and it was all the more creditable as he was, it was reported, riding in great pain from a broken rib, fractured in his fall on Stoddart in the hurdle race on the previous Saturday. Major Moore on his English pony Lady Jess was a good second, and Mr. Orr Paterson on Free Trade, lately purchased from Mr. A. W. P., a fair third. Mr. O'Gorman's starting was excellent and sweet music was discoursed by the most excellent band of the 123rd Rifles under the bâton of M. Frediliis.

Athletic Notes.

THE Dalhousie Football Club have started an athletic section, which is to include tennis and cricket. The following office-bearers were elected:—Mr. Greig, Captain, Mr. Butland, Vice-Captain, Mr. Wheeler, Secretary, Mr. T. Walsh, Ground Secretary, and Messrs. Turnage and Stewart, Joint Financial Secretaries. The annual dinner of the Club has been fixed for the 10th proximo.

We are indebted to the courtesy of the Honorary Secretary, Calcutta F. C., for a list of the Club's Rugby fixtures which we publish in the usual place.

All sportsmen should get a copy of the last number of the Literary Review, published by Messrs. A. J. Combridge and Company of Bombay.

The final in the Naini Tal six-a-side football tournament was played on the 11th instant between "A" Team of the York's Band and "A" Team St. Joseph's College, the latter winning by a goal to nil. This is the fourth year in succession that the College have won this tournament.

Among important cricket results at Home last week are the following:—Kent beat Worcester by nine wickets, Essex beat Leicester by nine wickets, Middlesex beat Surrey by 2 wickets, Kent beat Hampshire by eight wickets, the matches between Sussex and Yorkshire, Worcester and Gloster, and Notts and Lancashire were all drawn. The following matches were abandoned:—Yorkshire vs. Essex, Lancashire vs. Middlesex, Sussex vs. Hampshire, and Derbyshire vs. South Africans.

Coaching and practice for the next regatta of the Calcutta Rowing Club is keeping several of our local oarsmen pretty busy just now. For the Senior Fours there are three crews made up as follows:—

No. 1.—D. Carvill Bow, W. C. Burke 2, J. A. Tassie 3, and N. G. Pritchard Stroke.

No. 2.—P. Blumenthal Bow, G. Innes Watson 2, Captain R. P. Wilson 3, and J. M. LeCocq Stroke.

No. 3.—H. W. Hales Bow, G. Peddie 2, L. R. Carter 3, and C. V. Green Stroke.

So far there are but two crews in for the Hoare Cup and two for the Senior Pairs, for both of which entries close on Saturday, the 27th instant.

Our Bombay correspondent writes:—The dates for the Presidency match have been altered to the 24th, 25th, and 26th in order that Thursday, the 25th, which is a Bank holiday, may not be the last day. This change will prevent my being able to wire more than the first day's play. The Presidency team has been selected with the exception of one player and to the no small surprise of local cricket lovers includes no less than six Bombay Gymkhana representatives. After the feeble display the Poona Gymkhana gave on the Bombay wicket and the poor account they are giving of themselves at Poona at the time of writing against the Bombay Hindus it is hardly to be wondered at that only two Poona representatives, and those the only two in the team that visited Bombay last week that have had any real experience of the Bombay wicket have been selected. The inclusion of so many local players in the team has naturally given the greatest satisfaction, and I think for the Bombay match at all events the Committee has acted very wisely in preferring to rely more on local players who are accustomed to the vagaries and tricks of the slow wickets we get here, rather than on up-country players who have to play on wickets—matting for the most part—that are fast and true. For the Poona match up-country cricketers should have prior claims to selection.

Among the passengers who arrived from England by the mail on Saturday were B. Jayaram, the well-known Mysore cricketer, Captain C. Hutchinson, the Northern India cricketer, the Hon'ble Mr. J. P. Hewett and Captain R. S. Phillips, who are also well known in connection with Indian cricket.

The usual weekly mounted sports, although the number of competitors who entered for the various events was larger than any previous week this season, do not call for any special notice. A football race and a race not on the programme arranged between Mr P. F. Fischer's Dart and Mr. Rummell's Tyke, riders up, should have been the most interesting events of the afternoon, but unfortunately in the latter event Mr. Rummell's saddle slipped round at the start, and the rider coming off, Mr. Fischer was left to finish as he pleased.

A rugger game between the Gymkhana and the Casuals on Monday afternoon did not provide much excitement, the game, which was won by the Gymkhana by 2 dropped goals and 5 tries to nil, being of a most uneven nature. I begin to despair of the Casuals showing any real improvement, as instead of gaining by experience, their play seems to have deteriorated. The Harwood League games, which have furnished so much interest this season, have nearly reached an end, and of the four games played last Saturday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday that between the Royal Garrison Artillery and the Cheshire "B" Team was perhaps the best. The R. G. A., after a splendid struggle, won by 1 goal to nil. Another good game was that between the Perseus eleven and the Cheshire "A" Team which ended in a pointless draw. The game between the Rovers and Gymkhana resulted in a win for the former by 2 goals to 1, while that the same eleven and the Telegraph also resulted in a victory by 5 goals to 2. The Perseus and Telegraph elevens have played their last game in the League, while the other teams have each to play one game.

The Bombay Gymkhana have after all entered a team for the Poona Junior Polo Tournament and the following team has already left for Poona :—No. 1, J. St. J. Graham ; 2, L. Barraclough 3, W. E Crum ; 4, M. Cornish.

The Gordon Highlanders, Black Watch, Royal Scots Fusiliers, South Staffords, North Staffords, Royal Welsh Fusiliers, Oxford Light Infantry, Bedfords, The Queen's, Royal Irish Rifles, Somerset Light Infantry, Simla Volunteers and the Simla New Club.

The Calcutta Rugby Football League, we are glad to see, is un fait accompli ; our congratulations to Messrs. Martelli and Baker who have been mainly instrumental in starting it. Some details regarding its inauguration appear among our Football Notes. As yet no pucca rules have been drawn up ; but pending their appearance we understand the competition will be run on the following lines :—

1. Each player shall play for one club only in the League.
2. The return matches of the present fixture lists shall be League matches ; only one round being played.
3. The referee shall be agreed upon by both teams. The home club will nominate a referee and advise their opponents of their selection. In the event of non-agreement, the committee will select a referee.
4. The committee shall be composed of the secretaries of the various clubs in the League. A win shall count 2 points and a draw one point. In the event of two teams tieing on final points, the match will be played off.
5. In the event of any team being unable to turn out on dates as fixed, notice must be given to the opponents by 12 o'clock noon on the day fixed for the match. The date of replay in this case shall be settled by the team receiving such notice, and the reply must be within four days. In the event of no notice of inability to play being given, the team failing to appear shall forfeit the match entirely.

London Week by Week.

London, Friday, 5th August 1904.

Last Monday's Bank holiday is said to have been, so far as London is concerned, one of the quietest on record. The engaging gambols of 'Arry and 'Arriet being less in evidence than heretofore ; chiefly no doubt in consequence of the exceptionally fine weather which drew them further afield. In spite of the weather the London and South-Western Railway traffic was slightly below that of last year. The popularity of Brighton as a holiday resort is patent from the fact that on Sunday and Monday nearly 15,000 day excursion tickets were issued for Brighton and Worthing as against 4,000 for Portsmouth, Bognor, and Littlehampton, and the same number for Bexhill, Hastings, Eastbourne, and Seaford. The authorities of the London, Brighton, and South Coast Railway report that between Friday and Sunday inclusive 2,450 cycles were despatched from their London stations. The London and North-Western Railway notes the great increase in the sleeping accommodation now required by "long journey" passengers, particularly by the Scotch trains from Euston. On the nights of 27th, 28th, and 29th July, they made up no fewer than 742 beds. Another feature in the holiday traffic is the rapidly increasing number of excurtionists to France. Chiefly to Dieppe, Rouen, and Paris, by the Newhaven route. Of holiday programmes in London, one of the most attractive is that at the Royal Italian Circus (formerly Hengler's). Signor Volpi's extraordinary skill as an animal trainer, and the clever and amusing "monkey pantomime" appeal to animal lovers of all ages, and bid fair to enjoy a long run of popularity. The performance at the Hippodrome is also worth seeing. The leading equestrian turn is supplied by M. Salamons Regie "fire horse," an exceedingly beautiful and clever creature. There is a troop of clever fox terriers in eccentric dresses, but in the tropical weather we are now enjoying the most attractive turn is "Siberia" with its snow showers and winter scenery which make one feel cool even to look at.

Whether there is to be, or is not to be a General Election this autumn is a question that is agitating the mind of many an anxious M. P. and candidate at the present moment. The impression was strong immediately after Mr. Chamberlain's speech in the house last Monday that a dissolution in October or November was a certainty, and many were the instructions wired to election agents on the strength of it. We have it on the high authority of C. B. that in view of recent by-elections Mr. Balfour should be moved to resign or dissolve by "the patriotism of the citizen, the wisdom of the statesman, and the honour of the gentleman." It is hardly to be expected that Mr. Balfour's standard of patriotism, statesmanlike wisdom and honour should satisfy the "citizen" who traduced our soldiers in the field, the "statesman" whose conception of wisdom is a more or less successful attempt at sitting on the fence between Messrs. Clifford and Redmond, and the "gentleman" whose honour has not required him to rebuke by so much as a single word of disapprobation the gross mendacity which has disgraced his party at the recent by-elections, and that he will not rise to C. B.'s exalted level in the present instance is to be desired. The prospect of Mr. John Morley at the Colonial Office—by no means an impossible choice in the event of Radical majority at the General Electinn—is not one to be viewed with equanimity. (By-the-way rumour hath it that Mr. Lloyd George has fixed his affections on that particular office in the Cabinet he is so fitted to adorn ; and the alarming interest he has lately evinced in Colonial matters lends some colour to the report.) Before the Government dissolves there is work for it to do. Another attempt to pass an Aliens' Bill should be made, and Unionists—Irish Unionists specially—will have just cause of compliant if a Redistribution Bill be not brought in, and the over representation of Ireland remedied. The new Parliament, let it meet when it may, will contain an unusually large number of new faces, as almost each day brings an announcement that yet another member has decided not to stand again. Although the Secretary for War will not contest West Belfast again the report that the close of the present Parliament will see his retirement from public life seems to be premature to say the least.

ber of society the consequences are almot certain to be serious, as the unfortunate Mr. Beck has found. A more remarkable story has seldom been unfolded even at Bow Street, where queer stories must be all in the average day's work, and it is far and away above the average "Shilling Shocker." In 1895 Mr. Beck was arrested in London on the complaint of a woman who said he had robbed her, and as nine other women, who came forward with like accusations against him, swore positively to his identity, he was, after a trial lasting four days, convicted of robbing the ten women and sentenced to seven years penal servitude. At the time he disputed the evidence of identification, and while he was in prison he sent several petitions to the Home Secretary, who saw no cause for interfering with the sentence, and Beck was not released until he had served five years and a half of his sentence. And now comes in the remarkable part of the story. A few months ago Beck was again arrested on the complaint of a woman who said he had robbed her in Tottenham Court Road. Again other women identified him as the man who had defrauded them, and again—after a long trial at the June Sessions—he was convicted. While awaiting sentence, fate did him a good turn—the "double" who gave the name of William Thomas, but who is really a Jew named Meyer—was arrested on a charge of defrauding women, and the investigations that followed proved beyond all reasonable doubt that Beck had twice been wrongfully convicted. Meyer (or Thomas) who on his own confession has been carrying on these frauds for nearly thirty years, being the guilty person. The question of identification when it rests solely on the evidence of persons of the lower classes, and particularly of women is to be distrusted. Fifteen women swore positively to Beck being the man who had robbed them and yet the newspapers only report that "there is doubtless a certain resemblance between the men." No doubt the fact that they both stayed at the same hotels, and that their handwriting is remarkably alike, added weight to the women's evidence, and was an additional bit of bad luck for Beck. His Majesty's "free pardon" has been granted to Beck, and some compensation will probably be awarded to him.

The company at the prize giving at Coopers Hill, the other day, testified by hearty cheers its agreement with the supposition thrown out by Sir William White that possibly some among his hearers might doubt the wisdom of the decision arrived at by the powers that be, anent the closing of the College at an early date. The Session just closed was the thirty-third, and the report read by Sir John Ottley shows that never, during its career, has the College been in a more satisfactory state. Sir William White emphasised the great works which is being done in India by civil engineers, and expressed the hope that although one chapter in the history of the College might be closing, its special features might in some way be perpetuated. A distinctly funereal air pervaded the meeting, many of those present believing it to be the last function of the kind at Coopers Hill.

The death of General Sir Michael Biddulph, Gentleman Usher of the Black Rod, in his eighty-second year, places a picturesque and historically interesting post at the King's disposal. Black Rod's duties are now-a-days for the most part of a ceremonial kind, but in the good old days, when impeachments were in vogue the "Gentleman Usher of the Black Rod" had the custody of those impeached, and it is still his duty to execute orders for the commitment of persons charged with breach of privilege. Should occasion now call for his services in this line it is highly probable that "Black Rod" would counsel take with the Serjeant-at-Arms of the Commons, whose experience in such affairs is (thanks to the irrepressible Irish member) of more recent date. Until a few years ago "Black Rod's" salary was two thousand a year, and a capital residence in the House of Lords. Of late it has been a thousand a year, without a house, and I have an impression that further economies are contemplated. Nevertheless Sir Michael Biddulph's successor—whoever he may be—is doubtless to be congratulated. The appointment is usually given to a naval or military officer of some distinction and of a certain age. Sir Michael himself was a famous "Gunner," whose deeds of prowess in the Crimea and Afghanistan were known throughout the British Army; yet on his first appearance in the House of Commons he suffered so severely from "stage fright" that he forgot the words of the formal message which he had to deliver. Imagination refuses to conjure up the dire results—the whole machinery of Parliament might have been brought to a dead stop—if a Member sitting near at hand had not publicly prompted him. It is said that "Black Rod" long guarded himself against a similar mishap by carrying his message, neatly written out, in the crown of his cocked-hat.

From two articles lately published—one in the Pall Mall Magazine, the other in the English Illustrated—it is obvious that the state of the British Drama, past, present, and to come, arouses considerable interest. Mr. Walkley, in the Pall Mall Magazine, appears to find an occult connection between the state of the drama in Great Britain and the vintage of champagne—a theory which at least has the merit of novelty to recommend it. He, therein tells Mr. Archer that he began to believe in the renaissance of the British Drama in 1889, "as great a year for drama as for champagne," and both these great authorities agree that the renaissance culminated in Mr. Pinero's "second Mrs. Tanqueray" in 1893 "another excellent vintage year." The two critics, at one up to that date, are henceforward no longer in agreement, Mr. Walkley declining to continue his belief in the renaissance, while Mr. Archer continues staunch. Mr. Walkley avers that we are going down hill, with the speed of the most reckless of motors, and cites as confirmation thereof the number of musical plays which have ousted the serious drama. Mr. Archer maintains that the dramas so ousted were Adelphi melodramas, three-act farces, and other trifles which will never be missed; and, moreover, that we have three notable dramatists at the present time for every one we had ten years ago. To which statement Mr. Walkley makes retort that in that case the notable dramatists either fail to write notable dramas, or managers decline to produce them; and in deepest gloom he demands "What has become of Ibsen?" And echo answers "What?" That the average musical comedy is silly and vulgar Mr. Archer cheerfully admits, but that it is not wholly without its uses, he contends, since it has cleared out, not only the aforesaid Adelphi melo-drama, but opera bouffe, and the "idiotic British burlesque." Mr. Walkley, still refusing to be comforted for the loss of his Ibsen, is of opinion that Old Gaiety burlesque is to be preferred to musical comedy. And so on, and so on. "When doctors disagree," etc.

The articles in the English Illustrated deal chiefly with three questions which have been debated times out of number, and are no nearer a solution than they ever were. What would be the most practical and effective way of giving a new impetus to the drama? Would a State-aided theatre and conservatoire benefit or be detrimental to dramatic art? And would the abolition or reform of the censorship advance the interests of the drama? Out of the thirty-five authorities quoted only five are optimistic as to the present state of the dramas, and most of them are clearly in favour of the establishment of State-aided theatres and schools of acting. But it is significant that many of those who enjoy the blessings of such State-aided institutions concur in condemning them. The chief argument in favour of the retention of the censorship is that we could ill spare anything that is not only humorous in itself, but the cause of humour in others.

Reports from St. Petersburg do not point to a speedy or satisfactory settlement of the questions at issue between the Russian Government and ours. The protests our Ambassador has raised against the sinking of the Knight Commander, have proved fruitless so far; and Russia is said to show no disposition to accede to any British representations except in regard to the Malacca. From Washington we hear that she intends to insist on her right to send Volunteer cruisers through the Dardanelles transforming them into warships at sea. With regard to the question of contraband, the latest proposal from St. Petersburg is that an International Commission shall be appointed to examine neutral ships before they reach the Red Sea. The Commission to sit at Port Said. The acts of Russian aggression have no doubt been committed with the laudable intention of diverting attention from their home troubles which are thickening. General Schauman, the father of Eugen Schauman, who shot General Bobrikoff, has been under arrest since the end of June, and although nothing whatever has been discovered to connect him with the assassination of the late Governor-General, he was secretly removed to St. Petersburg last week, without being allowed to communicate with his family, and has been confined in the dungeons of the Fortress of St. Peter and St. Paul. Certain revolutionists who were found guilty last Wednesday at Warsaw of having killed four policemen have been remanded to an asylum for medical examination; the inference being that the postponement of sentence is due to the fear of a revolutionary outbreak. That the position of the Emperor becomes daily one of increasing anxiety and danger is evident. Rumours are current in Vienna that "a Palace revolution" is imminent, as the only means of avoiding a general upheaval.

Various items. Mr. F. Goodall, R.A., whose long illness ended fatally last week, had more than his share of the ups and downs of fortune. From the age of thirty-one when he was elected an associate of the R.A.—becoming a full member about ten years later—until he had passed three score years and ten, his life was an unbroken record of success—artistic and material. Universal sympathy was felt for him in the heavy financial trouble which darkened the last years of his long life, and the feeling that but scanty justice had been meted out to him was general. "What is espistaxis"? Mildly asked Mr. Plowden, the Marylebone Police Court Magistrate the other day when a man charged with being drunk and disorderly, and who had managed to get a cracked skull, was brought up before him. Doctor's certificate stated that interesting patient is suffering from "drink, wound on head, and espistaxis." Humane Mr. Plowden hesitates to sentence fellow-creature, however erring who is suffering from such a serious—perchance mortal and painful—affliction. In absence of any one enlightened enough to answer his question he consults dictionary, and therein finds that "espistaxis" being interpreted is neither more nor less than bleeding of the nose. Tableau six weeks' imprisonment for interesting patient, and a request that the doctor will write in English for the future.

The sale of Lord Anglesey's effects began at Anglesey Castle last Friday, when the dogs and guns were disposed of. With the exception of the toy Pomeranian, none of the dogs fetched high prices. Fifty five guineas was given for Ireland Bee Bee, the purchaser, it is said, being Lord Anglesey. A black pug for which he had paid £250 fetched only £10, and £5 was the highest bid for a Chow Chow. The sale of the contents of Anglesey Castle is expected to last four or five weeks. A warm welcome has been given by the Glasgow Corporation to the Scottish Rifles who left Glasgow for the South African War fourteen hundred strong, and returned only six hundred all told. Few regiments have a better record of hard work well done. The arbitrator in the claim brought against the Ecclesiastical Commissioners by Messrs J. Lyons and Co. for the loss of their leasehold interest in wine cellars under St. Philip's Church, Regent Street, which is about to be demolished, has issued his award. The loss on the removal of the wine was estimated by Messrs. Lyons at 25 per cent. The total amount of the claim was £16,000, and the award gives Messrs. Lyon £10,400. The appeal case, Dakhyl vs. Labouchere before the Master of the Rolls and Lords Justices Stirling and Mathew, has resulted in an order for a new trial. The Truth libel action was heard before the Lord Chief Justice and a special jury, which awarded the plaintiff £1,000 damages and from the verdict and judgment the defendant has now appealed on the ground of misdirection. The Government has just purchased King's Castle grounds in Fifeshire, which commands a view of the entire entrance to the Forth, and it is to be used as an observing station. It is understood that there is a scheme for great additions to the fortification along with the construction of the naval base at the Forth Bridge.

"SPORT AT AN INDIAN COURT IN THE FORTIES."

STAG HUNTING WITH DECOY STAGS.

No. I.

IT was private business that took me first to the Court of Nazir Ali Shah, the King of Gholampore. Being curious to see what an Indian monarch was like, I obtained an audience through a friend at Court.

Subsequently, being given the hint privately, I asked for, and was accorded a post in the household of His Highness the King, and thus witnessed, and indeed participated in all the details of his private life.

Hence I found myself one of the party that accompanied the King in the winter of 184—on a week's shooting expedition.

"We shall have deer-stalking, pigsticking and tiger-hunting"—had said his Majesty, with enthusiasm, "before we return to Gholampore," and so we journeyed northwards, to where this game was to be found!

The enormous attendance that the king required made travelling then a very different matter to nowadays, and our progress was far from rapid! The trained stags, used as decoys, were brought with us, the hawks likewise, for we were to have hawking too; the cheetahs, came in wagons with their keepers and attendants. There was the king's harem, of course, containing his wives, his singing and dancing girls, their servants and their attendant female sepoys, forming an army of covered conveyances in themselves; there was the body-guard, in its flaunting livery of blue and gold; there were elephants bearing tents and baggages;—there were camels and horses in abundance, some for riding and some as beasts of burden! Add to all this our train, consisting of elephants, horses, and palanquin, and you can imagine that our advance was more like the march of an army, than the progress of a simple hunting party!

Having reached a point where deer abounded, we halted, and it was determined that deer stalking was to be the order of the day,—deer-stalking of two different kinds: First, with the decoy stags; second, with the trained cheetahs.

The use of the trained stags as they were employed in Oude, I've never heard of before or since, and it may be imagined with what interest I followed the day's sport

Close in the neighbourhood of our encampment was a fine open country, and adjoining that a forest teeming with game. Nothing could have been better adapted for the sport in view.

The beaters were sent in to the forest, and with great care and skill they contrived to drive the deer without alarming them, or rousing their suspicions, towards the point of the jungle, where we under cover could watch them in the open, and see the trained stags work.

On the edge of the open the whole herd congregated, protected by the most powerful and warlike of its males. Now was the time, and our trained stags,—some ten or twelve of that finest and most powerful males to be had —trotted gently across the open ground.

As the deer saw them, the guardian males of the herd advanced to meet them, and in a few minutes, whether their intention had been peaceful or otherwise, the wild and the tame animals were locked together head to head, antler to antler fighting with the utmost fury.

We now made our appearance in the open on horse back, and came towards the scene of the contest. The rest of the herd, who were still waiting on the edge of the jungle, scampered off, leaving their warriors to fight it out. These, of course, were too much engaged to observe us.

Meanwhile a party of native horsemen riding carefully round unnoticed, got between the wild stags and the forest. I watched them, wondering what their object could be, but I was not long left in doubt, and it was with a thrill of horror that I saw them accomplish their (to my mind) brutal task. Once having got between the combatants and the wood, they crept silently and rapidly up behind the wild stags, and with one skilful cut of their long knives the poor beasts fell hamstrung.

It was brutal! and one felt a wave of pity for the noble animals as they fell helplessly on the ground, unable to continue fighting and pushed down by the decoy stags.

The tame animals were called off in a moment; and the training exhibited by them was little short of marvellous. Not one of them pursued his victory; their work was done, and, like well-trained dogs, each obeyed the voice of his keeper, and was led off, many of them bearing evidence in gaping wounds and gored chests that the fight had been no sham.

They were led past as we rode up, and beautiful they looked, capering over the ground as if proud of their exploits, tossing their fine heads and stamping and sometimes looking as if a little more fighting would not come amiss, this time with each other The contrast presented by the overthrown wild animals was a pitiable one. Their whole soul and energy was concentrated in their eyes, and as we rode from one to the other of the fallen warriors their gaze followed us intently and as if reproaching us for the foul means used to overthrow them.

It was simple butchery that ham-stringing, and I heaved a sigh of relief as the king gave the order for their throats to be cut; nothing else was possible under the circumstances, but to put them out of their misery.

One feels a certain amount of pity for the hare when a whole field—men, horses and dogs—turns out to course it in England, but never have I felt such a sense of choking pity for any hunted animal as I felt for those mute, large-eyed, noble stags as they lay there looking reproachfully at us.

This was the only use I saw made of the decoy stags, but I was told how they are also used when they wish to take the wild stags alive and uninjured.

They proceed in the same way, except that the men advance from behind, armed with nets and ropes and not with knives. Their task is one of difficulty and danger. Two men come up to each of the wild animals: the net is skilfully thrown over the head of the stag and he is upset by a sudden jerk. Should he catch sight of the men beforehand and turn on them, or should the jerk not be sufficient to upset him, and he attack the men, their lives are in imminent danger.

It is also a ticklish matter to throw the net completely over the wild without entangling the antlers of the tame stag and the men require to watch their opportunity and be as quick as lightning in seizing the one second when the two animals separate to make a fresh rush at each other.

The net having been successfully thrown and the animal fairly entangled and on the ground, the difficulty is not yet over, for the strength these beautiful beasts exhibit with their delicate legs and graceful little bodies is marvellous: they struggle frantically and require four and five and sometimes more men to hold them down until they have been roped and bound down beyond all chance of escape. They kick and plunge with such desperate energy that there is great danger of their straining, or even breaking their legs during the process of being roped,—and when they are finally carried away in carts, it is still with men sitting on them to keep them quiet. Having got them safely home, the poor beasts have to be kept without food and water, sometimes for several days on end, until their spirit is broken and they will allow themselves to be handled without resenting it. They are then handed over to the tender mercies of their tame comrades, in much the same way as wild elephants, before their actual training as decoy stag can be undertaken.

As I said before, however, I didn't see this way of using the trained stags; and as we all rode homewards, the king in high good humour at the success of his first day's sports, I felt that my soft-heartedness was out of place, and turned my thoughts with pleasurable anticipation to the excitement of the cheetah hunt, which had been promised for the following day.

THE PROPOSED GAME LAWS.

The following interesting letter has been circulated.—

TO THE COMMITTEE OF THE NILGIRI GAME AND FISH PRESERVATION ASSOCIATION,

GENTLEMEN,—The Nilgiri District has its Game Laws and its Game Association and on the plateau reside many Europeans keen and watchful to see that offences are not committed, or if committed are punished. On the slopes and lower elevations, however, where the nurseries exist that chiefly supply the plateau and where dwell the great stags which alone can keep up a stock of trophies worthy of shooting, the poaching and systematic slaughter, and the trade in fish and venison are known only to the few who are familiar with the facts, from having visited these jungles frequently.

The neighbouring Coimbatore District which for a long distance marches with the Nilgiris and which I think is one of the best districts in India, has of late years imposed a fee for license to shoot, but no close season is prescribed for the reason that the Authorities find themselves, with their existing Forest Staff, powerless to enforce it.

Experiments have been made on the Nilgiri slopes by the employment of native game watchers, but as these were usually appointed to act singly the men were naturally afraid to do their work, afraid of Elephants, afraid of making themselves obnoxious in places where they could very easily be harmed, even done to death, with little chance of the crime being detected, afraid of fever and afraid of being alone in the wilder parts. They simply stuck to the public roads, and were (with one exception) absolutely useless.

I have for many years realised that to efficiently protect the Game and Fish of these two fine Districts and any adjacent district that might, we all hope, be brought under preserving regulations, in this Presidency, an European Officer familiar with the country and the people of the wilder and more remote and jungly portions could, with a light and portable camp and a small and carefully selected staff, paid as far as possible by results, do a vast deal of good.

Without such an officer to regulate and supervise and to lend confidence to the staff, attempts to preserve, outside the mere Nilgiri Plateau are futile.

He should work hand in hand with the Forest Department and the Police and the Game Association. He should be about the forest for at least nine months of the year, making unexpected swoops upon places where information had been given that poaching was rife. He should be up and down the river banks, removing weirs, dams, cruives, etc., etc. He should be armed with magisterial powers and so enabled to take up cases on the spot and punish any offenders whom he might find In flagrante delicto.

He should be in a position to pay rewards for vermin destruction as he goes around, and so save the destroyer a long wait for his reward or a long journey to realise it, both of which are discouragements.

He should be able to offer small rewards for information of a reliable nature lending to convictions, and pay these promptly.

He should keep, and every month or so, submit to the Game Association, and to Collectors of the Districts protected, a diary showing what he had done and conveying any information collected on his tour.

He should destroy, or confiscate, all nets, traps, and falls that he might come across.

He should claim to see every gun license in the Districts under his supervision and have the power to confiscate guns unlicensed.

It should be his duty to recommend to Collectors the closure of any portion of any District that had been unduly shot over.

N. B.—To show the urgent necessity of this I may say, I have just returned from a trip to a neighbouring forest where every bungalow and chattram was occupied by a shooter or recently had been, and where one sportsman avowed to me that his bag was:—

9 Chetal.
7 Bush Antelopes.
1 Bear.
1 Boar.
and other things.

In the same vicinity a companion of his had been shooting and carried away (so the D. F. O. told me he has heard officially):—

6 Bison.
13 Cheta, etc., etc.

The total bag for these two guns alone was therefore some 11 Bison and 22 Chetal a cruel indent on a area of 15 miles radius or less. Other animals were shot (which were not taken away).

In and about the same area two more bulls were shot by others and many bulls and cows and other game wounded and missed.

I am well aware that the Nilgiri Game Association could not afford to pay even the modest remuneration that such an officer and his subordinates would require, but I think experience would prove that a portion if the cost would be money well spent by the Association and if my scheme commends itself to the Association the Government of Madras might be asked to assist.

The Incumbent should on no account be allowed to, himself, shoot beyond the limits permitted to any license holder; (were it not that the work would be so uneventful and lonely I would suggest that he should not shoot game at all) and it is obvious that a limit should be set in Coimbatore District and rigidly enforced, and at once.

I have this matter very much at heart and if the Association thinks with me that real good could be done by an energetic and zealous officer I propose that they recommend the scheme to Government.

Having the time, the inclination, and the health to carry out the duties (and they would, if performed as I would hope to see them done, form no light or easy task). I beg to offer my services for say a year or two as a tentative measure, and I engage neither to neglect the work nor to abuse the powers that might be given me.

I would merely add that I think I am now familiar with the outlying jungles of a greater area in the two Districts mentioned than any white man of my acquaintance and that I have done a very considerable amount of game protection on my own account and destroyed an enormous amount of poaching appliances in use both against Game and Fish.

If you think I can be of any use to the public in general and to sportsmen in particular I beg you will further this scheme.

For precedent, an Officer has been appointed in Mysore for similar work.

To avoid all risk of a feeling that too much to help, or to mar the chances of intending visitors to these Districts for sport, I would suggest that the Incumbent should be called upon to give an assurance that no such help directly or indirectly, would be afforded. Nor any information whatever as to chances of sport and in this connection I would go further and have it made plain, by notification attached to licenses, that no assistance whatever should be sought for—or would be given by the Officer.

Finally, my desire—and it is shared by many—is to preserve the Game and Fish we have and prevent the reckless waste of both now going on.

I am, Yours Faithfully,
W. L. EDMISTON.

P. S.—The above was sent to printers (by a strange coincidence) the day before I first saw or heard of the Bill for all India protection.

The instructions are most simple and clearly given, and to men on shikar trips, Officers on active Service, missionaries and others who live far from the reach of the professional man it is likely to be extremely useful.—The Pioneer.

For men on shikar trips, and Military Officers on service it must be useful.—The Daily Post.

For men on shikar trips or on Field Service such a handy little book should be useful. It is one we can recommend.—The Indian Medical Gazette.

CALCUTTA MONSOON RACES.

HON. MR. A. A. APCAR,
MR. W. GARTH,
MR. G. B. PARIS,
MR. H. T. PETER,
Stewards of the Calcutta Turf Club.

Judge.—MR. E. C. APOSTOLIDES.
Starter.—MR. R. G. BATES.
Time-taker.—MR. GEO. JAMIESON.
Offg. Secretary.—MR. G. B. DEAKIN.

Third Meeting, Saturday, 20th August 1904.

OF course this afternoon's racing was not going to be let off without rain. It was wet from the start of the first race till proceedings were half way through, when it cleared up and the weather ruled fine for the rest of the evening. It was not a favourite's day by any means, Miss Beryl and Naiades being the only popular fancies who came through. In the Middleton Plate Flash, an 8 to 1 chance, obtained the verdict. An objection was lodged against him for crossing, but the Stewards overruled the objection. The Amateur Plate was won by Pierette and the Kidderpore Plate by Sunshine, another outsider in Moonlight coming through in the Pony Plate. Naiades and Kittylea divided favouritism in the Ellenborough Plate, the former winning comfortably by two lengths. Miss Beryl was the tip for the small Pony Handicap and making no mistake won easily. Details :—

SMALL PONY HANDICAP.—Rs. 500 to the winner, Rs. 100 to the second, and Rs. 50 to the third. A High-weight Handicap for Arabs and C.-B.'s 14-1, and other ponies 14-0 and under. 5 furlongs.

Mr. Cecil's bk aus m Miss Beryl, 12st. 10lbs.	O'Neil	1
Mr. A. N Dass' baus m Rezia, 10st. 2lbs.	Mr. Dudley	2
Mr K. M. Hamilton's b or br aus g Good Chap, 8st. 12lbs.	Owner	3
Mr. R. B. Lamotte's b aus m Blue Bell, 8st. 7lbs. (dec. 1lb.)	Mr. Evers	0
Mr. Galstaun's b aus g Not Yet, 10st.	Hard	0
Mr. Galstaun's ch aus m Western Queen, 10st. 10lbs.	Owner	0
Mr. S. T. Dutton's ch aus m Golden Tip, 9st. 12lbs.	Mr. Deakin	0
Mr. B. Allen's bk aus m Coal Queen, 9st. 8lbs.	Howie	0
Mr. Banker's ch aus m Little Doris, 9st. 2lbs.	W. White	0

(Winner trained by Wishart.)

Totalisator paid Rs. 25 to win, Rs. 15, 26, 74 for places.

BETTING : Evens Miss Beryl, 5 to 1 Golden Tip, 6 to 1 each Rezia and Western Queen, 12 to 1 each Blue Bell and Little Doris, 15 to 1 each Not Yet and Good Chap, 20 to 1 Coal Queen.

After a long delay at the start, owing to the fractiousness of Little Doris, they were got going, Miss Beryl showing the way ; then Blue Bell took command and led to the turn, here Miss Beryl again went to the front and won easily by a length and a half ; same distance between second and third. Time—1min. 9⅘secs.

THE ELLENBOROUGH PLATE.—Rs. 750 to the winner, Rs. 150 to the second, and Rs. 100 to the third. A High-weight Handicap Hurdle Race for horses. About one mile and a half, over seven flights of hurdles.

Mr. Raban's br aus m Naiades, 10st. 9lbs.	Hard	1
Mr. Rodocanachi's ch aus m Kittylea, 11st. 8lbs.	Shelldrake	2
Mr. R. A. C. Pugh's ch aus g Odin, 9st.	Mr. Evers	3
Raja A. N. Roy's br aus g Bob, 9st. 7lbs.	McCallum	0

(Winner trained privately.)

Totalisator paid Rs. 32 to win, Rs. 13 and 14 for places.

BETTING : 6 to 4 agst. Naiades and Kittylea, 10 to 1 each Bob and Odin.

Odin and Kittylea led over the first hurdle, then the former went to the front and showed the way to the new stand, where Kittylea went up to him and they raced together with Naiades coming up. Coming round the turn Odin was out of it and Naiades had caught Kittylea ; the latter gained a slight advantage at the penultimate hurdle, but Naiades came away and won by two lengths ; three lengths between second and third. Time—3mins. 23⅕secs.

THE MIDDLETON PLATE.—Rs. 500 to the winner Rs. 100 to the second, and Rs. 50 to the third. A High-weight Handicap for horses which have not won a flat race value Rs. 500 or upwards, since 31st March 1902. 5 furlongs.

CALCUTTA COURSE CHAT.

ALTHOUGH Thursday was a bit on the close side, there was little else to complain of ; in fact, an interesting morning's work was the result. McCallum on Bob, however, supplied a disturbing element by the persistent manner in which he cantered along on the course proper while other horses were coming on three abreast at racing pace. McCallum is certainly new to Calcutta, but as a printed circular has been placed in the hands of all the owners and riders, strictly forbidding the practice complained of, the infringement was a little surprising.

Miss Beryl (O'Neil), Irish (Bloss), Blue Bell (native), opened the ball from the 6 furlong post, racing away on equal terms followed by Mr. Deakin on Golden Tip and Daphne (native), who put up a quick 7 furlongs. The evergreen Kittylea with Shelldrake in the saddle, came along a good mile.

O'Neil on Mr. Paris' Kellnerin seemed to have the measure of Pylara, ridden by the stable boy, in their 7-furlong argument ; and Flash (Howie), Fusilier (Regan) went a smart 5-furlong bout. The same jockeys later on paid attention to Thundercloud and Norman, all from Smallman's.

Second Thought (Walker) came from the 5 furlongs in her usual taking style.

Daffodil was sent along by Shelldrake, about a mile, easing up though before coming under close observation.

Winklet (O'Neil), Jacinth (Mr. Holmes), Morris (native) and the old Beau (Bloss) had a dust up, honours resting with the former.

Cahill brought Moonlight along to quick time, with Calm (Toe) on her quarter.

White was on All Fours, trying conclusions with Yuletide.

Mr. Deakin on Perfect, Shelldrake on Shylock and Johnson on Pubna, after putting in a bit of smart travelling, had to ease down at the finish, owing to the leisurely movement of McCallum on Bob referred to previously.

The comic element was supplied by a most astounding piece of horsemanship on the part of a native who rode Florence. I wonder how owners allow such wallopping exhibitions. The good looking Footlight was doing easy exercise under the experienced guidance of O'Neil.

Quicksilver (Mr. Rees), Euryalus (Mr. Dudley) and Tadmore (native) came quickly away from the culvert side, pulling up by Kugleman's tree.

Cheer Up (Mr. Pugh), Odin (Mr. Wilmot), Road Metal (Mr. Tanner) and March (Mr. Stewart) came the pace right up the straight a good full 4 furlongs, most of the heads being in check.

Next Mr. Dudley took out Rezia a good fast working gallop, alighting and leading his charge back across the open.

Oom Paul (Mr. Rees) made his first appearance this morning, probably in view of a cut in at the last meeting.

Reveille (Walker), Little Doris (White) put in a fast gallop, the first named in command.

Moss Rose (Mr. Dudley) and Not Yet (Mr. Galstaun) wound up the morning, with a fairly even exchange of 3 to 4 furlongs.

On Saturday quite a number of candidates were on the move from a little after daylight, the first being that early bird, Mr. Bert Allen. His string was doing gentle exercise off the course, down by the Yacht Club, though Mr. Harold Smith put Young Rake over four flights of the pony course, but had to dismount on the far side, to arrange his numda from which point he cantered back to the opening by the big tree, not overpleased with his ride. Hello, Thundercloud (Howie) and Flash from Smallman's, did a dash across the open about which there was nothing particular.

Naiades did a taking gallop under Hard's pilotage, and her free striding augured well for her sporting owner, who was about due a win.

I see Johnson has Macedon now in hand, and wonder if he'll infuse any pace into this hair trunk; the morning's work certainly gave no indication of this, as it was as mournful as usual.

Norman (Howie) with Mademoiselle for a companion, went a school. The former I think from the way he has been shaping, cannot possibly be far off a win. He's a clinking bit of stuff.

Mr. Gregory watched his new purchase Stelliform putting in a bit of jumping, under Howie's guidance. The first two flights were clouted a bit, but the other two he was put at were taken all right. This horse will improve.

Mr. Dudley slipped Planet along a pipe opener with another, in view of his little contract for the afternoon. Later the same gentleman sent Euryalus a quick spurt, Mr. Galstaun on Shooting Star, acting as a buffer. Mr. Dudley and his equine charges are on very friendly terms I see

Mr. Hamilton had a brush up on Good Chap and Mr. Galstaun took Clynder round.

White was out on Oom Paul This horse will be giving us a sample of his form in September, by which time he will be about the ticket.

Bell Brand (Howie) was well in evidence, putting in an attractive piece of work.

The going on Tuesday was certainly soft after the previous night's rain, but as the morning was on the whole fine, the various strings in training were at it from the amateur camp by the hospital, and the new stand, Mr. Dudley's pitch by the big tree right on to the Ellenborough. On the latter course Wishart had a goodly number at work, ridden by O'Neil and Shelldrake all doing gentle exercise. Mr. Rodocanachi's were also putting in their little bit of work.

Among the horses working on the town side, I noticed Pat C. (Regan) putting up a bit of travelling, and young Rake, same rider, being treated to a twice round, going fast on the upland by the tank. Mr. Bert Allen had as a lieutenant Griffin, the new trainer, who has just arrived with Barney Allen's new ones, for the cold weather campaign. The other ponies from this stable were doing medium to slow exercise. The same remark applies to Smallman's horses. Autocrat was shoved over a bit of the course, to slow time.

Bellmeath (W. White) and Planet (native) were spurted a bit across the open. I fear the first named has not trained on as anticipated, and will be reserved for the big meeting, and Planet has simply gone off, and cannot be got to put up a race. This is very annoying to Mr. Dudley, who is such a 'grafter," but he'll be getting his turn I think yet, with Bellmeath, at all events.

Johnson, who now has charge of Pubna and Macedon, had them both out, and administered a pretty stiff dose of work to the latter. He says he is a great, big, gross horse, and requires plenty of work. The twice round, fairly fast in the heavy going was certainly not a mere breather, as the horse's constitution indicated upon returning to his stalls.

Johnson goes on to Poona a little later to ride Mr. Apcar's second string jumpers in their engagements. He's a good horseman, having matriculated in the right school, the Western District of Victoria, and he ought to get plenty of riding.

I noticed O'Neil going round on Miss Beryl, later the longtailed Bob put in a good twice round, with a native boy in the saddle, Florence following suit.

Little Regan was out on Mademoiselle down the Yacht Club way.

Some of the new ponies per S S Gracchus were being put under the standard preparatory to the official measurement that will be on at the new stand next Saturday morning.

But the bonne bouche of the morning, was the report of the objection Mr Rodocanachi, owner of Perfect, has laid against Moonlight. The latter was entered and run in the 6-furlong Pony Plate last Saturday as a C. B., while it is alleged that the horse is an Australian. The matter is still sub judice.

THE TURF.

HURST PARK.

NEITHER the close of the London season nor the general exodus to the seaside for the summer vacation exercises a deterrent effect upon the attendance for the August Bank Holiday Meeting at Hurst Park, for numbers of folk must always remain in the metropolis, and they are practically all on pleasure bent. It was a huge concourse that assisted at the proceedings on the 1st instant, and they were treated to enjoyable sport amidst typical midsummer conditions. The course yielded excellent galloping, and runners were plentiful.

The Hurst Park Holiday Handicap of 785sovs. One mile and a quarter.

BRIGHTON.

Brighton, always full in the early days of August, is filled to its utmost capacity at the present moment, and the influx of holiday makers continues day by day. The early trains from London were packed to overflowing, and there are signs that the second half of the Sussex fortnight will enlist the suffrages of racegoers to a wider extent than did Goodwood week. Certain it is that the meeting has seldom opened under more favourable auspices than upon the present anniversary. The attendance in all departments was on a flattering scale; White Hawk Hill was bathed in brilliant sunshine throughout the afternoon, and a keen breeze from the sea kept the temperature within reasonable limits. A heavy storm during the night had rendered the galloping in capital order, and fair sport was witnessed.

The Brighton Stakes (Handicap) of 437sovs. One mile and a half.

The haze that portends fierce heat overhung the coast line on the morning of the 3rd instant, and the promise of a hot day was fulfilled to the letter. Down in the town of Brighton there was little air stirring after the sun had focussed itself upon the maze of modern tenements, but on the summit of White Hawk Hill a gusty wind blew fitfully up from the Channel, and the vitalising influences of the sea breeze had an exhilarating effect upon the vast concourse of spectators, who swarmed in thousands over the downs. With one exception the fields did not exceed ordinary limits, but there were sufficient runners for spectacular purposes, and the sport went with a swing.

BOVRIL

From a spectator's standpoint the meeting which concluded yesterday must rank as one of the most enjoyable ever celebrated on the breezy uplands that dominate the town of Brighton.

Uninterrupted sunshine and exhilarating airs were associated with each stage of the fixture, and the gathering wound up under typical mid-summer conditions. When racing was resumed the downs were once more thronged with pleasure-seekers; across the valley the harvesters toiled laboriously in the semi-tropical heat, and away in the distance the sea, alive with white-winged craft, sparkled and scintillated in the blinding glare. It was not until the programme was half run through that the sky became over-cast and a thunderstorm hovered overhead, but happily it was not until the entertainment had concluded that rain began to fall. The Brook-side Plate, won a twelve months ago by Orme Shore, gave rise to some brisk speculation, and Amalgamation and Descombe were inseparable on the 9 to 4 mark when the lot of eight were despatched to an excellent start. Mr. Randall's filly, in receipt of 9lbs., had run Bancroft to a head at Goodwood, and though the form did not amount to much, she proved capable of holding her own in this company, scoring readily by three lengths from Monsieur Beaucaire. Descombe is the Desmond—Combine filly. She ran third to Lady Honora and Shanid Aboo on Tuesday, and could do no better than occupy a similar position to-day.

CRICKET.

RUGBY vs. MARLBOROUGH.—Played at Lord's on 27th and 28th July. Marlborough won by nine wickets. On the first day of this match Marlborough had much the best of matters, for they scored 358, and dismissed four of their opponents for 127. For this good position they were largely indebted to their captain, A. P. Scott, who, going in first, made 155 in four hours by excellent all-round cricket, his hits including thirteen 4's. But Ireland and Butterworth also deserved well of their side, both playing a very good game indeed. The partnership between Scott and Butterworth for the first wicket produced 153 in an hour and three-quarters, and there was not much sting left in the bowling when they were separated. At lunch time the score was 214 for two wickets, and Scott only required a single to make his hundred. The partnership for the third wicket between Scott and Ireland was responsible for 140 runs in about an hour and-a-half. The Marlborough tail did very little, for Tripp, who had previously bowled lobs without any effect, went on again with slow round arm, and took five out of the last seven wickets for 30 runs. There was nothing remarkable in the batting of the Rugbeians until Chadwick and Burton came together for the fifth wicket, when the bowling was fairly mastered. When stumps were drawn at half-past six instead of seven, on account of the bad light, Chadwick was not out 21, and Burton not out 53, the unfinished partnership having produced 86 runs in about an hour. On the next morning these two men remained together until their entire partnership had increased the total by 145. They were both dismissed at the same total, 186, after being together for an hour and fifty minutes. There were now hopes that, thanks to their fine play, their school would easily save the follow on, but the tail did very little, Scott taking the last three wickets for 10 runs. In the follow on Burton again played fine cricket, among his hits being four on-drives to the boundary off successive balls from Scott. Sloman also played an excellent game, but the large individual total which was required was not forthcoming, although the innings defeat was saved. Marlborough had to make 67 to win, and so boldly did Milton hit that the runs were bowled off for the loss of one wicket.

SURREY vs. NOTTS.—Played at the Oval on 1st, 2nd, and 3rd August. Notts won by two wickets. Although this match was not played for the benefit of any player, the Surrey committee gave permission that a collection should be made on the ground on behalf of Robert Abel, whose benefit match, some years ago, was more or less of a failure. A very large crowd assembled, and as it happened they saw some of the most interesting cricket of the season. Surrey went in first, and on a not very easy wicket began very badly indeed—so badly that when Abel, Baker, Hayes, and Holland were all out the total was only 25, and as Hayward was not playing on account of a strain, things began to look exceedingly bad for the home team. But at this critical period Raphael and McDonell played so plucky a game that they put on 59 runs for the fifth wicket, Raphael's innings was perhaps the best of the day. Things looked better, but Surrey men were again disappointed, for the seventh wicket fell at 105, and the eighth at 133. But then there came the surprise of the innings, and Nice and Leveson-Gower put on 94 runs for the ninth wicket by the most attractive batting of the day. They occasionally made a risky hit, but on the whole they batted in a masterly manner, and Leveson-Gower at times delighted everybody by his clever placing of the ball. Thanks to these two men the Surrey total was much larger than had been anticipated. Notts had to bat for an hour and ten minutes. Unfortunately neither Iremonger nor A. O. Jones was able to appear in the Notts team, and in their absence the batting seemed very feeble. J. Gunn played a fine innings of 35 not out, but Lees bowled with great judgment, and when stumps were drawn four wickets were down for 65. On Tuesday morning Hardstaff and J. Gunn, realising that their side was in a bad position, played a most cautious game, and the former was at the wickets for an hour and ten minutes for his 11 runs. Gunn at one time took about an hour to make nine runs. Anthony remained with him for about an hour and-a-half during which 89 runs were put on, and at lunch time the total was 190 for six, Gunn being not out 94. Eventually Gunn's long and valuable innings came to a close after he had been batting for four hours. Thanks largely to him Surrey only had a lead of 19 runs, and on going in a second time, lost Baker with the total at 19. Raphael then joined Able, who played really brilliant cricket, and scored 30 out of the first 36 runs, and then he was bowled for 32 the total was only 40. Afterwards Raphael played another fine innings, and McDonell seemed well set when he was thrown out, but on the whole the batting was disappointing. At the end of the day Leveson-Gower made a very plucky effort to put a better appearance on the game, and when stumps were drawn he was not out 25, with the total at 161 for 8 wickets, so that Surrey were 180 runs on. Leveson-Gower could not get anyone to stay with him or the total might have been much larger, for he was again showing excellent form. Notts had to make 197 to win. For some time it seemed that this task would offer no difficulty, for after W. Gunn was out at 34, John Gunn and George Gunn increased the score to 100 by lunch time without being separated. Thus everything pointed to quite an easy victory. After lunch the two Gunns went steadily on, and 157 went up after the innings had lasted for two hours and-a-half. With only 40 more runs to make, and nine wickets in hand, no one dreamed that there would be a desperate fight before the match was won. But a change occurred in the fortunes of the game. With the total unaltered John Gunn was caught at point, having helped George to put on 123 for the second wicket in a little more than two hours. With the total at 167 two more men were out, including George Gunn who had played an invaluable innings of 86, which had lasted for two hours and three-quarters. Then Dixon and Hardstaff remained together until, with six wickets in hand, only a boundary hit was required to give Notts the victory. At this period of the game Hayes bowled Dixon and Anthony. But there were still four wickets to fall, and it seemed impossible that the result could be in doubt much longer. With a single added Oates was bowled by Nice, and when Hallam was l-b-w after another run had been made, the crowd was in the highest state of excitement, for although it was very long odds that with two wickets still in hand Notts would make the two runs required, there was just the bare chance that they might fail. Wass came in and scored a single, thus making the totals equal, and at last Hardstaff, who had been playing a very safe game, made the winning hit, and Notts were victorious by two wickets. Hayes took the last three wickets for seven runs in two overs and four balls.

MIDDLESEX vs. SOMERSET.—Played at Taunton on 1st, 2nd, and 3rd August. Middlesex won by an innings and 15 runs. So completely did the Middlesex batting outclass the Somerset bowling on Bank Holiday that 443 runs were scored by the visitors at the rate of more than a hundred per hour. The chief feature of the day's cricket was the partnership for the second wicket between G. W. Beldam and J. Douglas, who took the score from 10 to 201 before being separated. Douglas was batting for two hours, and played well all round the wicket, some of his hits being particularly good. His brother, who played first-rate cricket, helped Beldam to put on 111 for the third wicket in less than an hour. Beldam played a splendid innings, which included twenty 4's; he was batting for two hours and three-quarters, and made his highest score of the season by beautiful cricket. Hunt played a fine and determined game, and, with Hearne as a partner, put up 55 for the last wicket. Somerset had to go in for twenty minutes, and lost a wicket for 18. On Tuesday Somerset fared rather badly, but the tail to some extent redeemed the failure of the first five men, who could only account for 60 between them. Martyn was at the wickets for nearly an hour for his 43, and Daniell played exceedingly good cricket, putting on 60 runs for the last wicket in partnership with Cranfield. Somerset had to follow on, and lost their first five wickets for 103 runs. Johnson played a fine game, but could get no one to stop with him. The tail did very little, and at a quarter past six Middlesex were victorious. Johnson was batting for an hour and-a-half for his excellent innings of 74. In the Somerset second innings Napier and Wells both bowled very well indeed.

THE CANTERBURY WEEK.

KENT vs. ESSEX.—Played on the St. Lawrence Ground on 1st, 2nd, and 3rd August. Kent won by 220 runs. So many good players were at the service of the Kent committee for this match that it was decided to leave out Alec Hearne, a proceeding which seems a little like a mistake. Essex were in much the same position with regard to Buckenham, who, however, in the absence of Tremlin was wired for. Kent were batting nearly the whole of the first day, but before stamps were drawn Carpenter and Fane put up 55 for Essex without being separated. Dillon and Humphreys put up 74 for the first wicket in a little over three-quarters of an hour, and for the fourth, with Day, Mason made 135 in a little more than an hour and-a-half. Day played a most attractive innings, among his hits being sixteen 4's. Another long partnership, producing 107 runs in an hour, ensued between Mason and Blaker, both of whom were eventually run out. Mason made his third hundred in successive innings by excellent cricket: he was batting for about three hours. The tail did not do much. On Tuesday, Fane was promptly dismissed, but McGahey helped Carpenter to increase the score by 59, and to bring the total to 122, when he and Carpenter as well as Freeman were all disposed of. Afterwards Turner and A. P. Lucas put on 67 for the sixth wicket by very good cricket indeed, and as Douglas and Reeves made useful scores, the total was only 60 behind that of Kent. Before stumps were drawn Kent lost four wickets for 86, Day being not out 31. Yesterday Blaker and Day put on 91 runs in an hour, having made 19 while together on the previous evening. After this things did not go well for Kent, who, nevertheless, were able to give Essex the task of making 314 in three hours and three-quarters, a task which proved altogether too great for them.

They have cycle thieves even in South Africa, and the Kaffirs have been suspected, and in so many cases proved guilty, that a new law is being put in force which only permits Kaffirs to ride bicycles painted yellow. Others will avoid this colour, but surely it is possible to obtain yellow "paint" in South Africa, and the purloined black might soon become yellow, but all the same if a black (or brown) is seen on a black bicycle, he would have to explain things.

THE SOUTH AFRICANS' TOUR.

THE LEICESTERSHIRE MATCH.—Played at Leicester on 1st, 2nd and 3rd August. South Africans won by an innings and 1 run. The visit of the colonial team attracted a large crowd to the cricket ground on Monday. The visitors had very much the best of the first day's play, for after disposing of Leicestershire for 171 they made 203 for the loss of only two wickets. Sinclair and Kotze both bowled remarkably well. The South Africans lost Shalders with the total at 5, but Tancred and Hathorn then took charge of the bowling and put on 181 in about two hours and a quarter before they were separated. Tancred played a beautiful game and made his fourth hundred of the tour. When stumps were drawn Hathorn was still unconquered with 82 to his credit. He increased his score by 46 on Tuesday, his entire innings having lasted for three hours and-a-half, while his hits included twenty 4's. Towards the end of the innings Halliwell and White played wonderfully good cricket and added 154 to the total for the eighth wicket. Halliwell was batting for an hour and three-quarters for his brilliant 88. White played a very fine game. Leicestershire had to go in against a balance of 298, and De Trafford and Wood put up 88 for the first wicket in a little over three-quarters of an hour, and King, Coe and R. T. Crawford also played well. But when stumps were drawn, with the total at 199 five wickets were down, and nearly a hundred runs still required to save the innings defeat. Gill played a vigorous innings yesterday, and scored 62 runs in thirty-five minutes, but his side just failed to save the innings defeat.

On the 1st, 2nd and 3rd August Gloucester beat Sussex at Bristol by 168 runs; Hampshire beat Derbyshire at Derby by nine wickets; the matches between Yorkshire and Lancashire (Hirst's benefit at Leeds) and Warwick and Worcester (at Worcester) were drawn.

GOLF.

THE CALCUTTA CUP.

The fifth and semi-final rounds of the Calcutta Cup, which is competed for by Royal and ancient members, took place at St. Andrews yesterday in fine golfing weather. None of the leading players are left in the struggle which detracts considerable interest from the final stage. In the fifth round Mr. Macallum led throughout in his match against Mr. Oldham, while in the second tie Mr. Gollan, after being two up at the turn, gave nothing away on the homeward journey, eventually winning by 3 and 2. Mr. Armour had also a very easy task in defeating Mr. Rutherford. Messrs. Gollan and Macallum had a stiff match in the semi-final round. They were all square at the turn, and the match was carried to the last green, where Mr. Macallum claimed victory. Results:—

FIFTH ROUND.

Mr. A. R. Macallum (1) beat Mr. A C. Oldham (6) by 5 and 4.
Mr. Spencer Gollan (1) beat L. I. Percival (3) by 3 and 2.
Mr. W. T. Armour (3) beat Mr. G. M. Rutherford (2) by 4 and 2.

SEMI-FINAL.

Mr. Gollan beat Mr. Macallum by one hole.
Mr. Armour a bye.

FINAL.

The final took place to-day when Messrs. A. R. Macallum and W. T. Armour halved the match.

A GREAT CHANNEL SWIM.

The records made by Captain Webb and Montague Holbein in their long distance Channel swims from Dover to Ramsgate previous to attempting their cross-Channel swims, were beaten yesterday by Mr. John Albert Weidmann, a native of Dover, who accomplished the extraordinary feat of swimming from Dover to Ramsgate in six hours. The task was undertaken and carried through with an entire absence of elaborate preparations and feeding. Weidmann left Dover Beach at 11-15 A.M. in a rowing boat manned by four oarsmen and in charge of boatman William Saunders. He was accompanied by Mr. A. G. Hunt, who lent his boat, the Favourite, for that purpose, Mr. B. Harland, of the Dover S. C., Mr. P. Lasbery, Mr. F. Kidd, a representative of the Dover Standrad and two others. Rowing out to the lightship off Dover Bay, about a mile and a half from the shore, the party waited for the flood tide to start. The swinging of the lightship at 11-30 indicated that the flood tide had commenced, and at 11-35 Weidmann plunged into the sea with a hearty send-off from his friends, and started off at a good pace with the breast-stroke. Weidmann used no preparation whatever upon his body, and protected his head and neck from the blazing sun with a white canvas brimmed hat. Weidmann was for many years engaged as a seaman in the Australian Service and is of simple habits. To the surprise of his friends he brought no food or drink with him. He said he had taken a "square" meal for breakfast and would require no more from the time he entered the water till he left it. He started off with about 30 strokes to the minute, which he increased later and made an average of 34 to the minute. Weidmann is a powerful and fast swimmer, and he kept the men very busy at the oars. In a quarter of an hour he had cleared the bay, and within the half hour he was off the Convict Prison on Dover Cliffs, keeping about a mile and a half from the short. From here the tide strengthened considerably, and he ploughed along in grand style. By half-past twelve he was off the South Foreland, and half an hour later he was swimming through St. Margaret's Bay. From here to Deal the south-westerly breeze increased. A fair wind helped the swimmer greatly, and he made capital progress. There was a "popple" on the sea which frequently broke over the swimmer's face, but he said it did not distress him. Deal Pier was passed in 2hrs. 52mins from the start and then some of those who had been in the boat swam with Wiedmann, but it was very difficult to keep pace with him. From Deal to Sandown, thence across the shallow waters of Pegwell Bay, Weidmann made splendid progress, swimming with clockwork precision, and reached Ramsgate at 5-30 in the evening. Half a mile from the entrance to Ramsgate Harbour Weidmann was much elated at his success, and was heartily cheered by his friends as he clambered into the boat unaided. To the surprise of all, he appeared as fresh as when he entered the water while he rubbed himself down and dressed himself without assistance. When he left the water he was given some brandy and port wine, having taken nothing throughout his marvellous feat of endurance. Weidmann, who was a friend of Captain Webb's, is about thirty-five years of age, of medium height, and turns the scale at a little over 13st. He informed a Dover correspondent who accompanied him that he had only been training three weeks for an hour a day, and that he hopes to attempt to swim across the Channel.

Hunting.

THE OOTACAMUND HUNT.

ON MONDAY (15th instant) the meet was at Kandal Cross Roads, the weather being hot and still. There was a fairly large field out. The first draw was along the marshy ground that runs in the same direction as the long swamp, up the back of Bagman. Hounds picked up a line at once, which they hunted at no great pace but very steadily over the swamp and past Rees' Corner, through Dairymaid Shola and down to Fairlawn Road. In the nullahs above the road there were too many jacks afoot to hope for much sport, so the Master took the first opportunity for stopping hounds. We then trotted back and drew Druid Shola, Jackal Shola and Rallywood all blank, though at the bottom of the last there was a stale line. We kept on towards Newmarket and about half way down hounds opened on a line. The run that followed was over a most unusual line. Crossing the Blackmoor Vale, hounds ran up the west side of Bagman and then swinging to the left skirted the bottom of Mills' Covert and went nearly down to the Municipal Stream, above which they checked. Hitting it off again they went away at a tremendous pace, turning to the right up the side of the swamp between Bagman and the first New Covert. Here the Master viewed the jack in front of them. On reaching the south shoulder of Bagman the Master was told that there were two jacks in front of us and immediately afterwards they divided. Part of the pack swung down to the bottom of Jackal Shola and killed their jack there. The rest hunted through the top of Jackal Shola and over the road into Monkey Shola, then out again, leaving Rallywood on their right and over the hill to Bluegums. Here they hunted their jack for a long time, bustling him up and down until at last the Master viewed him away seemingly dead beat, towards Porlock Wood. Leaving this on his left he took us into Governor's Shola and lay down in the thick bracken. Hounds roused him again and pressed him hard, but he kept going and held his own in front of them through Governor's Shola, from end to end, through Shaw's Plantation and on to Bamboo Shola, where they lost him. During this run no fewer than four sambur went away at different times across the line, but hounds never left the line of their jack. It was a trying day for hounds, on account of the heat.

On Thursday (18th) the meet was at Sandy Nullah Toll Bar at 7-45 A.M. The day was bright and there was a heavy dew, but it was very hot, in spite of a cool breeze. A fairly large field was out. The first draw was along the swamp above Pamela's Crossing and from here hounds spoke to a line. It was very stale, however, and they hunted it slowly to the Pykara Road a little short of the 7th Milestone. It was no use wasting our time further on this, so we crossed the swamp from the shola, and from the head of the Dartnmoor Valley a jack went away in view. He took us at a rare pace past Windy Gap and Wapshare's Hare Shola, through Wenlock Wood and Khed Shola, to the saddle above Toda Coffee Shop Shola. Here he was twice headed by people on the road and there was a check for a moment, giving him time to get another lead of hounds. Turning into Toda Coffee Shop Shola he ran through it, and at the Coffee Shola took to running the path, which he followed to its junction with the Pykara Road, and then followed the road. Just short of the Pykara Plague Camp, he turned sharp to the right and saved his brush by going to ground in the earth below the Camp, where we left him. It was a very fast and enjoyable run.

We then moved off below Rock Shola and drew along the banks of the Pykara River. Below Dormer the Master viewed three jacks out of a nullah and laid hounds on, but they turned up to Dormer at once and he had to stop them. After drawing a longway up the Yemakal Valley without finding again the Master turned towards home and on the hill where the single Bluegum tree grows hounds picked up a line. This they hunted with a very indifferent scent to the bottom of Bacon Wood and on entering this it was found that several jacks were on foot. One broke out on the Briar Shola side and another was halloaed away on the Chemmund side at the same moment. Only five couple of hounds came to the Master's horn and these hunted their jack as far as Yemakal Shola, where they lost him. Another part of the pack went to Timmy's halloa and ran through Chemmund and on to the Pykara River before they could be stopped. A third lot came out near the bottom and ran their jack to ground in the big earth below the single Bluegum tree. Captain Fife then collected hounds and came home. There was an excellent scent early in the morning, but it weakened greatly as the morning wore on.

BLUE GUM.

POONA AND KIRKEE FOXHOUNDS.

I HAVE no need from all I can gather to make any excessive demand for red letters wherewith to chronicle the hunt of the 14th of August. Dighi was the meet and, bearing in mind that it is little short of 9 miles, quite a large field of sportsmen, and more than one sportswoman, all keen for a gallop struggled out of bed in that "darkest hour that comes before the dawn" so as to be 10 miles from home before six o' the morning. Dighi lies about a mile from one of the celebrated sister hills to the nearer of which hounds were taken and "hoie'-ed" on to its steep side covered with, as far as I can make out, shrubs and grass and the ubiquitous boulder. If it is true that two solid hours were expended in drawing the one hill cover it is perhaps not to be wondered at that most except the keenest began to get impatient, even the varied assortment of quarry including a brace of hill foxen and a sounder of pig failing to arouse waning enthusiasm. Some say a jack was on foot, but between evidently bad scent and the impregnable fastnesses hounds were unable to drive their varmint friend into the open. It was not, so far as my information goes, till nearly half-past eight that a move was made towards the Indriani river, some miles on the further side of the hill, and the intervening country appears to have been monotonous and devoid of incident. Several small crops were drawn blank and it was not till quite late and till the ever-increasing heat had rendered scent a forlorn hope that hounds hustled either two or three jack out of a small cover of garden land but could make nothing of either or any of them and the temporary hope was blighted in the bud. The general impression seems to be that much valuable time was misapplied though of course it is ever easy to be sagacious after it is all over. And so experienced a Master, as Colonel Shringham must be given credit for knowing what he is about. But it is at any rate well to be borne in mind by all caterers for the public that in one sip of the bitters of life one is (unreasonably though it may be) apt to forget the sweets one has quaffed. One depressing day tends to make mortal man forget the good ones that have gone before and in this Indian hunting one can sometimes apparently do more than "deserve success" one can "command" it.

On the 18th a fairly large field headed by Lord Lamington assembled at the Railway Crossing on the Ganeshkhind Road, but it is sad to find that "some one had blundered" and that a previously advertised meet afterwards altered had not been cancelled from the list of engagements published in the local Thunderer and consequently several keen people assembled at the first-named spot several miles away. Matters like this do not tend to swell subscription lists. Among those who happily know of the alteration were Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Lucas, Major and Mrs. Cleveland, Mr. and Mrs. Beatty, Mrs. Sheringham's the Master's wife, Lady Cox, Mrs. and Miss Anderson, Colonel Channer, Mr. du Barslay, Captain Meynell in attendance on His Excellency and a few others including I hear strangers whose name I haven't been able to get. Drawing through some garden land near the Railway line which proved blank a jack wasifound in "Channer's Covert" which, it may be remembered, provided so stout a jack on a previous occasion. But alas the glorious scent which tended to such a brilliant run in that instance was absent and instead of racing away hounds had to worry it out patiently at a moderate pace. Through the outskirts of the Government Botanical Gardens the jack went and then swung suddenly to the left for some reason known best to himself towards the plain of Pashun. Scent I here improved for a time and hope ran high but after reaching the Body-Guard lines unaccountably (after the manner of that strange mystery—scent—) failed altogether and hounds had to own that they could make nothing of. A pleasant little hunting run full of interest and lasting about 10 minutes from find to check.

Then a move was made for Pashun, where a jack was viewed stealing away and owing to the dryness and hardness of the ground hounds had all they could do to work out the line. This they seem to have done admirably taking the line past the embankment and so up the hills beyond. Getting into grass land scent improved considerably but once more failing hounds had to be taken home. This was, I am told, a most pleasant little bit of rough hunting, and on the whole it was a most sporting morning and everyone went on their way homewards rejoicing.

FREEBOOTERS vs. 29TH LANCERS.—The tournament opened on the 22nd instant with the meeting of the above teams. The weather conditions were excellent, the ground in good order and the attendance a large one. The game between the Connaught Rangers and the 93rd. Highlanders which had been fixed for the same day fell through, the Rangers having scratched.

First Chukker.—Play ruled very even and was carried on in midfield, but towards the end of the period the Lancers put in a good run resulting in a subsidiary. Score: 29th Lancers 1 subsidiary.

Second Chukker.—This was another very even chukker, the ball being taken up and down the field without any change in the scoring.

Third Chukker.—The Freebooters got possession and rushing down hit a subsidiary: on the ball being hit in they secured it once more and added a second minor point. The Freebooters kept the ball in the Lancers' territory till Burton broke away and hit a goal for the 29th. Score: 29th Lancers 1 goal 1 subsidiary, Freebooters 2 subsidiaries.

Fourth Chukker.—Play was fast all through the period, but there was no further scoring.

Fifth Chukker.—The 29th got the ball and confining play to their opponents' half and put the ball through. Then the Freebooters returned to the charge but the ball went wide. The Lancers got away again and Birch hit another goal, the game thus ending in a win for the Lancers by 3 goals and 1 subsidiary to 2 subsidiaries. Teams:—

29TH LANCERS.	FREEBOOTERS.
Lieut. W. S. Clerke Burton.	Lt. Kearsey.
Capt. V. K. Birch.	Mr. Swifte, I. C. S.
Lt. C. G. H. Henderson.	Capt. Meynell, A.-D.-C.
Major D. S. Buist (back).	Capt. Boileau, R. E. (back).

BOMBAY GYMKHANA vs. 33RD CAVALRY.—These teams met in the first ties on the 23rd instant, a large and fashionable gathering being present. The Cavalry men outplayed their opponents throughout, keeping them almost entirely on the defensive, and eventually winning by 8 goals and 3 subsidiaries to 2 goals. Messrs. Graham and Crum scored the Gymkhana goals by a couple of fine runs. The Cavalry played a splendid game, their forwards displaying great dash. Teams:—

33RD Q. O. LIGHT CAVALRY.	BOMBAY GYMKHANA.
Capt. H. R. Hopwood.	Mr. J. Graham.
Lieut. F. H. B. Passy.	Mr. Barraclough.
Capt. M. H. Anderson.	Mr. W. E. Crum.
Major F. J. M. Edwards (back.)	Mr. Cornish (back.)

Umpires.—Major England and Captain Hewlett.

ROYAL DRAGOONS vs. ROYAL ENGINEERS ("A" Team).—This game was also played on the 23rd instant and was evenly and hotly contested, the Engineers winning by 4 goals and 6 subsidiaries to 3 goals and 1 subsidiary.

First Chukker.—The Sappers got away quickest and put on 3 subsidiaries in quick succession before the Dragoons got going. Score: R. E. 3 subs.

Second Chukker.—The Dragoons had found their feet by this time and getting on hit a goal. The Engineers put on 2 goals and a subsidiary before the close of the period. One of these goals is the subject of dispute for it was scored between the sound of the Time-keeper's trumpet and the Umpire's whistle. Score: R. E. 2 goals and 4 subsidiaries. Dragoons 1 goal.

Third Chukker.—Fast play ended in a minor point to the Dragoons. Score: R. E. 2 goals and 4 subsidiaries. Dragoons 1 goal 1 subsidiary.

Fourth Chukker.—Play in this chukker was most exciting. The Dragoons rushed away and hit 2 goals, the Sappers adding two minor points. Score: R. E. 2 goals 6 subsidiaries. Dragoons 3 goals and 1 subsidiary.

Fifth Chukker.—The R. E. had the best of matters and getting on hit 2 more goals, thus winning by 4 goals and 6 subsidiaries to 3 goals and 1 subsidiary. Teams:—

ROYAL DRAGOONS.	R. E. ("A" TEAM).
Capt. B. E. P. Leighton.	Major J. P. Brewin.
Capt. H. D. McNeile.	Capt. A. G. Bremner.
Capt. Hon. A. Hamilton Russell.	Major Leslie.
Capt. Hon. C. H. C. Guest, Capt.	Col. G. C. P. Onslow, Capt.

Umpires: Colonel Kettlewell and Major England.

Who is the "biggest bicyclist?" is the latest query, but says a writer in the C. T. Gazette I think the claim of O'Connor, at present in the employ of Palethorp's—the famous sausage firm, I presume. O'Connor's height is 7 feet 2½ inches; the frame of his bicycle, built by Messrs. Paskell, of Spring Hill, Birmingham, is 84 inches (the average size is 24-26 inches), and the distance from saddle to pedal is 45 inches, but the wheels are only 30 inches. Needless to say, O'Connor creates a great sensation wherever he appears, especially as he is a well built good-looking young man.

Rowing.

HENLEY ROWING OF THE LAST HALF CENTURY.

NOW that Henley Regatta is over, and with it first class rowing for this year, writes an "Old Light Blue" in The Field, will you allow one who rowed there and won the Grand Challenge and Stewards' cups to spin a yarn on the rowing of the last half century? If rowing be the grandest and most unselfish of British sports, certainly Henley is the centre of it, and that not only for Great Britain but for the whole world. And yet how little appears in your columns about the good old days—when various men and sets of men made their mark and, for a time, carried all before them, only in their turn to be beaten by younger oars, or, if wise, to retire unbeaten into private life.

The first set of victorious oars, whose tanned and wirey forms I still see before me winning the Grand and Stewards' in 1857, were the men of the Loudon Rowing Club, then in its prime—Playford, senr., Casamajor, Nottidge, and Payne. They were considerably older than University men, and rowed like watermen—the body work a little uneven, backs not all flat, but the oars in perfect time, and feathering like one man; and how they did work!! They were defeated by a fine Cambridge crew in 1858 but in 1859 they defeated both Universities, and since that day no University boat has appeared at Henley, it being made plain that the time at the disposal of the University after the May races is not sufficient to weld together the different styles of the college boats so as to send up to Henley a real 'Varsity boat. In this year, 1859, the great London and Argonaut four, which was supposed to be equal to any four of professional watermen, was defeated by a Third Trinity crew by 1ft., after one of the finest races ever seen.

Mention should next be made of the Oxford Etonian Club, in the years 1866-1871, the heroes of those days being Willan, Wood, Jack Hall, and Jim Tinné; and though I am not an Oxford man, I look upon them as oars of the highest type. Their long, easy swing forward, quick recovery of hands, and instantaneous "catch" in the beginning of the stroke brought them victory in the Grand five out of the six years, and in the Stewards' for three. Then I may refer to a period of success for London again, under the leadership of Gulston from 1871 to 1877, and with his name should go those of Long and the younger Playford. Four times in these years they won the Grand, and for eight years running they won the Stewards', and for four years the Pairs. For eight years following Henley knows not anything striking, till in 1886 and 1887 Trinity Hall from Cambridge flashes upon the aquatic world, and walks off with everything, and that in record time, under the leadership of Bristowe, with Swann and Landale at his back. In 1891 Leander comes to the front, and in eleven years wins the Grand nine times, and in those years old and sometimes present University men occupy the thwarts. First they are filled almost entirely by Oxford men of the type of Guy Nickalls, Fletcher, and Kent, and latterly by Cambridge men such as Goldie, Dudley Ward, Payne, and Etherington Smith, thus marking the ebb and flow of 'Varsity rowing from one University to the other.

From 1902 to the present day the heroes of the regatta have been Third Trinity, Cambridge, and on them seems to have fallen the mantle of the Oxford Etonian Club of forty years ago But, grand as their rowing has been, misfortune haunts them every year, and sickness or accident has never failed to jeopardize their Henley chances, till this year, in despair of success under their own name, they have given their services to Leander. Let us hope that fortune will smile upon the young members that are left, and that with the help of some goodly recruits from Eton, they may still leave their doings on the Henley records, in their own names, for many years to come.

It is curious in this brief record of the past to notice the various men or sets of men, that for several years, have been head and shoulders over the rowing men of the day, and have, in several international contests with America, Canada, Holland, and Germany, been always able to establish the fact that if England has its peers in cricket and football, it has never yet found its equal in amateur first-class rowing, of which the Universities and Henley are now the mainstay. This imperfect sketch of the past may lead to some interesting recollections from other and better hands.

Wheeling.

LONDON, 5th August 1904.

LAST Monday, the first Monday in August, was duly held in this country as a public holiday, and whilst some wheelmen toured the country in all quarters of the compass others raced at the numerous meetings held in almost every town of importance on the last summer holiday of the year. It would be impossible in the space at my disposal to even lightly dwell upon each meeting, I must pass them over, and confine myself to such meetings that boasted the entry of one of the leading riders of the day. The best meeting in London was at Putney, the Putney Athletic Club providing an interesting and varied programme in which flat racing was intermixed with cycling events. But handicaps figured prominently, the only scratch race being the ten-mile event for the "Rawson" Challenge Cup in which ten riders faced the starter. It was a good race in which last year's winner—E. S. Montgomery—was only beaten on the post by A. Halsall, a fellow clubman.

At the Crystal Palace track the six hours' race for the classic "Dibble" Shield was decided, but what a miserable fiasco it proved compared to earlier tussels for this historic trophy. In the days when the Shield was competed for in a twelve hours' race and C. G. Wridgway, Dick Palmer, and Frost made the spectators frantic with excitement, one could sit the full twelve hours out without feeling weary, but in last Monday's race half an hour was quite long enough to devote to the racing, if such it could be termed. Had G. A. Olley, who holds two shares in the trophy, started with the others, then the contest might have been worthy the name of a race for he would have proved a rival to Leon Meredith who from start to finish showed his superiority of the other three starters—E. L. Hornstead, B. Jones and A. J. Rice—ultimately winning with 128 miles 800 yards to his credit. The second man turned up in Jones over eight miles behind.

On Saturday at Barrow-in-Furness, the second batch of National Cyclists' Union's championships were decided consisting of three events for professionals over distances of quarter, one and five miles and two for amateurs over five and twenty-five miles. The results of the professional events, however, rested with four riders—H. Jenkins, H. B. Howard, Tom Davies and Tom James, the quarter mile falling to Jenkins with Davies second and Howard third; the mile to Jenkins again, Howard second and James third, and the five miles to Howard, James and Jenkins, but this latter event was declared off as the riders had exceeded the time limit. In the five miles championship for amateurs a very fine finish was witnessed between Leon Meredith and A. L. Reed, the two being so close together when crossing the tape that no one but the judges were able to place the men, they doing so to the benefit of Meredith. Another good race—only amateurs in this country can give the spectators a good exhibition of riding—was the twenty-five miles amateur championship won by A. E. Wills in 1hr. 9mins. with Meredith second and a local man W. S. Ramsay, third.

But enough of cycling, let's glance at the motoring world and see what automobilists have been doing during the holidays. I find that they have been busy both on the sea and on the seashore; the International Motor Boat Race having been decided on the Solent on the Saturday and a well organised meeting at Bexhill-on-Sea, Sussex, on Bank Holiday. I will deal with the race on the Solent first since it resulted in a second win for this country, Mr. S. F. Edge with his Napier Minor repeating his performance of last year and carrying off the International Cup, this too in spite of competitions from France and America. After four races had been decided, the boats left in for the final were Trefle a-Quatre (France) and Napier Minor (England) possessing engines developing 82 h.-p. and 55 h.-p. respectively, yet the English boat covered the course of 7·7 knots in 23mins. 3secs., the time occupied by the French boat being 1min. 24 secs. longer. The final race was closely watched by their Majesties the King and Queen from the Royal Yacht anchored near the finishing mark, His Majesty taking a keen interest in the race.

At Bexhill-on-Sea, one of the best three days' automobile meetings ever held in this country took place, the programme consisting of races for touring cars on the private track along the sea front—the property of Earl De la Warr; competition for the best appointed vehicles; motor cycle races; procession of florally decorated cars; a battle of flowers and a Gymkhana; indeed, members of the automobile world journeyed down to Bexhill with the intention of thoroughly enjoying themselves, and they did it, with no mistake. Although the track only measured a kilometre and terminated with a hill, and the competitors in the races only drove touring cars some very good times were recorded, one car with five passengers aboard covering the course at the rate of forty-five miles an hour. The meeting attracted such enormous crowds of visitors to the town, much to the towns folks delight, that it is pretty certain to be an annual fixture in future if not a more frequent institution.

The Council of the Cycists' Touring Club have had under consideration for some time the increasing dangers to cyclists of side-slip caused by the increase of tram lines, and the methods now adopted of cleansing and watering the roads. There is no doubt that a large number of accidents, many of them fatal, due to side-slip has contributed to the decline of cycling in and near the large towns. The Council of the Cyclists' Touring Club has therefore resolved to organise a series of trials for the discovery of some device which shall reduce, if it does not altogether remove, the dangers of side-slip on bicycles. The Club has voted the sum of £400 for expenses in organising the trials and for prizes so as to encourage inventors, cycle manufacturers and others to devote considerable attention to the matter Fuller particulars will be announced later, but in the meantime it is to be hoped that inventors will devote their attention to the subject, so that when the trials are held some effective contrivance to overcome the bug-bear of cycling will be forthcoming. There is money in a good idea.

For their own safety, cyclists will have to consider the question of carrying a rear light on their machines to denote their whereabouts to traffic overtaking them. Before the advent of motor cars and motor cycles, the wheelman had no superior on the road in the matter of speed and the need for a rear light was not felt, but now that quicker moving vehicles have put in an appearance it is essential that the silent moving bicycle should make its presence known by displaying a red light in the rear. No doubt many wheelmen will resent the extra light and use it as the ground for another growl against motorists, but although they may delay the day for adopting the rear light it is bound to come, if not voluntary, by the Act of Parliament.

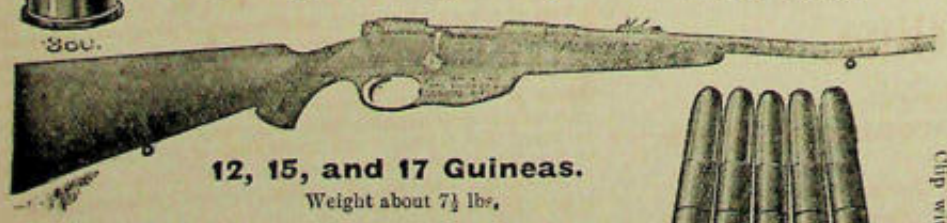
Samples of four Bullets actually taken from Lion, Hippo, Hartebeest, Zebra, &c., quite recently shot with Evans' ·360 Cordite Rifle.

Major R. Skeffington Smyth (Coldstream Guards) says.

January 23rd, 1904.

"Your ·360 Cordite Rifle put a soft nosed nickel bullet through the neck of a Hippopotamus at 170 yards range. The bullet passed through the neck and came out the farside. I am extremely pleased with the above Rifle and its excellent stopping powers."



Mr. T. P. A. Holford writes:

"I am writing to tell you about the Double Hammerless Ejector ·360 Cordite Rifle you built for me, and which I used on my last Big Game shoot in British East Africa and Uganda. I consider it the most perfect and reliable weapon I have used for Big Game. With it I killed everything from the size of a Guinea Fowl to Rhinoceros, including Lion, Zebra, Wildebeeste, Waterbuck, and many other Antelope and Gazelle. Its accuracy, striking and stopping powers are extraordinary: of the latter, the bullets cut out of dead game which I also forward, will give you a very good idea. While writing this I might also add, that I am very pleased with the Double Hammerless ·450 Cordite Rifle you built me, having done very good work with it in the Rocky Mountain."

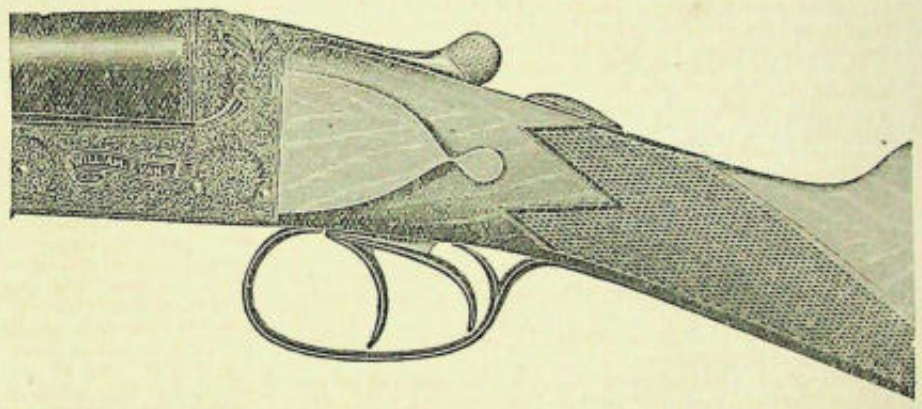
Evans' High Velocity "Magazine" Cordite Rifle.

12, 15, and 17 Guineas.
Weight about 7½ lbs.

Clip with Cartridges.

The charge of powder is 40 grains of Cordite and 270 grain Bullet, either. solid nickel, soft nosed lead or lead nose split.



The above Rifle has been specially designed for those sportsmen requiring a Magazine Rifle, burning a modern high velocity charge and heavy bullet. The Magazine takes a clip holding five Cartridges. The bolt of action is fitted with a safety catch. This is a thoroughly reliable weapon for Deer Stalking, light and handy. The striking energy of this Rifle will be found very much more effective on game than the Mannlicher, Mauser, or 303 Lee Metford.

PRESIDENCY vs. PARSEES.

By Special Telegram.

The Presidency match commenced to day (24th inst.) in bright weather. The Parsees won the toss and, batting first, ran up 194. Colabawalla and H. Kanga made a good stand for the first wicket ; but with 50 up Kanga had to retire being injured. Coombs, Greig, and Deas each obtained three wickets for 51, 51, and 50 runs respectively. The Presidency gave a most awful exhibition, being all disposed of for 48 runs. The Parsees in their second innings made 12 without loss. The following are the scores :—

CRICKET CHAT.

THE mail papers to hand this week show that K. S. Ranjitsinhji was in great form in Sussex's matches with Surrey and Derbyshire. In the former he made 152 and took two wickets for 55 runs and in the latter compiled 82, not out before the innings was declared closed. E. H. D. Sewell has struck on a bad patch and in his last four innings for Essex has only been able to score 21 runs. Major R. M. Poore, who has come into the Hampshire team for the rest of the season in his second match against Warwickshire, scored 52 and 4. Captain K. B. Mathew-Lannowe of the Queen's Regiment, the well-known Northern Indian cricketer, scored 26 and 44 for Free Foresters vs. Mr. Cripps' XI on 18th and 19th July. The Hon. C. Prettie of the Rifle Brigade, another Northern India player, made 2 and 25 for the Green Jackets against the same XI. Captain H. S. Poyntz, who will be coming out to India next year, made 85 and 45 for Somerset vs. Kent on 21st, 22nd and 23rd July top score in each innings. T. G. M. Harris, the Bombay Presidency player, scored 9 for Eastbourne vs. Sutton. H. O. C. Beasley who played a fine innings against the Authentics in India in 1903, made 24 not out for Old Westminsters vs. Hampstead. Major C. E. Greenway, the old Calcutta cricketer, has not been in luck's way lately. Playing for Incognity vs. Lythe Hill he made a blob and against Lessness Park could only make 4.

The return match between Nasik and Igatpuri from at Nasik last week resulted in a second victory for Nasik by nine wickets. The scoring on both sides was curiously uneven, Connell (66), Crofton (30) and Extras (17) being responsible for 113 of the home team's total of 128. The first innings of Igatpuri only realised 46 and the second 88. Finch (32), Williams (19), and Burns (15) contributed 66 of the latter total between them. Lazarus bowled extremely well for Nasik, taking twelve wickets ten of them clean bowled. Westerly and Wade divided the wickets for Igatpuri.

The match between Quetta and Sukkur, which was won by the former by six wickets, furnished some very interesting cricket. Quetta's victory was mainly the outcome of J. H. Curtis' batting and Captain L. M. R. Deas' bowling, two players whose doings in the cricket field are invested with a peculiar interest to Western India cricket lovers. Curtis made 48 in the first innings, the highest score in the match and Deas took eleven wickets for 65 runs, eight of them in the second innings for 39 runs. To a great many cricket lovers in India the name of J. H. Curtis, one of the very best bats in India, is not very familiar, partly for the reason that his first few years' service were spent in Burma and partly because his fine batting performances in Quetta cricket during the last few seasons have rarely been published. As a matter of fact he is one of the finest batsmen ever turned out by Clifton College which eleven he captained in 1894 and played for in the three preceding years. This fine form attracted the attention of the Gloucestershire executive who invited him to play for the county which he unfortunately could not find the time to do. He is a powerful and brilliant bat and plays in a masterly fashion, especially when cutting and driving.

The Quetta eleven was a very strong side on paper and beside Curtis and Deas included G. H. Stevenson the old Haileyburian, A. G. Fleming, the old Fettesian, Captain H. A. Lane Captain V. G. Sorel, F. M. Beatty, and W. R. Pearce. Stevenson was in the Haileybury elevens of 1893 and 1894. Lane (22), and Beaty (21) in the first innings and Vernon-Harcourt (43 not out) Deas (37) and Pearce (33) in the second innings all batted well for Quetta, while for Sukkur P. R. Caddell, the old Oxford rugger blue (28 and 16), Sardharam (26 and 1), N. M. Dinshaw (15 and 11) and N. J. Mobel (15 and 13 not out) were all in evidence. The Sukkur team included V. H. Wilson, the old Radleian and Lahore cricketer and R. E. Gibson, the old Wykehamist, but neither of them did much.

Details of two matches played by the Nagpur Gymkhana have reached me. In the first match which was played at Kamptee against the Royal Scots C. R. Cleveland, the old Oxford rugger blue, contributed a fine 78 to the total of 227 made by his side. Ratnam the native crack, also doing well with 62 not out. The highest score in the match was, however, made by Lieut. Farquharson for the Royal Scots who completed 87 not out and carried his bat through the innings. The second match was played at Nagpur and was against Bilaspore and also resulted in a victory for Nagpur in the first innings. Captain Goring-Jones was the highest scorer with 49, the only other batsmen who scored 20 being Cleveland (23), Slocock (21) and Fagan (20) all for Nagpur. Karachi Gymkhana without F. L. Sprott totalled 162 against the Sind Volunteers, G. W. Wilson (72), and Captain Price (61) making nearly all the runs. O. M. Barnes (six wickets for 36) and G. B. Newton (four for 17) bowled with irresistible effect for the Gymkhana and dismissing their opponents for 74. Captain Price has, I believe, received an invitation to play for the Presidency against the Parsees this week, but will not be able to undertake the long journey to Bombay.

A return game between Dhulia and Bhusawal resulted in another victory for the former station who won by an innings and 33 runs. L. E. Maitland Kirwan, who has been in great form with the bat this season and is unquestionably the best bat in the whole of the Khandesh and adjoining districts played a fine innings of 50. Five other men reached double figures and with 18 extras the total mounted up to 168. Bhusawal were dismissed for totals of 39 and 96. C. S. Campbell of the I. C. S. (12 and 19) being the only batsman on the side who got double figures in both innings.

Bangalore cricketers are having a most successful season and only one thing was wanted to add to the pleasures of the season and that was a century from one or other of the many fine batsmen stationed here this year. This feat was accomplished on the 11th instant by J. G. Tait who playing for the Married vs. the Single compiled 117 out of the total of 235 made by his side. The Benedicts won easily by 111 runs thanks to Tait's brilliant performance with the bat and some good bowling by Captain R. F. Standage, Captain Copeland and Major Jollie.

RUGBY IN CALCUTTA.

KING'S OWN vs. UNITED SERVICES.—This game was played on the Calcutta ground when the Fort team beat the Services by 2 goals and 3 tries to a try. The opening play was even till the King's Own broke away and a good bit of passing resulted in Bassett crossing the line : Scully converted. From the kick off Szczepanski got possession and scored, the place failing. The Services pressed for a while, then the King's Own got away once more and from a scrum near the United Service line Lieutenant Ray got over. Scully failed to add the extra points and the interval arrived with the King's Own leading by a goal and a try to a try. On changing ends the Service forwards did some good work. Captains Gardiner and Moberley and Lieutenant Szczepanski being most conspicuous, but the King's Own once more came through and Ashworth ran over with a try. This was not improved upon, a try by Lieutenant Scott also meeting with an unsuccessful place kick a little later. The King's Own continued to play in good form and Lieutenant Marshall scored their fifth try. Scully doing the needful. The Services were thus beaten by 19 points to 3.

CALCUTTA B TEAM vs. HORNETS.—These teams met on the Calcutta ground on the 18th instant, the play not being of a very interesting order. The game resulted in a pointless draw and was a scramble throughout. V. S. Apcar had the misfortune to break his ankle.

CUSTOMS vs. WEST RIDINGS.—This game was played on the Customs ground on the 19th instant, and resulted in a win for the West Ridings by 11 points to 6. The game was a scrambling one : the soldiers had the best of the scrums but were not so good "outside." In the first half they put on two tries, which were not improved upon. Roberts and Reeves crossing the line, and in the second half Coldwell scored a try just before time, Morris adding the extra points. For the Customs Maitland and Fitzgerald scored tries, the place kick failing on both occasions.

CALCUTTA vs. KING'S OWN.—The game between these teams was played on the Calcutta ground on the 23rd instant, when the home team won by 2 goals and a try to a goal. Play was not up to the usual standard. The King's Own started and after a series of scrums in their own territory the visiting forwards got away and Morgan scored a try, Scully converted. Then the ball was taken down by the home team and following lengthy scrums in the Soldiers' 25, Heilgers got over with a try. Martelli was successful with the place and the teams changed ends on even terms. In the second-half Calcutta gave a better display and Ismay got away with a couple of good runs. They kept the ball in their opponents' territory and from a scrum McDonald got over. The place failed but a good dribble by the forwards soon after enabled Curtis Hayward to score a try, adding the extra points himself. Calcutta thus won by 13 points to 5.

CALCUTTA RUGBY LEAGUE.

CALCUTTA vs. WEST RIDINGS.—The Rugby League opened last Saturday when these teams met on the C. F. C. ground. The home team had the best of matters throughout, and after rather a one sided game were victorious by 36 points to 4.

Shortly after the start a smart bit of passing by the Calcutta three-quarters took the ball down and Siddons got over with a try, which Martelli converted. On resuming the visitors broke away and Reeves passed to Coldwell who dropped a fine goal. Calcutta once more got going and led by Curtis Hayward took the ball into the Ridings' territory. Here Siddons again secured and put on another try. Martelli adding the extra points. Following on some scrums in midfield Ismay got away with a fine run and another try resulted. Martelli was successful with the place. Another good bit of combination by the forwards resulted in Heilgers scoring. Martelli kicked his fourth goal and Calcutta crossed over leading by 20 points to 1. In the second-half the home team kept the soldiers in their own twenty five and Siddons, Curtis Hayward, Dick and McDonald all got tries. Siddons converting his own, and Heilgers. McDonald's try Calcutta thus won by six goals and 2 tries (36 points) to 1 dropped goal (4 points).

FOOTBALL NOTES.

LAST week saw the inauguration of the Calcutta Rugby League and marked an important epoch in the history of the game in Calcutta. Mr. W. S. Burke has presented a Cup to be played for in league competition which this year will be decided in one round only, as the season is too far advanced to admit of return games.

The Calcutta Soccer League, instituted some years back, has had the desired effect of raising the standard of play all round, and if in a few years time the same can be said of this new venture we shall be pleased.

The C. F. C. fully maintained their superiority over all teams by defeating City and West Ridings during the week, and it seems that the more formidable the team the bigger is the winning margin. In the first game, though not at full strength, Calcutta outclassed their opponents in every department except perhaps at half-back; here Williams' brilliancy was balanced by the sound judgment and resource of Cumberledge. The latter was the most prominent man on the field and played a much finer game than he has done up to now. He gave an altogether finished exposition of the half-back game and did one or two things which I have not seen attempted here before. Towards the end of the second period and in the enemy's "25" the ball was sent out of the scrum; on seeing no one favourably placed to receive, he rushed straight through the pack himself and was over with a try before the opposition had time to realise what had become of the ball. This is an excellent ruse and well timed, ought to succeed as often as it is tried.

Barnes did very well as long as his side was attacking, I doubt it he would be of much service when it was acting on the defensive as his tackling is slovenly; although he scored twice in this game his tries were not without an element of luck. If he took Dick's place forward—this is his position—the latter could go back without weakening the scrummaging line.

Siddons, Martelli and Ismay are still going strong, though the first-named had not much to do in the City game. The forwards once more played splendidly and it was well worth watching the efforts of Curtis, Hayward, and Heilgers especially in the loose when they repeatedly led combined rushes into the enemy's territory.

Calcutta won their first Rugby League game in handsome fashion against the West Riding's by 57 points to 4. When all played so well it would be invidious to particularise, but there is no doubt that this satisfactory result was due to the brilliant and safe display given by the people outside the scrum.

The King's Own improve every game and the way they disposed of a strong team of United Service men augurs well for good things in the future.

In this game the soldiers' forwards appeared to great advantage getting out the ball frequently and wheeling the scrum effectively at times. Lieutenant Marshall was the best half on the field and was never at a loss with the ball and passed most unselfishly. Marsden did much better than usual and ought to keep his place in the team. Their's is a very workmanlike three-quarter line; Lieutenant Baker, Basonett, Scull and Asworth all participated in pretty bouts of passing which on two occasions resulted in scoring. Private Basonett is the best of the bunch, he kicks well and fields safely, besides possessing fair turn of speed. Lieutenant Baker plays in good style and knows the game thoroughly; his only fault is that his punting is a trifle weak, Scully and Asworth are usually depended on to do good things, and the former is evidently the place kick of the side. Perhaps the Fort team's weakest point is back, though on Saturday Wilson, with his long returns, was unlucky in just missing finding touch by inches on several occasions. The forwards, like those of the West Ridings, are a level lot and play much the same game as their brothers in arms. Smart packing, quick breaking up and combined rushes are their chief charateristics

Contrary to expectation City put up a poor fight in the game against the C. F. C. They played good rugger at the commencement and for a time held their ground and something more. After this they seemed to lose their heads, superior weight and combination soon wore them down and for the remainder of the game there was only one team in it. It is difficult to ascribe any reason for the poor exhibition given by this team of whom much was expected, unless it was the tame play of the three-quarters who greatly missed Warden. Templeton who might make a fair forward gave a miserable display at wing, besides indulging in a deal of unnecessary "scragging." Time after time he missed excellent chances of finding touch from opposite returns or starting bouts of passing by continually making "marks." Making one's "mark" is very useful and at times when judiciously done leads to an increase in the score: this sort of thing can be easily over done, however, as was the case in the game under notice, when not in one instance was any real advantage gained thereby.

That fine player Schaumberg made some spirit attempts to retrieve the fortunes of his side, but he was too feebly supported to do much. Nearly all the half-back work fell on the capable shoulders of Williams who played in clinking style throughout, his feint passing and sporting tactics being fine to watch. Street played an improved game, but he must learn to remain on side as by not strictly adhering to this rule he might let his side down at any moment. There was more cohesion in the forward line, they packed smartly and shoved like Trojans in the scrums, but the heeling out was poor and the hard work in the pack was minimised by indifferent footwork in the open. Grieg, Cunliffe, Roberts, and Oakley put in a deal of unostentatious work forward, and it was a pity that their endeavours did not meet with more success. Lees played his usual cool game at back and saved the situation many times by clever punting.

The Services, though not by any means at full strength yet, have not been doing badly this week. Their weakness is very pronounced at half while Pillingson is not so safe at back as his side could wish. The three-quarter line is fairly strong. Lonsada and Garstin are the best of the quartette. The former plays a spirited game and his kicking is quite classy. Garstin, who is a valuable addition to the side is speedy, fields safely and tackles faultlessly as was seen in the game against the King's Own when he collared Marshall in the nick of time after he had evarded all opposition.

The forwards are a dashing lot and work splendidly. Captains Gardiner and Moberly are hosts in themselves and show up extremely well especially in the loose dribbles. Szczepanski and Stevenson are also fine scrummagers, and when the Service men have unearthed two good halves the team will be quite up to last year's standard which is saying a good deal. Playing the City on Saturday they managed to get home by a try, after a fairly well contested game, which at any rate on paper, stamps the King's Own a better team than City, which certainly was not the case at the beginning of the season.

The soldiers' team from Dum-Dum have rather disappointed their supporters since last these notes appeared After just winning against a team like the Customs they were drubbed in hollow fashion by a strong combination of the C. F. C. The first encounter produced play of a wild and scrambling description and for once the Tykes threw their science to the winds and trusted more to superior strength and weight. Had the weather been wet and the going heavy the scoring sheet, especially in the Calcuta game, would not have told so mournful a tale.

The Ridings' play the "kick and rush" game very effectively; a wet ball and heavy ground favour their style and make them almost invincible under these conditions. The soldiers were outclassed at back and were non-plussed by the masterful passing and combination of the opposing halves and three-quarters. In the tight packs they had, perhaps, the better of the argument, but were badly beaten in the open and this inferiority had much to do with the large score against them. Reeves, as usual, did what he could at half and opened out the game for those behind him very well. Morris and Caldwell did best in the second line of defence the latter dropping an excellent goal. Their team, however, is certain to do well in the Cup and latest account of the team at Dinapore describe them as a scorching hot lot.

The Customs made their second appearance this season in a game against the Ridings with a complete if somewhat raw fifteen and gave an improved display. Rowe and Maitland again did most of the work outside the scrum and Anderson did better at full-back. The forwards have not learnt the value of combined dribbles, but pick up the ball much too frequently. This style of play is hopeless, as a player is always held before he has gone far, moreover it leads to continual scrummaging which is unsatisfactory.

Early last week the game between Calcutta "B" and La Martiniére was noticeable if only for the fact that some distinguished soccer men turned out for the first time. H. Sherman and H. Cooper made effective halves, although the latter must have put out the scrummagers at times by his wrong words of command. The boys tackled fearlessly and played very pluckily, but could make no impression on their weighty opponents. The Armenian College had it pretty well their own way in the Junior Rugby Cup last year, but their old rivals La Martiniére are likely to run them to a short head when next they meet in competition.

The Hornets played a team of a cosmopolitan character on the C. F. C. ground and emerged therefrom with a pointless draw to their credit. The game was poor beyond description and at times rough: I was sorry to notice a three-quarter on the side who displayed unpleasant pugilistic tendencies. This I understand was the first and last appearance of the Hornets this season: next week will see the revival of the combination known as the "Old Armenians."

GOLF AT AJMERE.

AS at most places in India, the royal and ancient game flourishes in the heart of Rajputana, a new course of thirteen holes has recently been laid out and opened for play. The links are peculiarly well situated and constitute, in many respects an ideal golf course, a splendid panoramic view is obtained of the whole of Ajmere and its environs, while the physical features of the country over which the course is laid, result in a variety of hazards which necessitate accurate play if one is to get round in anything approaching a decent score. The links bid fair to become very popular.

A close and exciting contest took place between Major Mead and Captain Sangster from Nasirabad and Captain Dawson and Mr. Bramley from Ajmere on the 14th instant. The interest in the game never flagged from start to finish, and eventually Nasirabad won by one stroke on the last hole. Appended are the scores, and it is hoped that many more such friendly games may be played. When the grass is grazed down the course should be in first-class order.

GOLF IN MADRAS.

THE ISLAND CHALLENGE CUP.—The final tie in this competition was replayed on the 18th instant between O. J. Sykes and F. M. Robinson. Sykes won by three up and two to play as the result of some brilliant golf, his score for the first seven holes being 4, 3, 4, 4, 4, 4, 5. The following are full details of the competition:—

C. E. Ross (4) beat J. P. Davidson (1) scratched.
O. J. Sykes (3) beat D. Dewar (5) by 4 up and 3 to play.
A. M. Urquhart (3) beat J. M. Brown (scr.) by 2 up and 1 to play.
F. M. Robinson (3) beat R. Meredith (3) by 2 up and 1 to play.

Second Round.

Sykes beat Ross by 3 up and 1 to play.
Robinson beat Urquhart by 3 up and 2 to play.

Final.

Sykes beat Robinson by 3 up and 2 to play (after a tie).

MADRAS vs. BANGALORE.

This match has been arranged for the 27th instant at Bangalore, twelve a side. Madras will be represented by the following team, which ought to render a good account of itself:—Colonel Benson, I. M. S., Major Thomson, R. A. M. C., and Messrs. Brown, Hooper, Greig, Sykes, Corlett, Urquhart, Balston, C. E. Ross, Dewar and A. N. Other.

GOLF IN THE BRITISH ISLES.

21*st July* 1904.

THERE has been a strange lull in any very important events in the golfing world of late. The Pros have been busy playing here, there, and everywhere with the same apparently automatic skill, and the course of the West Herts Club at Cassiobury Park afforded the Southern Section of the Professional Golfers Association a splendid test of skill in the qualifying competition by 36 holes medal play for the very substantial money-prize tournament in October next scarcely to the surprise of most people, who knew that ever since his victory at Sandwich Jack White, the Open Champion, has been far from well, he was not among the first sixteen, and consequently has not qualified. With 2 bad holes of 7 and 6 his otherwise good round in the morning, was not in the running, and in the afternoon he did even worse. The heat was intense and seemed to affect White more than any of the others to the detriment of his game. The best round was accomplished by Tom Yeoman, the Seaford Pro, who did a 71, but the distinction of securing the lowest aggregate in the two rounds belonged to Toogood, the West Essex professional, his first round being 72 and his second 74=146. Next to him came James Braid, whose long game was simply marvellous, and J. H. Taylor who showed all his deadliness of approaching to perfection in 148, and following hard on these came Henry Vardon with an aggregate of 149. The tie for sixteenth place was played off between W. Hunter and T. Charles, when the former was successful by a put on the home green. Over the Manchester Golf Club Course at Old Trafford, on Wednesday, 13th July, the Northern Section of the same association held in conjunction with their Annual Tournament, the qualifying competition for places in the News of the World Match Play Tournament to be held at Richmond on 4th October. The best score was returned by the old familiar Ex-Champion A. Herd going out in the marvellous score of 33, his in coming holes showed a decided falling off with a score of 40 making his round 73—which he again repeated in the afternoon and carried off the Challenge Cup presented by the Leed's Golf Club. The best round of the day was made by P. J. Gaudin, of Manchester, whose score of 70 was made up as follows: Out, 5, 4, 3, 4, 4, 4, 4, 3, 4=35. Home, 3, 5, 5, 4, 3, 5, 4, 3, 2=35 with a 77 for his first round, his aggregate was only one stroke more than Sandy Herd's 146. It is curious to note that the winning total of the two sections were identical, i. e., 146, which may perhaps go far to demonstrate to what a pitch of accuracy the game has been brought to by the first class players of the day.

Death has removed two well-known Golfers in the course of the last week. One, Mr. W. J. MacGeagh, an official of the County Down Club at Newcastle, and a most interested member of the Irish Golf Union. Though no great player, his keenness in the game, did much to encourage others, and he was also at one time a constant contributor to golfing literature. In Ireland his loss will be deeply felt. The other golfer, whose sudden death we have to record, is Mr. T. C. Glover, of Elie, father of the ex-Scottish Champion, Miss Glover. After returning from a busy career in India, Mr. Glover settled at Elie and took up golf, and it was mainly to the great encouragement she received from her father that Miss Glover's triumph and success as a player are due. Mr. Glover was present at the recent Ladies Championship at Troon, and died quite suddenly at Earlsferry.

On Saturday, 23rd July, yet another 18-hole course is to be opened. This is the Romney Sands Golf Club lying west of the famous Littlestone Links, and the course planned and carried out by Paxton, lies over a large tract of land reclaimed from Father Neptune in what is called the "Hoy," a small bay over which the sea flowed at spring tides only, but which after untiring exertion, stupendous labour, and enormous expenditure of money, the owner of the Littlestone Estate has succeeded in reclaiming and which is now many acres of fine pasture and golf land. Jack White, Harry Vardon and J. H. Taylor will play over the new course when the official opening will take place preceded by a big luncheon at the Grand Hotel. On Monday, 25th, an open Amateur Competition will be held. This New Club is in no way whatever connected with the Littlestone Golf Club whose two magnificent Links are so world famed.

Yet another Rubber Cored Ball is before the public; this one is called the "Allaway," is manufactured under special license from the Improved Golf Balls Company, Limited, costs the moderate sum of 1s. is rubber cored, highly elastic, floats in water, drives splendidly both with and against wind, putts true, does not lose its shape or paint, and will stand any amount of knocking about. What more can male or female desire. From personal experience I should recommend the Allaway Ball highly, and it is, moreover, a British industry, and as such should be supported. This Ball can be obtained direct from Messrs. A. and D. Padon, 13, St. Andrew's Square, Edinboro, who also undertake to re-cover rubber cored balls at the reduced price of 7s. per dozen, and are really as good and reliable as any ball in the market.

At Ashdown Forest, in Sussex, there is always something of interest going on. On 7th July the Annual Mixed Foursome Competition was held over the Long Course when Miss Buckhouse and Mr. T. Stanley Whitfeld were winners of the prize for best gross score in 88 which, with a deduction of 24 strokes, equalled the nett returns of Mrs. Whitfeld and Mr. H. J. Fisher. The first five couples all won something, so generous and rich are the dwellers in this Forest. Mrs. Naish and Mr. Hyde won the first Sweepstake, Mrs. Crawford and Mr. Naish the second Sweepstakes, and Miss Jeddere Fisher and Mr. J. Swainson the prize for best 9-holes coming in. Then the Harrogate Golf Club brought to a happy conclusion on Saturday, 9th July, a three days' open meeting (the first of its kind promoted by the Club.) The meeting was chiefly remarkable for the signal successes of Captain Graham, who won the Harrogate Cup and other prizes. On the first day a Ladies' Medal Competition and Mixed Foursomes were played Miss M. E. Story with 102 less 12'90 won the prize for the former, and Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Ridley carried off the handsome prize for the mixed events. Miss K. G. Moeller and Captain Graham did an excellent round of 81. The next best gross score to their's being 88 returned by Miss and Mr. Kirk. On the second day a qualifying round and first match round for the very beautiful Harrogate Cup were played, the finals of which were ultimately contested by Captain Graham and Mr. R. S. Bachouse, when the former won by 3 up and 1 to play.

A big match of 25 players a side was played at Leven on Saturday, 9th July, between the Leven Thistle and St. Andrew's Clubs when the home won by 14 matches to nine, two ending all square. The two Auchterlonies and Herd played for St. Andrew's, but all lost their matches. In fine weather the Annual Open Amateur Tournament for the Borough of Hythe, Kent, Challenge Trophy was played. In the semi-finals Mr. Barry Hythe beat Mr. Thornton (Insurance Club, Edinboro), by 4 up and 2 to play. Mr. Gregory (Beckenham) beat Colonel Martin (Deal) by 3 and 2. In the finals Barry beat Gregory by 3 and 1, a close fight.

Meanwhile The Army Cup Competition goes on apace, and several matches in the first round have been decided. In the encounter between the 1st Royal Scots and the 1st Scots Guards the former won hands down by 15 points to nil. The following represented the two regiments:—

On dit (and as for "on dits," one cannot vouch for their veracity) that the British Amateur Championship Cup is not being treated with the consideration and respect that it deserves. The trophy seems to have been carelessly and badly packed, has in consequence been badly dented and does not stand firm on its base. As an official of the Ladies' Golf Union, I have often been privileged to travel with the Ladies' Trophy to the scene of the forthcoming championship, and unless I had seen with my own eyes the veneration and extreme care with which their Cup is conveyed, I should never have believed it. The precious pieces of silver adorned with 12 winners' names is wrapped in cotton wool and biege, it is placed first in its own inner shell, and this casket is packed in a strong water-proof brass-bound zinc-lined square box, locked, insured, and the key kept and guarded by the Honorary Secretary of the Union herself. Now the American and British Amateur Champion appears to have attached little importance to the emblem of his greatness in the shape of the Cup he took away from Britain, or may be he has carried away so many vessels of silver that he has grown careless of their value and callous of their wellbeing, but in whatever state this valuable Trophy may be, next spring will see it once more in the British Isles, and let us hope some Islander may be able to keep it here!

4th August 1904.

Situated in the extreme south-east corner of our "tight little Island," may be discerned a small, very very small bay between Dungeness Point and Littlestone, this is called "Romney Hoy." Only in very recent maps is this tiny bay left out, for it is only within the last year or so that the enterprising, indomitable owner of the Little Stone Estate has accomplished his stupendous undertaking of reclaiming some 200 acres from Father Neptune's voracious clutches. It is on this reclaimed land that the Romney Sands Golf Links are now laid out, and on Saturday, 23rd July, the inaugural meeting was held. As recently as November last the 18 hole course was pegged out by Peter Paxton and for the opening Jack White, Harry Vardon and J. H. Taylor were united to take part in a professional Tournament with the local professional James Paxton as the fourth player. The Open Champion was unfortunately owing to his complete breakdown (which has necessitated his cancelling all his engagements) unable to accept the invitation and Tayler was also an unavoidable absentee. Rowland Jones of Wimbledon Park and Peter Paxton of Hanger Hill were asked to fill the vacant places and in brilliant weather the two Paxtons paired together and Vardon and Jones, the local man showed fine form going out, but at the 15th hole he seemed to lose his game entirely and took 4, 5, 6 for the last three holes, his uncle never once in the forenoon played his game and eventually destroyed his card. Both Vardon and Jones played well through the green and off the tee, but their putting was very uncertain. Each was out in 40, and by coming home each in 41 they tied in 81 for first place.

Luncheon at the Grand Hotel, Littlestone, followed before the afternoon's play which consisted of a four ball foursome was begun. In this Vardon and Peter Paxton were coupled together against Jones and James Paxton. Vardon's game was brilliant throughout and he quite overcame his weakness on the green so apparent in the mornings round. He accomplished the first 9 holes in 5 under 4's and he and his partner eventually won the match by 3 up and 2 to play. The details of the scores are as below:—

H. Vardon and Peter Paxton	Out 4, 4, 4, 4, 2, 4, 3, 2, 4 = 31
	In 4, 4, 4, 5, 5, 4, 4, 3, 4 = 37	=	68.
R. Jones and J. Paxton	Out 4, 4, 5, 4, 3, 3, 3, 3, 4 = 33
	In 5, 6, 3, 4, 6, 4, 4, 3, 4 = 39	=	72.

It must be noticed that going out Jones and Paxton did a very unusual thing in holing four holes in consecutive 3's, and the match was all square at the turn and also it is remarkable that in the first 9 holes Vardon and his partner got 2 twos. The course though short is very sporting and some of the holes away out towards what is called "Greatstone Point" are very fine ones, the bunkers being particularly formidable and the greens large and true. Within half a mile of the Romney Sands Golf Club, are the two famous 18 hole courses of the Littlestone Golf Club and now with a 3rd Links opened so near, the extremely difficult task of providing caddies and accomodation to the members (over 1,000 in all) of the two clubs exercising the brains of the officials of both clubs. The population of the Ancient Cinque Port own Romney scarce exceeds 1,300 and the gay seaside resort of Littlestone consists of one long row of stuccoed houses more than half of which are tenanted privately and a few private residences scattered here and there.

Switzerland is starting yet another golf course, this is at Valais, some 4,200ft. above sea level. The course is only 9 holes, but is extremely sporting with naturally formidable bunkers (and one can imagine the nature of a hazard in this mountainous country!) The turf is good, but as yet the greens and tees leave much to be desired, which time, and the tread of the golfer alone will improve, the fees are low, for the Club wants members, who will find most excellent accommodation at moderate prices and the Honorary Secretary, M. Kaehn, Hôtel Forêt, Morgius (Valais) Switzerland, will be only too pleased to supply any further information.

Further experience of the excellence of the B. B. B. Rubber cored balls induces me to recommend them to all who are uncertain which ball to adhere to, it is really much wiser to get one particular sort and if approved of, to stick to it always for better or for worse, and with the great variety of balls now in the market one is very apt to become influenced by one's partner for the time being, who may be playing a good game, with some special ball one which we ourselves have not tried, these B.B.B. balls, of which there are two makes—the "Darnley" and the "B. B. B." are very elastic and yet do not lose their shape, the paint does not chip or wear off and they fly well with or against the wind, they can be obtained direct from the makers, Forth Street, Pollokshields, Glasgow. In the return match between Yorkshire and Nottinghamshire at Sheffield on 14 July the Home County carried all before them winning every match. In the 1st round Yorkshire was 44 holes up, and the afternoon's play brought their total up to 83 holes as against 5 for Notts.

There is a great deal of discussion going on at present, on the subject of Play on Commons—Mitcham Common, over which Princess Golf Club exercise right of monopoly, with certain existing rights acquired legally of which they cannot be dispossessed without compensation. A suggestion has been made to the following effect: That Golf Links be laid out on Hampstead Heath, below Jack Straw's Castle, also on Farthing Down near Mitcham by Purley Station, and in Epping Forest, these courses to be laid out by the Corporation of the City of London who own all these spaces, and that a small charge for the upkeep be made to every player, and a bye-law passed that no one shall play without paying and acquiring a legal Ticket.

The Corporation of Manchester are considering the advisability of laying out an 18-hole course in Heaton Park; this scheme bids fair to be carried through unanimously, and other big cities will doubtless follow the example of Cottonapolis, but when will London golfers be up and doing, the greatest city in the world without its Municipal golf course. Of the many "Championships" of the British Isles which have now come to be looked forward to by the majority of good players, perhaps of all the Irish "Open" is the most popular, especially with the Scotch golfers. The cenue of this year's meeting is the County Down Club at Newcastle, that very beautiful links situated below the cloud topped Mourne Mountains. The competition commences on Monday, 29th August, and continues throughout the week. Although boasting of many first-class players of the male sex, the Emerald Isle has never yet succeeded in carrying over to Erin the Amateur Championship, but though her lads have not done this, the lassies have over and over again proved themselves quite invincible, more power to them! and the Ladies' Golf Union Championship Cup has many a time and oft crossed and recrossed St. George's Channel, tho just now reposing peacefully in a Cheshire Club!

The Welsh Championship of 1904 will be held at the Ashburton Club's Links near Pemoury, during the last week of August. It is only within the last week or so that Braid and Harry Vardon visited this club and played a match displaying their usual almost automatic skill when Vardon completing his round in 77 to Braid's 79 won by 2 holes up.

Many Lady golfers would be interested to hear that the well-known lingerie firm of Sykes Josephine et Cie in Regent Street have now started a Parisian dress making branch, the style excellence of cut and finish and the extreme durability and adaptability of this firms goods are too well known to need eulogism; always courteous, punctual and reliable they are extremely and justly popular and for tropical climates they make a great speciality in their materials.

Once again is the ever-recurring never—settled vexed question of caddies before us: that these little urchins are very essential to the comfort and general happiness of the golfer is certain, they are practically indispensable and this being the case it is as well to face the question of devising a really good system for the Government and control of these necessary evils, so that when old enough, their training as caddies will not have unfitted them for the serious walks of life, for, at present the game exercises on the lads as great an attraction as upon the players themselves, and very frequently they prefer as they grow into men the precarious living picked up on the links to the drudgery and regular pay at an office. At many clubs the caddy question is becoming a very serious one—particularly at the large seaside club where during the week the links are practically empty but where there is for the week end an enormous influx of visitors and members who expect to find each one a boy and are very much aggrieved and annoyed should there be any deficiency. Some golfers would rather give up their round than carry their own clubs and on saying this I refer more especially to men, for ladies are quite accustomed to dispensing with the luxury of a caddy and the majority of their sex would certainly not dream of giving up the round because no caddy was forthcoming.

There are many links in England where Sunday play is permitted but where caddies are not allowed to be employed, but at the majority of courses, especially sea-side ones the Saturday and Sunday are very lucrative and remunerative days for any and every able-bodied man or boy with or without a knowledge of the game. Much could be written on this subject, but space forbids, and time alone will show whether the supply will meet the growing and ever-increasing demand for these human beings "who would fardels bear."

7. W. S. J. Willson, time 57½ secs. less 9 secs. start = 48½.
8. A. Siddons, time 48½ secs. scratch = 48½.
9. G. H. Harnack, time 57½ secs. less 8 secs. start = 49½.

SWIMMING GYMKHANA AT LAHORE.

The second Swimming Gymkhana was held at the Baths on the 14th instant and some good sport was witnessed. The first event on the card was a diving competition in which excellent form was shown. Fremantle won, with Crocker second. The 120 yards (6 lengths) handicap of which the preliminary heats had been swum on the previous evening, resulted in a win for Trevor (20 secs) Moir, (18 secs) was second. Mackenzie was disqualified for an accidental foul, when he seemed to have the race in hand. The plunging competition was secured by Lomax with Coley a good second.

The 40 yards (2 lengths) scratch race, both in the preliminary heats and final, was very closely contested, and Mackenzie's win was well deserved, his time in the preliminary heat being exceptionally good. 1st heat, Fremantle and St. John (dead heat). 36½ secs. 2nd heat, Mackenzie (1). Coley (2). 33 secs. Final, Mackenzie (1). Coley (2). 35 secs.

The Mussack Fighting and the Peg and Sun Race afforded considerable amusement. The former was won by Wolley and Crocker was an easy winner in the latter.

HINTS ON BREEDING.

PARADOXICAL as it may appear, it is nevertheless a positive fact, that whilst breeding dogs is to a certain extent a lottery, a man is at the same time almost sure to succeed in the long run if he adheres to the proper methods which command success. The great and only course to follow is to breed from healthy stock and to stick to blood. By adopting the latter expression, it is intended to impress upon the mind of the novice the important and uncontrovertible fact, that though experimental and fantastic crosses may occasionally succeed in individual cases, such things in the vast majority of cases bring disappointment in their train, and result in the undoing of many years of careful breeding. An unhealthy dog or bitch ought never to be bred from unless under the most exceptional cases, by anybody who has conceived the very laudable ambition of establishing a strain of his own, for, as must be obvious to the meanest capacity, the infirmities of the parents will probably appear amongst their descendants, if not in the first, at all events in some subsequent generation.

This is still more likely to be the case amongst inbred dogs, and in establishing a strain there must be a certain amount of sibbing, i.e., inbreeding resorted to when it is desired to fix the type. Opinions differ a good deal as regards the best way to proceed in the inbreeding line, but speaking generally, experience has shown us that putting father to daughter or mother to son is preferable to breeding brother to sister. Of course, it must be patent to the merest beginner that a continuous system of close inbreeding, or even practising the same for a couple of generations, would affect the stamina, constitution, and size of the family, and consequently an outcross of some kind is absolutely necessary. When this is resorted to, as it very often must be, it is wise to seek for a suitable animal which belongs to a different branch of the original strain from which the parents of the family for which the cross is being sought has come; in fact, a distant relative though not a full blooded one.

Due observance should, of course, be paid to the points which it is desired that the puppies should possess, and it is reasonable to hope that the perfections of the one parent may obliterate the failings of the other—hence the greatest of all reasons for advocating the advantages of judicious inbreeding, as when a certain strain is known to possess peculiar characteristics of its own which are strongly marked, it is not likely that these characteristics will be affected if a distant member of the family is used as a cross, as they will be if outside blood is introduced.

It should always be remembered that when a type is not strongly impressed upon a strain, an outside cross is just as likely to produce the bad points of both parents in their offspring as the good ones, and hence the desirability, one might say necessity, of fixing certain characteristics, which can only be accomplished by judicious sibbing.

The stud dog or the brood bitch, which above all others are to be shunned for breeding purposes, are great prize winners of doubtful parentage. In the first place, these animals may be the results of the rankest flukes in the way of crosses; or secondly, they may possess—a generation or two back, or perhaps even more—a strain of blood which might introduce some most objectionable failings into a strain. Consequently, the dog breeder who means to be successful must be ever on his guard against the good-looking flat-catcher, and if he is a cautious man he will look ahead and look back as well as at the present. Once get a cross of objectionable blood into your strain—and it is remarkable, if the matter is followed up, how often the blood of two families which are good in themselves will fail to nick with each other—and there is no saying when or where it will crop up. Possibly the effects of the bar sinister may not appear for years, and this is the greatest misfortune that could fall upon a breeder, as, believing himself to be safe, he may have got the taint into the blood of every member of his kennel during the interval; but when it does show itself it may prove to be the undoing of years of thought. Crosses, to put it plainly, should be well considered, and to the man who takes the trouble to make the proper inquiries there is generally some useful information to be derived from the experiences of others.

Speaking generally, it is not desirable that a bitch should be bred from until she is about eighteen months or so of age. Individual animals, of course, vary in the extent of their development, but the offspring of quite immature dams are seldom robust in constitution, or altogether satisfactory, no matter how good looking they may be. In the case of Bulldogs and large-headed varieties, which are by their formation difficult puppies to be brought into the world, it is unwise to allow a bitch to remain so long unbred from that the bones and muscles connected with the passage through which the puppies pass become set, and so difficult to relax. Therefore the bitches of such breeds may be allowed a litter at an earlier age than others, but after the first one they may be given a rest for at least one heat.

So long as his energies are not overtaxed, a dog may be used for service when he is a year old, or even under. Occasionally it is for his benefit that this should be so, but it is not likely to be otherwise than unbeneficial to his subsequent development if his subscription-list is other than a very limited one, until he is at least eighteen months old.

Amongst the many trials which beset the dog owner who goes in for breeding is the possession of a valuable and well-bred bitch which has earned for herself the unenviable distinction of being either barren or a shy breeder. Such an animal is a most disappointing acquisition to any kennel, and unfortunately, there is no infallible remedy that can be suggested. It may be mentioned, however, that some five-and-twenty years a correspondent of one of the sporting papers related that he had been successful in obtaining puppies from more than one bitch that had borne the reputation of being non-breeders, and he described his method of procedure. It was to reduce the strength of the bitch by blood-letting almost to the point of fainting, and then, without delay, introducing her to the dog. The idea, it must be admitted, is not attractive, and very possibly it may be entirely fallacious, but the present writer adopted it in the case of a Greyhound bitch which was a pronounced non-breeder, and she presented him with a litter of six. The experiment was not repeated as the bitch in question was sold; and under any circumstances should any owner of a presumably barren bitch think of trying it, he should avail himself of the services of a veterinary-surgeon to perform the operation of blood-letting, else it may be found impossible to check the bleeding. Possibly the case referred to above was of the nature of a coincidence, and the Greyhound bitch would have bred under any circumstances, but the circumstances were as described, and she did not suffer in any way, either at the time as the bleeding was apparently quite painless, or in her future life.

A stud dog or brood bitch which is overburdened with a load of superfluous flesh is far less likely to produce stock than one which is in good hard condition at the time of service, and the more healthy and active lives such animals lead the greater probability of their offspring being strong and vigorous. No doubt many puppies have been bred in the midst of unwholesome surroundings and under very disadvantageous circumstances, but taken as a general rule, it is the offspring of the parents who are in sound condition that make the most healthy dogs, and which in their turn beget the best constitutional puppies.

Lastly, it may be suggested that autumn and winter whelped puppies are not usually so well developed dogs as those which are born at other times of the year, this being due to the fact that their earlier existence is not associated with warmth and sunshine, which are so essential to the welfare and growth of all young animals.—Stockkeeper.

The Naturalist.

THE CAGING OF WILD BIRDS.

WITH the possible exception of bird-trimmed millinery, and the consequent slaughter of plume birds in breeding-time, nothing is the cause of so much cruelty to wild birds as the caged-bird business, with all that it entails.

A great deal is urged on behalf of the caging of birds. It encourages "a love of birds," we are told; they are pets with ladies and children; they must be happy because they go on living and singing and are saved from their natural enemies; their presence gladdens and refines the slum; and so on.

But, apart from fancy and false sentiment, what are the facts of the matter in regard especially to the British wild bird? The character of the bird-catching trade and the extent to which it is still carried on in fields and hedgerows, and in practically every piece of common or open land where there are still any birds worth catching, are realized by few persons, even though they may live near some favoured resort and see rough-looking gentry with the familiar apparatus, pass their doors every Sunday morning, or meet, and instinctively avoid them about country lanes and commons. In the open season the catcher has little let or hindrance, save in counties where the list of birds protected throughout the year is carefully framed, so that he cannot, while netting the unprotected linnets take protected redpolls "by mistake," or goldfinches "by accident;" and where the police and the R. S. P. C. A. officers are vigilant in enforcing the orders. Even in close time he has no difficult task in evading the law, or in getting behind it by securing the easy co-operation of some small farmer who will "let" him the land for the purpose.

The catcher goes to work with his decoy birds and his nets or lime, most of the "work" being done by the miserable little decoys, surely the most hapless of bird victims! Since the Act of 1900 was passed the decoy has been brought under some sort of protection, and needs it badly enough.

The wild birds are caught by the dozen or the hundred; the hens probably have their necks wrung, the cocks are thrust into cages or boxes, and are either taken to the dealers in a neighbouring town or despatched by rail to some large centre, spending possibly hours in transit. A dozen in a Hudson's soap box, with some seed, but no water, is recommended by a careful dealer anxious for the safety of birds on long journeys. In the big town those which survive are consigned to the familiar cell-cages ("It's kinder to give 'em small cages; they'd beat themselves to death in bigger ones") on the dealer's dark shelves, or round about his window, in as foul an atmosphere as Paradise Court, Petticoat Lane, would seem to a Swiss mountaineer. Of the reduced number which reach the dealer alive, perhaps one in six survives to find a purchaser. Or it may be they are sold off at some Saturday night auction and distributed in paper bags, as vividly pictured in the pamphlet entitled "A Linnet for Sixpence," just published by the Society for the Protection of Birds.

Once sold, what fate awaits them? What fate is likely to await the delicate, fluttering wild thing sold for a few pence in the back street? There is, of course, the very small percentage which the defenders of caging have ever in view, those which are bought by well-intentioned private persons and safely broken into the strange new life. Are even these fortunate few placed as a matter of course in aviaries where captivity may be made as endurable as possible? Well, no, that is out of the question, only the rich have aviaries; but, it is argued, they must be happy because they sing! That is to say, they continue, unless utterly broken-hearted, to exercise the one bird-faculty left to them—to cry aloud for the warm sunshine, the green shade, and the never-seen, ever delaying mate, even though they can never be understood by a single listener and never answered in their own mystical language. And by and by they cease beating their wings against the bars, peck at the seed or other food in the seed-box that replaces the hundred varieties of dew-sweetened meat in the meadow, and hop up and down, up and down, on the monotonous perches, and are "merry."

The wild birds most extensively caged are the skylark, the linnet, and the chaffinch. The harshened trill of the lark is a common city sound, not "at heaven's gate," but from some public-house or mews; of all birds there is none whose caging is more repugnant to the man with an comprehension of wild bird life. The linnet is less often seen or heard. It is not pleasant to surmise what becomes of the tens of thousands that suffer transportation from their furzy homes to the galleys and hulk of cagedom. The chaffinches are in many cases the property of men with "a hobby" for birds; that is to say, a hobby for "bird races," handicap singing competitions, over which bets are made and money won. These are the birds which are taken "out for a walk" or to enjoy the fresh air (closely tied up in black cloth or brown paper), where they may hear their wild mates, and thus improve their fading songs or serve as decoys for snaring others. It has long been the practice to blind these "pets" of the East-ender, so that, unable to see and be terrified by their human surroundings in the public-house, they may suppose their competitors are wild kin calling to them from the green boughs. The custom is rendered illegal by the Wild Animals in Captivity Act, but its illegality has probably not succeeded in abolishing it. Larks are kept for the same purpose. In Huddersfield, says the Standard of 26th May 1904, there is an association which "promotes the singing of larks":—

"Captive birds are trained by being taken in boxes into the fields, where they are left to pick up the notes of free birds as best they can. Competitions for prizes have this week been held at various public-houses, the birds singing for ten minutes or so without a break . . . . In this way some £6 or £7 has been distributed, and the contests have proved an infinite source of amusement. The association has been in existence about thirty years, and this year the hobby of lark singing has been encouraged by some thirteen "Sings."

The encouragement of the 'hobby," however, is no doubt in many cases only a means to an end, viz., to promote gambling, and perhaps the police might have something to say to this, especially when the "competition" takes place on licensed premises.

The three species named, however, are far from exhausting the number sought for caging. The goldfinch has been, we know, almost exterminated in many counties owing to its popularity as a cage bird, though now somewhat recovering its place thanks to the Protection Acts and Orders. Any country walk will discover sullen jackdaws, starlings, magpies, moping within wicker frameworks; ragged blackbirds and thrushes and restless bullfinches slung at the doors of cottagers who hear hundreds of free song birds all day long, yet who must have their captives. But the chief incentives to the business are the cage bird clubs, which, like the singing handicaps, bring the powerful stimulus of competition and gain to bear upon the matter. These clubs are said to be on the increase up and down the country, twenty new ones having been formed within the past few months; and they promote the caging of almost every British bird, however unsuitable for the purpose. In the middle of Close Time the fanciers' journals abound with advertisements of "cock night ingales" (a bird difficult to keep in health, and one that, like all migrants becomes very restless and unhappy at the approach of migration time); chiffchaffs and willow wrens, those delicate little wanderers from overseas; flycatchers, wheatears; "English cock goldfinches," "larks, champion songsters;' "cock brown linnets, nice red breasts, caught February catching season"; redpolls, twites, buntings, greenfinches, robins, blackbirds, and thrushes, and so on, and so on, and even ravens and kestrels. To prove that there is any breach of the letter of the law in manifest breaches of its spirit, it must be shown that the birds are "recently taken." There are many ways in which the dealer who finds it convenient to replenish his stock in Close Time can render such proof difficult if he chance to be dropped on; and in the "catching season" he is master of the situation.

The most amazing part of the business is that we English people as a nation countenance this wholesale onslaught upon the wild-bird life—the brightest and cheeriest wild life—of the country, with all its attendant illegalities and brutalities, carried on by those who have not the ghost of a claim to their living loot; thereby making ourselves partners of the slave-raiders, and responsible for all that bird catcher, bird dealer, and bird fancier are suffered to do.

In addition to British birds, immense numbers are imported from other lands to serve as show birds, decorations or pets in England. A few weeks ago (3rd May), the newspapers reported the arrival in London of a steamer from Australia with a cargo of 14,000 birds from various parts of the colony, which were being sold to fanciers and dealers. That a bird is "foreign," is with some people enough to excuse or commend its caging. But a bird is a bird the world over; even a cage-bred one never entirely loses the passion for liberty, the powerful instinct of flight, which are the glory of free bird life.—Bird Notes and News.

BOMBAY NATURAL HISTORY SOCIETY.

A MEETING of the members took place at the Society's rooms, on Thursday, the 18th August Rev. F. Dreckmann, S. J., presiding.

NEW MEMBERS.

The election of the following new members since the last meeting was duly announced:—Captain A. E. Hamerton, R.A.M.C. (Ferozepore); Dr A. F. G. Kerr (Chiengmai, Siam); Mr. W. C. (Ferozepore); Dr A. F. G. Kerr (Chiengmai, Siam); Mr. W. T. Page, F.Z.S. (London); Mr W. N. Edwards (Majuligghur, Sootea P. O Darrang, Assam); Mr. J. D. Stuart (Minbu, Burma); Mr. E. Steiner (Bombay); Mr. M. G. Sykes, I.C.S. (Cuddalore, Madras Presidency); Mr. G. A. D. Stuart (Nellore); Mr. H. Calder (Rangoon); Mr. Felix L. Dames (Berlin, Germany); H. H. the Rajah of Dhar, (Dhar C. I.); Mr. T. Moore (Russellkonda, Ganjam District); Major J W L. Elgee (Bangalore); Mr. C. Lucas (Bombay); Mr. Norman A. Macleod (Jaffirbund, Lalla P.O); Captain. J. H. Dickson (Quetta); Lieutenant A G. Lyell (Lansdowne); Lieutenant H. W. Long, R.A.M.C. (Jullundur); Mr. S. A. Wood. I.F.S. (Lollem S. Shan States); the Professor of Zoology, Madras Christian College (Madras); Mr. F. W. Chanter, C. E. (Bombay); Major L. P. Chapman, R. E. (Bombay); Mr. Cassamali Jairajbhoy Peerbhoy (Bombay); Mr. C.H. Stowell (Grant Road, Bombay); Mr. W.W. Bulkley (Jeypore); Mr. G. Marjoribanks, I. F. S. (Belgaum), Colonel F. W Trevor, R. A M. C. (Bombay); Mr. A. S. Lawrie (Russellkonda) Ganjam District); and Mr. M. Crampton (Russellkonda, Ganjam District); and Mr. R. C. C. Carr, I.C.S. (Chittoor, N. Arcot District).

CONTRIBUTIONS TO THE MUSEUM.

Mr. H. M. Phipson, the Honorary Secretary, acknowledged receipt of the following contributions to the society's collections:—

Contribution.	Description.	Contributor.
A collection of named moths from Darjeeling.	.....	Mr. G. A. Miller.
1 Indian Sloth Bear (alive).	Melursus Ursinus	Mr. H. P. Le Mesurier.
2 Tiger Cubs (alive).	Felis tigris.	Major F. W. C. Jones, R.A.M.C.
A collection of Fresh Water Fishes from Lucknow.	.....	Major A. T. Newnham, F.Z.S.
1 Changeable Hawk-Eagle.	Spizaetus limnaetus,	Mr. H. H. Clutterbuck, I.F.S.
1 Bonelli's Eagle.	Hieraetus fasciatus.	" "
A collection of Spiders from Ganjam.	.....	Mr. C.E C Fischer, I.F.S.
1 Scaly Ant-eater (alive)	Manis pentadactyla.	Mr. J. Black.
Eggs of the Upland Pipit.	Otocorys sylvanus.	Mr. F. Field.
A Clutch of Eggs of the White-crested Kalij Pheasant.	Gennaeus albicristatus.	Mr. F. Field.
1 Snake.	Gongylophis conicus.	Capt J. S. Oxley, I.M.S.
4 Cobras (alive).	Naia tripudians	Col. W. B. Bannerman, I.M.S.
11 Phoorsas.	Echis carinata ...	Col. W. B. Bannerman, I M.S
1 Ground Snake.	Eryx johnu ...	Major H. D. Merewether.
1 Snake.	Tropidonotus plumbicolor.	Mr. D. A. Macmillan.
4 New Species of Mouse-Hares.	Ochotona wardi ...	Col. A. E. Ward.
Some Lepidoptera from Quetta District.	.....	Mr. Neville Eliot, R.A.
3 Chukor Partridges from Arabia (alive)	Caccabis chucar ...	Major F.V. Whittal.
14 Growing Cocos de Mer nuts from Seychelles.	Lodoicea Sechellarum.	Mons. R. Dupont.
1 Malay Bittern.	Gorsachius melanolophus.	Mr. J. B. Russell.

Minor Contributions.—Mr. F. Napier, Captain G. M. Morris, Mr. J. W. Watson, and Mr. Bapu W. Telang.

The following constribution to the library has been made:—The Manual of Plague, by Major W. E. Jennings, M. D., I.M.S., by the author.

PROPOSED PUBLIC MUSEUM.

The correspondence between the Proposed Museum Committee and the Bombay Natural History Society was placed before the meeting, and the following extract shows the opinion of the Committee on the subject:—

"We are strongly of opinion that the Government of Bombay should possess a Scientific Museum in this city, and that a trained staff should be engaged from Europe with the object of carrying on research in every branch of Natural History commencing with those which have a conspicuous economic value, but we think it would be worse than a mistake to undertake the formation of such an institution unless ample funds for endowment as well as for building are provided.

"A museum as a mere exhibition of natural history specimens is, in our opinion, of very little value, but as the head-quarters of a scientific staff engaged in research, and containing working collections from which knowledge may be obtained, it then becomes an institution of enormous value to the State For instance it is obvious that as a maritime people we ought before this to have done something to improve the coast fisheries of India, but nothing practical can be done in this direction until we possess a more complete knowledge of the marine fauna. At present we know nothing of the migration of sea fishes, or the periods and places at which they breed, and such knowledge can only be obtained by means of systematic collections made by trained naturalists.

"To possess such a museum, therefore, it is necessary to consider what will be the working expenses of the scientific staff as well as the probable cost of a building to contain collections and laboratories.

"The Government of Bombay state in the resolution that they can see their way to 2½ lakhs towards the erection of a museum, but they do not say that they are prepared to meet the heavy recurrent expenditure which would be necessary to provide for the requirements of a scientific museum staff. To ascertain what these expenses would amount to we can only refer you to the report of the Calcutta Museum for 1902, in which the working expenses considerably exceeded half a lakh per annum irrespective of the gazetted salaries.

"The erection of a building that would be suitable for a museum, as well as a public library (see Government Resolution) on a conspicuous site in Bombay would cost, we should think, three or four times the amount mentioned in the resolution.

"The Bombay Natural History Society, which consists of about 900 members throughout India, Burma, and Ceylon, possesses very valuable collections gathered from the whole of the Oriental region, but they are essentially working collections and are not suitable for public exhibition, the object of the Society being in the direction of research rather than display, as is shown by the character of its publications.

"We note that it is intended to restrict the collections in the proposed museum to the area of the Bombay Presidency, but if it is the intention of the Government to undertake scientific research in all branches of local natural history, this Society will be in a position to render material assistance, and will, we need hardly say, be willing to do so."

A PRINCELY OFFER.

The Honorary Secretary stated that His Highness the Rao Saheb of Cutch had offered to subscribe Rs. 1,000 a year, for three years, to this Society, if it could see its way to engage an expert from Europe to make a marine zoological survey of the Bombay Coast, including the Gulf of Cambay and the Runn of Cutch. The cost of such an undertaking would, it was thought, amount to about Rs. 22, 000, or say Rs, 7,500 a year, for a period of three years, and the task was consequently beyond the powers of this Society unless generous support, such as that offered by H. H. the Rao of Cutch, were forthcoming from others. The Committee of the Society had already addressed letters pointing out the advantages of such a survey, to all the States which possess a sea frontier on the Kathiawar and Konkan Coasts.

GOVERNMENT GRANT.

The Honorary Secretary stated that the Government of Bombay had made a grant of Rs. 2, 500 to the Society for the present year and that they had been good enough to promise to continue the grant (provided funds were available) so long as the Society continued to publish the results of its investigations and researches on subject, of public utility.

A vote of thanks was passed to the Government of Bombay for its assistance.

COLOURED PLATES.

The Honorary Secretary stated that orders for the following coloured plates, for the Society's journal, had been placed in the hands of their London cromo-lightographers:—8 plates of Ducks; 1 Plate of Moths; 4 Plates of Snakes; 4 Plates of Orchids; and 3 Plates of Cuckoo's Eggs. Total 20 Plates.

The cost of these Coloured Plates would be about as 350 each (or Rs. 7,000 in all) so that it was most important that the Society should obtain as many new members as possible in order to provide the funds for these useful illustrations.

PAPERS READ.

The following papers were then read and discussed:—1. Sexual Colour-dimorphism in Birds, by D. Dewar, I. C. S.; 2. The Ancestry of the Horse, by L. C. H. Young, B. A.; 3. New Species of Indian Hymenoptera, by Major C. G. Nurse, F. E. S.; 4. The Enemies of Butterflies, by E. H. Aitken; 5. The Himalayan Nutcracker, by Colonel W. Capper, D. M. E. in India; 6. The Asiatic Two-horned Rhinoceros, by Major G. H. Evans, A. V. D., F. L. S.

The Story Teller.

MY FRIEND THE WELSHER.

THE following curious cricketing incident, with its remarkable sequel, was brought again to my recollection by the fact that my old confrère Alfred Shaw, has lately once more been heard of in the cricket world. Writes "Straw Hat" in Sporting Sketches. It was in the "sixties" that Alfred first made his mark as a cricketer of note, and, oddly enough, although he bowled sufficiently well to place his name well in the second flight of trundlers, he began his remarkable career with every sign of turning out a brilliant bat-man.

In those days I was a bit of a bat, and a very straight bowler, just under medium pace, with a natural twist from the off. At that time there were few bowlers who could command the off-break; but there were many, of whom Shaw was one, who had the natural twist from leg. One wet afternoon upon the Grantham ground, I initiated Alfred into the mysteries of the off-screw. He saw the deadly use that might be made of it and forthwith set to work to practise the twirl over the fingers, and to add the new wrinkle to the list of his already dangerous devices.

I may state that, before the weight of adipose matter caused a too sudden disappearance from the river and the cricket-field, it was my annual custom to spend the long vacations on tour in the Midlands. Occasionally I would go on rambles with the powerful team engaged and invited by Sir H. B——, or I would join one of the strong clubs in the vicinity of the lace county, and make short outings to the neighbouring towns and villages strong enough and willing to play us. The Midland counties Diamonds, Notts Commercial, Mapperley Park, the Free Foresters, and the West of Scotland, under Colonel Buchanan, were amongst the teams who occasionally met us; while Boston, Sleaford, Radcliffe-on-Trent, and Newmark were always down upon our list of places to be visited.

The strongest of these towns was, no doubt, Newark-on-Trent. They possessed a wicket-keeper who "kept" for Nottingham, namely Hogg—bats such as Slater, the Smiths, father and son, the two Chattertons, who had done battle for England, and Messrs. Dolphin, Heppinstall, and Riddell, the last-mentioned being a bowler who could "stick up" a batsman pretty often.

About the year 1875 I gave up active cricket, took to myself a wife, and settled down quietly in Surrey, at a town noted in the annals of racing. Rather more than twelve months ago the sergeant of police of our division called to tell me that some welshers had been caught, and that they were to be brought before the magistrates on the following Monday.

"I know, sir, that you like to hear a good case or two, so if you can come in I'll reserve a seat for you near the bench"

So spake the officer, and to him I gave a ready assent, little dreaming that I should be called to testify as to the character of one of the accused upon that day It was Rock Sand's year and the two welshers, "bookie" and clerk, had been guilty of disappearing just before the decision of the great event. They were discerned, however, on the top of the hill, running wide of each other. The infuriated mob gave chase immediately, and the two would-be flyers were taken, and, after much difficulty, safely housed in the cells.

The charge was read over on the following Monday, soon after I made my appearance in the court. The prosecutor was present, and stated that he had backed the winner; but that, when he went to tender his ticket, the public were engaged in smashing the box and stand of the welshers, and that the men themselves had gone. He had caught sight of the bookmaker's clerk amongst the crowd; but at the particular instant that he saw him the man had turned, and, diving into the throng, disappeared.

The case was strong against the prisoners. My friend the sergeant had known the elder of the twain as a welsher for several years. He was called "Bell-wire Billy," on account of his numerous escapades. He had had one arm broken, a jaw smashed, and, moreover, he bore a mark upon the back of his neck which indicated what would have been his fate if his pursuer, upon that occasion, had but once fixed his iron hand upon his collar. He pleaded guilty upon being asked by the bench if he had anything to say; but the younger man, against whom there were no convictions, and who had given a correct address, put in a plea of not guilty, and addressed the magistrates when asked if he had anything to say.

"I had an idea, your honours," he began, "that I should like to make a book at the races, and so advertised for a partner. This man, of whom I knew little or nothing, answered my advertisement, and we agreed to put £50 each in the book. I gave him money and undertook to do the clerking. While the Derby was being run, I went off to get a drink, and making my way back after the race—to pay out, or rather to check the tickets—found that the other prisoner had decamped with the satchel and that the crowd was smashing the box and the stand. Knowing what I should get if recognised, I took to my heels and ran until captured by the officers. It was all my money in the satchel, and the prisoner, no doubt, meant doing me, if he had got away, as well as the others. My home, as the sergeant has stated, is in Newark. I have ample means, and intended carrying on the 'book' in an honourable manner."

The bench then put their heads together, and the chairman, addressing the younger man, asked him if he could call anyone in support of his statement, or as to character.

"If your honours would grant an adjournment I could easily prove what I assert, and there is a gentleman now in the court, who knew me some years ago, who could bear out my statement that I am, at least, respectable."

"Well, tell him to step up, and we will hear what he has to say."

You may guess my astonishment when the prisoner, turning in my direction, called upon me, as "the gentleman with the straw hat," to testify as to his respectability. Everybody, of course, turned their eyes in my direction, and my friend the sergeant laughingly informed me, as he directed me into the witness-box, that I was "in for it now."

"Now," said the presiding magistrate, "ask the witness any questions you like, after he is sworn."

Sworn I was, and then my questioning began.

"Have you ever seen me before to-day?"

"Never," was my reply, "to the best of my recollection."

"Were you not, say twenty five years ago, playing cricket in the Midlands?"

"I was," I replied, now becoming interested.

"Did you not, about that time, under the captaincy of Alfred Shaw, visit the town of Newark in Nottingam?"

"I did."

"Do you remember playing against that town, which put an eleven into the field composed of such men as Hogg, Slater, the Chattertons, Smith, and others?"

"I perfectly remember it."

"You played a good inninga upon that occasion?"

"I think I scored about 40 runs."

"Do you recollect anything extraordinary during your innings?"

"I remember cutting an off, ball of Slater's hard to point, and striking that fie'dsman on the left side of his forehead, and the ball then going away to the boundry for three runs."

"Would you be surprised to hear that I was the 'point' upon that occasion?"

"Your worship" continued the prisoner pointing to his forehead, 'the ball cut me to the bone; but I little thought that the mark, which I shall carry to my graves, would be the means of perhaps saving me from a felon's prison."

I looked at the man in astonishment, while the magistrates, police officers, and spectators craned forward to see the convincing proof of the man's "respectability."

"My head was bandaged," continued the prisoner, "and I took my place once more in the field, and I caught the gentleman out the same over. Is that correct, sir?"

I was compelled to admit that such was the case. The prisoner then made an earnest and somewhat eloquent appeal to the magistrates, at the conclusion of which I spoke a few words supporting the man's statements. The bench, assisted by the Clerk of the Court, then held a short consultation, after which the chairman addressed the prisoners. The older of the twain, the confirmed welsher, was summarily disposed of, his sentence being twenty-one days. Then the younger man was sternly admonished to be more careful in future as to the parties whom he associated with. In consideration of the good character which he evidently formerly possessed, and of the remarkable evidence which had been given in his favour, the case against him would be dismissed; but he was to bear in mind that he had had a very narrow escape from a severe sentence. He might go.

At the conclusion of the magistrate's speech there was some slight applause from the body of the court which was, however, immediately suppressed. Outside the court house several of the spectators shook the "welsher" by the hand, and congratulated him as he came forward to thank me.

A few days after I received a letter from him expressing his obligations to me for the service I had rendered him. At the same time, also, a hamper, containing many of the good things, which the thrifty folk of Nottingham are skilful in preparing, also arrived. At the last Epsom meeting, just previous to St. Amant cantering home by himself, I was strolling over the hill, making a note or two for future use, when I espied my friend, at the receipt of custom, apparently having a very good time of it, for, as I stood by until business became slack, I could hear the Gouvernant and John o' Gaunt men placing their dollars on their fancies. On this occasion he did not leave his pitch for a drink; but he had one brought for us, and as he paid out to his first customer over St. Amant he stole a sly glance at me. "Not any more Rock Sand for me sir," he remarked, sotto voce. "That was a very near squeak indeed."

STAUNTON CHESS CLUB.

CHALLENGE CUP COMPETITION.

ON Friday evening, the 19th instant, the members assembled to present the Cup the to the winner, Mr. R M. Ross, who with 11 wins, 1 draw and 1 lost game, carried off the trophy after a keen and interesting struggle extending over four months. Mr. Ross is a well-known exponent of the game and samples of his play may be found in some standard English works on chess. He was closely followed by Mr. Edmund Robertson another noted Calcutta players, with 11 wins to his credit. Following these, in order, came Messrs. W. D Barrow, W. H. Taylor, Dr. Pearse, A. W. Figgis, A. Shrager and W. Bussinius. The remaining members of the club who entered for the competition were unable to finish their games.

The Cup remains in the possession of the winner for 12 months.

After winning the Derby of 1839, Bloomsbury did not figure very prominently in the after events for which he ran; yet in the following season's Cesarewitch he was allotted no less than 9st. Even with this big weight there was plenty of money for him, and the fact of his starting at tens proved that the four-year-old had been very heavily supported by someone or other.

It was not known who was to ride Bloomsbury. When, therefore, on the night previous to the big race, it was found that the services of Jim Robinson—through an accident happening to the horse he was engaged to ride—could be had, Ridsdale was advised to engage the fashionable middle-weight. The owner of Bloomsbury, however assumed a very mysterious air when approached on the subject, but would not give his counsellor any definite answer.

"I haven't engaged a jockey for Bloomsbury," said Ridsdale some hours later, when again questioned about taking advantage of Robinson's liberty, "because I knew I could pick and choose at the weight, and I didn't want anyone to know beforehand who was to ride You might go and get Jim for the horse as he is disengaged; but don't say anything about it."

Trusting he would be first in the field, the gentleman who was thus addressed hurried off to find the well-known rider.

"Robinson," he remarked, on meeting the object of his search "you'll be on Bloomsbury tomorrow."

"No, I shan't," was the startling reply; "I've just been engaged for Clarion."

Eventually Sam Chifney had the leg-up Despite his heavy weight, Ridsdale's horse was always going well, and at the distance appeard to be winning cleverly, if not easily: but a few strides short of the post his steadier of nine stone told its tale, and he began to hang somewhat. Before Chifney could straighten his horse something flashed past him, and Bloomsbury was second beaten on the post. Defeat under these circumstances was galling in the extreme, but when Ridsdale realised that his good thing had been upset by Robinson's brilliant riding on Clarion, the blow was too much for him, and even those who blamed could not forbear but pity this man of usually iron nerves.

Had Robinson been claimed for Bloomsbury it is highly improbable that Clarion would have won. Chifney would have been unable to do the weight, and all the other jockeys of note being engaged, a stable lad must have been the dernier ressort and as it was readily acknowledged that few other horsemen could have got Clarion home, it was not surprising that Ridsdale wept. It is the last plunge attempted by the owner of Bloomsbury who, broken in spirit and pocket, eventually retired from the Turf, and speedily became almost forgotten.

TO MOTORISTS

THE BEST OILS FOR MOTOR CARS.

Wilburine for cylinders ... Rs. 6-8 per gallon Tin. | Valvoline for Bearings, etc. ... Rs. 5-0 per gallon Tin.

Extract from the "Autocar."

LUBRICATING OILS.—[2422]—It may be instructive to your numerous readers to have the experiences of a motor car experimentalist on the behaviour of lubricating oils for motor work. In the first onset I tried various sorts of oils, all of which left deposits of carbon and gumming matter in the cylinders and valves. These deposits are serious drawbacks, not only to the working of the pistons and valves, but also interfere with the proper sparking at the ignition plugs. I then tried the Valvoline Oil Co.'s oils, using "Wilburine" for the cylinders and "Valvoline" for the bearings, etc.; these being quite pure mineral oils, no deposits either of carbon or gumming matter were left. Every time the pistons, etc., have been examined they were quite bright, clean and well lubricated. The valves also keep in good condition and require very little regrinding. I have been quite free from sparking troubles since using the above lubricants. Any dust that alights on the working parts is easily wiped off, whereas with other oils dirt stuck fast through gumming.

Very much smaller quantities of these oils ("Wilburine" and "Valvoline") about one-third to one-quarter, are required, which more than balances the extra first cost. The wearing surfaces are besides in a magnificent condition. These advantages —viz., high-class lubrication, freedom from deposit in cylinders, gum in bearings, absence of sparking trouble, are too important to be neglected by any motorist.

There is a tendency to use various greases, instead of oils. Engineers have over and over again proved that greases give much greater frictional losses than oils; with motor car engines and bearings the lubricant that gives the least possible friction is the best.

I have referred to the advantages the motorist gets. I will mention another advantage these oils have to those whom the motorist passes, viz., the absence of the fried-fish-shop smell so often noted. Several persons have been very much struck by the absence of smell; even when the car has been standing for some time with the engines running, no trace of offensive odour has been apparent to the bystanders.

I mention these experiences, having no interest in the Valvoline Oil Co., that others may be benefited and save themselves trouble and their neighbours some annoyance.

AN OLD "RUFF."

A PLEASANT and interesting hour may often be spent with an old "Ruff's Guide," by the lover of racing, and the writer, having occasion to refer to the "Ruff" of the spring of 1878, letting his eye glance at pages here and there, has found much of interest to arrest and keep his attention, and so to while away, not unprofitably, an afternoon in the rains. The subject of reference was to decide a wager as to whether Sefton, the winner of the Derby in 1878, had won a race as a two-year-old, a question which was answered in the negative, the then unnamed son of Speculum having competed on four occasions without a win, his best performance having been his first, when he ran second in the valuable Hurstbourne Stakes at Stockbridge. From Sefton the mind naturally turned to the other classic winners of 1878, Pilgrimage, who won both the Guineas, and Jannette, the heroine of the Oaks and the St. Leger. The latter as a two-year-old was unbeaten, her record being three "walk overs" and four wins, including the Richmond Stakes, at Goodwood with Sefton among the unplaced, and the Criterion Stakes, the great Fred Archer always being in the saddle. She, however, never met Pilgrimage whose achievements were at least equal to hers, for they ended with victory in the Dewhurst Plate, the only defeat being in the Middle Park Plate where Pilgrimage was placed third. The report of the Dewhurst Plate concludes with a note as follows: "Before the race an objection was raised to the qualifiaction of Pilgrimage on the ground of incorrect nomination, she having been entered for a race in the First October Meeting as by The Palmer only, instead of by The Earl or The Palmer. The stewards after deliberation declared the nomination for the Dewhurst Plate to be valid, the filly having been correctly entered with her name and full pedigree for the Oaks, which closed some time before." A lucky purchase was Pilgrimage for the celebrated Captain Machell, for it appears from the list of blood stock sales in the Volume that two days before her first race she was sold to him at the Newmarket September Sales for the ridiculous price of 190 guineas.

Other sales noted in the list are of no little interest, such as Vedette, the sire of Galopin and Speculum, who was knocked down at 50 guineas; but then he was already twenty-three years old and doubtless was not of much further service at the stud; and Moorhen, dam of Gallinule and therefore paternal granddam of the wonderful and unbeaten Pretty Polly of the present and past seasons, fetched but 150 guineas, though she was then no more than four years old. Another sale appearing in the list, but very different to those already mentioned, was that of Hampton, then a five-year-old, who changed hands at 7,200 guineas, and well must he have been worth it considering that amongst his children have been Perdita II., (dam of Persimmon, Volodyovski, etc.) Ayrshire and Ladas, both Derby winners, Sheen, winner of the Cesarewitch and other good races, together with a host of others. Hampton lived to attain the ripe old age of twenty-five and died so recently as 1897 from rheumatism. His age has often been exceeded by celebrated sires, for example Rosicrucian lived till he was twenty-six, and Hermit, the Winner of the Derby of 1867, for three years longer, while the great Touchstone who was foaled in 1831 lived to see the early days of 1861. It is recorded that when a few years ago the remains of Touchstone were exhumed in order that his skeleton might be set up at Eaton, it was discovered that he had an extra rib on each side ; this very remarkable fact recalls to the mind that Domain, a horse actually in training now at Arundel, has two short horns which lately made their appearance and are now quite prominent. The price realised by Hampton, however, was topped by that of Scottish Chief for whom 8,000 guineas was given, and if his record as a sire is not equal to that of Hampton, yet he gave us such as Thistle, the dam of the triple crown hero, Common, and violet Melrose, dam of Melton, and Victorious.

Some queer names are to be found in the Index, such as Winslow's Soothing Syrup, Split the Wind and My Nannie O, but none of them are quite so terrible as Here-I-go-with-my-eye-out of many years ago or Let-go-the-Painter, a name bestowed by Mr. Corlett of the Sporting Times on a now two-year-old colt belonging to him, who has actually won his first race. There are many names, too, of horses now in training, such as St. Emilion, Jongleur, Portcullis, Flotsam, Cossack, etc., which shows how little trouble owners give themselves to think of a name which shall be at once appropriate and original. A new rule of the Jockey Club has recently been made prohibiting the repetition of the names of classic winners or celebrated horses which will do much to prevent this duplication of nomenclature in future, and it is to be hoped that a very wide interpretation will be given to the words "celebrated horses" and that it will not be confined merely to horses of the reputation of a St. Simon but rather that it will be held to keep sacred names of popular favourites or sensational performers like Victor Wild, O'Donovan, Rossa, and Bendigo.

The year 1877 was the year of Silvio's Derby and St. Leger, and reference to the two races shows that at Doncaster among his thirteen opponents there were but two out of the field of sixteen whom he defeated at Epsom, which is quite a noteworthy thing; and it was also one of the very few years when the Grand National Steeplechase was won by a five-year-old, Mr. F. G. Hobson's Austerlitz (owner up) winning with ease from his fifteen opponents. The Brocklesby Stakes was then run over four furlongs as were most of the early races for the youngsters, a practice which will now probably be resumed in consequence of the new rule which was fully discussed in this column a few weeks ago.

Among the celebrated horses which died during the year may be mentioned Baron Rothschild's Favonius (Parmesan—Zephyr) who won the Derby of 1871 and who therefore passed away at the early age of nine, but not without having left his mark in the Stud Book by getting when he was only four years old from Lady Langden, then also only of this young age, a Derby winner in Sir Bevys, which in its way is quite unique. Parmesan, the sire of Favonius, and also of another Derby winner, Cremorne, died in the same year too, as did Knight of Karstone of the less well-known issue of the great Pocahontas ; while during the year Bend Or, Illuminata, dam of Ladas, and Muncaster first saw the light of day.

One might go rambling on indefinitely, but enough has been written to show that "the harvest of the quiet eye" can be fully enjoyed, even if one's companion is nothing more than an old "Ruff."

Sporting Notes.

WE have received a copy of the programme for the next Tollygunge Gymkhana to be held on the 3rd instant. It contains five events and looks to have all the makings of a fair day's sport. The "open" race this time takes the form of a 5-furlong flat race for ponies 14-1 and under that have never won a race value Rs. 50. There should be no doubt of this filling satisfactorily.

There is also a steeplechase which it is to be hoped will draw a field, a 7 furlong for maiden horses, a mile handicap for ponies 14-1 and under and a 6 furlong for horses which have not been entered during the last year for a race value Rs. 51 or over.

This last which is entitled the "Novice Stakes" might perhaps from the wording of its conditions have been more appropriately named the "Pensioners' Plate," as it will not unlikely prove a sort of reunion of long-forgotten race horses, hauled out to prove that there is life in the old dog yet.

Entries for this Gymkhana not having filled well the time was extended till last evening—too late for us to include them in this issue.

An extra race has been included in the programme, the terms of which are follows : "A Handicap Flat Race for all horses, the property of members of the Calcutta Light Horse : Ladies' nomination. Distance 5 furlongs." Step forward, please, all ye "Pumpkin" and "Thread and Needle" warriors !

The prospectuses of the fourth and fifth Calcutta Monsoon Meetings are out. They are practically the same as last year and include two open hurdle handicaps, one closed jump race for hunter class, and two pony hurdle races. All these should fill fairly satisfactorily. The open flat race on the 10th is a 5-furlong handicap, and no open flat race appears in the programme for the 17th, its place being taken by a selling race for horses entered to be sold for Rs. 1,500. This will no doubt draw a good field, but we cannot help thinking that the upset price is too high and that it would have been better if reduced to Rs. 1,000 or even Rs. 750. Selling races in India are seldom selling races in anything more than the name, as it is the exception rather than the rule to see any bid made for the winner.

There is also a closed flat race for horses each day of 6 furlongs each, one for horses which have not won Rs. 450 and the other Rs. 750 since 31st March 1902. These seem somewhat odd sums to select and one is prone to wonder what is the raison d'être of the odd fifty in each case, but no doubt the conditions will fulfil the object in drawing a field of horses of much about the same class. The 14-1 class have still two more chances to distinguish themselves over 5 furlongs and the big ponies are to have another run over the same distance at the next meeting.

The first entries for the Umballa Autumn Meeting are published in the usual place, and most promising they are. Second entries close on the 17th instant.

Another paperchase in connection with the Madras Gymkhana was held on the 20th ultimo, the meet being at Stirling's Road. A field of about thirty were sent away to a good start. Robinson showed the way to the bund of the Nungumbaukum Tank, where he overrode the paper, and Yorke, Elwes and Strouts took command. A sharp right and left turn, a water jump, then along the railway to the tannery, skirting this on to the Kodambaukum Road, past the village and then open country to the big Banyan Tree. Yorke was first into the open with Elwes and Robinson next, followed by Braithwaite, Strouts, and Steele. Then Elwes began to go up to the leader and kept with him for a space, eventually going to the front and winning comfortably by six lengths. Robinson was third, the same distance behind Yorke.

The Calcutta Light Horse brought off their Gymkhana last Saturday on the maidan. The weather conditions were fair and the little rain that fell helped to cool the atmosphere. The events, six in number, were successfully carried through and provided interest and amusement to a large gathering of spectators, there being no counter-attraction to thin the attendance. Colonel Wheeler, 6th Cavalry, Major Taggart, D.S.O., 15th Hussars, Major Palin, C.V.R., Major Cartwright, C.A.V., Major Apostolides, C.L.H., and Captain Jackson, Adjutant, King's Own, acted as judges. Major Apostolides and the officers and members of the C.L.H. dispensed their hospitality from a large shamiana and the Town band supplied the music. The prizes were presented by Mrs. Caddy at the conclusion of an enjoyable afternoon. Appended are the winners. A section of the C.L.H. contested the tent-pegging with the Calcutta Polo Club. Major Taggart for the Polo Club took a peg in the first and third runs and T. S. M. Smith did the same for the Light Horse, but the Polo Club kept better formation, showed better style and were judged winners. The Riding and Jumping Competition was won rather easily by Trooper Ralli on True Blue ; T. S. M. Westmacott on Cossack and Sergeant-Farrier Rees on Quicksilver being placed next in order. Trooper Harvey was first home in the Saddle, Cigar and Umbrella Race, but having lost his topee was disqualified, and Tooper Macdonald was declared winner. The Needle and Thread Competition was won easily for Miss Cubitt by Captain Pugh. The Pumpkin Race attracted twelve competitors and was run off in two heats, Lance-Sergent. Graves and Sergent Antram qualifying for the final, which was won by the former. The Menagerie Race was most exciting. The goat steered by T. S. M. Smith just beat the monkey attended by Lance-Corporal. Hossack on the post, but both were disqualified and Corporal Jackson's Goose secured the award. Other competitors were rabbits, fowl, a game cock, and a frog.

The advertisement regarding the Tollygunge Club Tenth Annual Horse, Dog, and Cattle Show appears further on. The date, as we announced some time ago, is Monday, the 26th December, a public holiday.

In the usual place will be found the second entries for the Poona Races and Steeplechases; they are not numerous. We remind our readers that third and final entries close on Tuesday, 6th September.

Our Poona corresspondent writes :—It is good to be able to report that young Mr. Ross, who for so long lay in such a critical state as the result of his serious accident at polo and caused such anxiety to his friends, has at last "turned the corner" and is now, it is believed, on the high road to a speedy and complete recovery.

A racquet tournament is to be held at the court of the Club of Western India between the 21st and 27th of September and includes Open Doubles, Open Singles, Handicap Doubles and Singles, Mixed Doubles and finally Singles for Racquet markers of whom there are as need scarcely be pointed out excellent examples, three or four at least being I hear sons of the once celebrated Poona Club marker now on the retired list, one of them being the brilliant player who so ably upheld the glory of Indian racquets last year in England.

Quite a feast of racing we have had, though racing men never seem to suffer from a surfeit of it, nor need they when the feast is served up in such luxurious courses as the W. I. T. C. provide. On Thursday the usual six were on the card, but a seventh was provided owing to a dead heat of which in due place. Jimmy Robinson, whom everyone is delighted to see riding with every ounce of his old dash, was indubitably the main factor in Dilerjung's victory.

In the Intermediate Plate those who had on the previous day effected a coup on Mr. Bass' English mare Filbert took rather a knock, as Foster riding a very admirably timed race on Olga just did for Hoyt on the favourite, and it is believed that the ring were not overpowered with sorrow at the result.

Titus II once more showed what a sterling pony he is and one wonders more and more at the folly of the advice which induced the owner to start him in that fatal race just before the Army Cup which apparently otherwise must have been the greatest gift for him. There must have been bitter repentance following it.

Old Tubal Cain with 10 stone won quite comfortably as was commonly expected, but the bonne bouche of the afternoon was provided in the one mile race for maiden Arabs wherein Arabian Flag with J. Robinson up, and starting at 7 to 1, made a dead heat of it with Berlin, Kamad in the saddle, starting favourite at evens. The owners elected to run it off after the last event, the joint possessors of Berlin putting Melsom up vice Kamad, and unless the former was tied down by injudicious instructions it is a question whether in this instance the alteration served any good purpose. Melsom's tactics of leading Robinson a very slow run race would seem to have been all in favour of the newly-landed Arabian Flag, any lack of seasoning in whom a severe run race would have discovered. Inside the distance Robinson drew up level and it is no disparagement to any jockey to say that in a ding dong set to the demon usually has a pound hidden away somewhere for emergencies. He had on this occasion and by the most artistic effort just squeezed the Flag home by a short head amidst intense excitement. I hear the joint owners of Berlin dissatisfied with the defeat have asked for and been accommodated with a match for Rs. 1,000 to be run during the big meeting. If so it will be a most sporting event and will be watched with much interest.

Once more the closed race provided a full dozen starters—a most healthy sign and to add to the sportingness of it the winner turned up in a 10 to 1 chance. Harpagos ridden by Mr. Pawson of the 12th Lancers for his brother officer Mr. Badger.

Seven events were on the card for Saturday, including two hurdle races. Reasonable weight fails to minimise Patrician's beautiful hurdling and with 11st. 4lbs. ridden by A. Hoyt he won fairly comfortably giving 2st. and 2lbs. to the second. The same successful jockey also steered the winner in the Horse Hurdles in Major Moore's Daroji. In this event we were at the last hurdle treated to quite a marvellous bit of gymnastics. Fitzeros with Captain Casson in the saddle came down, the sporting young G. R. happily escaping with nothing more than a shaking. Gnullo in cleverly avoiding the fallen horse swerved off and pecked unseating Morrison and it seemed impossible that he could recover, but by some miracle he regained his place in the saddle in a strangely short time and raced after the leader and the Australian jockey received quite an ovation on returning.

Robinson rode a fine race once more on Dilerjung the third victory of this pair this season. But best of the afternoon to lovers of blood horses was the beautiful field of fifteen that turned out for the All Horse Handicap and Mr. Cursetjee completely mystified the public who were in the most complete quandary. An acute contingent, however, had a soft thing in Epitome who showed herself a veritable flier over 5 furlongs and ridden quietly by Elliott won almost in a canter in 1 minute 3 seconds.

Melsom rode a clever race on the Arab pony Yerbo swooping down on the heavily backed Random in the last fifty yards. Then Money Spinner, whose distance is evidently a mile, led from start to finish, ridden in the rogue's badge, and won cleverly from the good looking Avatar, a candidate for Army Cup honours.

The afternoon's sport was brought to a conclusion with, as usual, the closed event, in this instance a Welter Handicap for all Horses. Seven accepted their allotted burdens, the winner turning up in the veteran Dumbbell steered by Mr. Deane and winning by some lengths from Stoddart, who had the services of "Mr. Bryan." So ended two very pleasant days' racing.

First entries for the Lucknow Autumn Meeting appear in our Turf columns to-day. We remind our readers that second entries close on the 1st October.

Our Behar Correspondent, after a prolonged silence, for which we suppose we must blame mahai and other indigo operations, has weighed in with a budget of Behar Gossip which will be found further on.

The dates fixed for the Rangoon Autumn Meeting this year are 29th November and 1st and 3rd December, entries closing on the 29th October and 15th and 22nd November. The programme consists of 18 events, the total value of which is advertised as Rs. 11,000. The second and third extra meetings take place on 22nd October (entries closing on 1st and 15th October), and 12th November (entries closing 24th October and 5th November).

The Murree Dog Show has been fixed for the 22nd instant, though it was feared that owing to the prevalence of rabies in the station the show would not take place this year.

One of the best known figures on the Turf thirty years ago was Mr. Chaplin. Though a great patron of racing, his policy did not always commend itself to those who had the true interest of the sport at heart. By the bookmakers he was positively disliked, and as he usually contrived to get the best of them, it was not surprising if the members of the Ring shouted when some contemplated coup failed to give them the severe shaking which was intended.

Mr. Chaplin's début on the Turf was made under the ægis of Captain Machell and it was asserted by many that the pupil eventually proved himself to be even smarter than his astute tutor. Though a professed enemy to finesse, Mr. Chaplin's commissions were always "worked" to the best advantage, as his conduct at the Newmarket Second Spring meeting of 1875 proved. He had a colt named Rosinante, who made his début in a Maiden Plate at that meeting. Mr. Chaplin was asked by many bookmakers with whom he was in the habit of doing business if he would back his horse. To all their inquiries he replied in the negative, and eventually had several small sums on another gentleman's animal which was favourite in the same race.

When the "bookies" found that Rosinante was not backed by his owner, they came to the conclusion that the colt was either very moderate or only "out for an airing." Thinking that Rosinante was "safe," the Ring desired to lay him, and most tempting prices were offered. Just at this time Mr. Chaplin's commissioner set to work, and backed the colt for all that could be got on. Needless to say, he succeeded in getting some fine prices, 1 000 to go several times, followed by ten to 1 to a good sum, being obtained before the horse touched a short price. Rosinante won in a canter, and the bookmakers then wondered why they had not "tumbled" to Mr. Chaplin's game.

As Regards Invalid Cookery, bear in mind that your object is to impart nourishment; invalids are faddy, and their digestive organs weak.

Remembering this, try LEMCO. Besides being very nourishing, Lemco dishes are so delicious and tempting that the faddiest invalid relishes them; they are so digestible that the weakest stomach can assimilate them.

The merry British poacher marches with the times. His latest deadly contrivance is thus described :—"This affair is in the form of a round hawk-trap, and every bit of it is made of thick copper wire. When set it rests on the ground perfectly flat, and is the size of a tea-plate ; the spring, which is spiral, is exceedingly strong. The whole affair weighs about a pound, and a dozen can be stowed away and concealed on the person. These traps are not designed to detain anything they catch, nor are they fastened down. To hares they are very deadly, and this is how they are used. One of the contrivances is set in each well-used sneuse, being merely laid on the ground, and slightly covered over with the lightest possible material. A hare passing through is certain to spring it, and to such an unfortunate hare it attaches itself with the tenacity of a leech. There is no screaming on the part of the hare, for she is still able to get away, but she cannot divest herself of the horrid entanglement and is more or less incommoded as regards moving, according to the manner in which the trap has caught her. If it is on a foot she can only drag herself along, and if on the head or neck her death is not far distant ; in any event she will not be able to progress far, and the advantage to the poacher rests on the fact that she utters no cry and there are no striking traces of what has occurred on the spot where she was captured. This tends towards less risk to the poachers. The rest is very simple, for the person who set the traps comes along and sees where one has disappeared ; by daylight the marks left on the herbage and soil lead to the quarry being easily followed by aid of eye alone, and at night a trained retriever takes up the scent and speedily returns with the hare.

The third regatta of the Calcutta Rowing Club, originally fixed for the 3rd instant, has been postponed to Saturday, the 10th.

A good performance in pedestrianism was put up at Orregum, Kolar Gold Fields, the other day, the occasion being a walking match in connection with the civil branch of the Royal Army Temperance Association on the Field. The distance was seven miles on a hilly road, and fifteen competitors completed the course. Mr. Kent walking in splendid style was first in, his time being 1 hour 13 minutes ¾seconds, a fine performance, when one considers the hilly nature of the roads.

The following are the ties in the Rampur Football Challenge Cup at Naini Tal : (a) York's Band vs. Rovers ; (b) Depôt B. vs. St. Joseph's College ; byes Depôt A. and Diocesan School ; (c) Winners of (a) vs. Winners of (b) ; (d) Depôt A. vs. Diocesan School. Final. Winner of (c) vs. Winner of (d).

The death of Mr. Herbert Jenner-Fust, of Hill Court, Gloucestershire, in his ninety-ninth year, removes one of the most venerable and historic figures of the cricketing world, as well as one of the most active and genial of country gentlemen. Mr. Herbert Jenner (as he was then). of Trinity Hall, was captain of the Cambridge eleven in the first match between the two universities that was ever played ; besides playing for Eton against Harrow, and for the Gentlemen against the Players repeatedly, he was captain of the M.C.C. as long ago as 1831. He did not stop playing cricket till he was well over seventy, and kept up to the very last a keen interest in every form of country pursuit.

In an interesting note on wicketkeeping, The King says that to Huish, of Kent, belongs the unique record of having literally kicked a man out. In Kent vs. Australians at Canterbury, 1902, he dismissed Duff by taking a flying kick at the ball, which travelled right up to the wicket at the bowler's end, and hit it before Duff made good his ground. Surely an incident which would not be repeated in a hundred years. The writer also gives the following hint for saving the hands at the wicket. Place a thin strip of raw beefsteak across the palms of the hands at the bass of the fingers inside the inner glove and next to the skin. The "give" of the beef is said to be a sure preventative of bruised palms.

One of the most important British athletic meetings of the year was that which was held on Saturday, the 6th ultimo, by the Glasgow Rangers' Football Club, at Ibrox Park, Glasgow. Among the entrants were such famous athletes as J. W. Morton, 100 yards champion ; A. F. Duffey, 100 yards ex-champion ; H. A. Hyman, of Pennsylvania University ; J. S. Westnew, of the New York A. C. ; B. J. Blunden, half-mile ex-champion; J. McGough, Scottish champion ; George Butterfield, the Darlington crack ; T. R. Nicholson, hammer-throwing champion; Denis Horgan, weight-putting champion ; T. L. Shevlin, who won the hammer-throw for Harvard and Yale against Oxford and Cambridge at Queen's Club recently ; P. O'Connor, long-jump champion ; C. Leahy, another famous jumper ; R. L. Watson, 440 yards champion ; W. H. Welsh, the Scottish International footballer and runner ; and R. S. Stronach, the hurdles champion. In the matter of quantity the entry was equally remarkable, as for the open sprint alone 209 runners sent in their names, and no fewer than thirty preliminary heats had to be contested. Duffey and Morton shared the scratch mark, but were drawn in different heats. Duffey failed to qualify, but Morton got through and ran in the final, in which, however, he could only finish fourth. It was noticeable, too, that each of those who finished in front of him had a short mark, J. P. Stark winning with 2½ yards start, which was the advantage given to the crack quarter-mile, R. L. Watson, who finished third. A wonderful performance was accomplished by T. R. Nicholson with the hammer, that fine athlete putting in a throw of 169ft. 8in., which is a British record.

The defeat of Billington by Eric Forsyth in the Half-mile Swimming Championship at Swindon on the 6th August came as somewhat of a surprise. However, Billington was hardly expected to do so well at this distance as in shorter events. According to the reading of the race, it must have been a great struggle, for there was never more than ten yards between them. The pace that they travelled is indicated by the winner's time—12mins. 23secs.—the second fastest ever accomplished in the race. When Cavill put up the marvellous record of 11 mins. 50⅗secs., Billington was only about a second slower. On Saturday his time was 12mins. 39secs., and as the Coate reservoir at Swindon has the reputation of providing fast times, it can only be assumed that Billington is not so good a swimmer as he was.

Our Bombay Correspondent writes :—The opening day's play in the Presidency, Parsee match at Bombay this year will long be remembered by Presidency supporters as the most dismal in the whole series of these matches by reason of the inglorious exhibition given by their side. The wicket, which at the start bumped a bit, gradually became worse as play progressed, and when the Presidency were batting was giving the bowlers considerable assistance, but, still, that cannot be accepted as an explanation for the utter collapse of the Europeans, none of whom ever looked like making any prolonged stay at the wicket. To the large number of European spectators, including a strong contingent from Poona and other district stations, the spectacle afforded by the Presidency innings must have been the reverse of pleasant. It was not a case of "the delightful uncertainties of the game," but a sorrowful procession of batsmen beaten before they came in. I have seen bad rots in my time, but there has usually been at least one redeeming feature in innings of that kind. Not so, however, in this case, as even Aston, who by desperate hitting managed to make 16, never looked settled for a long stay at the wickets. There is not a shadow of doubt that winning the toss and batting first gave the Parsees a big advantage, but that does not in the very least explain the debâcle that followed when the Presidency had to bat. The last three Parsee batsmen managed to put on 58 runs and there could not have been much difference in the state of the wicket when they were batting and when the Presidency were in. Must the failure of the Europeans then be attributed more to the deadliness of the Parsee bowling than to the state of the wicket ? I am afraid the question must be answered in the affirmative, as there was no other reason why a side including such good bats as Greig, Cadogan, Carroll, Chaplin, Deas, Aston, and the Langhornes should only be able to make 44 runs between them. The feeble response and consequent disappointment of the Presidency to the Parsee total of 194 was in some measure softened by the success of their bowlers when the Parsees went in again. Bowling as he had never in his life done before, Coombs on a wicket that was growing more difficult every over completely demoralised the Parsee batsmen and had the proud distinction of accomplishing one of the best performances with the ball ever recorded in these matches by a Presidency bowler. He captured eight wickets for 32 runs on the second morning, and at one time his analysis read—13 overs, 6 maidens, 25 runs, and 7 wickets. This performance was absolutely the only redeeming feature in the cricket of the Presidency and raised the hopes of Presidency supporters who had visions of Greig knocking up a century in the second innings, and of some at least of the other batsmen coming off. The cheap dismissal of the Parsees in their second innings left the Presidency with 221 to make to win. Unfortunately for their hopes the Presidency second innings had not been in progress a quarter of an hour before a series of disasters befel that luckless team, which proved to be the forerunners of a worse collapse than the first innings. It was a most painful exhibition to watch that innings, and it was with a positive sense of relief that Presidency supporters saw the last wicket fall after the innings had lasted exactly one hour. Five men did not trouble the scorers at all, and the other six between them could only account for 35 runs, which with 5 extras brought the total to 40. Aston, who made 9 not out for the second time in the match, was able to claim top score and his aggregate of 25 runs (not out in both innings) represented nearly a third of the runs made from the bat by his side. Captain Deas bowled with great judgment and his three wickets for 50 runs in the first innings was a very good performance. In the second innings, although he took no wickets, he kept the runs down and the Parsee batsmen treated his deliveries with the greatest respect. He bowled 20 overs, 10 of which were maidens and only had 20 runs scored off him. Grey showed a glimpse of his true form with the ball and was credited with four wickets in the match for 69 runs. The chief feature of the cricket shown by the Parsees was the fine bowling of Mehta and Bulsara, who were not changed during the match. The first named proved as effective as ever and had nine wickets for 36 runs, the best thing he has ever accomplished in a Presidency match. Bulsara who bowled his fastest, obtained eight wickets for 43 runs, and has only on one previous occasion done better. The batting of the Parsees was not as brilliant as usual and only H. D. Kanga, N. B. Saklatwalla, and M. E. Pavri played anything like free cricket. This victory of the Parsees now places them one ahead of the Presidency.

Two disappointed teams have returned to Bombay: one the polo team which was very unfortunate in having to meet such a formidable quartette as the side that represented the 33rd Cavalry in the opening round of the Junior Tournament at Poona, and the other a team of golfers who had gone up to Nasik to try conclusions with the local men with the most disastrous results, the men from the capital not having a look in.

Interest in the Harwood League matches during the week was confined to the meetings between the Bombay Gymkhana and the Cheshire "B" Team and the Cheshire "A" Team and the Royal Garrison Artillery. The first of these games resulted in a victory for the Cheshire "B" Team by two goals to nil, but they had not things all their own way by any means, the Gymkhana team playing a better game than I have seen them play this season. It was their last League match as well as the Cheshire's. The game between the R. G. A. and the Cheshire "A" Team, on the result of which depended the placing of the second team in the League, attracted a large number of spectators, considerable interest being taken in the play. The Cheshires throughout had the best of the game and won by three goals to nil. Only one more match remains to be played, between the R. G. A. and the Rovers, but as the result, whichever way the game ends, cannot alter the positions of the teams in the League table, not much importance attaches to it. The Cheshire "A" and "B" Teams are first and second, respectively, and the Cup winners have throughout the season displayed fine form.

Rugger doings have been confined to two matches: one between the Bombay Gymkhana and the Casuals, which the former won by a goal and three tries to a goal, and the second between the Gymkhana and the United Services, which the latter won by a goal and two tries to two goals.

The Rovers' Football Tournament will be more than usually interesting this year by reason of the calibre of some of the teams which have entered. In addition to the Cheshire Regiment, whose team must be one of the best in India, if not the very best, entries have already been received from the following teams:—The Calcutta F. C., whose appearance in Bombay for the first time since the tournament was instituted will give great pleasure to football lovers; the Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders, who are a warm side; the Middlesex Regiment, who hold a record hardly less brilliant than that of the Cheshires; the Seaforth Highlanders, who rumour has it can put a team nearly as strong as a home league side in the field; the R. G. A. (Colaba), H. M. S. Perseus, the Rovers, the South Lancashires, the Warwickshire Regiment, the Royal Scots, the Shropshires, the York and Lancasters, the Bombay Gymkhana, the 10th Hussars, and the East Yorkshires. It is probable that several other teams, including the East Lancashires, the R. A. (Poona) and the Telegraph (Bombay) will enter in which case the entries will be the largest in the history of the tournament.

The Gymkhana cricket eleven met the B. B. and C. I. Railway in a return match on Saturday, and for the second time baulked their powerful opponents, the game being left drawn very much in favour of the Railway. The chief features of the cricket shown by the Railway were the excellent innings played by Baloo, the famous slow left-hand bowler, who put up 65, top score, in faultless style; A. L. Smith, who was batting in excellent form when dismissed for 21, and the bowling of K. A. Date, who took five wickets for 21 runs. The Gymkhana, who had six of the side that played for the Presidency in their team, compiled exactly 100 for the loss of eight wickets; Captain J. A. D. Langhorne (22), S. N. Powell (18), E. E. Coombs (22), and A. K. Aston (16) all reaching double figures. Coombs, in addition to batting extremely well, captured five wickets for 52 runs, while Powell obtained three for 16.

Among the important cricket results at home last week are the following:—Somerset beat Surrey by seven wickets, Middlesex beat Kent by one wicket, Surrey beat Gloucester by 119 runs, Yorkshire defeated Somerset by an innings and 152 runs, Hampshire beat Warwickshire by 40 runs, Kent beat the South Africans by 104 runs, Middlesex beat Sussex by 9 wickets, Lancashire beat Derbyshire by 131 runs. The following matches were drawn:—Worcestershire vs. Leicestershire, Gloucestershire vs. Yorkshire, London County vs. Warwick, Leicestershire vs. Lancashire, and South Africans vs. Sussex.

The World's Boxing Championship at San Francisco resulted in a win for Jim Jefferies, who defeated Monroe in the second round.

The proposed visit of the Bombay Rugby team to compete in the Calcutta Rugby Challenge Cup has fallen through owing to the business engagements of most of the representatives of the team. The Calcutta Football Club, however, are sending across a Soccer team to Bombay, which will shortly be on its way. As at present arranged the following players will represent the C. F. C:—(Goal) Dods or Vlasto; (backs) Gahan and Baker; (half-backs) Maunder, Crawford and Ansell; (forwards) H. Sherman, J. Macdonald or V. Cooper, H. Cooper, V. Sherman and Lieutenant E. P. Cudlip—a strong combination which ought to render a good account of itself.

There is some talk of the Colombo contingent, who at Xmas are to visit Madras on cricket and other things bent, finding their way up to Calcutta. They may rest assured of a right warm welcome, for our local golfers, oarsmen, cricketers et hoc are prepared to take them on and give them a good time generally.

The inaugural run of the Bengal Automobile Association was held on Sunday morning, when several motorists turned out. The rendezvous was at the Dufferin statue, where photographers, professional and amateur, were almost as numerous as the motorists. Having submitted to the ordeal of the snap shot and the large camera, on an Eiffel Tower like erection, they filed off, and had a most enjoyable run to Titaghur, refreshing themselves en route at Emerald Bower, the garden house of Maharaja Jotendra Mohun Tagore. They breakfasted at the Kinnison Jute Mill, Titaghur, with Mr. Archy Birkmyre, and after a round or two of golf and some other items in the way of divertissement the party returned to Calcutta without a fatal accident.

Our Bangalore Correspondent writes:—Cricket is the game in Bangalore at present and a couple of really interesting games have been played since I last wrote. The first of these was between Belgaum and the Bangalore Gymkhana, in which 126 by the home team (Standage 29 and Jollie 21) was answered by 107 by Belgaum (Manson 27 and Copplestone 26). These two batsmen were also the most successful trundlers for the visitors, whilst for Bangalore Standage and Udal did best. In the second innings of Bangalore a great stand was made by Harris and Standage, the former hitting hard for 46 and the latter playing a really good innings for 73. Udal also subsequently made things lively, and the total reaching 215, the visitors wanted 235 to win when they went in a second time. They were by no means done with, however, and whilst most of the side added something to the general account, Copplestone again did his side yeoman service with a finely played 75, being also responsible for the dismissal of five Bangalore batsmen and holding two catches. A fine all-round cricketing performance indeed. An interesting match ended in a win for Bangalore by 36 runs

Then came the game between a very strong Gymkhana team and the Essex Regiment, the former having the "England returned" Jayaram, who signalised his re-appearance in Indian cricket after his visit to England, by scoring 128 marred by only one difficult chance at square leg when he had made about 30. His brilliant strokes to the off, and his late cutting was as noticeable as ever, and in company with Captain Wall (51) he added over 200 runs before the first wicket fell. The Gymkhana declared with a total of 304 for five wickets, four of which went to Mr. Cooper for 34 runs, and left their opponents 2¼ hours for play. With more pluck than judgment, perhaps, the Essex batsmen went for a win, and scoring well all round they totalled 233 runs, the last wicket falling just before the call of time. This left the "Gym" winners by 71 runs, but had they played a more cautious game the Essex men would almost certainly have made a draw of it. They were beaten, but decidedly not disgraced.

Two minor matches which have been decided were between the Survey of India and Bishop Cotton's School, and the Bangalore Gymkhana and St. Joseph's College. Batting first, the Gymkhana did not take their cricket too seriously against St. Joseph's, but let drive at almost everything. The rate of scoring was quite abnormal and Cooper hit up 102 runs to his own bat in 45 minutes, scoring 22 off five consecutive balls from Baillie. The hits were 6, 4, 4, 6, 2. The boys played a plucky uphill game and going in against a total of 296, amassed 164 (J. Pereira 43 and F. de la Nougerede 26). The Survey of India easily beat Bishop Cotton's School by an innings and 14 runs, scoring 109 (Roy 43), whilst Cottons could only muster 35 and 60. Roy for the Survey took twelve wickets in the two innings for 51 runs.

The victory of Mr. A. R. MacAllan in the Calcutta Cup at St. Andrew's, besides being an exceedingly creditable one to that young player himself seeing that he only had one stroke of a handicap to help him, will be regarded as particularly appropriate by Anglo-Indian Golfers, for Mr. MacAllan, who is a subaltern in the Cameronians, has played a lot of golf since he came out to India to join his regiment and has improved his game considerably. He came down to Calcutta and competed in the Indian Golf Championship of 1901, but did not succeed in qualifying for the match play, though in the following year carried off the Cashmere Championship at Gulmarg, which by the way, is on for decision now. We hope that we may see Mr. MacAllan down again for the Championship at X'mas time this year, on his St. Andrew's form he ought to stand a very good chance of winning it.

"The result of the recent match between the Bombay Presidency and the Parsees (which will be found detailed elsewhere in our columns), shows up European cricket on the other side very unfavourably especially seeing that the Parsees were without K. M. Mistre decidedly their best man and that a good many of their cracks are by no means so young as they were, writes a correspondent. It was recognised, however, that this year's Presidency team was found to be a weak one, and the double failure of Captain Greig, a somewhat unique experience, we fancy in his Indian cricketing annals, must have taken out all the heart of his colleagues. Still 48 and 40 are miserable totals, and the only redeeming feature of the match from the Presidency point of view was the splendid bowling of Mr. E. E. Coombs, who took 3 wickets for 51 runs and 8 for 32, though for the Parsees A. H. Mehta with 9 for 36 and M. D. Bulsara with 8 for 43 bowled throughout the match and quite eclipsed this performance; great things with the ball were hoped from Mr. J. L. Ainsworth, a new acquisition, but either luck was dead against him or the old Malburian must have gone off considerably since he carried all before him on P. F. Warner's American tour of 1898, and actually headed the Lancashire bowling averages in 1899, though he only played in a very few matches for his county.

The members of the Calcutta Racket Club have recently had their east court in Chowringhee thoroughly done up with new walls and floor, etc., by the India Patent Stone Company, Limited, and it ought now to rank among the very best courts in India. It is proposed to hold two handicap tournaments, Singles and Doubles, in it during September and October, and most satisfactory entries have been received for both events, so that with the results being considered very open, some interesting play should be seen. It is good to note such a revival of interest in this splendid game which has been languishing somewhat in Calcutta during the last few seasons.

London Week by Week.

London, Friday, 12th August 1904.

THE first of the grouse are already in, the game dealers' windows moving us to respect for the energy which produces the birds dead so soon after the clock struck twelve last night. We do not enquire into the mystery, we accept it as proof of enterprise and ask no questions. The torrid heat gave place to steady rain yesterday, and not before rain was wanted for the trees have been shedding their browned leaves in despair and the parks are as your maidan in April for colour. We welcome the rain, all of us that is who remain in town; but the faces peering from baggage laden growlers are long and dejected.

We are not going to abandon the position we have taken up in regard to the Knight Commander. Reuter will have told you as as much no doubt, but perhaps Reuter did not add that there are symptoms of the long patience of the public wearing thin. This question of what does and what does not constitute contraband of war. Russia may have been very conciliatory and reasonable, but if that theory that biscuits other than sweet are contraband of war (presence of which on board a neutral may, under circumstances, justify Russia in sinking her) be a specimen of her reasonableness the prospect of agreement on this vital point seems remote. Meantime the P. and O. and other prominent steamship lines are refusing all cargo for Japan and receiving none for ports beyond Shanghai: which has had the effect of driving this trade into German hands. British commerce will not put up with much more of this sort of thing. What, one would like to know, has a Russian cruiser to do with a homeward bound steamer 25 miles south of Finisterre that she should call upon that steamer (the B. I. S. N. Co.'s Manora) to hoist her ensign?

The agreement between the Porte and Russia, whereby the Volunteer fleet vessels are permitted to pass through the Dardanelles, is another matter that does not make for pacific settlement. The Turkish consent has been given on the verbal promise of the Russian Ambassador that these vessels will not hoist the man-of-war flag in place of the Mercantile after passing through, and will not carry munitions of war. It is not so long since Russia told the World frankly that it was no concern of Britain or Turkey what flag her vessels flew or what metamorphoses they might undergo when once through the Bosphorus. The new Baltic Fleet, we learn from Berlin, will put to sea on Tuesday next, sixty vessels in all: it is calculated that the voyage to Port Arthur will occupy 169 days: what it may find to do when it gets there is another matter. Meantime the British Navy is seriously occupied manœuvring around the coast of Ireland.

Particulars of her New Bureau of Information concerning Prisoners of War have been published by Japan. The regulations are conceived in a spirit of enlightenment and humanity that do the Japanese infinite credit. The Russian War Office for reasons of its own, will not give information to relatives concerning dead, wounded, and prisoners: the Japanese Bureau endeavours to repair this by publishing every ten days, through the French Minister at Tokio, a list of prisoners taken and such details as are possible concerning dead Russians buried. Among other duties, this Bureau collects all property found on the dead and catalogued for return to relatives, if possible.

His Majesty's Opposition created a sensation last Friday night by walking out of the House in a body when it found that a brutal Chairman of Committee would not allow it to play the game of obstruction. The Welshmen objected to the proposition that the Education Board should do the work of local bodies which prefer to "passively resist" by withholding their salaries from schoo teachers and coals from schoolroom grates: so they made a scene of a sort formerly familiar on the Irish benches and "walked out." I cannot understand why their departure is to be regretted or reproached: they went avowedly because they were not allowed to obstruct business; and their departure enabled the Government to push on a very essential measure. Walking out seems to me a proceeding that deserves every possible encouragement as one eminently calculated to facilitate business and spare us floods of futile and undignified talk.

Mr. Arnold Forster made his supplemetary speech on the re-organisation of the Army on Monday, dealing with the Militia and Volunteers. The latter force needs delicate handling, but that it wants mending is hardly to be denied. The proposition is to get rid of that curious anomaly the inefficient Volunteer and make the efficient more efficient. So with the Militia: Mr. Arnold Forster proposes to eliminate, by process of test, units or parts of units which are not fit to take their place in the fighting line. The result will be a smaller force of Volunteer and Militia, but—it is hoped—a force on which more reliance as a fighting machine can be placed. The chief difficulty, to the eye of the mere onlooker, is that of increasing the efficiency of the volunteer. The really enthusiastic volunteer who eagerly devotes every hour he can spare to mastering the intricacies of his business is something of a rarity: he forms at all events the smallest percentage of the 348,000 which Whitaker's gives as the total of the force. The enthusiast is the willing horse, and will no doubt submit gladly to be wrought up to a pitch of efficiency that will make him a really valuable item in the scheme of Defence: but how many of them are there? I am moved to this enquiry by perusal of a paper published by the National Service League which states that over 100,000 volunteer officers and men have resigned since Mr. Brodrick's scheme for their regeneration.

The decision of the Lords in favour of the Free Church of Scotland has struck Presbyterian Scotland dumb. When, on 31st October 1900, the vast majority of Free Churchmen joined hands with the United Presbyterians to form the United Free Church of Scotland, it never struck them that they might be leaving their endowments behind, and they took a very high tone with the Faithful who declined to join the combination and remained Free Churchmen. The latter consists of 28 ministers, who for the most part have Gaelic-speaking congregations: with these lies victory and "the pious accumulations of 67 years" amounting to over five millions. You can form some idea of the condition of affairs produced by the Lords' decisions from the cases of Glasgow and Edinburgh. In Glasgow 103 congregations out of a total of 105 joined the United Free Church. In Edinburgh (and Leith) 55 congregations out of 56 joined it: and these 158 congregations have now not one legal place of worship nor a manse among them: all are the property of the church represented by the three congregations who remained Free Church. The twenty-eight ministers—who must regard their position with its new and unprecedented wealth and responsibilities with qualified gratification: have now the onus of administering Divinity Colleges, Mission and other Funds: and how the twenty-eight propose to get through the enormous amount of work thus thrown upon them is a question that will take some answering. The leaders of the Free Church, it is understood, have proposed terms on which they would be prepared to negotiate with the United with a view to settlement. The terms are not conspicuously generous: but the victors would be much more than human could they at once forget and forgive the treatment they received at the hands of the majority in 1900. Each of the twenty-eight, it now appears, received warning to vacate his manse and church. What will probably happen is that the "United" will disunite and a vast proportion of the congregations will follow the cash and become Free again.

Refused the official inquiry into the circumstances of his resignation, Sir Charles Eliot explains them in a long letter to Tuesday's Times. He was undoubtedly placed in a very difficult position by Lord Lansdowne. The whole trouble seems to have grown out of the difficulty of reconciling colonisation or farming schemes with native rights. Sir Charles Eliot granted two applications for 32,000 acres each after due enquiry into the native right question and satisfying himself that there would be no undue interference: and just as the agreements were signed by the Commissioner, Lord Lansdowne telegraphed ordering their cancellation on the ground that native rights would suffer. The authority on the spot being thus overridden and his discretion flouted, it is hard to see what he could do consistently with his own self-respect and the efficient discharge of his duty but resign, and that Sir Charles Eliot did. The fact that Lord Lansdowne had granted a syndicate a trifle of 500 square miles on terms so favourable that Sir Charles had objected is an incident which does not appear to improve the case of the people at the Foreign Office.

The gist of the report made by the Lords Committee which was appointed to enquire into the administration of the Chantrey Bequest is made public to-day. It is a "facer" for the Council of the Royal Academy: those who have administered the Trust are "acquitted of anything like corruption" (!) but are told plainly that they showed too constant a preference for their own exhibitions. The creation of a new purchasing body is recommended, but in as much as this suggests subsituting for the P. R. A. and Council, a Committee of three consisting of the resident, an R. A. nominated by the Council and an A. R. A. nominated by the associates, would not seem as though this "reform" is much more than nominal. The Academy is also recommended to make regulations whereby the principal artistic societies in England and Scotland, should be invited regularly to report to the new Committee the existence of important works of Art. This is the last unkindest cut of all: but when we consider that the Forty have had their way with Sir Francis Chantrey's money since 1877, and have not succeeded in carrying out the intentions of the festator, it is manifestly time that they received advice from authorities outside.

It is to be hoped that this report will not be quietly pigeon-holed according to what we have learned to regard as the Natural Law governing the fate of such documents. The Lords Committee anticipate this by embodying suggestions whereby their scheme may be carried out, and as they deal with that delicate entity a Trust Fund, there is hope that the report will be productive of fruit. The new purchasing body might be created by the Charity Commissioners, by Act of Parliament or by the courts on application of the Trustees. As the second is tedious and wofully uncertain, and the Trustees may be depended on to "sit tight," the first plan seems to be the most practicable.

The much discussed motor boat race from Calais to Dover come off on Monday. Twenty-one vessels of various classes, cruisers, fishing boats and racers started, only one, the Napier Minor, a 73 horse-power racer being under British colours. Interest naturally centred on the racing contingent, and truly the motor launches made us open our eyes. The Mercides IV, 39 feet 4 inches long with an 80 horse-power engine won, doing the journey in seven and two-fifths seconds over the hour as good a record as the best of the speedy channel mail boats. The sea was perfectly smooth which was well for the success of the event for I should be sorry to adventure far from shore in most of these craft more particularly the winning boat. The English craft was second in 1 hour 5mins. 25⅘secs.: she might have won had she not sustained a mishap to her engine which brought her to a dead stop when a mile out. This boat made far more fuss going through the water than did the winner, but she gave one the impression that she was far more seaworthy.

The sanitary authorities on the West Coast of Africa continue their study of your ever-present friend the mosquito, and have lately been investigating his taste in the matter of colours. I cannot, with some years of experience in the East, say that the results of these investigations carry conviction to my mind. The enquirers bred mosquitoes in a large gauze tent: and they found that "when an investigator entered the tent in dark grey flannels the mosquitoes settled on him, but never did so if he were clad in white." These West African mosquitoes, I conceive, must be ill-educated insects: for I am confident you will agree with me that white drill has no terrors for the average mosquito in the East: and that he will dine with equal appetite off the whitest of wrists and tanned-est of knuckes.

There is practically nothing to record this week concerning theatres: only seven remain open, to wit the Adelphi, Criterion, Prince of Wales's, Shaftesbury, Gaiety, Daly's and Apollo. During the hot, close evenings people prefer Earl's Court which has been doing good business. The Great Wheel has been baited with £5 notes to tempt patronage: the method is to roll an order for £5 in a piece of paper, throw the twist into one of the carriages at random: and advertise that this will be done every Saturday. Last Saturday the fiver lay in a carriage all day even unto after dark before it was found.

The Strange Case of the late Bob Haggard is still before us. Five propositions have been offered to the popular novelist to explain the occurrence: (1) that his own spirit or sub-consciousness travelled to the scene of the dog's death and saw what happened: or (2) that the telipathic information (delayed in transmission) came from a human who saw the death of the dog: or (3) that it was a case of deferred telepathy, Bob's communication acting upon Mr. Rider Haggard's mind hours after the dog had been killed: or (4) that his own clairvoyance was the cause: or, finally (5) that the nightmare, not to use the term disrespectfully, was caused by a visit from Bob's astral body. The last of these most commends itself to Mr. Haggard, though be frankly confesses his non comprehension of what an astral shape, canine or otherwise, may be: his own idea is that his nightmare was due to "some non-bodily but surviving part of the life or of the spirit of the dog:" which I take it for practical purposes is as functional as an astral body (whatever that is). Mr. Haggard does not break new ground when he propounds the theory that Bob possessed the equivalent of that immortal constituent called in humans the soul: and he clearly leans to the conviction that Bob in spirit communicated with him on the night of his death. Many people have written to him giving particulars which seem to prove the possibility of telepathic communication between man and dogs, horses, cats and even birds. It is not for us to deride: let us have it that we are not yet come to the end of Knowledge, and that eventually light may be shed on these dark matters.

A FORTNIGHT AFTER BURREL.

IN May last year I found an opportunity of paying a short visit to a remote corner of Kumaun where burrel (Ovis nahura) are fairly plentiful, if one knows where to look for them. I had paid a flying visit to the same locality four years before, but on that occasion was only able to spend two days on burrel ground, and though I saw four good rams altogether, the only chance I got was at a single ram going straight away from me at fully 300 yards distance up the hill side, when I was completely "blown" by having had to scramble some 500 feet up a shaley nullah at an altitude of nearly 15,000 feet above sea level in a vain attempt to cut the ram off as he came up a converging nullah. As it was I came pretty close to bagging him, for my bullet pinged into the shale right between his hind feet.

On the present occasion after bagging three good tahr on the way up I reached the outskirts of burrel ground on 16th May and camped close down by the main stream, the bed of which is here about 10,000 feet above the sea. There was still a good deal of snow lying, down as low as 12,000 feet and the burrel had not yet gone up to their summer feeding grounds, so I had good hopes of finding them fairly close at hand.

I was off at the first signs of dawn next morning, and accompanied by my orderly and a local shepherd went up the side nullah behind camp. We had not climbed more than 2,000 feet when we saw four burrel feeding above some precipitous rocks about 1,000 yards away on our right across a wide ravine, and had just started the stalk, which did not look very promising owing to the difficulty of getting above the sheep, when we sighted another flock of a dozen or more containing at least one good ram so far as we could see, feeding on an open grassy ridge about three-quarters of a mile in front and a good deal above us. There were some rocks conveniently situated on the ridge with a spur running down towards us, behind which we should be hidden from view, and as the wind was favourable and the stalk looked a fairly easy one we decided to go for this second lot instead.

Everything went all right till we were within a few hundred yards of the rocks, when suddenly a heavy snow storm came on and the wind began to get unsteady. However, we went on hoping for the best, but unfortunately lost our bearings in the blinding snow, with the result that we blundered right on a small lot of four out of the flock, that were sheltering behind a low rock. They bolted down the slope but pulled up to look back after going about 60 yards. It was impossible to make out anything clearly and I had never seen a burrel "in the flesh" at close quarters before, I but caught a glimpse of what looked like fair horns on one of them so let drive. The bullet caught him fair behind the shoulder as I subsequently found, but he went on and a running shot whistled over his back. However he then began to stagger and fell dead after going 30 yards. The other three galloped on down the slope and a little lower down were joined by a single beast with what seemed to be a very good head indeed and all speedily banished into the driving mist and snow. On going down to the fallen beast I was disappointed to find that his horns were so small as to be not worth keeping. However, it was my first burrel, and I consoled myself with the thought that the skin and meat would both be useful in their respective spheres As the weather was rapidly getting worse we made tracks straight for home, the local man carrying the burrel on his back, and after a long and rather difficult descent over fresh snow already lying several inches deep got into camp about 9 A.M. all drenched to the skin.

Nothing could be done on the 18th or 19th on account of the weather. It was beautifully fine on the 20th and I was out for nine hours on the hill side, but had a terribly trying time in the deep snow, and though I saw plenty of burrel including some good rams I never got a fair chance, and returned to camp pretty well exhausted and with both my companions suffering from slight snow blindness.

I shifted camp a few miles further up the main stream on the 21st, and as the weather continued fine practically all the fresh snow was melted by that evening. We made a very early start next morning up the ridge behind camp, and almost as soon as it was light enough to see discovered a flock of seven, including one good ram, feeding in a hollow about 1,000 yards higher up the steep slope we were ascending. They were almost in a straight line above us, and the wind was still blowing down the hill but was likely to change round before long, so I laid my plans accordingly. Descending a little we managed to get a low bank between us and the burrel and then kept straight along the hill side for about half a mile. Then we struck up the hill obliquely towards the burrel, making for a rocky mound a little above the place where we had last seen them. Everything went like clockwork and in about an hour we found ourselves close under the mound. Here we left the local man, whom we had only brought to show us the ground as he had no idea of stalking, and taking the mannlicher from the orderly I crept quietly on ahead over the flat top of the mound. Nothing was visible from there, but on going up a little further and peering over into the hollow beyond I discovered a small ram feeding quietly within 80 yards of me and then found the big one standing broad side on a little nearer and slightly lower down. With infinite caution I got into a sitting position and then suddenly the big ram's suspicions were aroused and he turned his head and looked up straight at me, so I had to fire at once. The position was an awkward one as I had to crane forward to get the sights properly on to him and consequently my bullet hit him too high and too far back but luckily injured his spine and disabled him instantly. The others hearing the report rushed pell mall down the slope and as they were all ewes or young males I let them go. Meanwhile the big ram was making desperate efforts to drag himself down the slope with his forefeet, his hind-quarters trailing behind, so to put the poor beast out of his pain I gave him another behind the shoulder and dropped him dead. On going down to him I was delighted to find that he was a very old ram with good horns though extraordinarily chipped and battered about by old age and fighting. The right horn measured 23 inches and the left 21½ inches, the girth of each being 10½ inches. Had they been perfect both would certainly have measured not less than 24 inches. After wiping out the rifle I made straight for camp, which lay in sight about 3,000 feet below and was in by 8-30. The ram when brought in scaled 134lbs. on a Salter's spring balance, allowing 2lbs. for loss of blood which had been very heavy owing to the terrible wound made under the spine by my hollow-pointed bullet. I shifted camp higher up again next day and was then detained for two days, waiting for a bridge over the main stream to be repaired, so that I was not out again till the 25th. I spent both the 25th and 26th in pursuit of a large flock containing two good rams, which I discovered a long way above camp, but I could find no means of getting nearer to them than 400 yards, and finally at the end of the second day they got my wind and bolted. On our way back to camp after this fiasco we put up a very large hare on a small flat near the stream which drained the side nullah we were in. He stopped about 120 yards off, so as I intended going in a different direction next day and therefore did not mind disturbing the ground. I opened fire at him with two or three solid bullets I happened to have with me, and at the second attempt, the whistle of the first bullet having apparently only dazed him, managed to knock him over. He was of immense size, with a thick woolly coat of the same colour as the ordinary hare of the plains, and the local people were much astonished when we brought him into camp, never having seen a hare before in that neighbourhood.

On the 27th I tried a small nullah close to the place where I had missed the ram four years before. On the way up we came across the tracks of a snow leopard only an hour or two old. On reaching the ridge at the top of the nullah just after sunrise we sat down in the snow to prospect and very soon discovered two big rams feeding among some low bushes about 1,500 yards away on the slope of a tremendous precipice running down towards the main stream. One was a magnificent fellow with a peculiarly dark neck and fore quarter, the other being much lighter though his horns looked nearly as big. The wind was favourable and the ground practicable though difficult, but instead of carrying out my own ideas and making a long round so as to approach the game from above, I foolishly listened to the orderly and struck down into the ravine, trusting to reach the shelter of an intervening spur without being seen. We had not gone 50 yards, however, before the wary brutes spotted us, and though we lay like logs for half an hour and the rams at length seemed satisfied and appeared to have gone off behind a projecting rock feeding quietly, when we at last reached the spot after some severe climbing, they had vanished completely, and after a fruitless search and a long scramble down some rather dangerous precipices we had to give them up and return to camp.

I had arranged to move camp several miles further up the main nullah on the 28th, and accordingly started at 4 A.M. well ahead of the coolies and servants in the hope of seeing something on the way. After we had gone about two miles, just as it was getting light and while I was still riding my pony quietly up the steep narrow goat track dignified by the name of a road in those parts, a low whistle from my orderly behind caused me to slip off my pony's back with the utmost precipitation, and I then learnt that the orderly had caught a glimpse of several burrel feeding on a bushy slope about 400 yards above the road. How we had escaped being seen by them was a mystery. The pony was quickly dragged out of sight below the road, and the orderly and I after going ahead a little to get the wind right struck up the slope for a quarter of a mile and then doubled back towards the sheep. There being no rocks or broken ground anywhere near, from behind which I could fire, we had to trust to the shelter of the bushes and stalk right into the middle of them. At length I scaught sight of the head of a good ram showing above a bush 40 yards in front of me and the next moment he was rolling down the slope with a broken back. At the same time five other sheep, including two rams, jumped up like rabbits in various places above and in front of me. The first shot at the nearest ram missed, but the second caught him in the neck and knocked him over dead. I then fired a snap shot at the other ram as he vanished over a low bank and could have sworn that he rolled over too, but on going to the spot could find no sign of him and presently saw him topping a ridge above and apparently going sound. A parting salute failed to reach him and I then went down to the first ram and finished him off with a shot between the shoulders from behind. His horn only measured 21 inches, but were very massive, perfect, and symmetrical. The second ram only taped 18½ inches and I should have let him go if I had had any opportunity of gauging his size properly beforehand.

With two beasts to be skinned and cut up I decided to postpone moving camp till next day and sent back word accordingly. The two animals when brought into camp weighed 130 and 118 lbs., respectively.

Camp was duly shifted next day, but we saw only ewes on the way. It was bitterly cold at night, the tent being pitched on a wind-swept ridge nearly 15,000 ft. above sea-level.

On the 30th I had a hard day's work trying to get near a flock of 25 burrel containing several shootable rams in a wide corrie on the other side of the river, but got nothing better than a severe headache and dizziness from the high elevation we reached.

The 30th was my last day out, as I had to start on my return journey on 1st June. We were off at dawn and went up a very likely looking nullah just opposite camp. We had only gone a short way when we discovered about 20 burrel feeding slowly down the steep slopes to our right about half a mile ahead. There were four big rams amongst them and one of these was by far the finest I have hitherto seen, his splendid horns curving right back past his shoulders. After examining him carefully for a long time with a powerful telescope and comparing him with two good rams already shot, I put his horns down at not less than 27 inches. We lay quietly behind a rock for two hours waiting for the flock to feed over a low ridge in front. At length the coast seemed clear except for three ewes away on our right which we managed to dodge, and we made for the ridge as hard as we could go. I was already picturing myself laying the tape over those 27 (or even perhaps 30!) inch horns, when to our horror we discovered that the big ram had not crossed the ridge after all, but had lain down alone on a slab of rock just below it on our side. However, we were still 500 yards off and providentially he had not seen us. We lay still for another hour and a half not knowing exactly what to do, and at last I decided to see whether I could not get within range by going to the upper end of the low bank behind which we were sheltering and then warming myself down through the bushes. I managed to gain 150 yards by going as the serpent does but could get no further as the ground then became more open and the ram's vigilance never relaxed. I was weighing the chances of a shot, when suddenly I felt the wind at my back. "Now or never" I thought, for the ram would have been off in another few seconds. Using the 200 yards' sight and taking a full bead I let drive with perfect steadiness, but alas! I had underrated the powers of my trusty Mannlicher in that thin atmosphere and my bullet merely grazed the ram's back knocking out a fistful of hair, and splintered the rock beyond. An inch lower and it would have cut his spine in two! He was off over the ridge in a moment without giving me another chance and two running shots at smaller rams that broke back along the bottom of the nullah also missed. There was nothing more to be done and we crawled slowly and sorrowfully back to camp. Three weeks later I was back in civilisation once more, but I still dream of those glorious horns and the very first opportunity that comes will certainly see me back in that nullah again!

THE GAME PROTECTION BILL.

AN INDIAN PLANTER'S VIEWS.

THE following is a petition recently addressed to the Collector of the Nilgiris by an Indian planter and cultivator at Ootacamund:—

With reference to the G. O. No. 597, of 8th June 1904, regarding Game and Fish Preservation Bill and in accordance with the paragraph "Forest No. 18 of page 15" therein, I beg to lay the following before you for such consideration as you may deem fit to bestow upon it. I am a planter as well as a cultivator on a small scale and cannot think that my views (based as they are on no inconsiderable personal experience) will go unconsidered and unsupported. The matter is one of vital issues to planters like myself with small means and with practically no influence, and hence, this representation which, for that reason, I have no doubt, will be given the consideration it merits, so far as the Nilgiri District is concerned.

That there is any wanton destruction of birds of plumage on these hills, those who know the District will not readily admit, and that any legislation in this respect for the preservation of these birds wi l be resisted by sensible people can hardly be supposed. They do no injury to crops or plants, and probably, there is advantage to be gained in their preservation.

That a General Game Law for the whole of India is necessary or not, I am not in a position nor is it needful for me to discuss here, I only pray that whether a General Law or particular local laws are adopted, they may be so framed as not to bear harshly on the poor cultivator or planter. The Government of India have very justly enunciated the principle that "the protection of the cultivator's crops is a consideration to which all others must give way." On these hills that cultivators like myself often suffer seriously in the damage done to their crops, plants, etc., by the ravages of wild animals, such as pigs, porcupine and sambur is a matter of common experience. These animals (especially the first two) are an enemy to potato cultivation, and the injury done by porcupine to tea plants and plantain trees is considerable. Although potato cultivation is being taken up here in increasing proportions, it will be seen that such cultivation is mostly confined within the Municipal limits, the reason being that in the outlying places, which are open to the ravages of wild animals, there is want of protection to the cultivator. In these circumstances, if the cultivator expects that he should not be prohibited from shooting or destroying the animals, so long as he confines himself within the radius, say, of a mile from his own land or plantation, it is what equity requires and what the Legislature ought to grant, without the hindrance of any fee or of taking out any special licenses.

Further, the cultivator's cattle are occasionally attacked by tigers, panthers, hyænas, or wild dogs, and if in such an emergency, he is to go in quest of a license-holder, his position becomes a most irksome one, and it will not be too much to ask, therefore, that he should be given a free hand in such a contingency to shoot or kill the wild beast.

It would be a pity if Government were to insist on planters or cultivators, such as I have mentioned, to take out licenses and to be made amenable to the Game Laws, even though the question, as it affects them, be one of private lands and the protection of private interests. It would be a heavy demand on their purse, which is none too heavy, they being mainly dependent on cultivation for their livelihood. If, however, Government thinks it neither justifiable nor expedient to exclude the poor cultivator from the operation of any general laws on the subject, it may, at least fix the fees to be paid by him according to his limited means. In this connection, I may perhaps be permitted to observe that any concession granted to natives will not be misplaced. Their temperaments are proverbially mild, and wanton cruelty to animal life is hardly among their vices. [This is quite a new idea to us, our experience going to prove that fiendish cruelty to animals is a leading trait.—ED., I. F.] They are either agriculturists or cultivators, and on these hills, there are no native tribes who net, snare or shoot animals for the purposes of sale, so that there is hardly any ground for the belief that natives destroy game. On the other hand, instances are not wanting, if I may say so, of some European residents going out three or four times a week throughout the season with ten to fifty dogs and ten to fifty men beating every scrub or shola and slaughtering game without hesitancy. These sportsmen, I hope may not be considered rash in saying, are primarily responsible for the destruction of Game on these hills, but, if any difficulty arises they shift the blame on to the poor native cultivator or to men occupying a subordinate position, such as clerks, who take out licenses and go out shooting occasionally in the open season, with no pretensions to beaters or dogs, bagging, perhaps, a jungle sheep or fowl, in order to relieve the dull monotony of their routine desk life.

Such are my views on the subject, and I humbly pray that your usual sympathy with, and solicitude for, the interests of the poor will incline you to take a favourable view of this representation, and to suggest to Government such modifications of the Regulations as will not bear hardly on small cultivators or planters like myself, and in this connection, I beg, with your permission, to subjoin a scale of license fees, which in my humble opinion, will meet all requirements :—

Class.	Small game. Rs.	Large game. Rs.	Fishing. Rs.
For sportsmen, who visit India for the purpose of sport (shooting) and European residents who have no official duties, and constantly go out shooting.	20	20	20
Government and Commercial Officers, including the Military.	10	10	10
Poor class European, Eurasian or native official (clerks) including Non-commissioned Officer or Soldier.	5	5	5
Land owners and cultivators, who depend upon cultivation for their livelihood.	2½	2½	2½

Finally, Sir, I humbly ask you to remember that in a matter of legislating for all classes what will suit the rich may be quite inconvenient or hurtful to the poor, and the latter must look up to Government for special treatment.

PATIALA STATE.

GAME PROTECTION NOTIFICATION.

THESE rules apply to all Residents, State subjects, and officials of Patiala State and to all Visitors.

A.—FISHING.

2. All fishing rights in the Giri and Asni Rivers have been made over to the Giri Fishing Association.

B.—SHOOTING.

No person may shoot in Patiala Territory, unless he is in possession of either (1) A gun license, or (2) A game license.

3. Gun license shall be granted to respectable zamindars for protection of their crops under the rules made by the Council of Regency and shall not entitle the licensees to kill any kind of game, provided that nothing in this section shall prevent the owner of a field from doing all that is absolutely necessary to protect the crop thereon.

4. Game license shall be granted to Residents, State subjects and officials by the Superintendent of Shikar, Patiala State, on payment of a fee of Rs. 20 for the current season; or Rs. 5 for a period lasting from one to five days. Persons holding game licenses shall be entitled to shoot all kinds of small game (but not leopard, panther, lynx, bear, antelope, and deer) in any part of the Patiala State, except the Darbar preserves mentioned in Section 7.

Visitors desiring to purchase game licenses, should apply to the Political Agent, Phulkian State and Bhawalpore.

5. Deer of all kinds, leopard, panther, lynx, and bear may not be shot without special permission in writing to be obtained on application to the Political Agent, Phulkian States and Bhawalpore. Such special permission will only be given to applicants who have already been granted game licenses under Section 4.

6. A close season shall be observed throughout the Patiala State as detailed below.

FISHING IN BALUCHISTAN.

BEFORE coming to Baluchistan I made a short pilgrimage to Tangrote on the 22nd July chiefly to see the place and also on the offchance of a break in the rains having allowed the water to clear. But I found the Jhelum much discoloured and the Poonch of the consistency and appearance of strong cocoa without any milk in it. It may, however, interest some of your readers to know how to get to Tangrote and what arrangements are necessary.

One can either rail to Jhelum which is 22¾ miles from Tangrote bungalow or else rail to Dina which is about 16 miles. Both are stations on the North-Western Railway. I chose the latter route and having previously wired to the station master, who is a most obliging baboo, to ask the chowdry to arrange for transport I found coolies and riding ponies ready on my arrival.

The road from Dina as far as Shaikhupur is unmetalled, but pretty fair, and the distance four miles. Here there is a civil rest house on the right bank of the Jhelum, containing furniture, but no crockery or khansamah. From Shaikhupur to Tangrote is 12 miles along a rough track. At Tangrote is a bungalow containing four large rooms with bath-rooms attached and furnished. There is also a khansamah who in addition to food will provide soda water if one day's previous notice be given him. He has however, no license to sell beer or spirits. The nirrick rate for coolies from Dina to Tangrote is eight annas and for riding ponies twelve annas.

Now-adays it is almost unnecessary to add that substantial bakshcesh is expected, nay even demanded in addition. The customary rate for a boat to fish from is I believe one rupee for diem. A shikari claims eight annas a day and his under strapper who catches small fish four annas daily. A fishing license in accordance with the Kashmir fishery regulations is necessary and can be obtained from the Post Master, Tangrote.

Formerly I understood that the ordinary five rupee license for Kashmir entitled the holder to fish at Tangrote, but I believe this place has since been excepted and a special license costing ten rupees for a period of ten days or twenty rupees for the season must now be taken out. There is no telegraph, and a post only every other day. The bungalow is on the right bank of the Jhelum immediately opposite the junction of the Jhelum and Poonch. By using the bungalow as head quarters one cannot go very far afield. So any one going to Tangrote for any length of time would be well advised to take tents. The charge for a room in the bungalow is one rupee daily.

The return journey is most comfortably performed by boat. A boat with a crew of three and capable of holding two passengers and a considerable amount of kit will take one down to Jhelum for six rupees and to Shaikhupur for three rupees. Larger boats at higher prices are obtainable. From Shaikhupur the remainder of the journey to Dina must be done by coolies and ponies. I would not advise anyone to attempt the upward journey by boat as the current is very strong and the rate of progress consequently painfully slow.

The outlook at Tangrote being as I had expected at this time of year hopeless, I railed down to BabarKachh, a station half way between Sibi and Harnai on the Quetta line. Its height above mean sea level is 817 feet and the heat at this time of year very severe. At the station there is a furnished waiting room consisting of one room and bathroom, but no supplies of any sort are available, everything having to be obtained from Sibi. The river is the Beji, a small shallow stream in a wide stony bed, which every hundred yards or so forms good pools well stocked with fish. Owing to the heat I only fished the three pools nearest to the station. There are about half a dozen varieties of fish exclusive of minnows, but I do not think any of them run much over fifteen pounds in weight. I regret to say that I can only assign names to three varieties, namely, Mahseer, fresh water sharks and eels. Higher up the river I believe that Mahseer only will be met with, leaving small fish, such as lesser barils out of the question. At any rate in April one year two of us fished the river many miles above Babar Kacht at a place called Pazzha and in seven days' fishing killed upwards of a hundred fish up to 13lbs. in weight, all of which were Mahseer, and never touched a fish of any other kind.

I found the river in fair order, but not quite clear, so after giving both fly and spinners a trial, I used nothing but a fair sized single hook with two split shot pellets eight inches above it on which I placed hooked through the lip small fish either alive or dead as I happened to have them.

A twelve-foot split cane rod by Hardy and a silex reel with a hundred yards of the lightest dressed silk line and single medium gut completed my preparations. I think there is rather a tendency to use both reel lines and gut of unnecessary stoutness. Provided both are sound I consider that the finer they are used within reasonable limits the better. I don't think that even a powerful salmon rod can pull more than about 7lbs. on a dynamometer when tested to its utmost and long before that point is reached the reel will have revolved and consequently eased the strain. In my five days' fishing at Babar Kachh I used only one collar of medium salmon gut and it is still sound. Of course I always test all gut each day before fishing and when I have time make collars, etc., myself.

The following is the result of my five days at Babar Kachh. I only fished for a comparatively short time, both morning and evening owing to the extreme heat. A native told me that I could ensure better results and less discomfort if I went out after nightfall with a lantern, etc., etc. I acknowledged his truthfulness praised his artfulness and deplored his moral declension.

But it requires a strong mixture of civilisation and vested interests to generate in the savage mind an appreciation of the quality of such offence.

Total 51 fish weighing 196lbs.

The above of course is nothing as fish and fishing go and is only intended to shew that even in July in certain parts of Northern India fishing may be had. I also lost a certain number. One fish in particular took out about 45 yards of line one rush and broke my shood round a rock. This was my only breakage.

In some of the larger and deeper pools there are crocodiles but of no great size. I have never heard of one having been shot.

The heat was a trifle too much for real enjoyment. The pleasantest months for fishing are March and October during which one can camp out with comfort and be certain of good sport.

When the late Duke of Newcastle was Lord Lincoln, he was associated for some years with Tom Parr. At the time Gaspard, who belonged to the astute Tom, ran a dead-heat for the Cesarewitch, his lordship stood to win £70,000 upon Parr's horse.

Upon the occasion of Lord Lincoln becoming Duke of Newcastle, he gave a plate to be run for at Newark, and, as the Newark people remarked, "He sent old Tom Parr down to win it." In fact, his kindnesses to the owner of Saucebox and Fisherman could scarcely be enumerated.

Gratitude was not a strong feature in Tom's character, and he led the Duke to believe that he had a flyer in the jady Clarice, for whom his Grace gave nearly 3,000 guineas. She did not earn as many pence. But for that unfortunate purchase, the Duke of Hamilton's Wild Agnes would have run for, and undoubtedly won, the City and Suburban, as Parr's statement that Clarice was decidedly superior was undoubtedly erroneous. In this manner the deal cost the noble confederates upwards of £30,000.

BANGALORE RACES, THIRD EXTRA DAY.

Saturday, 27th August 1904.

ALTHOUGH at first it seemed as though the Bangalore third extra meeting would be something of a fizzle, substitution races were successful in producing a fair afternoon's sport. Except in the second race actual favourites did not win, and the noticeable points of the racing were not numerous. Musketeer won his third successive race at these meetings and fully endorsed the remarks which have already been made in these notes concerning him, for although run to a length by Massachussetts he was only in receipt of a pound instead of 10lbs. as was the case last Saturday, had a furlong further to travel, and was made so much use of that he led throughout the nine furlongs, and came into the straight nearly six lengths ahead. He is real good second class. The finish between Dandenong, Swiveller and Rose II was a fine one. Results of the racing :—

THE LAL BAGH PLATE.—Rs. 150, of which the second horse will receive Rs 25. For horses that have started and not won at the first and second extra meetings. Weights—Handicap ½ mile.

Major A. C. Hamilton's b aus g Scissorman, 8st. 12lbs. ... ... Lansdowne 1
H. H. the Sultan of Johore's b aus g Carolan, 9st. 8lbs. ... ... Koops 2
The Hon. Mr. A. A. Apcar's b aus g Spec, 9st. 4lbs. ... ... Penton 3
Major F. C. Logan-Home's ch aus g Kingfisher, 9st. 9lbs. ... ... Capt. Randall 0

BETTING : 6 to 4 agst. Carolan, 2 to 1 Spec, 4 to 1 Scissorman, and 5 to 1 Kingfisher.

Scissorman led throughout and won easily by two and-a half lengths ; a length between second and third. Time—52⅘secs.

THE KOLAR PLATE.—Rs. 150, of which the second pony will receive Rs. 25. For ponies 3 furlongs.

Major Gunn's br aus g Dandenong, 11st. 2lbs. ... ... Capt. Randall 1
Lieut.-Col. J. Desaraj Urs' br aus g Swiveller, 12st. 11b. ... ... Lansdowne 2
Capt. E. J. R. Peel's b aus m Rose II, 10st. 10½lbs. ... ... Owner 3
Major N. M. Smyth's b e m Laurier Rose, 11st. 11b. ... ... Col. Armstrong 0
Mr. R. Anketell-Jones' ch aus g Tight Rope, 10st. 7lbs. ... ... Major Dougall 0

BETTING : Evens Dandenong, 2 to 1 agst. Rose II, 3 to 1 each Laurier Rose and Tight Rope, and 4 to 1 Swiveler.

Tight Rope got the worst of a fair start, the remainder of the field racing together almost throughout. A short head only divided Dandenong from Swiveller, with Rose II the same distance behind the latter. Time—40½secs.

A MATCH.—Rs. 50. ¾ miles S. C.

Major Logan Heme's ch aus m Mary Jane, 11st. 7lbs. ... ... Capt. Randall 1
Mr. S. W. Webster's br aus m Flight, 11st. 7lbs. ... ... Owner 2

BETTING : Evens.

Mary Jane led by four lengths until the six furlong post, where Flight joined issue and they were neck and neck at the last jump. The chestnut, however, seemed to have most left in her and going away won easily by two lengths. No time taken.

THE ULSUR PLATE.—Rs. 150, of which the second horse will receive Rs. 25. For horses. Weights—Handicap. 9 furlongs.

Mr. D. Devaraj Urs' br aus g Musketeer, 9st. 12lbs. ... ... Lansdowne 1
H. H. The Sultan of Johore's b aus g Massachusetts, 9st. 13lbs.... ... Koops 2
The Hon. Mr. A. A. Apcar's b e g Simon, 9st. 7lbs .. ... Penton 3
Lieut.-Col. Armstrong's b aus g Knight Templar, 8st. 8½lbs. ... ... Owner 0

BETTING : 6 to 4 on Massachusetts, evens Musketeer, and 4 to 1 each Simon and Knight Templar.

Musketeer was at once away, and streaked along as though he had only half a mile to travel. He looked like spread-eagling his field and coming in alone, but tired slightly coming up the hill which enable Massachusetts to make up a lot of ground. Nevertheless Musketeer won by a length with perhaps a bit in hand; two lengths between second and third. Time—2mins. 5⅖secs.

THE PONY SCURRY.—Rs. 150, of which the second pony will receive Rs. 25. For Arab ponies. Weights—Handicap. 3½ furlongs.

Lieut.-Col. J. Desaraj Urs' b a h Delight, 10st. 2lbs. ... ... Lansdown 1
Mr. S. W. Webster's b aus h Derision, 11st. 7lbs. ... ... Major Smyth 2
Mr. Jacob Sait's g a h Jacob, 7st. 11lbs. ... Meah Jan 3
Capt. E. J. R. Peel's b a h Charlie II, 9st. 7lbs. ... ... Capt. Randall 0
Mr. Aga Mahomed Jaffer's b a h Far East, 8st. 7lbs. ... ... Sheriff 0

BETTING : Evens Charlie II, 2 to 1 each agst. Derision and Delight, and 8 to 1 each Far East and Jacob.

Practically a match between Delight and Derision the pair racing together in front the whole way. Delight won by the half length lead he had obtained at the start. Jacob was one and-a-half lengths behind Derision. Time—51⅖secs.

THE CHARGER RACE.—Rs. 150, of which the second horse will receive Rs. 25. For bonâ fide chargers. Weights—Catch weights over 12st. 2 miles.

Mr. Anketell-Jones' ch aus g Grand Duke, 11st. ... ...Major Dougall 1
Capt. W. E. Watson's br aus g Ramilles, 11st. ... ... Mr. Knight 2
Mr. L. H. Queripel's b aus g Quicksilver, 11st. ... ... Owner 3
Mr. Compton's br aus g Tours, 11st. ... Mr. Webster 0

BETTING : 2 to 1 on Grand Duke, 2 to 1 each agst. Tours and Ramilles, and 4 to 1 Quicksilver.

Quicksilver made running with the favourite second till three-quarters of a mile from home, when the latter went by and won easily by four lengths ; three lengths between second and third. Time—4mins. 9⅕secs.

CALCUTTA COURSE CHAT.

LAST Wednesday being a sort of off morning, I turned my attention to a look over the amateur camp.

Mr. Cowper on Hailstorm did the jump course, Mr. Evers on Whisper accompanying him, and later Mr. Pugh on March, Shelldrake on Cheer Up, Orphan Boy (Toe), Flamingo (Mr. Evers) and Actress went round the course, taking all the jumps well if I except Cheer Up who came down at the last obstacle.

I also noticed Hard on Mr. Mackellar's Yule Tide, and a native on Good Chap, doing once round, lepping clean.

Thursday was clear enough, with a blue sky overhead, but the going was very soft, and consequently the course was not open. Mr. Bert Allen and Griffin had their lot on the move early, and Howie gave a good full course to Young Rake, who jumped well and showed good pace too. This stable deserves a smile from that fickle jade Miss Fortune, as they have come a long way aracing and most probably the ponies will be fitter by the next time they face the starting machine or the flag. Coal Queen, who is as pretty as a picture, looks fitter each time I see her, and when at the top of her form, will be giving her connection a turn. Then there is Pat C., who had just put in a fast bit across the open with Regan in the saddle, and Natalina who I hope will touch her true form before our little meetings close. I noticed Pylara with this string, Mr. Harold Smith evidently having changed the horse's quarters.

Stepma (native) spurted a bit, followed by Tadmore (Toe) and Trollop (native) who went fast ; the latter labouring hard to keep up.

Toe later had Clynder out for a smart canter, whilst Hard put Fusilier through his morning's work.

O'Neill came round on Footlight keeping more to the road footpath than coming out on the course. It will repay punters to keep their eyes on this nag.

Bell Brand (Howie) and the pony Norman, ridden by Hard, essayed a couple of flights of the horse hurdles. The first flight they cleared like a bird, but Bell Brand rapped the second hard enough to bring it down Howie's charge, who jumped very big in the first instance, appeared to take off too far, and so floored the second hurdle.

Saturday being fine, the track was opened with the result that a good hour's work was put in ; but the usual gathering of the sporting fraternity hied them to the new stand where pony measurement was on, and it was also on the tapis that the pony Moonlight was to be in evidence, to go under the standard, and a professional opinion was to be taken as to nationality, a well known shipper having expressed himself pretty clearly on the subject.

Most of Mr. Bert Allen's ponies were at fast work, Regan and Howie doing all the riding. Coal Queen moved in her usual taking style across the open, followed by Pat C., Stellanarain, Geebung, and later Mr. Galstaun on Not Yet, went a smart, 5 furlongs, with Howie on Natalina, on the course proper making way for Blue Bell (Mr. Harold Smith) and Daffodil with Shelldrake in the saddle, the former coming away from the culvert, and picking up the latter put four flights of the horse hurdles behind them in a business-like manner, the grey to the fore, until pulling up near the new stand.

Mr. Deakin came along on Golden Tip from the 5-furlong post, followed by another from Wishart's. Mr. Dutton's pony just now is in real big buckle, and I look for his going one better than the last effort when next under sailing orders.

Bloss put in a good 6-furlong on the Arab steed Pekin with no dallying by the way.

That attractive mare, Footlight, was exercised by O'Neill, and is looked upon as a most likely packet for investment when she strips for the fray.

Daphne (Shelldrake) and Mr. Harold Smith on Shylock, put in a good bit on the pony hurdles course in a workman-like manner. These two knights of the pigskin, afford a good object lesson in hurdle jumping, being past masters in the art.

Mr. Cowper's First Guide (native) in company with another were at it up the straight from away past the bend.

Toe worried that hair trunk, Maccedon, right round the course. Mr. Pugh on March went a good gallop in company with Mr. Kenneth Hamilton's Pierette, a native up, and as we have had a taste of the latter's quality, no reminding is required when putting down the pieces the next time of asking.

Pubna, after being put through his facings at the gate, came away from the 6 furlongs with Regan as pilot. Up to the present I have recognized nothing particular about this horse's pace, and when he has run, he has finished by himself—down the course.

Flamingo (Mr. Evers) and Actress (native) went a good jumping course, Mr. Pugh's grey operating in her well-known style.

Mr. Wilmot was out on Odin, and a well-known rider remarked as they went past "this horse will be worth at least a shop investment when next out with the colours up."

Walker had out Reveille, galloping down the straight, right from the opening by Mr. Dudley's pitch Beazley had out the disappointing Parole, and later Cerise. When are these nags going to show us their form, or have they none to show?

Tuesday was quite one of the best mornings we have had on the course this season.

Mr. Bert Allen's Young Rake and Coal Queen put in a useful course, which was followed by Daphne (Native), Perfect (Mr. Deakin), and Shylock (Shelldrake). They came along a brisk rattle from the five furlongs, the deal being Mr. Deakin's way.

Toe on Flash, and a native jockey on Fusilier, came the pace five furlongs, honours resting with the first-named.

A very smart six furlongs was then put in by Mr. Holmes on Gauntlet, Bloss on Profit, and O'Neill on another. They went a spanking course, and so full of running was Profit that Bloss did not get him eased up till well on a fresh journey. What's going to stop this horse showing a clean pair of heels to his field, in his next contract I don't know, unless it's Bell Brand.

Mr. Galstaun on Not Yet, took on Norman and Mademoiselle, ridden by natives, for five furlongs and had none too much the best of the argument, if indeed any.

Sweet Talk, Golden Tip, Whiff, had their own little scurry, all to themselves, finishing up by Kugelman's tree. Sweet Talk has not come under observation our way this season, but last year's running is not altogether forgotten.

Mr. Evers is giving considerable attention at present to Actress, and put in a very taking school, in company with Flamingo are part of Saturday's work, going the full course and finishing strong.

Stepma from Mr. Dudley's string, came the pace up the straight followed by old Trollop—a light of other days.

Kittylea (Native) and Shelldrake on Daffodil, in the early morning, put up a quick six furlongs. Old Kitty going like the good old thing she is.

Mr. Holmes on Irish—well met—took all the change out of Pekin (Bloss) and Winklet (O'Neill) as coming away from the six furlongs, he had the airing to himself, the Arab being quite down the course as the leaders were easing off, nor was Winklet very much in evidence either.

Walker on Second Thought, did a dash past with Reinzette (native), both finishing together, and Mr. Rees on Oom Paul, had the measure of the grey Quicksilver with a native boy up. Our old friend, the defunct ex-President, seems to be getting into his stride, and don't forget he took Springlock's number down last year at a remunerative price. Bell Brand (Howie), Hello and Thundercloud (natives) put up the gallop of the morning, the former putting the five furlongs behind him in 1min. 8secs., in no uncertain manner, cutting his companions at will.

Regan did all he could with that slow coach Pubna, and Tadmore moved by.

Another fearful wallopping exhibition was put in by the native jockey on Florence, who came away from the five furlongs, and as far as I could see, the horse was under the whip all the way up the straight, finishing for all he was worth. It is a pity this boy isn't introduced a bit to the whip he so lavishly applies.

I noticed Mr. Mathieson observing Parole moving along in improving style under the guidance of Beazley with McCallum on Bob in attandance.

Yule Tide (Mr. Cowper), First Guide (native), followed by Mr. Evers on Good Chap, came along a fast sprint, and Mr. Holmes on Jacinth with two others, also footed it to quick time.

Beau Brummel (Bloss) did a roaring bit of jumping, and the old thief looked none too well. The jumping was right enough, but the bellows to mend tune could have been heard in the shop over the way.

Miss Beryl was exercised by O'Neill and Moss Rose by a native, with Cerese (Beazley) coming home fairly fast.

LEWES SUMMER.

OF more interest than the doings of the moment were the entries for the Autumn Handicaps, which provided a theme for earnest discussion amongst the patrons of the Lewes Meeting on the 6th instant. Both numerically speaking and in point of quality the prospects of the Cesarewitch and Cambridgeshire are brilliant in the extreme, for there is hardly a public performer with any pretensions to class who does not hold a liability in one or the other, and the handicappers will have their work cut out to arrive at an equitable adjustment of the imposts A spanking breeze swept the Southdowns, and counteracted the fierce heat of the solar rays, so that the big crowd who assembled to assist at the proceedings had a most enjoyable experience. There was no lack of runners and, thanks to the heavy downpour the evening before the going was in capital order

Won by a neck ; a length separated the second and third. Indian Corn was fourth and Engineer last. Time, by Benson's chronograph, 59⅘secs.

The old proverb that union is strength is forcibly illustrated by the success of the Sussex fortnight, the three meetings of which it is composed deriving substantial benefit from each other's propinquity. This is a strong argument in favour of the centralisation of sport, and a large section of racegoers still live in hopes of the principle being more widely applied—notably up North. There can be no manner of doubt that if Stockton, York, and Doncaster followed one another in regular succession, constituting a Yorkshire circuit unbroken by minor fixtures in the neighbourhood of London, each of the gatherings would profit considerably by the change, as would the local holiday resorts, whilst patrons of the Turf would be spared much unnecessary and expensive travelling. The conditions for the concluding stage of the Lewes Meeting were most unfavourable, and the upshot was a diminished attendance and general discomfort. The wind howled and whistled through the crevices of the stands as though the air were alive with sirens ; a soaking seafret enveloped the downs at frequent intervals, and the sport was somewhat tame.

THE LEWES HANDICAP of 437sovs. One mile and a half.

KEMPTON PARK.

Good looking and superbly-bred though he be, John o' Gaunt must surely have been born under an unlucky star, and Sir John Thursby is deserving of sympathy in the endless list or misfortunes th t have dogged the career of his ill-fated colt. Owing to an accident at exercise on Wednesday morning the son of Isinglass had to decline the contest for the principal item of yesterday's card, and it is worthy of note that during the past four weeks alone unforeseen circumstances have compelled him to forfeit his engagements in the Lingfield Park Plate and the St. George's Stakes at Liverpool, in addition to the event under notice. The aggregate value of these three stakes exceeds 5,000 sovs., and each seemed entirely at the mercy of the Doveridge colt, whose next appearance will be in the St. Leger. His defection robbed the City of London Breeder's Foal Plate of much of its interest, and the general supposition that his absence left the issue in the safe-keeping of Grey Plume did not find confirmation in fact. The son of Grey Leg and Gauntlet looked exceedingly well, and he was backed against the field at evens, but speed is his forte, and he began to hold out signals of distress after a mile had been traversed. He stuck tenaciously to his work when Lancashire ranged alongside and fought out his race with the utmost resolution ; but the American showed the better stamina, and, wearing him down, won by half a length.

Won by half a length ; three-quarters of a length divided the second and third. Pace Egger colt was fourth, Fairy Martin fifth and Queen Beauty last. Time, by Benson's chronograph, 2mins. 11⅘secs.

The general exodus to moor, mountain, and seaside has left London with but a moiety of its normal population for the time being and most of those who remain are bound to the posts by the calls of duty. This being so, even the Turf is not exempt from the stagnation which prevails in all places of public entertainment, and the company that assembled at Kempton Park to-day, if small by comparison with some of the earlier and later fixtures at his venue, exceeded expectations. The air was close and muggy, but some capital sport was provided, the feature of which was Maher's feat of riding four winners.

The tit-bit of the first day's card is always the International Breeders' Foal Stakes, which brought out a party of average looks and nice quality. The result was not in accordance with the calculations of students of form, but it was very gratifying to see the colours of such a staunch patron of the Turf as Sir R. Waldie Griffith successful in a weight-for-age race of some importance. The St. Ia colt was in receipt of 19lbs. from Comedian, who was confronted with a very formidable task. Mr. King's colt ran his race out with unflinching gameness, and was very far from disgraced. Maher scored his third success of the afternoon on the St. Ia colt, and Madden made his first appearance in the saddle since his Hurst Park accident and steered Ogbourne Pet. It was on this course that Revenue made his début, and his own brother Ritchie, whom S. Darling had purchased for 100 guineas at the July Sales, carried silk in public for the first time in this event, but he was very backward and finished last.

CRICKET.

MIDDLESEX vs. GLOUCESTERSHIRE.—Played at Bristol on 4th, 5th, and 6th August. Gloucestershire won by 69 runs. Heavy rain fell at Bristol on the night before this match began and although the wicket was not very difficult before lunch, afterwards, under the influence of a powerful sun, it became very greatly in favour of the bowlers. Before lunch Gloucestershire hardly made the best use of their opportunities, but they scored 108 for three. Townsend and Sewell put on 70 for the third wicket. When the game was resumed Jessop was allowed to escape, the ball dropping between two fieldsmen who each left the catch to the other, but he only made 7 runs, and the rest of the team failed so badly that the last seven wickets could only account for 19 runs. Hearne was so well suited by the wicket after lunch that he took five wickets in four overs and two balls for 10 runs At one time five Gloucestershire wickets fell for one run. The Middlesex batsmen were as hopelessly at sea as the home team, and when a storm stopped play for a time four of them were out for 17. Afterwards they doubled the score without loss before a heavy thunderstorm at half-past four put an end to play for the day. On the next morning Huggins and Dennett soon disposed of the remaining six wickets, and Gloucestershire had a lead of 66 when they began their second innings. Jessop and Wrathall, who went in first, set about their work in such a determined way that they made 20 runs in the first two overs, and when Jessop was dismissed he had made 27 out of 34. Townsend and Brown added 38 for the fourth wicket, but Hearne and Trott dismissed the last five men for 7 runs. Townsend played an invaluable defensive innings which lasted for an hour and-a-half. Middlesex had to make 195 to win, and went in two hours and five minutes before the time for drawing stumps. With the idea that the pitch might be considerably better on the next morning, they contented themselves with keeping up their wickets and at the end of the day their score was 85 for three. If the fielding of the Gloucestershire men had not been exceedingly bad Middlesex might have been nearly all dismissed, but Warner, who made 47 out of the 85 runs, was missed five or six times, and might have been run out two or three times Beldam served his side admirably by keeping up an end for an hour and forty minutes for 14 not out. But despite his stubborn resistance on the Friday and a further fine effort on the next morning, the Gloucestershire bowlers had the upper hand and their county gained a brilliant victory.

SUSSEX vs. HAMPSHIRE.—Played at Brighton on 4th, 5th, and 6th August. Sussex won by an innings and 81 runs.

Hampshire had to take the field in this match without E. M. Sprot and Hesketh-Prichard, while Sussex was again without Ranjitsinhji, who preferred to play in country house cricket. On the first day the light was so bad at about a quarter past four that an adjournment was made, and before the game could be resumed rain fell so heavily that there was no more cricket. Hampshire gave a most disappointing display of batting on a splendid wicket, but Bowell played a brilliant innings, making 65 out of 76 in an hour. Llewellyn, Stone, and Steele also made useful scores. Sussex made 37 without loss before play ceased for the day. On the next morning it was found that the rain had not spoiled the wicket, which played very easily, and Fry and Vine found no difficulty whatever in the bowling. At lunch time, when the total was 255 they were still together, and it was not until the partnership had produced 287 in three hours and-a-quarter that Vine was dismissed. Fry continued to play a great game until, for the second time this season, he brought his score to more than 200. He was batting for four hours and three-quarters, and his chief hits were twenty two 4's. The other men who did well were Relf, Smith, Brann, and Leach, the latter being not out 61 when stumps were drawn with the total at 508 for nine wickets. Major Poore went on to bowl when Smith and Leach were together, and began his first over with four wides. On Saturday morning the innings was declared closed, and Hampshire had to make 313 to save the innings defeat.

SOMERSETSHIRE vs. WORCESTERSHIRE.—Played at Taunton on 8th, 9th, and 10th August. Worcestershire won by five wickets. The pace with which Wilson's bowling came off the pitch on the first day of this match caused the Somersetshire batsmen to give several chances to the slips, who misjudged them badly. Lewis who made the highest score for his side, was especially fortunate in escaping. Robson played a most attractive game, making his 87 in an hour and twenty minutes, and Lee played very well indeed. Worcestershire went in for fifty minutes at the end of the day, and scored 60 runs without loss; Caldwell was not out 21, and Bowley not out 35. A remarkable innings by H. K. Foster, who scored 65 runs in 28 minutes by the most brilliant hitting, was the chief feature of Tuesday's cricket, but G. N. Foster also played an exceedingly fine game. When the day's play ended Somerset had made 114 in their second innings for the loss of five wickets and were 70 runs on. Yesterday they could only give Worcestershire the task of making 155 to win, and the visitors had not much difficulty in accomplishing this.

THE CANTERBURY WEEK.

SURREY vs. KENT.—Played on the St Lawrence Ground on 4th 5th, and 6th August. Kent won by six wickets. When Surrey won the toss in this match there seemed reason to suppose that they would run up a fine score, for the wicket looked perfect, as indeed it proved to be. But things went badly for them, and they lost Hayward, Raphael, Hayes, and Abel for 73 At lunch time five wickets were down for 112, and the first ball after the game was resumed was fatal, so that the outlook was about as hopeless as it could well be. At this stage of the game Lees joined J. N. Crawford, and the two men made a most plucky stand which produced 64 runs in three-quarters of an hour, and as Leveson-Gower and Strudwick both made useful scores, the total was not actually bad after all. Crawford made a most promising début, making his 51 runs in an hour and three quarters in excellent style. In the hour and-a-half which remained for play Kent made 110 runs for the loss of one wicket, Dillon and Humphreys both playing delightful cricket. The latter was not out 50, and Seymour not out 7. It was anticipated that there would be a very heavy storm during the night, but the little rain which fell hardly affected the wicket, and the rate of scoring was much more rapid on Friday than on the previous day. Seymour and Humphreys batted so well that at one time the score was 210 for one wicket. But at this total Humphreys was out for 104, which had taken him two hours and-a-half to compile. At 279, Day was stumped, and at 307, Seymour's fine innings came to a conclusion; he was at the wickets for two hours and-a-quarter. During his partnership with Humphreys 113 runs were made. Nearly all the other Kent batsmen did well, and Surrey had to face a deficit of 219. Again things went so badly with them that when stumps were drawn they still required 68 runs to save is familiar in the homes of Britishers the world over—in Great Britain itself Bovril is looked upon as the great national "stand-by" in case of failing strength. Bovril is the very embodiment of nourishment. It imparts strength in a most effective manner, and is, at the same time, extremely palatable.

BOVRIL

the innings defeat, with only four wickets in hand. Hayward was not out 84, and as long as he survived anything was possible. He and Abel both played very fine cricket, and during their partnership for the third wicket put on 100 runs in an hour and-a-half. On Saturday, Crawford, who was not out 7 overnight, was badly run out, but Davis played good cricket, and helped Hayward to put on 91 for the sixth wicket. Meanwhile, Hayward was playing a brilliant game, making runs rapidly, and showing a complete command over the bowling. In an over from Fielder he made five 4's, and when lunch time came he was getting very near his second hundred. But unfortunately their was then only one wicket in hand, and this fell soon after the game were resumed. But Hayward had played a magnificent innings for Surrey, and it was a great feat to carry his bat through the innings, scoring 188 out of 321, at a time when his side was in such a desperate position. He was batting for five hours and his hits included a 5 and thirty-one 4's. Despite his brilliant effort, Kent had only to make 103 to win.

SOUTH AFRICANS' TOUR.

MATCH vs. NOTTS.—Played at Trent Bridge on 8th, 9th, and 10th August. South Africans won by an innings and 49 runs. In the absence of A. O. Jones, Iremonger, Wass, J. Gunn, and Oates, the Notts team was very greatly weakened. H. A. Cursham, who has not played for the county for many years, acted as captain. Notts won the toss, and Hemingway and George Gunn made a fine commencement for them, putting up 153 before lunch without being separated, and bringing the total to 165 in two hours before the first wicket fell. But afterwards the batting broke down, as it has so often done this season, and the last six wickets fell in the course of an hour for 46 runs. Before stumps were drawn Shalders and Tancred made 37 for the South Africans without being separated. So weak was the bowling of Notts, and so good the wicket that the South Africans, who are in great form just now, made an example of their opponents. They kept at the wickets all day and scored 611, nearly every man on the side playing fine cricket. Shalders and Tancred seemed quite capable of making a record for the first wicket when the former slipped when running and sat down in the middle of the pitch. Pennington bowled very well indeed. Yesterday Notts made a very plucky effort to save themselves from defeat.

THE WEASEL.

POONA AND KIRKEE FOXHOUNDS.

HARRIS Bridge was the cenue for the 21st and a somewhat small field of about thirty turned up all eager for a gallop. Little law was accorded to late comers and the Master drew along the river bank and through the babul cover without success. This brought hounds to one of the four sugarcane patches which on a previous occasion provided a stout running jack. Three patches were drawn blank and hope ran low, but the fourth and last patch had a different tale to tell and hounds soon declared the longed for stranger to be at home. He evidently knew his way about and dodged hounds back and forward ringing the changes on the sugarcane quartelte? for nearly half an hour. But hounds would take no refusal and atlast the ever-watchful 1st whip, Mr. Sidney Armstrong, viewed him sneaking away. There was some little delay I hear in getting hounds on to the line as they were so scattered in the sugarcane, but once they got on they made up for lost time and ran merrily over some plough and crop land till reaching some dry rocky ground scent got very meagre and hounds were soon in difficulties. The Master had to come I believe to their rescue and with a shrewd cast hit off the line again. It became pretty rough going after this from all accounts—stones and boulders and undulating sheet rock, but even over this unpromising ground hounds ran at I am told at a great pace towards some big rocks near the well-known kalas ford and running their victim right down to the water's edge actually drowned him in the river. I have only been able to get the names of a very few who were out as I have had to compile this brief account of what seems to have been a very sporting little gallop from scraps gratefully picked up from various sources. A swim in the river must have greatly refreshed hounds and I fancy many of the steeds and their riders would have liked to share in the frolic. A move was then made in the direction of Yerowda, but after drawing part of the big nullah increasing heat brought the morning's sport to a close. Everyone seems to have thoroughly enjoyed it and the grumbling fraternity either stayed away or were satisfied. Verily it is a hard thing to satisfy everyone in this world of sorrow and discontent.

A bye day was slipped in on the 22nd, when about 50 showed up at Harupsar on the Sholapur Road. The sugarcanes near the village were drawn blank, but some jowari crops further on held a jack. Towards the high hills in the distance he headed at a good pace and after going about a mile and a half a brace of pariah dogs Played it low on the jack by illegitimate chase of him. As it turned out they were friends in disguise, for though hustling him with their mongrel japping they temporarily disorganized the hounds (and I hear some of the field) giving the jack several valuable moments—moments that with the present feeble scent mean a matter of life or death. In this case it meant life to the jack as the pace was after this I hear slow, hounds working a feeble scent over a low hill range towards Mahometwari. Here either the same Simion [illegible] or a mate of his was hustled out who made tracks over Gibbet Hill and along "Lloyds Ride." But scent was apparently getting worse each moment and it ended in hounds having to own their inability to proceed with business. A run of about 50 minutes in all, most of it slow. Of the meet at distant Chinchwad I have unhappily been able to cull but little. There are so many things going on and scent has been so capricious, not to say disappointing of late, that 12 miles of road to travel before 6 A.M., chokes off all but the most ardent. Not more than 15 or 20 in all I believe turned up at the rendezvous, among them alas not the kind sportsmen who feed me with information. I all the more regret this, as from what I hear it was a most excellent morning's sport which seems to have amply repaid those keen souls whom distance could not restrain. The Master met his field near the Railway Station and moving off made for some sugarcane patches where a jack was speedily found and evicted. Being evidently of a religious frame of mind he pointed straight for a temple on the trunk road to Bombay. His piety received assistance from an irresponsible little fox who jumped up and severely tempted hounds—temptation that was more than hounds could stand and it was some little time I hear before they were stopped and turned to the proper course once more. Over some big hill the line went so I gather, and so in more or less of a very long ring apparently, for it was on some small hills near the Railway Station that hounds threw up their heads in token of defeat. A most sporting run, some of it very fast indeed I am assured, and Colonel Sheringham they say deserves the utmost credit for showing such a morning's sport on so unpromising a morning.

SCARAMOUCH.

OOTACAMUND HOUNDS.

ON Monday hounds met at Kandal Cross Roads at 7-30 A.M. Scent during the whole morning was far from good and the want of rain is much felt as the country is becoming hard and dry.

Mill's Cover was first drawn blank and from the Double Crossing hounds hunted a cold line along the west side of Newmarket at a slow pace, but the hound work here was beautiful. At Rawling's Nullah the pace increased and hounds began to run fast and the Master viewed a brace of jacks on the south side of Bluegums, running together. One of them broke at the top and crossed towards Parlock. Hounds here divided and the Master left six couple in the covert hunting the other jack. The hounds which got away hunted their jack along the bottom of Governor's Shola and were lost to sight in the mist. They appear to have swung across to Martyn's Shola and run through Staircase and Herbert Plantation to Gibbs' Shola. After almost an hour's groping in the mist the Master found hounds at fault between Herbert Plantation and Gibbs' Shola Hounds were then trotted to Forrester's Hut and it was discovered that those hounds left behind in Bluegums had run their jack to ground at Governor's Shola, where they left him. Monkey Shola was then drawn blank and the Master had hardly thrown hounds into Jackal Shola when a jack went away on the Rallywood side.

The field followed him through Rallywood and over the hill into Bluegums again, where, notwithstanding hounds having run through earlier in the morning, a brace of fresh jacks were seen One came out at the top. Hounds again divided and three couple followed this jack to Parlock, where they lost him. The other was halloaed away towards Rawling's Nullah, while a third, with another division of the jack, broke at the top after running a ring in the covert. The field followed past the top of Rallywood, through Monkey Shola and on to Balkie, where hounds lost him.

On the Thursday previous hounds ran a jack to ground in the big earth just above the Yemakal stream. Two terriers, Pincher and Bob, were turned in. The former came out after a time, but the whole day was spent in vain looking for Bob. On Friday the digging was continued and the jack was found dead, the men on Monday reached the spot where Bob was and found him dead. He was farther in than the jack and appears to have been suffocated. It is a mistake to turn in two terriers at the same time. The Master was not at the spot and would certainly not have allowed it, had he been there.

On Thursday, the 28th, hounds met at Brooklands at 7-45. The morning was very hot and the want of rain acutely felt. Hounds hunted a stale line from Brooklands Cover as far as the hill above the Toll Bar, where they lost it. The Master then crossed the stream above the Toll Bar in the hopes of hitting the line off again, but scent was very bad. However, the Master viewed five jacks all together at the top of Rawling's Nullah and laid hounds on. The chance of sticking to one line seemed remote, but most of the jacks, if not the whole five, made for Bluegums, and although hounds divided and hunted four of them at once, in a few minutes they killed one below the cover and ran a brace to ground in the nullah on the Staircase side of Bluegums. The terrier failed to bolt either of these and the Master drew across the stream to the swamp which runs down between Staircase and Lawley's Course. From the top of this swamp a large jack without a brush got a way in view. An endeavour was made to head him from Staircase but he would not be denied. Hounds viewed him and coursed him to Staircase, at the foot of which they killed him and he was found to be an old dog jack. Hearty, a puppy, rolled him over and held him line until the others came up. Gibbs' Shola and the Dartmoor Valley were drawn as well as the ridge between Chemmund and Wenlock Shola. At the end of Khed Shola a sambur crossed and four couple of hounds broke away on the line. All but one of these were old hounds, which have never been steady with sambur. This ended the morning's sport.

POONA JUNIOR TOURNAMENT.

SEMI-FINALS.

29TH LANCERS vs 93RD HIGHLANDERS.—This match was played on the 26th instant before a large gathering of spectators. The Lancers did not give a very brilliant display and were outclassed by their opponents who won by 6 goals and 2 subsidiaries to 1 subsidary.

First Chukker.—The Highlanders were first away and rushing down Kennedy hit a goal. Then the Lancers took the ball down, but the 93rd again got possession and Herbert scored a goal. After the throw in the Highlanders got on and hit a third goal. Score: 93rd Highlanders 3 goals, 29th Lancers nil.

Second Chukker—Herbert ran down and scored a goal, Kennedy adding another shortly after. Play continued in the Lancers' territory and a minor point was added. The 29th then obtained a free hit for a foul against the Highlanders, nothing however, accrued. Score: 93rd Highlanders 5 goals 1 subsidiary, Lancers ni.

Third Chukker.—The Lancers defended gallantly but the Highlanders kept up a strong attack and scored a subsidiary. Score: Highlanders 5 goals 2 subsidiaries, Lancers nil.

Fourth Chukker.—The 93rd pressed hard but two or three shots went wide and the Lancers getting away hit a subsidiary. Score: Highlanders 5 goals 2 subsidiaries Lancers nil.

Fifth Chukker.—A prolonged attack on the Lancers' flags resulted in a goal. Birch got the ball and put in a good run for the Lancers but shot wide and the Highlanders won by 6 goals and 2 subsidiaries to 1 subsidary. Teams:—

33RD CAVALRY "A." vs. R. E. "A TEAM".—This game was also played on the 26th instant, a very good game, resulting in a win for the 33rd Cavalry by 2 goals 1 subsidiary to 1 subsidiary.

First Chukker.—Play was very fast and the Cavalry pressed hard but neither team scored.

Second Chukker.—The Cavalry got away once more and Passy taking the ball down passed to Hopwood who put it between the flags. Midfield play closed the period. Score: 33rd Cavalry 1 goal, R. E. nil.

Third Chukker.—The Sappers pressed and after two misses Bremner hit a minor point. Score: 33rd, Cavalry 1 goal, R. E. 1 Subsidiary.

Fourth Chukker.—The Cavalry had to defend but the Sappers were unable to score and from a hit in the 33rd worked the ball back and after two unsuccessful runs hit another goal Score: 33rd Cavalry 2 goals, R. E. 1 subsidiary.

Fifth Chukker.—The Cavalry got away at once and Hopwood obtained a minor point with a long shot. Play ruled up and down till the end of the chukker. The Cavalry were thus victorious by 2 goals and 1 subsidiary to 1 subsidiary. Teams:—

33RD CAVALRY, "A" TEAM vs. 93RD HIGHLANDERS.—This match was played on the same afternoon as the preceding game, an exciting struggle resulting in a win for the Cavalry by 2 goals to 1 goal and 4 subsidiaries.

First Chukker.—The Highlanders pressed hard and keeping the ball near the Cavalry flags scored two subsidiaries.

Second Chukker.—This was a very even period, both sides got in some good runs and scored a goal each. Score: Cavalry 1 goal, 93rd Highlanders 1 goal and 2 subsidiaries.

Third Chukker.—The Cavalry got going and hit another goal, the Highlanders replying with a minor point. Score: Cavalry 2 goals, Highlanders 1 goal and 2 subsidiaries.

Fourth Chukker.—Play continued to rule fast and even, both goals being visited in turn. The Highlanders hit a subsidiary.

Fifth Chukker.—After two unsuccessful runs by the Highlanders play continued in mid-field, the Cavalry thus winning by 2 goals to 1 goal and 4 subsidiaries. Teams :—

CYCLING AND MOTORING AT HOME.

LONDON, 12th August 1904.

ONE of our learned medical men once stated that half the community consisted of people not altogether mentally right, and accepting this announcement as correct, not wishing to argue on a personal matter, I suppose half the wheelmen one meet on the roads are cheating the asylums. This no doubt accounts for the foolish antics of a large number of cyclists. There are some who show their lack of mental balance by hanging on to motor-cars and cycles thus laying themselves open to sustaining serious injuries and a plentiful supply of dust into the bargain ; others rush steep hills without efficient brake power ; and others, and these are those we intend dwelling upon now, will show their devotion to their lady loves by holding and pushing them along by the shoulder, arm or waist. Since the introduction of free-wheels, the practice has greatly increased, it being now no uncommon thing to see a young fellow "pushing up behind." If they reserved their superfluous energy for assisting up a hill, when naturally moving slowly there would be but little danger, I would look them over and smile, but they don't ; uphill and downhill, on the straight and round corners, at high speed and low speed, their hand remains on the damsels waist, courting—yes, courting disaster. The recent fatal accident arising from this cause and the many other minor catastrophies are unheeded by them as might be expected since they belong to that half of the community of which I, and I hope my readers, are strangers.

I was up early on Monday morning last in order to catch the express train from London to Dover where I boarded the fast cross-channel steamer the Queen, a turbine driven vessel accredited with being the fastest boat plying between the coast of England and that of France, and as we skimmed over the water in the bright sunshine and watched the white wake spreading away to the shore which we had left but a few minutes before we certainly thought there could be no other craft of the size that could do the journey so quickly. The Queen had been chartered by the proprietors of a motoring journal with the express object of witnessing the great motor boat race that was taking place that day from Calais to Dover. Arriving at Calais a good view of the little motor-boats was obtained ; alongside the steamer they looked like little toys, bobbing up and down on the waves which although small seemed as though they would swamp the frail crafts. But their insignificant appearance belied them. They were demons on the water as the race proved. At the start they bounded forward on their wild rush to England and it was not long before the swift travelling Queen from which such an exceptional view of the race was to have been obtained, was left in the rear, and the French torpedo boats which attended the racers had difficulty in keeping up. So fast did the motor-boats travel that the 23 miles across the Channel were covered in 1hr. 0min. 7⅘secs. by the winner, a 90 h.-p. French craft and in 1hr. 5min. 25⅖secs. by the English boat Napier Minor which, however, only had engines developing 50 h.-p., it being one of the smallest boats in the race.

Particulars and details of a motor for attaching to an ordinary bicycle has been published this week, and although one publication has been speaking mysteriously for some time of its advent and referring to it as an invention that would revolutionise the trade, we, in common with several experts on the motor and cycle press fail to see how this will be brought about. It consists of an ordinary motor built into a special frame and attached by clamps and bolts to the back hub of an ordinary bicycle, the position of the motor being behind the back wheel of the cycle. Power will be conveyed from the motor to the driving wheel of the cycle by means of a chain and the weight of the motor will be supported by a small wheel or castor about 8 inches in diameter. But there are several points against the new contrivance. In the first place, being behind the driving wheel it will catch all the dust and also the mud and wet thrown up by the back wheel. Then with the weight of the motor trailing behind the steering of the bicycle will be greatly affected and the increased length of the machine would prove dangerous in traffic. What too, would be the effect on the motor when the small wheel in the rear struck a stone we cannot tell, but should think it would not conduce to regularity in running on the part of the motor. An auxiliary motor for attaching to a push bike would be greatly welcomed by wheelmen, but it would have to be light, and made to fix in a more suitable position than the motor just described.

The circumstances surrounding a cycle stealing case that has just come under my notice are of a rather amusing nature. A man borrowed a cycle from a friend and rode into a neighbouring town on some little business where he left the machine unattended for the space of a few minutes. A labourer coming along slightly "elevated" took the opportunity of having a free cycle lesson, but not being successful in mastering the balance gladly loaned the machine to a soldier for the price of a drink 6*d*. The soldier rode off and has not yet returned. The man who borrowed the machine had to make it good to the owner ; the labourer got three months hard labour and the son of Mars the—best of it.

Last Saturday the only race meeting in London was the Southern Counties Cyclist Unions' gathering at Herne Hill track when the two and fifty miles championships of the Union were decided. Although the "fifty" was the most important of the two events carrying as it does the possession of the "Roberts" shield for the space of twelve months, it was by no means the most interesting, indeed it proved a "run-away" thing for the winner—F. T. Burgess who secured the victory with two and a half miles the lead. The Shield goes to the club of the winner which in this case is the Paddington Cycling Club. But in the two miles championship the spectators were treated to a most exciting finish between A. E Wills of the Putney A. C. and Leon Meredith of the Paddington C. C. Thirty yards from home the two riders rushed to the front and sprinted neck and neck up to the tape, Wills with supreme effort just gaining the victory by inches.

H. G. Appleton, of the Bristol Wheelers, might well be proud of his performance of winning a half mile scratch race from A. L. Reed, the London crack, and by adopting Reed's own methods, too. It happened at Newport, Monmouthshire, Appleton finding himself in the final heat with Reed. The Bristol man carefully hung on to the Londoner until there was but half a lap more to go, then putting on a grand sprint he passed Reed and kept the lead to the finish. This is Reed's pet way of coming home—a long sprint—but in this instance he caught a tartar at his own game.

"Honour the Brave," and Mr. J. A. Hartopp of Leicester, has been duly honoured by the Prince of Wales. Away back in October of last year Mr. Hartopp was driving a pony and trap up a steep hill in Leicestershire known as Woodhouse Eaves when his attention was drawn to a lady cyclist riding down at a great speed and calling for help. Immediately grasping the situation and knowing that unless stopped she would be dashed to pieces at the foot of the hill where there was an ugly turn. Mr. Hartopp jumped from the trap and standing sideways in the road caught the lady round her waist as she was passing lifting her bodily from the machine. At the recent distribution of prizes and certificates of honour at Marlborough House the Prince presented Mr. Hartopp with a certificate recognising his action.

CRICKET CHAT.

E. H. D. SEWELL, the old Madras cricketer, has struck on a bad patch, his last ten innings having only realised 92 runs, 51 of which he made in one match. In his last three matches against Lancashire, Warwickshire and Middlesex he only managed to make 27 runs in six innings and as a consequence has been left out of the Essex team for the rest of the season, his name not appearing in the matches with Kent and Notts. E. B. T. Studd, the well-known Behar Wanderer, has played in three recent matches for the Harrow Wanderers scoring 8 and 0 against Preston, 5 and 46 against Manchester University, and 10 against Liverpool.

Major R. M. Poore, although he has been able to score consistently for Hampshire since he came into the team, is not the Poore of old and so far his highest score is 52. Against Surrey on 28th, 29th, and 30th July he made 32 and in the next match against Derbyshire had to be content with 27. G. L. Whatford, who played two fine innings against the Authentics in India, made his début for Sussex against Somerset, but had no innings owing to the game being abandoned In the next match against Gloucestershire he scored 8 and 13.

E. A. Leach, the Calcutta cricketer, playing for Wimbledon v. Streatham, made 39 top score for his side. Playing for Milton Park v. Incogniti he was dismissed for a blob. W. B. Baily, the Gurkha Brigade player, who was playing for Incogniti, met with no better success but bowled very finely, taking six wickets including Leach's. Playing for Incogniti against the 1st Army Corps he scored 0 and 10 and took four wickets. There were two other well-known Anglo-Indian players in the Incogniti team, Major C. E. G. Greenway who made 125 and 31, and H. C. King whose double contribution was, 3 and 10. In another match for Incogniti v. Chiswick Park Bailey scored 17 and Greenway 13 not out.

T. B. Nicholson playing for London County v. Norfolk scored 18 and 45, being responsible for exactly half the runs made from the bat in the second innings.

Captain P. Whetham, a well-known Northern India cricketer of the later nineties playing for Shoncliffe Garrison v. Hampstead scored 32 and stumped three batsmen and caught two.

S. L. Sassoon, a member of the well-known Bombay family of that name, playing for Tonbridge v. Hampstead, scored 4 and took two wickets.

Major Isaacke and Major Fleming playing for Hythe v. Hampstead scored 0 and 11 and 7 and 5 respectively. They each captured two wickets.

The poor display given by the Poona Gymkhana against the Bombay Hindus has been the chief topic of interest in Bombay Presidency cricket circles during the week. There can be no doubt that the Hindus are the strongest team in the Presidency, stronger in my opinion than a representaive Parsee team. Against the Hindus' total of 326 Poona could only respond with 171 and 69 and as Greig made 100 not out in the first innings it will be seen how completely the rest of the side failed against the bowling of Baloo who took 13 wickets in the match for 71 runs, eight in the second innings for 17 runs. So far as Poona were concerned it was Greig's match, as in addition to his century he captured eight wickets for 118 runs. Date (118 not out), and C. V. Mehta (90) carried off the batting honours for the Hindus whose two best batsmen, Telang and Bandu, only made 21 and 6 respectively.

Last week the Karachi Borahs had all the worst of a drawn game with the Gymkhanas who among others lacked the services of F. L. Sprott, Lucas, and Ussher. Captain G. D. Price, who is considered one of the best bats the Gymkhana have possessed for some years and O. M. Barnes were the principal contributors to the Gymkhana total of 120 with 28 and 29 respectively. G. B. Newton and O. M. Barnes as usual divided the bowling honours and are certainly the most useful pair of trundlers the Gymkhana has possessed since the days of Douglas and Cassels.

The Bombay Civil Service (Covenanted) will place a team in the field in September against the Poona Gymkhana, when it is hoped the following will don flannels : T. C. Crump, C. A. Kincaid, C. S. Campbell, J. E. C. Jukes, R. E. A. Elliott, F. C. S. Crofton, F. W. Allison, M. C. Gibb, J. Monteath, W. M. Hudson, J. Sladen, and G. H. Curtis.

H. Reynolds, the old Madras and Calcutta cricketer, arrived in Bombay last week to take over charge of the managership of the Commercial Bank. He has declined an invitation to play for the Presidency either at Bombay or Poona, and it is doubtful if he will even don flannels in any of the cold weather matches.

The game at Sukker, despite the over powering heat, continues to flourish, and on the 13th ultimo the N.-W. Railway strong in their possession of such players as W. R. Pearce and H. Littlewood took on the "World," but found the latter just a bit too strong for them. On paper, indeed, the "World" had rather a strong side, including R. E. Gibson, of the I. C. S., a young player who has created a very favourable impression as a batsman, V. H Wilson, the old Radleian and Lahore player, P. R. Cadell the Oxford Rugger Blue, who was also a good College cricketer, Captain H. A. Lane, and several good native players. Littlewood (29), Pearce (22), and Ryan (20) were all in evidence for the Railway, but seven of the side only obtained 13 runs between them. Gibson (29) and Lane (26 not out) were the chief scorers for the "World," for whom Cadell (12) and Master (12) also reached double figures. The best bowling performance in match was Pearce's six wickets for 37 runs for the Railway.

A game at Bangalore between the Gymkhana and the Mounted Infantry, which was won by the former by one wicket and 44 runs, was chiefly remarkable for a fine innings by Gould for the Mounted Infantry who going in second wicket down carried his bat out for 59 out of a total of 140—121 from the bat. Ladbrooke (21) was the only other batsman on the side who made more than 20. For the Gymkhana B. E. A. Manson (38), K Ridpath (34), Perrin (25), and F. L. Moore (26) were the principal scorers. H. J. H. Davson and Manson had the best bowling analysis for their respective sides.

The Royal Artillery cricketers stationed at Quetta who include A. G. Fleming, Thomas, Holdich, Tyler, and Radcliffe-Smith took on the Gymkhana in a game last week which they lost by 90 runs. The Gymkhana team although not the best side that could be placed in the field in the absence of Captain M. D. Wood, R. H. Montgomery, B. F. Vernon-Harcourt, W. R. Pearce, and Captain G. H. Stevenson, was strong enough in batting to make the performance of the R. A. Bowlers in disposing of their opponents for 173 a distinctly good one. Besides J H. Curtis, Captain L. M. R Deas, Captain V. G. Sarel, Captain H. A. Lane and F. M. Beaty, the Gymkhana XI included Captain F. M. McConaghey and who, during the earlier part of the Naini Tal season, had been scoring freely, R. H. H. Manners, a player who gave a good account of himself in Bombay cricket last season, and P. B. Sanderson a player who was making his début in Quetta matches. Sergeant Garne, for the R. A. met with great success in the early part of the Gymkhana innings, disposing of Curtis, Lane, McConaghey, and Deas and Fleming bowling Manners five wickets were down for 33 runs All the batsmen who came after scored well, however, and F. Beaty (27), Sarel (31), D'Arcy Marriott (21), Sanderson (17) and "Mr." Extras (37) were responsible for 136 of the total between them. The R. A. innings was only noteworthy for a fine display by Sergeant Garne, who made 45 out of the total of 83.

The return match between Bellary and Dhawar which was played at the former station on the 12th and 13th August was chiefly remarkable for the fine form shown by J. Monteath, the old Cliftonian, for Dharwar. On form this season he is the finest bat in the Bombay mofussil, and how he came to be passed over by the Presidency Selection Committee is more than I can ever guess at. Previous to this match he had made centuries in two other matches, besides other useful scores, often reaching the half century during the season. Against the Bellary bowlers who included F. De Hoghton, A. Mullins, and C. W. Watney, the old Sherbornian, he notched exactly a hundred in the first innings and 19 not out in the second. Two other Dharwar batsmen, also members of the I. C. S., played useful innnings viz., L. C. Crump, Sessions Judge, who made 30, and M. C. Gibb, the Collector, who contributed 43. F. De Hoghton, who bowled very well for Bellary and is undoubtedly the best trundler the station has possessed for some years, captured eight wickets in the match (five in the first innings and three out of the four that fell in the second) for a trifle over 10 runs apiece. Captain Matthews whose batting during the season with that of C. W. Watney's and Captain Ainslie's and P. Mitford's has been the mainstay of the Bellary team, played two good innings of 40 and 32 not out, while Watney with 21 and 40, and P. Mitford (39 and 12) and Sergeant Weston (15 not out and 52) were also in evidence. Ainslie and De Hoghton had to bustle for spectacles in the second innings, and each made one run before being bowled by Samuel. The match ended in an even draw.

A combined Nagpur and Kamptee XI played a Police XI last week and had to admit defeat by four wickets. The all-round cricket of Mayberry and Fagan was largely responsible for the victory, the first named scoring 45 and 4 and capturing six wickets in the second innings of the combined team and the latter making 26 not out (top score) in the second innings and obtaining six wickets. Goodfrey (46 and 7) and Cleveland (2 and 26) also batted well for the Police. Captain Goring Jones (5 and 34), Lieutenant A. F. Lunsden (34 and 10), and Lieutenant Farquharson (30 and 6) showed the best form for the combined team.

STATISTICIAN.

Football.

RUGBY IN CALCUTTA.

CUSTOMS vs. UNITED SERVICES.—These teams met on the Customs ground, on the 24th ultimo. The rain just before the start made the turf very slippery and consequently the game was confined to the forwards. The home team were in good form and had the best of it. For the Services Moberly and Gardiner, Szczepanski and Lazzada were conspicuous, the last named getting over with the only try, Szczepanski adding the extra points. The Customs scored in the first half, but the place kick failed On crossing over, however, they had it nearly all their own way and Vears, Rowe, and Adams got over with tries, two of which were converted by Anderson. The home team thus won by 16 points to 5.

CITY vs. KING'S OWN.—The Calcutta ground was the venue of this match on the 25th ultimo, when the King's Own beat their opponents by two goals and two tries to a goal. The City did not give a very creditable display, but worked hard, Williams, Street, and Oakley, showing up. In the first-half Basnett scored for the King's Own, Scully adding the major points. This was the only scoring before the interval. On changing ends Williams crossed the line and taking the place was successful. Then the Fort team got going, Lieutenants Scott, Ray, Baker, and Marshall and Privates Basnett and Scully being much to the fore. Scully got over after a good bit of passing, but no goal resulted. Marshall next crossed the City line and Scully converted. Just before time they went away with another fine piece of passing and Waite scored. The place failed, the King's Own won as stated.

CALCUTTA vs. ARMENIAN OLD BOYS.—On the Calcutta ground last Tuesday the home team beat the Armenians by a try to nil after a good game. The sides were anything but representative, but a very even and well contested game was witnessed. The first half closed without score, though Ismay, Hemmingway and Macdonald nearly got over on several occasions. In the second moiety, however, Hemmingway scored a try but no goal resulted and the Armenians failing to get over Calcutta won as stated.

CALCUTTA RUGBY LEAGUE.

CALCUTTA vs. CITY.—These teams met on the Calcutta ground on the 27th ultimo, when the home team won by a goal and three tries (14 points) to nil. Calcutta started the game and taking the ball down had the best of a series of scrums in the visitors' territory, Cumberledge eventually got possession, and transferring to Ismay, the latter got over with a try. The place failed but the play which followed was in favour of the homesters, and Ismay once more getting the leather ran in with another try. Martelli added the extra points. On resuming the City showed up for a while, but the Calcutta three-quarters once more got the ball, and a good run by Barnes, Martelli, and Siddons resulted in the last named scoring. The place fell short, but soon after Martelli rushed through and got over with the ball, no try was awarded however, and play ruled even till the interval. In the second-half the visitors showed improved form and the game was well contested. From a scrum in the City twenty-five Kerr got in but no goal resulted Calcutta winning as stated.

FOOTBALL NOTES.

THREE games were decided on the Rugby League last week. The Calcutta Football Club beat the City and thereby placed two more points to their credit which makes them level with the King's Own for the time being, who have also won their first two games by their victory over the unlucky City and by the West Ridings, scratching their engagement of Saturday. Calcutta, are likely to be at the head of affairs when the League closes, with, perhaps, the Fort team as their nearest attendants The West Ridings, to all intents and purposes, are out of the running as they find it difficult keeping all their engagements from distant Dum-Dum I suppose.

In the game against the King's Own almost up to the call of time it looked as if the Calcutta Football Club were going to make a draw of it. This was their poorest display up to date, and the forwards, who usually appear to advantage, played considerably below par. Of course it is only fair to state that substitutes had to be found for Cumberledge, MacLeod, Dunlop, and Graham who were unable to turn out, but this did not quite account for the indifferent display given forward.

The ground was nice and dry and the conditions were altogether favourable to passing and running and the game that should have been adopted was certainly not the forward dribbling one which was overdone.

Calcutta's chief strength lies in the line behind the scrum and they would have scored much sooner if the pack had heeled out more often, though to give them their due they were better than their opponents in that respect. Kerr who does sound business the whole while, Vick, Curtis Hayward, Berridge, and Heilgers worked hard and did many good things individually ; the last named is probably the best of the bunch, but spoils his brilliant forward game by kicking too hard ahead and losing the ball when dribbling.

If Cooper, junior, made more use of his weight he would make an extremely useful front ranker ; his brilliancy in the open was quite neutralised by the fact that he was almost a "passenger" when it came to real hard work in the tight packs.

Macdonald was great at half and once emulated Cumberledge's example rushing through the scrum on his own and scoring as that player did in the game against the Ridings. Morley, the other half, did not appear at all at ease and played in nervous fashion. He passed too far back and without looking where the leather was going ; but for these faults he would have done well as he is fast and quick on the ball.

The three quarter line was as compact as ever ; Ismay made some tricky runs, but had a slight inclination to pass forward.

Martelli's play was chiefly noticeable for its fine long punting which is in the most approved style ; Siddons is a prolific scorer, but I fear is slipping into the bad habit of sticking to the ball too long. Barnes did very well and is likely to do so as long as his side is attacking : he ran strongly and kicked excellently. It is evidently the intention of the powers that be in the club to keep Grayburn where he is at back. Up to now he has certainly been found worthy of the trust reposed in him and has usually done the right thing at the right moment : but then his capabilities have not really been put to a severe test, as the men in front of him have not allowed much to pass them and up to now his post has almost been a sinecure.

On Tuesday I noticed a certain hesitancy in his kicking. He is a fearless tackler, but I doubt if his speed and kicking are up to the requirements of a full-back and I still say that there is only one man for that position and this is Dick.

City F. C. have fallen from their high estate. They gave fair promise at the opening of the season of training on into a fine team, but have hopelessly disappointed their supporters and now can only be counted as quite a second rate local combination.

The majority of the players lack experience and thorough knowledge of the game and there are only a few men on the side who seem to know what they are about.

On the Calcutta ground last Thursday they succumbed to the soldiers in the Fort thereby losing their first League match.

On Saturday the premier club met the City in the League Competition and added two more points to their record. The game, though one sided, was fast, and some splendid bouts of passing were indulged in by the winner's three-quarters, who profited a good deal by their opponents' mistakes. The city defence have not yet learnt the golden rule of tackling hard and low. This remark does not, of course, apply to Williams, who is already a past master at this particular branch of the game. Ismay scored two splendid tries, the second one was obtained by his literally carving his way straight through the opposition which one and all endeavoured to collar their slippery customer by the neck.

The try ought never to have been scored, and the same can be said of the one which Siddons landed after eluding a back who went the wrong way about his business.

The King's Own won their first League game by defeating City very easily. Their victory was thoroughly deserved in every way. At the commencement of the game the King's Own were forced to act on the defensive, so hot was the pace set them by the City, who as in their game against Calcutta could not keep it up and after the first score by the King's Own had it all against them for the rest of the game.

The King's three quarters played very smartly and on this occasion passed with better judgment and the line as a whole worked extremely well together.

Basonett and White were conspicuous for the way they intercepted some of the City passes and on two occasions tries were scored in this way.

Lieutenant Marshall again played with dash and his partner also proved useful. The forwards led by Lieutenants Scott and Ray were all over the City men and heeled out very smartly.

There is one thing the King's Own must learn and that is to be very chary about parting with the ball in their own "25." In the game against Calcutta the score was one goal all up to nearly the end of the game, and it looked as if the soldiers were going to pull the match out of the fire till one of their threes injudiciously parted with the ball near his own touch line, whereupon a Calcutta man intercepted the pass and romped in with the easiest of tries.

The same thing happened again on Thursday, when Scully miskicked in dangerous locality thereby enabling Williams to score.

The Customs are to be congratulated on winning their first game at the expense of the Services, who, owing to the depletion of their ranks, are thinking of either not running a team this year, or throwing in their lot with another Club.

TOUCH.

BEHIND THE SCRUM.

THERE is certainly no space, and I trust no necessity, for me to begin and write the whole history, theory, and science of Rugby Football. I will presume that you have mastered the game up to a certain extent, and all I will try to do is simply to write down a few things which I have learned myself from experience.

Football is becoming such a complicated science now that by the time a man has learned the game he has lost the power to play it, and that must be my excuse for trying to teach you here what you would learn far better for yourselves on the football field.

It is both logical and convenient to start with training. When training one should either play or run every day, but be very careful not to overdo it. Do not play too long or run too hard; once you are fit very little will suffice to keep you right, and it is far better to be undertrained than overtrained. Training with regard to food is quite absurd. Light exercise every day and heaps of sleep at night is the ideal prescription for those who can afford to take it. When training, punting into touch should be carefully practised. I should advise some twenty kicks with each foot every day, taking great care not to "press;" accuracy is far better than length. If you do not fall into the temptation to try for huge kicks you will develop into a most consistent and useful punter with either foot.

Passing should be practised by the halves and three-quarters starting close together, about four yards apart, with the line inclined rather more towards the goal line than the touch line. I believe the system of going through and not round the defence is the best, for an elementary knowledge of geometry will allow a wing three-quarter to stand in a position to cut off the opposing wing who tries to run round him. By our method of arranging three-quarters it is easy for the three-quarter nearest the scrummage, after receiving the ball and passing it on to his centre, to cross right over and act as a wing on the far side of the field. If every one runs straight this is comparatively simple, and it is terribly deadly. All this has to be carefully rehearsed before. Only the power to practise daily together allows of the possibility of real back play. Passing should be done low and sharp, and well in front of the receiver, so that he must go at full speed to take the ball. Besides this practice, the halves should practise by themselves passing out from the scrum. It is really best for the same half always to take the base of the scrum, and the other always to stand back and hand on to his three-quarters With practice it is simply wonderful how quickly this can be done, and quickness is all-important. The half standing back should either pass immediately or not till he has broken right through. To try and draw men and then pass is for him a mistake. If he gets through he should find his three-quarters ready, and if they are all on one side of him (as they generally will be) his fellow-half should be on the other, so that he has a choice of sides to pass to. The half at the base of the scrum must learn to pick up and pass in one motion. A second's unnecessary delay robs his three-quarters of most of their opportunities. Quickness here is really more important than accuracy. An occasional bad pass is not so harmful as constant, though slight, slowness.

Now the ball has got to the three-quarters, and we must consider the nature of our attack. It is often useful to start by trying to crash through. The wing three-quarter, on getting the ball from his half, should rush between two of the opposing three-quarters. Do not hesitate or pass; go straight and hard. You may get through; most probably you will not. Try once again. Twice is usually enough? Then you observe your opponents' backs bunching in near the scrum to make certain you will not get through. This is your opportunity. Throw out your three-quarters right across the field, pass the ball like lightning to the far wing (each three-quarter passing immediately he gets the ball), and he has an easy try. If pressing on your opponents' line, it is sometimes useful to take out a heavy forward, pass him the ball, and let him crash head down for the line. If he can only get under way he is a horrid awkward animal to stop in five yards. It is a common enough dodge for the half to run round the touch side of a scrum, draw the opposing wing three-quarter, and then hand on to his own; or the half at the base of the scrum may throw out to the wing three-quarter near touch, instead of passing into the centre to his fellow-half. This is specially effective when pressing. I have explained before how a wing may, after passing, cross over and act with deadly effect on the far side of the field. I have seen lots of tries scored by this method, but it is no good unless you have a sound and well trained three-quarter line, who above all have mastered the fact that they must run straight. The pass back from the wing to his centre is becoming very popular now, and there is no doubt it is pretty and sometimes effective, but as a principle I am against it. As a rule, I believe it pays best for a wing to go his quickest and not to think of passing. If he watches his centre he impairs his speed. If he be hopelessly hemmed in, he should punt into the centre and put his men on side by running down the touch line.

Very few players realise the infinite possibilities of judicious punting. With daily practice you should be able to land the ball off a short kick exactly where you please. If you can only gain and use this power, you will provide your side and yourself with heaps of chances, and be amply repaid for any trouble you may have spent in practice. There is a very neat drop goal that is sometimes useful. Make one of your centre three-quarters learn to drop goals from straight in front with comparative certainty. When you are pressing near goal, make him stand behind the half standing back. The half at the base of the scrum throws the ball out, not to his fellow-half, but right behind him to the three-quarter. The half who was standing back rushes forward, as he would do were he receiving the pass, and so distracts the attention of his opponents, and allows the three-quarter plenty time to drop his goal.

A wing three-quarter may often get round a man by judiciously varying his pace. I often wonder why more centre three-quarters, who run up to a man and then pass to their wing, do not realise that their opponent far too frequently has time to tackle the wing. It is usually not very difficult to make a centre pass and then catch his wing, and this surely should not be. The remedy is quite simple, and we find it from watching Arthur Gould, Gwyn Nicolls, or E. M Baker, but no one else I have seen. The centre when he runs up to the man should turn so as to pass him on the far side from his wing; his opponent turns too, and then the pass is given rather over the shoulder of the giver, and the wing, even though he be slow, has time to get away. If a wing be fast of course the ordinary pass is usually enough, but there are many occasions when, for instance, a slow forward might score if the back were properly drawn away from him. Centre three-quarters should under nearly all conditions keep their places. They are the back bone of the defence. It is too dangerous for them to leave their places and open a gap for the opposition. The wing three-quarter should, I am quite sure, not be, as it were, fastened to a touch line as some people seem to imagine. He must rove; in defence a wing does much of his tackling by crossing to the far side of the field when the ball is being passed by the opposing three-quarters and getting their wing. Any one who has seen Tom Scott play must have observed this brought to very near perfection. If a wing under these conditions is not across the field to help the defence he is out of his place. The point of danger is the place for which he should make. To remain on his own side of the field and only do the work providence and a kind centre sends him is not playing the game. He must be always ready to take a pass from his centre, and so should not wander so much when his side are attacking. Once the ball is out of the scrum a smart wing should see where he is most needed, and when he can safely leave his post and go and help. To see a wing stand and shiver because he gets no passes, while his centres are working like Trojans in defence, is one of the surest proofs of incompetency. Truly it is sad to see a wing being looked on as a mere sprinter, allowed occasionally to score, and kept entirely for that purpose; there is always heaps of work and only too few men to do it, why not let him try to help?—wing three-quarters have sometimes brains, and can sometimes think like other people.

There is a class of three-quarters who seem to think it a matter of indifference which line they cross, and make for the touch line as the longer and easier to reach with unfailing regularity. Some of them, I fancy, regard it as a sort of haven of refuge. Backs must learn to go straight, to run across is only wasting time and space; you crowd your men into touch and allow your opponents time to get ready their defence. You should always watch when it is your touch and see whether it is worth while to bounce the ball out yourself; this is often of immense service. Stand with both feet in touch, bounce the ball out and catch it with both feet out of touch. It is a little difficult to do at first; perhaps it is easier to run in a semi-circle out from touch and catch the ball again facing your opponents' goal, then you can start off at once.

The defence of a back division is just as important as its attack, but there are much fewer important hints to write about it, for a defence simply watches the opponents' attack and prepares to meet it. There is not the same opportunity for originality, nor the same necessity for change. When the opposing forwards get the ball in the scrum, the defending three-quarters should immediately come up to a line with the scrum as nearly offside as possible. The two halves should take the half at the base of the scrum, the wing three quarter the half standing back and so on; the halves and wing crossing over, after making their men pass, to help on the far side of the field. If your centres can only get among the opposing three-quarters before the ball is right across, you gain ground every time your opponents heel. It is sometimes useful for your centre not to look at the ball, but simply to jump off his mark, as it were, when the wing gives the signal that the ball is out. When charging down a kick it is absurd to charge straight at the man; you should charge about two feet outside his right foot, unless of course he be left-footed.

In the past the all-important question in Rugby football was to prevent the other side scoring; now we have learned to place more importance on scoring ourselves. And the duties and qualifications of a full-back have changed with the style of play. Formerly if a back was a safe tackle and a good kick he was considered to be fully fitted for his position; now we are learning and our teachers hail from Wales, that a back can be a most aggressive person, and we are constantly being shown how he can win matches for his side instead of only saving a defeat. There is quite a prejudice against Welsh full-back play out of Wales. It is unsound, not safe, too risky, so the critics say. I suppose they will learn in time that the man who regularly kicks into touch whenever and wherever he gets the ball is not a football player.

The first duty of a back is to learn to kick with both feet and to know when and how to tackle. Tackling is an art that can only be learned by experience. There are so many different ways of tackling that it is impossible to lay down any rule about it; usually, however, the best places is the hips. If you go at a man there hard, you not only bring him down, but stand a very good chance of spoiling any attempt he may make at passing. A back's kicking should not be always into touch; if there be any strength of wind behind him, he should only very seldom find touch. He must learn to land his kicks where they are of most use to his side. Above all he should run often. He is fresh, and should use his freshness to tire out his opponents. As Arthur Gould showed the football world how to play three-quarter, a full-back will some day come and teach us how a back should play, how his position is infinitely the best for attack as well as defence. He has boundless opportunities for originality. There has never yet been a full-back who could use them adequately.

A full-back along with all the players behind the scrum, should learn and cultivate the art of nursing fowards. I am quite sure this is far too much neglected. It is impossible for forwards to go hard the whole time against anything of an opposition at all. If the backs do not give them opportunities for rest, they will take their rest without the opportunity, and so are matches lost. When you see your forwards tiring, getting a bit done up and inclined to easy, then give them a rest; let them heel at once and let the halves punt well into touch, take the line out with the almost invitable consequence, a scrum heel again and punt for touch; after you do this once or twice, you will find the fire and dash is out of the opposition, and your refreshed forwards can meet them on equal terms again. All forward sides need nursing occasionally. They do not know it; you will never get their gratitude. An ordinary forward is an unthiking animal who shoves.

You must remember always that what you are playing against is not a machine, but a team of men with like passion to yourselves. If you can only work on their feelings, tire them when they look tired, depress them if they show signs of losing heart, you have grasped a very important item in the theory of Rugby football. There is always some plan which should be adopted, some policy that would command success. A team are not really together until they understand their captain's wishes as if by instinct, and learn to obey him. It is far better for a team to adopt the wrong policy consistently unitedly than to fly off into the hopeless confusion of a mixture of methods.

The usual plans of a captain consist in the commands "let it out" or "keep it tight.' To do either of these consistently without thought is wrong. Your opponents know what you are trying to do and that knowledge is a useful asset for them. You must watch and plan. Think all the time and think quickly. If you are good behind you should certainly heel a lot, and do not have any hard scrums until you have made the opposing forwards chase your backs all over the field; then is your forward's chance; make your effort forwards; if you cannot hold them nothing is lost save a yard or two, use your backs again, but if you do beat them, shove them, rush them, they will almost certainly lose heart. Your backs have been running all over the field, your forwards now carry the scrums your opposition crumples up, and the rest is not football. Remember when playing against a strong forward side who trust in their forward and keep it consistently tight, your opportunity is bound to come. There is always a sort of fatal five minutes during which your forwards get possession and heel; then is your chance. This time often comes early in the second half. It comes suddenly but none the less surely. If your forwards will only stick to it and not be routed you can promise them a score in due time. If you are stronger forward you must be careful not to make your forwards do too much; give them intervals during which you let them rest. Do not be too frightened to let your three quarters try a passing run occasionally; they will never learn unless you let them try, and anything they do always gives the opposition some running about

I will conclude with the simple advice: Play to the whistle, and above all play the game. A half may put the ball into the scrum so that his forwards nearly always get it; any back may tackle a man when he knows he has passed or has kicked, or hold him when he knows he is dribbling, and do a thousand other little acts of unfairness, which no referee can stop, and which most unfortunately pay. This possibility of fraud is in one way a safeguard, for it means that Rugby football can never be played as it should be played by those who play it not for sport but for hire.—J. E. Crabbie, in Edinburgh Academy Chronicle.

A little girl of three was allowed to see her dead uncle in his coffin. "Mamma," she asked pensively next morning, with earnest eyes fixed on the blue expanse above her, "do you think God has had time yet to unpack Uncle Edward?"

A little lady had made friends with the groom, and, to her mother's distress, learned some very forcible expressions. The perplexed parent confided her trouble to the vicar, who chanced to be calling. The old gentleman took the tiny maiden on his knee. "My dear do you know a little birdie has whispered to me that sometimes you say very naughty words?" "Oh, I know," said the offender, gaily, "it must be one of those damned sparrows."

BEHAR GOSSIP.

THE miserable weather of August makes a meet in that month extremely uncertain as to its success or failure; but as it is the only time that the busy planters can spare from their mehai to attend parades during the manufacturing season; Mozufferpore, the headquarters station of the Behar Light Horse, has parades year after year in that month, and as it is a relief from the monotony of the usual routine of factory life, it is as a rule well attended by the members of "A" (Mozufferpore) troop.

This year the Parade Meet, which took place in Mozufferpore in the middle of August, could hardly be called a success though it was in no way a failure, the weather to begin with, made a dead set against most of the amusements got up by the Committee, for when it was not raining, it was hot and steamy, and the life was knocked out of the meet from the beginning; for on the night of the 10th instant (the evening before the meet commenced), Mozufferpore had a record fall of rain, over 13 inches falling in little over six hours, and this literally cast a damper over things.

I have no intention of going into the details of the meet, but will merely describe what took place in the two days of Mozufferpore hot weather gaiety.

On the 11th, there were parades at Secundrapore, under the command of Captain J. A. Wilson, and Lieutenant R Summers, after which there was a regatta on the lake.

In the evening there was a dance at the Club, and though it was very hot, those that turned up said it was a success.

The next day there were more parades, and in the afternoon a Gymkhana at Secundrapore, but as continual rain fell, it proved a failure, though thanks to Mrs. Bentinck, the Collector's wife, those that went down there were able to get shelter and refreshments, in the cosy little tent she had put up for the occasion, and her excellent cakes and tea were thoroughly appreciated by everybody who turned up.

A concert got up by Captain Stevens at the Club in the evening wound up the meet, and the next day most of the visitors left the station for their factories.

I think I should more fully describe the regatta on the first day, as it is only once a year that such an event takes place in the district, and though the men of Behar may not be first class yachtsmen, their keenness does them the greatest credit.

The following boats were entered for the race :—

Mr. Bentinck's yacht sailed by Messrs. Bentinck and J. Wilson; Mr. Ross's White Lady sailed by its owner; Mr. Chapman's From From sailed by Mr Mackenzie; Mr. Brown's Mary Ann sailed by Messrs. Brown and Carey; Mr. Barclay's Motipore sailed by Mr. Holthom. After a great display of seamanship the boats sailed over the line or rather four of them did, as the fifth, the Motipore boat, had its mast carried away by a sudden puff of wind. The serviceable old bamboo that had acted in that capacity for years suddenly snapped in half like a carrot, bringing the sail and everything down with a run, and leaving its crew to slowly paddle it back to the shore.

Mr. Bentinck's yacht was just astern of the Motipore boat, when the accident happened, and in clearing out of the way, he lost a lot of ground or, to be correct, water, which he never regained, and only finished third in the race.

The White Lady got away well in front, and led all round the course, winning, if I may be allowed to it say, in a canter.

The Mary Ann who had also succeeded in getting off well in front, slowly and carefully went round the buoys and finished second, while the From From strained her mast and had to drop out of the race, leaving Mr Mackenzie to row nearly half a mile back to the Club.

The White Lady was by far the fastest boat in the race, she being like the Motipore boat, and the From From, Una rig, drawing very little water, and balanced by a centre board.

Mr. Bentinck's boat was yacht rigged, and would do very well in a stiff breeze, but with the light breezes they had on the day of the regatta, she was unable to show what she could do.

The Mary Ann was a heavy old tub, and took a good deal of ballast as I saw her crew load her up with a cart load of bricks and a couple of press screws and as she still seemed top heavy they put all the club weights on board of her.

I saw this same boat in a Regatta in the lake at Mozufferpore some years ago; with a crew of some eight indigo planters on her. After drifting side ways for some time, she floated into the middle of the lake, where she remained like a "painted ship upon a painted ocean" and as she showed an inclination to turn over at the slightest breeze, I have no doubt her crew preferred the position she was in—more so as they could see their friends drinking pegs in the cool veranda of the Club. I don't know how things ended or how they got ashore again as I had to go back to breakfast; but I have no doubt they thoroughly agreed that a man's a fool to go to sea; any way in their case. I have never seen them show any great anxiety to join any of the regattas since.

The Ganges being high, pigsticking on the dearas is a thing of the past and the wily boar has been having it all his own way. A short time ago a woman was killed by a pig, not far from Mhow factory; but the pig that killed two men near Bheerie on the dearas last week, deserves a full account to himself, as he showed such mad fury in attacking the unfortunate natives that came in his path.

It appears he charged down on the first man, ripping him open in the groin (the man afterwards dying); he then attacked a second man who tried to defend himself with a kodalie. He got this man down and lay across him like a dog, with his tusks deeply buried in his body. The villagers rushed out to the rescue and killed the pig, with his tusks still buried in the man's body, a terrible picture of mad, savage fury, and hard to realize, except by one that has had experience of the ways of the Indian wild boar.

Mozufferpore had a Billiard Tournament a short time ago almost every man in the station entered for it; it was eventually won by Mr. Vincent, who beat Mr. H. Crowdy in the finals. The former was +35, and the later—15 and the game was for 125.

The whole of Mozufferpore play golf and the links are crowded every evening, it having quite taken the place of tennis and everything else, except polo.

The whole of the Golf course is now being improved, several new greens made and bunkers put up by Mr. Chapman, who is keenness itself on the game.

Mr. Marsham and Mr. Finch were out after pig a month ago not far from Mollepore Factory.

A fine boar was put up, and after giving a good deal of trouble to the beaters, he eventually broke cover, but again took refuge in another piece of grass. Mr. Marsham was on foot directing the beaters, while near him was his syce holding his horse, and his spear. After beating the grass for some time Mr. Marsham came to the conclusion that the boar had left the grass, and he walked across to where Mr. Finch was sitting on his pony. Suddenly the pig charged out of the grass, straight at Mr. Marsham, who ran for his horse, while Mr Finch putting out his spear as the pig passed him, killed it on the spot.

It turned out to be a fine boar, measuring 33 inches, with tusks that measured 8 inches.

The above is only another instance of the extraordinary amount of luck there is out pigsticking, while the following proves that it isn't always the best man that gets the pig.

Many years ago in the south of Tirhoot a large party of planters were out pigsticking, luck had been dead out, when suddenly a young pig broke cover, pursued by all except one man who I will call A. As A. sat on his horse, watching his friends rapidly disappearing he suddenly became aware that an enormous boar was charging down on him from the grass. Now A. was not overkeen on pigsticking, though he was a good sportsman, and as there was no question of his pluck, he would have faced the pig, but his horse had different ideas as he took the bit in his mouth and bolted with the pig after him. Away they both went, the pig rapidly gaining; suddenly A. jabbed back with his spear, which entering the pig's eye and brain killed it on the spot.

One can imagine the disgust and surprise of the rest of the party on their return to find that A had killed one of the biggest pigs that had been killed in those parts, while they had been wasting their energies after a little beggar not worth sticking.

Mr. Sam MacCall has settled down in Mozufferpore, and his stables are well worth a visit, as he has a string of very useful looking waler ponies, which all measure well under polo height. Some of them have only been landed about ten days, though one would never suspect from their appearance that this was the case.

Mozufferpore played Champaran on the 21st instant at Golf which resulted in an easy win, for Mozufferpore. The following were the players :—

There is some talk of having the Camp-of-Exercise in X'mas week, instead of as usual in January. This is a sign of the times, as so many factories now in Behar work sugar, in conjunction with indigo, and January being the busy time for those working sugar, it would mean that a large percentage of the members of the Behar Light Horse would be unable to attend the camp unless the Camp-of-Exercise was held at X'mas.

The Naturalist.

AN ORNITHOLOGICAL TRIP IN THE HIMALAYAS.

WE left Darjeeling on the 23rd September 1902, and reached Jor Pokry Bungalow at 3 P.M. in a regular deluge of rain which continued all night. The next morning being fine we left for Tongloo about 13 miles away at 6 A.M. a short way from the Jor Pokry Bungalow. We came across a large flock of the Speckled Wood Pigeon (Alsocomus Hodgsoni) and after some trouble shot three. At the bottom of the hill, near the source of the little Rungeet the dogs put up some pheasants (Gallophasis Melanotus) one fine cock in perfect plumage was bagged. Walking slowly up the Tongloo hill from the source of the little Rungneet river I shot a male Pericrocotus brevirostris—two males and one female Hypsipetes psaroides, one male Myiomela leucura, one Larvivora Cyana—one male and one female Brachypteryx Hyperythra in the thick bamboo jungle one female Pnoepyga Squamata. Two males Castanco coronata. After reaching the Tongloo Bungalow, and a little rest, I took the Saloon Rifle with some shot cartridges, and went across the boundary on the Nepal side, amongst some Rhododendron trees, I got the following birds: one male Reguloides erochra, one female Abroris schisticeps, one female Enicurus, Imaculatus; one male one female Cutia Nipalensis, one male Leithrix argenlauris, one male and one female Siva strigula, one male Proparus vinipectus.

I left my skinner with the birds shot during the trip up to Tongloo. On my return I found he had, with the help of a coolie, very nearly finished skinning all, so having made over those shot in the evening and after a good wash and dinner we sat in in the verandah till a late hour smoking.

The next morning finding that all the birds had not been skinned I set to work with the skinner and coolie and we finished all in about two hours. We left Tongloo on the 25th, having sent on the tent to be pitched midway between Tongloo and Sundukpho. On the way we got one male Ixulus striatus one Yuhina gularis and two male Ægithaliscus louschistos, one male one female Lophophanes beavani, one male Peocarduelis nipalensis, one male of the Sikkim Horned Pheasant (Ceriornis satyra) three males and one female of the Black Throated Hill Partridge (Arboricola torqueola) one male one female Garrulax ocellatus, two females one male Trochalopteron affine—three males and two females of Suthora nipalensis, we came across many flock of these—about 20 or 30 in a flock. Many were lost in the thick bamboo jungle after being killed. One male and one female of Conostoma cemodium, close by the side of the road, besides some birds we had got the day before The next morning early we started for Sundukpho, shortly after starting we saw a couple of Nucifraga hemispila and I was trying my utmost to get within range, when I heard a Pheasant (Ceriornis satyra) calling in the jungle just above so leaving the Nutcrackers to take care of themselves, which they were well able to do, I called up the dogs and went after the Pheasants and managed after a goodeal of beating to knock over a fine cock in glorious plumage. As soon as I fired, up pumped a serow (Nemorhœdus bubalina) within 15 yards, on receiving a charge of No. 6 shot away it went, and though it was badly hit we could not come across it again. After this we got four male Ethopyga nipalensis, two male Æthopyga saturata, one male one female upupa epops, one male one female Sitta himalayansis, one male Tichodroma muræria, creeping up a rock on a land slip, three males two females Certhia nipalensis, one male two females Certhia discolor and one Cuculus poliocephalus in rufous plumage.

On the steep going up to Sundukpho we got three males one female Mocissa Flavirostis, one male one female Nucifraga hemispela—these last I saw on a Rhododendron shrub tearing the moss off with their bills, searching for the insects and larvæ which harbour underneath—two males Pyrrhula nipalensis, one male Pyrrhaoplectes epauletta, four males one female Propyrrhula subbemachla, one female Alandatrybarhyncha, and right up near the top of the hill close to the bungalow we got many Accentor immaculatus. We stayed all next day the 27th at Sundukpho, having so many birds to skin. About 12 o'clock after all the Birds had been skinned, my brother and I went to the top of the Hill from which you get a glorious view of the snows. Whilst lying on the grass smoking we saw several Bearded Vulture (Gypaetus barbatus) circling round, out of range, my brother had a shot gun loaded with No. 3 shot whilst I had a single small bore rifle. We lay their watching them until a very big bird came within range, when my brother gave it both barrels of the No 3 shot but not seeming to care much about this I fired the rifle and killed it. A tremendous bird. On skinning it I found the No. 3 shot had just entered the skin near the breast, and no more. I was anxious to see what it had eaten, and on cutting it open found the front legs from the knees downwards of the goooral (Nemorhœdus Goral) I have the bones now; It took us the whole afternoon in getting the skin off.

The next day, 28th we had the Tent pitched about 8 miles further and on the way got several Blood Pheasants (Ithaginis cruentus) the cock is a lovely bird with its gray and white tail broadly margined with bright blood red and its pale green breast, the feathers with light shafts, and a blotch of deep blood red near the centre of each feather, it's no unusual thing to see cocks with three spurs on one leg and two or sometimes only one spur on the other leg. We also got a hen of the Impeyan Pheasant (Lophophorus impeyanus) two males Parus atkinsoni, three males one female (Hypopicus Hyperythrus) (three males Prœpyga pusilla two males one female Merula albocincta, one male one female Merula castanea.

On to Philoot the next day, the 29th, on the way one male Prœpyga caudata, two males Oreocincla molissima—one male three females Columba leuconota; at Philoot itself there were numbers of Pyrrhula erythrocephola sitting on a broken down shed and feeding round the bungalow like sparrows. All round Philoot there are bare hills at this time of the year the short grass is getting brown from frost. Numerous Buzzards Kestrils, Kites, and Crows circle and hover over these bare spots for rats, etc. I was anxious to get one of these rats as all these bare spots are covered with numerous holes one of my dogs in digging a hole unearthed two Lagomys roylei.

During this trip and in fact every time I have travelled on these high ranges I have come across large flocks of Corvus culminatus, always morning and evening vast numbers are to be seen sitting on the bare hills picking up something now and then. I could never find out what particular food took them in such numbers to those bleak hill tops. All I shot had some seeds and dry earthworms in their crops. All night from dusk, the Himalayan Wood Owl (Syrnium nivicolum) is heard hooting over these bare hills. We got several. On the morning of the 30th we left Philoot, crossed over the boundary into Independent Sikhim to Choon Bunjen—a short march. On the way besides Ceriornis satyra got three Pyrrhoplecta, epauletta, four Suthora nipalensis, three males two females of the Kokla Green Pigeon (Sphenocercs sphenura) (one male (Arboricola torqueola, two males Actinodura nipalensis, two males Pyrrhula nipalensis, one male Rimator malacoptilos and one female Prœpyga squamata—the next day, 1st October, we remained at Choon Bunjen, and after 11 A.M. my brother and I went up to the rocky hills above the bungalow—we put up several coveys of Blood Pheasant (Ithaginis cruenters) and bagged five, two males Propasser frontalis, one male Propyrrhula subhemachala Whilst sitting down to dinner that evening we heard the large Flying Squirrel (Pteromys magnificus) the bungalow being surrounded with trees and it being moonlight we went into the verandah and before long got a very fine specimen—male. 2nd October left for Dentam—part of the way there is heavy Bambo Jungle, in which we shot some Partridges (Arboricola torqueola) one male Bracypteyx cruralis) and one male Hodgsonius phœnicuroides though numbers of these short-wing are heard calling all round it is extremely difficult to procure any, haunting such thick underwood as they do—and keeping close to the ground in the darkest parts. I found the best plan was to go late in the evening just before dark, to the places they were heard calling in the day time, and by good luck one or two shots could be got as they came to some open space for a worm or insect. After leaving the bamboo-jungle, for about 5 miles to Dentam the whole country is cleared, there are numbers of small streams on the way with a little swamp here and there, in one of these I got a female Woodcock (Scolopax rusticola). Dentam is a small bungalow about 100 yards above the great Rungneet river. We stayed there on the 3rd, shot a few Mylophonnes temminckii. Two male, one female, Palœornis shisticep, one male Palœornis, javanicus, one male Ceryle guttata and in the evening one Ketupa flavipes 4th October left for Pemionchy a steady climb right up the hills after crossing the great Rungneet river on a shaky wooden bridge. We saw numbers of Palœornis Shisticeps on the way and shot a few; one female Harpactes Hodgsoni two Chrysopholegma flavincha, one male and one female one male Venilia pyrrhotis two male Æthopyga miles, one male Zoothera monticola on reaching the top of the hill the rain came down in torrents and as the bungalow was four miles away we had to hurry on. A mile away from the bungalow close to the Chang Chelling Monastery we came across, unmistakable footprints of a large tiger it had evidently gone along the road not ten minutes before us. We hurried on in hopes of getting a glimpse of it, but it was no use, the rain beat us and we were only too glad to get under shelter. It rained all night and all next day, the 5th, only clearing up at about 5 P.M. Pemionchee Monastery is built on the top of a hill about 150 yards from the bungalow a dirty place with some 120 dirty Lamas. The next morning the 6th, I beat two small stream below the bungalow and put up four Woodcocks (Scolapax rusticola), but only managed to get one—one that should have fallen got away—the dogs put up numbers of the Kalij Pheasant, which settled on the trees round about, five were shot, three hens and two cocks. We then left for Chongphung bustee, a short march of four miles at which place I got a good specimen of the Brown Eagle Buzzard (Archibuteo hemipilopus) a female Limnaetus kieneiri and several Kestril (Tinnunculus alaudarius) one male one female, Picus Cathpharius, one male Picus majaroides, one male one female, Criniger Flaveolus, one male, Alcurus striatus, two male, Garrulax cœculatus, one Dendrocitta frontalis. The villagers in the evening brought us presents of Murwa, rice, butter, eggs to and fowls for which we had of course, pay nearly double their actual value but being presents, we were supposed to fork out the rupees with a smiling face and a glad heart We were disturbed all night by dogs barking, and the village pigs coming into the tent. The next morning early we started for Melly bustee about ten miles, and had to cross a rather broad stream on a rickety bamboo bridge On the way down to the stream I got a couple, one male and female of the Rufous-throated Hill Partridge (Arboricola rufogularis) several Munia acuticauda one female Eulen us maculata. After crossing the stream we, had to climb straight up the hill by a pathway scarcely twelve inches wide now and again having to cross frightful landslips, it took us all day to get to Melly bustee without having fired a shot the whole way up. I would certainly not recommend anybody to go the way we went. One is too intent to save himself from tumbling headlong into the stream below to looking for new birds. When the tent came up and was pitched on a nice level bit in the village we soon made ourselves comfortable, the villagers were most hospitable bringing butter, eggs, etc., and helping the coolies to get fire wood.

We managed at this place to get a good old Lepcha sportsmen with a face like a shrivelled old monkey, with long matted hair and as thin as a knife, called Kyoung, who knew the country for miles round right up to the Snows, and who promised to show us numbers of wild sheep, the Shapik; only fifteen miles off. We had to stay at Melly on the day of the 8th to buy rice and things (or the coolies Nothing shot on the 8th except a few pheasants (Gallophasis melanotus) and a few Dendrocitta sinensis with 1 cuicurus scouleri and 1 male Sasia ochracea.

The next day, the 9th, we went and pitched in an oak forest about nine miles from Melly; not a bird was to be seen except a few Partridges (Aebotcicula Torquesla) some short wings and a redstart. There were numerous traces of bear and deer, but not one could we put up. At night the flying squirrels were all round us; we shot a few of both kinds Pteromys Magnificus and Pteromys alboniger. The first P. magnificus being a rich dark red, with a golden yellow mesial line, the under parts are orange red, the tail is orange red tipped with black. Length from nose to end of tail 38 inches. P. alboniger is silvery gray above and white underneath. Length 19½ inches, besides these we heard several kinds at owl but could get none.

The next morning, the 10th we left at about 8½ A.M. for Shampo about 15,000 feet elevation. The walking was terrible over rock across precipices. Our man Kyoung had told us before that he knew of a great rock under which we could stay, and that he had remained there for several days at a time snaring wild sheep. I got some good birds. We first came across a very large flock of Suthora fulvifrons and with two barrels of dust shot picked up nine birds. We then came on some six or seven Lophophanes dichrous and shot three. We also got some Lophophorus impeyanus and Ithaginis cruentus. About 1 P.M it commenced to snow and we had a hard time of it led by a Kyoung trying to get to his big rock—the coolies were far behind with our bedding and food—my brother and I with Kyoung tramped on, however, over most dangerous ground nearly blinded by the snow, which was now coming down fast and thick, and at 3½ P.M. reached the rock—Kyoung had told us the truth, that he had on a former occasion collected a lot of dry wood—had it not been for that word we would probably have been frozen during the night, as the coolies never appeared till next morning and we had no food and no bedding one of the Pheasants shot on the way had to be feathered. Sitting over the fire, we roasted portions on sticks, and this was our dinner with a little water. Kyoung however good naturedly got out his dirty bag out of which he took some Sutton. Kneaded to into a ball with some water in his wooden cup, and offered it to us, but we both refused knowing it to be such chokey stuff, I had tried it once before. Of course, there was no sleep that night the wind and snow were a caution. The men arrived next morning but it was snowing still and continued the whole day and night and never ceased till 12 o'clock the 12th October. We had a search for the wild sheep and saw one. I got two near the same place 6 months after We left on the 13th and came down to Coon forest, only too glad to get away; had it been bright we would have enjoyed it, but the snow, and after 12 o'clock the mist used to block out everything ten yards away.

The 14th we hurried down to Tingbrum, a small village with some six or seven houses Villagers as usual in the interior being most hospitable, bringing goats, eggs, murwa, etc.

At this place I got a solitary snipe (Gallinago solitaria) several Kalij Pheasants and the beautiful Nuthatch, three males and four females (Sitta formosa). We stayed there the 15th skinning birds and drying the specimens shot further up.

Sixteenth came on to Pemionchee and camped in an Oak Forest. On the way shot, one female Lumuœtus nipalensis, two males and one female Macropygia tusalia, one male Sicurus Gigantus, 2 males, Scinrus lokriah, one female, Sicurus McClellandi. The forest consisted of huge oaks laden with Acorns, Chestnuts and wild Walnuts, the Walnuts were lying below the trees more than a foot deep in some places. We also shot in the evening many Kalij Pheasants and the Rufous throated Hill Partridge (Arboricola Rufogularis).

17th. On past Dentam through the forest to Seroung at which place there is a large swamp in which we shot one Scolopax rusticola, one male and one female Gallinago. Nemoricola. In beating streams and swamps for Woodcock, only a single bird is flashed. I have never seen a couple rise from the same spot. Sometimes but very rarely a second one may be flushed some 60 yards or so from the first, whereas the Wood snipe (Gallinago nemoricola) always rise in couples, and offer the easiest shots imaginable, as they fly slowly and heavily. From Seroung we came on the 18th down to the Rumam River where we remained till the 20th shooting, and got some good birds one male two females of the Red billed Curlew (Ibidorhynchus struthersi) and several males and females of the Marganser (Mergus castor). In the bamboo jungle we shot (Gallus ferrugineus). After thoroughly drying all our specimens we returned to Darjeeling on the 21st October.

After returning we remained one month and then went for a long tramp of over two months right through Sikhim and through the Terai, collecting Birds and Mammals.

DARJEELING, 23rd July 1904.

Sixteen years ago, Lord Marcus Beresford wished to try John Day for the Grand International Hurdle Race at Croydon. He did not, however, want the result of the spin to be known all over the town before he had a chance to back the horse at a decent price.

For some time the touts had been on the qui vive for this trial, Lord Marcus, however, determined to outwit them. One night his lordship, accompanied by a little man who could ride—one of his old regiment—caught the last train to Epsom. After waiting about the stables some hours, the visitors, together with J. Jones, mounted their horses, and rode over to Sandown Park. It was a moonlight night, and each horseman took a separate route.

They had not been there long before the morning began to break, and preparations for the trial were made. Lord Marcus mounted John Day; the 7th Hussars man was put on Il Zingaro; and Jones rode Woodstock Everything went well, and John Day won the trial.

His lordship decided not to return to Epsom, but travelled by train to London. Before the morning had far advanced, however, some of the touts missed the object of their careful attentions. To guess the reason of his absence, and the place of trial as Sandown, was the work of a few minutes only. Quickly they proceeded to the place mentioned, but to their mortification they only met the horses walking home

Enraged at the manner in which they had been baffled, many of them began to wish themselves divers unnatural shapes and sizes; but one smarter than the rest, began to look the horses carefully over, and soon decided in his own mind that John Day was not altogether right. A second scrutiny convinced him that the affair was serious, and before the stables were reached he saw that the horse had split his pastern joint. He did not lose much time in wiring the news to London, and as none of the party connected with the trial were aware of the accident, Lord Marcus was first made acquainted with this useful hint by one of the very people whom he was congratulating himself upon outwitting.

But for this accident, John Day would undoubtedly have won the race at Croydon. Unfortunately for the stable they did not possess a second string capable of "doing the trick."

THURSDAY, 8th SEPTEMBER 1904.

A NATIONAL ZOOLOGICAL PARK FOR SCOTLAND.

MR. CHARLES STEWART, writing some time ago in the Nineteenth Century sketched the outline of a scheme which should appeal to naturalists and sportsmen at home. Inspired apparently by the example of the United States Government which have secured to the nation for all time the Yellowstone Park, the Yosemite Valley, and the famous Mariposa Grove of Big Trees in California, as public parks, Mr. Stewart urged the propriety of creating a "National Park" for Scotland. His idea is that the Woods and Forests Department or some other body should acquire a suitable tract of land "not less than 20,000 to 30,000 acres in extent and 50,000 acres would not be excessive", whose natural and characteristic beauties mark it out for preservation as does Killarney and other "show places." In the tract so acquired he would strictly preserve specimens of indigenous Scottish fauna, birds and fish : he enumerates the red, fallow and roe deer, hare, badger, otter, wildcat, fox and "minor quadrupeds" with the exception of the rabbit, who, we join Mr. Stewart in thinking an "undesirable": though whether it will prove possible to turn him out of this Eden and keep him out is a point upon which that resolute animal might have his own strong opinion. Mr. Stewart would preserve in the park, such birds as the capercailzie, blackcock, muirfowl, partridge, golden eagle, raven " and all the glorious tribe of sea eagle and sea hawk, and all the lesser native birds ": and in the streams the various salmonidæ should flourish under the care of pisciculturists.

Mr. Stewart's scheme appeals to us in the main, but we are much inclined to think that granted the piece of territory required, the internal administration would be a matter of difficulty. The otter is not going to forego the joys of fishing and fish diet in grateful recognition of sanctuary granted : nor can we expect that the fox and wild cat will lie down with the hare and "all the lesser native birds." The golden eagle we fear will appreciate the security of the park as a hunting ground when the young fallow and roe deer are about and will take due toll of the game birds in season and out. It might be found possible to divide up the park in such wise that the predatory mammals should be compelled to prey on victims set apart for them, but rapacious birds, whether of the falcon or the heron tribe, are harder of control, and, however cordially the scheme of the park were upheld by loyal visitors thereto, we fear that the difficulties of preservation would come from within rather than from without. It is fair to ask also, whether all the protéges named by Mr. Stewart stand in need of such jealous preservation. The red deer is guarded with sufficient jealousy already in the Scottish forests and political agitators notwithstanding, the vast areas of ground now reserved for sport are likely to remain for the purpose for which nature has marked them out. They pay better, far better, as deer forests than as sheep walks, and the head of sheep which many hundred square miles of mountain land would carry is too small to commend these tracts to the sturdiest, or greediest, of politician crofters. There is small danger of the red deer dying out so far as human foresight can discover ; but we quite agree with Mr. Stewart that the executive of his projected park would find a useful and remunerative opportunity to improve the stock. It is a matter of common knowledge that the trophies killed in the Scottish forests are not equal to those of a past generation : whether their decadence be due to the system of shooting the best heads, whereby the finest stags are denied the chance of perpetuating their species, or to the exclusion of the deer from the best feeding grounds in the interests of sheep, or to over preservation and inbreeding we shall not stop now to enquire. We know that there is a marked falling off and that anxious proprietors for some years past have sought the aid of new blood from Warnham and other English parks where the stags carry fine antlers and also from the German and Austrian forests. Mr. Stewart proposing to make his park a "forest reserve" in the sense that arboriculture would be practised, suggests that this offers suitable covert for red deer which, thriving on the superior feed and in the greater shelter, would improve in character and furnish valuable new blood wherewith to replenish the wild deer of Scotland. This appears to us a sound and practical idea and goes far to commend the main lines of his scheme to our attention. Fallow, as park deer, would be preserved in that capacity, though it may be suggested that there is no great necessity for doing it : nor are roe deer so far as our knowledge goes in much danger of extinction, though this woodland-loving species is not greatly beloved of the forester. Hares, whether brown or blue, have a tolerably strong tenure in Scotland, and the badger is commoner than most people suppose. The fox, holding none of the privileged position in the Highlands that is accorded him in hunting countries, and much as the extermination of the "tod" is desired, on the moors, we think he is likely to hold his own against all foes for long to come. The demand for foxes in thinly populated English countries, however, offers the National Park scheme another good opportunity : it would be very feasible to make fox-breeding one of its purposes to the end that M. F. H.'s who want foxes to turn down should know where they could obtain them in the sportsman-like certainty that their purchase was not doing an injury to brother masters elsewhere.

We feel compelled to look askance at the wild cat as a denizen of the proposed park. The desirability of preserving the remnant of the species from extinction in the interests of natural history we cordially concede ; but the hand of felis catus is against all and to establish him in a sanctuary amid beasts and birds weaker than himself would be to invite disaster. As well endeavour to preserve specimens of the habitual inebriate or criminal in a Sunday School ; the utmost we could hope would be that the preserved wild cat, with the natural perversity of his race, would decline interference with his personal affairs and speedily seek refuge elsewhere. It is an unfortunate coincidence that the only animal which stands in need of preservation should be the one upon which the controllers of Mr. Stewart's proposed park should feel compelled to turn the cold shoulder. Could the gentleman who has outlined this desirable scheme secure the utmost of his desires ("The island of Jura, about 90,000 acres in extent, or the island of Rum, about 43,000 acres, would, either of them, make a glorious National Park, and their acquisition is perhaps not wholly impossible") the detention of the wild cat would be assured ; but to the inevitable extinction of other species. Wild cats left to their own devices, breed freely and fast, and young ones are hearty eaters. The golden eagle—about the only living creature, we believe, for which the wild cat has a particle of respect—would be none the worse of a sanctuary and his conservative habits renders it highly probable that, once induced to take up his quarters in a suitable locality, he would remain there, devoting attention to domestic affairs year after year. His depredations on fellow-pensioners would be serious ; but the executive may find some consolation in the circumstance that the golden eagle is Boer like in his love of solitude : he will brook the existence of no other eyrie within many a mile of his own and the number of residents even on the utopia of Mr. Stewart's dreams —the island of Jura—would necessarily be limited.

The scheme is so attractive, the interest of such a sanctuary to the field naturalist would be so great, that we most heartily wish it might be brought into existence if only as an experiment. Our doubt concerning its practicability rests less on the difficulty of finance than it does on the internal dissensions which must arise with a population so mixed and so innately hostile. We may adopt a view too extreme in thinking that given an island for the purpose predatory species would banish others ; it is possible that nature would maintain an even hand and give us a most fascinating lesson in her ability to strike a balance among involved and hostile interests. She would be afforded an opportunity—man refraining from interference—of showing us how far species can perpetuate themselves when they have none but natural foes against which to contend : though Man (deprived of firearms and civilised appliances in the shape of traps) might fairly claim his right to a place in such a park to play his part in the great game of existence. He, bereft of such aids, would not be able to do much for or against any species, so perhaps we may leave our own species out of the reckoning.

ROARING.

IT is probable that there will ever be difference of opinion on the question whether "roaring" is or is not hereditary, and yet it may very well be that both sides are absolutely correct in the view held, and that, paradoxical as it may seem, the malady is and is not hereditary. The explanation of this apparent contradiction is to be found if one enquires a little more deeply into what is really meant by the word "hereditary" and the nature and cause of the disease or defect, according as the roaring is pronounced and permanent or is but slight and intermittent.

That there is a tendency for offspring, whether of human beings or of the lower animals, to exhibit in their anatomy or character peculiarities, defects and qualities which were noticeable in their parents or one of them is undoubtedly true, indeed this tendency is in fact largely relied upon in the Darwinian theory of evolution, but nevertheless it must always be a matter involving considerable doubt and discrepancy of opinion how far this tendency is due to factors such as example, environment and the like on the one hand, and on the other how far it is referable solely to the blood or vital energy of the parent. Judaism could hardly be called a matter of heredity but rather of example and education, while tuberculosis would seem to be directly and solely attributable to fault or impurity in the blood of the progenitor ; and again such matters as alcoholism or kleptomania may no doubt be transmitted from parent to progeny directly through procreation, or may result chiefly from the example of the parent or the environment of the issue during its early years, and it would not be logical to exclude either factor entirely nor possible to assess the relative effect of each. So with the subject of these notes, if by expressing the opinion that roaring is hereditary it is intended to mean that a sire or dam who is a roarer will breed only or chiefly offspring similarly affected, and that such offspring cannot escape the malady whatever attention and forethought is devoted to their health and bringing up, this would be nothing else than "the falsehood of extremes;" but if the meaning is that such offspring is more liable to be attacked by the disease than the issue of thoroughly sound parents, this can be substantiated by such a number of single instances as to justify the opinion to the fullest extent; and doubtless with this meaning of the word "hereditary" conceded, the views of both parties would be found to be in accord.

The subject of roaring is referred to in the Horse Breeders' Handbook compiled by the late Joseph Osborne ("Beacon") when mentioning Humphrey Clinker, foaled in 1822, as the first great horse that he remembered seeing. "What caused me to remember him (he writes) was the noise he made when led out, and which was, I believe, the first case of roaring known in Ireland; but so little was then heard of this malady and its effects that excellent judges sent mares to him, with the result of breeding Bran, Thump, Famine, Rush, and Ennui ; and none of these were affected in their wind, nor were their progeny. We have here a case in which roaring was decidedly not hereditary." Melbourne, another son of Humphrey Clinker, had not the reputation of being a roarer, and his grandson from Queen Mary, Blair Athol, was certainly not ; but the latter's son Prince Charlie, the Prince of the T. Y. C., was undoubtedly affected to a pronounced degree, though this did not hinder him from winning the Two Thousand Guineas of 1875.

Mr. Allison, the "Special Commissioner" of the Sportsman, in one of his highly interesting articles, expresses his own opinions on the matter in the following words:—"I do not believe that there is any hereditary taint in roaring any more than there is in a curby hock or a twisted joint; but the conformation of the jaw and neck which predisposes to roaring is, of course, liable to be inherited, just as are the curby hock or twisted joint. Many a roarer, however, is an animal of excellent conformation, but has been affected in the wind as the after math of fever or influenza. In such a case roaring is not in any sense inherited and is not at all likely to be transmitted." These lines have been quoted in full as being one of the very latest of expert opinions on the subject, given by a man who is entitled to speak with authority and whose views cannot but command the greatest respect.

One more authority may be usefully referred to, namely, Mr. William Day, who deals with the matter in his "Racehorse in Training." There Mr. Day states that he found from his experience that horses which had inflammation of the lungs or a long illness from strangles, were more subject to it than others, but he instances one case of a complete cure being effected. This was Brigantine who in the July of her two-year-old career became an undoubted roarer, but in the spring of the next year "the disease gradually diminished and ultimately left her as sound as the day she was foaled, indeed, in time to enable her to win the Oaks and the Ascot Cup in the same year, 1869." The chief cause of the complaint is believed by Mr. Day to be sudden changes of temperature and want of proper sanitation and ventilation in the stables, and he attributes the smaller number of roarers of the present day compared with some years back to the greater attention which is now given to these important matters and the fresh air treatment which is far more freely indulged in now than formerly.

With the examples of Humphrey Clinker, Pocahontas and Ormonde all of whom were affected by the disease very severely, it seems safe to say that the mere fact of a horse or mare being a roarer is no reason why he or she should not be bred from, for what would our Stud Book be now had Humphrey Clinker, and Pocahontas, not to mention, Prince Charlie and others, not been put to the stud and so deprived us of Melbourne, Stockwell, King Tom, and many another whose names are to be found in nearly all present day pedigrees? And even Ormonde, short as was his stud career at home, sired Orme from whom come Flying Fox, Orchid, and Duke of Westminster. The conclusion seems to be that in greater attention to healthy environment and ventilation with a constant supply of fresh air in time of heath, and more careful and scientific treatment in the time of sickness, is to be found the true antidote for the disease, and that with these points studied by breeders and trainers they need have no scruples about breeding from a roarer, so long only as he or she on the race course earned a reputation meriting retirement to the stud.

Sporting Notes.

THE sport at the Tollygunge Gymkhana, which never promised too well, was rendered worse than there was any necessity for by the most unhandsome way in which a positive deluge selected that particular afternoon on which to descend. We understand that the energy of the executive was severely taxed in order to provide a full card at all, and surely their perseverance deserved a better reward than to have the proceedings drowned out shortly after the commencement. The attendance was naturally poor and many of the general public, no doubt, were inclined to echo the words of the song, "why did I leave my 'appy 'ome" since the accommodation for non-members of the Club is, in the event of a wet day, not of the best.

There were six events on the card and all filled more or less, though the fields were not large. We were amused to notice that by some mistake the five-furlong race for horses, the property of members of the Calcutta Light Horse, was described on the "c'rect cyard" as "a handicap steeplechase, 1½ miles."

Proceedings opened with the Novice Stakes for which Cambridge, on the strength of ancient history, was installed favourite. Plenty of money, however, was forthcoming for Grey Dawn, late Plinlimmon. Cambridge got away badly and was evidently not in galloping condition, as he never could catch the leaders, of whom Grey Dawn won very comfortably from Bucephalus.

Three only turned out for the Pony Plate, Flush being the general selection, though Mignon, Mr. Evers' recent importation from England, was also fancied. The attractions of his stable proved too much for the latter at the first turn, so we were not given a chance to see what he can do, but he moves in good form and looks like turning out useful. Little Glencoe led to the distance where Flush came away and won very easily by three lengths.

Gauntlet was the popular selection out of the field of five for the Opening Handicap, and he proved equal to the occasion, Mr. Turner landing his second race of the day nicely by a length and a half from Nicotine.

At this point in the proceedings the rain came down in earnest and the remaining two races were viewed under a veritable water chute.

In the All Comers' Stakes Irish was backed at all sorts of fancy prices up to 4-1 on, a figure at which it is not easy to become rich quickly. She gave her supporters no anxiety, however, as she won from end to end, with that chronic disappointer, First Guide second.

In spite of the wet, the best field of the day appeared in the Charger Stakes. Cheer Up was looked upon as the pick of the basket, but he succumbed to a real outsider in Mr. Pritchard's Claymore, who, neatly ridden by Mr. Turner, snatched the verdict by a neck on the post. Details elsewhere.

That egregious litigant Mr. F. F. Goodliffe has failed in his further attempts to harass the Rangoon Race Stewards. Last Monday the judges, sitting on the Appellate Side, adjudicated upon his appeal from a decree passed on the Original Side by Justice Chitty dismissing the suit filed against the Rangoon Race Stewards for an injunction to restrain them from demolishing the Old Race Stand and expending the Race funds on the building of a new course. The Court found the appellant had failed to establish any proprietary right whatever in the property or Race funds, and he was therefore not entitled to sue alone or jointly. The Court also held that the argument that the Race Stewards were agents of the Rangoon racing public fell to the ground. The appeal was accordingly dismissed with costs.

The reports of Mr. Dubbs and Major Wanliss as to the existence of veritable trout in the Helmund, should attract the attention of those who have failed to introduce the European fish into our mountain streams, as most of the failures may be due to some important difference in the waters of the stream whence the ova are taken and that to which they are transferred on arrival in India. But were it possible to procure the mature fish from Central Afghanistan, breeding bids fair to be attended with success, and as the present ruler of Kabul has shewn himself more inclined to tolerate visitors than any of his predecessors, no great difficulty should be experienced in obtaining the stock wanted. We hear from time to time of some scheme being entertained with regard to forming reservoirs on the Sutlej at the back of Simla, which should afford excellent breeding grounds and with water presumedly identical with that of the Helmund, while the elevation should also secure the same conditions as to temperature and climate, so that if we cannot have the actual speckled beauty of the old country, there is every reason to anticipate we may provide ourselves with a prototype fully equal to him either from a sporting or gastronomic point of view. There are those that maintain our failures in trout acclimatisation are due to the more intense light the exotic is subjected to than he is accustomed to in his own habitat, more than in difference in the constituents of the waters in the temperate and torid zones : but with fish born and bred under tropical glare this surmise would not hold good. It would be no very onerous undertaking to transport a score or two of Kabul trout thence to the suggested breeding grounds.

Premonitary signs of the approach of the cold weather are not wanting, as the Dibrugarh paper mentions the advent of the hoopoo. It has also been brought to our notice that the dyals, which frequent the south side of Government House gardens (Calcutta) each cold weather have put in an appearance. Perhaps one or other of our war correspondents with the "Mission" might beguile the tedium of waiting the Dalai Lama's return by taking a stroll round the Scorpion Lake South of Lhassa and letting us know whether the waterfowl are exhibiting signs of a movement in our direction.

The Madras Gymkhana holds a race meeting on the Island on Saturday, the 10th instant.

There has been some talk of getting up an angling contest between the roach fishers of England and France, and we have heard it stated that this would be rather a soft thing for the British anglers. We are by no means confident of this, as some of the Paris fishermen are extremely expert, as anyone who has seen them wielding their huge rods can udge. A contest which took place the other day at Chatellerault, on the Vienne, will give our readers some idea of the enthusiasm of French anglers. On the day appointed the Mayor of Chatellerault, heading a procession consisting of a band, the Corporation, and various societies with banners flying, marched to the station to meet a train from Paris bearing nearly 2,000 anglers laden with appliances for catching fish. At the public square lots were drawn for places, and the line of anglers extended for about four miles. The contest was started and terminated by means of bugles, and when time was called it was found that some 80lbs. of fish had been captured. The best catches were a carp and a bream of about 13oz. each, and numerous eels of half a pound. It is estimated that over 10,000 people watched the match, and the proceedings terminated with a grand banquet and a dance.

Wads which break up or are consumed on the explosion of the charge in a gun have at various times been tried, but they do not seem to have materially affected the pattern or penetration of the shot. In the working of artillery the charge was formerly put into duck bags, but it was found that the material was not entirely consumed on discharge, and sometimes pieces were found in the breech of the gun in a smouldering state. Now, as the result of experiments, the bags are made from a cloth woven from threads obtained in a process very similar to that followed in the manufacture of artificial silk. The difference is that the artificial silk is made from cellulose. In the manufacture of each the glutinous compound is forced through tiny holes in a steel plate, forming tiny threads which, when they become dry, are exceedingly strong ; indeed, it is claimed that when spun their tensile strength is equal to that of silk, which they resemble in appearence, their colour being creamy white. Furthermore, these threads are said to be very similar to the product of the silkworm. It is further claimed that this cloth, if worn by women as silk is worn would outwear the latter, so tough and flexible is it ; but this is not likely to be done, for a yard of the material will burn like a flash on being exposed to the flame of a match, leaving scarcely any ash. It is probable that if experiments were made with gun wads made from a similar material, it might result in an improvement in the shooting of cartridges loaded with such materials.

Our Poona correspondent writes :—Where racing is going to stop on this side of India it is really hard to calculate at the present rate of popularity, for the seventh extra was the best of this season and entries approached the phenomenal. Thirty-one entries for an Arab race which the executive had of necessity to make two races of, and twenty-two entries for, an Arab Closed Race, of which sixteen actually drew up in front of Mr. O'Gorman at the gate !

Mr. Cursetjee's handicapping was annoyingly good, and despite the wide range of weights the public were completely mystified and finishes close and in most cases the ruck were close up in a cluster. And such results constitute ideal handicaps.

A deal of money went on Bandit II. belonging to the evergreen and popular Colonel J. Anderson, who must have been racing before most of us were out of our leading strings. But even the demon Jimmy Robinson's artistic services could not bring the soft thing off and Caravan won.

In the 5 furlong Lilliput Handicap for 13-3 Arabs the public refused to believe little Yerbo with the nice galloping impost of 6st. 9lbs. could win from such useful ones as Mooreed and Mint, both of whom are in the winning vein this season. But the feather weight repeated the victory of the other day somewhat comfortably.

A baker's dozen of beautiful dwarf thoroughbreds turned out for the Pony Plate over 7 furlongs and there was a very big stable commission out on the lovely Psalm with 9st. 13lbs. chiefly composed of Jimmy Robinson up. That little wonder Russley Rose too had a large following. But Come Back very neatly steered by young Elliott came away inside the distance and must have helped the booking fraternity's accounts considerably.

The second half of the 31 entries gave a good looking grey Arab of Talib, the leviathan Arab dealer a chance of scoring a victory with a neat little bay belonging to the owner of Titus II. runner up.

Eleven horses then occupied public attention and a neat little carbine horse called Carburton owned by Aga S. Shah gave that popular sportsman a much wanted win as he has been completely out of Fortune's favour of late. Little Kamad the stable left nothing to chance and drew out half way up the distance winning cleverly. The veteran Dumbbell who has come back into condition and form, was second and the useful Gum third.

Fickle Dame Fortune evidently determined to make up for past unkindness promptly showered further blessings on Aga Shamsudin's head the blood like pony Arabistan running as honest as the proverbial daylight and winning comfortabiy from Hyderi with whom, it is said, the stable anticipated bringing off a big coup.

Proceedings were brought to a close with the Closed Civil and Military Plate, and it was an unexpected and gratifying sight to see 16 really excellent ponies turn out and only one professional among the riders ! Titus II. refused to accept the Handicapper's high compliment of 14st. 7lbs. though several distinguished welter weights were mentioned as candidates for the honour. The handicapping was one of Mr. Cursetjee's marvels of skill, Avatar with 12st. 3lbs winning cleverly from Surhan 8st. 9lbs. ridden by Mr. J. Anderson, son of the distinguished Veterinary Surgeon and Toby 9st. with Melsom's professional services third and practically the whole of the rest of the performers in a bunch within a length or so. A delightful day's racing.

The Poona Junior Polo Tournament had rather an unsatisfactory ending. Of the two teams left in for the final, namely, the "A" and "B" teams of the 33rd Cavalry, the "B" team scratched, and "A" team walked over. This happened at Poona some time ago when two teams from the same regiment were left in for the finals.

We remind our readers that first entries for the Mussoorie Autumn Races close next Monday, the 12th instant ; first entries for the Jubbulpore entries on Saturday, the 10th, and third entries for the Civil Service Cup on Thursday, the 15th instant.

We publish elsewhere the entries for the Calcutta Fourth Monsoon Meeting which, on the whole are highly satisfactory. The Maidan Plate and the Belvedere Plate have each drawn ten entries, and as there is no reason to suppose that many will be withdrawn, good fields should result. The latter race especially shows a great improvement upon the similar event at the third meeting. The Pony Hurdle Race has only just filled, six being the number, and one at least of those a doubtful starter. Where by the way is our old friend Moss Rose ? There are ten named for the September Plate, including some pretty hot stuff in Hello, Bell Brand, and Certitude. The Pony Handicap has drawn seven and the Entally Plate eleven. In the absence of the weights we cannot, of course, indulge in an attempt to pick probable winners.

Athletic Notes.

THE Northern India Racket Tournament commences at Murree on the 19th instant. Four events figure on the programme—The Open Singles Championship, the Regimental Doubles Challenge Cup, the Public School Doubles and Handicap Doubles. Entries close on the 16th instant.

Our Bombay Correspondent writes :—The past week has been a singularly dull one from a sporting point of view, but this is only a lull before a storm, as in a short time we shall be plunged in a vortex of excitement when the Rovers' Football Tournament commences.

The last match of the Harwood League was played on Saturday last, the contestents being the Royal Garrison Artillery and the Rovers. The Gunners throughout proved themselves to be the better trained team and ran out victors by three goals to nil. The Cup goes to the "A" Cheshire team who went right through the season without losing a game. The team is nearly a tournament one, as only three changes will be made in its composition for the Rovers' Tournament. Some idea of its strength will be gathered when I mention that a couple of years ago the Cheshires held their own against the pick of regimental teams in India at Delhi during the Durbar Tournament which they won easily. They are naturally warm favourites for the tournament, and it will be a remarkably fine team that will stand my chance of taking them down. The R. G. A. have experienced wretched luck this season, having lost five of their best men, all backs, four through injuries and one through disqualification. None of the crocked players are likely to be able to play in the tournament, and it is doubtful if the player who was disqualified will be allowed to turn out again. A practice game on Tuesday evening between the Gymkhana and the Rovers' elevens ended in a pointless draw. The form displayed by the Gymkhana team was very poor, and it is one of the curiosities of the Bombay season that a club boasting of eight hundred members should be unable to put anything like an average team in the field.

I learn on good authority that the Parsees will not have the services of A. H. Mehta, the famous bowler, for their return match with the Presidency at Poona next week, that player having accepted employment under a Native State, which he has to take up at once. K. M. Mistri will not be able to get away from Patiala and Colabawalla was so knocked about and bruised by Deas' bowling in the Bombay match that it is feared he will be unable to don flannels in the return fixture. Mehta's place in the team will probably be filled by Kapadia, while should Colabawalla not be able to play his place will go to J. N. Mody.

Among the passengers who arrived by the mail on Saturday were : W. W. Drew, the old Carthusian and Bombay Presidency cricketer ; Captain M. G. Heath of the famous Queen's Regimental team ; Lieutenant C. D. G. Lyon, the old Wellingtonian and Poona cricketer : A. W. Pope, the Bengal cricketer.

The mounted sports on Wednesday were well attended and the programme more interesting than usual. The opening event—Turk's head practice and tilting at the ring with the sword—was won by Mr. Macnamara with Messrs. F. R. Hill and D. Graham second and third, nine others also competing. Three sections competed in the tent-pegging competition which was won by Messrs. D. N. Graham, St. J. Graham, W. E. Crum, and A. Barraclough. The Ladies' equitation race resulted in a dead heat between Mrs. DeSoane and Mrs. Dyson. Not much interest attached to the remaining events on the programme.

Apropos of the return Presidency match at Poona next week I learn that Major F. W. D. Quinton, the well-known Hampshire cricketer, who is stationed at Belgaum with his battery, has received an invitation to play for the Presidency, but has declined on the ground that he has had no practice this year. E. R. Udal, the fast bowler, who is on a short visit to Poona from Bangalore, would also have received an invitation to assist the Presidency but for the fact that there is a rule to the effect that no player can be included in the team who is not a bonâ fide resident of some station in the Presidency or Command for a period of three months. Thus is a good player lost to the Presidency, although the Parsees are allowed to go as far afield as Patiala, Rampur, Ajmere, and other places outside the Presidency for players. F. L. Sprott, the old Presidency player, who is stationed at Karachi has received an urgent summons to come and assist the Presidency, and has, I am glad to say, notified his acceptance of the invitation. Captain M. D. Wood, another old player, who is at Quetta, has also received an invitation, and may be able to accept. This is splendid. If the above players can play, the team with Greig, Curtis, Wood, Sprott, Deas, Carroll, and probably Copplestone and Monteath, will be every bit as strong as it was in the old days.

A Rugger match, played on Friday between the United Services and the Casuals, in which both sides played two men short, resulted in a win for the Services by a goal and two tries to a try. The forwards on both sides played a remarkably good game, while of the backs Fischer for the Casuals, and Jones, the old Merchiston Castle three-quarter, were seen to great advantage.

A Soccer match, which excited considerable interest, was that played on Saturday, the 3rd, between the "A" and "B" teams of the Cheshire Regiment. The game was regarded as being of great importance by the players, as on the form shown in it would depend the composition of the Cheshires' Tournament team. The "A" team playing a quiet gentlemanly game held the "B" team with ease, and at hardly any period of the game were they ever seriously extended. The backs and forwards worked like clock-work and the goal-keeper was as safe as the Bank of England. There were individual bits of play by the "B" team quite as good as anything else in the match, but the team as a whole could not hold a candle to "A" team, who ran out victors by three goals to nil.

The return cricket match between the Bombay Gymkhana and the Parsee Gymkhana was a fearful fiasco. Saturday being a bank holiday the match, which was played on the Parsee Gymkhana ground, was a whole-day one. The Bombay Gymkhana had to take the field without their regular wicket-keeper, Philbrick, and in his absence the side suffered severely, no less than four easy catches being missed at the wicket. Milne, who re-appeared in the team after an absence of some weeks, with his usual luck won the toss for his side, a feat, I may mention, he has now accomplished ten times out of eleven, and of course took first service of an absolutely true wicket. Things went fairly well at the start, the first four batsmen all looking like making a big score, though only two of them, Major C. G. Carnegy and Lieutenant A. P. Langhorne, who compiled 33 and 21, respectively, succeeded in making more than 20. This early promise was, however, not maintained and a rot setting in, the last seven batsmen could only total 22 between them. It was a poor exhibition in the extreme and all the more so as the Parsee Gymkhana had not the services of their best bowlers, Mehta and Bulsara. What followed, however, was worse, as when the Parsees went in they made hay of the bowling, Coombs, Ainsworth, Milne, Powell, and Stileman all being severely punished. In two hours and three-quarters the home team rattled up 330, Belgaumwalla and J. N. Moody each making a century, the former being not out and the latter retiring. Only six wickets actually fell, and the total of the Parsee Gymkhana is the highest they have ever made against the Bombay Gymkhana, while on no previous occasion have two individual scores of a hundred by Parsee batsmen been made in these matches.

Charley Mitchell, the well-known pugilist, was on the 18th ultimo, sitting on a windowsill of a house in New York laughing at a story, when he overbalanced himself, and fell thirty feet. Luckily his fall was broken by a shed, from the roo. of which he rolled on to the ground.

When picked up he shook himself and laughed, and it was found that he was practically unhurt.

Now that the cricket season is nearly over, and Surrey are as firmly embedded as ever in the mire of misfortune, writes "Ranger" in the I. S. and D. News, people are again asking how this once-famous county has contrived to fall so low in the world of first-class cricket. The explanation can be summed up in two words, "Bad management." For a long time Surrey's crying need has been a strong captain, and yet the committee has virtually prevented the existence of so valuable an asset. Everybody knows the influence which a leader of the right type can bring to bear on his county's cricket. If he be allowed to take the responsibilities of the team on his own shoulders, to choose his side, to try what men he likes, and to possess the clear confidence of the committee, he can make his county powerful. But the Surrey committee insists on governing the team itself. When that team is out on the field, it is free from the committee's influence. And, as it has no real leader, it is all at sixes and sevens. As proof of his statement, I may mention an incident which happened a few years ago. After a long stand by the opposing side, the then Surrey captain tossed the ball to a celebrated professional batsman, who could also bowl a bit, and asked him to try his luck. "I'm not going to bowl," said the celebrity, as he threw back the ball. The captain wanted to drop that man out of the team for a time, but the committee would not hear of such a thing. The idea of offending one of the best batsmen in England, no matter what breach of etiquette he had committed, appalled them. Consequently, the professional at once became cock of the walk, armed with the comforting knowledge that, whenever he gave the captain a metaphorical smack in the eye, the committee would support him. He went on batting, but the captain did not carry any further this farcical attempt to lead the team. That the task is still an unsatisfactory one is proved by the fact that Surrey have had nine captains this season.

The Durand football camp opened at Simla on the 1st instant and already regimental teams are getting in their practice pending the opening of the tournament on the 19th instant. The Simla Volunteers have entered a second team.

The final game in the Rangoon Football League competition was played on the 3rd instant when the King's Regiment met the Gymkhana, the latter winning by a goal to nil. Lady Thirkell White, wife of the Chief Justice, presented the cup and medals to the winning team. The King's Regiment and the Burma Oil Company team have tied for second place, so an extra match will be played to decide the winners of the silver medals.

Among the results of important cricket fixtures at home last week are the following: Yorkshire and the South Africans drew; the Gentlemen of the South beat the Players of the South by 44 runs; the match Kent vs. Surrey was abandoned owing to rain.

Mr. William Renshaw, "the father of lawn tennis," and one of the finest players of the game, died suddenly on the 12th ultimo at Swanage from heart disease. Between the years 1881 and 1887, when he held the championship of England, his supremacy was unbroken. In 1889, after a rest, he again won the championship. He and his brother Ernest, who was also a great player and was champion in 1888, were once as famous as the Baddeleys, Dohertys and the Allens became in later years.

The Poona District Hockey Tournament was brought to a conclusion on the 2nd instant when the 103rd Mahrattas met the 87th Punjabees in the final at Ghorpuri. The game was fast and well contested throughout. The Mahrattas scored a goal in the first half, and put on another when play was resumed after the interval. Then the 87th scored but the 103rd netted a third goal and though they obtained another goal the Punjabees were unable to get level and the 103rd won by three goals to two. Major-General Richardson presented the Cup to the winners.

The Aga Shah Rookh Shah has presented a silver cup for competition in a billiard handicap, game of 200 up, to be played in the Poona Gymkhana. The following are entries and handicaps :—

Mr. Allan ...	...	−50	Mr. Green ...	...	+60
Mr. Carrol ...	...	+20	Col. Cadell ...	...	+60
Mr. Thew ...	...	+20	Mr. Batty ...		+60

Details of the Calcutta Golf Club Quoit Tournament appear in an advertisement published further on in to-day's paper. Entries close to-morrow.

Our Poona correspondent writes :—After a series of crushing defeats the Poona Gymkhana XI found some one they were able to slaughter, a wandering team from the mofussil Khandeish confidingly offering themselves as fly to the spider. A proud day for Poona it must have been. But the poor oppressed white man will take some little time to recover from the knock out blow of the Presidency match. And even Sweet Revenge seems beyond the dreams of Hope.

However lest the Gymkhana should suffer from "swelled head" as the result of their recent conquest, the Elphinstone Cricket Club, a very useful team of Zoroastrian performers, beat the Poona eleven (again it must in justice be mentioned without Captain Greig) after an interestingly close four-innings contest by the narrow margin of 34 runs.

A curious match was that with the Heaven-born Civilian representatives who, collapsing sadly in their first attempt with a total of 89, of which Extras contributed no less than 30, Pro pudor! pulled themselves together most laudably in their second venture to the tune of 229. but the effort was all too late, and Brains yielded to Muscle to the extent of a seven-wicket defeat.

The members of the Bombay Civil Service gave their annual ball at the Gymkhana Club and it was as great a success as usual, everything being of the very best. Dulce est discipere in loco. The "heaven-elect" ones have been on their annual week's frivol and have sportingly tackled Poona in various events, cricket, golf and tennis, but unfortunately with, I fear, unvarying want of success.

The Bombay Gymkhana executive advertise their fourteenth Annual Meeting for the 10th October and following days: the Mounted Sports taking place on the 12th, 13th and 15th idem. We remind athletes that entries close on the 24th instant. Any Calcutta men going over?

The C. R. C. regatta next Saturday is not likely to teem with interest or even produce a race worth looking at. The preparation for the Senior Fours has been of the sketchiest description owing to absentees, the weather, and a general slackness that seems to have overtaken the entrants. The Senior Pairs has fallen through. There may be Scratch Fours and a Canoe Race (entries on the bank) wherewith to fill in the afternoon. The crews, for the Senior Four sare :—

The Calcutta Rangers' Club have arranged for a "Smoker" at the Dalhousie Institute to-morrow night.

Entries for the Calcutta Rugby Challenge Cup Tournament close to-morrow. So far there are the West Ridings, Calcutta F. C., King's Own, United Services, Customs, City, Allahabad, Gloucesters, and the Armenians—nine in all.

The final game in the Richardson Football Tournament was played at Poona between the Right half of the A. and S. Highlanders and the Left half of the East Lancashire Regiment, the Highlanders winning by two goals to one.

London Week by Week.

London, Friday, 19th August 1904.

Parliament was prorogued on Monday. Just before Black Rod came to desire the attendance of the commons (about 20 members) in the Lords Chamber to hear the King's speech Mr. Crooks, the labour member, seized the opportunity to present a new bill for women's suffrage; solemnly replying "To-morrow" to the formal question as to when the second reading would be taken. Thus appropriately did the session end. A medical man has drawn attention to the phenomenon which attends the closing weeks of each session: honourable members grow irritable and captious, honourable tempers grow short, and honourable manners decline, the whole tone of the proceedings being lowered. That sensible medicine man attributes the degeneration to nervous fatigue: he thinks, and perhaps justly, that honourable members grow weary of listening to one another's speeches, grow impatient under the wordy deluge of destorted fact and twisted statement. "M. D." puts the case for the remedy very temperately: he thinks if the session ended with July, it were well and if the House always rose at 11 P.M. it were better. In a word what is wanted is less futile and obstructive talk and more honest endeavour to forward the country's business. Which is platitude.

Interest in the proceedings at Lhassa is more than ever eclipsed this week by the attention with which we follow the course of events in the Chinese coast. Even the proceedings of Russian cruisers nearer home, they have been stopping more British vessels as of course you have heard, command small meed of public notice: the reason being, partially no doubt, the sub-consciousness that the day when Russian cruisers will have excuse for these high handed doings is very near its end. The Reshitelni incident which promised sensational developments earlier in the week seems to be sinking back into its true focus. The vigorous protests of the Russian diplomats are rather discounted by the definite statement from Tokio that the capture of the destroyer followed upon the heels of the discovery that her armament had not been removed. So the affair resolves itself into a case of one side's word against the word of the other: the fact that General Stössel's wife and children, refugees from Port Arthur, were on board the Reshitelni does not perhaps greatly affect the principal aspect of the affair, though one may fairly ask what was the destination of these passengers when they embarked. As for the capture of the boat by Japan, the Russian fleets in the Far East are now practically non-existent and the situation of one destroyer does not greatly affect the situation as a whole.

Meeting yesterday a friend who knows more about Tibet and its people than most men I sought his views on the present situation at Lhassa. (It was the day before yesterday we heard that Colonel Younghusband had taken a house: I hope it was the best the city of sanctity, and dirt, could offer, that British prestige may be upheld). My informant thinks the situation one calculated to cause anxiety: he points out that the traditional policy of the Tibetans is to wait: and go on waiting. In three weeks the bad weather will set in and a few weeks later the passes will be closed by snow: the Tibetans know that our force will be then dependent on the locality for supplies and the game will be pretty much as they elect to play it. The Dalai Lama is reported to have given orders to get rid of the Mission at any cost: it is much to be hoped his orders will be obeyed, but if the Mission is going to wait for the indemnity to be paid over in addition to getting the treaty signed, it is likely to wait long.

The Archbishop of Canterbury has written a remarkably graceful and tactful letter to Principal Rainy and the Rev. Murdo Macqueen, the leaders or representatives of the churches in Scotland, offering his services as arbitrator or rather as peacemaker. He writes "as a Scotchman and an independent student of these particular questions" who would regard it as a sacred privilege to do anything towards bringing about a settlement. His Grace has a difficult task before him if his offer be accepted: but from all one reads and hears acceptance is not very probable. One side is flushed with victory and its spokesmen sound a pardonable note of triumph which is not very conciliatory: the other wrestles with bitter chagrin and disappointment. The agents of the victorious Free Church in correspondence with the agents of the united body, do not mince matters. The former, they say approach the proposition for some temporary arrangement with the desire to do what is fair and reasonable "but it must be kept in view that parties are no longer in the region of litigation where compromise might have been possible and expedient, but that our clients have been irrevocably adjudged the trustees and beneficiaries of the trusts in question." 'Tis the voice of the top dog: who shall blame it?

The prospect of seeing electric traction applied to the Underground Railway has stimulated a demand for something else. There be those who urge that there should be an all night service for the benefit of the classes whose work keeps them in harness till well on the small hours. I fancy that newspaper men, compositors, and engineers living in the western suburbs form a very small pr portion of the sixty million passengers carried annually by the Underground. The Great Eastern and other lines which tap the cheaper suburbs have, I believe, run trains in the small hours for some considerable time. Those who dwell within hearing, and shaking, of the Underground would not, I conceive, welcome an all night service of trains. Reductions in fares are also urged, but it would be a strange Railway Company that cut down its fares save under stress of competition. It is due to the rivalry of the Tube I presume that you can now travel from High Street, Kensington: to Liverpool Street and back, first class, for seven pence: one can't in reason ask for anything much cheaper than that.

The Opening General Meeting of the British Association took place at Cambridge on Wednesday. Mr. Balfour delivered a presidential address "Reflections suggested by the New Theory of Matter:" needless to say it was Philosopher Balfour at his most philosophical. I don't profess to understand his train of reasoning: and presuming that you have read the address, you wouldn't believe me if I did. One phrase in the three colums strikes the ordinary mind as needing explanation "It may seem singular that down to, say, five years ago our race has without exception lived and died in a world of illusions have been ..... about what men see and handle, about those 'plain matters of fact' among which common sense daily moves with its most confident step and most self-satisfied smile." It strikes me that the Vice-Chancellor, who moved the vote of thanks for the address was himself more than a little puzzled by some of the glowing periods to which he had been lending a doubtless attentive ear.

From the Premier's "Reflections" one turns with relief to the comparative simplicity of the Fiscal Problem. (Don't be alarmed, I am not going to prose on this topic). Mr. Chamberlain is going to take the field, or the floor. again on 5th October, and a subject which has never been long absent from our minds will be made the business of the autumn.

Among all our Imperial complexities imagine that movements of peoples industrially antagonistic to one another form one of the most difficult questions for the man at the wheel to decide. The rivalry of the natives of India and of white traders in the Transvaal offers a case much in point. The colonials, naturally enough object to the incursion of bunnias and people who live on nothing a day and undersell them in every department of trade: and the Government holds itself bound to care for the interests of black man equally with those of white. Yet it does seem that this principle of equality may be misapplied: we must have a strong white population in the Transvaal if we are to develop, nay, to hold the country: and it cannot be expedient to let the native of India oust the Britisher. It is notoriously difficult enough for any but wealthy Europeans to make ends meet at all in the Transvaal, so costly is living, and it would seem that, unless measures be adopted to control and restrict immigration from your side, a very grave situation will be created.

The annual report of the Post Office affords its usual treat to them that revel in large figures. The work of St. Martin's grows and grows, though in the one matter of letters we don't seem to have written more than we did the previous year. Three thousand millions is the figure; it doesn't convey any very clear idea to the mind, but there it is. To the picture postcard, the never enough-to-be appreciated picture postcard which saves you the trouble of writing letters when abroad, is due an increase of 25 per cent. in the volume of postcard correspondence: 125 millions of postcards passed through the Post Office. I had an idea that the postal order had practically banished the Post Office order, but this idea proves startlingly wrong: almost exactly the same amount of money is trasmitted by each method and that amount is over 34 millions sterling. The telephone seems to be cutting out the telegraph wire to some extent; the number of telegrams sent last year being 2½ millons less than in that preceding (and thus in spite of the fact that 90,000 telegrams were in one day contributed by the sellers of the Ency. Brit.!) Deposits in the savings bank have decreased by two millions: and the P. M. G. speculates a little sadly on probable causes.

The Postmaster-General is much exercised by the number of letters or circulars relating to foreign lotteries which come through the post. We know, of course, that there are people whose moral principles are so exalted that receipt of a lottery circular from Hamburg gives them a shock which use of their waste paper basket fails to assuage. The good Postmaster-General tells us that he has exercised the power he possesses of destroying such circulars when they are sent in open covers: but the bad lottery agents have got round this difficulty by increased expenditure on postage and the use of sealed covers. Post Office vigilance is brought to a standstill by this manœuvre: and while I do not care two straws whether foreign lottery circulars are stopped at St. Martin's or not, I devoutly hope that anxiety to prevent people spending or squandering their own money anyhow they like will ever take the shape of violating the sanctity of sealed letters. That remedy is one the country would not tolerate for an hour. Writing of postal affairs reminds me that the mail bags which the Russians took from the Prinz Heinrich in the Red Sea and overhauled at their leisure, have been opened at Nagasaki before the British, French, and German Consuls, who found that many registered packages were missing. Having regard to Russian theories as to what constitutes contraband of war, I suppose we have no right to be surprised at anything: but it would be instructive to learn what the contents of the purloined letters were.

Is £2,000 an adequate recompense to offer a man who by what must be called, for the present, a "misscarriage of justice" has been kept in penal servitude for five years? This is the question which is agitating the public since the Treasury offered that magnificent solatium to the unfortunate man Adolf Beck. The case is a most curious one and it deserves the searching enquiry for which the papers with one voice are agitating. The worst feature of the business is that Beck, when tried at the Old Bailey for swindling women in 1896 was refused opportunity to prove he was in South America at the time his double, a Jew named Smith, was in prison. He was identified with Smith and though the Court refused to hear evidence as to his identity with that convict, he was sent to prison as Smith and his prison garb was marked to indicate previous convictions. Released a few years ago he was arrested again this year for similar offences and again found guilty. Fortunately the Judge reserved sentence and in the interim the real Smith who had been sentenced for swindling women in 1877 was caught in the act of repeating his frauds, the frauds for which Beck had been wrongly imprisoned in 1897-90. A police inspector name Kane, a more clear sighted and abler man than the rest of the police who have been mixed up with the business took the matter up, established Smith's individuality and Beck's innocence. Now Beck has been "pardoned" for offences he never committed and is offered £2,000 as a solatium for the ruin of his life. The country owes it to itself to do better than this for the wretched affair is not improved by the fact that the victim is a foreigner, a Swede by birth.

Dramatic news consists for the most part of things to be. Sir Henry Irving, who starts on his farewell tour of Great Britain on 19th September, will begin at Cardiff: when he has done this kingdom and Ireland he goes to the States: and when he has toured for two years on end, he will retire from the stage as he forsaid, some little time back. His leading lady will be Miss Edith Wynne Matthison who is best known for her remarkable presentment of Everyman in the morality play of the name. Miss Ellen Terry is also going on tour on the South Coast and Midlands. Mr. Tree is going to revive "The Tempest" at His Majesty's when he re-opens. Miss Edna May, before she left this country for New York, told an interviewer that she contemplated leaving the light musical stage for more serious work: mention was made of plays by J. M. Barrie and A. E. W. Mason in which she would take leading parts: but details are wanting. The Royalty re-opens next Thursday with a new piece by a new playwright, to wit "The Chetwynd Affair" first announced under the title of "The Passing of a Dream" by Mr. Kennedy Cox, aforetune known to Oxford men. Mr. W. W. Jacobs is coming out as a playwright: his peculiar humour has fair scope he should succeed. The new theatre whose walls are rising in Aldwych is to be leased to the Messrs. Schubert, of New York, for 21 years: this house will depend, I had almost written "of course," on musical comedy.

I do not think there is anything very exhilarating going on at the Music Halls. At the Pav. the chief attraction is a troupe of "sporting girls" who walk furiously quarter mile and other events. At the Empire Mr. S. May gives a comical travesty of Hackenschmid. atribute to the popularity of stage wrestling. Mr. Charles Morton, "Father of the Music Hall," attained his 85th birthday on Monday; and passed the day in a gratifying storm of telegraphic and other congratulations, punctuated at frequent intervals by birthday presents.

It is denied that the Prince of Wales has bought Grafton House at Newmarket as racing quarters or for any other purpose.

The voice of America is heard in the Strand: the Savoy Hotel seems to attract the majority of visitors from the States, and the number of motor cars to be seen waiting in the courtyard of that hostelry in the earlier hours of the day is quite remarkable. I was told that numbers of our American visitors bring their own motors over with them. The class of visitor, or emigrant we send across to the States has less money: on Monday it was announced that the American Line would carry steerage passengers to Philadelphia at 30*s.* a head.

The 12th was fine all over Scotland and reports so far show there is little disease anywhere, though the dry summer has retarded the growth of the broods. The fact that an unusually large number of moors remain uniet this season is probably accounted for by the dullness of trade which results from the lack of money consequent on the war.

Guy's Hospital has received £1,000 from the Nellie Farren trust: this will be used to endow a bed to bear Miss Farren's name and will be available for members of the profession on recommendation signed by a Director of the Gaiety. The Actor's Benevolent and Royal General Theatrical Funds receive each £500 from the same source.

Did I mention the exact amount of the Chantrey Bequest when writing last week? If not, it is £105,000 which is invested in Consols and thus brings in about £2,500 a year or thereabout.

WILD ELEPHANTS IN TRAVANCORE.

THAT wild elephants have for some years been steadily increasing in numbers in Travancore, is well known to all those who, for their sins, doubtless, are constrained to dwell in what has been appropriately called the Garden of South India, and to have their habitations amongst the lovely mountains of what has been similarly designated the Model State!

The cause of this steady increase is not far to seek. Following the example of the British Government, the most stringent orders were issued some years ago for the preservation of these noble, but alas! sadly destructive beasts, a heavy fine, or imprisonment, being the punishment awarded to any one found guilty of wilfully destroying an elephant unless in self-protection, or with a permit from the native Government.

For some years these permits to shoot elephants were seldom, if ever, refused, and not a few sportsmen have had the satisfaction of bagging a tusker, and with the sanction of Government have had the pleasure of securing a handsome trophy in the shape of a pair of tusks, though this pleasure has not, perhaps, been enhanced, when the lucky sportsman has found out that the tusks are only granted, except in very special cases, on the payment of their market value into the Sircar treasury. But of late years permits have been somewhat grudgingly granted; whether in consequence of this, or not, matters but little, the fact remains that fewer sportmen have visited Travancore for elephant shikar, very few have been shot, and elephants have been in much greater evidence than formerly.

So far, then, as the preservation of elephants is concerned the plan adopted by the Travancore authorities has been a perfect success; but cui bono?

Some years ago there was much talk of Kheddahs being started in various parts of the country, and some not altogether successful attempts were made in the Quilon district, and a few elephants captured; but what was the use of only one Kheddah in a country like Travancore that simply swarms with elephants!

In parts of the Peermade district, and the Cardamom Hills, they simply jostle one another, and herds of them may any day be seen, by walking a few yards, so to speak, from the bungalow. Cultivators of all sorts are loud in their complaints of the damage done by these mischievous beasts, and "killed by an elephant,' is a verdict not seldom returned by the local substitutes for that useful official the coroner.

Occasionally when some particular tusker makes himself more than usually objectionable and kills an unfortunate cultivator or coolie, a notice will appear in the Government Gazette offering a reward of fifty, or perhaps a hundred, depreciated rupees for its destruction, but, as the tusks are appropriated by the Government, the small money reward is no inducement to the sportsman.

Numerous instances might be adduced in proof of the assertion that elephants have largely increased of late years, and we are decidedly of opinion that the Travancore Sircar should, without further delay, commence Kheddah operations in a thoroughly systematic manner. There would, we fancy, be little difficulty in finding some one capable of managing the operations.

That the undertaking would be a financial success, I have no hesitation in prophesying, but if the Travancore Government do not see their way to adopting this suggestion, it is absolutely necessary that the rules now in force prohibiting the destruction of wild elephants, should be, if not rescinded, at any rate considerably modified without further delay.

Fishing.

NOTES ON TANK FISHING.

SINCE my last letter on Tank Fishing appeared in The Indian Field I have devoted nearly a month to studying the habits of the rohu and white carp in a tank which is very heavily fished. The denizens of this piece of water exhibit, in consequence, the highest degree of education.

In another sheet of water, not so easily accessible, the habits of the fish are very different; and one can easily understand how fishermen, who are lucky enough to have well stocked and little fished tanks at their command may think that Tank Fishing is an easily acquired art, governed by a few well defined rules.

Let us compare the bite of an unsuspicious rohu meaning business, with that of one of the knowing inhabitants of the tank first referred to.

The bite divides itself naturally into three stages: the preliminary, the acute, and the final.

First the float makes short, gentle, up and down movements: this is when the fish is feeling and fumbling at the paste.

Secondly follow long and slow up and down motions: these show that the bait is being worked into the mouth. Finally the float moves under and away: the fish now has the paste in its mouth and is going off with it. All this is simple enough, and it is only necessary to wait until the float goes under, when a smart stroke will usually hook the fish.

When the visitor below is highly educated; it is quite a different affair. The preliminary movements will be very long and spun out. There will be a few gentle up and downs of the float and then the fish will leave the paste, to return again after an few minutes to have another turn at it. After a considerable time the long movements will commence, but probably never finish. You will wait in vain for the final moving off of the float, and an exaination of the paste the will show it to be apparently untouched.

Now the tackle with which I have had these experiences has consisted of a double gut trace, with a hook link of single gut, and a perforated shot working loose on the line about 6 or 8 inches from the hook. The shot working like a ledger lead, although it gives considerable freedom, yet in my opinion does cause a very slight drag, which is noticed by highly educated fish. It therefore occurred to me that a self-cocking float would get over the difficulty. I therefore now use for shy fish a self-cocking peacock quill one-eigth inch diameter; a tiny bit of lead wire is bound to the lower end, sufficient to sink the float about 2½ inches (when loose), leaving 3½ inches out when attached to the line, the weight of the gut line will further sink the float so that only 1½ or 2 inches will be above water. The total length of the quill is 6 inches.

I set this float so that the hook link of single gut, 6 or 8 inches long, lies on the bottom, and only the double portion of the cast hangs perpendicular. The above arrangement will defeat the shyest of fish. The float is so sensitive that the least touch to the bait is clearly signalled, and the fish can pick up the bait without feeling the slightest drag.

The small white carp of two and three pounds, often give cautious bites which may be easily mistaken for those of better fish. I have found that the self cocking-float, with a small piece of paste only just covering the hook, enables one to get the better of these small fry when they come round with a piece of carefully selected single gut for the hook link one is enabled to fish finer, while the strength of the tackle is sufficient for most fish. I use a hook link of thin salmon, or grilse gut.

Now as to paste, I believe there is nothing equal to good atta made into dough with water, and thoroughly worked up. The atta must however contain a very high percentage of gluten, otherwise it is no use.

If desired one can scent the atta with the addition of suttoo, or anything else one fancies. Really good atta can be used very soft as it is most tenacious, and the softer within reason the better. Tank fish do not like hard stiff paste, and the hook does not come through readily when the strike is made.

To get the atta to the exact consistency it must be kneaded thoroughly for a good long time: no amount of kneading will, however, be any good if the atta is not well supplied with gluten. The more a piece of paste will stretch without breaking the higher the percentage of gluten. This a rough, but reliable test

Shooting.

SHOT AND SHOT SIZES.

THE largest bag of grouse ever made in one day by one man was compiled by Lord Walsingham some years ago, writes Dr. D'Arcy I. Hamilton in the Shooting Times. His Lordship shot over his Blubberhouse moors in Yorkshire, and single-handed shot 1,070 grouse to his own gun. As regards the shooting of grouse, then, Lord Walsingham might well be allowed to speak with authority, and for some time after the event he was just besieged for points, tips, hints, and information generally. So he ultimately wrote an account of it, and here is what he says: "The guns in use were four Purdeys, cylinders, with no choke in them. The cartridges in use contained 1¼oz. of No. 5 Newcastle chilled shot." But his Lordship adds that if he had the day to come over again he would cut off the ¼oz. and shoot with 1oz. only, in order to get an increase of penetration. But just think of this, ye lovers of full chokes—1oz. of No. 5 in a cylinder gun! The pattern at 40 yards in the regulation circle would only be about a hundred, and yet to kill close on eleven hundred grouse in one day this is the very charge recommended by one who, at the time referred to, was the best game shot in the world. 1¼oz. of No. 6 in a close-shooting choke of over two hundred is the modern notion of doing things; yet Lord Walsingham said less than half that pattern appeared to him to be the right standard. How many of my readers, though, are going to get the choke bored out of their guns and then shoot a bare ounce of No. 5 shot out of them? Yet, according to Lord Walsingham, that is what he would do!

To revert to shot charges and sizes generally I may say that for all-round purposes No. 6 still holds pride of place. Somehow or other, it seems to adapt itself to modern boring better than any other size. Few men indeed ever go out for a shoot of any kind without a supply of cartridges loaded with No. 6. Most modern 12-bore guns shoot it better than any other size, and I suppose my readers, or most of them, are aware it is with this number that all game guns are regulated or shot for pattern and penetration at the target. Therefore as many tons of it are used every season at game it may safely be taken as the standard size for all-round work, although, as already shown, Lord Walsingham does not (or did not some years back) agree with this.

As regards the use of small shot on game such as Nos. 8 or 9, I can only say I do not approve of it. I am well aware it gives a close pattern, and nothing can escape between the pellets; but as against this I have found it smashes game and rabbits into pulp at close distances and only wounds them at longer ones. It is admitted, I think, that more game is killed at 20 or 25 yards than at greater distances, and that 50 yards is extreme as a game-shooting range. Many a man fancies he has killed a long shot when he pulls off a kill which looks further away than usual. Yet, if he carefully measured the distance, he would find in the great majority of cases his fancied long shot was well on the near side of 40 yards, for few men can accurately gauge such a distance with the eye. Hence it comes then that nearly all game shots get in both barrels long before the quarry has reached a range of 40 yards; and that many distances supposed and claimed to be 40 yards, on measurement turn out to be nearer 33 or 34 yards.

Shot sizes, then, which for ordinary work run roughly from No. 1 to No. 10, appeal to different men with different effect.

But there is a simple rule that, if adhered to by shooters using 12-bores, will generally keep them fairly straight. For wild ducks in winter, and other hard-feathered fowl like them, No. 3 or No. 4 is best. For game—grouse, hares, partridges, and pheasants—No. 5 or No. 6 will answer best. For snipe or woodcock No. 8 is about the correct thing, while for live pigeons from the trap or for clay birds, Nos. 6, 7, and 8 are the popular sizes for 12-bore guns. For all-round work I would personally cling to No. 6. Well nigh everything may be killed with this size, from ducks to jack snipe, and, as I said before, tons of it are used every season.

When a shooter starts out after game, he desires to use a charge that will kill his game clean and well—a charge that will not smash it at close range or wound it and let it escape at longer ones. No. 6 has been found to do this better than most other sizes, and hence its popularity among modern game shooters. Naturally, there are sizes which possess greater advantages of a sort; for instance, No. 3 or No. 4, being larger and heavier, offer a greater resistance to the atmosphere, and so arrive at their mark quicker. Thus in a gale of wind, a pellet of No. 3 will travel up to the target at 40 yards, in less time than will a pellet of No. 6. Similarly, a pellet of No. 1 will reach the mark sooner than a pellet of No. 3, and so on. No 6, then, is quicker than No. 8, just as No. 8 is quicker than Nos. 9 or 10. As for the smaller sizes, they are scarcely ever used, and are swayed by the merest breeze to such an extent as to be quite unreliable beyond a 20 yards range, and are so small and soft as to have scarcely any penetration power even at 20 yards range. So that, except for sparrows, at a country sparrow match, we seldom see anything smaller than No. 9 used, and, indeed, it is No. 8 that usually fills the bill all round when "small shot" is spoken of.

Time and striking force (or penetration) are, therefore, the important factors to be sought for in any one special size of shot for game, wildfowl, or even small birds. A charge of No. 3 will travel up to its mark even in a stiff gale of wind very quickly—so quickly that the shooter need not make much allowance; in other words, need not fire much, if anything, in front of a crossing bird. With No. 6 the allowance must be greater, because No. 6, being smaller in the pellet, does not travel so fast, and is more acted upon, and, ergo, deflected, by any wind there may be. With No. 8 a still greater allowance has to be made, for No. 8 is smaller again, there being nearly 450 pellets in an ounce of No. 8, against 270 pellets in an ounce of No. 6. Nos. 9 and 10 hardly count at all, except for small birds, and possess no penetration at 40 yards. So that, excluding the larger numbers, the modern shooter pins his faith to Nos. 5, 6, or perhaps 7. With these sizes he gets time (or velocity) and striking force (or penetration), and, as I said in last issue, of these three sizes No. 6 is the most popular, go where you will.

Now a word or two about the larger shot, such as Nos. 1, 2, or 3. There are very few pellets of No. 1 in a charge for a 12-bore gun. Thus the killing pattern is open and scanty, and the object fired at is liable to get between the pellets of shot, and so escape, although the charge may have struck all round about it. No. 2 is a slight improvement in this respect on No. 1; but No. 3 is better still, and so it is that many duck shooters use it. Wildfowlers, indeed, prefer a charge of No. 3 to any other—so far as the users of 12-bore guns are concerned—although a few go in for No. 4. No. 3 will give quite enough pellets in a charge to kill a duck at 40 yards.; the penetration is sufficient to pierce its hard thick feathers, and the individual size of the pellets enables them to overcome wind and atmospheric resistance and so travel up to the mark quickly.

In conclusion, then, it will be seen that most sizes (except the very small ones called "dust shot") have their advantages. It depends upon what sort of game or fowl they are to be used upon Some men prefer small shot in one barrel and large in the other, but this is an arrangement not to be recommended, as it contributes to uncertain shooting. I cannot do better than repeat that the shooter should use a shot size proportionate tot he size of the game or fowl he intends shooting. But if restricted to one size only, then let that size be No. 6, for the reasons already stated.

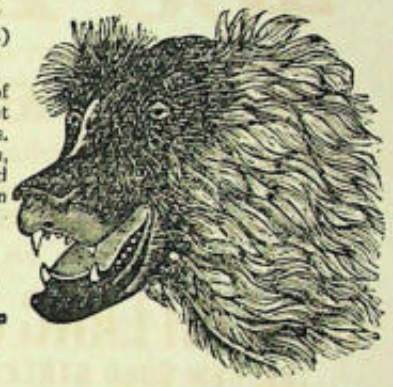
GOOEE SAMPS.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE INDIAN FIELD."

SIR,—Will some of your talented correspondents give your readers a family history of the gooee samp? I am sure that it will prove most interesting, if to no one else, at least to my fox-terrier pie, "Spot." I call her a fox terrier, for though she is not one she has had a good try at it, and is more like a fox-terrier than anything else. Not knowing the exact number of quarterings her family coat of arms bears I have added "pie." The breed is quite fashionable here. There are two spaniel pies, a pointer pie, and various others of well-known breeds.



In the absence of noble game Spot has taken considerable interest in the ways and habits of the gooee samp and has brought to my notice many little points about them which were unknown to me before, and which may prove information to your readers. Foremost amongst these is the fact that even to an adult age, if we may judge by size, the gooee samp is a tree climber. Spot drew my attention to one about four feet long. It was clinging close to a Casuarina branch about 15 feet from the ground. Since then I have frequently seen them run up a tree as easily as a squirrel. They rejoice in two names, "Monitor" and Varanidæ or some such appellation, and when young are as vain of their appearance as we humans, for I saw a dapper little chap about eighteen inches long doing himself proud up a date palm, his otherwise sombre skin relieved, at intervals, with bands of bright sulphur yellow across his body. He was evidently a gay young bachelor who thought much of dress. Now the larger ones are, presumably, "paterfamiliorum," what the dickens IS the plural of paterfamilias? My youngest, proud of his Latin, suggests twins!! I think its time he left the Convent and resumed his studies at St Joseph's. What? Well, as I was saying, these fathers of families not having so much spare cash, have to go about in dingy sad coloured garments. Perchance though I have happened on another and richer branch of the family, for I have seen youngsters without these bands of bright colour. What is this change of colouring due to? Age, seasonal,, or climatic changes, sex, or what?

Spot pointed out to me a rather curious dodge they have when small; and I am half inclined to believe it is one of those instances, in which a more dangerous reptile is simulated for protective purposes. She had been hunting a small fellow eight or nine inches in length in a khal, when the tide being out the water was barely a foot deep. Seeing no other chance of escape the little reptile slid its head and forefeet under a brick. Its hind legs being pressed close alongside of its tail could hardly be seen, but the tail was kept twisting and curling exactly like the end of a snake's tail. Spot had lost sight of her quarry for a moment and had not seen the trick done; but coming in course of time to the brick, jumped back tumbling over Ping (another dog) to avoid what she thought was a snake. She don't dance with no snake, so she just gave me a call to come along with my stick and do for the serpent. When I turned the brick over and showed her the deception, she was very sick. Killing it with a single snap she went home in a huff Many times since then has the same dodge been tried, but Spot is on to it, though even to this day she shows a caution which speaks volumes for the power of deception. Placing Ping to watch the waving tail, Spot, as being the larger dog of the two, goes up to the brick or stone and with much caution, with many prancings and pawings, never a nose does she use, with many absurd side jumps she proceeds to turn it over. It is clear she is never quite sure it's not a snake.
